and textiles professor says.

Laura Kidd, a professor in clothing and textiles, said fashion is evolutionary, not revolu-

"We keep seeing the same things, but they come back in different forms," she said.

Kidd said the decade that most affects this generation of clothing is the '70s, "I'm seeing people in things that I wore in high school," she said, "I see a lot of those chunky platform shoes and a lot of polyester fibers with points on the fabric." fibers with prints on the fabric."

Kidd said the '70s is not the only decade that influences today's fashion trend, but even later merations are represented in today's clothes.

"This generation has gone back to about 25 years ago," she said.

"You see other looks as well because today, there is so much more that's acceptable.

Kidd said today's generation does not have a specific style that they have to stick to.

"People have a choice of what they want to wear and what they feel good in," she said. When the miniskirts came out in the '60s, if ou wore a long skirt, it was considered old fashioned.

"Now you can wear a short skirt one day and a long skirt the next day, and it's acceptable."

"Designers constantly improve upon fabric for example, rayon," she said. "In the '40s designers used rayon, but the rayon in the '90s is totally different

Workman said clothing styles are changing

"It's a subtle kind of movement over the past 20 years because designers don't want a drastic change," she said.

"A mild change helps people get accustomed: to a new look.

Workman said people have been experi-menting with fashion for centuries, but interest was accelerated in the 20th century.

of technology," she said. "There was more interest in lashion occause of technology," she said. "There was mass marketing; advertising and production."

"Workman said although the '70s does seem to be the popular decade for fashion right now, it will not last long.

"The '70s are in now with the bell bottoms and the hip huggers and platform shoes," she

"But there is one thing you can always pre-dict about fashion: it will change." Fashion is a way for people to express themselves, Kidd said.

There is something in people that just wants a change," she said. "In Western cultures, we're used to seeing fashions change

Like Workman, Kidd said there always will be different fashions in clothes

"Every culture has their different fashions and styles," she said. "As long as we are exposed to other cultures

While some people believe fashion is everchanging, others believe fashion stays the same. Dionne Broughton, a junior in clothing and textiles from Atlanta, said there is nothing that is different in today's fashions.

"Almost all of the styles are updated versions of old fashions," she said:

There is really nothing that is new." Broughton said the biggest change in today's fashion is the comfort of the clothing.

"Today's clothing is more comfortable," she said. "Way back in history, women wore. bustiers and corsets to boost and shape them-

Man shot in parking lot with pellet gun

By Brett Wilcoxson Daily Egyptian Reporter

Matthew Marks said he was nearing the end of his tow-truck operating shift Saturday morning and was checking parking permits at an apartment complex at 900 E. Grand Ave. when he allegedly was shot in the arm with a pellet gun.

Marks, 30, is a tow-truck operator for Glen's Towing and Automotive, 1806 N. Illinois Ave. He said nothing unusual had hap-pened Saturday until he saw a man armed with a rifle on a balcony at the apartment complex at about 5

It was later discovered the gun was a pellet gun, Carbondale Police

"I was checking permits, and there were a few people that came out hollering like they always do, but I didn't pay much attention," he said. "Then I noticed one guy had a gun, and I got in my truck to leave. And that's when he started shooting."

Marks said the man shot his truck several times. He said as he tried to drive away, the man fired several more times, finally striking Marks with a pellet. "He shot the windshield three times," he said. "Then, as I was times," he said. "Then, as I was driving around the corner on my way out, he shot out the driver's side window. Then he shot again through the same hole and shot a hole in my shirt."

Marks said he was not injured but it did scare him because he had no idea what type of gun it was while the man was shooting.

"I thought it was a big gun at first," he said: "All I saw was a guy with a gun: And when he shot the windshield, I didn't know what to

Marks said he called Carbondale Police from his truck after the first

SIUC pays tribute to veterans

Daily Egyptian Reporter

As the sound of 21 gunshots rang out in the chilly air Monday, SIUC Army and Air Force ROTC members folded the lowered American flag in a ceremony which paid tribute to veterans on campus and nationwide.
Mike Morman, a senior in aviation management from Goodfield who served as an Air Goodlete who served as an An Force ROTC cadet commander in the ceremony, said the ceremony gave veterans one day of recogni-tion for 364 days in which they serve to preserve our freedom.

"Veterans have served their countries and withstood worse conditions than we dealt with out there." Morman said "It shouldn't be too difficult to get together once a year to show our apprecia-

The ceremony, which about 125 people attended, began with a prayer and followed with the national anthem sung by Cadet Ronald Mitchell from the Air Force ROTC.
The anthem was followed by a speech by Jacob Bach, a World War II veteran and a retired professor emeritus of Education at SIUC. He began the speech with the history of Veterans Day.

Today we are commemorating Vcterans Day on the 75th anniversary of the burial of an American - his name known but to God " Bach said

Bach said this soldier eventually became the personification of dignity and reverence for America's veterans.

Bach said many veterans return home with physical and emotional damage. He said because of this, 30 percent of veterans homeless and often need help from the government.

The government should help anyway they can help in job retraining or placement." Bach said. "Ultimately, a person is responsible for himself, but he's got to have help.

He closed by expressing his gratitude to all veterans.
"Here at SIUC there are 2,300

After Bach's speech, David Penny, the USG chief of staff and a veteran, said SIUC offers one of the best social programs for vet-erans. He said the programs allow veterans to receive financial aid

The ceremony ended with a 21gun salute by members of the Army and Air Force ROTC while one ROTC member played "Taps." About 100 members of ROTC participated.

However, not all of those in attendance where from ROTC or in the millitary.

Ken Petersen, a graduate stu-dent in theater from Evanston, said he attended the ceremony because his father fought in World War II and his grandfather served in World War I before

"I serve my country more as an artist, but I certainly respect those who have served (in the

Fred D. Grosshans, a junior in aviation management from Fairbury and the Air Force coor dinator for the ceremony, said the event provides support and gets the word out about veteran's service.

"When you serve in the military, you try to protect a country that has always been a model of freedom," Grosshans said: "We of ROTC, we are the future, and we want to keep America the way it is forever."

SIUC not defendant in lawsuit

By Julie Rendleman Daily Egyptian Reporter

A law suit against the SIU School of Law alleging unfair hiring practices has to be refiled because the court says the school is not the proper defendant

Darrell Dunham, professor in the School of Law, filed a law suit Dec. 29, 1995, claiming discrimination because he alleged the SIU School of Law Appointments Committee refused to grant 30-minute screen-ing interviews to minority appli-cants he submitted for teaching positions and the dean search.

According to the official court record, the court met Oct, 24 in East St. Louis and Paule Riley, U.S. dis-trict judge, dismissed the case because the School of Law and SIUC are not the proper defendants.

The court said the correct defendants are the individual members of the SIUC Board of Trustees because they maintain, operate, manage and control the University.

The court said Dunham has until Nov. 14 to file a second complaint that states the board as individual defendants in the case

Shari Rhode, SIUC chief trial attorney, said the board is the only legal entity for Dunham to sue because of the Eleventh Amendment, which protects the University from lawsuits.

The Eleventh Amendment bars suits against states for alleged depri-vations of civil liberties.

Loeschen said he brought suit against SIUC and the School of Law because he thought they were the proper defendants.

Dunham, who is white, said he sued because he is being denied the benefit of educational, intellectual and emotional interracial associations with Hispanics, Asians, American Indians or Alaskan Natives in the School of Law.

The University and the School of Law claim that Dunham does not have the grounds to sue the school.

However, according to the court record, Dunham does have grounds to sue because of a U.S. Supreme Court decision in Trafficante v. Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. in

SIUC off-campus jurisdiction should answer all questions

THE GRADUATE AND PROFESSIONAL STUDENT Council discussed reevaluating the Student Conduct Code Nov. 6 so that it applies to SIUC students while they are off-campus. The consideration to revise the code was in response to the arrests of and damage caused by SIUC students during the Halloween riots. GPSC is now considering increasing the code's jurisdiction to the entire city of Carbondale.

Looking at Carbondale and SIUC's history when it comes to Halloween, it is surprising that the conduct code has come this far without already being revised. But the task of changing it is now at hand, and although there is no question that the code needs to be revised, the main point is that the new guidelines need to be specific so as to not leave any questions unanswered.

If the University is going to lay down a set of rules on the students while they are off campus, then those rules need to be spelled out in a clear and concise manner so there is no ambiguity to the situation. One of the main problems that is happening now is that people are questioning the old conduct codes because of the generality of them, and this needs to be avoided in future situations. The ambiguity that exists leaves open so many doors that almost any infraction can be argued. If the University wants to avoid questions like student suspension in the future then it needs to tell the students what is acceptable behavior and what is not. The University should not be able to lay down one guideline and expect it to apply to all situations. By that same token, they should not leave guidelines open for the students to interpret for themselves what they are supposed to mean. If the University wants to expand its jurisdiction, then it needs to say what being in that jurisdiction involves.

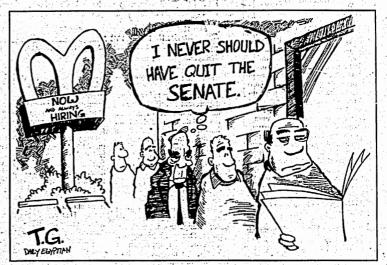

SOME PEOPLE OPPOSE THE IDEA OF BEING bound to University regulations while off campus. One example is if a student's status with the University would be in jeopardy if caught shoplifting at a local store? Allowing the University to dictate what students can and cannot do on and off campus seems like too much power over people's lives. But some people need to understand that students — all students — are a direct advertisement for the University.

When people are accepted to SIUC, they become a direct representative of it. When students do something good in the surrounding community, it is always pointed out what division of the University they are affiliated with. The University gains a little respect when students do things that benefit the community.

It is then understandable that the University would have some concern about the negative image students display. If a student is caught breaking the law in the surrounding community, the University, an institution that acknowledges that the student is a member of it, should have some kind of say as to the student's future.

Many students would not be in this area if they were not attending the University. And although it is home to them for nine months, it is the home to others all year long. Therefore, being in Carbondale is a direct result of being a student and should be looked at from that point of view. Asking students to abide to the same rules off campus as they do while on campus is only natural. Students should accept those rules when they choose to attend.

The Halloween problem may or may not go away, but next year, if another riot occurs, an SIUC student should know exactly what is going to happen to them before they take part in it. By making the outcome of the situation crystal clear before a riot starts, some students may think twice about their actions.

ETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Pulliam activist gives thanks

I would like to take this opportunity to offer my thanks to the many people involved in making the lights and chimes on Pulliam Tower possible.

First of all, a big thank you to Chancellor Donald Beggs for making it possible for this to happen on the SIUC campus.

l also would like to offer my thanks to Harry Wirth and his staff, who put up the flagpole, lights and chimes. This includes the night of the ceremony when Mr. Wirth had his crew out at the ceremony ready to switch on the lights and chimes when given the direction.

My sincere thanks go to the Alumni Association which was greatly responsible for the fundraising effort. This thanks goes out not only to members who raised money within the association, but also to members of the staff at the Stone Center, such as Ed Buerger, the director of the association, and his staff of people who helped out greatly.

There were a lot of people who made this possible who were not directly involved. Some of these people were John Davey and Peter Smith, who did all of the graphics for the campaign, and the local news media, who covered this event before and after the ceremoter and after the ceremoter.

Last, but not least, I would like to thank Mike Hames and the Marching Salukis who led the singing of the Alma Mater at the end of the ceremony.

I hope the lighted towers and chimes have made you all as happy as I feel every time I see the tower lit and hear the chimes ring. Pulliam Hall now stands as SIUC's symbol of excellence and as a guiding light for many generations of future students and alumni.

Happy holidays to you all.

Rioter has much to learn about life. The following paragraph outly have a lot to learn about life, these students are very proud.

The following paragraph appeared in the Oct. 28 Daily Egyptian.

Larry Gooding, an SIUC freshman in business who was carrying one of the broken train (crossing) gates, said he was having the time of his life. "This is awesome," Gooding said, holding up the train gate. "There's not going to be nothing from the cops. They can't take away our paty" away our party."

Words of wisdom from one of SIUC's finest. I'm sure there will be many letters lamenting the sick mentality of the people involved in the recent violence near the Strip, so I won't belabor the point here. Instead I will direct my comments to the brilliant expose of Mr. Gootling.

Mr. Gooding, although you obvi-you need to learn two things right now. First, neither SIUC nor the city of Carbondale owes you a party. You are here to be educated, not entertained. And it is obvious that you can use all of the education you can get. And second, idiotic actions such

And second, under actions such as yours are what lead to tragedies. Would you have felt it an even greater thrill if, because of your actions, an innocent driver would have run the tracks and been hit by a train? Where the hell are your brains?

It is truly a shame that your name didn't end up on the "honor roll" of SIUC students arrested near the Strip, in the Oct. 28 DE (editor's note: Gooding has since been arrested). Like you, I'm sure that these students are very proud of their actions. As a matter of fact, I think it would be nice to start sending each of these students' parents, as well as yours, a free subscription to the DE starting with the Oct, 28 issue. I'm sure your parents would love to see their tuition dollars at work and would be beaming with pride at your actions:

Mr. Gooding, with your verbal and reasoning skills, you are destined to go far in the business world, real far — off the map, one might say.

But if you really want to be a college graduate, start acting like one and read a few books. It will do you some good.

Travesty touches all Americans

After trying for many years, Gulf War veterans have finally won official recognition of the Gulf War Syndrome. On Oc; 23, Ted Koppel's "Nightline" presented a program on the multiple ill-nesses suffered by veterans and their families. The very same pro-gram also acknowledged that our politicians delayed admitting there was a problem.

For the first time, our political system — mainly the Pentagon and the Veterans Administration admitted that some kind of chemical, biological and possibly radiological contamination, had affected at least 20,000 members of our armed forces and their respective family members. Once again, the service men and women served as guinea pigs for our politicians and war makers.

Since the nuclear age began dur-ing the '30s and '40s, it has been official U.S. policy to use military personnel in experiments with new weapons. The difference now is that we are dealing with American civilian casualties caused by United States policy and United States munitions.

Once again, civilian casualties have been virtually ignored. If you had seen a young woman say,
"Please don't tell me it's all in our heads," you too would have seen the ghosts of Vietnam reeling in their ugly heads. You see, the woman's baby had become sick when her husband's foul-smelling duffel bag was left in her room. This bag had been sent from Iraq to await the return of its owner. By the time he had returned, both the daughter and the soldier had become ill.

This was the war that was supposed to kick the "Vietnam War Syndrome." Instead, the same old game of withholding information was put into place.

I would really like to know why, in the present political environ-ment, we are still playing the same games. Did the political class learn nothing from Vietnam? Did those protesters who so venomously attacked the Johnson and Nixon administrations, and who are now part of the same system; forget the lessons of the past? Where are the 60s radicals today? The dissent is strangely absent from our landscape!

During Vietnam, the United States used bombs, bullets and Agent Orange to deal with our enemies. This was a bloody and often gruesome approach of defending "democracy." More than 50,000 American service people lost their lives along with hundreds of thousands of Vietnamese who also paid the ultimate price.

But Iraq was a different kind of war. Quick and decisive, almost like a video game, the Gulf War saw the release of chemical weapons, smart bombs and tank shells made from radioactive waste. How responsible was it for our political leaders to expose United States troops — let alone anyone else — to this type of war-fare? How long will it take for us to tally the fatalities?

Some of the casualties are unborn or deformed babies! Others are men and women suffering from unique illnesses. What type of monument will we build to remember our latest defenders of freedom? How many will pay the ultimate price? Whether intention-al or not; the Unites States and her allies are accountable for this

the White House, he received a $1 million "gift" from the rulers of Kuwait. Bush is a veteran. Maybe he should think about donating his award to the families suffering from the Gulf War Syndrome. Or maybe next time the oil corpora-tions should send in their own; armies. That way we won't have to use the defenders of the American people to protect the corporations' interests.

This travesty touches all types of Americans. It cuts across all color and cultural barriers. At least 20,000 Americans are going to be affected by what happened in the Iraqi desert.

Where are the politicians who would defend those suffering from this catastrophe? And what about the Iraqi casualties? Will we care about them? I hope their suffering is less than that of American families that have been affected by the Pentagon's latest excursion into

The Chicago Tribune topic: Playing nice

Last Tuesday, voters in Illinois, like voters across the nation, seemed to be calling for a bipartisan brand of leadership capable of san brand of leadership capable of moving beyond political bickering and of tackling real issues.

It remains to be seen if a Democratic White House and Republican Congress will head in that direction, but already there are signs that some Illinois politicians missed the message. missed the message.

How else to interpret the morning-after accusation by a spokesman for House Speaker Lee Daniels that House Minority Leader Michael Madigan was a "thief" who "stole" his soon-to-be majority in the general Assembly? Absent any evidence of election fraud, this sound-ed like sour grapes. Later Daniels, appropriately, disavowed the

It would appear, though, that GOP disappointment may produce more than rash talk. At a closeddoor strategy session last week with Daniels, Gov. Jim Edgar, and Senate President James "Pate" Philip, proposals came up for sever-al parting shots during the upcoming veto session. Edgar suggested that the state use its power of eminent domain to take over Meigs Field. Daniels urged that the Senate pass a House bill that would empower township assessors in Cook County to override the sissues and not act like poor losers.

Or is this revenge for Hynes' chairing of President Clinton's reelection bid in Illinois, which included a straight "Punch 10" campaign that helped undo Daniels' majority in the House?

The answer is obvious. So is the Clothes express attitude

While most-people on a college campus are dressing in the latest fashions, some female students prize themselves on being

Melva McNeil, a senior in advertising from Carbondale, said she does not dress like most people and instead uses her clothes to express her personality.

"I consider myself very outgoing and carefree," she said. "And that's also how I view fashion. I guess I can be described as eclectic."

McNeil said she favors dressing in afrocentric and ethnic clothes because she said such clothing resembles the '60s and '70s era when African Americans had an immense amount of pride. She said she wears colorful patterned clothing and jewelry fashions that range from the 1920s.

McNeil said she does not shop at the same places that most of her peers frequently shop because those stores do not offer the type of clothes she likes.

"I shop at thrift stores for about 90 percent of my wardrobe," McNeil said, "I haven't been to the mall in over a year."

Jane Workman, a professor for the Department of Workforce Education and Development's clothing and textiles es program, has searched the correlation between fashion and personality. She said there are two reasons why people choose they dress.

"One of the reasons people choose to dress a certain way is because they want to conform and be accept " Workman said.

This is because we tend to be attracted to those who look similar.

"Then there are some who have a very strong inner drive to be unique, and they're not afraid to take risks. They are less concerned about being accepted."

McNeil said most college students are trying to find themselves and are looking for a clique to fall into that will make them feel like they

A total of 14 seniors will end their Saluki careers Sunday, including senior tight end Damon Jones, who returns after having served a one-game suspension against Western Kentucky

Watson said Jones definitely is back for Saturday, and all seniors are looking forward to the game.

The seniors want to leave the program on a good note," Watson

They want to leave the program with a win and not take a step backwards.

Watson said not being able to qual last season's 5-6 mark would definitely be a step backward, but he is not calling the '96 campaign a complete stumble in the wrong direction, despite seeing a 7-4 preseason goal slip away.

"I think we took a step forward in a lot of ways," he said. "We have the athletes and people to help us get there, but the maturity is just not there yet." SEMO should present the Salukis with their best opportunity yet to match last season's 5-6

Earlier in the year, the Salukis knocked off Illinois State University and the University of Tennessee-Martin -- two teams that defeated SEMO.

A win would also put an emphasis on getting next season started on the right foot.

The Salukis have only two spots to fill on next season's schedule. Aug. 30 and Nov. 8 are the only two dates that are currently open.

As it stands, the Salukis play on the road against Nicholls State Sept. 6, Indiana State University Sept. 20, the University of Northern lowa Oct. 18, the University of South Florida Oct.

11. The seniors want to leave the program on a good note.

SIUC's home games include Murray State University Sept. 13, Southwest Missourl State Southwest Missourl State University Oct. 4, Illinois State University Oct. 11 and Western Kentucky University Oct. 25.

"It's a very important thing (not to have a losing streak going into next season)," Watson said. "We want to right our ship. I'd like to see us make the improvements we worked on last week."

Starrick returns to Saluki broadcasts

Former Saluki basketball standout and Marion native Greg Starrick will return to the basketball native Greg Starrick will return to the basketball Salukis' play-by-play team this season after a two-year absence caused by contract disputes. Starrick, SIUC's 10th all-time leading career scorer, will rejoin WCIL-FM broadcaster Mike Reis for 19 games this season, beginning with the Salukis' home opener against Northern Illinois Nov. 30.

Starrick, an SIUC Hall of Famer, starred at SIUC from 1070 to 1072 and still helds the NICAA season.

from 1970 to 1972 and still holds the NCAA caree free throw percentage record. He said joining Reis for a 13th season as a team is exciting. "Saluki basketball has been an important part of my life, and I was thrilled when approached about returning to the radio broadcasts," Starrick said.

Workman out for season with burn knee

Indiana Pacers guard Haywoode Workman will be out for the rest of the season after tearing the anterior cruciate ligament in his left knee. The injury occurred when Workman was driving for a lay-up in the fourth quarter of the Pacers 103-100 loss to Washington Saturday. Travis Best probably will start in Workman's place.

Salukis aim for win to end season

By Michael DeFord DE Sports Editor

With the season coming to a close, the focus of the football Salukis has shifted to matching last season's 5-6 mark far cry from a 7-4 preseason goal.

The Salukis' 1996 campaign comes to a close Saturday against Southeast Missouri State at McAndrew Stadium.

After losing five straight games, the Salukis have fallen to 4-6. All hopes of ending the losing streak, as well as the season, depend solely on the outcome of Saturday's contest.

Yet Saluki Coach Shawn Watson said records mean little at this point.

This week's ballgame is a game, without a doubt, one that you can take the records and throw them out the window," Watson said.

Since losing to Western Kentucky 51-37 Nov. 2, the Salukis have had a week off to prepare for SEMO.

Aside from wanting to catch up to last season's mark, the Salukis understandably have little to play for Saturday.

But thanks to the time off, Watson said he and his crew have made positive strides in what is perhaps a team's most important area - attitude

I think it seems we had a real good week, and we are very encouraged with the attitude of our players," Watson said. 'All in all, the players are looking forward to SEMO.

"It's a good game to end our season

Atlanta unearths Nugget in Mutombo

Los Angeles Times

A Tale of Two More Cities, or see if this sounds familiar: The Big Guy loved the town. He built a home there, intending to settle down. The townspeople pointed with pride at his place, saying, "What a palatial home our boundaries of the control of the con lamenting, "You can't trust Big Guys," As it was with Shaquille O'Neal, forerly of the Orlando O'Neals and now a Laker, so it was with Dikembe Mutombo, once a beloved Denver Nugget, now an Atlanta Hawk with a brand new $600,000 home sitting empty in the Mile High City.

Like O'Neal, Mutombo is surprised to find himself relocated. When this free-agent tarantella began ent tarantella began a year ago, he tended to remain with the Nuggets, a rising young team in a city he liked and that liked him in return

By season's end, Mutombo — personable, sweet-natured, a legend for his charity endeavors — was all but estranged rom hard-bitten Coach-General Manager Bernie Bickerstaff.

It happened throughout the NBA in a season with so many prospective free agents and so much salary cap room. Mutombo says 19 teams indicated an interest in him, but the one he played for didn't even make a formal offer.

Two games coming to the end of the season, (Bickerstaff) called me to his office and tell me that he's happy with the last five years we have, him and I, and our great success with the organization, taking the organization to another level. And then, good luck to whatever happens. Mutombo said.

"It's a little bit shocking, someone is telling you good luck to whatever hap-pens. They don't tell me, 'Look, I guarantee you're going to stay here, I'm going to do whatever it takes.' When he tell me that couple of phrases and then teil me good, I start to think it's time for me to start packing my bags."
It was business, all right.

The Nuggets wanted to re-sign Mutombo, who has averaged 12.9 points and 12.3 rebounds in his five seasons in Denver, for something in the $5 million to S6 million range. But David Falk, the agent for Alonzo Mourning as well as Mutombo, blew up the prevailing salary structure, engineering the trade that sent Mourning to Miami and an eventual $15 million a nual salary.

Lakers' second-half surge tames Hawks, 92-85

Los Angeles Times

INGLEWOOD, Calif.-The crowd booed in the second quarter, they booed heading into halftime. The Lakers, down 17 points to the Atlanta Hawks, were getting ripped on the court and around the court. They needed to get to the locker room. They needed sanctuary They got each other instead.

Byron (Scott) was yelling, Nick (Van Exel) was yelling, I was yelling, coach was yelling," Shaquille O'Neal said. So why was it the Hawks who left the Forum on Sunday night with the splitting headache? Their 3-0 Western swing had crumbled into a second-half migraine, complete with an injury to Steve Smith. That, plus another impressive offensive output by defensive spe-cialist Eddie Jones, and 19 points, 18 rebounds and four blocks by O'Neal combined to rally the Lakers to a 92-85 victory before 16,097.

self-inflicted intermission outburst became the spark for the Lakers' best half of the season, the first sign of a real pulse since Tuesday and for one of the few extended stretches all season... Now, to determine if it was a fluke or the wake-up call 5 games late — the 6-0 Rockets are next up.

"Now that second half is the kind of emotion and energy we've been looking for." Coach Del Harris said.

Added Jones: "We knew we had to get something going. We were just standing around, letting them out-hustle us, outrebound us, doing everything it takes to win. We know what we have to do.

So Jones did it. Two games after making seven of eight shots and scoring 16 points at Charlotte and two nights after getting 25 points at Toronto -- he scored 13 in the third quarter Sunday as the Lakers outscored the Hawks, 32-15, to surge ahead for
