JUSTIN JONES - DAILY EGYPTIAN

A burial service for World War II veteran David Jarrett Fritz took place Tuesday at Pleasant Grove Cemetery in Murphysboro. Fritz was buried during a military service with honor guard, including a 21-gun salute and the playing of Taps. Members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 7190, 108 S. 10th St., provided the service to the family and the fallen veteran.

War veterans recount tales of sacrifice

JENNIFER WIG
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The atmosphere is somber in Pleasant Grove cemetery Tuesday as a group standing near a casket says farewell to a World War II veteran. Seven men stand at attention ready to fire their guns. The blasts shatter the silence. Twenty-one shots honor David Jarrett Fritz who fought for his country. A trumpet blast is loud enough to burst your heart with pride. Another veteran is gone. He died Nov. 6, five days before Veterans Day.

World War I

Virgil Marks stares down at a photograph of himself taken after World War I when he was 24 years old. His wrinkled hands contrast with the young man's smooth skin in the picture.

But Marks, who was born in 1894 in Alto Pass, does not think of himself as old.

"I'm only 105," he laughs. "I'm better looking now than I was then."

Marks, a Murphysboro resident, joined the U.S. Army at 22 and served in the 28th infantry during World War I and was in France for two weeks before the peace treaty was signed.

"I had no business being in [the war]," Marks says. "But they missed me when they shot at me."

"If you ask me, you were lucky you got back," interjects Marge Hand, Marks' daughter.

Marks was named Chevalier of the National Order of the Legion of Honor, France's highest national award, during an August ceremony.

Marks, the oldest living veteran in Illinois, was awarded the medal "as a sign of the high esteem France has for his contribution to the decisive support the United States gave to French Soldiers in the defense of their country during World War I," according to a letter from French Ambassador Francois Bujon de l'Estant.

Marks insists he was not afraid of death during the war.

"My captain said, 'You're the luckiest son of a bitch I've ever seen,'" Marks says.

His tales, although obscure, communicate his feelings of the war. Marks explains the experience as a guard on the border between France and Germany. His job was to prevent Germans from entering France. When he caught Select 2000 unofficially is terminated and a new program will take its place, altering four points of the original nine-part initiative, according to Interfraternity Council president Matt Arnold.

The new program will permit alcohol in the rooms of 21-year-old fraternity members, alter grade point averages to the national Greek level, upgrade community service hours and increase campus and community involvement.

The program, called the SIUC

Greek Millennium Initiative, will retain five of the original parts of Select 2000.

Arnold said interim Chancellor John Jackson will discuss the new program at 7 tonight at the Inter-Greek Council meeting. Arnold, Inter-Greek Council President Brienne Cichella and three other Greek leaders developed the program.

BOT to vote on tuition surcharge

TIM CHAMBERLAIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The much-debated tuition surcharge for technology will be decided at today's SIUC Board of Trustees meeting in Edwardsville, and student protesters say they will be in attendance, though the surcharge is not their main concern.

Board Chairman A.D. VanMeter said he did not know how the board feels about the surcharge, but the committee discussion before the actual meeting will bring that out.

"I'm very anxious to hear some of the discussion," VanMeter said. "Our student trustee [Ben Syfert] has sent us a lot of information."

The tuition surcharge would add $2 per credit hour and is intended for the upgrade of public access computers, which are computing facilities intended for use by students either in connection with studies in general or specific courses.

The Computing Advisory Committee estimated about $2.6 million is needed to upgrade the 48 computer facilities controlled by colleges, and Information Technology estimated that about $1 million is needed to upgrade the four Computer Learning Centers on campus.

The surcharge would generate about $867,000 per year based on current enrollment levels, well short of the more than $3.6 million needed to upgrade all facilities.

According to the proposal, three separate advisory boards for undergraduates, graduate students and law students will oversee the use of the funds, and usage reports will be available to students.

In April, both the Undergraduate Student Government and the Graduate and Professional Student Council passed referendums in support of a $25 per year flat technology fee.

However, since the surcharge model was proposed by interim Chancellor John Jackson in September, both groups have expressed concern about the change.

USG President Sean Henry said he credits the hard work of previous USG administrations in getting technology concerns addressed, and said many concerns in the senate were because the senators were new and lacked information.

At their Wednesday meeting, USG will consider a resolution supporting the tuition surcharge, as well as one opposing it. The dueling resolutions came about because, after Henry submitted the resolution of support, a few

Man of the century speaks to SIUC

ANDY EGENSE
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Telling the stories of steel workers, waitresses, firefighters and everyday people has made Studs Terkel a celebrity. But the renowned radio host, author and actor disdains the word "celebrity" because it separates him from those he interviews.

"I don't know what that is," Terkel said of his so-called fame. "I like to be respected for what I've done."

Terkel will speak as part of SIUC's "What I Have Learned and Would Like to Pass On," lecture series at 4:30 p.m. today in the Lesar Law School Auditorium.

He has won the respect of his audience and his peers as a long-time radio host, Pulitzer Prize-winning author and movie actor during his 85-year lifetime.

Through his coarse and beaten voice, Terkel shows signs of a long career in radio and movies. He said that when he began acting in the early 1950s, he usually was cast in the role of a gangster because of his rough demeanor.

Louis Terkel earned the nickname "Studs" because he loved the Studs Lonigan trilogy of novels by James T. Farrell. He carried them everywhere he went.

"Studs Terkel is not a household name like Bill Clinton is," said Simon. "But I'm sure there are a lot of people in Carbondale reading Studs Terkel books right now."

His passion for history enabled him to receive the most prestigious award for writing.

GUEST SPEAKER

* Terkel will speak as part of SIUC's "What I Learned and Would Like to Pass On," lecture series at 4:30 p.m. today at Lesar Law School Auditorium.

His book, "The Good War: An Oral History of World War II," won him the Pulitzer Prize in 1985.

Terkel made his claim-to-fame interviewing typical, everyday Americans on "The Studs Terkel Show" for 45 years on his radio show at WFMT-FM in Chicago. His life-long work was honored when the WFMT-FM and The Radio Network donated 9,000 reels and 7,000 hours of sound recordings to the Chicago

Maintenance looking into asbestos problem in Altgeld

KELLY E. HERTLEIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN

A University maintenance official today is going to look into the possible problem of asbestos in the basement of Altgeld Hall, the notably run-down home of the SIUC School of Music.

Scott Pike, campus building maintenance superintendent, said Wednesday he believes asbestos may be encapsulated in the basement of the music hall, but a circulating rumor about the potential leakage of the contamination has him investigating the matter.

At the time of press, Director of the School of Music Bob Wiess could not be reached for comment.

Asbestos has been linked to many diseases including lung cancer. A fibrous material widely used in the 1950s and 60s, asbestos was sprayed onto piping as a fireproofing agent in many schools, offices and companies. If the material becomes airborne, risks of health and safety factors may arise.

"There is probably some around the pipes down there," Pike said. "Most of it is encapsulating, though, meaning it can't get into the air and shouldn't cause any problems."

Pike said the Physical Plant will either fix the problem or remove the asbestos if a work order or complaint has been filed. To date, no formal orders or complaints have been ordered concerning asbestos in Altgeld Hall.

Altgeld Hall, built in 1886, was passed over in state funding efforts for deferred maintenance this year. Because of temperature control problems and poor structural conditions, faculty and administrators are hopeful the University will receive funds to renovate the building during the next fiscal year. Pike said the proposed remodeling plan for Altgeld will eliminate all of the asbestos within the building.

"It will all be removed when the building is remodeled," he said.

Until the possibility of funds are received from the state, Pike said only complaints may fix any problems with asbestos.

"Something has to be damaged," he said. "But, I will have someone take a look at it now."

Resolution passed to postpone vice chancellor selection

DAILY EGYPTIAN

The Faculty Senate passed a resolution Tuesday asking the University to delay the selection of the next vice chancellor of Academic Affairs and provost — an action already taken by the Graduate Council.

A majority of the Faculty Senate endorsed the resolution requesting the selection of vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and provost be delayed until a permanent chancellor has been named.

The resolution was passed by the Graduate Council Nov. 4 because of concerns about the academic stability of the University.

The council, composed of graduate students and faculty, also expressed a concern that the best potential candidate for provost may be discouraged from applying because a permanent chancellor has yet to be named.

History professor Jim Allen, a member of the Faculty Senate, presented the resolution to the senate and said he agreed with the concerns of the Graduate Council.

Allen said the faculty are very interested in the selection of the person who will be directly involved in academic affairs.

"For the faculty there is no more important position in administration than the provost," he said. "We don't want to make any mistakes concerning that position [and] we want the best person in that position."

Interim Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs and Provost Tom Guernsey, also dean of the Law School, has served in the position since June. Guernsey could not be reached for comment but is expected to serve in the position until a replacement is found. Allen said the Faculty Senate's endorsement of the resolution should not reflect negatively on Guernsey who has served in both positions since being named provost.

"This was not a conspiracy at any level," he said. "The logic behind the whole thing is that you have to have secure, stable leadership at the top."

"We don't want to make any mistakes concerning that position and we want the best person in that position."

Officials work to define information ownership

The Internet age has prompted officials at the University of Kansas to rethink how the institution defines ownership of information produced by faculty and students. "Intellectual property" once was a legal term applying primarily to researchers who wanted ownership of their work in the form of patents or publishing rights — but no more, Provost David Shulenburg said. Because of the Web, just about everyone at the university is suddenly capable of publishing. The question now boils down to this: If students use university resources — particularly computer networks — to post their work, who has control over it? For now, university officials have agreed that in most cases work will belong to the person who created it, not the university. New policies are likely to stipulate that the university will not be able to assert intellectual property rights over work published on the Web unless it signed a contract with the creator first, Shulenburg said. New policies will contain specific clauses regarding students' work, too.

Our Word

Don't let the curtain fall on International Film Series

A recent study, co-sponsored by the President's Committee on the Arts and the Humanities, found that students exposed to arts programs benefit from greater educational achievement. At our own University, an arts and cultural enrichment experience currently is feeling a money crunch that will cause the program to take a spring sabbatical unless it receives funding assistance.

The International Film Series is a 13-year-old program designed to offer students a chance to learn about film and different cultures while providing a cheaper entertainment option for moviegoers and video renters. In other words, it's a chance to have fun while getting more out of film than gratuitous violence and sex.

The SIUC University Honors program and the Student Programming Council currently fund the series through their annual budget allotments. In attempting to provide quality 16 mm films with superior content, some of which cost $1,000 just to rent, while charging next-to-nothing admission prices, the series has fallen upon financial hard times. But while the costs of renting the films for the series are escalating, annual budget allocations to the sponsoring units are not.

As a result of our news story reporting the endangerment of the series a couple individual sponsorships are in the works, but coordinators of the film series say they're just not enough to be a cure all. As it stands, the film series will still experience at least a temporary fade-out for the spring semester.

We believe the International Film Series makes a solid contribution to cultural awareness and education on our campus and is worthy of saving. Some films may be controversial in content, but nevertheless offer alternative perspectives of the world that can only add to overall knowledge and awareness.

This film series takes viewers on a journey of life outside their individual world. In broadening horizons, students learn tolerance and human themes that can apply to their everyday lives. SIUC is a university that takes pride in the diversity of its campus and this film series is a chance to learn a little bit more about that international student who sits next to you in class.

Exposure to these films and the lives and cultures depicted in them open doors to understanding and the building of relationships with people that come from different environments than many of us are accustomed to. All this is possible, but the film series can't aid in any of this education if it has no money to bring these films to our campus.

So this is a call to anyone and everyone with a desire to learn more about the world that surrounds them to help save this valuable enrichment program. If you love film or you believe in the value of educating people about culture then this is your chance to help those causes. Even if it's just spreading the word about the trouble the film series is having or relating what you learned by attending one of these films to someone else, no contribution is too small.

We encourage local businesses and campus programs to get involved in saving this series. If you own or operate a business with an international, film or art tie-in this is a chance to help sponsor a worthy program while perhaps also getting some exposure for your business. This is also an opportunity for international Registered Student Organizations to help a program that helps educate their less-culturally-aware fellow students.

With a little assistance, the International Film Series will be able to continue contributing to our campus educational and recreational opportunities. Help a program that helps everyone by saving this film series from having to roll its final credits.

Where have all the Rambos gone?

Sacrifice. Giving up whatever you have to help the ultimate cause. Glory.

The respect and honor bestowed upon those who have sacrificed. During fall break, I had the opportunity to travel to Washington, D.C., to visit the capital's Memorial Park. As I stood in front of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, I watched dozens of solemn Americans approach the monument, searching desperately for the familiar name they drove hundreds of miles to see etched in the black stone wall.

I watched as each of these visitors slowly and silently took out a piece of paper and lightly pencil-rubbed over the name of a beloved to take back with them across the country to wherever each of them had traveled from.

I saw printed on each face a kind of stifled and composed expression, the "poker face" technique employed time and again, trying to conceal the feelings churning inside each of these tourists. Feelings of fondness, remorse, love, patriotism, pride — each of these people carried with them the memory of a loved one who paid the ultimate price for his country.

As I continued on my path along the wall, I became consumed with a terrible, twisting pain, deep in the pit of my stomach.

That pain felt like guilt. Guilt, because as I traced each of these names with my fingertip, I realized that in my whole life, I had never once stopped to ponder the sacrifices made decade after decade in our nation's history. Over the last two centuries, thousands upon thousands of men and women have dedicated their lives to preserving my personal freedom as an American, and I have never once stopped to say "thank you" to any of them.

Not one.

As I stared into the shiny black granite, tears welled in my eyes. Right in front of me stood an entire wall of Americans who lived and died to bring freedom to others, and I had never shown any care at all.

To me, Veteran's Day had always simply meant a day when the banks closed and the mail didn't run. I mean, I understood that we were supposed to be commemorating each of the veterans who made today's America possible, but I am ashamed to say that none of it had ever impacted me enough to spend that day thinking about the sacrifices made so that I may live each day without the fear of oppression or tyranny.

I know how easy it is to simply take a more apathetic route with the "Yeah — it's a good thing we have an army that does all of that good stuff, but do we have to spend all day talking about it?" attitude. But I think there are many others like me who simply have never thought about these veteran armies as individual persons with separate, precious lives spent for their country.

This Veteran's Day, you don't have to go to Washington to celebrate our nation's heroes. In fact, you don't even have to leave Carbondale. There are many residents here that sacrifice their time and resources every day to give America a better tomorrow.

If you don't want to enlist in the armed forces, give up an afternoon a week to work at the food pantry or make a donation to the Salvation Army. In the same spirit of those heroes who traveled overseas to help their fellow man, we can carry on their tradition in each of our lives.

It is our generation's turn to pick up the torch and run with it. The greatest honor we can give to the heroes of the past is not found in a stone monument or a federal holiday, but simply in keeping their flame burning bright for the future. In doing this, we can show America's veterans that we long to preserve the values each of them fought for.

Keep our nation's patriotism alive every day. Only through our own personal sacrifice will we as a nation achieve glory.

'The Education of Little Tree' is good for a nap

DEAR EDITOR:

The most recent offering of the International Film Series has quietly vanished. One could almost be grateful since the pacing and abject "sentimentality" of "The Education of Little Tree" seem designed to intensify intellectual lethargy.

On some campuses, however, this film might have sparked questioning and serious intellectual debate. Someone might have asked, "Did Eastern Cherokees actually qualify for listing on the Dawes rolls?" Or "When exactly did the federal government close all Indian boarding schools east of the Mississippi?" Or "What is the difference between Nighthawk and Sundland in traditional Cherokee velvet?"

One might even have heard references to Eco and hyperreality or Audillard and simula- lars, perhaps even a discussion of why Native intellectuals across the United States have been so critical of this film and the book it is based upon.

Professor, critic and novelist Louis Owens (Choctaw-Cherokee-Irish) offers this theoretically informed opinion in an essay called "Multicultural Tourism" in his recent book "Mixedblood Messages." "As we all know, losing one's voice and one's stories is an old and familiar experience for indigenous Americans as well as others on the margins of U.S. society. We need only consider the long tradition of blackface, or the success of the Charlie Chan novels of Earl Derriger, or the recent success of a white supremacist in painting off 'The Education of Little Tree' as a genuine Indian autobiography (the 'absolute fact')."

But then, there is nothing more refreshing, even for put-upon intellectuals, than a much-needed nap.

Double standard for gay crimes in media

DEAR EDITORS,

Please help me understand why Jesse Dirksing's murder, a despicable hate crime, has not warranted media attention. As we drown in press coverage of the Matthew Shepard beating trial and cries for hate crime laws, it is possible the press would completely ignore the story of a 13-year-old child who was tied up, tortured, repeatedly raped and then suffocated with his own underwear by two Arkansas homosexuals?

I searched the DAILY EGYPTIAN website and found 13 current matches for "Matthew Shepard," but ZERO matches for "Jesse Dirksing." I searched CNN's web site and found 126 current matches for "Matthew Shepard," but ZERO matches for "Jesse Dirksing." I did the same search on ABC's site and had 672 matches for Matthew Shepard, and ZERO matches for Jesse Dirksing. I had the same results on USA Today's site: many matches for Shepard, ZERO for Dirksing. Even the NY Times had 50 results for Shepard, and ZERO for Dirksing.

Interestingly, the EGYPTIAN, CNN, USA Today, ABC and the New York Times had more than 1,000 articles on Matthew Shepard and ZERO, NONE, NOT ONE article on Jesse Dirksing. And the crimes were similar: two men kill boy in gay crime. The only difference is that in one crime, the homosexual was the victim and in the other crime the homosexuals were the criminals.

Interesting.

A search on Yahoo finds 4,420 web pages for Matthew Shepard, ZERO for Dirksing. Alta Vista has 8,257 pages for Shepard, and one for Dirksing (David Duke's news page).

Please visit one of the following sites and get the details about 7th grader Jesse Dirksing, who literally was raped to death. Then please spread the word of this story to everyone you can.

JUSTIN JONES - DAILY EGYPTIAN

Virgil Marks, a World War I veteran and the oldest living veteran in Illinois, looks at a picture of himself at the age of 24. Marks served in France during World War I, and in August he received France's highest honor, the Chevalier of the National Order of the Legion of Honor. Marks now lives in Murphysboro.

FREEDOM

soldiers trying to enter France, his job was to take them to another soldier at a different post.

"I took him three [men], and he shot them in the back," Marks says. "Shot down and they didn't even have a fountain pen on them. I told him not to do that anymore. And he didn't."

World War I began in 1914 between Austria-Hungary and Serbia after the Serbs assassinated Austrian Crown Prince Francis Ferdinand. The war, which lasted until 1918, included Germany, Britain, France, and Russia because of ally involvement. More than 115,000 Americans died in the war. Healthy for a man his age, Marks lives by himself. One of his favorite activities is playing the Red Baron II computer game, which mimics World War I by allowing him to shoot French fighters.

"I was glad to get out of that country," Marks says.

World War II

William Murphy sits in a chair at the Murphysboro Veterans of Foreign Wars club explaining how scared he was when he left Murphysboro to fight in World War II. He speaks about the past in a detached manner, separating it from the present as his emotions and thoughts travel back. Murphy was sworn into the navy the day before his 18th birthday.

"You have to learn to live your own life," Murphy says. "It's your duty to help keep your country free. You do what you have to do."

"There's times when you're on the ship, I don't know if you call it scar. I just wonder what's going to happen," Murphy said. "Many times people are scared, whether they say they are. I know that."

Murphy was a motor mechanics mate third class in the U.S. Navy from 1944 through 1945. He worked on a landing ship tank with about 120 other men traveling to several different islands in the Philippines to load tanks and supplies for shipping.

Murphy never fought in battle, but sometimes when the general alarm went off, he would wonder if he could make it to the deck's machine gun in time.

"It's either kill or get killed," Murphy said. World War II lasted from 1939 to 1945. The Germans invaded Poland, eliciting declarations of war from Britain and France, Polish allies. The Nazis wanted to take over the world and killed six million Jews. More than 295,000 Americans lost their lives fighting for the oppressed. Hitler committed suicide April 30, 1945.

The Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor Dec. 7, 1941, killing more than 2,200 people. The Japanese surrendered after the United States dropped hydrogen bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, claiming more than 100,000 Japanese lives.

"I'm ticked to death they dropped that bomb over there," Murphy says. "They talked about all the poor people killed by that bomb. Our lives might've been saved because of that bomb. I appreciate Mr. Truman for that."

"War is not good, [but] the world is better now because of the war. We still have our freedoms."

For Murphy, Veterans Day means honoring all veterans, but especially those who died defending the nation.

"I think 90 percent of [Americans] don't know what World War II was," Murphy says. "It's a shame because it's a part of history. A lot of things have been forgotten."

"Sooner or later, that will be too."

Korean War

Chester Steele has not missed a Veterans Day celebration since he returned to Murphysboro from the Korean War in 1953.

"There's enough veterans around [that people] should have a good idea of what went on if they want to listen," Steele says. "That's the problem with them — they don't listen."

Steele, who fought in the 7th division of the 17th Infantry from 1951 to 1953, joined just after his 21st birthday.

"You think you're the meanest thing that ever walked the earth," Steele says. "[But] it's pretty nerve-racking. We were on the line all the time. Pure hell, all the time. It's a tough thing to really express how you feel when your buddies are getting killed. You still know you got to go on. You may be the next one."

Although Steele, 69, does not dwell on the war, many soldiers remain haunted by images of death and destruction.

"You've got to be able to move it to the back [of your mind] and forget about it," Steele says. "If you dwell on it, you're going to have problems."

The Korean War often is referred to as the "forgotten war." In 1950, the North Korean government launched an attack on South Korea to gain control of the country. The United States fought on behalf of South Korea, sacrificing 54,000 Americans in the effort. The countries arrived at an armistice in 1953 with no peace treaty signed. The war was a great lesson for Steele, who learned to be an individual on the battlefield.

"When those people are there to kill you, you've got to take care of yourself," Steele says. "Can't have no guilty feelings about that. It's tough. You just got to get the attitude that you really don't care. You've got to be there to understand it."

Steele does not know if today's army would handle the Korean War in the same way.

"They train them differently," Steele says. "They train them for all this modern equipment. We didn't have all this modern equipment. We had M-1s we carried on our shoulders. We didn't have anybody to bring us ammo either. You had to carry it yourself."

Steele celebrates Veterans Day as a color guard for the Murphysboro VFW.

"Veterans Day is the day you honor all those boys that went and fought for this country," Steele says. "And that's what we do."

Vietnam

Robert Dorris smiles down at his 4-year-old grandson, Joshua Wickham, whose giddy laughter fills the air as he watches cartoons on television.

"That's what you come home for," Dorris says emphatically, pointing at Wickham.

Dorris, who was in the Marines from 1958 to 1980, served during Vietnam and describes his experiences of fear and misery with large eyes.

"It's not a thrill to kill," Dorris says. "You do what you're supposed to do. You don't sleep. You think you sleep. You may lay down and rest. [You are] always listening, always worried. I was just a kid. It was terrifying, especially when you're married with two kids."

Family is what kept him alive during the war. "I was more concerned about my family than I was concerned about me," Dorris says. "I was too scared to be scared."

Dorris, who was promoted to sergeant before Vietnam, still cannot speak about some of the painful memories. When asked about the youngest man in his group, Dorris says only one thing.

"The one who died in my arms," Dorris says, refusing to give more details. For many Vietnam veterans such as Dorris, the memories are too painful to share.

The conflict, which began in 1955 and ended in 1973, was never officially declared a war. The United States fought alongside South Vietnam to keep the two countries under separate government, killing 58,148 Americans. Dorris served two-and-a-half tours in Vietnam — from 1966 to 1967 and from 1969 to 1970. He came home during 1968 and was shunned by people opposing the conflict.

"I wished I could've turned right around and gone back," Dorris says. "I get sick of the way service men are treated."

Dorris has no regrets about fighting for his country.

"I didn't enjoy going," Dorris says. "I did choose the service as my career. War is not good. It's got to be done. Are we going to sit back and let people destroy people? America has been designated as the saviors of the world."

For Dorris, Veterans Day represents everything America stands for.

"It means my life and my freedom and the freedom for my wife, children and grandchildren," Dorris says.

Persian Gulf

Tim Antrim, a veteran from the Persian Gulf War, says the military is different now with the days of hand-to-hand combat behind us. Antrim joined the U.S. Navy in 1976 and retired in 1997.

"Every generation has a different thing," says Antrim, an education major at SIUC. "In [today's] push to be politically correct, there's always a risk of going too far the opposite direction."

Antrim cited the example of women in the navy. As a chief electrician, Antrim often had to meet with his employees, and to protect against accusations, he had to have another naval member present while meeting with a female.

"The military has changed," Antrim says. "We need people to be aware of what's done in D.C."

The Persian Gulf War started in 1990 between Iraq and an international coalition led by the United States under United Nations guidelines. The war was a controversial effort to stabilize Iraq and Kuwait and the oil production. More than 146 Americans died before the conflict was resolved in 1991. Thirty-five of those deaths were caused by friendly fire.

Antrim says the long days out at sea were hard away from his family.

"It's a heck of a thing to go to work one day and come home to find your kid six months old," Antrim says sadly. "Or [find him] riding a bike or whatever it was."

Although not directly involved in the war, Antrim says Veterans Day is a holiday to be appreciated.

"It makes [the veterans] feel like the military is part of the country," Antrim says.

A 2-year-old girl picks up a twig on the ground at the cemetery. Oblivious to the importance of the moment, she jumps around and plays. The former soldier lying in the coffin is her great uncle. She will never know him. A part of American history lies in the casket.

Southern Illinois recognizes the sacrifices of soldiers

JENNIFER WIG
DAILY EGYPTIAN

In honor of Veterans Day, more than 50 soldiers will stand guard at the Old Main flagpole as part of the Prisoners of War Missing in Action vigil.

Two soldiers at a time from the Association of US Army and the Arnold Air Society will stand 15 minutes each. The vigil began at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday and ends at 3:30 p.m. Thursday.

The Army and Air Force ROTC departments will begin their Veterans Day ceremonies at 3:30 p.m. at the Old Main flagpole with a proclamation by Carbondale Mayor Neil Dillard. Mary Ann Tryggstad, president of the SIUC Veterans Association, and C. Patrick Murphy, U.S. District Court Judge for the Southern District of Illinois, will speak about the holiday's symbolism.

Tryggstad, a junior in microbiology/pre-med, plans to speak about the soldiers who have been to war.

"We want to recognize the sacrifices soldiers have made," said Tryggstad, a former member of the Air Force. "And not just the ones who died, but all the veterans who make sacrifices every day."

Also in honor of Veterans Day, the SIUC Veterans Association will sponsor a guest speaker at 7 p.m. in Lesar Law Auditorium. Harry Spiller, a Marine Corps veteran and local author, will speak about the POW experience from World War II through the present. The Veterans Association also decorated the Student Center window near the bowling alley Monday evening. The decorations, which include war uniforms, maps and equipment, will be displayed through Friday.

Tryggstad said we owe veterans our lives.

"The freedoms and liberties we have are due to the fact that veterans have served this country," said Tryggstad, one of 2,300 veterans at SIUC.

Veterans Day has been a part of history most of the 20th century. Formerly known as Armistice Day, Veterans Day began November 11, 1918, when World War I ended. At 11 a.m. Nov. 11, 1921, the first unknown soldier was buried in Arlington National Cemetery. Similar ceremonies occurred in England and France at exactly the same time to celebrate Armistice Day.

In 1954 President Dwight D. Eisenhower signed a bill proclaiming the day as Veterans Day in recognition of all the soldiers who sacrificed their lives to defend the country. Capt. Michael Parsons, a member of the SIUC Army ROTC, said Veterans Day should be honored by all Americans.

"It would promote an appreciation of the sacrifice that armed services veterans and their families faced in the line of duty."

GPSC opposes further tuition hikes

Council demands accountability for graduate tuition increases

TIM BARRETT
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Concerned with how funds generated from a graduate tuition increase are being used, the Graduate and Professional Student Council went on record Tuesday opposing additional tuition increases.

Graduate students are currently in the second year of a five-year plan raising graduate tuition above and beyond the undergraduate rate.

The decision to raise tuition above the undergraduate level was made in spring 1997 following a report by the Graduate School addressing the costs of graduate education. The report indicated 18 percent of the cost to educate a graduate student was covered by tuition.

To conform to industry standards that indicate students should pay 25 percent of their education through tuition, the SIU Board of Trustees approved a tuition increase for graduate students in June 1997.

The University is in its second year of a five-year gradual increase of tuition to cover 25 percent of the cost of a graduate student's education. Currently, tuition for a graduate student is $108.50 per credit hour compared to $95.50 for undergraduates.

The resolution approved by GPSC states that last year about $100,000 was given to the Graduate School to use for faculty and student travel. But this year, no money has been given to the Graduate School.

As a result, GPSC voted to see that money generated from the differential be accounted for before the University continues in its plan to increase tuition further.

Interim Provost Tom Guernsey later said the Budget Office told him money given to the Graduate School last year was not a result from any tuition increase, but rather a one-time allocation from then-Chancellor Jo Ann Argersinger.

"What I have been told is that there has not been an actual increase," Guernsey said.

Guernsey said a decline in enrollment of graduate students coupled with tuition waivers and a decrease in out-of-state tuition costs has diminished any funds generated from the tuition increase.

"There's no increased money to be accountable for," Guernsey said.

Budget Office Director Carol Henry was unavailable for comment as of press time Wednesday.

GPSC President Ed Ford said that even if the total revenue generated by graduate tuition decreased, the portion generated by the percentage increase should be easily accounted for. He said he just wants to make sure that the money is going to the Graduate School and not someplace else.

"The only way that [money from the differential] could be zero is if every student on the campus had a tuition waiver," Ford said. "That's simply not true."

John Koropchak, acting dean of the Graduate School, said he is working closely with administrators to try and pinpoint where the money from the tuition increase is going.

"I have had several negotiations with higher administrators," Koropchak said. "We're still trying to get that money, but so far we have not."

"I don't think we have had a finalized decision from the upper administration on it," Koropchak said.

In other business, GPSC heard a presentation by Ray Lenzi, acting vice chancellor for Institutional Advancement.

Lenzi gave council members an overview of the programs he oversees, including the SIU Alumni Association, the SIU Foundation, Public Affairs, Economic and Regional Development and those programs commitment to advance the University.

"We have a lot to be proud of here at SIU," Lenzi said, himself a three-time alum of the University. "When I bleed, I bleed maroon."

Lenzi cited last year's nearly 30 percent increase in contributions and grants, a 7 percent increase in Alumni Association membership last year, and increasing people certified to be fundraisers from zero last year to 21 by early next year as signs that his department is helping to better SIUC.

"We're in a position where increasingly private support is becoming more and more important than in the past," Lenzi said. "Public universities are increasingly becoming dependent on endowments."

Historical Society. The society intends to organize and catalogue these recordings to make them available for the first time to the general public.

In honor of Veterans Day, Terkel wants to take the opportunity to remember the past. He said people are too used to the 30-second sound bites and don't take a chance to remember history.

"We must remember what happened yesterday," Terkel said. "I think we have a national Alzheimer's disease in this country."

Terkel takes a greater amount of pride in interviewing the blue-collar Americans than famous celebrities like James Baldwin, Jimmy and Roslyn Carter and Woody Allen.

Former U.S. Sen. Paul Simon was the final guest on Terkel's radio show before it was ended in 1997. He will have a chance to switch roles with Terkel as he will be interviewing him for a WSIU television program to be aired Jan. 14 at 8 p.m.

"I get a kick out of that," Terkel said. "My respect for Paul Simon is unlimited."

Simon still is cultivating questions on what to ask his friend.

"I haven't even thought about [what to ask him]," Simon said. "He has accumulated a lot of wisdom in that 85 years and is just a great human being with a great sense of humor."

Simon said Terkel will talk candidly about his career to students and faculty during his visit to campus. He hopes students come to and take advantage of the learning experience and wisdom Terkel has to offer.

"I hope a lot of people come to the 4:30 lecture because they can have fun and learn at the same time from Studs Terkel," Simon said.

senators brought forth a resolution opposing the surcharge.

"It's kind of a weird situation," Henry said.

The results of the USG meeting were not available as of press time.

Henry said either resolution probably would not change the actions of the board, but he thought it was a necessary action.

"I feel that it's going to pass no matter what we do," Henry said. "I basically wrote the resolution [supporting the surcharge] to reaffirm USG's support."

GPSC voted in opposition of the tuition surcharge, though a referendum passed supporting the fee version in April. The vote put GPSC on the record as opposing the process by which the fee was changed to a surcharge and the surcharge itself.

Ed Ford, GPSC president, said his group's main concern was making sure these types of proposals are discussed in the fall in order to give constituency groups something on paper to look at before the board sets tuition in March.

"To me, this doesn't give people enough time to talk about the proposal and raise questions," Ford said.

"They already had tuition costs set last spring, and now, in mid-stream, they're tacking more costs on."

Though GPSC officially opposes the surcharge, Ford said his group's action may be too late.

"In all honesty, the time for input is before these matters go before the board. Once it's on the agenda, it is essentially what the board is going to do."

Ed Ford
GPSC president

A recent addition to Board of Trustees meetings are protesters from Education. Dawn Roberts, S.E.E. coordinator, said she planned to have a group at today's meeting, though she would not say how many people will protest or what kind of protest they are planning.

"We're continuing to go to the meetings to try to raise awareness, and, hopefully get some stuff changed," Roberts said.

Roberts said her group's concern is the well-being of the University and students, and a lack of communication and accountability on the part of the board and the administration. Part of S.E.E.'s concerns center around the tuition surcharge.

"If this [tuition surcharge] is added, we need to know that it's going somewhere," Roberts said. "If there is a real and rational use for that money, and it's not just becoming another slush fund, that's great."

Roberts, also a USG senator, said she will present a bill at Wednesday's senate meeting asking for information from the University about S.E.E.'s treatment when they protested the October Board of Trustees meeting.

A spokesman for SIU President Ted Sanders said no special plans have been made for protesters and standard procedures for the Morris University Center, where the meeting will take place, would be abided by. The president's office said it does not expect any large-scale protest.

Student Affairs Jean Paratore and Assistant Director of Student Development Katie Sermersheim submitted the proposal to interim Chancellor John Jackson Oct. 6.

Cichella said the new program is a compromise between greeks and administrators.

"We feel by implementing this program we will be able to balance all aspects of greek life," Cichella said. "They like the new program, and we will discuss its direction together during the meeting."

Select 2000 was initiated at SIUC in 1996, when the National Interfraternity Council approached the University to pilot the program. SIUC was one of four schools nationwide asked to pilot the program, but by spring 1999, only two schools remained in the program. When officially implemented, the University of Northern Colorado will be the only school under Select 2000 guidelines.

The plan was to be implemented in stages, the last completed in 2000. SIUC took on the program fully in fall 1997, and the nine points were completely implemented by fall 1998. Students did not have any input in the implementation of the program, which created countless greek complaints surrounding Select 2000.

In spring 1999, greek leaders started working with SIUC administration to complete a compromise concerning Select 2000 that both sides could agree with, and the SIUC Greek Millennium Initiative should be a solution to the controversy.

"We wanted a program designed by students that could be governed by students," Cichella said.

WE

We feel by implementing this program we will be able to balance all aspects of greek life. They like the new program, and we will discuss its direction together during the meeting.

SIU ready to run at regionals

CHRISTINE BOLIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN

SIU freshman cross country runner Katie Meehan understands that if the team doesn't run well in the NCAA Midwest Regional Saturday in Champaign, it could mean the end of the careers of four of her senior teammates.

"I am pretty aware of how important this race is," Meehan said. "We are going to try our best because we are ready to give our best."

Meehan and the Salukis compete against 31 of the 42 teams in the Midwest region in the 5K race.

Each head coach in the region has the choice to enter or keep his team from entering the regional. Those who think their teams have a legitimate chance to win the regional will race for the opportunity to qualify for the NCAA Championships in Bloomington, Ind., Nov. 22.

The Salukis need to finish either first or second to qualify for the NCAA Championships. They may also qualify with a third-place finish, but would need an at-large bid from the NCAA to attend.

In addition to the team finishing either first or second, five individuals from a few of the teams that did not qualify (third place and lower) in the Midwest region will be chosen to compete at the NCAA Championships.

"This is the big show," DeNoot said. "This is what we have worked for all year. We get to see if we really belong. We are competing against the best and worst teams in our region."

Some of the highlighted competition in the region the Salukis are up against include Kansas State University, the University of Minnesota, the University of Missouri and Missouri Valley Conference opponents Indiana State University, Wichita State University and Northern Iowa University.

Senior Jenny Monaco is confident the Salukis have what it takes to run with the competition.

"We are going to have an outstanding race this time around," Monaco said. "We all know what we need to do. We need to have confidence and the attitude that we can run with these people."

THE BIG MEET

• The SIU women's cross country team races in Champaign Saturday in the NCAA Midwest Regional Championship.

Indiana State University, and several schools from the Big 10 and Big 12 conferences.

The Salukis aim to qualify for the NCAA Championships, which will be difficult to do. In order to automatically qualify, SIU must place among the top two teams. If the Salukis place third, an at-large bid to the NCAA Championships may be a possibility.

In addition to the teams in the Midwest Region that qualify, five individuals from non-qualifying teams will be chosen to compete at the NCAA Championships.

Despite placing fifth at the MVC Championships two weeks ago, head coach Bill Cornell knows those results don't mean a thing when it comes time for Regionals.

"We beat every MVC school competing against us last year. I hope we can do it again," Cornell said. "I also hope [SIU runners] can redeem themselves from Conference."

Freshman Joey Molteni knew how important the Valley meet was and said he will carry the same attitude over to Regionals.

"We are going to treat [Regionals] the same way we treated Conference. We are going to push all the way," Molteni said. "We all know we have to do our best."

Junior runner Chris Owen knows the end may be near for the SIU men's cross country team.

If the Salukis fail to qualify for the NCAA Nationals at the NCAA Midwest Regional Championships Saturday in Champaign, SIU men's cross country will be officially wrapped up for the millennium.

"Regionals is pretty much our last chance to dance to see what we got," Owen said. "We can either be studs or duds."

According to Owen, the Salukis were "studs" at Regionals last season by placing sixth out of 22 teams.

This year, the Salukis are up against all Missouri Valley Conference teams in the 10K race

More teams join Griffey sweepstakes

LARRY STONE
KNIGHT-RIDDER NEWSPAPER

The Mariners can say without fear of contradiction that the Minnesota Twins will not be a player in the Ken Griffey Jr. sweepstakes. A Twins executive told Seattle General Manager Pat Gillick that if they paid Griffey the $17 million that the Mariners offered the superstar and then signed their 24 other players for the minimum salary of $200,000, they would still be over their payroll budget.

The Mariners are in the process of ascertaining just who is serious about Griffey, whose next contract will dwarf Green's. After meeting with three clubs Sunday, they convened with five more yesterday and were to close out the preliminary round of talks today by talking to four more teams.

It can be assumed that by the end of the day, the Mariners will have talked to the Reds, Mets, Indians, Braves, Yankees, Astros, Red Sox, Cardinals and Orioles, and possibly Texas and Tampa Bay.

Gillick said the Mariners have received about five tangible offers for Griffey, none of which have been to their liking. They could begin narrowing the list and having second meetings with some teams tomorrow.

"We're not the smartest guys in the world, but there's a little psychology," he said. "You've got to be a little patient."

The Braves, who would be an obvious front-runner if they decide to pursue Griffey, were expected to meet with the Mariners today.

The Mariners are closing in on a three-year contract extension for catcher Dan Wilson. The option to renew his contract is up tomorrow, but there's a good chance they will be ready to announce a new deal by then in the range of $13 million to $15 million that will keep Wilson in Seattle through 2002.

BASKETBALL

Men get Warren; spurned by Avant

The SIU men's basketball program signed bulky 6-foot-8-inch forward Josh Warren of Washington, Mo., Wednesday to a national letter of intent.

Warren, a senior at St. Francis Borgia High School, averaged 14 points and nine rebounds as a junior and picked the Salukis over Southwest Missouri State University and the University of Wyoming.

However, the Salukis received bad news when Jamar Avant, a highly regarded 6-foot-8-inch power forward from nearby Murphysboro High School, announced he picked Murray State University over SIU.

Weber and his staff worked hard to get Avant in the fold and many observers thought the Salukis were in excellent shape to sign Avant. But in the end, it may have been Avant's intimate familiarity with SIU that was the Salukis' downfall.

"It was a hard decision, a real hard decision," Avant said at a press conference at Murphysboro High School. "The only thing Murray State really had over SIU was I want to learn more about Murray State. I want to experience something new when I go off to college."

SIU has five other scholarships for the 2000-2001 season, and is likely to add to its class during the course of the week.

Women's squad signs a pair

The SIU women's team wasted little time stocking talent for the future, as head coach Julie Beck announced the signing of two post players during the first day of the early signing period Wednesday.

Jodi Heiden of Altamont High School and Romeoville High School's Tiffany Crutcher, both 6-foot-2 inches tall, signed national letters of intent to play for the Salukis.

Heiden, who averaged 17 points and 12 rebounds last season for Class A Altamont, is described as a strong rebounder with finesse in the paint.

Crutcher scored 14 points a game with 10 rebounds for Romeoville a year ago. Crutcher, whose father played football at SIU, led her team in scoring, rebounding, and blocks while being named to the Chicago Sun-Times Top 50 list.

"Jodi and Tiffany were the two top recruits that we wanted to sign early," said Beck in a news release. "We are excited that we could bring in such quality student-athletes."

Beck said SIU will likely give out its final remaining scholarship in the spring.

Beck's first recruiting class scores early

Freshmen Janina Lopez, Molly McDowell combine to score 32 of the Salukis' 81 points

PAUL WALEKINSKI
DAILY EGYPTIAN

SIU women's basketball coach Julie Beck's first priority following the dismal 6-21 season of a year ago was to recruit players that would take the scoring burden off Terica Hathaway.

Job well done.

The freshman class on the 1999-2000 club is by no means hesitant when it comes to shooting. The four freshmen combined for 44 for of the Salukis' 81 points as they defeated St. Louis Goldstar 81-63 Wednesday night in front of 350 fans in the first of two exhibition games this season.

"They can shoot it," Beck said about her freshmen. "There's a lot of positives; there are no negatives, I don't think. I just think there's a lot that we can work on and we've got to stay grounded. We know we've got a long way to go, but it certainly was nice."

Hathaway, who averaged 15.8 points a game last season, scored only eight points while freshman guard Janina Lopez stole the show with 17 points in 23 minutes. Freshman guard Molly McDowell, last year's "Ms. Basketball" in Illinois at Nokomis High School, chipped in with 15 points of her own.

The Salukis needed time to brush off the dust gathered during the off-season as they trailed early 4-10. But that would be the biggest lead St. Louis Goldstar would get as the Salukis took a 21-12 run into the half-time locker room.

The freshmen shot 19 of the Salukis' 39 field goal attempts in the first half as the Salukis shot just 35.9 percent from the field.

"Janina [Lopez] hadn't even practiced with us for two weeks," Beck said. "Berwanger and Lopez, we didn't sign until May. I turned to coach on the bench and said, 'That's really nice to have a couple of kids that nobody knew about.'"

The Salukis kept Goldstar beyond arms reach throughout the entire second half allowing them to get only as close as 10 points with just less than 12 minutes to play. The Salukis shot slightly worse in the second half at 34.8 percent. But the 81 points scored by the Salukis is more than 24 points than the Salukis averaged throughout the 1998-99 season.

son. That was made possible as a result of only eight turnovers the entire game. One of the Salukis' biggest faults last season was constantly turning the ball over. Also leading the way for the Salukis was senior Melaniece Bardley's double-double, scoring 12 points and pulling down 13 total rebounds. Berwanger also flirted with a double-double scoring 10 points and claiming eight boards. Geshla Woodard added 10 points with five rebounds.

"We've got a long way to go," Beck said. "It was fun for them, they got some confidence. It was fun to get a win by that margin because [Athletes in Action] is going to be a very good test for us Monday."

Three Viefhauses not a crowd for softball team

Twin recruits join older sister on Saluki squad

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The Count from "Sesame Street" would love this one.

"One Viefhaus, two Viefhauses, three Viefhauses, ha, ha, ha," he would shout.

But it is Saluki head softball coach Kerri Blaylock who can enjoy the pleasure of three Viefhauses after signing twins Adie and Haley Viefhaus, who will join their elder sister, Marta, SIU's all-time home run leader, next season after both signed letters of intent Wednesday, Blaylock announced.

Along with the Viefhaus twins, Blaylock also received a letter of intent from pitcher Mary Jaszczak of Joliet Township High School.

The Viefhaus twins finished their high school careers at Eureka High School (Eureka, Mo.) this fall after spending their first three seasons at Marquette High School (Chesterfield, Mo.).

Both were First-Team All-Suburban South Conference, while Haley was also named First-Team All-District last season.

Unlike Marta, the Salukis junior center fielder, the twins are not power hitters, but are contact hitters and also possess great defensive versatility.

"Last year, Adie played short and Haley played third. This year, Haley played short and Adie caught and they had a phenomenal number of pick-offs because they were in sync with each other," Blaylock said.

Offensively, Haley batted .349 with nine doubles, one triple, one home run and 13 RBIs. Adie was not far behind with a .326 batting average with one triple, five doubles and 20 RBIs.

Despite having Marta at SIU, Blaylock said it was not an easy choice persuading the twins to select SIU over the University of Mississippi and Southwest Missouri State University, who both showed a strong interest in the twins.

Jaszczak finished her junior season at Joliet Township at 25-4 with a 0.94 ERA and 212 strikeouts.

Jaszczak enters her senior season this spring as a three-time SICA West All-Conference Selection and a two-time All-State and All-Chicagoland Area pick.

"She's one of those kids that's made a name for herself," Blaylock said. "She throws about 60 miles per hour, but the thing I like about her is that she's a pitcher not a thrower. She has a great change-up."

Unpredictability

Men's swimming team not taking Purple Aces of Evansville lightly

GAFFY TRUDEAU
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The dominance maintained by the SIU men's swimming and diving team over the Missouri Valley Conference is probably starting to weigh on the minds of the rest of the conference.

The Salukis will have to be cautious not to let their confidence get out of hand when they welcome the University of Evansville to the Recreation Center pool 1 p.m. Saturday.

"Evansville wants to get better and improve," Walker said. "They are better than they were a year ago. This is not a cakewalk, but at the same time, it's definitely a meet we should win."

"And while it's a meet that we should win, my focus will be to make sure that our guys don't take the meet lightly. It's when you start doing things like that when surprises happen."

Those words of advice were not lost on South African senior Herman Louw. Louw, a 200 and 400 individual medley stalwart and anchor leg to the relay teams, is cognizant of the uncertainty of the meet.

"We can't relax going into this meet because you never know what's going to happen," Louw said.

"They are a good team."

The level of competition around the conference is definitely improving, and the Salukis are ready for the challenges that may lie ahead.

"I've said it before," Walker said. "I think our conference is definitely stepping up."

"We've been at the top for the past five years, but it's the other teams that make the decision. Either they're going to rise to that level or they are going to just stay content with where they are."

"Eventually, they are going to come over here and start saying, 'We're not just knocking on your door, we're coming in.'"

GETTING WET

The SIU men's swimming and diving team takes on MVC foe the University of Evansville Saturday at 1 p.m. in the Recreation Center pool.
