Faculty Senate OKs tuition waiver

By Brian Gross
Staff Writer

Dependents of SIU employees should receive at least partial tuition waivers, a resolution passed Tuesday by the Faculty Senate said.

The resolution declared the senate's support of a tuition waiver for all full-time employees.

"The big benefit is that it helps recruit good faculty and brings some good students here," Phillip K. Davis, chairman of the budget committee, said. "With the small (proposed salary) increase, we thought it was good timing to press ahead with possible faculty perks."

The personnel policy committee task force recommended the tuition waivers after studying the costs and benefits in October, 1989.

Davis said the task force determined an approximate cost of $500,000 for full tuition waivers for all employees.

Several senate members asked where the funding for the waivers would come from and expressed concern that this would take away money for waivers for minority students.

"I don't think this would be adopted without us knowing where the money is coming from," Davis said.

Davis said it is possible the tuition waiver may start out as a 50-percent waiver to see if it is successful.

He said many universities have already implemented similar waiver programs, including Illinois State, Northern Illinois University and Sangamon State.

In other business, the senate passed a resolution declaring its opposition to the governor's budget and supporting the Illinois Board of Higher Education's bud-

Mass transit survey moving on

By Nora Bentley
Staff writer

On-campus student surveys for the mass transit feasibility study are being finished and household surveys will soon begin as the quest for input continues.

Student volunteer workers began the student surveys on April 2 to determine community attitudes about public transportation. Workers include members of the American Marketing Association and those gaining credit through the SIUC Community Development Department.

Another sample of about 500 names will be pulled to reach the goal of 800 complete surveys, Linda Gladson, member of the mass transit advisory committee and city planner, said. The problem of wrong numbers and no answers has created the need for another sample.

Gladson said it is expected that workers will finish with the original sample of 1,200 by today. Currently, 455 responses have been obtained.

Household surveys will possibly begin April 17, Gladson said. The household surveys will include 1,000 city residents including off-campus students.

The purpose of the survey is to gauge the attitudes and opinions from Carbondale residents concerning the need for a mass transit system.

The surveys ask for background information on where interviewees shop, if they have a driver's license, how many vehicles are in

Lebanese terrorists free three hostages

Mitterrand thanks Kadhafi for his role in release

PARIS (UPI) — Three European hostages were freed in Beirut Tuesday by the Abu Nidal extremist group and flew to Paris, ending a drama that began as a vacation cruise on the Mediterranean 2 1/2 years ago.

The hostages, Jacqueline Valente of France, 31, her Belgian boyfriend Fernand Houtekins, 42, and their baby daughter Sophie, 2 1/2, who was born in captivity, landed at a French military base outside Paris aboard a special plane sent to Beirut for them by the French government.

Looking tired, the three hostages were greeted by family members and dozens of reporters. They left the base for a military hospital in central Paris where they will spend the night. They made no statement.

The release came after the group run by the notorious terrorist Abu Nidal negotiated with Belgian and French officials. It also came six days after Libyan leader Col. Moammar Kadhafi called for the release of Western hostages to mark the Moslem holy month of Ramadan.

President Mitterrand thanked Kadhafi Tuesday night for his "determining role" in freeing the hostages, the Elysee Palace said.

Five gunmen in two cars dropped the three near the main gate of the tree-shaded French Embassy in Syrian-patrolled west Beirut shortly after daybreak Tuesday.

Hours later, the three were rushed to Beirut International Airport in a heavily guarded French embassy convoy where they boarded the French Falcon 900 jet for Paris.

Abu Nidal's Fatah Revolutionary Council said it snatched Valente, two other daughters and five Belgians from a pleasure boat off the coast of the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip Nov. 8, 1987. The group accused the captives of spying for Israel.

In December 1988, Valente's two other daughters, Marie-Laure Betille, 6, and Virginie, 5, were released in Libya and rejoined their father, Pascal Betille.

Valente told reporters inside the embassy after her own release Tuesday, "I kiss all my relatives.

Official expects big USG voter turnout

By Richard Hund
Staff Writer

More voters should turn out this year for the Undergraduate Student Government election today because of greater awareness, Tami Todoroff, election commissioner, said.

"I'm optimistic that we're going to have a higher turnout (this year)," she said, adding that only 10 percent of the student body usually votes each year. "I think more people are aware of what's going on this year."

Students can vote today for their student representatives from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. at the Student Center, the Recreation Center, Grinnell Hall in Brush Towers and Lantz Hall in Thompson Point.

The ballot includes presidential, vice presidential and student trustee candidates as well as senatorial seats for each student's residential area and college, Tami Todoroff, election commissioner, said.

Four parties are running for USG positions in the election: the Progress Party, with current USG President Tim Hildebrand and Rochelle Goree; the Trojan Party, with Michael Contile and Brian Hawkins; the Student Party, with Lissa Kuethe and Ed Walters; and the United Student Alliance Party, with Gregg Blake and Brad Cole.

Three student trustees also are on the ballot: Craig Jackson under the Progress Party, Lisa Sprule under the Student Party and Bill Hall.

Todoroff said 60 people are vying for senatorial seats, but students may also write in candi-

Burris: Illinois economy sagged in '80s

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

Illinois' finances in the 1980s, dubbed "unspectacular" by economists, led to a decade of decline, the Illinois comptroller said.

A special report prepared by the Illinois Office of the Comptroller revealed that Illinois compared unfavorably to the U.S. economy.

Comptroller Roland Burris said during the 1980s the Illinois unemployment rate was higher than the national unemployment rate, the number of jobs increased at a much slower pace than the national average and the ratio of manufacturing-to-service jobs changed dramatically.

"Illinois used to be known as the place to obtain a good, high-paying job," Burris said. "Now, that statement holds little truth."

He said the recession in the early 1980s was more severe for Illinois than the rest of the country, and the Illinois economy lagged behind the nation during the recovery.

"We've been behind the country in the 1980s," Burris said. "We must improve our economic strategy to remain competitive in the 1990s."

Illinois began the 1980s with an unemployment rate of 6.6 percent and ended the decade with a rate of 6.1 percent. The rate was not a significant change from beginning to end, but during the 10-year span the employment rate peaked as high as 12.4 percent.

During the same period, the country's unemployment rate steadily decreased from 6.4 to 5.3 percent.

Al Manning, press secretary for Burris, said although the exact figures have yet to be compiled, Southern Illinois was hit the hardest economically in the 1980s.

Eight players file suit against the NFL

United Press International

Green Bay Packers quarterback Don Majkowski, New York Jets running back Freeman McNeil and six other players filed suit against the NFL Tuesday, demanding an end to free agency restrictions and seeking a court order against implementation of a wage scale.

The suit, filed in federal court in Newark, N.J., claims the league's restriction on free movement of players among the NFL's 28 teams violates federal antitrust laws and seeks triple damages for each of the eight players.

The suit represents a major tactical change in the long-simmering NFL labor dispute, as the NFL Players Association, rebuffed in its antitrust assault on the league, is not a party in the case, although NFLPA officials strongly support and helped orchestrate the action.

According to a statement released by the NFL Management Council, this lawsuit comes as no surprise.

"Our attorneys will deal with it," the statement read. "We have not received a copy of the complaint and have no comment on the merits of the case."

Majkowski was a Pro Bowl selection last season after leading Green Bay to a 10-6 record and McNeil, a nine-year veteran, is the Jets' all-time leading rusher. The other players who filed suit were: cornerback Mark Collins and running back Lee Rouson of the New York Giants; offensive tackle Dave Richards of the San Diego Chargers; defensive end Niko Noga of the Detroit Lions; cornerback Tim McDonald of the Phoenix Cardinals; and offensive tackle Irv Eatman of the Kansas City Chiefs.

The suit is an attack on the so-called Plan B free agency system put in place in the league on Feb. 1, 1989 as a gesture by the NFL to convince the courts that there is free agency in the league. Under that system, each team is allowed to "protect" the rights to 37 players, making any other player under contract an unrestricted free agent able to join any other team.

However, the 37 protected players are subjected to restrictive rules against player movement, giving the team a right of first refusal on any deal involving a protected player and awarding a team compensation in the form of high draft picks for lost players.

All eight plaintiffs were "protected" players. The suit asks the

Sophomore pitcher emerging as a force in the Gateway

Staff Photos by Hope Shaffer

Dede Darnell, a sophomore pitcher on the Saluki softball team, leads SIU-C with an 8-1 record. Darnell also is among conference leaders with a 1.13 ERA.

Darnell credits hitters, defense for her success

By Eric Bugger
Staff Writer

"Go get 'em little red...go right at 'em," SIU-C softball pitching coach Gary Buckles yells at his red-headed pitcher when she gets in trouble.

It must work because Dede Darnell, a native of Carbondale, has emerged as one of the Salukis' premier pitchers.

Last year, as the only freshman on the Saluki pitching staff, Darnell often was frustrated trying to prove she was as good as her teammates.

"I only got a few starts last year and it was kind of frustrating not being able to prove myself," Darnell said. "Then when I did get in there I felt I had to pitch a no hitter in order to compete with Traci (Furrow), Jennifer (Brown) and Lisa (Robinson) and then I got so nervous I wasn't able to handle it."

After paying her dues as a freshman, Darnell certainly has thrived in the limelight.

Buckles has spent a lot of time working with Darnell over the past year.

"Some pitchers just have natural ability, but Dede has to really work," Buckles said, "you have to give her credit."

Aggressiveness has been the biggest problem for Darnell, she said.

"Gary has really been on me this year to be more aggressive," Darnell said. "He tells me to really load up on my rise pitch and to really pop it. He's been pounding it into my head to keep working on it."

Darnell's 8-1 record is tops on the team and is among the leaders in the Gateway Conference. A 1.13 ERA also places Darnell among the elite in the conference.

Darnell feels great about her statistics so far this year, but is eager to recognize the help she gets from her teammates.

"I've had exceptionally good defense behind me," Darnell said. "I couldn't ask for a better third baseman than May Jo Firnbach. She deserves all the credit she can get. She is the best third baseman that I have ever seen."

This is evident by the constant thanks and high fives Darnell gives Firnbach on the field.

"I know as a pitcher that I have people out there at every position that are very good ballplayers and that really boosts my confidence," Darnell said. "I have full confidence in every player Coach B (Brechtelsbauer) puts out there."

"Our hitters also have done really good for us. It's nice to know that your team will score some runs and you don't have to throw a shutout every time you're out there."

"You go out there and you know your team is going to do well...it's a good feeling."

Saluki Notebook

The Saluki baseball team was scheduled to play a doubleheader against Evansville Tuesday but Mother Nature would not allow it.

The games were cancelled because of rain and will not be made up.

SIU-C won three of four from Bradley to begin Missouri Valley last weekend.

The Salukis (23-5) split Saturday's doubleheader and won both games Sunday. Saluki coach Richard "Titchy" Jones was proud of the way his team came back after Saturday's loss.

"Baseball is a long season and you can't get too down after a loss," Jones said. "You can't win in the Valley if you keep going 2-2. Any chance you get to win three or four, you'd better take it while you can."

The Salukis play Southeast Missouri at 3 p.m. Thursday at Abe Martin Field. They return to conference action against Creighton in a pair of noon doubleheaders Saturday and Sunday at Abe Martin Field.

The Salukis and Creighton are tied with defending national champion Wichita State for the top spot in the Missouri Valley Conference. Each team holds a 3-1 record.

Bradley, Indiana State and Illinois State are 1-3 in the conference.

In their four-game series with Bradley last weekend, the Salukis raised their team batting average to .354 and lowered their earned run average to 3.18.

Falcons plan to take George as the No. 1 pick in NFL draft

ATLANTA (UPI) — The Atlanta Falcons intend to make Illinois quarterback Jeff George the first pick in the NFL draft unless they trade the choice, team officials said Tuesday.

"We've seen him. We like him. We think he's the best choice," said Ken Herock, Falcons' vice president of player personnel. "Unless someone comes up with a blockbuster (trade) offer, he's the pick. Our goal now is to try to sign him to a contract.

"We keep looking at films of the kid, and he looks better and better. I don't even know if we'd trade the pick now."

"I'm waiting to hear from my agent now about our plans to come to Atlanta (for negotiations)," George said Monday from his campus apartment. "Maybe once we get there, things will come together."

Gorbachev says Lithuanians would vote to stay Soviet

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev said Tuesday he hopes to avoid imposing direct presidential rule in Lithuania, but did not rule out a Krumlin takeover of the rebellious Baltic republic. The Soviet president said he believes Lithuania should hold a referendum on its future and told the congress it was confident residents would vote to remain part of the Soviet Union, the news agency Tass reported. "This problem should be resolved by reforming the (Soviet) federation, not dividing it," Gorbachev said.

Nepal looks at reforms, change of king's powers

KATHMANDU, Nepal (UPI) — The foreign minister said Tuesday King Birendra's powers would be changed "according to the will of the people" and promised an investigation to determine the excesses committed under the previous government. Foreign Minister Pashupati Shumshere Rana told reporters Tuesday that negotiations were under way to expand the Cabinet by including representatives of the formerly outlawed opposition Nepali Congress Party and a coalition seven leftist parties.

Mongolia looking into multi-party elections

BEIJING (UPI) — Mongolia's ruling Communist Party opened a special congress Tuesday to choose new leaders and stake out further democratic reforms that could lead to the nation's first multi-party elections, reports from the Mongolian capital said. The new general secretary of the Mongolian People's Revolutionary Party, said in a keynote speech to the congress that the ruling party is prepared to work with the opposition, but cautioned against hasty abandonment of socialism.

World drug summit tackles illegal trafficking

LONDON (UPI) — Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan told a world conference the U.S. has made progress in reducing demand for illegal drugs. At the opening of a world conference Monday aimed at finding ways to reduce demand for drugs and promote cooperation in combating the production and trafficking of cocaine, Sullivan said his goal for the meeting was to publicize "our efforts for demand reduction in our drug effort."

Cheney seeks explanation for bum information

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney has asked the Air Force to explain why it incorrectly told him both 2,000-pound bombs dropped on Panama by stealth fighters had hit their targets, the Pentagon said Tuesday. Cheney learned that one of the two bombs dropped in the Dec. 20 invasion fell "way off target" only after making inquiries to the Air Force based on a reporter's photographs of the bomb craters, Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said.

Nevada fastest growing; California gets bigger

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nevada's population grew fastest among the states between 1985 and 1989, jumping 18 percent over the five years, the Census Bureau said Tuesday, while Wyoming led the losers with a 6.8 percent population drop. Nevada's population grew from 939,000 in 1985 to 1,111,000 in 1989, the report said. California, the most populous state, added 2.7 million people in the second half of the decade, reaching 29,063,000 — meaning more than one in 10 U.S. residents lives in California.

Graduate student awaits heart-lung transplant

Blood drives essential to keeping hopes of operation alive

By: Michelle R. Walker
Staff Writer

Dianne Levin is in need of a heart-lung transplant, and blood drives like the one this week at SIU-C are crucial to her survival. Even if organs became available, the transplant will not take place unless enough blood of her type is at hand.

Levin is a graduate student at SIU-C majoring in educational psychology. Someday, she hopes to work in counseling.

She was born with Eisenmenger's Syndrome and so she has been dealing with it all her life, but she said her condition has deteriorated over the past two years.

Although no estimate was available on how many pints of blood will be required for Levin's surgery, Theresa Boehm, a registered nurse working at the SIU-C blood drive, said that at least 100 pints of blood are needed for a liver transplant.

Levin feels that the SIU-C blood drive is one of the most important and effective in this area.

"The blood drive is an indication of concern and the willingness of people to get involved," Levin said. "And we need those people to help other people."

Vivian Ugent, a coordinator of blood drives in Southern Illinois, said that on Tuesday 361 pints of blood were donated, bringing the total collection of the blood drive to 768 pints. Today, the blood drive will be from 12:00 noon until 6:00 p.m. in Ballroom D of the Student Center.

A fund-raiser to support Levin will be Saturday at Sidetracks from 2 p.m. until closing. There will be music by Slappin' Henry and a raffle of prizes donated by 30 local businesses. Tickets are $5 and they can be purchased at the door.

The Dianne Levin Fund-raising Committee hopes to raise $108,000 to put down a required deposit at the University of Minnesota Hospital.

This deposit will put Levin on active beeper status, which means that she will be given a beeper and every time it goes off, it will mean that organs are available. Then Levin will be flown to the University of Minnesota Hospital, but will not be guaranteed organs because it could be a false alarm.

The $108,000 figure includes only the basic hospitalization during the operation, not surgical fees or air ambulance fees or the cost of the surgery required to procure the donor organs.

GPSC to vote on health insurance fee increase

By Richard Hund
Staff Writer

The Graduate and Professional Student Council will vote on the proposed student health insurance increase at 7 tonight in the Mississippi Room in the Student Center.

The resolution asks for the support of a $65 dollar increase for fall and spring semesters and a $34.75 increase for summer semester for Blue Cross/Blue Shield premiums. Current rates are $44.50 and $26.75, respectively.

"They're adjusting the premium to break even instead of lose...as they have in the past years," Sam McVay, health service director, said. Blue Cross/Blue Shield claims it has lost about $657,000 on SIU-C as of March 27.

The proposed figures cover fiscal year 1990's anticipated increases, inflation on the fiscal year 1991 basic plan and additional benefits and enhancements to current coverage.

Benefits include raising annual coverage limits from $50,000 to $150,000, increasing accidental death and dismemberment from $3,000 to $10,000 and allow off-campus claims to be included in the campus policy. Psychiatric care would also be added to the policy.

The GPSC executive board unanimously endorsed the resolution previously.

In other business, GPSC will hold in-house elections to determine the officers for 1990-1991.

Presidential candidates include Ray Flavin and current President Charles Ramsey. Candidates for vice president of Administrative Affairs include Susan Hall and current officer Terry Bratcher while Ron Smith and Deborah Fleener-Oscarson are running for vice president of graduate school affairs.

Council members have been asked to bring a University identification in order to vote.

GPSC also will vote to sponsor one day of the proposed shuttle service to be tested April 16 to 20.

The shuttle service, to make a round trip from the Arena to the Student Center to the Communications building every 30 minutes from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., would cost $150 a day.

Opinion &amp; Commentary

Voice your opinion
in student elections

TODAY IS the Undergraduate Student Elections. The time has come for students to exercise their rights and duties as members of the student body to select USG leadership, senatorial body and the Student Trustee for the coming year. Despite a campaign fraught with eligibility questions, campaign rules violations and last minute formulations of platforms, students do have capable, committed individuals from which to choose their future representation.

Several candidate platforms include some well thought-out solutions to chronic campus concerns such as parking, housing, increasing student power base and recycling. These ideas and the individuals who propose them are well worth serious thought and careful consideration.

THE RECORDS show 2,220 University students voted in the 1989 elections, while only 1,831 people voted in 1988 and 808 voted in 1987. More than 24,000 people attend SIU-C. This means that, statistically, less than 10 percent of the electorate selected the students to represent the entire campus.

You can't make your opinions and preferences known if you don't vote. USG has provided you with four centralized locations to cast your ballot, so there's really no excuse not to participate. The Student Center, the Recreation Center, Grinnell Hall, and Lentz Hall are equipped with polling places open 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. for your convenience to facilitate the voting process. Take advantage of this opportunity. If you don't, you'll have no room to complain when the party you don't like is elected.

Courageous youth
succumbs to AIDS

A CANDLE in the wind was snuffed out Sunday when young Ryan White of suburban Indianapolis finally succumbed to the severe respiratory disease related to the devastating effects of the deadly disease AIDS.

Much the same as the picture the song singer Elton John dedicated to the ailing White at Saturday's Farm Aid just hours before his death depicts, White was like this candle. He was a lone light flickering against gale force winds of discrimination, prejudice and fear. Described by doctors as "the boy next door who first showed to a stunned nation that no one is safe from the risk of AIDS," White contracted the disease as a 13-year-old. With the support and encouragement of family and friends, he valiantly fought a five-year battle against the fatal disease and unreasonable fears of its victims.

IN 1985, the courageous teen made international news when parents and administrators in his hometown of Russiaville, Ind., fought to block his entrance to the seventh grade, forcing him to continue his education at home by computer-telephone hookup. White was allowed to return to school in February 1986, but withdrew from school after one day because of gross indignities. Half of the school's enrollment refused to show up because of fear that his condition was contagious from casual contact, while a community yard sale was held as a fund raiser for the legal effort to block him from attending school.

In April 1986, a court order returned Ryan to school and he finished the year without incident. However, even though tempers cooled and hostility subsided, the White family moved to nearby Cicero, Ind. in 1987, so Ryan could attend Hamilton Heights High School. There, students at his new school and the community had been educated about AIDS and welcomed him with open arms. Despite serious health problems, Ryan lived as normal of a life as he could, continuing to attend school until his illness prevented him. A study in courage and internal fortitude, he died an agonizing 10 days after entering the hospital. He was heavily sedated and put on a life-support system in the vain hope that, by some slim chance his worn-out body would respond to medical treatment. Family and friends kept a bedside vigil, but it was to no avail. Ryan White died much as he lived; with dignity and fortitude, fighting to the very end.

SO, IN THE words of family friend John "This one's for Ryan." Rest in peace.

Role of football needs reconsidered

Football has cost SIU millions of dollars over the past number of years, and although other intercollegiate sports lose money, the football loss at SIU is so great that football is in a significantly different position from these sports. To those who argue that SIU has a football tradition, I would maintain it is a very weak tradition, indeed; and although football undeniably affords entertainment a few Saturdays a year to several thousand people, it has never served as a significant symbol or rallying point for the University community or the wider region. In fact, SIU fans do not fill McAndrew stadium even though it is easily accessible and tickets are relatively inexpensive for non-students. McAndrew seats about 17,300 and over the past number of years, it only averaged 62 percent capacity. During the 1989 season, with a new coach, a prominent and personable athletic director and a great deal of publicity and free tickets, attendance averaged 44 percent capacity; by the last home game, attendance was down to 20 percent. Aside from its inability to generate widespread and sustained interest over the years on campus and in the Southern Illinois region, the football program brings SIU no national or significant state-wide publicity.

In fact, the 1989 season was another dismal one in which SIU won only two of its games and played mostly smaller schools that are athletically and academically mediocre.

Over the 28 years I have been at SIU, the 1989 season was more typical than the 1983 championship year; and winning the championship was minor league stuff played in a third-rate stadium which SIU fans could not even fill.

Perhaps it is long overdue to seriously reconsider the role of football at SIU, and to consider whether the program should be retained at its current level, or if the monies now going to football could be more effectively diverted to other programs, athletic and otherwise.—Jerome S. Handler, professor, anthropology.

Portion of parking revenue should go to transit

The "Letters" section of the April 6 issue included a letter from P. Scott Parker whining about the parking situation at SIU-C. Mr. Parker said that he arrived 20 minutes early for a class but still could not find a parking spot. Mr. Parker was forced to park in a 15-minute zone, leave his class and then move his car to another 15-minute zone.

Mr. Parker then took Marilyn Hogan, parking division director, to task for suggesting that space was available in the lot south of the arena. If Mr. Parker had parked in the arena lot he could have left for class 10 minutes later and still walked to class with time to spare.

Mr. Parker then cites the variable nature of Southern Illinois weather as the reason he needs curb-to-curb service. Obviously gas money to drive around looking for parking is easier for Mr. Parker to come by than the funds to buy a rain coat or an umbrella.

The whiners are not just students. Some of the faculty and staff are always pushing to put more grass and trees under concrete. The plans to pave Stehr field were put on hold because of the objections by the public. The word is that the SIU-C administration will carry out these plans over break and present their opponents with a fait accompli.

The solution to the parking problems at SIU-C is to make 10 percent of the funds received from the sale of stickers and fines available to the mass-transit system in Carbondale. The remaining funds would be used to pave and light all existing parking lots. After all existing lots are paved and adequately lighted, parking funds would be used for maintenance. Any surplus funds would go to the transit system, and no new lots would be built on campus.—John O. Stewardson, alumnus.

'Front door service' not possible; try walking

In response to P. Scott Parker's letter concerning the parking situation:

First, I find it very hard to feel sorry for anyone (especially a graduate student in clinical psychology) who makes it to campus 20 minutes early only to park in a 15-minute zone, leave class in order to move his car to another 15-minute zone and still get a ticket!

Secondly, anyone who equates 233,810 miles to one-half a mile obviously is not thinking straight. Since Mr. Parker got to campus 20 minutes before his class started anyway, he could have easily parked at the arena and still had 5 to 10 minutes to spare (not to mention $15 more in his pocket).

I walk through Lot 100 (on South Marion, about three blocks north of Grand Avenue) to get to class, and it has at least 20 to 50 open spots all day long, every day. Yes, I know it is a whole two blocks from campus, and when it is 40 degrees and rainy, the weather is just so inclement.

"Front door service" is not a realistic expectation given the demand on parking, so quit whining and walk a couple of extra blocks. Mr. Parker should do a little "self-analysis" before he attempts parking on campus again.—Ryan Ruthenberg, sophomore, administration of justice.

Parking at arena inexpensive solution to fines

P. Scott Parker. Here we have a guy who arrived on campus for class a whole 20 minutes early!

Parker probably got here at 10 a.m. and then wondered why he couldn't find a space. He then proceeded to park in a 15-minute zone. Halfway through class he got up, moved his car to another 15-minute zone (probably missed 15 minutes of class doing so), and he still got a ticket!

Hal! All this to avoid a 10 minute walk from the arena. And then he is stupid enough to tell the world about it. Hey Scott, next time take a taxi. It's cheaper.

For a graduate student in clinical psychology, you sure are crazy! It's a good thing your speciality isn't cognitive processes. Perhaps you should consider child psychology.—Phil Schuyler, junior, aviation management.

I'm fine along with my baby girl."

The blue-eyed Sophie, who was born in captivity, wore a blue and white dotted dress, held her mother's hand and smiled to photographers.

"We are all in a good condition, but we are tired of traveling," Valente said.

She acknowledged she also had a baby boy in captivity, named Palestine, but said he lived only a year. Ala said the boy died despite treatment from doctors. In Paris, French state-owned television network Antenne 2 reported the boy died of intestinal complications.

Houtekins said the remaining four Belgian captives have high morale and added, "We keep high hopes that they will be freed too."

The others are Houtekins' brother, Emmanuel, 44, the brother's wife, Godelieve Kets, 39, and their two children, Valerie, 18, and Laurent, 19.

Ala, who said he did not take part in talks to free the captives, get recommendations made in January.

The resolution encouraged any efforts made by the SIU administration to fight for the IBHE budget in the Illinois State Assembly.

The IBHE recommended $249.7 million in operating funds for SIU. The governor's budget proposed $238.3 million.

The only increase the governor's budget included is a 3 percent increase for salaries, but the IBHE recommended a 6 percent salary increase, a 10 percent library increase, a 4 percent general cost increase and money for new programs.

The resolution also encouraged faculty members to attend rallies, meetings, legislative hearings and other forums emphasizing the need for passing the IBHE budget.

Davis said the committee regarded the governor's budget as inadequate.

The budget committee's report recommended the resolution because Illinois would rank behind most states in the amount of funding provided to public universities.

Donald Paige, senate president, said although Illinois ranks 7th in per capita income, the state is 43rd in the amount of support for higher education.

DECLINE, from Page 1

Southern Illinois showed the area to have the highest number of people out of work," Manning said.

He said the outcome for employment for Southern Illinois in the 1990s looks bleak at this point because of the clean air bill.

An estimated 19,000 Southern Illinoisans who work in the coal industry may lose their jobs if the clean air bill, which calls for a reduction of high sulfur coal, becomes a law.

On the other hand, the report noted Illinois added 230,000 jobs, an increase of 4.7 percent. The William Eaton, the senate's IBHE representative, said Illinois has ranked as low as 47th in public universities funding.

In other business, the senate resolved to work with the other University constituencies on the issue of strategic planning.

The resolution concurs with a resolution passed by the graduate council earlier.

The council's resolution recommended and urged continual meaningful contact between campus constituencies and the president on strategic planning.

The resolution also asks that the senate annually receive the strategic plan semi-final drafts as soon as it is prepared, so that the senate can give formal reaction to the draft.

In the faculty status and welfare committee's report, Walter Henneberger said a site has been selected for the proposed faculty club.

Henneberger said he was told by Physical Plant architect Allen Haake that the area on the south end of the Student Center was picked for the site.

At the senate's February meeting, the committee announced new plans for building a 2,000-square-foot faculty club adjacent to the Student Center and costing $100,000 to $200,000.

U.S. employment rate, however, increased by 18.5 percent.

The number of Illinois manufacturing jobs, generally considered high-paying, decreased by 271,000, while at the same time service jobs, considered low-paying, increased by 303,000.

Illinois' economy did have one bright spot in an otherwise gloomy sky.

The real personal per capita income in Illinois remained above the national average, Burris said. The Illinois per capita income in fiscal year 1989 was $15,023, 5.9 percent higher than the national income of $14, 184.

The report said, however, that their household, where they work and other questions pertaining to needs for transportation.

The committee also questioned whether a category on the survey for faculty and civil service workers should be added.

Don Monty, committee member and community development director for the city, said that he believed the survey needed to structure out who it was addressing.

It was agreed that the question should be directed to DeLeuw Cather & Co. of Chicago, the multi-disciplinary engineering and planning firm that specializes in transportation projects, that the city contracted to do the study. The Al Chalabi Group, Ltd., an minority business enterprise, is assisting in the study.

It is estimated that the study will cost $68,000. The Illinois Department of Transportation division of public transportation has agreed to fund 60 percent of the study, and the city and SIU will split the remaining 40 percent equally.

Another phase that will begin sometime after the household surveys is the generator survey.

Matthew E. Mangold, chairman of the committee, said that the on-site generator surveys will be taken at places that are major generators of traffic such as the University Mall and the Murdale Shopping Center. These are places where people would be likely to use public transportation.

"We'd like to have it done before students leave," he said. He expects the household surveys to take about two weeks, but said that things should speed up after said, "Let's hope that all hostages will be freed as soon as possible."

Besides the hostages seized off the Gaza coast, 18 other Westerners, eight of them Americans, were kidnapped in Lebanon and are believed held by pro-Iranian extremist groups demanding the release of hundreds of Palestinians in Israeli jails and freedom for 17 Arabs convicted of terrorist activities in Kuwait.

It was not certain why Kadhafi made the appeal. But in Paris, diplomatic sources agreed with reports indicating Tuesday's release might be related to France's decision to return three Libyan Mirage jets in March.

The French had held the jets, in France for maintenance, since 1986 under a military embargo against Tripoli after Kadhafi's invasion of northern Chad in 1983.

dates. More people have applied for East Side district than any other with 12 senatorial hopefuls, Todoroff said, but only eight seats are available.

Students need a current I.D. to vote. They will privately fill out a ballot specifying their college and geographic area.

Ballots will be placed in a small envelope, which in turn is placed in a large envelope identified by the voter's name, I.D. number and college.

These names will then be checked off of a roster list to ensure each person votes once. The small envelopes will be removed and counted at Ballroom C in the Student Center.

Todoroff said the final results take five or six days to tally, but the committee hopes to have an unofficial count by Wednesday night.

Illinois was 10.7 percent higher than the national average in 1970.

To improve the Illinois economy, Burris has proposed three changes in economic development strategy for the 1990s. The strategies include:

- Investing a greater proportion of its economic development resources in the creation and expansion indigenous businesses.
- Targeting innovation. Illinois should identify innovation not only in the high-tech industries, but in whatever industry it is found in.
- Concentrating more on assisting in the modernization of its manufacturing sector.

that because the surveyors will be experienced.

Gladson said she would like to have some alternative sources to contact to participate in the survey such as fraternities. "I'd like to have a backup organization I could turn to."

Seats on the committee will also be opening up in May, Mangold said. Anyone interested should contact Mangold through the USG office.

Mangold said he could not stress enough how important it is that people respond to the surveyors if they are called.

If the study finds that a mass transit system is feasible then plans for detail routes, fares, days and times of service, organization and management and maintenance provisions will be prepared. Also, potential funding sources will be considered.

IRS 'stool pigeon' demands payoff from agency

WASHINGTON (SHNS) — Walter Raquet claims he snitched on hundreds of Americans who owed taxes to the Internal Revenue Service—and now he wants his reward.

In a U.S. Court of Claims lawsuit filed last November, Raquet listed 813 well-to-do people and companies on whom he says he informed in the past nine years.

He contends in his suit that the IRS owes Raquet "substantially" more than $100,000 in rewards for snitching on investors in companies that illegal<sup>ly</sup> traded in government securities.

The Justice Department, named with IRS as a co-defendant, is seeking to dismiss the suit, but doesn't deny in court papers that Raquet was a government informant.

Among those Raquet says he snitched on are composer Henry Mancini, former Postmaster Preston Tisch, CBS boss Laurence Tisch, the late pop artist Andy Warhol and actors Michael London and Sidney Poitier.

Procrastinators get busy; tax deadline near

WASHINGTON (SHNS) — Time is running out on millions of Americans who haven't filed their 1989 federal income tax returns.

The deadline for filing is midnight Monday. If your return is postmarked later than April 16, you'll be in big trouble with the Internal Revenue Service.

To begin with, you'll be paying an additional 5 percent of the amount due for each month, or portion of a month, your return is late. That means a taxpayer who owes $1,000 will pay $1,050, even if the return is only a day or two overdue.

In addition, a late-filer will be paying interest on the unpaid balance at an annual rate of 11 percent.

"You're better off filing your return on time, even if you can't pay all the money you owe," says IRS spokesman Steve Pyrek. "That way you'll be paying one-half percent a month on the amount due instead of 5 percent, plus interest on the unpaid balance."

Tax returns are coming in faster than usual this year — 66 million had been filed by April 6 — but the pace is surprisingly slow, considering that seven in 10 taxpayers qualify for a refund.

Raquet's suit alleges the 813 people he named invested in "fictitious or illegal tax-oriented trading in government securities." It alleges no wrongdoing on the part of the investors.

The suit says that in March 1980, Raquet was hired as an executive vice president of Sent Financial Instruments of New York City. He said he soon suspected the company was engaged in illegal "tax-oriented trading."

After leaving the firm in late 1980, Raquet became an informer for the IRS and the Justice Department against his former company and 23 other tax shelter firms, the suit said.

In 1984, an IRS affidavit filed in U.S. District Court in Manhattan revealed Raquet to be an IRS informer against two of the 23 companies — Sentinel Financial Instruments and Sentinel Government Securities.

The Sentinel companies and their executives were indicted and found guilty of creating $130 million in "fake securities" trades for investors to use as tax deductions.

Raquet's suit says that as a result of his cooperation and testimony, the IRS collected "hundreds of millions" of dollars from the 24 firms.

The suit said Raquet was an informer on the companies until last year, but gives no details. Raquet's lawyer, Arnold Kapiloff of Manhattan, refused comment or to say where Raquet works or lives now.

In April 1986, the suit said, the IRS offered him a $100,000 reward on a "take it or leave it basis," even though Raquet alleged he's entitled to much more. He said the IRS later withdrew the $100,000 offer.

Through Kapiloff, Raquet said he filed claims for IRS informant rewards on the 813 taxpayers, but has been denied payment. The suit seeks an amount "believed to be substantially in excess of $100,000" in rewards.

Under the law, IRS can pay up to $100,000 for "specific and reasonable" information that caused an investigation and resulted in recovery of taxes.

Report: Country facing math crisis

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation soon will face a serious shortfall of mathematically skilled workers unless more Americans, especially women and minorities, are persuaded to study math, a National Research Council report showed Tuesday.

The study found Americans' interest in math appears to have fallen dramatically in the past two decades. Only one-sixth as many college students said they planned to major in math in 1985 as did in 1966, even though total college enrollment doubled during the 20-year period.

Overall, mathematical sciences degree production now stands at levels of the mid-60s — about 15,000 bachelor's, 3,000 master's and 800 doctorates each year. Those levels are "generally considered too low to meet the demands of the near future," the report said.

"Unless changes occur, the nation's needs for mathematically skilled teachers, scientists, engineers and hosts of other workers for business, industry and government will not be met," the report's authors warn.

By the year 2000, the U.S.

economy is expected to create more than 21 million new jobs, most of which will require both college education and the use of mathematics, the study showed. The rate of growth in mathematically based jobs currently is about twice that for all other occupations.

The 119-page report conceded some of the apparent downturn in math interest probably stems from students entering related fields like computer science. But it added "part of the decline may be due to the shift of interest away from science and engineering."

'Magical dipstick' saves engine wear

DAYTON, Ohio (UPI) — A chemist who has developed the technology for a "smart dipstick" says it would prevent engine wear and tear by telling when to change a car's oil with a flashing message on the dash.

The technique measures the quantity of oil in the car by calculating how much remains of the antioxidant in it.

Antioxidant is an additive that keeps oil from degrading too fast. Without it, oils will oxidize, turning thick and black and building up acid. Once the antioxidant is depleted, oil loses its ability to lubricate parts.

Bob Kauffman, a research chemist at the University of Dayton Research Institute, said the technique needs only a single drop of oil that is placed into a vial containing a common solvent such as acetone or rubbing alcohol. A microcomputer is instructed to test the sample by passing a voltage through the solution, which produces a measurable electric current.

Legalization of drugs to be topic of forum at law school

Debate to cover marijuana, cocaine and heroin legalization

By Eric Reyes
Staff Writer

Legalization of drugs will be the topic of a forum—debate featuring four speakers 7 p.m. Thursday at the SIU School of Law Auditorium.

"Resolved: that marijuana, cocaine, and heroin, should be legalized drugs in our society" is the title of the event.

The four participants in the forum-debate will be Richard C. Hayes, coordinator of student judicial affairs; Rob Scofield, downstate legislative director for the American Civil Liberties Union; William A. Schroeder, SIU-C law professor; and Nick J. Stojakovich of the Rutherford Institute in Springfield, an organization of Christian attorneys.

Darell Dunham, adviser of the Christian Legal Society, the event's

co-sponsor, will be the moderator. The forum consists of 50 minutes of arguments and rebuttals followed by 50 minutes of questions and responses, permitting the audience to indirectly question the speakers.

Hayes and Stojakovich are opposed to legalization, Dunham said.

Schroeder, a professor who teaches a criminal procedures and evidence class, said he is basically in favor of legalization of marijuana and heroin because they are passive drugs that do not lead to aggressive behavior. Schofield outlined in forms of freedoms and liberties that have been abused as a result of the war on drugs since the beginning of the Reagan administration March at the University.

Dunham said the purpose of the forum is to get the opinions and facts out in the open.

Panel discusses U.S. position in competitive global market

By Rob Coné
Staff Writer

AS THE Bush administration ironed out a trade agreement with the Japanese Friday, three businessmen and one University professor sat down to discuss corporate America's viability in the global marketplace.

Executive Director of the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce, James Prowell, started the discussion by complaining about the apparent political motivation behind anti-trust suits and barrier contracts.

Prowell said a fault of U.S. industry is its inability to do what the Japanese are able to do: to take the best products, alter them and make them for export. Prowell said he wasn't blaming U.S. industry. Instead, Prowell said, it is the fault of politicians.

"A POLITICIAN adds nothing to the United States or its economy," said Prowell. "The only thing they do is redistribute our wealth."

William Liao is a manager for the Carbondale-based Industrial Marketing Wildlife Materials Inc., manufacturers of wildlife radio tracking receivers.

Liao wasn't as concerned about political influences as much as he was about the bottom line.

Liao said Wildlife Materials is a small, import-export business that employs 52 workers. He said the bulk of his business is done overseas in India, China, Japan and Europe.

ACCORDING TO Liao, high overseas import duties coupled with costs that exceed $10 an hour for wages and overhead has forced his company to export some of its assembly work.

Liao said a typical transmitter assembly takes his workers four hours and costs $40.

"In China," Liao said, "they assemble those (same) parts for 70 cents." Because of those savings he said his company now ships its raw materials to China, has Chinese workers do the assembly and imports the finished product for a total cost of $2, a savings of $38.

"By doing that we can save a lot," and he added, "we are now hiring people."

"THEY MUST be something wrong here," said Liao, a native of China. "This country is very powerful—technology-wise, economy-wise, manager/force-wise. I don't know whether the problem is in efficiency or productivity but when we are dealing with manufacturing here, their prices are very high.

"To save more," Liao said, "we turned to overseas manufacturers."

Liao said the crystals he needs to manufacture his receivers cost $7 here and only 35 cents in Taiwan.

"How come?," Liao wondered. RONALD MASON, SIU-C associate professor of political science, said Liao's handling of high costs best illustrated globalization.

He said America's troubles "may relate to labor costs but even when it doesn't, it may relate to technological innovation." Mason agreed with Prowell that "Politics can retard the rate of change."

But, Mason said, "The message for us is perhaps we can't tolerate the stakes, but what we can't tolerate even more is prolonging mistakes."

THE RATE of change has increased so much that our tolerance for mistakes has been greatly limited particularly when compared with post-World War II corporate America which was nearly the world's only industrial base, Mason said.

"If we are going to adapt rapidly in a changing world we're going to have to ask ourselves how that's going to be done," Mason said.

He said that "3-M, for example, used to have a two-year introduction cycle in terms of new products. Now, it's down to six months."

MASON SAID his example illustrates the need for American business to be flexible not only through industrial technology but also "human technology."

He cited the example of a Ford Motor Company transmission plant in Ohio that went from being slated for closing to having a 1 percent better reliance rate than Japanese automakers. "Ironically, they're doing it with the same technology they had to begin with," Mason said.

THE DRAMATIC upswing in quality, he said, is a new, participatory relationship between workers and management—each having a share in how the product will be produced. The end result is a teamwork atmosphere that is more responsive to change, Mason said.

Kai San Chiu, a manager with Monsanto Chemical Company, agreed with Mason and was willing to accept the notion that a fair share of American global business woes fall squarely on the shoulders of management.

MONSANTO, an international corporation with 55,000 employees, feels there are three key factors needed to be competitive in global markets, Chiu said. These include:

■ Flexibility in product marketing. Advanced technology in one country may have been around for years in another, he said.

■ Tailor-make products. "A good product in the U.S. doesn't mean it will sell overseas," Chiu said. He pointed out that Monsanto sells herbicides around the world. But because of the many variations in weather patterns, climate, soils and crops, Monsanto makes "100 different formulations for over 100 countries."

■ People, culture and languages. Chiu encouraged business students to learn any language. In that way, he said, they will gain a better appreciation for "how foreign countries work." Chiu said degrees are not enough. Students who know about other cultures and speak other languages are "most desirable."

"WE (THE United States) have a lot of catching up to do before we berate the Japanese closed doors," said Chiu. "Cultural exchange—moving people around—this is the only way we will survive."

The panel discussion was sponsored by the College of Business and Administration Society for Emerging Trends in Business. The panel discussion was designed by the society to offer students and faculty a forum by which textbook information, that might have become outdated or irrelevant by this rapidly changing world, could be updated.

Top Soviet government councils to meet on quick economic reform

MOSCOW (UPI) — With the Soviet budget spiraling out of control, President Mikhail Gorbachev said Tuesday two top government councils will meet this weekend to work on speeding up radical economic reforms expected to include sharp price increases.

Last week, the Izvestia government newspaper revealed that national income declined for the first two months of 1990 by up to 2 percent—the first negative growth registered in Soviet history—while money supply increased by 15 percent.

The budget deficit last year was $192 billion, and other figures released recently showed that the government in 1988 printed twice as much money as in 1987 with no corresponding increase in the goods and services available.

Because the ruble is not convertible, the budget deficit cannot be financed by foreigners buying into the economy as in the United States. The absence of a money market of stocks and bonds means the deficit cannot be financed internally. Gorbachev told delegates to a congress of the Young Communist League Tuesday he wanted to speed up reforms to "improve the situation at the consumer market (and) do away, at least partially, with the deficit, which poisons the whole atmosphere of public life and unsettles people."

The reforms designed to eventually improve the consumer market, however, are expected in the short run to be felt in drastically higher prices.

Newspapers all this month have spoken of an impending "shock therapy" to halt the printing presses and the hemorrhaging of worthless rubles to cover the budget deficit.

"Unprofitable enterprises will be closed and unemployment will increase fast" the official news agency Tass said last week. "It is unclear whether the population will reconcile itself to such a shock therapy."

Gorbachev said his presidential council of advisers and the federation council of representatives from the nation's republics will meet Saturday to look into speeding up the reforms.

"The situation allows us to predict that these will be very difficult, but necessary, decisions," he said. "We shall need the national agreement on this question."

"The president and the presidential council intend to adopt an early package of measures to give fresh impulse to economic transformations," he said.

He did not spell out exactly what measures would be taken besides saying "the basic steps initially planned for 1992 and 1993 should be taken instead this year and early next year." Those are the years vast price hikes were planned.

Gorbachev said he expected some opposition, at one point switching from Russian to use a Spanish battle cry to make his point.

In addition, a total overhaul is being planned to bring prices into line with costs of production.

Untogether band to come together

Scattered players in "Proof of Utah" to play at Hangar

By Jeanne Bickler
Entertainment Editor

How is it that a band from Champaign via Ohio, named Proof of Utah, became so popular in Western Europe and will play in Carbondale tonight?

If this sounds like a geographic impossibility, there is good reason for it.

The band has moved around a lot, and at all times, one of the band members is separated from the others. Four of the members currently live in Champaign, and one is living in Carbondale. Steve Ward, vocalist and harmonic player for the band, is a graduate student in art at SIU-C.

Ward is the designer of the band's unusual album covers.

Because of Ward's influence, Proof of Utah founding members Louie Simon and Mike Brosco are both starting graduate school at the University next fall. Mark, alias "Chickenman," will be the remaining member of the band in Champaign.

Proof of Utah is a five-member "alternative" band, with a Frank Zappa flair for lyrics. In fact, this band may be one of the few bands around that incorporates an extensive vocabulary into its songs.

But Proof of Utah is not interested in comparisons to other artists.

"We mix together a whole bunch of different styles," Simon said.

In live performance, the band is different from its albums, Brosco said.

"In performance we're like the Talking Heads or Brian Eno. We stick to the straight danceable stuff," he said. "This is not a sit-down and watch art band. We want people to have fun and dance."

Simon said his is a very "high energy band."

"Live, we're a dance-party band," he said.

Although Proof of Utah can't play all their recorded songs live because they are "too complicated," they do offer a good mix of new and old music.

The band has recorded five albums. Two of these are available in West Germany and two are available in the United States. One album is not available at all because it hasn't been released yet.

Despite this confusion, Proof of Utah is a band that is very much together. Brosco and Simon started the band in Bowling Green, Ohio, after playing together at a party.

Shortly after, they began their own record label, Smiley Turtle Records and began making Proof of Utah musical history.

In 1986, Proof of Utah moved to Champaign and released its second album, "It Doesn't Matter Much." This album was distributed nationally and in Europe, and is one of the sold out albums.

The band's current album, "Out of Order," is one of the two albums now available in the United States. The album has attracted favorable attention from several major national music news magazines.

Proof of Utah will perform with Lonely Trailer, another band from Champaign, at 10 p.m. tonight at Hangar 9.

Disney study shows people reject movie ads

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Walt Disney Co., defending its controversial policy of prohibiting advertisements on theater screens showing Disney movies, released a study Tuesday showing that nearly 90 percent of filmgoers support the ban.

"The policy we've adopted appears to be on the side of the customers," said Jeffrey Katzenberg, chairman of Walt Disney Studios. "Our customers have spoken clearly, and we should be listening."

The study commissioned by Disney sampled 18,772 moviegoers on March 31 in 10 areas across the country. Of 17,654 respondents, 15,838 — or 89.7 percent — said they did not like to see films preceded by product commercials.

Disney told its exhibitors in February that it would initiate a no-commercials policy beginning with the release of "Pretty Woman" in March. Theater chains that did not comply faced being denied further Disney releases.

Disney said the same study, conducted by The National Research Group, found 95 percent of moviegoers favored seeing clips of coming attractions before feature films. Coming attractions are not included in the ban.

"One has to wonder why advertisers would want to show commercials and have people boo them," Katzenberg told a news conference. "We just sensed that there were too many commercials and people were getting annoyed (by) it."

Turtles nab No. 1 spot for movies

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The radioactive reptiles of "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles" shell-shocked their competition at the nation's box office, snapping up an astonishing two-week gross of $50.9 million.

Produced by Golden Harvest, "Turtles" set new box office records for New Line Cinema, its releasing agency.

Moreover, Turtlemania helped lead the North American box office to a $120.3 million spurt last week.

- THE TOP 10, this week's gross:
1. "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles," $18.8 million.
  2. "Pretty Woman," $11.2 million.
  3. "Ernest Goes to Jail," $6.1 million.
  4. "The First Power," $5.6 million.
  5. "The Hunt for Red October," $5 million.
  6. "I Love You to Death," $4 million.
  7. "Driving Miss Daisy," $3.2 million.
  8. "Cry Baby," $3 million.
  9. "Opportunity Knocks," $2 million.

Nuke workers' risk on rise report of Nader group says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There were 105,265 cases of worker exposure to radiation at U.S. nuclear power plants in 1988, the highest number of incidents ever in one year, an anti-nuclear group reported Tuesday.

Public Citizen, a group created by consumer activist Ralph Nader, said its review of federal documents showed workers at the nation's 107 commercial nuclear plants were exposed to 41,077 person-rem of radiation, a dose the group estimated as equivalent to 2 million chest X-rays.

The group said the average worker received a dose of about 390 millirem, roughly equal to 20 chest X-rays. There are 1,000 millirem in a rem.

More than 12,000 workers in 1988 received at least one person-rem of radiation, a dose equivalent to 50 chest X-rays.

Public Citizen said its review of Nuclear Regulatory Commission records for 1988, the most recent year available, showed the total number of worker radiation exposure incidents has increased 31 percent since 1980, when there were 80,389 reported cases.

The group said the average worker received a dose of roughly equal to 20 chest X-rays.

"The problem of radiation exposure at commercial nuclear power plants has continued unabated for more than three decades," Public Citizen said in its report, "Glowing on the Job: Worker Exposure to Radiation at Nuclear Power Plants."

The group said the large number of worker exposure incidents "represents one of the ongoing, but hidden costs of nuclear power."

Public Citizen called on the NRC to lower its regulatory limits for radiation exposure in the nuclear industry, which prohibits any plant worker from receiving more than 3 rem every three months or 5 rem every year.

Nuclear industry officials criticized the Public Citizen report as distorted, saying the group only publicized those statistics that fit their biases.

"Public Citizen has proven once again that they don't let the facts stand in the way of their determined anti-nuclear diatribe," said the U.S. Council for Energy Awareness, the nuclear industry's trade association.

The council said the total number of worker exposure incidents has increased over the past decade because more nuclear plants have begun operation.

Shuttle Discovery suffers setback

Space telescope will have to wait while repairs made

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The shuttle Discovery's historic flight to launch the $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope was delayed Tuesday at least a week and possibly two because of last-minute trouble with the ship's power steering system.

"It's going to take time to sort that out and we don't have a specific target for a new launch date," said NASA launch director Robert Sieck. "But it's going to be probably between a week and two weeks down the road."

The delay was a frustrating disappointment to Discovery's veteran five-member crew and for hundreds of scientists with the space telescope project, already running seven years behind schedule and some $1 billion over budget because of technical problems and, ultimately, the 1986 Challenger disaster.

"The universe is 15 billion years old. What's a few more days?" asked a stoic Eric Chaisson, a senior scientist with the Space Telescope Science Institute in Baltimore. "The main concern is that the vehicle and payload remain safe. We'll go when we're ready to go."

Still, the disappointment was apparent in the bloodshot eyes of NASA astronomer Edward Weiler, who said: "I don't know

Failed component provides power for steering scheme

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The space shuttle is equipped with three "auxiliary power units" that provide the hydraulic muscle to move the ship's wing flaps, rudder and rocket engine nozzles for steering during the climb to space.

The compact 85-pound power units, each equipped with a 138-horsepower turbine, also are required for re-entry and landing.

While a shuttle technically can fly with just one operational "APU," NASA flight rules require all three to be working properly before a ship can be cleared for blastoff to provide multiple redundancy in case of a malfunction in flight.

The shuttle Discovery was grounded Tuesday because of a valve failure in APU No. 1 that caused it to operate erratically.

The APUs are started just five minutes before liftoff when the shuttle co-pilot flips three switches in the cockpit on command from the launch control center.

Along with providing power to steer the shuttle during ascent, the APUs also are used to move critical propellant valves that control the operation of the shuttle's three hydrogen-fueled main engines.

Located inside the shuttle's rear engine compartment, each of the units is controlled by an 88-pound computer.

how many days of this we can take, emotionally."

Discovery's countdown was ticking smoothly toward a liftoff at 8:47 a.m. EDT until shortly after the T-minus five-minute mark when co-pilot Charles Bolden, 43, fired up the shuttle's three "auxiliary power units."

All five astronauts planned to fly back to their homes near the Johnson Space Center in Houston early Wednesday.

Debaters return title to former champions

By Jerianne Kimmel Staff Writer

University debaters finished the season ranked fifth by the National Cross-Examination Debate Association, after handing over their four-year title to the only other debate champs who have won the title four consecutive years.

The University of California at Los Angeles won the National Cross-Examination Debate Association's national championship April 2 at Southwest Mississippi State University.

SIU-C captured the national crown from UCLA in 1986 and held the championship for four straight years before UCLA won it back this year at the national competition, which drew top debaters from more than 300 colleges and universities.

SIU-C debaters left for the national tournament knowing it could not bring home the National Sweepstakes Trophy for the record fifth straight year because it needed too many points to catch up.

Assistant Debate Coach Brian R. McGee said four out of five isn't bad.

"To finish No. 5 in a very competitive year with a young team is no small feat," McGee said. "We still have one of the better — we think the best — programs in the country."

Illinois nets drug-fighting grant money

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — The Southern Illinois Enforcement Group will receive $131,052 in 1990 under a new $2.8 million federal drug-fighting grant for Illinois. State officials also will create a new undercover drug unit in Central Illinois under the expanded program.

The Illinois Criminal Justice Information Authority announced $120,000 of the federal grant would be earmarked to create a new East-Central Illinois Task Force in Colas, Edgar, Douglas and Moultrie counties.

Authority Executive Director David Coldren said $1.5 million would be spent to expand operations of the state's 19 existing metropolitan enforcement groups and drug task forces into 11 counties not currently covered by undercover narcotics agents. Another $548,000 will be spent to support drug agents hired in previous years.

Illinois will spend nearly $3.8 million on drug task forces this year: the $2.8 million federal grant plus $944,000 in state and local matching funds.

Wayman Presley, who originated the concept of Bald Knob Cross, stands in front of the cross. Presley is now caretaker of the site, where many attend services on Easter.

Legacy of Bald Knob Cross remembered by its originator

By Omonpee O. Whitfield
Staff Writer

Bald Knob Cross, a local tourist attraction, has become a favorite place of worship on Easter for many. Made solely of white porcelain, the 110-foot tall cross has the distinction of being the tallest cross in the world.

The concept of the giant white cross originated with Wayman Presley. At age 93, Presley still maintains the cross.

After moving to the Makanda area in the 1930s shortly after the local Methodist church had burned, Presley wanted to hold regular worship services near his home.

He began to hold Sunday services on a nearby plot of land in Bald Knob, inviting ministers of different denominations to speak each Sunday. According to Presley, the success of the services stirred up controversy between some of the Methodist ministers and himself.

"Apparently they were jealous, even though I had attempted to ask some of the ministers to come out and speak in the services,"

Presley said. "Finally, the ministers got together and told me that if I wanted to continue to have services I would have to buy the land."

Once Presley purchased land on Bald Knob Mountain, his vision of the cross began to manifest itself with the help of members of the Bald Knob organization and contributors.

"I wanted a place where people of all colors and denominations, rich and poor, could come and worship the Lord together," Presley said. "That's when I got the idea to build the cross."

From 1948-51, 116 people, the original members of the Bald Knob Christian Foundation, promised to contribute $100 each for the construction of the cross and purchase of the land.

By 1952, sufficient funds had been raised to purchase the materials needed to construct the base. The base, 24 feet deep, was dug entirely by hand and made of concrete.

The fame of Presley's efforts to build a cross spread all over the country and in 1955, Presley, along with some of the members of the Bald Knob Christian Foundation, were asked to appear on Ralph Edward's television program, "This is Your Life."

In 1959, final construction of the cross began as the steel frame was completed. A year later, neon lights were put around the steel framework of the cross. The work was completed in 1963.

This year's Easter celebration will mark the 54th annual Easter Sunrise service at Bald Knob Cross. Although much time has passed since the cross' construction began, Presley said he is as enthusiastic about the cross and what it stands for today as he was when he first conceived the thought of it years ago.

"The cross was built to be a place at which anyone can come and worship," Presley said.

Presley said that Tressie, his wife of 67 years, has been a great help and inspiration with the Bald Knob Cross project.

Easter Sunrise Service at Bald Knob Cross is scheduled for Sunday. This year's speaker will be Rev. Gilbert Gee, pastor of Congregational Christian Church in Alto Pass.

Litter of piglets helped build cross

By Omonpee O. Whitfield
Staff Writer

Myrta Clutts believed that her pigs could help build Bald Knob Cross, and maybe she was right.

Believing in the project with all her heart, Clutts made up her mind that she would give money to the project no matter what.

However, Clutts had no job. Clutts said she had nothing but her faith in God.

Clutts' faith soon began to pay off. One of her sows, Old Betsy, gave birth. Instead of the usual nine or ten piglets, Old Betsy delivered 21 pigs at once.

Clutts realized that Old Betsy would not be able to nurse all of the piglets, and some of the pigs would die.

Then, Clutts did something out of the ordinary. She let Flossie, her dog, who had previously lost her litter, nurse four of the extra pigs.

Flossie was so successful in nursing the pigs that soon they were nursed by Flossie were bigger and healthier than the others.

Clutts reaped the benefits as she sold 14 of the pigs, paid her pledge of $100 and had more than $400 remaining. Although Clutts had given the promised amount, she said still wanted to do more to help with the construction of the cross.

Clutts said she wondered if there was some way she could multiply her earnings to contribute to the cross. Wayman Presley, who originated the idea of the cross, assured her that they could.

Taking Clutts' four remaining pigs and distributing them to various farmers, Presley was able to breed and eventually sell more and more pigs.

Soon the profits from the pigs escalated and was the main source of income for the Bald Knob Cross. The profit from Clutts' pigs and their offspring was more than $30,000 in a three-year period.

Clutts, through the sale of her pigs, made a large contribution to the Bald Knob Christian Foundation.

Hot hitting continues

SIU-C leads the Valley in team batting. One of the hottest hitters on the team is senior shortstop Dave Wrona.

Wrona, who started slowly, hit .535 (15-for-28) last week and drove in 12 runs. He homered in three consecutive games, including a grand slam April 3 at Evansville. The switch-hitting shortstop raised his batting average more than 140 points last week and is hitting .364. Wrona was named the Missouri Valley Conference Player of the Week for his efforts.

Wrona is part of a red-hot Saluki lineup that clubbed 46 hits against Bradley last weekend.

Right fielder Brad Hollenkamp went five-for-seven with three RBIs in the Sunday doubleheader. Hollenkamp raised his average to .402.

"We've been able to hit in clutch situations with men on and it's not always the same person," Jones said. "A lot of different players have contributed with two outs and men in scoring position."

Shields says the Saluki offense has been a team effort.

"Right now it doesn't matter who we put in there because the attitude on the team is that we'll get the big hit in a key situation," Shields said. "Everyone feels that they are going to be the one to do it. And when you're that confident, things seem to fall into the right place."

Pitching, defense thriving

The Salukis' pitching has not been too shabby, either.

Sophomore right-hander George Joseph (4-0) and senior right-hander Chris Bend (4-0) hurled three-hitters in the double-header sweep Sunday.

Joseph received help from Al Levine and shut out Bradley 4-0. Bend is 18-5 in four seasons with the Salukis.

Sophomore right-hander Sean Bergman just missed a shut out in his 9-1 complete game victory. Bradley scored a tally in the top of the ninth.

"We could have had two shutouts," Jones said.

Saluki pitchers held the Braves to 24 hits in the series.

The Salukis' defense has supported the pitchers with a conference-leading .972 fielding percentage. The Salukis have only 24 errors this season.

Jones moved junior Mike Kirkpatrick from first to third. Wrona went from third to shortstop and Endebrock moved from shortstop to first base.

Jones' moves have paid dividends. Kirkpatrick has made only three errors at third. Wrona and Davis form a solid combination in the middle of the infield. Davis has only one error at second. Endebrock, who committed 35 errors at shortstop last season, has only one error at first base.

The Salukis always can depend on Shields in center field. Shields is errorless this season. Hollenkamp has just two errors in right field and Geary has three in left.

"I think defense has been one of the big surprises," Jones said. "We shifted Mike Kirkpatrick from first to third not knowing what would happen. And Mike has done a very good job for us at third. And Dave Wrona, Kurt Endebrock and Timmy Davis have done a great job. From a defensive standpoint they've done real well."

Darnell's success this year didn't come by chance. After a tear in her rotator cuff in January of 1989, Darnell has been on a rehabilitation program and lifting weights to get her shoulder in shape.

"I seem to be a lot stronger this year," Darnell said. "I've gained three mph on my fastball this year and I'm a lot more confident."

"I need to keep on the rehab and stay with the weights because if I stop now I'm just going to get weaker and I'll be right back where I started."

Being from Carbondale has its advantages for Darnell.

"I live in the dorms so I'm not actually living at home, but I still get all the benefits of home," Darnell said. "My parents and grandparents come to all the games. It's really great to have them here and be as supportive as they are."

Darnell attributes most of her success to her father, Ron, the assistant softball coach at Carbondale Community High School, where Darnell played prep ball.

"My dad catches for his fast-pitch softball team in the summer and I think he really just wanted someone to throw to so he had me out there almost every day," Darnell said. "I could throw kind of hard and I was wild enough so he could get some work in. I just kept working with him and he is the main reason why I am where I am today.

"My dad has coached me ever since I could pick up a ball. In college he feels a little lost because he's not out there telling me what to do."

SIU-C coach Kay Brechtelsbauer always has stressed to her team the importance of keeping up the grades, and Darnell has taken it to heart.

A radio/television major, Darnell maintains a 3.67 GPA and made the Deans' List last fall.

court to issue a permanent injunction against the free agency system and another court order to halt any future plan for a wage scale that would apply a ceiling on salaries for individual players.

The monetary damages sought by the players represent the difference between what the player would have made on an open market versus what he made under the NFL's restricted market and all damages awarded in antitrust cases are tripled.

"We fully support and encourage the players in their suit and we hope that they are successful," Gene Upshaw, executive director of the NFLPA, said in a statement. "The NFL's restraints on player freedom and movement are patently illegal and we feel confident that a jury will agree."

The strategy of filing suits by individual players against the league rather than by the NFLPA stems from a decision by the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis last year.

The three-judge panel, hearing a league appeal of a ruling in the NFLPA's 1987 antitrust suit against the league, ruled that the league was shielded from antitrust scrutiny as long as there existed a certified bargaining representative of the players. Since then, the NFLPA has declared itself decertified as a union, clearing the way for individual players to sue for antitrust damages.

Wynne rallies Cubs past Philadelphia

CHICAGO (UPI) — Chicago Manager Don Zimmer, seemingly relaxed at the season's outset, is letting the chips fall where they may.

"I'm not worried," said Zimmer after the Cubs rallied in the eighth inning Tuesday to win their opener, 2-1, over the Philadelphia Phillies.

"When we win every game is fun and when we get beat there is nothing we can do about it. I'm not going to be any different from last year."

It was fun, albeit and cold with a game time temperature of 30 degrees and a northerly wind of 26 mph. The game drew 7,791 fans, the smallest Opening Day crowd for the Cubs since 1983.

Marvell Wynne, batting for pitcher Les Lancaster, singled sharply to right to score Mark Grace with the winning run.

"It's nice to see a guy coming off the bench and get that hit," said Zimmer. "That's a big hit not only for him, but also for the club."

Wynne came into the clubhouse between innings to stay loose. "I just wanted to be ready if I was called upon," he said. "I got a good part of the bat on the ball."

Ryne Sandberg opened the eighth with a single and went to second on a wild pitch by Jeff Parrett, 0-1. After Lloyd McClendon struck out, Grace was intentionally walked. Lui Salazar singled to center, but Sandberg was thrown out on Sil Campusano's throw to catcher Darren Daulton.

Grace then came home on Wynne's single.

Despite the loss, Phillies manager Nick Leyva was quite pleased with his team's performance.

"It was a pretty good game overall. Bruce (Ruffin, the starter) pitched good, and that's a good sign. He kept us in the game. He was around the plate and he'll be effective if he can stay like that."

"The game was well played on both sides. If we play like that we got a chance to win."

Sandberg tied a record for most consecutive errorless games spanning two seasons by a second baseman with 91. Joe Morgan set the record in 1977-78 with the Cincinnati Reds.

White Sox nip Brewers, move to 2-0

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — The White Sox had a gift of nine walks and two unearned runs from the Brewers, allowing Lance Johnson and the rest of the Chicago players to spoil Milwaukee's home opener.

Johnson delivered a two-run single in the sixth inning Tuesday and Scott Radinsky recorded his first major-league victory, leading Chicago to a 5-3 victory in the Brewers' home opener.

"The guys played great," said Chicago Manager Jeff Torborg. "I'm pleased with the effort."

The White Sox also had a 2-1 victory over the Brewers on Monday in Chicago.

Milwaukee committed two errors that provided two runs and issued nine walks leading to three more runs.

"It wouldn't have mattered who was on the other side today," Milwaukee Manager Tom Trebelhorn said.

NHL investigating Norton incident

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (UPI) — The guarantees after the third game of a bad-blood hockey series were no sweep and New York Islanders defenseman Jeff Norton would live.

At the expense of Norton's concussion, the Islanders claimed their first victory of the postseason to draw within 2-1 of the New York Rangers in their best-of-seven first-round playoff series.

After the Islanders rallied for two third-period goals to force the first overtime, Brent Sutter scored the winner 59 seconds into the second. The winning goal was aided by a power play bridging the extra minutes after the Rangers' Mattia received a major penalty for boarding Norton.

Norton, who was released from the hospital Tuesday after spending the night listed in fair condition, is highly doubtful for Game 4 Wednesday on Long Island.

The incident, only the latest in a chain that began with Islanders center Pat LaFontaine's concussion in the series opener, Tuesday was under investigation by the NHL.

Mallette rammed Norton into the boards from behind after the Islander already had been spun away from the play by a jarring but clean check from Chris Nilan. The penalty in fact had to be called by a linesman because the referee was so far away from the incident to stay with the game action.

If a hearing is scheduled and Mallette is deemed to have had intent to injure, he would receive a match penalty. Although the LaFontaine concussion called for no action — resulting from a clean check by James Patrick — the Islanders' retribution tactics resulted in $30,000 worth of fines to the Islanders and Coach Al Arbour from NHL president John Ziegler.

Islanders GM Bill Torrey was asked after Game 3 if Ziegler had been present at Nassau Coliseum.

"No, and he wasn't at Game 2 either," Torrey said. "I guess he figured he did enough."

An NHL spokesperson in New York said Ziegler was at home watching three games. He only assessed fines for Game 1. Player suspensions are left to NHL Vice President Brian O'Neill, who will make the decision on Mallette.

The absence of Norton on the Islanders defense may be compounded by Game 3 injuries to blueliners Doug Crossman and Gary Nylund. Crossman suffered a hip flexor and Nylund a contusion to the knee late in the game Monday. Both are day to day.

LaFontaine was upgraded to possible, although he is suffering effects of the concussion, such as getting nauseous when bending to lace his skates.

"He's being very careful, even answering questions," Islanders center Bryan Trottier said. "We've been teasing him."

"You know, Patty and Norty are two of our most resilient players on the team. They look like they're dead, then bing they're back. They'll both be back."

Former boxer tells of steroid effects

HOUSTON (UPI) — Former heavyweight boxer Bob Hazelton has spent the past two years touring the country speaking against the use of anabolic steroids.

"I can't leave you with any one-liners," he tells his audience. "I can just say, 'Look at me.'"

Hazelton, 43, was once a 6-foot-5, 190-pound athlete. He is now confined to a wheelchair, having had both legs amputated. He has suffered two heart attacks and recently had an infected hip muscle removed.

"I get very, very sad talking to these kids because I get to thinking it could have been me out there listening," Hazelton said in his appeal Monday to students at Deer Park Junior High. "I've had kids come up to me and say, 'We've had people come in here and talk to us, but they don't give us the true experience about what happens.' It's not a quick fix, but a quick way to the graveyard."

Until 1986, Hazelton had no qualms about steroids. After all, he had bulging biceps and could bench press 525 pounds. Now he knows differently, and he's determined to keep youngsters from experiencing the same fate.

Hazelton, who lives in San Antonio, began using steroids during the 1970s to help him gain weight after being knocked out by George Foreman in the first round of a 1969 bout. He moved to London where a doctor introduced him to the steroid deca durabolin.

"I was told it was a vitamin pill," Hazelton said.

Steroids, accompanied by weight training, will build mass, but the potential side effects are alarming. Steroids can produce liver tumors, heart disease, psychological aggression and sterility.

Hazelton's steroid consumption began at about 600 milligrams a week and increased to more than 3,200 milligrams when he left boxing and started body building.

Hazelton grew in size and strength, but the steroids finally took their toll. He began complaining of pain in his left leg and doctors found a 3-foot blood clot.

"For my birthday (Nov. 11, 1986), I got my left leg amputated as my present," he said. "Steroids can cause problems in your body that you can't detect until it's too late."

Offered a job to tour as a bodyguard with the rock group Heart, Hazelton ignored his first costly confrontation with steroids and began building his body with them again. In only three weeks, his right leg cloitted and was amputated in 1987.

A survey conducted at Deer Park High School in April 1989 showed 11 percent of the junior and senior male athletes admitted to using steroids at least once.

"It's sickening when you see a lot of schools who turn their backs and say it's not a problem," Hazelton said.

"I went to a school (in Salt Lake City) where they said they didn't have a steroid problem, but wanted to make the kids aware of drugs. After I finished talking, five of their first-string varsity football players came up to me and said, 'We've done steroids.' I haven't been to a school yet that didn't have steroids in it."

Opening Day

Even Bill Buckner receives a standing ovation

Providence Journal

BOSTON — It's been said that time begins on Opening Day.

The grass looks a little greener. The old ballyard looks a little fresher. It's a day when we are reminded once again of the timelessness of Fenway Park, one of the few constants in a fast-food world.

Opening Day is all about renewal and second chances, rebirth and the possibility of redemption. A day when the long, cold winter is finally over and anything seems possible.

SO IT WAS only fitting that the day started with a standing ovation for Bill Buckner. Who needs redemption any more than Billy Buck, the man whose become a symbol of Red Sox frustration, a man who will forever be remembered for the routine ground ball that rolled through his legs that cool October night in 1986?

Regardless of what you may think about the Sox's decision to let Buckner, 40, go to spring training, and regardless of how successful his comeback is, how can we not applaud what Buckner has done? He has beaten the odds just by being on the opening day roster. He's been a small portrait of the triumph of the spirit.

BEFORE THE GAME, Buckner came out of the dugout to a thunderous ovation, trotting in that familiar gait, like an old man running to catch a bus.

He took off his blue cap and waved as the cheers came down all around him. The cheers said that all trespassers were forgiven. Even those that once cost the Red Sox the World Series.

It also was fitting that the Sox got their first three runs in the first inning courtesy of Dwight Evans' double into the corner in right center.

IF THE RED Sox have become a franchise that's looking back at its triple A team in Pawtucket for its future, Evans is the last link to the past. Back to the days of Yaz and Pudge and El Tiante. Of Rice and Lynn. He is the only one left now.

Making Evans' feat even more special was that it was only a week ago he was found to have a bone spur and a small stress fracture in his back. He was given an injection with to break up the spur and ease the pain.

AT THE TIME it seemed like some harbinger of things to come, a reminder that players don't last forever. Even those who have become a part of so many of our summers.

Evans, like Buckner, seemed to step out of some time capsule.

Before the game Evans was in the batting cage, doing situational hitting.

Right before Evans' last swing, Sox hitting coach Richie Hebner whispered, "Bottom of the ninth, two out, nobody on."

EVANS SWUNG and the ball went shooting up into the blue sky, eventually falling into the screen in left.

"Game's over," Evans said quietly as he walked out of the cage.

It also was fitting that Wade Boggs started out as if the off-season is just a mere weekend away from work. He singled to right in the first, then singled again in the second to knock in a run. Wade the hitting machine.

IN THE SEVENTH, he legged another single into a double, sliding in neatly to avoid the tag. The crowd gave him a standing ovation. As if to say that last year is officially over. Margo. The magnifying glass that Boggs spent the season under. All of it.

And it also was fitting that Roger spoke.

Forget that he had a no-hitter going into the sixth. We expect that.

BUT HE SPOKE publicly for the first time all spring. Opening Days are no time for lingering animosities.

So there was Clemens in the clubhouse afterward, standing before a media horde in a black warmup suit and a dark visor with pink swatches in it. Jock chic.

He said all the perfunctory things about how his teammates made his job easier by getting him some early runs, and how he spent the afternoon trying to keep the ball "low and hard." He said how he and new catcher Tony Pena worked well together.

WHAT HE didn't say was why his locker has "Possessed/Rebel" written above it, while the others all have names above them. Then again, maybe some things should remain mysteries.

Then Clemens was asked why he went through spring training wearing number 14, his personal homage to the departed Jim Rice.

"Out of respect for him and what he accomplished here," he said. "I would love to see him come back and get his 400th homer, which he feels will help him for the Hall of Fame."

"DID RICE know you were going to do it?" he was asked.

"I told him I wanted to and he said I was crazy, but that I should do what I wanted to," Clemens said. "So I told him I was going to wear his number in spring training."

And, of course, it was the most fitting of all that the Sox won 5-2 over Detroit.

It was a day for believing in renewal and second chances. A day when the long, cold winter was finally over and anything seemed possible.

A day when Billy Buck returned, Dewey knocked in three runs, Wade got three hits and Roger actually spoke! A day when the Red Sox were their opener and everything seemed right with the world.

IAAC holds on cheerleader safety

By Eric Bugger
Staff Writer

The Intercollegiate Athletic Advisory Committee agreed to wait for a formal report from the Student Programming Council regarding cheerleading safety before it makes any further considerations.

Committee member George Peach brought the cheerleading safety issue to the IAAC meeting March 20. The committee suspended discussion of the issue until yesterday, when cheerleader representatives were available to present their points of view.

Assistant Programming Coordinator Don Castle, Student Programming Council Spirit Chairman Tim Jackson and cheerleading coach Nancy Esling were on hand to answer questions from the IAAC.

Castle agreed to present a report with all the specifics to the IAAC May 8 at its next regular meeting. The report will include information from a phone survey, conducted by Castle's staff, of other colleges to find out about their cheerleading programs. The survey will include all Missouri Valley Conference schools and several others in Illinois.

Peach said cheerleader safety was just a matter of concern, on the committee's part, of someone getting hurt.

"A lot of things can go wrong. A person can slip or lose their grip and a serious injury could result," Peach said.

Esling presented a copy of the Universal Cheerleader Association safety guidelines to the committee for review. She said the UCA is considered the foremost authority in college cheerleading and SIU-C cheerleaders voluntarily adhere to those guidelines.

The cheerleaders attend a UCA camp every August, which updates them on the latest safety techniques and trains them.

Sox announcer wants expansion club

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) — Chicago White Sox broadcaster and former general manager Ken "Hawk" Harrelson has assembled an ownership group fighting for a baseball expansion franchise in St. Petersburg.

His coalition is competing with Tampa businessman Frank Morsani's group to land a franchise in St. Petersburg, Harrelson revealed Monday from Comiskey Park in Chicago during the opening day of the 1990 baseball season.

Sarasota businessman Thomas

Hammons is the group's "principal partner," Harrelson said, adding that most of the partners live in Florida and a staff already has been organized to handle baseball operations.

"We've been low-key with it, and we'll continue to low-key it until the appropriate time," Harrelson said. "But baseball certainly knows about it, the appropriate people know about it."

He said an announcement probably will be made within the next few months.

Hammons' attorney, Richard

Saba, said Hammons wanted to make the announcement at a later date.

Tampa Mayor Sandy Freedman voiced her allegiance to Morsani's group during a radio talk show Tuesday. "Mr. Morsani deserves the support of the city," she said.

Hammons' group presents the first challenge to Morsani's group, the MXM Corp., since the Tampa interest agreed to house their baseball team in St. Petersburg's newly-opened Florida Suncoast Dome.

"It's clearly baseball's decision, but Mr. Morsani has been hard at it for a number of years," said assistant City Manager Rich Dodge, who heads the city's efforts to find a team for the 43,000-seat stadium.

Dodge said Hammons has toured the dome and has expressed interest in putting a team in the stadium.

Jim Cysak, representative for Morsani's partner, New York developer William Mack, said competition was expected.

Former star pitcher Norris mounts comeback from drugs and injuries

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — Mike Norris has battled life's dark side for the last seven years. He's experienced the seductive lure of drugs and alcohol and the cold, cruel depths of depression.

A one-time celebrity, Norris watched his once promising baseball career evaporate in a matter of months back in 1983 to a volatile mixture of substance abuse and injury.

MEMORIES OF that struggle made Opening Day 1990 all the sweeter for Norris, who at 35 finds himself once more battling like a rookie for a spot on a Major League roster.

"I'm lost for words at what this means to me," said Norris, standing on the steps of the A's dugout. "This is incredible. I started a couple Opening Days, but it was nothing like this. I feel ... well ... I really can't put into words how I feel."

NORRIS WAS the toast of Oakland back in 1980. He rode a limousine to the stadium before each starting assignment. The stands were filled with adoring young ladies who called to him as he walked down the runway to the field. Life was sweet.

But there was turbulence under Norris' cool veneer. Then-manager Billy Martin had no bullpen so Norris and the club's other starters were forced to go the distance. Norris — a fastball and screwball pitcher — threw an unheard of 24 complete games in 1980 and appeared in 284 innings.

Athletics' Quirk still valuable because of his catching skill

San Francisco Examiner

Nobody knows better than Jamie Quirk why he's still in the majors after 15 years.

"I'd be long gone if I couldn't catch," said Quirk, who has played with eight big-league and seven minor-league teams in his career.

"I know the American League, I know the hitters," said Quirk, the A's third-string catcher. "I think I've got a good arm and I know how to handle pitchers. It keeps me working."

Quirk, a career .238 hitter with only 182 RBIs in the majors (an average of 12 per year), has kept his career alive with his ability to catch. Nobody on the A's roster, not Mike Norris, not Carney Lansford, not Dennis Eckersley, has been in pro ball longer than the 6-foot-4, 200-pound converted infielder.

Quirk, 35, was Kansas City's first-round draft in 1972 right out of high school. He was a shortstop then, but three years later he had moved to third and got his first taste of the big leagues; joining the Royals for 14 games in 1975.

He was a utility player for Kansas City and Milwaukee over the next three years. It was former Royal manager Whitey Herzog, now the St. Louis skipper, who taught Quirk to catch.

In 1989 Quirk thought his career was over after he started out with the Yankees (13 games, .083 average), went down to Tacoma (14 games, .170), signed with Oakland (nine games, .200, and was cut by the A's on July 28.

But after Mickey Teuleon was hurt, Quirk wound up with Baltimore down the stretch drive, getting into 25 games.

Quirk, who lives with his wife, Anna, and two children in Kansas, said he doesn't think about the day he's going to quit.

It's a long way from being an 18-year-old shortstop for Billings in 1972 to being a 35-year-old third-string catcher for the world champions in 1990, but it's been worth it, every step of the way, said Quirk.

"As long as they want to pay me, I'll keep playing."

"IF WE COULD have had the bullpen the A's have now, who's knows what I could have done," he said.

The repetition of nine hard innings of work every third or fourth day wore down Norris' arm and shoulder. His nerves screamed out in pain. But Norris wanted to play, he wanted to pitch and ignored the pain as long as he could.

He went on the disabled list in 1982 and in 1983 had surgery on his inflamed nerves.

"I REMEMBER my last (big league) start, it was against these guys (the Minnesota Twins in 1983)," Norris said. "My arm was hurting like hell. My nerves were going berserk. My arm kept shaking. I remember Dave Beard (another pitcher on the A's roster at the time) telling me to get out of the game, but I wanted to pitch.

"My arm was shaking so bad I had to put it between my legs to get it to be still. I went like that for six innings, but then I had to get out."

FOR THE NEXT two years, Norris tried to come back. But the strength in his once powerful pitching arm was no longer there. Frustration came, then depression, then drugs.

Norris was labeled a substance abuser. Teams that would have once died to have him on the roster no longer even returned his calls.

"THAT WAS THE toughest thing," he said. "Even though I did drugs and was suppose to be a bad guy, I felt I had played well enough to get another chance. It bothered me for a long time. But once I stopped thinking about that and beating myself up, I was able to start putting things back together."

It wasn't easy. Norris struggled to stay clean, but fell back into his ways.

"THERE ARE two ways to treat drug abuse — be hospitalized or be institutionalized," he said. "I went through both."

Norris also began to learn a lot about himself.

"It has taken me a long time to understand myself," he said. "I've learned everything isn't that easy. I know this is my final opportunity. It's up to me, alone, to try and make it."

NORRIS WAS in the A's farm system last season and overcome some early physical problems to go 5-2 in the final two months of the Triple-A Pacific Coast League season.

This spring, he allowed one run in seven innings of work, striking out nine and walking three. But A's manager Tony La Russa is yet to tip his hand on Norris' future.

"WE'VE GOT a good idea of what we want to do, but now is not the time to talk about it," he said.

For now, Norris says he just wants to enjoy each and every moment. To savor what he once took for granted.

"I'm not going to downplay what this means, but I know that this is a stepping stone," he said. "I made it this far, now I have to go another step further."
