BOT to vote on $41 tuition increase

By Marc Chase
Senior Reporter

A proposed $41 per semester tuition increase starting in fall of 1995 will be voted on Thursday by the SIUC Board of Trustees.

SIUC Chancellor James Brown justified the increase as keeping pace with Illinois inflation. Brown said because the increase is inflationary, it matches the recommendations set by the Illinois Board of Higher Education for increases at all state schools. Tuition has not historically kept pace with IBHE recommendations in the past, however, according to two former IBHE student leaders.

First in a series

IBHE is a body which is appointed by the governor to make recommendations for higher education institutions in the state. The board is comprised of members such as Chairman A.D. VanMeter of the SIUC Board of Trustees; who are appointed by the governor. The board also seats the chairs of all governing boards for universities in the state.

The IBHE recommends an economic indicator, such as the inflation rate, to request tuition levels for state universities. The body also recommends a budget for each institution to the state legislature, based on a report each university submits to IBHE every year.

Bill and Susan Hall, who have both served as student members of IBHE, said in years past the University has overshot recommended tuition levels that were established by IBHE.

Tuition levels provided by the SIUC budget office and the chancellor's office show that tuition at SIUC went up by 1,019 percent

Flicker's investigated for violation of license

By John Kmitta
Staff Reporter

During a public hearing yesterday the Carbondale Liquor Control Commission allowed the owner of Flicker's Restaurant and Pub to defend the establishment against a legal charge.

The commission summarily suspended the liquor license of Flicker's last week at a commission meeting for failure to secure Dram Shop Liability Insurance. Although the suspension was temporarily lifted, the matter will go before the commission once again on Oct. 18.

On Tuesday a hearing officer appointed by the commission listened to testimony from City Clerk Janet Vaught and Osama Mustafa, president of City Center Food and Drink Inc., currently doing business as Flicker's Restaurant and Pub.

Dram Shop Liability Insurance is insurance protecting patrons of bars and restaurants. The insurance is required to maintain a liquor license.

Vaught said if someone leaves a liquor establishment and gets into a car accident the city can take from the establishments Dram Shop Insurance.

"It is a matter of health, safety and welfare of the citizens," she said.

Carbondale City Clerk Janet Vaught and Osama Mustafa, owner of Flicker's Restaurant and Pub, met Tuesday afternoon during a hearing held by the Liquor Control Commission in which Mustafa defended his business for its failure to have liability insurance.

The commission required proof of insurance by Aug. 19. It received proof of insurance in September which was later canceled. The commission finally received proof on Oct. 7.

Mustafa said he made several attempts to get the insurance but had problems with various agencies and their quotes. He said Flicker's did not have the insurance from Aug. 10 to Sept. 6, but did have it

Tentative dates set for book exchange

By Chad Anderson
Staff Reporter

While tuition and the cost of attending college has risen throughout the years, SIUC's Undergraduate Student Government is taking steps to keep the cost of books at an affordable level.

USG is preparing a book exchange program for University students which is designed to save money when buying books for next semester's classes. Tentative dates for the exchange are scheduled for Dec. 12 through Dec. 16 in the Student Center's Illinois Room.

Duane Sherman, USG chairman for the book exchange, said he is hoping to have the exchange operational by the end of December.

"We're optimistically hoping for the end of the semester. If not this semester, then next," he said.

"We need to get as many people involved as possible. The more books we have, the better the program will be."

Sherman said USG has computer science majors working on setting up software for the exchange. The software would receive the names of students and the books they have and match them with people who need these books for next semester's class.

"The computer will take all the names of the people in the program and the books they have, and tell where the book is and who owns it," Sherman said.

The program also allows students to drop-off their books and check them in with a clerk who will take down all necessary personal information, such as name, telephone number, and what books a person has.

The system to determine the value of books is still under review, but Sherman said USG will be looking at how Carbondale's 710 Bookstore and others determine values.

USG is looking into a 10-percent commission on the sale of

Week celebrates gay, lesbian 'coming out'

By Kellie Huttes
Senior Reporter

While yesterday was the seventh anniversary of the first gay and lesbian pride march in Washington, D.C., SIUC's Gays, Lesbians, Bisexuals and Friends organization will celebrate "Coming Out Week" throughout campus with movies and displays.

Heath Karch, the group's co-director, said the day is a special time for a homosexual to "come out of the closet" and tell family and friends about their sexuality.

"This is a day all over the U.S. that people can come out and say 'Yes I am gay,'" he said. "This (week) gives people the courage to be honest with themselves."

The St. Louis Pride March, that took place on Oct. 2, rallied support for the gay community in the Midwest when about 20 SIUC students marched, and last Sunday's AIDS benefit at Club Paradise kicked off the week.

More than $6,000 was raised at the benefit that will be donated to a special emergency fund for the Southern Illinois HIV CARE Consortium, Karch said.

He said by "coming out," people make strides in the community.

"It makes your life a whole lot easier (to come out)," Karch said. "It's like taking a load of bricks off your head."

Although a lot of people will not admit their sexuality to themselves, this day and week provides homosexuals with support, Karch said.

"It (telling others) takes some risks," he said. "There is a lot of danger in losing friends and family, UNEXPLODED BOMBS REMAIN UNDER BERLIN — BERLIN—Almost daily, explosive leftovers from World War II are found in Germany. A 500-pound American bomb killed three workmen and injured 17 other Berliners last month. One official with the city's Munitions Disposal Service estimates that in Berlin alone there are still 15,000 explosive devices — including artillery and mortar shells, hand grenades and 3,000 bombs. Others say the number could be much higher. It is the big bombs hidden under big cities that excite the most concern. While time and corrosion defuse some munitions, others become more unstable and more dangerous. In this regard, World War II has never quite ended as bitter debate rages over the proper appointment of responsibility between builders and city authorities for rooting out bombs.

FARMING METHOD BLAMED FOR FOREST LOSS — CHERRAPUNJI, India—Much of the forest devastation in this region of India is the result of a cultivation practice called "jhum," in which villagers burn large chunks of forest land, churn the ashes into the earth and plant crops until the nutrients in the soil are depleted. Then they move to the next plot of woods and repeat the process. Although the Indian government has attempted to discourage villagers from these slash-and-burn tactics and has begun replanting destroyed forest areas, environmentalists say much of the damage is irreparable.

STUDY: CANCER RISK FROM DYE NONEXISTENT — One of the largest and longest studies of the relationship between hair-dye use and cancer has produced no evidence of a relationship. Part of the ongoing nurses' health study that began in 1976, the current study involved about 99,000 of the 121,700 women enlisted in the study, which is headed by Charles H. Hennekens, chief of Preventive Medicine at Harvard Medical School. It was designed to assess the risk of certain cancers involving the blood or lymph system. An earlier study assessed the risk of more common cancers but found no evidence of a link, Hennekens said. He said hair dye got a bad name early on when "rumormongers" amounts were applied to animals and then later on when researchers failed to take into account the smoking habits of the women who got cancer.

HORMONE PRODUCER SUSPENDS SCREENINGS — The country's biggest producer of human growth hormone said last week it would suspend its financial support of a controversial height- and weight-screening program in public schools. San Francisco-based Genentech said it had supported the screenings as a service to identify children with treatable growth disorders, but critics have characterized the program as a marketing ploy to increase sales of the hormone. Treatment with the hormone can add several inches to short children with a rare genetic defect. But it has not been found to increase the final height of children whose stature is due to other causes.

PRESIDENT EXPECTED TO SIGN PAYMENT LAW — WASHINGTON—Federal and postal workers called for active military duty soon will be able to make retroactive payments to their thrift savings plan accounts and qualify for any matching government contributions owed to them when they return to their jobs. President Clinton shortly is expected to sign the retroactive payment provision — which grew out of Operation Desert Shield and Operation Desert Storm — as part of veterans' readjustment legislation. Because of the government's lenient military leave policy, federal employees make up a large percentage of Army, Navy and Air Force Reserve and National Guard units.

Absentee voting solution for some students

By Kellie Huttes
Senior Reporter

Although yesterday was the last day to register to vote in Jackson County and around the state, students already registered to vote in their home counties still have a chance to make their voice heard through absentee ballots.

Robert B. Harrell, Jackson County clerk, said absentee voting begins Thursday and will be available to residents until the day before the election.

"If the voter knows or greatly suspects he or she will be out of the county on election day, he or she should complete an application for an absentee ballot and vote before hand," he said.

Harrell said registered voters may write to the county clerk's office for an application for an absentee ballot for themselves or a member of their family.

Once the application is approved and the voter receives a ballot, the ballot must be returned to the office five days prior to the election on Nov. 8.

The ballot may either be mailed to the office or brought in by a family member.

"It's very important that only the postal service, the voter or a family member handles the ballot," Harrell said. "A friend, acquaintance or political worker cannot bring the ballot in."

The voter also may fill out an application and receive a ballot personally in the office, he said. Absentee voting in this form may take place until the day before the election.

Gary Ryczyn, director of elections for Cook County, said his office and the Chicago Board of Elections receive a few thousand absentee applications from students per election.

He said a special student absentee application became available a few years ago which allows students to sign up and receive ballots while away at school for up to two years. The students only need to

Tubas get chance to shine in Carbondale's Octubafest

By Paul Eisenberg
Entertainment Editor

Tuba players have long been sentenced to the back row, often overlooked as necessary members of bands. On Monday, 57 Southern Illinois tubists had their day in the spotlight as Octubafest was celebrated in Carbondale.

Lindell Koonce, a Carbondale resident, said he heard about the concert and decided to attend because it was such an unusual event.

"I've never seen anything like it," he said. "It was great."

Robert Weiss, SIUC low brass instructor, originally called for 100 tuba, sousaphone and euphonium players to gather and play, promoting a concert by jazz tubist Sam Pilafan. The jazz concert was canceled, but Weiss decided to have the tuba players unite anyway.

"It was great fun," Weiss said. "It was a success, we had a good crowd, and the people seemed to enjoy it."

The tuba players performed music such as "Camptown Races," "Oh! Susanna," and "Sailor's Horn Pipe" (the Popeye theme song).

The crowd watching at the University Mall, and later at the steps of Shryock Auditorium, were nearly 100 strong, and the favorite pieces were renditions of "America The Beautiful," and a very fast version of "Yankee Doodle."

"People always complain about the low brass being behind," Weiss said. "So we're going to do this one (Doodle) in record time."

SIUC music education major Todd "Krusty" Adams said he enjoyed playing with the low brass group, but the song selection could have been better.

"The songs were kind of cheesy," Adams said. "But with the amount of practice we had, they were probably all some of the people could handle."

He said the musicians only practiced for about 45 minutes, and some of the players had not picked up an instrument in years.

Weiss said he had hoped for a minimum of 50 tuba players to show up, and he was pleased with the effort given by the 57 who attended.

Weiss said he hopes to gather some of the tuba players again for an entry in the Lights Fantastic parade Dec. 3. He said he will fill a flatbed truck with low brass carolers.

Curtis Winston, an alumnus who played tuba in the University Wind Ensemble, said he enjoyed playing with fellow tubists.

"It was an outstanding event," Winston said. "I hope to do it again next year. I'd like to see it as an annual event, getting bigger and bigger every year."

Weiss said he does not know if he will do it again next year.

"We'll see what happens," he said.

Alby Newman, from Mt. Vernon Christian School, plays his tuba Monday evening at the University Mall. Newman was one of 57 tuba players who performed during Octubafest. In addition to the performance at the mall, the Octubafest later moved to the steps of Shryock, where activities director Bob Weiss proclaimed the event a success.

Homecoming candidates vie to represent SIUC

By Stephanie Moletti
Senior Reporter

After extending the deadline for more candidates and bypassing the preliminary elections, SIUC's Student Programming Council finally will allow students to vote for this year's Homecoming king and queen.

The following are the 1994 Homecoming king and queen candidates:

Shane Carpenter, a senior in marketing from Springfield, was elected by the Inter-Fraternity Council to represent the organization.

Carpenter, president of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity, said although IFC is sponsoring his candidacy he wants to represent the entire University if elected king.

"I want to represent SIU, not the Greek system or the ATO fraternity," he said.

"I have a lot of friends on this campus who are not in a fraternity or sorority and I support them in their decision to not be a part of the Greek system."

Carpenter said he believes his open-mindedness to SIUC helps to qualify him for the position of Homecoming king.

"I not only support the Greek system, but SIU as a whole," he said.

Carpenter also has been involved in the Undergraduate Student Government, the SIUC tennis team and COBA (College of Business and Administration) LINX, a recruitment system.

Adam Hirtz, a junior in speech communication from Chillicothe, is running on behalf of the Public Relations Student Society of America.

Hirtz is a member of the SIUC baseball team and an elected member of Student-Athlete Advisory Board.

Hirtz was not available for comment on his candidacy.

Fritz Krause, a senior in radio and television from Lake Bluff, is representing the Student Orientation Committee.

Krause, vice-chair of the committee, said he became a candidate somewhat by accident.

"I know one of the grad assistants at SPC and they asked us to apply because they only had one candidate for king and one for queen," Krause said.

He said no matter what the circumstances of reaching candidacy, he believes he is representing the "unrepresented part of the student population."

"I'm not a part of the Greek system, but I am involved in campus activities," he said.

Krause is involved in WJBD Sports Department, SIU Night

Hussein should have been handled before

ON THE BORDERS OF KUWAIT, IRAQI FORCES numbering nearly 500,000 are once again gathering in what appears to be a pre-invasion build-up. If the stated objectives of Operation Desert Storm in 1991 had remained consistent and been achieved, this situation would not be happening.

Saddam Hussein has demonstrated in the past that his actions are rarely predictable or rational. This lack of thought before action was clear in the 1990/91 operations that were based on questionable motives at best. One of then President George Bush's primary objectives, as stated publicly in his defining the of the U.S. mission there, was to get Saddam Hussein out of power.

HOWEVER, AS IS OFTEN THE CASE, THE initial objectives set for U.S. troops changed significantly over the duration of the mission. The result was that when the majority of troops shipped out of the Persian Gulf, Saddam Hussein was still firmly entrenched in the Iraqi sand.

Essentially what has happened is that U.S. actions in the Gulf only temporarily solved the region's problems. It is hard not to wonder if Hussein had been removed from power, would 70,000 American troops be headed for the war zone again?

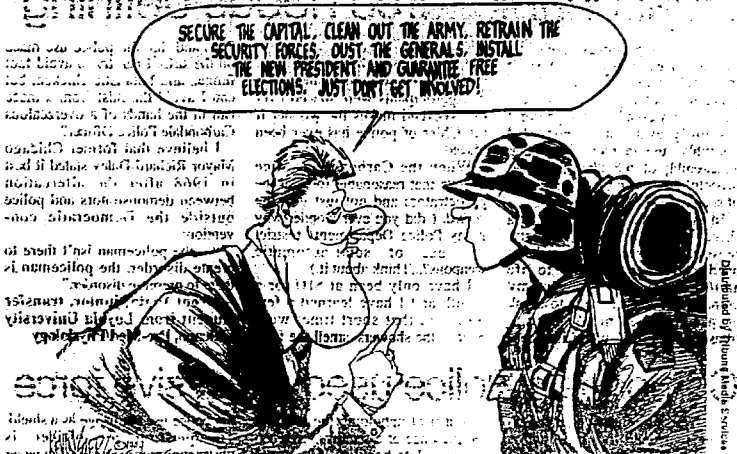

Something which must be carefully considered, at least more so than in 1990, are the current objectives of this new mission in the Gulf.

IF THE U.S. IS TO LEARN ANYTHING FROM the loosely-defined missions in Somalia and Haiti, it should be that a strong, well-defined mission is needed; a mission that will be carried out swiftly and thoroughly.

However, President Bill Clinton's public statements say little about what exactly the troops will do in Kuwait. Clinton has said, "We will not allow Saddam Hussein to defile the will of the United States and the international community."

The looming question left unanswered is, what is the will of the United States and how could it be accomplished? Without the clear objectives that were lacking in Desert Storm, it is entirely believable that the U.S. will again need to return to solve another Iraqi-sponsored crisis when Hussein gathers his strength again. Sending American lives into battle is not a decision to be taken lightly, and President Clinton must make sure he fully understands the severity of such a decision and what task it aims to meet.

But, if the U.S. is willing to go back into the Gulf to show some military muscle, it should flex it enough to solve the unfinished business that was left back in 1991.

SIUC government needs stronger voice in city affairs

After reading DE's coverage of the Halloween controversy there is one reality which comes across time and time again. It is a reality of the violence that seems to be part and parcel of this event. The article published in Thursday's paper addressing student government criticism of the City Council's action quotes both the President of USG and President of GPSC in regards to the violence that will occur.

It seems to me if the student government on this campus (or any other for that matter) wishes to be taken seriously then it needs to demonstrate a certain level of responsibility. I applaud USG's resolution to assist in cleaning up after the party but student government needs act on heading the potential violence off at the pass rather than give in to self-fulfilling prophecy. If student government is disregarded as a valid, authoritative voice when campus activities overlap the city's then members of the student government need to ask themselves why.

It would do well for both USG and GPSC to make an attempt to confirm to the City of Carbondale that they want to resolve the conflict and begin to work on a viable option for next year.

The relationship between the city and the students need not be adversarial especially in regards to something which lacks any meaning beyond self-gratification.

I think it is up to the student government to take the initiative and encourage the students of SIUC to show some respect for themselves and each other. There are consequences to action and early bar closing is one of them. Think about it.

—E. Jan Jacobs, graduate student, history

GPSC liaison defends actions, reacts to misinformed criticism

In response to the personal attack made by Robert T. Holmbeck and others with similar opinions, I in no way shape or form condone drinking and driving. It is easy to criticize people when only a part of what was said is presented. It is possible that the tabloid tactics of particular reports only presented what they wanted to and was taken out of context.

In a personal conversation that I had with Jeff Doherty, city manager of Carbondale, the problem of Halloween and drunk driving was addressed. Mr. Doherty acknowledged that drunk driving occurs on any given weekend. Therefore, people driving to Murphyboro for alcohol when bars close at 10 p.m. is expected.

In response, if students are going to drink and drive (which is a reality), then I would rather it be two blocks instead of 20 miles. I don't think anyone should drink and drive, but I do think that people should be realistic enough to understand that it will happen. We can offer cabs, friends to drive, and various other approaches to prevent such a tragedy. However, there will still be a handful who choose to take the risk.

Furthermore, the GPSC is not responsible for my presentation on Oct. 4, 1994. Their main concern has been for the safety of all students. Any further attacks should attempt to research the subject for which they speak of.

—Bradley J. Kelley, GPSC liaison

NMR director gives response to letter on page

On this page on October 7, Laurence Singer takes issue with the public safety initiative I proposed in my September 27 letter.

He argues against it chiefly because he thinks some drivers don't have the necessary skill to implement it correctly by engaging cyclists in collisions gently enough.

The corollary, obviously, is that almost any driver can engage a cyclist in a real humdinger of a collision. Singer appears to be arguing, then, a few humdingers are better than a bunch of wheelbenders when it comes to promoting the public good.

I might agree if he will concede that the humdingers will have less than their full effect unless the victims are left on display in the crosswalk (perhaps at the curb so as not to impede traffic to much).

This issue seems to call for referendum.

I will consider throwing my support to the Singer Initiative if he will agree to my stipulation about the corpses.

He has broader shoulders than do I, I must admit: my own conscience could have born the burden of a thousand wheelbenders more easily than one humdinger, but who is to say my concept of mercy is superior to his.

Reasonable force needs defining

I believe I read somewhere once, (perhaps it was scrawled on a wall) that individuals have a right to peaceful assembly. Perhaps there exists a gray area between peaceful assembly and not so peaceful assembly, and in those cases that an assembly of individuals is not so peaceful it may be in best interests of society to restore order.

In situations where there is a threat to life and property, reasonable force has often been used to limit the damage to life and/or property. But, in my opinion, the use of force to break up a fight does not constitute 'reasonable force' when innocent bystanders are affected.

The statement by the Chief of Police that it was unfortunate that non-participants were maced over the weekend makes me wonder if the Chief of Police has ever been maced.

When the Carbondale Police believe that reasonable force at the perpetrators and not just into the crowd, (did you ever wonder why many Police Departments restrict the use of semi-automatic weapons?...Think about it).

I have only been at SIU for a month and I have learned a few things in that short time: wear booties the showers, smell the food first, and that the police use mace on the strip. I can try to avoid foot fringes and bonfire chicken, but can I avoid the mace from a mace can in the hands of an overzealous Carbondale Police Officer?

I believe that former Chicago Mayor Richard Daley stated it best in 1968: after the altercation between demonstrators and police outside the Democratic convention:

"...the policeman isn't there to create disorder, the policeman is there to preserve disorder."

—Brent Ithets, Junior, transfer student from Loyola University Chicago, Pre-Med/Physiology

Carbondale Police used excessive force

A recent problem as confronted us that we need to address. I'm expressing my concern over the recent use of excessive force at the hands of the Carbondale Police Department on late night party revelers on the strip. The details could be recounted, but the subject should be familiar. Could this be a show of force of what to expect on Halloween?

I'm concerned, not that I believe the cops to be party-poopers, but the more serious overtones involved with above the law tactics used to stifle any form of crowd activity and subdue free will.

The cops will stand behind the platform of upholding the law, but the presence of a security force can only escalate hostility. An animal can be backed into a corner so far before it feels the need to strike and the police seem to be tightening the hold on the free will of the citizen. What can happen is, a sort of, "rebel without a cause theory", where if people are ordered what not to do, they react in opposite. I use myself as the proof. The right to gather may be abused in rare instances, but the police are quick to use strong arm tactics.

This goes beyond cops vs. drunks to the fact that we are often confronted with the realization that the police use the badge as a shield. To question an officer is obstruction, for example. I've never been served or protected by cops throughout the country and only been subjected to duress.

I won't believe that drunks are the core of strip hostility. Actions instigated by the police vs. party goer involvement escalates reported arrests and increased hostility. This can occur in numerous cases of public assembly.

I'm angry and frustrated and intend this to be my first step in some form of action.

—Eric Voss, undergraduate-undecided

Party affiliation not shown in signs

I have noticed that most of the political signs for the election do not give the name of the party the candidate belongs to. To name a few, Bost, Capps, Edgar and Wepsiec do not proclaim on their signs what party they belong to. I guess we have to wonder why this is. Are they ashamed of their political party? Or is it that they belong to a party so very unpopular that they dare not give its name? Are they Nazis? Are they Communists? Why are they hiding their party association? Jim Pribble is running for office and he puts a picture of a Jackass on his posters. Clearly he is telling us either that he associates with jackasses or that he is one. Carlton has a picture of an elephant, apparently meaning Republican.

He is not ashamed to admit that is a Republican, although considering what Republicans do he probably should be. Actually, he is the only Republican running from what I can see because I found no one else who puts it on posters. Some of you are thinking that's good, and let the best jackass win, but really if Democrats are less ashamed of what they do, they shouldn't be. If most of the politicians have become ashamed of who they affiliate with, it is an improvement. Previously they seemed to have no shame and no ethics either.

Eddie Murphy's movie "The Distinguished Gentleman," is probably the most accurate portrayal. It shows politicians to be greed goblins and power goblins who are completely insensitive as human beings. They wheel and deal in the most corrupt fashion to enrich themselves at the cost of hurting others. Some of us hope that these greed goblins and their sick system can be rehabilitated. Personally I doubt it. Most politicians are lawyers and probably never knew ethics or honest work even before politics.

'Scout' cracks homer, more to film than baseball

By Diane Dove
Staff Reporter

More like "Rain Man" than "Bull Durham," "The Scout" is a baseball comedy with something to please baseball lovers and non-fans alike.

Albert Brooks (who received a best supporting actor nomination for "Broadcast News"), gained 20 pounds to play the down-on-his-luck baseball scout, a move which paid off in his performance.

With his straw hat and protruding gut hanging over polyester pants, Brooks becomes Al Percolo, who makes a series of unfortunate draft choices and finds himself banished to Mexico — searching for potential Yankees among the local villagers.

Just when his job is going nowhere, he finds Steve Nebraska, played by Brendan Fraser ("Airheads"), a pitcher who can throw more than 100 miles per hour, has never given up a hit and bats like the best of them.

His only flaw is that he has the personality of an over-grown child whose behavior is indicative of deep-seated emotional problems.

Movie Review

'The Scout'

Directed by: Michael Ritchie; written by: Andrew Bergman and Monica Johnson; produced by: Albert S. Ruddy and Andre E. Morgan. A Twentieth Century Fox release. Playing at University Place 8, Illinois Centre 8. Running time: 1:50. MPAA rating: PG-13.

THE CAST

Al Percolo.....Albert Brooks
Steve Nebraska.....Brendan Fraser
Dr. Aaron.....Dianne Wiest
Lonnie Smith.....Ron Wilson

Fraser's performance captures the complexity of Steve's character, showing his charm, innocence, and vulnerability.

The film deals with Steve's fragile emotional state with the right blend of comedy and seriousness.

Al needs a letter from a

"THE SCOUT"

psychiatrist stating that Steve is mentally fit to play baseball. So Al brings Steve to the first psychiatrist listed in the yellow pages — Dr. Aaron, played by Dianne Wiest (who won an academy award for "Hannah and Her Sisters").

Wiest deserves credit not only for delivering a good performance, but for finding a good role in a motion picture industry where films are primarily dominated by male characters.

"Although the film's climax is less than believable, the film resists including the sensationalism of repressed memories that is so typical of movies dealing with mental illness."

With screenplay by Andrew Bergman, Albert Brooks and Monica Johnson, and direction by Michael Ritchie, "The Scout" is more of a buddy film than a baseball film.

But baseball fans will likely enjoy seeing George Steinbrenner, Steve Garvey, and Keith Hernandez, among other baseball greats playing themselves in cameo roles.

The real reason to see the film, however, is to watch the development of its fictional characters.

Iraq still the 'bad boy' of Middle East

Newsday

BAGHDAD, Iraq—In the wake of its pledge to turn its soldiers around and away from the tense border with Kuwait, Iraq Tuesday basked once more in the spotlight as the unpredictable bad boy of the Middle East.

A diplomat who spoke with senior Iraqi officials Tuesday described them not only as satisfied but as "very smug" that their military show of force near the Kuwaiti border succeeded in provoking the United States to a major deployment in the Persian Gulf.

But he echoed the sentiments of many ordinary Iraqis and foreign envoys when he expressed worry about what comes next.

"My view," the diplomat said, speaking on condition he not be identified, "is that we haven't seen the real crisis yet."

Speaking in the language of troop movements and tank maneuvers, Iraq has succeeded in focusing world attention on its demand for an end to the trade embargo that has been choking its people for more than four years.

between 1970 and 1994. According to the Higher Education Price Index, IBHE recommended that tuition increase by only 313.2% between these years.

Bill Hall, Graduate and Professional Student Council representative for community development, said he questions why the state bothers to establish a board of higher education if the recommendations it makes are not followed by state institutions.

"These figures (showing how SIUC has overshot IBHE recommendations) belies publicly stated goals by IBHE that tuition should correspond with the higher education price index," he said. "They are the fault of the board of trustees for not following the guidelines, but they are also the fault of IBHE for consciously deciding not to enforce guidelines."

Susan Hall, former GPSC president, said it is possible for IBHE to coax universities into following guidelines by reducing the budget it requests for the institutions from the Illinois General Assembly and the governor.

"Sometimes in the past, IBHE has enforced its guidelines by reducing the state budget for universities that don't follow its requests," she said.

"They (IBHE) can just reduce the budget by the size of the tuition waivers that universities give to say, out of state students."

Hall also said IBHE recommends that tuition at state institutions only account for about 30-percent of instructional costs.

Walter Rehwaldt, SIUC assistant to vice chancellor of financial affairs, said the University projects that with the proposed tuition increase for fall 1995, tuition dollars will fund 45-percent of instructional costs. This exceeds IBHE recommendations for funding of instructional costs by 15 percent.

Tuition levels provided by the SIUC budget office and the chancellor's office show that tuition at SIUC went up by 1,019 percent between 1970 and 1994.

Bill Hall said by not meeting IBHE's recommended levels of tuition, SIUC demonstrates the inefficiency of the entire university system in Illinois.

"Both IBHE and the (SIU) Board of Trustees are appointed by the governor and one member from each board is also a voting member on IBHE," Bill said.

"Yet, board members vote on IBHE to set certain tuition levels, and then they walk out and come back to their universities where they vote to violate their own rules."

William Norwood, board member, said at the Sept. 8 board meeting that in order to keep pace with other state institutions, SIUC should actually increase tuition beyond the level of inflation.

Hall said that exceeding recommended IBHE tuition levels is a trend that exists in all state universities.

Troops prepare for Aristide's return

Newsday.

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — U.S. infantrymen Tuesday swept through the Presidential Palace and surrounding government buildings, telling employees of the old regime to pack their bags and leave.

The forced-house-cleaning was one of the final moves before the scheduled Saturday return of exiled

President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

Crowds of Haitians, most of them unemployed, shouted insults and made threatening gestures at the departing workers. U.S. troops also were on the streets to maintain order.

There was no reported resistance, except for grumblings from some officials caught off guard by the surprise maneuver.

Aristide's ministers are expected to enter the buildings Wednesday and to resume business that was cut short when the Haitian army overthrew the president in a Sept. 30, 1991 coup.

Tuesday's development appeared to end the five-month reign of military-installed de facto President Emile Jonassaint, a former Haiti Supreme Court judge.

Think of the six women closest to you.

Now guess
which one will be raped this year.

One out of six college women will be sexually assaulted this year. But you can change the odds of it happening. Simply by trying to avoid situations that leave you or your friends vulnerable.

For starters, follow security measures. Don't prop residence hall doors open. Walk with a friend after dark. And be aware that date rape is a major problem on college campuses. With many of these rapes involving drinking.

Then share these facts with six of your friends. And maybe none of them will become another statistic.

Crime Watch

Carbondale Police are investigating an aggravated robbery that occurred at approximately 8:49 p.m. Oct. 10 at Times Square Liquors, 1702 W. Main.

The suspect entered the store and asked the cashier for change. When the cashier opened the register, the suspect indicated he had a weapon under his coat and demanded money.

The suspect fled the store after getting money from the cashier. The suspect is described as a black male, 20-25 years old, 5'10"-5'11", 150-160 pounds, with a "fade" type haircut. He was last seen wearing tan pants, a tan coat, tennis shoes, and a dark-colored baseball cap turned backward.

The total loss amount is unavailable. If you have information about the case, please call the Carbondale Police at 549-COPS. If you provide information leading to an arrest, you may be eligible for a reward of up to $1000.

Tahiti trip allows students sample of native biology

By Aaron Butler
Staff Reporter

SIUC students and others will have the opportunity to see some of the world's most beautiful islands this December, when the department of plant biology leads a two-week field study to Tahiti.

The trip will be lead by Dave Brussell, author of "Poisons, Poisons and Panaceas," and tour guide for the plant biology department. Brussell has led two previous field studies for SIUC, one to Hawaii and one to North Africa and the Iberian Peninsula.

The December trip will be focused around five areas of study: ethnobotany, archaeology, taxonomy, history of medicine, and marine biology.

Brussell said the tour will involve collecting specimens of Polynesian plant life, pressing them, and bringing them back to be studied in the plant biology herbarium.

"We will see many exotic tropical plants," he said. "We will also interview natives about the traditional healing and medicinal uses of some plant life."

"People learn a lot on location. There are so many limitations to what one can learn vicariously, and travel gives you experiences that will be with you forever."

The expedition will visit four Polynesian islands: Tahiti, Huahine, Moorea and Bora Bora.

"These are some of the most beautiful islands in the world" said Brussell. "James Michener said Bora Bora was the most beautiful place in the world, and Marlon Brando actually bought an island there."

this trip will be to find a specimen of the Piper Peryphyticum, a plant known for its pain relief properties.

"This plant is found in Hawaii, and I would like to find a specimen in Tahiti," he said. "It would be interesting to see how the Tahitian uses correspond to those in Hawaii, because Tahitians are known to have settled Hawaii."

Other highlights of the trip will include a visit to an underwater observatory, an authentic Tahitian luau, and visits to the museums and galleries of Tahiti. Brussell said the trip will not be just for students, but for anyone interested in seeing more than just the typical tourist sights.

"Tahiti is an expensive destination," he said. "However, every effort is being made to make the trip as affordable as possible. The cost should be approximately $3,000, but negotiations are not yet finalized."

Students who take the trip can earn up to four credits depending on the amount of specimen collecting and research they want to do. Credit is available for Biology 210, and Plant Biology 391 and 492. Anyone interested in registering for the trip may contact David Brussell at 536-2331.

Infants lack medical care in America

Newsday

Less than half of America's children—less than a third among blacks—get adequate preventive medical care in their first eight months of life, according to a new study to be published in Wednesday's Journal of the American Medical Association.

In several articles and an editorial, the journal focuses on the widely reported failure to deliver immunizations and other preventive care to the nation's children. Experts say this is the main reason for recent marked increases in measles and whooping cough cases.

The journal authors agreed free vaccines are not a complete solution, and several urged that doctors themselves make greater efforts to keep track of whether infant patients have had the three sets of shots they need.

The study of preventive care found three-quarters of the infants studied had had at least two "well-child" doctor visits by eight months of age—but only 46 percent of whites and 34 percent of blacks had received the recommended immunizations against diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus and polio.

The study, an analysis of federal health data by a team of University of Washington researchers, involved 7,035 infants born in 1988.

Like previous studies, it found private health insurance meant improved care, with 47 percent of white infants and 33 percent of black infants getting both visits and shots. Among infants on publicly funded Medicaid, only 28 percent of whites and 27 percent of blacks received adequate early care, the study said.

Fall picnics often high in fat, calories

By Kage Zager
Student Health Programs

This time of year, summer takes her leave and grants us crisp, clear days, new challenges, football and cookouts.

What could be more appealing than a sunny Saturday outside in the Southern Illinois fall, grilling burgers or dogs with a few of your closest friends?

Sausages, cheese dips, chips, barbecue... beer. The basics.

Sure, this type of fare is great occasionally, but some die-hards may want to consider the consequences of a steady diet of picnicking.

Let's look at this new American tradition strictly from a nutritional standpoint.

One regular 12-ounce beer has about 150 calories, a light beer about 100. Four ounces of wine and one shot of liquor have 100 calories.

New research is showing that the way alcohol is processed in the body slows the burning of fat.

One ounce of chips has 150 calories and approximately 10-15 grams of fat.

Pretzels, on the other hand, have about 110 calories and two grams of fat per ounce.

So what is a healthy picnicker to do?

One way of avoiding extra energy intake is to join the ever-growing force of designated drivers.

Let's face it — somebody has to drive the truck home.

Besides drinks, picnickers traditionally pack their coolers and picnic baskets with high-fat, high-sodium brats, mayonnaise-based salads and salami-type cold cuts.

You can still pack homemade cole slaw and potato salad with low- or no-fat dressings, turkey sandwiches, fresh fruits and vegetables and fruit-flavored club sodas for liquid refreshment.

Some suggestions for tasty tailgate fare might include chunks of steamed potatoes and carrots with white wine vinegar, thyme and freshly ground pepper.

Or try tri-color pasta, cubes of lean ham, cauliflower and broccoli florets tossed with fat-free Italian dressing, or elbow macaroni, cubes of low-fat cheese, sliced celery, carrots and chick peas, tossed with a splash of fat-free dressing.

When packing a cooler or picnic basket, remember to pack moist ingredients such as sliced tomatoes, lettuce leaves and onion rings in small, tightly covered plastic containers.

Add the veggies to the sandwiches just before eating.

Use plenty of ice to keep salads, sandwiches and desserts cold.

Commercial "blue ice" or ice packed into tightly covered plastic containers will keep everything cold and dry.

Pack hot foods separately, and insulate the food containers with several layers of paper.

Take only the amount you plan to eat.

Leftovers can spoil, and even the designated driver will be spending Sunday with a nasty "hangover."

Cookouts are great fun — and they can be healthy and safe.

For more information on healthy eating, contact the Student Health Programs Wellness Center at 536-4441.

make contact with the office if their address changes.

"The biggest thing is getting students registered to vote before they go away to school," Rycyzyn said.

He said absentee voting picks up as election day draws near, but encourages all voters to get their applications and ballots in early.

John Shull, treasurer for SIUC's College Democrats, said it does not matter where students are registered to vote, just as long as they make their voice heard.

Shull said he has been concentrating on registering Carbondale voters because student involvement is the key.

He has been focusing on student registration.

"Right now students don't have much power when it comes to city government," he said.

"If students become involved, government officials become more aware of student issues."

Mike Tartaglione, director of public relations for the College Republicans, said his organization has been actively soliciting votes and has registered more than 100 new and absentee voters in the past two months.

He said a large number of voters came from Cook, DuPage and Will counties.

"There's no question that students are a big powerhouse on this campus and candidates look for their support," he said.

"Without student votes we don't get our voice across — we make sure the officials hear us and respond."

Tartaglione agreed with Shull in that the party preference of the ballot does not matter, as long as a ballot is cast.

Report, SIU Sports Weekly and is vice president of the International Television Association.

Heather Greeling, a sophomore in speech communication from Jerseyville, is running for queen representing PRSSA.

Greeling, member of SIUC's varsity women's track and field team, said she already has a lot of experience representing the University.

"Every time I go out and compete, I feel I am representing SIU," she said.

"I am into both academics and leadership and I feel I represent the student's keeping all this together."

Greeling also is a member of the Alpha Lambda Delta Honor Society, Pi Mu Epsilon Honor Society and Pyramid Public Relations.

Angie Snyder, a junior in speech communications from Murphysboro, was elected for candidacy by the Panhellenic Council.

Snyder, a member of the Sigma Kappa sorority, said she is involved in many aspects of the University including PRSSA, American Marketing Association, SIU Night Report and a member of the Saluki Shaker Dance team.

"I would like to represent every aspect of the campus and student body," she said.

"Whatever the turnout, I am excited to be a part of it."

Christine Sokolowski, a senior in advertising from Chillicothe, was nominated for candidacy by the Student Orientation Committee.

"I decided to accept the nomination; first because I'm a non-traditional student — I'm married," she said.

"But most important, I've been extremely involved in the University since I've been here."

Sokolowski said she is not the stereotypical SIUC student.

"I have the grades and I don't represent the party school image," she said.

"I think I represent what the University represents."

Sokolowski also is a member of several organizations including the Hall Council, American Advertising Federation, Saluki Advertising, Gamnia Beta Phi Honorary Society and Golden Key National Honor Society.

"I have been here four years and I'm the regular age, I'm 21," she said. "I was married in May, and my husband is in the Army in Virginia, but I chose to stay at Southern."

Elections are 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. today in the Student Center Hall of Fame.

This year's king and queen winners will be announced during half time at Saturday's football game.

CRAB ORCHARD SUPERFUND SITE,
WILLIAMSON COUNTY, ILLINOIS

The Department of the Army is conducting a remedial investigation and feasibility study of the Explosives/Munitions Manufacturing Areas Operable Unit at the Crab Orchard Wildlife Refuge Superfund Site near Marion, Illinois. This is one of five operable units or projects on the Superfund site. A Public Meeting will be conducted to discuss the results of the remedial investigation and the preliminary selection of a cleanup approach. The meeting will be conducted at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, November 1, 1994 at:

Visitor's Center
Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge
Route 148,
Two miles south of New Route 13
Marion, Illinois 62959

The investigation included fifteen separate areas on the Refuge where munitions and explosive materials were either destroyed or buried. The results of the investigation identified three areas where development of cleanup options was necessary. Cleanup options were determined and evaluated in the feasibility study. The feasibility study identifies the preliminary cleanup option that is most appropriate for the three areas.

The Visitor's Center is accessible to the mobility impaired. If you require hearing assistance please contact Vanessa Musgrave at the number below to make appropriate accommodations.

Copies of the preliminary results and other site-related documents are available for review at the following information repositories:

these books to cover the costs of operation.

SIUC tried book exchange programs between 1982 and 1989, but they were relatively unprofitable.

"They failed because of lack of student interest," Sherman said. "It was such a long, drawn-out process that students didn't want to wait after break to trade their books."

Sherman said all matches will be made by 5 p.m. on the Friday of exams, and if a match isn't found, the students can take their books to the bookstore to trade them in.

He said he believes students will want the exchange program.

"The bookstore has almost a monopoly. Not to say anything against them (the bookstore), but students need a cheaper way to get their books, and the bookstore charges what they want," he said.

Sherman said he has been working with the Student Center director, and he has not indicated any concerns about hurting the University Bookstore's business.

Lee Blankenship, manager of 710 Bookstore, said the exchange program has flaws.

"The problem with that program is that (they do not) guarantee that the students get the right books. With this (710's) type of system, you're guaranteed to get the right book," he said.

The only costs planned for the exchange are for the difference between the costs of books being exchanged, and the usage charge for the program.

USG president Edwin Sawyer said he believes a book exchange program is needed.

"There is absolutely a need for an exchange program," he said. "It can benefit the students, and that's our main concern. Textbooks cost a lot of money, and students can buy them for cheap (through the exchange)."

Sawyer said minimizing program costs was USG's biggest concern.

"Getting the ballroom space and minimizing the costs are the big-gest concerns," he said. "This is a non-profit program. Any costs we have, that's where the profit will go."

Sawyer said Sherman began organizing the exchange during the 1994 campaigns for student government, and was given a committee early in the summer to get it running.

called the Illinois State Liquor Commission and had them contact the Carbondale liquor commission. Still, Flicker's was unable to do business Thursday, he said.

"I feel the city wasn't willing to work with me," he said.

The matter will now go back to the commission on Oct. 18, when they will decide whether to suspend the Flicker's liquor license, reprimand them or possibly fine them, City Attorney Sharon Hammer said.

The quarterly numbers for liquor violations by local establishments, made public at last week's meeting, show an astounding rise in violations from the same time last year.

The report numbers, totaled by police, were documented violations at 11 local liquor establishments.

The violations include underage possession, illegal entry by patrons under 19, illegal sale to minors, allowing patrons to leave with liquor and remaining open past designated closing hours.

Combined totals of violations for ten of the establishments show 258 violations in the first quarter of this year as opposed to only 77 violations overall during the first quarter of 1993-94.

"I feel the city wasn't willing to work with me (on the liquor license requirements)."

—Sam Mustafa

The eleventh establishment, Flicker's Restaurant and Pub, was not open during the first quarter last year, but had 46 liquor violations in the first quarter this year.

Of those 46, all but two of the violations were for underage possession.

Get Ready For Christmas & Spring Break With Worldwide Travel Service Club, Inc.

What is a Travel Service Club?

What our club does for our members is to find for them the lowest published price of any travel package and give them up to 50% of the commission paid to our travel agency by the travel package provider. The commission is what is negotiable, whether it be for domestic or worldwide travel.

Savings

Worldwide will negotiate for the highest percentage of commission from the travel providers, whether it be air lines, hotels, trains or cruise lines. Worldwide will also find the lowest published price for a travel package.

Price

The annual price is only $29.95. There are no additional or hidden costs. Members can save a lot more than the membership cost, whether it be one person or six. Allows six people on one membership.

Top-ranked college football teams suffering from unexpected upsets

The Baltimore Sun

MIAMI—In the tunnel of the Orange Bowl late Saturday night, Florida State football coach Bobby Bowden was asked if his Seminoles still could win the national championship after their 34-20 loss to Miami. "I don't know, but at least we'll have a chance to play the No. 1 team," Bowden said. "If we beat them, then we could be right back here (Jan. 2) against Colorado."

Bowden is assuming Florida still will be No. 1 when the Gators play in Tallahassee, Fla., Nov. 26. He apparently also is of the belief the Buffaloes will stay unbeaten and win the Big Eight — meaning they will beat Nebraska in Lincoln Oct. 29.

Considering Florida won't play away from "The Swamp" until it meets the Seminoles in the regular-season finale, considering the fragile state of the Cornhuskers at quarterback, Bowden's assumption easily could become reality.

But considering what happened in the course of several hours Saturday, when three of the nation's top eight teams were beaten, nothing is a lock. "It's been a crazy year," Big East associate commissioner Tom McElroy said in the press box at the Orange Bowl.

It could get crazier this week, when Florida plays No. 6 Auburn, which is still unbeaten under Terry Bowden (its 17-game winning streak is the nation's longest in Division I-A) and still on NCAA probation, ineligible for a bowl game.

Hoops coach critical of beer, ACC alliance

The Baltimore Sun

North Carolina basketball Coach Dean Smith frequently spouts coaching clichés with the best of his brethren. But his recent comments, assailing the Atlantic Coast Conference for an unholy alliance with beer television sponsors, were entirely appropriate and correct.

In a program that will air next month on North Carolina public television, Smith said he had written to each of the nine presidents of conference schools for their support in getting beer ads off ACC telecasts, but had only heard from North Carolina State chancellor Larry Monteith.

"It's a shame that the worst problem they have on the campuses now is alcohol consumption," Smith told the Charlotte Observer. "From (ages) 18 to 25, the leading cause of death is alcohol-related. And our presidents could change that."

Smith, who once was arrested for drunken driving, blasted the conference for allowing ACC basketball announcers to say, "And now, a word from our good friends at Budweiser," going into breaks.

Though everyone knows that beer ads are the mother's milk of televised sports, there's something troubling about promoting a product that three-quarters of college students can't legally purchase or consume during a college game.

And though many Anheuser-Busch spots promote responsibility in drinking, the links between irresponsible conduct and alcohol consumption are far too strong for beer ads to be a part of ACC basketball telecasts.

Score the basket for Smith on this matter.

So this could be Auburn's national championship game. And it also should be the toughest test the Gators, who are banged up along the offensive line, will get in the watered-down Southeastern Conference this year.

"It'll be a good time to play somebody like that, someone we need to focus on," Florida receiver Jack Jackson said after the Gators looked a bit lethargic in the second half of a 42-18 win over LSU. "We definitely need to step it up a lot."

So does Nebraska, which has lost starting quarterback Tommie Frazier for the season with blood clots in his leg and backup Brook Berringer with a lung injury. The Cornhuskers could go into this week's game against unbeaten and No. 16 Kansas State with No. 3 quarterback Matt Turman.

And then there's Penn State. The Nittany Lions, who moved to No. 3 after Florida State's loss, come back from a week off to play No. 5 Michigan in Ann Arbor, Mich. A victory over the Wolverines could pave the way for an unbeaten season, but the Nittany Lions still have to play at Illinois and Indiana in November.

Two teams saw their national championship aspirations crushed Saturday. Then-eighth-ranked Notre Dame, which had lost at home to Michigan, was upset at Boston College, 30-11. And then No. 6 Arizona fell out of the hunt after being upset at home, by Colorado State, 21-16.

"I knew this would be a long, hard year," Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz said. "I knew that. But sometimes you've got to take a step back to take a step forward, and we will take a couple of steps forward."

Though Nov. 12's much-anticipated rematch between the Irish and Seminoles in Orlando, Fla., has fizzled — after being billed last year as "Game of the Century II," it probably won't be the game of the week — there are some significant showdowns looming after this week.

The first will come Oct. 29, when Colorado travels to Nebraska. If the Cornhuskers can stay unbeaten, this may wind up being the biggest game at Memorial Stadium since the 1987 megamatchup with Oklahoma. The winner likely will go to the Federal Express Orange Bowl for a shot at a national championship.

New York's Taylor retires; fans present giant send-off

Newsday

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J.—The idea was for New York Giants fans to say their formal goodbyes and thank yous to Lawrence Taylor Monday night, but No. 56 made sure to return the sentiment.

"This is about me and you, the Giants fans, because you've always been there," Taylor told the capacity crowd during ceremonies retiring his number at halftime of the game against the Minnesota Vikings at Giants Stadium. "No matter what was said, no matter what was written, no matter what's been going on in my personal life, we've always been in this together. Without you guys, there would've been a Lawrence Taylor, but there wouldn't have been an LT."

With that, the crowd resumed its chant of "L-T, L-T" and the man many consider the greatest linebacker in NFL history took a celebratory lap around the field in a golf cart.

Many fans arrived at the stadium wearing replica No. 56 jerseys, ready to see the team's first number retirement since 1972 and eighth overall.

One banner said, "See you in Ohio, 1999," a reference to the Pro Football Hall of Fame in Canton. Another said, "There's nothing more that can be said. LT, we'll miss you."

Taylor watched the first half with about 25 friends and family members from an open-air patio just to the left of the press box. He wore a black Giants turtleneck sweater and a black sportsjacket.

The brief ceremony began with video highlights of Taylor on the scoreboard, including a memorable clip in which he exhorts his teammates, saying, "Let's go out and be like a bunch of crazed dogs and have some fun."

Mara presented the familiar No. 56 to Taylor, who put it on and addressed the fans. "I should be nervous, but I'm not, because I'm in my house," he said to thunderous applause. He called the moment one of the three most memorable of his visits to Giants Stadium.

Beathard's replacement decisions ensure winning track for Chargers

Newsday

San Diego Chargers General Manager Bobby Beathard stood in a corner of the hotel lobby with a haggard look on his face. He was about to announce to a handful of reporters that he would not match Denver's four-year, $10.4-million free-agent offer to his best wide receiver, Anthony Miller.

"It was a very difficult decision," Beathard said during a break from the NFL owners meetings in Orlando last March. "But if we matched it, it would have limited us in other areas and would have affected some of the things we wanted to do."

Good thinking. While Beathard didn't like seeing his prized receiver go to a divisional opponent, he knew he'd have plenty of salary-cap room left over to improve his team at other positions. Given the Chargers' 5-0 start, Beathard's foresight couldn't have been more accurate.

While Miller has been average in Denver, the Chargers have thrived despite the loss of him and several others who were traded or signed elsewhere as free agents. And if outside observers were concerned about the offseason moves, Beathard wasn't. Regardless of which player left, Beathard had a capable replacement: —On the day Miller was let go, Beathard traded for seldom-used Miami Dolphins wide receiver Tony Martin. An uneven tradeoff, perhaps, but Beathard knew he also had unheralded young receivers Mark Seay and Stan Jefferson in reserve. And Martin hasn't been bad either; remember his 99-yard touchdown reception in a 24-10 win over the Seahawks? —The Chargers traded bruising running back Marion Butts to the New England Patriots on draft day, making second-year runner Natrone Means a starter. Means has responded with a brilliant effort, rushing for 466 yards in five games. That projects to a 1,491-yard season. —Beathard made no move to keep backup quarterback John Friesz, who signed a one-year free-agent deal with the Washington Redskins. That meant there would be no quarterback controversy with Stan Humphries, who was in and out of the lineup last season because of shoulder problems. Humphries has been superbly efficient, throwing for 1,155 yards, seven touchdowns and only two interceptions. —Defensive end Burt Grossman was traded to the Philadelphia Eagles on April 7, and Beathard replaced him by signing Arizona Cardinals free-agent defensive tackle Reuben Davis, a super run stopper.

Grossman's departure also has meant a featured role for third-year lineman Chris Mims. —And when linebacker Gary Plummer signed with the San Francisco 49ers, Beathard got Detroit Lions free agent Dennis Gibson.

"We felt good about the moves that we made going into the season," Beathard said. "We thought we'd be in good shape."

Try great shape. After last year's disappointing 8-8 season, the Chargers now face an eight-game stretch in which only two of their opponents have winning records.

As long as they remain relatively healthy, they are a lock to make the playoffs.

But then they have to worry about getting home-field advantage in the postseason. Great start or not, they don't want to be visiting Buffalo Jan. 15 for the American Football Conference Championship Game.

Japanese baseball's rookie is inexpensive powerhouse

Los Angeles Times

TOKYO—How much would an 'American baseball' team offer a 20-year-old rookie center fielder who set a record for reaching base safely in consecutive games, broke the old mark for the most hits — with an average of 1.6 a game — batted around 400 nearly all season and lifted his team into pennant contention?

In Japan, the price is $120,000.

No, that's not the pay per hit, or per game. That's the salary for the entire 1994 season.

Ichiro Suzuki, a 6-foot, 165-pound left-handed leadoff batter, started the season so obscurely that his team, the Orix BlueWave of Kobe, figured it had to do something to set him apart from tens of thousands of Japanese with the name as common as Smith.

So they sewed only his first name on his uniform.

By June, Ichiro needed no further promotion.

As his average shot above .400 and he launched an on-base streak of 69 consecutive games — in three of those he got no hits but was walked — Japan suddenly had a new national hero.

By September, as he approached 200 hits, fans started chanting, "Ichiro! Ichiro!" every time he came to bat.

A 200-hit season is rare enough in American baseball with a 162-game season. In Japan's 59 years of baseball, where seasons have been limited to 130 games since 1966, no one had ever had more than 191.

Ichiro broke that mark in his 116th game, passed the 200-mark with four hits in Game 122 and finished the season with 210.

Only at the end did he suffer a slump. From 396, his average fell to .385, and in Games 127 and 128 — for the first time all season — he went two games in a row without a hit.

Randy Bass' 1986 Japanese record of .389 fell out of reach.

Even so, Ichiro failed to get a hit in only 13 of 130 games.

Women's team may capture America's Cup

The Washington Post

This might not be the best year for women in politics, but women can take comfort that 1994 looks like a watershed year in boating.

The first women's America's Cup team, America 3, was pegged by a key male rival this week as a favorite to win the International America's Cup World Championships in San Diego later this month. "I think they'll do extremely well," said John Marshall of the rival, all-male PACT 95 syndicate. "They could very well be the favorites going in."

Meantime, Isabelle Autissier of France, the lone woman skipper when the BOC Single-handed 'Round-the-World Race left Charleston, S.C., last month, not only led her eight rivals in the 60-foot big-boat class in the race to South Africa, she was ahead by hundreds of miles.

More than halfway into the five-week, 7,500-mile first leg to Cape Town, the 37-year-old Autissier was 420 miles ahead of her nearest rival, Jean Luc Van den Heede, and more than 500 miles ahead of the defending BOC champion, 1991 winner Christophe Auguin.

She was not the beneficiary of some fluky breeze that pushed her up front unexpectedly. She's led almost the whole leg, and with 2,678 miles to go is unlikely to fall out of first place, barring a sea calamity, said BOC spokesman Dan O'Connell, who monitors daily positions via computer in Seattle.

"She's way ahead of everyone," said McConnell. "It's really pretty amazing."

Autissier was first in the 20-boat BOC fleet to cross the Equator on Friday, when her lead was 317 miles. But as her 60-foot, water-ballasted sloop Ecoreil Poitou Charentes 2 slid south into fresher breezes along the African coast, she was first to the better winds and stretched out the advantage.

Her strong showing is doubly impressive considering that Autissier's boat was swamped by a Gulf Stream wave on her way to Charleston.

Victory keeps Northern Iowa on top

Gridders fight for hard wins in Gateway

By Grant Deady
Sports Editor

Gateway Conference football hit its mid-season mark Saturday and Northern Iowa continues to have a strangle hold on the league title hopes.

UNI head coach Terry Allen guided his team from the press box in the first half and his Panthers responded with a 19-7 win over Eastern Illinois.

Allen went to the unorthodox coaching technique because of the unpredictability of the Eastern defense.

"We decided to do it in the middle of the week," he said. "Eastern always throws something different at us defensively, so I went upstairs in the first half."

Northern Iowa was led by running back Sylvester Brown, who racked up a career-high 84 yards in a backup role to injured teammate Jason Hamrock.

After the game, Brown received the game ball for UNI.

"This is my first game ball," Brown said. "I got my first breakaway touchdown of the season, last week I got my first start."

EIU's Willie High plowed through one of the Gateway's hard defenses for 139 yards on 32 carries, which was his second-best total of the season.

The Gateway defensive player-of-the-week emerged from UNI, though, as linebacker Paul Wolf (6-5, 235) racked up 10 tackles (six solo) and recovered a blocked punt in the end zone.

For the first time in eight tries, Illinois State beat Southwest Missouri State, 28-14.

SMSU (0-5) is off to its worst start since 1973, while the Redbirds (3-3, 2-1) moved into a three-way tie for second place in the conference with Western Illinois and Indiana State.

Thompson picked up 163 yards on 37 carries for the Birds and punt returner Deon McDaniel grabbed Gateway special teams player-of-the-week honors by returning three punts for 60 yards.

Illinois State offensive tackle Corey Mackey gave his teammates some high praise after the Redbird victory.

"They're a great bunch of guys," Mackey said. "It's hard to explain. These are the guys you name your kids after. We get along so well."

The Bears are a minus nine in the turnover ratio category this season, which ranks 110th out of the 117 Division I-AA teams.

SMSU is dead last in the nation in pass defense.

Indiana State rebounded from a week five loss to Northern Iowa and captured a road win at SIUC, 27-14.

Sycamore tailback David Wright rushed for 148 yards on 33 carries and was named the Gateway offensive player-of-the-week.

Wright scored two touchdowns for the Indiana State offense that controlled the ball for over 38 minutes of the game.

seventh consecutive game and moved into fourth on the SIUC all-time list with 18 TD tosses.

Southeast Missouri State will visit Carbondale Saturday to take on the Dawgs in a Gateway, Ohio Valley Conference crossover.

Indiana State head coach Dennis Raetz was elated over his team's performance against SIUC after the tough loss to UNI the week before.

"This was just a major, major win for us," Raetz said. "We lost a heartbreaker last week at home to Northern Iowa and I wasn't sure how the team would respond. I challenged our players before the game today, and they were up to that challenge."

Women putters finish 17th; men's golf tees to 4th place

The SIUC men's golf team finished fourth among the 18 teams that competed at the Bradley University Fall Classic over the weekend, despite a strong individual effort from one of its players.

Quinn McClure led the Salukis with a three-round 228 (74-76-78), good enough for sixth place in the 93-player field. SIUC's Steve Irish also finished in the top-ten with a score of 231 (76-77-77).

As a team, the Dawgs finished fourth with a score of 926. The Salukis finished behind defending champion Southeast Missouri State (907), Toledo (909) and Illinois State (916). The fourth-place finish was the Salukis' best this season.

Despite the improvement from SIUC's sixth-place finish at last weekend's D.A. Weinberg Invitational, Saluki golf coach Gene Shanefelt said the team is still playing short of his expectations.

"Everybody is still three or four shots off of where they can be," he said. "The goal is to get the kids to play as well as they can, and they're not quite there yet."

The men's golf team has this week off to prepare for the 20-team Elkin's Lake Invitational, Oct. 19-21. It will be the last tournament on the Saluki's fall schedule.

Shanefelt said that in order for SIUC to do well at the Elkin's Lake tournament, his squad will have to play its best golf.

"This will be the toughest competition we'll have this fall," he said. "We'll have to play better than we have been. If we don't, you might see us finish 14th or 15th."

The news was not quite so good for the women's golf team in its weekend tournament.

"We've got a great spring schedule, and I'm excited about it. I'm also encouraged because everyone will have that experience under their belts."

At the Saluki women's last fall tournament, the Lady Kat Invitational, SIUC finished 17th in the 20-team field, shooting a three-round 1000 — 100 strokes behind winner Wake Forest.

SIUC women's golf coach Diane Daugherty said the 17th-place finish was not what she had envisioned for her team.

"I was hoping to be in the top half of the field," she said. "The first two days were rough. We were playing 15 holes well, and on the other three, we fell off the face of the earth."

"We played in the rain the last day and played better than we did the previous two days."

All of the Salukis finished in the bottom half of the 103-player field. The best finish by an SIUC golfer was Lieschen Eller, who garded a three-round 244 (80-87-77), good enough for 60th place. The rest of the Salukis finished 83rd, 87th, and 89th.

Daugherty said although the squad had a rough outing at the Lady Kat, she was pleased with the season as a whole.

"It was a disappointing way to end the season, but we played well this fall. We've got a great spring schedule, and I'm excited about it," she said. "I'm also encouraged, because everyone will have that experience under their belts. I'm confident we'll be ready for the spring."

Daehler named MVC runner-of-week

By Doug Durso
Senior Reporter

A SIUC women's cross country runner won an award for the third straight week Tuesday, and this time it was the other senior co-captain.

Debby Daehler from Zion, won the Missouri Valley Conference women's cross country athlete-of-the-week after a seventh-place seventh-place finish out of 22 teams. Despite finishing seventh out of the 184 runners, only two NCAA runners finished ahead of Daehler as she ran the 5,000m meet in a time of 18 minutes.

Daehler said she is pleased to be selected and it is a great honor.

"This is my first time being selected as the athlete-of-the-week, so it is extremely special to win this," she said.

SIUC's women's cross country coach, Don DeNoon said that Daehler ran really well at the invitational and has done well all season.

"Debby has been consistent all year and really ran a strong race at the invitational," he said.

This is the third week in a row a Saluki women runner has won the award and the fourth time this year. The three previous times, senior co-captain Jennie Homer has won the award.

Daehler said she ran a good race because of the competition that was involved at Notre Dame.

"I beat runners that were in the nationals last year, so that was real exciting," she said.

"The competition was really tough and that pushed me harder, but I did not run as hard as I am capable of," she said.

Daehler and the rest of the Salukis will be heading to Starkville for the Mississippi State Invitational on Oct. 15.
