The agony and the ecstasy (?) of dorm life

By Sam Campanella

The little old lady who lived in a shoe has nothing on Fred W. Prassas, a freshman from Evanston. Prassas isn't living in anything like a kingsize paratrooper boot, but as of the third week of the quarter, he was still living out of a suitcase.

Prassas is a member of a four-oope-five-man room at the Thompson Point Halls. "We're having lot of fun," he said, "but it's a little hard to study."

Two of Prassas's roommates, Herbert L. Heppner, a freshman from Morton Grove, and Jon T. Meyers, a freshman from Sheboygan, are taking the situation calmly.

"I've got two rooms at home, and they're both bigger than this one," said Heppner, "but at least we have screens on the windows."

All three agree that they would rather be here than at University Park. "The walls are barren," said Meyers, "but it's really not a bad room."

At University Park, the students, at least the men, have their sights set a little higher. On the list of items forgotten at home, are a good pair of binoculars.

Without a lake breeze, or great height, the air seems to be showing the effects, according to Robert A. Randall, a freshman from Ridgeway living in Boomer I. "The first floor has a pungent odor," Randall said.

Ed Doran, a freshman from Ohio, Ill. admitted that this is his first time away from home for an extended period. His room faces the part of Campus Drive that leads to Southern Hills. "Unfortunately," he said, "it also faces the area where the garbage cans are kept."

Carl H. Bugenhagen, a sophomore from Shumway, Ill., also complained about a lack of good ventilation. Bugenhagen did not complain about leaving his binoculars at home, though he would have liked to have brought some textbooks from home.

Bugenhagen said he would probably stay at the Boomer

Hall. Doran and Randall both expressed their desire to move to the Schneider Hall. They said they liked the kitchenettes and hair dryers there.

At Mae Smith Hall, the air may be fresher, but not necessarily as accessible. Vera M. Pirth, a sophomore from Mundelein complained, "If you want the window open, the resident fellow must open it, and when you want it closed, the resident fellow must come and close it."

Although there are definitely no five-man rooms in Mae Smith Hall, the effect is similar. According to Susan J. Kelso, a sophomore from Deerfield, "The younger girls like to run up and down the halls, screaming, like we used to."

What about all that room that coeds are supposed to need for all their clothing? Linda J. Schwerdtseger, a sophomore from Ottawa, Ill., claimed, "There is plenty of closet space, but not enough drawer space."

Miss Kelso also misses a bath tub and said the design of Mae Smith Hall is too regimental, "like cell prised me."

The girls said that all incoming coeds should spend their first year living on campus. All three girls said they planned to move off campus eventually.

In Schneider Hall, little is desired. Mike H. Martin, Chicago, a freshman majoring in government, said the rooms are real nice. "They surprised me." His roommate, Steve M. Mendelsohn, a freshman from Park Forest, Ill., has put their phone number on the window, trying to attract the attention of the girls in Mae Smith.

Capital improvements recommended

Fine arts and library building complexes at the Carbondale Campus and a fine arts classroom and office building at the Edwardsville Campus are among major capital improvement requests recommended for SIU for 1970-71.

The Illinois Board of Higher Education Tuesday recommended a capital budget of $26,629,700 for SIU. That amount covers buildings and improvements previously authorized by the board for the 1969-71 biennium, but later deleted by the legislature from fiscal 1969-70 appropriations. No new buildings beyond that earlier request are represented in its staff recommendation okayed Tuesday by the state board.

SIU had asked the board to authorize a total capital request of $68,993,710 for 1970-71.

A $3,703,000 request for SIU's new Springfield medical center was pencilled out by the board pending receipt of a recommendation from the legislature's Health Education Commission.

Of the total approved, $20,986,700 would be in the form of buildings to be constructed by the Illinois Building Authority, and the remainder from general revenue appropriations plus SIU revenue added by a matching fund program for parking lot improvements.

Chief items approved by the board for presentation to the legislature:

Carbondale Campus - A Learning Resources and Library complex ($5,580,000); a Fine Arts complex ($4,521,400); renovation of Allyn Building; and air conditioning of Pulliam Hall. Also included is money for paving of McLafferty Road on the west edge of the campus, and matchings funds for cooperative paving projects at the Reservoir road and Pleasant Hill road south of campus.

Edwardsville Campus - A Fine Arts classroom and office building ($7,058,700); outdoor physical education facilities; utilities and site development; and bus shelters.

Vocational-Technical Institute (Carbondale) - Learning Resources Center and Library ($2,078,600); Health Education complex ($1,748,000); utilities extensions; and moveable equipment for the two buildings.

Cut from the Carbondale request were a classroom-faculty office building group, a services facilities building group and an air-conditioning plant.

A science laboratory building, physical education building, and additions to the Heating, Refrigeration Plant were stricken from the Edwardsville budget.

The major deletion at VTI was a student center.

McCoy's book regarded as 'a landmark'

By Dennis Kline

Several awards have stimulated sales of Ralph E. McCoy's "Freedom of the Press: An Annotated Bibliography," says Vernon A. Sternberg, director of the University Press. Sternberg reports that the 566 page, $25 volume is "doing very well." University Press published the book in November 1968. McCoy, director of the libraries at both the Carbondale and Edwardsville campuses of SIU, is presently on sabbatical in Ireland.

The bibliography was awarded the Joseph L. Andrews Bibliographic Award for 1968-69 by the American Association of Law Library at Houston for "a significant contribution to legal bibliographic literature."

Choice Magazine, a publication for librarians, selected the volume as one of 718 "outstanding academic books of 1968."

McCoy was also presented with the Scarecrow Press Award for Library Literature for the year 1969 for "Freedom of the Press." The presentation was made at the meeting of the American Library Association at Atlantic City in June.

Highly enthusiastic about the book is Hensley C. Woodbridge, Latin American bibliographer and associate professor on the staff of Morris Library. Woodbridge maintains "this bibliography should long remain the standard reference bibliographical work in its field."

Woodbridge also praised the work in the American Book Collector of November 1968. In his review he added, "McCoy has searched far and wide for his entries, and it is doubtful if he has missed much of value."

Noting that it took McCoy 10 years to write the book, Everett T. Moore, professor at the University of California at Los Angeles, said in the April 1969 issue of Library Quarterly that "Freedom of the Press: An Annotated Bibliography" has the "widest possible range of views" and that it is "admirably detailed and explicit."

Perhaps the most telling comment on the book is part of the announcement made by the American Library Association when McCoy was presented the Scarecrow Press Award: "Dr. McCoy has produced a notable and indispensable reference book, which is and will continue to be a landmark in library literature."

Funds granted for campsites

SPRINGFIELD—The Illinois Department of Conservation will receive $314,470 for the construction of 90 additional campsites at Giant City State Park and 60 at Lake Murphysboro. The announcement was made by Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie, Sen. John W. Gilbert, R-Carbondale, Rep. Gale Williams, R-Murphysboro and Rep. C. L. McCormick, R-Vienna.

The work is part of the department's $2.4 million program to provide 1,950 new and completely improved campsites, access roads, sanitary facilities and electric installations in 18 state parks.

"These projects," Gilbert said, "represent the commitment of this state administration to a future in which our children and grandchildren can enjoy the priceless heritage which is ours in trust."

William L. Rutherford, director of the Department of Conservation, said he expected the program to be completed by the beginning of the 1970 camping season.

Wire sculpture to be shown

An exhibition of wire sculptures and animals. The exhibit will show 31 pieces, including Oubre's first work of this kind, in order to illustrate the development of his technique and imagery.

The artist has studied at the University of Iowa and has taught at various places in the South.

The exhibit, to be shown in the University Center ballroom lounge, is tentatively scheduled to open Oct. 25, during the SIU Homecoming weekend. Oubre will visit the campus during the showing and a reception will be held in his honor.

Orchestra membership opens

The SIU University Orchestra is opening its membership to persons outside of the Department of Music and the University, according to James Stroud, conductor.

The orchestra, preparing for an Oct. 24 concert, rehearses each Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 3-4:30 p.m. in Room 114 of Alghed Hall. Area musicians are welcome, Stroud said.

This fall from the University of Colorado, hopes to build the orchestra from its present size of 60 to about 70 musicians.

Presently the orchestra is working on three compositions for the Homecoming Concert Oct. 24. That program will include Brahms' "Variations on a Theme of Haydn," Mozart's Symphony No. 41 (Jupiter), and Symphony No. 5 by Shostakovich.

Our Man Hoppe

Breakfast in L.A.—dinner in New York

By Arthur Hoppe

New York, Sept. 26, 1974—The new supersonic transport (SST) completed its first transcontinental flight today in keeping with President Nixon's pledge to "maintain America's leadership in commercial aviation."

A similar attempt last week was thwarted when a sister ship was hijacked 23 minutes out of Los Angeles, overshot the runway in Havana and landed in Rio de Janeiro.

Reaction to today's historic flight was mixed. Most passengers however, were pleased. A report from Aviation Editor Grogan Grommet, who was aboard the maiden trip, follows.

Imagine! Los Angeles to New York in less than two hours! At only slightly more than double the regular fare!

It was with butterflies in my stomach that I left my hotel in downtown Los Angeles at 6:15 a.m.

allowing the usual two hours to get to the Airport 45 minutes ahead of departure time, as required. But I was lucky. It was only a 41-minute brisk hike to the gate so I had a leisurely four minutes in which to board the aircraft.

I had just taken my seat when a pretty stewardess announced: "no-smoking-fasten-your-seat-belts-I-will-now-demonstrate-the-oxygen-mask-there!" She might have said more, but they started the engines. She did give us a quick smile, though, as she clapped her hands over her ears.

We whisked up into the blue leaving behind a fine trail of black smoke from the half ton of fuel our giant engines consumed every minute. It blended nicely with the thickening smog.

Once in flight, our stewardess reappeared. "Instant coffee, instant tea or a quick beer," she asked as she passed by on the dead run.

She handed me a shot glass of Scotch. "Down the hatch!" she panted. "Lunch is being served."

She then placed on my lap a lunch tray. The entree was a half-minute steak, bite-size. This was fortunate because as I lifted it to my mouth, she removed the tray and dashed off. "Got to get ready for the movie," she explained.

"This is your captain speaking," said the loudspeaker. "We are now passing over the Sierra Nevada, the Rockies and the Mississippi River. On your left is Omaha. Well, now it's Chicago. No that's Detroit... Oh, never mind."

This certainly is a wonderful way to see America. Very quick.

We then had time to lean back, relax and enjoy the movie—a Mack Sennett one-reeler—before landing in New York. Nor did we have to wait in the landing pattern over Kennedy International Airport—the main reason being the SST cannot carry enough fuel to wait for anything.

But it was good to step out of the aircraft and wave to all the stunned spectators staring at us through the shattered windows of the airport. I'm sure that once the public adjusts to sonic booms, their eyes won't get the unsettling glazed look.

So now, after a brief hour's wait for my baggage and a cab, I'll be off on the two-hour trip to downtown Manhattan. This should put me in my hotel room by 3 p.m.

I'll have a good two hours to lie on my bed with a cold compress on my forehead and pound my ear with the heel of my hand so that I may once again hear the familiar noises of New York.

Imagine! Coast to coast in less than two hours! By leaving L.A. before breakfast, you can be rested and ready for dinner in New York. Another example of America's leadership in commercial aviation!

Unasked question

To the Daily Egyptian:

The woods were full and rich in the early morning dew of mid-autumn. The sun skipping randomly through the tree tops, stopped for a moment to awaken the disbeliever.

It was here in the shadows of my mind, that I realized I was going nowhere from no place. I am not natural because I was born human. I am not human because my soul belongs to nature. I am not myself because I am a part of all that I've met.

The answer to the question, "Who am I?" is answerable only if it's never asked. Why am I dead?

Ron Parker

Students disagree with Copley

To the Daily Egyptian:

On Oct. 2 the Daily Egyptian carried a story with the headline "Debate Raging over Swahili or English," dateline Nairobi, Kenya. This story, supplied by Copley News Service, contained erroneous and misleading statements in its anti-Swahili/pro-English arguments. Because Swahili is now being taught at SER, we feel that it is important to set the record straight and to accord to Swahili the importance and respect it deserves.

The anti-Swahili argument states that Swahili is imprecise and that its limited vocabulary is unsuited for the expression of modern technical terms. As linguists have known for years, no one language is any more precise or imprecise than any other language. Moreover, every language has exactly the same means available to it for creating new lexical items as they are needed. It may borrow the word from another language, it may translate the concept into native compound words or phrases or it may use an already existing native word and extend its meaning. Swahili and English are identical in having and using this potential for new vocabulary.

The statement that there is no substantial quantity of literature will come as a surprise to those who are aware of the rich literary tradition of Swahili. In comparison with the literature of other East African cultures, Swahili literature is exceptionally rich.

The traditional art of verbal expression in poetry has produced a number of valuable works. Although the number of genuine literary productions in prose is still limited, Swahili literature holds great promise of further development and flourishing.

The most objectionable error in the article was the statement, "And, since Swahili is based on Arabic, isn't it just as alien as English?" Swahili is not based on Arabic. Swahili is a Bantu language, not a Semitic language; it has a basic structure (grammar; syntax, morphology, phonology) related to that of the other Bantu languages of East and Central Africa.

The only thing Arabic about Swahili is the large number of words borrowed from Arabic. English has a large number of words borrowed from French, yet no one maintains that English is based on French.

Moreover, because the basic grammatical structure of Swahili is Bantu, it is not as alien as English. East Africans who speak Bantu tribal vernaculars will find it much easier to learn Swahili, a related language, than to learn English.

Certainly, Uganda, Kenya, Tanzania and other East African countries have language problems unlike those anywhere else in the world. In fact, no African country is strictly monolingual. Tribal vernaculars, English and Swahili compete on many cultural levels. Each country has a different linguistic situation and different language policies.

However, generally speaking, tribal vernaculars are used for communication within the family and with fellow tribesmen. In spite of all the efforts of mass education, the imposition of a world language such as English has been limited. The knowledge of English of the vast majority of the people is still insufficient even for the simple communication of daily living, let alone for jobs and activities demanding full communication in English.

English is used by the highly educated, urban East African to enhance his social and economic status. This leaves Swahili in the middle. For intertribal communication, particularly in urban centers where contact with non-tribesmen is essential, for public mass media (newspapers and radio broadcasts), and for intermediate levels of education, Swahili is the only practical language. The prospects for the general spread of Swahili appear bright.

'Lost' group club

Graduate wives earn Ph. T. degrees

The "lost" group on campus, the wives of graduate students, do have one club uniquely their own. Their place is in the SIU Graduate Wives Club.

Mrs. Sheri Rosso, vice-president, said the club was organized about five years ago by the SIU Faculty Wives Club to give those women who can't belong to student groups, and who don't have many places to go, a chance to meet other women who have something in common with them.

The next meeting of SIU Graduate Wives Club will be at 8 p.m. Monday in the lounge of the Home Economics Building.

Within the club are interest groups that include activities such as bridge, bowling, exercise and a creative home-making group which Mrs. Rosso said is the most popular of the activities. This group specializes in home-making tips and spends much time making Christmas decorations.

Many of the members tutor high school and grade school students on their own. Mrs. Rosso said this helps them keep in touch with students and familiar with their field since many of them have degrees.

The club's continuing project is helping in a boys' orphan home in Carbondale. Each Sunday a family goes to the home and spends the day with the boys. Mrs. Rosso said the boys like this arrangement and it gives the families a sense of accomplishment.

Right now the club is involved in finding and sharing money-saving ideas. Each member finds an idea, such as where free inoculations for children are given, and brings the information to the club with her.

At the end of the year, Ph. T. (Putting Hubby Through) degrees are given to the wives whose husbands have completed their studies.

'Forsyte Saga,' 'Sesame Street' to be aired on WSIU-TV this fall

WSIU-TV has several new programs scheduled for the fall season. Dave Rochelle, operations manager, said he is highly enthusiastic about the new offerings.

Rochelle says the two most important programs to be shown this season will be "The Forsyte Saga" and "Sesame Street." These programs represent much research and negotiation in their development and acquisition by National Education Television (NET).

NET purchased rights for the first American telecasts of "The Forsyte Saga," BBC-TV's adaptation of the epic novel by John Galsworthy. This adaptation tells how an affluent British family's social status is affected by the accelerating pace of the 20th century.

"Sesame Street" is probably the most singly important program selection for this season because of the far reaching effects into the lives of pre-school children and their education, Rochelle said. This program is highly innovative and was researched for two years. This makes it one of the longest researched programs ever to be done for a new show; it had a $10 million budget for its research and production.

There will also be a program on the Woodstock Rock Festival held this summer in New York. This program will go into the reasons behind the festival and the motivation of the people who came to see it.

"The Advocates," another fall offering, will be a new program that depicts live court room scenes featuring several of the top lawyers in the U.S. arguing pro and con on controversial matters.

Deadline set to drop class

The deadline for dropping a course without receiving a letter grade is noon, Oct. 20, according to Henry Andrews, assistant to the registrar. The last day to add a course was noon Sept. 24.

To drop a course, other than for the convenience of the University, a student must pay a $2.00 fee. The student needs his advisor's signature approving the change and a copy of his or her class schedule to prove correct section numbers.

Approximately 6,000-7,000 students are expected to make class changes, said Andrews.

effecting society.

"On Being Black" is another new offering for this season. This will be a 10-week dramatic series with plays written by black playwrights depicting what it is like being black. There will be other civil rights exposures through documentaries on various current issues in this movement. Other public affairs programs will include a reworking of "The Battered Child," a look into the growing problem of child abuse.

These programs will be offered along with other shows carried over from commercial television such as "The Defenders," starring E. G. Marshall and Robert Reed.

Trees past normal life span

Woods safe despite rumors

By Glenda Kelly

Students who have developed ulcers or a highly nervous condition due to the daily pitfalls and hazards of college life can eliminate one source of agitation from their harried minds.

Despite fears which may have been aroused by tales of narrow escapes experienced by others, students need not hesitate to walk through Thompson Woods. They need have no fear of being struck by falling limbs or trees. Joe Widdows, superintendent of buildings and grounds at SIU, says that all obviously unsafe trees and limbs in the woods have been removed.

When asked if it is true that some of the black oaks, which predominate in Thompson Woods, are as much as 20 years past their normal life span, Widdows said three fourths of the large oaks are over-age.

"However," he continued, "their great age does not make them a hazard. I can remember one instance last year when a tree fell and narrowly missed a student.

That tree was as green and healthy-looking as could be. Nothing in its appearance would show that it was ready to fall."

Although many of the old trees appear ready to topple, they are quite sturdy, Widdows said. He said his department would do anything possible to save a tree as long as it was still alive.

"We lost fewer than 10 to 12 trees last year in wind storms," he said. "The remaining trees are checked by the foremen who work in that area. If anyone sees something that needs to be corrected, he reports it immediately, and we take care of it. I have the authority to remove any trees that are really dangerous."

Widdows added that contractors are called in periodically to take care of the large-scale pruning and trimming. "Incidentally," Widdows said, "the fallen trees lying in the woods are not the result of wind storms. When we must remove a tree, we cut it down and leave the logs lying there for a purpose.

"The rotting trees and limbs help the growth of new trees. If that area were entirely cleared out, nature's balance would be disturbed, and the surrounding trees would begin to die," he said.

organizations are expected to follow suit.

The presentation, starts at 8 p.m., in the Arena, which can accommodate more than 10,000. Tickets can be ordered and information obtained by contacting the Arena Manager's Office, telephone 453-2321. They also may be purchased at the Central Ticket Office in the University Center, at the Sav-Mart store and at Tempo store at Marion. Prices are $3.50, $2 and $1 for the general public, $3.50, $1, and 50 cents for all students. W.D. Justice, Arena manager, said the concert affords students and others a great opportunity to hear the internationally noted artists at modest prices.

The orchestra, directed by Walter Suskind, and Cliburn will join in presenting a program of the works of Tchaikovsky that will include the Overture from Romeo and Juliet and the Nutcracker Suite by the Symphony, and Concerto No. 1 in B Flat Minor by Cliburn and the orchestra.

Ticket sales are brisk for October 17 concert

Block buying of tickets for the popular-priced concert of famed pianist Van Cliburn and the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra at SIU is expected to gain momentum as the Oct. 17 date nears.

Ticket sales already has been reported as brisk. The most recent large order for tickets, 80, came from Lincoln Junior High School. Earlier the high school at Advance, Mo., ordered 78. Other schools and civic and cultural

Proficiency test given later date

A proficiency test for GSA 201 A and B will be given from 8 a. m.-noon, 1-5 p. m., and 7:30 p. m., Oct. 14 instead of Oct. 7, as reported in Tuesday's Daily Egyptian.

The test will be administered at the Counseling and Testing Center, Washington Square. Students who want to complete the 60-minute test in the afternoon should arrive by 3:30 p. m.

Only students with a "Biology Test Referral Card" from their academic adviser will be permitted to take the test.

MacVicar speaks to health officers

Chancellor Robert W. MacVicar told a conference of health officers and employees of the Department of Public Health Monday about SIU's new medical education program.

The annual two-day conference, sponsored by the Illinois Department of Public Health in conjunction with the Illinois Association of Medical Health Officers, was held Monday and Tuesday in Springfield, where the clinical centers for SIU's medical program are located.

Noon seminar series on awareness of China

The Student Christian Foundation at SIU is sponsoring a series of discussions entitled "An Awareness of Red China." The Rev. Hugh Muldoon, a graduate student of philosophy and coordinator of the discussions, said the purpose of the discussions is not to present any one viewpoint but rather to stimulate people's ideas concerning Chinese-American relations.

Father Muldoon will lead the first of these series of open seminars starting Oct. 14, with the series continuing on a weekly basis until Nov. 18.

"Red China poses one of the most critical threats to international security and peace," said Father Muldoon.

He also said there is little understanding of the people of China and although it would be unrealistic to attempt to find a solution, we can at least become aware of the problems which face America.

Among the guest speakers will be Ping Chia-Kuo, chairman of the Department of History, who will speak on Oct. 21, and Ikua Chou, of the Department of Government, who will speak Nov. 4.

All discussions will be at noon at the Student Christian Foundation, 913 Illinois Ave.

Committee to study student views

An ad hoc student advisory committee, formed to "bring about constructive change in the educational community," was approved by the Illinois Board of Higher Education Wednesday.

The committee was created to discuss how students can best assume an advisory role to the board, an Associated Press release said.

James B. Holderman executive director of the board pointed out that "today's college student is much more vocal than in the past." The board feels that these students have something to say and should be given an opportunity to be heard, he explained.

FCF fosters interaction among faculty

The Faculty Christian Fellowship (FCF) encourages interaction between the faculty and staff of different departments at SIU.

Rev. M. Allen Line, director of the Student Christian Foundation where the FCF meets, said, "The FCF attempts to bring the faculty and staff of different backgrounds to discuss mutual concerns. We also provide a time for these faculty to talk which is otherwise hard to find because of differing backgrounds."

The Rev. Mr. Line also said the FCF has no internal organization or requirements for membership. "Because we have no officers or governors, we are free to move and make changes if we wish," he said. "Our only count of members is our mailing list; which has over 100 names."

He added that all faculty members are welcome to the FCF luncheons which take place on alternate Mondays.

The next luncheon meeting of the FCF will be Oct. 20 at the Student Christian Foundation, 913 S. Illinois Ave.

Clark will discuss child education

The Association of Childhood Education will meet at 7:30 p.m. today in the Faculty Lounge of the Wham Education Building.

The theme of the meeting will be "Introduction to the Association of Childhood Education," and the speaker will be Elmer J. Clark, dean of the College of Education, said Luther Bradfield, associate professor of Education.

The meeting is in conjunction with a week-long membership drive to introduce students to the association. Faculty members and students are invited to attend whether or not they are members.

"It would be useful to receive a continuing and systematic input from the students," Holderman added. Recommendations for a

Question relayer established

Want to telephone an instructor at 2 a.m.—or some other odd time offer office hours? Just dial his electronic secretary.

In January of 1969 a telephone tape system capable of relaying students' questions to any instructor on campus was set up in the Self-Instruction Center of Morris Library.

The student simply dials 453-5793. A recorded message answers his call and prepares to take his question. The student waits for the recorded message to end, hears a dial tone, and states the name of the instructor to be reached and the question.

The next morning the questions are typed up and sent by campus mail to the desk of the appropriate instructor. Cindy Myers, a graduate assistant employed in the Self-Instruction Center, said that some messages are related to the instructor by telephone if urgency warrants it.

According to a report from Harry Denzel, co-ordinator of the Self-Instruction Center, the electronic secretary was used only 68 times during the spring quarter of 1969.

Miss Myers said, however, that calls are running much heavier this quarter. Miss Myers also said that at its inception the electronic secretary was the only system of its kind in operation on a college campus in the United States.

Biographer to speak Tuesday

Lady Rosalie Mander, Cornish biographer, will speak on the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Morris Library.

Lady Mander's talk will center on Dante Gabriel Rossetti, and will be illustrated with slides, according to Kenneth Hopkins, visiting professor of English.

Lady Mander's book, "Portrait of Rossetti," is scheduled for release in softback by the Southern Illinois University Press in 1970.

Other biographies by Lady Mander include "Claire Clairmont," "Trelawny," "William Godwin and his World," and her most celebrated, "Mary Shelley."

Unitarians plan group discussions

Small group discussions on "What Unitarianism Means to Me" will highlight the Unitarian Fellowship meeting 10:30 a.m. Sunday at the meeting house at University at Elm.

Leading the group discussions will be Richard Thomas and Wilbur MacDaniel, SIU professors; Edward L. Adams, area supervisor for the Unemployment Division and Fellowship president; Jack Trammel, a graduate student; and Mrs. J.T. Evanson.

The public is invited to attend.

Instructor to attend clinic

Violet Moore, instructor in Home Economics Education at SIU, will attend the National Association for Student Teaching Clinic at Ohio State University November 19-21. Sponsored by the National Association, the Ohio association and the OSU College of Education, the clinic will deal with simulations as a teaching technique. Participants will meet in small groups with consultants to consider individual institutional needs.

Ford to address club at SIU

The director of "Project Helping Hand," Dr. Fraughton Ford, will address the Thursday evening meeting of the Special Education Club, at 7:30 p.m. today in Muckleroy Auditorium.

"Project Helping Hand" is used to develop, test and evaluate methods of providing more effective educational services to handicapped children.

Piano recital

A lecture-recital, "The Piano Music of Francis Poulenc" will be presented by W. Kent Werner, associate professor of music at SIU, 8 p.m. tonight in Home Economics 140B.

The program is sponsored by the Department of Music.

The program, named one of the top ten projects of the year, also covers speech and hearing disorders, behavior and emotional problems and mental retardation.

Anyone having further questions should contact the Department of Special Education, 453-2311 or 549-4233.

Religious Studies gets $10,000 from Foundation

A $10,000 grant from the Danforth Foundation of St. Louis has started SIU's young Religious Studies program on its third year of life. Program Director John P. Hayward hopes the fledgling will develop to a major course of study alongside its established brethren in the SIU College of Liberal Arts and Science.

The grant is the second from the Danforth Foundation, which has promised SIU support totaling $30,000 over three years as part of its mission to help start religious studies in universities.

Until 1967, courses in religion at SIU were offered through various off-campus, denominational foundations. Then they were consolidated as a study minor under the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Hayward, who arrived as full-time director last year, describes himself as one of a growing number of theological school seminarians who are moving into university settings.

"There is a certain sense of isolation in the churches, a feeling of being out of the mainstream. Many theologians want to be where the action is, and that's on the campuses."

Hayward says the action takes the form of a "growing hunger" among university students for expressions and meanings beyond "statistical analyses and verbal forms."

"Ours isn't a pre-seminary program, in fact, I and my colleagues welcome the opportunity to deal with disinterested students whose view of religion isn't colored by the fact that they'll have to make a living at it.

"We're interested in students who realize that religious behavior is a form of human behavior, and who want to take a look at it."

The program now includes 44 hours of General Studies and upper-level courses through the departments of English, sociology, psychology, philosophy, and history. Hayward himself teaches an introductory philosophy course to undergraduates, as well as an upperclass course in contemporary western religious thought. Next winter he'll start a "gateway" course in types of western and non-western religion.

Outside the classroom, Hayward plans to build up a brisk lecture and seminar series, bringing prominent religious thinkers to the Carbondale Campus for public appearances.

This year's series will focus on the interaction of religion with other aspects of modern culture, and will feature Post John Frederick Nims in a dialogue and reading session with SIU English Professor James Benziger (Feb. 20); Mircea Eliade, chairman of the Department of the History of Religions at the University of Chicago (Nov. 20); and famed Harvard Theologian James Luther Adams, who will discuss the ethical import of civil disobedience (spring term).

Hayward wants to add a faculty member who will deal with social issues like black power, the drug culture and violence-non-violence, from a religious perspective.

Associate professor publishes book

"It's a hobby with me," said SIU's Latin American bibliographer and associate professor, Hensley C. Woodbridge, of his new book.

"Some people play golf, some swim, I just write bibliographies," he said.

Woodbridge is the compiler of "Jesse Stuart and Jane Stuart: A Bibliography" published by the Murray State University Press in July. He says his bibliographical record of Stuart "tries to list everything that one of America's most prominent writers has ever written." Stuart, born in 1907, is an American novelist from Western Kentucky.

The book contains three parts: 1) a classified bibliography by Stuart; 2) a classified bibliography about Stuart; 3) a bibliography by and about Stuart.

Woodbridge says the book is designed for scholars and students interested in American and Southern literature.

In 1958 Woodbridge first became interested in Stuart. After two years of accumulating and ordering Stuart's manuscripts, "Jesse Stuart: A Bibliography" was published in 1960. His new book is a revision of this earlier book and also contains a small bibliography on Stuart's daughter, Jane Stuart.

Woodbridge also co-authored two books entitled "Jack London, Bibliography," and "Striped Bass,"

Bill designates state holiday to honor King

SPRINGFIELD—Martin Luther King's birthday anniversary, Jan. 15, will be observed as a commemorative holiday in Illinois.

In approving House Bill 628 designating the observance, Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie said:

"I have approved House Bill 628 which amends the School Code by causing the fifteenth day of January of each year to be known as a commemorative holiday for the purpose of devoting a portion of the regular school day to study and honor Dr. Martin Luther King Jr."

The governor vetoed House Bill 626 which would have made January 15 a holiday. Ogilvie said that this bill was not supported by a companion bill amending the Negotiable Instrument Act to include January 15 as a "legal holiday." He said this lack of supporting companion legislation makes the legal effect of House Bill 626 open to serious question.

"To approve House Bill 626 would not only place an ambiguous law on the statutes of Illinois but would cloud the efficacy of House Bill 628," Ogilvie said.

Plochman co-authors book

George Kimball Plochmann, SIU professor of philosophy, and Jack B. Lawson, professor of English and philosophy at Mankato State College, Minn., are the co-authors of a recently published textbook for the humanities.

Part one of the book, entitled "Humanities in the Western World: An Initiatory Text," is being distributed this month by Stipes Publishing Co. of Champaign. Parts two and three will follow later.

The paperback volumes are combination workbook-textbooks and deal with the elements of literature, theatre, music, visual arts and philosophy. They were designed primarily for use in a humanities course in the General Studies program at SIU.

Lawson is the son of the late dean of the College of Education at SIU, Douglas E. Lawson, and earned his M.A. degree in philosophy and English at SIU.

SIU meeting funds deadline

Applications for funds for special meetings and speakers sought by SIU departments must be with R.F. Hibbs by Oct. 20. Hibbs is chairman of the SIU Lectures and Entertainment Committee which assigns these funds. His office is 817 1/2 South Marion Street.

Hibbs said the committee will hold its fall meeting in late October to consider applications. Most funds were assigned in May, but a limited sum remains for this activity, he said.

Money, he said, will be allocated on the basis of specific data provided that includes: specific name of program, sponsoring organization, and person in charge of event; date and place of program; exact amount sought and purpose for which funds will be disbursed; brief statement of program's purpose; the audience it will interest, and qualifications of persons involved in the presentation.

Center remodeling underway

Ceiling tiles have been removed from the bowling alley and hallway of the SIU University Center for the installation of new fire sprinklers and air conditioning systems. This, however, is only a small part of the total work being done to modernize the Center.

The Center was originally built to serve 12,000 students. The population of SIU is now almost double that figure.

Upon completion, the Center will be enlarged in many areas. The bookstore will be moved across the hall to the present Olympic Room. This will enlarge the bookstore to four times its present size, according to Willard G. Hart, campus architect.

The new wing under construction at the south end of the building will house two dining rooms on its main floor and a snack bar that will be double the size of the present one.

The information desk area will be converted into an automatic post office. "To the best of my knowledge it will be the first automatic post office south of Chicago," Hart said.

On the lower level of the new south wing will be a 24-hour coffee and sandwich shop. The third floor of the wing will have a study lounge.

Completion of the Center is not scheduled until 1971. The total cost has been estimated at $8.5 million.

Pool open on weekend

The University School Pool, located in room 11, Pulliam Hall, is open for recreational swimming on Friday.

The 35x75 ft. pool will be open each weekend at the following hours: Friday, 7 to 10:45 p.m.; Sunday, 1 to 5 p.m. and 7 to 10:30 p.m.

Faculty and students must furnish swimming suits and towels. Identification cards and current fee statements must be presented to the life guard to be admitted.

Rehling speech will highlight UN Week observance here

United Nations Week will be highlighted by a public address by Clinton A. Rehling, a specialist in the UN Development Program, at 8 p.m. Oct. 21 in the University Center Ballrooms.

Rehling, an assistant to the administrator of the UN Development Program and chief of Information Service, will speak on "A World to be Built."

Prior to his speech, he will be the honored guest at a dinner for 120 representatives from cooperating local "town and gown" organizations. Reservations will be on a first-come, first-serve basis and are available from George Adams, 904 Taylor Dr.

Rehling, who graduated with a BA in political science from Grinnell College, Grinnell, Iowa, began his career with the United Nations as information officer in Geneva, 1947.

Since 1959, he has been posted in New York, although his work has taken him to over 50 countries in the world.

The public is invited to attend the free lecture.

Motorist sees b-b-bear near Crab Orchard!

The black bear of Crab Orchard is alive and well. It was seen on Oct. 1, not far off Rt. 148 just south of the refuge proper, according to Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge headquarters.

A motorist said he was driving down Rt. 148 when he saw this bear, about a 300-pounder, shuffling down a clay bank. When the bear spotted him, he said, it took off and disappeared in dense timber.

The sighting comes as no surprise to refuge people, who have come across bear signs ever since May of 1966. That was when a black bear was tracked, treed and shot near Waltonville after some children on a school bus had reported seeing one near Little Grassy Lake.

After the hunt, one of the kids said the bear that had been killed—it weighed 305 pounds—could not possibly have been the one they saw. "Ours was a lot smaller than that," he said.

It appears the kid was correct, unless you doubt that a "small" bear could go to 300 pounds in three years.

Less public spending key to inflation puzzle

An SIU economist declares that reduction of federal, state and local spending during the 1969-70 fiscal year to the 1967-68 level would eliminate inflationary and balance of payment problems.

Writing in the Sept. 11 issue of "The Commercial and Financial Chronicle," G. C. Wiegand, professor of economics, said he believes this reduced public spending would not lead to a major recession.

His article, "Solving the Crime of Price Inflation," discusses what Wiegand calls "30 years of chronic inflation in most parts of the world, culminating in the vast expansion of credit spending since 1960."

Wiegand wrote that total private and public indebtedness that in 1960 amounted to $900 billion rose at the end of 1968 to one and a half trillion dollars with much of the increase coming since 1964. Federal spending has more than doubled since 1960, he said, and state and local spending has risen from $46 billion in 1960 to about $110 billion.

Heavy class load for the 'student' policeman

Police officers as well as college students are going to school at SIU.

Two types of police courses are taught. One, the basic course for new men, is offered by the Division of Technical and Adult Education and is attended by all beginning campus patrolmen and by city and county law-enforcement officers from other areas. This month it was extended from four to six weeks of instruction.

The other is a 40-hour refresher and specialty course for campus force members, to which other officers from Southern Illinois are invited.

This course is coordinated by Gary Wilson, a security officer who has a degree in psychology.

"We try to have at least 40 hours training a year for each regular in the SIU organization," Wilson said. "Besides refresher sessions, we, on occasion, have specialty training classes which we expect will provide a man on each shift with a specialized knowledge in a field such as arson or narcotics investigation."

Eventually, he said, the Security Office hopes to have all its officers qualified as specialists in some area.

"As these men develop," Wilson said, "they will become instructors for us, and for programs, sponsored by other groups."

The refresher courses began last March when Wilson, who had been on the force four years as a permanent employee, was given the responsibility of setting up the program and coordinating the instruction.

The latest 40-hour course was given in September. It featured instructors from the FBI who lectured on arrest techniques, the laws of arrest, search and seizure, and investigation techniques; the Illinois Bureau of Investigation and Identification, who talked about crime scene search and evidence handling; and the Illinois State Police, who had charge of sessions on traffic laws, accident investigation, firearms training, technique of patrol, and observation. An attorney explained Illinois criminal law.

To accommodate officers whose attendance was limited because of shift duties, the course was repeated the following week. Participating during the two periods were 20 from the University, a dozen from other departments.

"One of the aims," Wilson said, "is to increase the education of police officers so they will know exactly why they are doing something, and to give them a knowledge of the other fellow's attitudes and concerns. Policemen are so vulnerable to public criticism, we must do this."

Wilson, a native of Belmont, N.C., was a student Saluki patrolman as an undergraduate.

Large turnout expected for Recognition Day

A thousand blue-ribbon high school seniors and their parents are expected to be entertained and informed on SIU Oct. 11 at the first of two Student Recognition Days scheduled this fall.

The events are held for the most gifted of those Illinois high schoolers who have submitted their American College Test results to SIU as prospective new students next year.

Invitations are sent to students scoring 26 or above on the ACT (the entrance examination used by SIU), out of a possible perfect 35.

The day will include parents and students meetings with various SIU faculty and administrative groups, a student-faculty luncheon, and campus tours. Main sessions will be at the University Center.

Luncheon speaker at the Center Ballroom will be John King, chairman of the Department of Educational Administration and Foundations.

A second Student Recognition Day is scheduled for Nov. 4 at the O'Hare Inn in Chicago. It will be primarily for scholars in Chicago and Cook County.

Instructor at conferences

Research related to urban and regional planning in Germany and Hungary was the topic of a three-week colloquium attended by Andreas Wesserie, an instructor in the SIU Department of Government.

Under a grant from the University of Salzburg, Austria, Wesserie participated in a colloquium on Christian Thought and 20th Century Society and acted as moderator for a seminar entitled "The Succession of Christ in a Technocratic Age."

New chairman an author

Oliva writes textbook used at SIU

Peter Oliva, chairman of the new Department of Secondary Education at SIU, is author of three textbooks including one which is currently used at SIU.

His book, "The Secondary School Today," published in 1967, was adopted here in 1968 as the basic text for Secondary Education 310. He also wrote "The Teaching of Foreign Languages," published this year, and co-authored "Teaching in a Modern Secondary School," which was published in 1965. He has also written a number of professional articles. A native of Liberty, N.Y., Oliva is an experienced public school and college educator who enjoys travelling. He has coordinated and directed education programs in Europe, South America, and the near East. He directed one in Paraguay for the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education and the U.S. Department of State in 1965-67.

Oliva came here from Indiana State University, Terre Haute, where he was professor of education and coordinator of secondary education for two years. He has a bachelor's degree from Cornell University (1944), a master's degree in teaching from Harvard (1947), and an Ed. D. degree from Teacher's College, Columbia University (1952).

He first taught in high schools in the East: French and social studies at Williamsport, Md., in 1947-48, followed by teaching French and Latin at Clarence, N.Y., and serving as guidance director in his home town of Liberty in 1949-51.

From 1952-55 he was assistant professor of education at the University of Mississippi, and in 1955-57 he was assistant director of a bi-national center in Teheran, Iran, under a grant from the U.S. Information Agency. For the next ten years he was professor of education at the University of Florida, Gainesville. He also has served as visiting professor at a number of American universities.

Canadian honkers begin exodus to winter home in Southern Illinois

The Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge witnessed its equivalent of the Capistrano story Sept. 21 when, exactly on time, the first flight of pooped-out Canada Geese feathered down for a long winter's feed.

Refuge authorities said there were 85 geese in the vanguard, and by Oct. 1, they had been joined by nearly 5,000 more. Within a couple of months, the refuge will be rooming and boarding 70,000 of the Canadian birds, approximately a third of the total expected to winter in Southern Illinois (the rest will be at Horseshoe Lake and Union County refuges).

The geese may not be exactly smacking their bills over the boarding prospects this year. Ordinarily, the whole house will put away 31,200 bushels of refuge corn before December. Then they start dining out on surrounding farmland.

This year they will begin dining out early because summer rains wiped out bottomland cornfields. Of course, the refuge landlords also provide some wheat, rice, milo and assorted browse for supplemental snacking.

How long does it take a honker to fly from Hudson Bay, Ontario, to Crab Orchard Lake, U.S.A.?

Well, most of them dawdle around en route, like so many tourists, so they don't really burn up the air lanes. But prod him with a sudden foul weather front up there and a Canada Goose can flat turn it on. Some, going non-stop at full throttle, will do it in less than 48 hours.

Museum sponsors bus to annual craft festival

An all-day tour will be conducted Oct. 18, by the SIU Museum to the Clayville Early Illinois Folklife Festival.

Dale Whiteside, Museum curator of education, said a bus will leave the University Center at 7:30 a.m. for Clayville, near Springfield, returning to the campus about 9 p.m.

Tickets for the tour, available at the University Center ticket office, are $2, and admission to the Festival is fifty cents. Deadline for reservations is Friday.

This is the fourth annual craft festival sponsored by the Clayville Folk Arts Guild, Whiteside said.

Included in the exhibits and demonstrations at the festival are such crafts of the past as carding, spinning, rug making, candy making, china painting, button making, pewtering, hide tanning, leather and harness work, and muzzle-loading rifles. Hand-crafted items and antiques will be offered for sale, he added. Luncheon will be available on the grounds.

House's heart

$500,000 estimate

spring, allegedly will come from "service fees paid on University contracts," Pete Brown of the University News Service said. Brown said when SIU contracts with the federal government or private business to do research, it is paid certain service fees. It will be these fees and not tax money which will finance the venture, Brown said.

MacVicar explained this point, saying, "the sources of revenue used for the house are actually multiple sources, such as overhead on grants and contracts. There will be no funds taken from tax money or student fees, however."

The chancellor explained that overhead referred to pay by external contractors or grantors for administrative and supporting expenses for the contract or grant.

Brown also said, "There will be a disproportionate amount of space devoted to guest facilities." In reference to furnishing the new house, Brown said, many of the items now used in the old house will be transferred. He said the $400,000-$450,000 estimate for the cost of the house was an official estimate released by the Physical Plant in the spring.

MacVicar explained that the estimate does not hold true now, due to increases in the cost of construction. "Right now, we estimate that the cost will be in excess of $500,000, but we won't know how much it will actually cost until the project is done."

Jack Moore, project engineer for the Physical Plant, however said he knew nothing about any phase of the President's Home, which he termed the University House, including the estimate. In an attempt to contact other engineers of the Physical Plant, the Daily Egyptian met with opposition to comment.

The first published estimate of the house was around $250,000, but according to Charles C. Feirich of the President's Office, "I don't know where the estimate came from. As far as I know, the estimate has always been about double that amount."

MacVicar was also puzzled by the $250,000 estimate. "The architect's estimate ran about $450,000-$500,000, and the other estimate was an inaccuracy," he said.

There has been much opposition to the building of the structure, with the focus of the dissatisfaction coming from the use of the funds to build a new house instead of a long-proposed overpass to allow students on the east side of the Illinois Central Railroad tracks to cross the tracks and U.S. 51 without danger. The plans for the overpass have been drawn up, but money has not been allocated.

According to Dwight Campbell, student body president, "The construction of Morris' mansion readily shows everyone that students and poor people of the state rank last in priority. It is inconceivable that so much of the taxpayer's money could be allotted to such needless construction at this university when students risk their lives for lack of an overpass which has been needed for years and when there are such critical problems of poverty in Northeast Carbondale and the rest of Southern Illinois."

"The construction of this palace shows everyone exactly what the chief concerns of those who control this university really are."

A proposal by the Board to build new homes for Chancellor's MacVicar and Randlemen "has been discussed," said MacVicar, "but is not now under active consideration."

Senate criticism

"We demand . . . that all board meetings be held in the strictest compliance with the intent and letter of the law . . ." the resolution said.

C. Robert Bauman, student government representative to the City Council, reported on the Council's meeting.

Bauman claimed that Jack Hazel, chief of police, controlled the door to the meeting and "turned away 30-40 students."

Bauman told the Senate he is demanding an apology from Hazel and from C. William Norman, City Manager.

Keene decries attacks

Carbondale Mayor David Keene said Wednesday night he believed a move was afoot to put him out of office.

In remarks made during a television news interview, the mayor said he felt recent attacks, especially those made at Tuesday night's City Council meeting, were politically motivated.

"I first learned of this in a newspaper article about a petition being circulated seeking my resignation," Keene said.

The petition was organized by Bill Colp of 1310 W. Carter, a long-time resident of Carbondale and frequent critic of the city administration.

Colp did not present his petition at Tuesday's meeting, but did address the council long enough to obtain the floor for Dr. Fred Wood, chairman of the Citizens Committee for Fair Play, a group formed to support Carbondale police.

Later in the meeting Keene questioned the Rev. Oren Woodward, spokesman for the Fair Play committee. At one point Keene said, "You people came in here to do a job on me," then asked the Rev. Woodward if he had spoken about someone who would state publicly that a man in the police department was insane.

The Rev. Woodward hesitated then turned to look at Dr. Wood before answering. He did not affirm or deny the question but explained how he had carried the suggestion to Hazel to step down.

Earlier in the meeting City Councilman William Eaton presented a proposal which called for the formation of a citizens group to investigate the police department.

He also read a statement in which he said he felt Mayor Keene was working full time at a job the city manager should be doing. "Let the city manager run the city," he said.

He recommended that less time be spent on budget details and more time spent with city employees.

Policeman reinstated

The second of two Carbondale police officers charged with brutality has been cleared by the police and fire merit board and reinstated to the force.

Officer L.W. Patterson was informed by the board Wednesday of its decision. Last Friday, Officer Jerry Reno was similarly cleared on charges brought by three teenagers following an incident Sept. 6 at the Carbondale Teen Center.

Police were called to the Center after a fight broke out between white and black youths. Six teenagers were arrested by police.

Both men were suspended from the force for up to 30 days pending results of a hearing which was held Sept. 29.

Police Chief Jack Hazel said Wednesday that Officer Paterson was reinstated and will commence work immediately.

In its decision, the board said, "It was and is the unanimous decision of the board that there was no excessive force used by you and that you did not violate the law nor the rules and regulations of the police department."

"Accordingly, you have been fully exonerated in regard to those charges, your suspension is lifted, your prior suspension is revoked, and you are hereby fully reinstated, to be paid your full salary for the time of the suspension."

Southern's prospects for defeating the powerful University of Kansas cross-country team, will be riding on efforts of coach Lew Hartzog's top three runners (pictured above). Robinson is undefeated this year and Moore's experience could prove to be valuable over the six mile course. Nalder has run strong recently and it is anticipated that he will be a key finisher.

SIU Harriers go to Kansas

By Jim Sumner
Staff Writer

The SIU cross country team will travel to Lawrence, Kan. this weekend with hopes of turning the tables on a highly ranked and favored University of Kansas team.

"It would be a big upset if we beat them," said Coach Lew Hartzog. "I expect Oscar Moore and Alan Robinson to do well, plus Ken Nalder has been running extremely well the last couple weeks," Hartzog added.

Robinson and Moore tied for first in SIU's first meet against the University of Illinois. Robinson also placed first against Kansas State, however Moore dropped back to third place in the record setting meet.

Wichita State was recently invited to the Kansas meet which should add some additional competition for the two teams.

A major deterrent to SIU's hopes of having one of the nation's best cross country teams this year is the recent and probably permanent loss of Gerry Hinton. He was SIU's best long distance man last year.

Hinton suffered an injury to his Achilles tendon last spring and was unable to participate in the first of this year's two previous meets. Hinton finished in a respectable seventh place against a powerful Kansas State harrier squad in SIU's last meet, while his ankle gave him considerable pain.

Hartzog said that Hinton's ankle has gotten consistently worse since the last meet and even if it got immediately better, he probably still would not be able to get in shape in time for another meet this year.

The Kansas team is to be considered one of the nation's best, according to Hartzog. Hartzog said that many outstanding runners have been booted off the starting team to make room for still better runners. The team includes two freshmen who were sub nine-minute high school two-milers.

Hartzog added that Glenn Ujje and Paul Ingrassia have been doing much better. He said that Ingrassia has been doing "real good some days." The six-man squad will include: Moore, Robinson, Nal-der, Gary Mosher, Ujje and Ingrassia. Carl McPherson will not be attending the meet due to a twisted knee suffered last week.

Club sponsors race

The Recreational Runners of SIU will sponsor an open four-mile cross country run Sunday 4 p.m. on the varsity cross country course. The course is located southwest of the varsity baseball diamond.

Runners, joggers and weight watchers, both male and female are urged to participate. Coeds will be required to run two miles.

Those runners wishing to be timed are urged to wear a shirt with a number on it to ease recording of times.

The Recreational Runners hope to put on meets each Sunday of varying distances and course conditions.
