Guyon halts all cleanup work; group to discuss wood's future

By John Stewart
Staff Writer

Vice President for Academic Affairs John Guyon called a m"eeting on the Thompson Woods Wednesday to discuss the moratorium on logging.

Guyon's action came in the wake of a Graduate and Professional Student Council resolution condemning the clearing work, and warnings from several SIU-C faculty that the cleanup could damage the woods.

The moratorium will last at least until Wednesday, when a reactivated group formerly called the "Natural Areas Committee" will meet to discuss the brush clearing, according to John Guyon, a junior president for academic affairs.

Guyon said he called the moratorium and the meeting to counter the perception that the cleanup was being done with haste and without faculty consultation. The Natural Areas Committee is a faculty group made up of Gerald Coertz, plant and soil science instructor; W.D. Klimstra, wildlife research instructor; George Weaver, forestry instructor and botany instructors Don Tindall and Robert Mulenbrock. Clarence Doughty, vice president for campus services, and John Guyon, acting president, are also members of the committee, Guyon said.

By last Friday the cleanup was one-third completed, but even if the moratorium was lifted soon, it is doubtful the work could be finished by the onset of cold weather, which would have halted the clearing.

Committee member W.D. Klimstra, a professor in the Bureau of Land Management, said the "respective compromise could be worked out for the good of the interests of Thompson Woods."

Klimstra said the cleanup should have "never been done" and that he had no idea why campus services didn't consult any knowledgeable faculty members about the ecological effects of brush clearing on Thompson Woods.

Graduate and Professional Student Council President Ann Greally '74 Monday that the GPS was investigating the legality of the brush clearing. She said the Illinois Department of Conservation may have Thompson Woods classified as an area of high priority, which would make the clearing illegal.

Guyon room to travel to quiet visit

CENTRALIA - It was a hero's reception Saturday when SIU-C townies lined the streets to welcome home presidential press secretary Jim Brady.

Brady, who narrowly escaped death when he was wounded in the head by an assassin's bullet in Washington on Wednesday, returned to his home town after his first visit home since he was shot.

Shaky but smiling, Brady walked with the support of a cane and his wife, Sarah, from white convertible to the front yard of his mother's home on Maple Street, where he held a brief press conference.

The convertible had carried Brady on a five-block trip as hundreds of well-wishers shouted greetings and clapped to shake his hand.

Among the welcoming crowd was State Comptroller Roland Burris, also a Centralia native, who read a proclamation from Gov. Thompson declaring Oct. 9 "Jim Brady Week."

"When he looked at me and called me Bob," said Burris, referring to his high school nickname "Solitude." Brady was a freshman at Centralia High School when Burris graduated in the mid-1950s. "There's nothing that takes the place of coming home, "Brady said, speaking slowly, but clearly. "It feels great."

Solitude and his mother's home were Brady's first stops. Brady said, are things he is looking forward to doing, but he just wanted to take it easy.

"It's a very difficult time to relax in Washington," Brady said. He said he has been working at least a couple of days a week in his White House office.

"Your guess is as good as mine," he responded to a question about whether the president will seek another four years in the White House.

But he said he hoped to be part of the team Reagan decides to run.

"My educated guess is that this time next year, he'll be on the campaign trail," he said.

"And I've offered my help if he is," Brady declined to discuss the Jackson to solicit campaign funding

CHICAGO (AP) - The first nationwide solicitation letter seeking funds for a possible Democratic presidential bid by late trading as the Rev. Jesse Jackson will be mailed out this week, an aide to the civil rights leader said Monday.

Frank Watkins, a long-time Jackson aide now working on his presidential advisory committee, said the solicitation will be a "substantial mailing" but will only carry a limited number of solicitation letters will be distributed or who is being targeted in the fund-raising drive.

"At this point, we're putting 500,000 letters in the mail, but we're not sure," said Watkins, adding that the bulk of the letters will be mailed to contributors and members of the Democratic Party.

"I am announcing entering the 1984 Democratic Presidential race."

Jackson, who has been considering entering the 1984 Democratic Party nomination for the past six months, recently took an indefinite leave of absence from the presidency of Operation PUSH - People United to Serve Humanity - to devote full attention to the presidential question.

Jackson may announce his decision this month.

Though Jackson is not a formal candidate, the Baptist minister and president Reagan and planning to campaign in states with Hispanics, Indians and farm

Jackson says he hopes to form a "Rainbow Coalition" in which blacks, Hispanics and other minorities will come together out the Democratic Party.

Jackson said he will contribute to the solicitation the mail will play a

Shawnee fate still uncertain after Watt

By John Stewart
Staff Writer

Interior Secretary James Watt's moratorium designation will not directly affect the proposed sale of 70,000 acres of the Shawnee National Forest, says Myra Wood Bennett, director of the Shawnee organization.

"His remark was typical," but it was a shame he resigned because of the remark instead of his policies, Bennett said.

The Shawnee National Forest is in the consideration of the administration of the forestry service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the national Shawnee organization.

Bennett, who was on hand for Watt's resignation at the Department of Interior on Oct. 9, said the pressure was generated by residents of the Shawnee who resigned partially because of pressure from groups that opposed the sale of public land, though, she said, "Nearly 70,000 acres (27 percent) of the Shawnee National Forest are being considered for further study before a proposed sale could take place. Watt's resignation was not so much a repudiation of administration policy to sell public lands as it was an apology for his remark, Bennett said. Sept. 21. Watt said his煤al advisory board is "a woman, a black, two Jews and a cripple". Watt was about to face a vote of no confidence from the U.S. Senate when he resigned Oct. 9.

"I think the pressure from environmental groups opposed to the sale of public land was contributing factor in Watt's resignation," though she said Watt's resignation was made for the reason for his resignation, but Bennett said she believes he wouldn't have had to resign without the pressure he already faced.

Bennett's Save Our Shawnee campaign of about 200 members has gathered 17,500 signatures on petitions opposing the sale of the forest.

She wants to stop proposals now stalled in the U.S. Congress to study the selling of parts of the forest.

Former state Senate hopeful Wayne Atlasti, a Vсер胄ges resident and a member of Fishermen Interested in Saving habitat, has actively campaigned for a moratorium on the sale of publicly owned land, which is a 10,000-acre moratorium. Chicago-based coalition of Illinois wildlife groups opposing the sale of federally owned lands.

Atlasti said that Watt's remark was unfortunate, but because of Watt's unpopularity without environmental and other groups he had to resign where "others could get away with it." Watt's resignation was "a victory for the forest to and are unmanageable, he said, but they only represent 20 percent of the 270,000 acres of the Shawnee National Forest which would be sold.

The areas proposed for study and eventual sale four horse trails, several small lakes and two species of endangered birds. It will be destroyed if the federally protected land were sold, she said. The sale of the land for study also includes the Lake of the Clouds which is a 10,000-acre mining site Carbondale's reservoir, Indian Bluff, where there are historic Indian cave drawings and Draper's Bluff, from which one has a view of the Mississippi State.

The Sierra Club's "dump Watt" campaign has finally ended. Local Shawnee Group president Ann Hill, an SIU graduate, and the national Shawnee Media, said she is still concerned about the Legal aid program revamped

By Phillip Fiorini
Staff Writer

The School of Law's clinical program, supported with the possibility of elimination last spring, has a new director to breathe new life into its client contact courses.

Howard Eisenberg, who was appointed director of the elderly and prison legal aid offices in July, said he is confident the clinical program will justly itself as an essential and integral part of the law school curriculum. "We have to make a niche for it as an appropriate part of the law school," Eisenberg said in an interview Monday.

He said his task is to show that the program is beneficial to both the Carbondale community and Southern Illinois. There has not been a great effort to do this in the past, he said.

Five clinical programs are offered by the school, including two externships run by state's attorney and the public defender offices. The programs supported by faculty are the Clinic for the Elderly Prison Legal Aid and Juvenile Defender Clinic. Since his appointment, Eisenberg has reconvened the offices of prison legal aid and the clinic for the elderly.

The school supplements a $30,000 grant to provide services through the clinical programs to the Southern Illinois community.

Controversy over the clinical program has followed in light of the increasing costs that some faculty felt the courses required. It was argued that students were being placed into real situations without adequate preparation or supervision and that the quality of the program was diminishing.

Students claimed the programs provided them with opportunities to get hands-on experience by working with real clients. Faculty addressed the question of what emphasis should be placed on clinical programs teaching skills not ordinarily taught in the classroom.

Although the controversy hasn't subsided completely, Eisenberg, an associate professor, agreed that clinical programs are a more expensive way to educate students than traditional teaching. But he said that he is committed to maintaining clinical programs at SIUC.

Eisenberg is drafting a report due in the spring identifying what the program is doing and what has to be done to maintain it as an essential part of the curriculum.

"The place of the program in the curriculum has never been clear," he said.

The clinical program serves 15 counties and has "almost unlimited" potential in Southern Illinois, Eisenberg said. But sacrifices must be made to prevent "spreading yourself too thin" by trying to serve such a large area, he said.

Students are now required to take one semester in prison legal aid. Since some cases started by a student don't always end after a semester in the prison, Eisenberg said, two things could be done to eliminate the problem.

The school could require students to take two semesters or control intake, increasing the chances of concluding cases during the semester.

"We should be reluctant in getting involved in litigation that looks like it won't end during my lifetime," Eisenberg said.

Eisenberg said the program for the elderly drafts wills and provides beneficial free legal services.

Most first-rate law schools have a sound clinical program, Eisenberg said. "I've come to make SIU-C a first-rate law school," he said.

Facility Senate meeting set

Clarence Dougherty, vice president for campus services, has been asked to speak to the Faculty Senate about a plan by the Illinois Department of Corrections to set up a minimum security work camp at the Southern Illinois Environmental Center.

The senate will meet at 1 p.m. Thursday in the Illinois Room of the Student Center.

The prison work camp plan has been opposed by several University constituency groups, including the Undergraduate Student Organization, the Student Government Association, the Administrative and Professional Staff Council, the Academic Nationality and Professional Staff Council, and the Civil Service Employees Council.

Progress reports from the Faculty Status and Welfare Committee, Undergraduate Education Policy Committee and Graduate Education Policy Committee are also expected to be discussed.

South Koreans mourn delegation

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Thousands of outraged mourners rallied Monday to denounce the Burma bombing that killed 16 members of a South Korean presidential delegation. President Chun Doo-hwan said the blast was aimed at him and accused communist North Korea of instigating it.

Chun, who avoided the Sunday explosion by minutes because his motorcade was delayed in traffic, announced nationwide mourning when he returned home early Monday. He directed the attack that killed his senior advisers, including four key Cabinet ministers, and his closest friends.

Planes may fuel Iran-Iraq war

PARIS (AP) — The reported delivery of five Super-Etendard jetfighters to Iraq, still unconfirmed by the French government, has raised fears that Iran's threatened retaliation will widen the 5½-year-old Persian Gulf war and perhaps provoke U.S. intervention.

But oil analysts say that even if Iraq carries out its threat to block the strategic Hormuz Strait and close the gulf to petroleum exports, it will not cause an immediate crisis in world oil supplies.

Safety of shipments questioned

WASHINGTON (AP) — An environmental expert said Monday that shipment of high-level nuclear wastes across parts of the Midwest should be halted because the reliability of the containers is unknown.

A total of 114 truckloads of spent fuel is scheduled to be shipped from western New York, across Ohio and into Wisconsin. The shipments would be the first to take place since a moratorium on the transportation of nuclear waste began in the late 1970s.

"Isn't this great?" an elderly woman exclaimed. "We got to shake his hand. The whole town loves him."

Two police cars led the way for the procession bringing Brady into town from Highway 31, and the Centralia High School band marched along behind. Banners at the Brady home said, "Welcome home. Jim. We love you."

Brady, a University of Illinois graduate of 1962, was a graduate student in political science at SIU-C in 1965. Gov.

The proposal to study 76,000 acres of the Shawnee National Forest prior to sale has stalled in the U.S. Congress, awaiting a sponsor. "We want to tip the proposal in the bud," Bennett said. In April Congressman Paul Simon said he opposed the plan to sell the Shawnee parcel.

Ratliffe enters innocent plea

Robert Ratcliffe, dean of continuing education, pleaded not guilty to a charge of drunken driving in Jackson County Court Friday afternoon.

Ratliffe requested a jury trial, but due to ongoing repairs to the Jackson County Courthouse, no court date has been set.

Ratliffe was charged with drunken driving on Aug. 6 after the University vehicle he was driving struck a house trailer near the intersection of Boskydell Road and Highway 31 South.

Ratliffe, John Childers and Linda Childers were injured when Ratcliffe's car struck the trailer, knocking it 11 feet off its foundation.
James Watt is out; bad policies stay in AFTEB Battling with his opponents for over three weeks over his stupid remark concerning the selection of a special advisory panel, James Watt has succeeded to reassure Republican Congressional leaders and presented his resignation to President Reagan.

Being Secretary of the Interior is a tough job — especially when it involves political and non-political advisory committees. Watt came to Washington with a radical agenda in hand — radical in the sense that it was a sharp turn to the right concerning the handling and development of public land. Those policies caused an erosion of support for him that eventually spelled his downfall. His now infamous remark would be his downfall; it was just the last little shove that pushed him over the cliff.

BY WATT’S OWN ADMISSION he wanted “to change America.” He went about his work with an almost religious fervor, plunging ahead with short-sighted and far-fetched policies. He was only a political zealot, putting a desire for the realization of his policies before the needs of mankind.

AFTERWARDS, Watt was seeking a sincere resolve of his policies. Watt formulated a plan that would, in his view, benefit everyone and would make him look better than ever. Watt was a man who left little doubt that he was carrying out the wishes of the president.

THAT UNWAVERING BOND between Watt and Reagan caused a slow build-up of opposition within Watt’s own party. Republicans cannot afford a little regard for the needs of various constituencies and groups and often even his own supporters. He believed he was right and that belief blinded him.

In Watt’s statement, “I am not an arrogant leader with self-confidence with Reagan’s backing to become a political zealot, putting a desire for the realization of his policies before the needs of mankind.”

HE WAS BOUND and determined to implement the policies of the president. He let the new Secretary of the Interior not be able to fool the American public into supporting those policies.

Dr. Margaret Child’s letter (Oct. 17) to the effect that the “publication of religious teachings in the Daily Egyptian has raised two separate, but related, questions. The first is whether or not it is the function of the press to publish the opinions of people on religious matters. The other is where one draws a line between political and religious issues, if such an issue may, indeed, be drawn. As to the first matter, I cannot help but believe that morality is a religious issue, and, as such, is a matter of public concern. As soon as we limit our mass media as to what sorts of concerns they may address, we run the risk of the most vicious sort of suppression. As to the second question, I cannot imagine a time when we might arbitrarily decide where religious stops and the rest of the concerns of humanity begin.”

There is a solution of the problem of the religious and political inseparable, and the solution lies in the realm of morality. The line between political and religious issues in the realm of morality is not always clear and not always distinct. However, morality is a religious issue and, as such, is a matter of public concern.

World hunger and the United Nations

OCTOBER is decreed by the United Nations as World Food Day. One recent U.N. forum elected to delve into problems that need to be solved in the sequences toward world order — and one of the unnoticed is the Committee of the Whole.

The committee was established by the United Nations General Assembly in 1947 to oversee the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO). In 1971, the Committee of the Whole met to discuss the work of FAO and to look at strategies for alleviating the worldwide struggle of the world’s hungry. Since then, the committee has presented various field and educational programs to achieve a more equitable distribution of the world’s food and agricultural resources.

In March 1982, the Committee of the Whole met to discuss the work of FAO and to look at strategies for alleviating the worldwide struggle of the world’s hungry. Since then, the committee has presented various field and educational programs to achieve a more equitable distribution of the world’s food and agricultural resources.

IN THE PAST, the slow growth of agriculture in developing countries has made them more and more dependent on burdensome imports from a few developing countries. That burden thrats an important part of their efforts to become self-sufficient. It has prevented them from taking full advantage of the agricultural export opportunities available.

The slow agricultural progress is striking contrast to the international commodity production, which has been available not only for agricultural development, but also for the development of industry in other non-agricultural sectors. Slow agricultural and rural progress has hampered the growth of domestic market as well as the raw materials for industries.

The majority of the people in developing countries — the vast majority of the world’s poor people — live in rural areas and derive their meager employment and livelihood from agriculture. The slow progress in agricultural production in these countries has been a major constraint on the reduction of poverty and in the achievement of their basic social and economic goals.

Slow agricultural and rural progress has hampered the growth of domestic market as well as the raw materials for industries.
Letters

On Oct. 18, SIU-C civil service people will vote for their representative to the Advisory Committee to the Civil Service Merit Board. I have found that many people have little knowledge about this committee but they do have questions. I would like to answer some of their questions now.

The most important question asked is just what does the committee do for us?

The Constitution and Bylaws of the State of Illinois Civil Service Advisory Committee to the Merit Board have the following definition: "An advisory committee composed of action and presenting problems to the board in accordance with the interests and needs of all employees." That statement sounds well and good; it does not say that every person to be actively interested in it. Has your representative asked for your participation in this important work?

The fact that it is important and yet few people know much about it may make you responsible for another important fact. In the last election 335 people voted out of 1,800 eligible to vote. That is less than 20 percent.

Your vote is your voice! You must speak out to be heard. You can't just hope for better representation. You must vote for a new, energetic, purposeful representative.

Another important fact you should know with respect to selecting your representative to the Advisory Committee is that you are the only person to the Executive Committee. This committee evaluates and recommends people to the Advisory Committee. Also, in an emergency, the Executive Committee may act on behalf of the Advisory Committee. Membership in this committee does not reflect special qualifications of any one candidate. It is the automatic result of your vote. The question of whether or not you have a representative to the Advisory Committee is determined by the vote of the people.

The Advisory Committee to the Civil Service Merit Board has the responsibility of selecting the replacements for people whose service has expired. Some of these people have been seeking relief for the past several years. What Public Law 91-364 established is that the State is responsible for providing for the availability of capacity either within or outside the state for the disposal of low-level radioactive waste, which is generated within its borders.

Currently there are three low-level radioactive waste disposal sites in the United States. These sites have been seeking relief for many years. New regulations were passed in 1980 and set Jan. 1, 1985 as the date that every state must have a disposal site for low-level radioactive waste.

It is true that there is room for improvement in the current language of the proposed regulations. Many people want to have the compact agreements into the compact that are not appropriate. The compact is a political agreement to set up regional cooperation for the disposal of low-level waste. It cannot set safety specifications or legal liabilities. The commission proposed by the department of Energy would operate a land disposal site. Any such site in Illinois will be licensed by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission in accordance with specific regulations. Among other things, the land site must be owned by either the state or federal government.

Many of the proposals made by Miss Torry and most of the questions raised at the recent hearing in Marion are answered or addressed in Title 10, Code of Federal Regulations, Part 61. These regulations were developed over a period of several years including public hearings and periods of solicited written comments. In September of 1981, a four volume draft Environmental Impact Statement on land disposal of radioactive waste was published for comment.

Where were all the comments? People are concerned, and rightly so, over the possibility of a nuclear disposal site in our area. They are concerned over what, how much, in what form, and how deep the wastes will be placed in a disposal site. I urge you to read Part 61 of the book, look up 10CFR 61, Part 61 and read it. The answers are there, all you have to do is look.

Only then can you have any kind of meaningful dialogue. If you have any questions on this or the previous writing, contact Gerhardt Jaspers, Radiation Safety Officer at SIU-C.

I've seen many letters in the Daily Egyptian editorial area. I'm one of the north end of the Student Center. I'm sure my letter won't change this format, but let's start the aggravation of this week, I have to start somewhere.

I believe in God. I believe very strongly in the right to free speech and to write anything anyone who can get up and speak or write to God and about what they believe. But surely it is not fair to those who want to be listened to. I do not believe in God. I am confident that the north end of the Student Center agrees to speakers because of the large number of people who have a right to stand around either listening to or speaking to God. I do not think that is fair. I am not responsible to the people who speak with as much consideration. - Maureen O'Connor, Secretary, Higher Education.

Master teacher plan a nice idea, but problems need to be settled

Last week, Gov. James Thompson endorsed a proposal that is supposed to lead to hiring 500 outstanding teachers in Illinois and to set up a committee, chaired by the chairman of the SIU-C Board of Trustees, to guide the public in selecting outstanding teachers. Perhaps it was a mistake to set up a specific number of teachers to be awarded. Either all teachers deserving a merit award for excellence in teaching should receive one, or nobody should.

Instead of setting a specific number of teachers to be awarded, and setting a dollar amount on the award, the resolution should have established criteria for identifying outstanding teachers and allotted a specific amount of funds to be divided by those deserving of it. What about the criteria? The resolution does not distinguish between outstanding teachers working in the public school system, more public schools and the private sector. It seems to be a majority vote. Your vote is the only way that you can show your disapproval of a majority vote. Your vote is a message that you don't think that George Thompson and his Board of Trustees can do a majority vote. Your vote is a message that you don't think that George Thompson and his Board of Trustees can do it right.

One problem with this resolution is that there are approximately 100,000 teachers who would be eligible, according to Donald Beggs, dean of the college of Education. The resolution does not distinguish among public, private, secondary or elementary teachers. Beggs said.

Another problem is that the resolution is establishing criteria by which to select the 500 outstanding teachers. These guidelines are being established by the committee appointed by Thompson and should be ready by December, Parker said.

One question must be raised. What happens, for example, if more than 500 teachers live up to the criteria? What if there aren't 500 teachers who meet the criteria? What if there aren't 500 teachers who meet the criteria? Perhaps it was a mistake to set up a specific number of teachers to be awarded. Either all teachers deserving a merit award for excellence in teaching should receive one, or nobody should.

Watercolor artist featured at gallery

Dripping with color could be one way to describe local artist John F. Boyd's watercolor paintings, on display in the Associated Artist Gallery at 213 S. Illinois Avenue.

During an opening reception Sunday, about 70 people wandered in and out of the gallery doors to sip wine, to munch on snacks and to view Boyd's most recent watercolor paintings of brightly-colored landscapes and oriental flowers.

While he was busy accepting compliments from admirers, Boyd found time to explain his motivation to create such work.

"I grew up out in the country in Southern Illinois. I'm really in love with the idea of landscapes and the outdoors," Boyd said.

The 33-year-old painter grew up on a farm east of Cobden. He entered SIU-C in 1967 and studied under local artist Herbert Fink. Boyd received a bachelor's degree in art from SIU-C in 1977 and did extensive watercolor work in ink. He switched to watercolors about eight years ago.

The exhibit Sunday included several landscape scenes of Southern Illinois and surrounding areas: Tennessee River, Kentucky Lake, Dogwood Hill and Stonewolf Bluff.

"If you step back about 10 feet, his paintings seem to look more like pictures," said Margaret McGrady, longtime friend and fan of Boyd. According to McGrady, Boyd got "turned on" to color after a trip to Tahos, his paintings seem to look more like pictures.

Also a teacher of drawing and painting at Shawnee College, Boyd said the origin of his work comes from the realm of his own existence.

"In my artwork and in my teaching, I emphasize that life drawing and the individual's own discrete experience with nature are the surest source of beauty and inspiration," he said.

Boyd's paintings have been displayed in several solo exhibits at Shawnee College and Illinois. In Carbondale, Boyd's pen and ink drawings were shown at an exhibit in the Hundley House Gallery in July 1980. "Watercolor Landscapes," will be exhibited at the Associated Artists Gallery until Oct. 29. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. until 5:30 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday.

Competitiveness the attraction for Saluki sports announcer

By Liz Myers
March 1983

"Good afternoon, ladies and gentlemen, and welcome to Mr. Andrew Stadium."

The associate professor of graphic arts, John Yack, the announcer of the SIU-C football and basketball games, says Saturday after Saturday.

Before every Saluki home game, Yack walks into the quiet, empty stadium and climbs the stairs to the press box. He studies the statistics of the opposing teams, and then practices the correct pronunciation of their names.

It doesn't sound that difficult, but Yack can't afford to make a mistake. Yack has been announcing basketball games since he came here from the University of Oklahoma in 1976. He began chronicling football games upon the request of former athletic director Gayle Sayers eight years ago.

The 50-year-old New York native has never missed a game in his five years of announcing at SIU-C and at the University of Oklahoma. Yack says that there haven't been any close calls. One time he covered a basketball game with a 100-degree fever.

"I knew that I should have been home in bed, but I went anyway," he said.

When asked if being a sportscaster does an announcing serve for Yack, "In the field of advertising the pressure and deadlines are so fierce that a person who is sports-oriented has a great advantage because he is more disciplined and knows how to regulate his time in order to get the job done," Yack said.

"Competitiveness is in our business," Yack said, sitting beneath many graphic portraits he has done of athletes. He added that there is also the common presentation to people in both advertising and announcing.

While Yack concentrates on the offense side of the football game, his wife accompanies him in the press box. Carol Yack has been his "spotter" for over three years.

John Yack is the announcer for Saluki football games.

Using high-powered binoculars, she watches the defense and tells John who made the tackle.

While Yack concentrates solely on the offense, he feels that it is his job to motivate the audience.

"If I can do anything to help the Salukis win, I'll do it."

This includes when he announces the opposing players—Yack's voice comes out with a normal and straight tone, but when the home team comes out, his voice goes up and he interjects a lot of "hey kids, let's go!" in his routine.

Yack also feels that it's part of his job to keep the audience alarmed to what's happening play-by-play.

"If an official makes a complicated call, I keep the crowd informed so they don't panic," Yack said.

Selected by the School of Technical Careers as the 1983 Teacher of the Year, Yack feels that sports are an intricate part of university life and he has no objection to putting funds toward them.

"Athletics can give us a return on our investment," Yack said.

Yack said SIU-C needs one program to dominate though. This is basketball country and one day we need to go to the NCAAs and stay there for more than a year." With this kind of prestige, Yack feels that alumni will send money from all over to develop programs at the University.

The only complaint that Yack has is the lack of support from the student body.

"In the last game, there were more people in the parking lot than in the stadium. When the house is three-fourths empty the players become dejected," which he thanks has an effect on the team's performance.

Is it real, or computer?

By Peter Coy
Associated Press Writer

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — The computer composer can manipulate binary numbers into a sound from the clack of a typewriter to a wail of a violin.

"It is a fan's job just discovered that a vibrating sound made sound," said Don Bucha of Berkeley, Calif., a composer who has made computer programs since the 1960s.

Bucha was interviewed at the four-day 1983 International Computer Music Conference, which ended Monday at the University of Rochester's Eastman School of Music.

The conference was held in Venice, Italy last year and will be held in Paris next year.

More than 400 experts from around the world took part.

Computer music has existed since the late 1950s, when Max Matthews invented an "acoustic compiler" at Bell Laboratories in Murray Hill, N.J.

Composers have a far greater variety of computer instruments since the 1960s to choose from, but several conferees questioned how many people combine the computer wizardry and musical ear to use of the latest developments in the field.

"The real problems are the difference of who's making interesting music?" noted Elie Yarden, a professor at Bard College near New York.

Four concerts in Eastman's Student Center Central Ticket Office and at the door.

Civil service election set

TUESDAY MEETINGS:
Psychology Club, 7:30 p.m., Activity Room A; Wildlife Society with Geology Professor Thomas Scott as speaker, 7:30 p.m., Ballroom C and Pi Sigma Epsilon, professional fraternity specializing in marketing, sales and sales management, 7 p.m., Lawson 221.

SENIORS in the Radio and Television Department may register to have photos taken for graduation bulletin from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Oct. 21 in front of the Radio and Television main office.

APPOINTMENTS FOR portraits may be made by graduating students with the Obelisk II studio, 536-7768.

A PRAYER rally on behalf of the American Indian Movement will be held by the Leonard Peltier Support Group from noon to 1:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Federal Building.

TUITION WAIVER applications for spring semester are available at Quigley 131 for students with at least a 3.5 average in the College of Human Resources. Deadline for applications is Oct. 21.

Civil service employees will be electing a representative to the State University Civil Service Advisory Committee to the Merit Board on Oct. 18. According to Bonnie Williams, staff secretary in Personnel Services, there are four candidates for the four-year post.

The candidates are: Joe Elliott, administrative assistant I; Thomas L. Engel, accountant I in School of Technical Careers; and Tom Wood, public information specialist in University News.

Williams said the polls will be open on Oct. 18 from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. Civil service employees may vote at four locations on campus: the South Entrance of Morris Library, and the Physical Plant annex, Small Group Housing 106, the south entrance of Morris Library, and the Security Office lobby at Washington Square.

Williams said that all civil service employees are eligible to vote except those hired on a temporary, irregular, or provisional basis. All civil service personnel who plan to vote must be employed on Oct. 18 and show identification.

Williams said employees' certificate of employment would probably be the best form of identification.

The employee elected to the non-paid position will represent all S.U.C. civil service employees to the Civil Service Merit Board. The present representative is Joe Elliott.

University Housing sponsoring alcohol awareness activities

By John Racine
Staff Writer

University Housing is sponsoring a series of programs which includes two contests and several events aimed at alcohol and its use throughout the remainder of this, Alcohol Awareness Week.

Paul Jahr, University Housing's program coordinator, said the purpose of the internationally-celebrated week is to put attention to the use of alcohol.

Residents in the Brush Towers, Thompson Point and University Park have until Tuesday afternoon to enter a poster contest and until Wednesday afternoon to enter crossword puzzles which deal with the alcohol topic, he said.

Those who return a correctly worked crossword puzzle to their residential hall common area will receive a $1 discount at one of the three snack bars we have in each area," Jahr said.

A drawing will be made from all the correctly answered puzzles and the winner will receive a $25 gift certificate at the University Bookstore, he said.

Winners in the hall-wide poster contest will receive gift certificates to eat in the top three places. First place will receive $50, second $30 and third $20, he said.

In cooperation with the Wellness Center's Alcohol Education Program, University Housing will sponsor "The Alcohol Game" on Tuesday in Troubadour Hall and on Wednesday in Grinnell Hall. Jahr said the times are not definitely set, but that the game will be sometime during the dinner hour.

The popular program consists of eight to 10 questions on alcohol and its use and will test the contestants' knowledge in those areas, Jahr said.

Another program that started Monday night and will continue through the end of the week are the "graffito cubes" that will be put up Troubadour, Grinnell and Lentz dining halls.

"The program is designed to give anyone who wants to take it the opportunity to comment on some of the questions we pose. The purpose of the event is to get people to think about alcohol," Jahr said.

Some of the questions will include reasons to drink, reasons not to drink and "why I couldn't stop drinking."

University Housing's scheduled events will conclude a "time out" from 4 to 6 p.m. Thursday at the Student Recreation Center. The program will include entertainment, non-alcoholic beverages and the announcement of contest winners.

Jahr said.

In addition, he added, many of the individual residence areas have scheduled events that are designed to promote alcohol awareness.

"Depending on how you measure effectiveness, I would say we achieve our goal," he said. "If you count the number of people who stop and think about what we are saying, then yes, we are effective.

"We are not asking people to abstain from drinking, we are just asking them to think about alcohol," he said.

Alcohol Awareness Week is sponsored internationally by the Association of College and University Housing Officials, he said. This is the second year that it has been observed nationally, the first year it has been observed at SIU-C.

Three officers injured in street fight

Three Carbondale police officers were injured by flying bricks, bottles and rocks Sunday when they broke up a fight among several people in the 200 block of North Washington Street. Four were arrested during the fight, which occurred about 3:30 a.m., police said.

Several people interfered with the efforts of 11 Carbondale police officers and several SIU-C Security officers to break up the fight, police said.

Some bystanders were also injured by flying objects during the incident. The three officers were treated and released from Carbondale Memorial Hospital.

Two people were charged with aggravated battery, one with aggravated assault and one with obstructing a police officer, according to police.

uhm, who was the fifth Saluki across the finish line and 30th overall, gave the barriers front men much-needed suppport. In previous meets, the front men have run well but the back men have been finishing low, costing the team some victories. Behn, whose time was 33:19, is usually the No. 8 man on the squad.

Western Kentucky finished second in the invitational, scoring 56 points to the Salukis’ low 34. WK's Ashley Johnson broke the course record with a time of 30:09.7. The previous record (30:12.6) was held by

Olympic athletes facing mandatory drug testing

COLORADO SPRINGS - American athletes competing in Olympic trials will undergo mandatory drug testing — and face disqualification from the 1984 Games if they flunk. U.S.
Olympic Committee officials said Monday.

In some cases, drug testing crews will show up unanounced at other athletic events besides the Olympic trials, according to F. Duane Miller, executive director of the USOC.

"We must clean this program up once and for all," Miller said
Monday at a news conference at U.S. Olympic headquarters here.

Miller said the new program will feature both voluntary testing, which carries no punishment, and formal testing, reserved mainly for Olympic trials.

"This is a war on drugs, not on our athletes," Miller said.
Reiterating comments he made earlier to a congressional committee.

The Salukis averaged only 2-1 lead.

Salukis continue climb, jump to No. 2 ranking

By Jim Leux Staff Writer

For the third straight week, the SIU-C gridders moved up in the NCAA I-AA football poll. This week, the 6-0 Salukis are ranked No. 2.

Holy Cross, 5-0 and ranked No. 4 this week, helped make the Saluki poll climb possible by beating last week's No. 2 team, Colgate, 21-18. Colgate fell to 6-1 and No. 7.

Unbeaten Eastern Kentucky, 5-0 and coming off a 14-7 victory over Middle Tennessee State, held on to the No. 1 ranking by snaring all four first-place votes.

Even with the loss, Middle Tennessee State, 4-1, moved up three notches in the poll to a 14th-place tie with No. 5 Eastern Illinois, which vaulted five spots in the poll from last week's ranking.

Saluki Coach Roy Dempsey said his team is pleased with moving to the No. 2 ranking, but that is not the team's ultimate goal.

"They were happy with being No. 3," Dempsey said, "but being No. 2 sure sounds a whole lot better to them. I think their goal is to be No. 1. Right now, they're about as close to getting there as possible."

SIU-C, which was not a happy team after beating Drake 26-0, is beginning to feel better about itself, Dempsey said.

"They were a little bit mad at themselves after the game," Dempsey said. "We tried to talk to them in a positive way about the game. We're having too many breakdowns and missed assignments. We were not solid as a unit."

Even though the team made a lot of errors during the game, Dempsey said the team made many good plays that went unnoticed. For instance, good blocks and well-run plays by individuals went by without catching the public's eye, he said.

"We're trying to cut down on the errors and the turnovers," said Dempsey. "They know they made too many errors during the game, but they are smart enough to know they won."

And smart enough to know they are No. 2 in the country.

Softball team sweeps tournay

By George Pappas Staff Writer

The women's softball team went out in grand style, not surprising, style.

"The team just clicked," Coach Ray Brechtlein said. "Good defense, pitching, clutch hits and teamwork helped us win this tournament."

The Salukis finished their fall season with a 17-7 mark.

Pitchers Sunny Clark and Eileen Maloney pitched outstanding games for the Salukis, combining to give up only one run in five games. Clark was 10-0 for the weekend, improving her fall record to 8-2 as she threw two one-hitters, both against St. Francis.

Maloney was 5-0 for the weekend, evening her fall record at 7-2 as she threw two shutouts. The Salukis lost freshman pitcher Deanne Styx because of personal problems last week, but the loss was apparently not crucial.

"Our pitchers came through for us," the coach said. "Everyone on the team pitched in a little and did what they had to do to help us win."

The Salukis started the tournament by blanking St. Francis, 9-0, in four innings.

Men harriers grab invitational crown

By David Wilhelm Staff Writer

The men’s cross country team bounced back from a disappointing double dual loss to Illinois and Arkansas by winning the Indiana Invitational Saturday in Bloomington.

It was the Saluki’s first 10,000-meter (6.2 miles) race of the season. Chris Bunyan led the way for the harriers, finishing second overall with a time of 30:37. Eddie Weddethorn (30:35) placed fourth and Mike Keane 10th (31:37).

Despite finishing first among the eight schools that competed, Coach Bill Cornell was still not completely satisfied.

"Although we won, I’m still not satisfied with the team’s overall performance," Cornell said. "We still need a fifth man. If it hadn’t been for David Behm running the race of his life, we wouldn’t have won. I’d like to see him run like that again."
