Viewing private parts in public places

The issue of pornography on SIUC computers

ANNE MARIE TAVELLA
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A picture of a nude woman from the Playboy Cyber Club pops up from behind the screen saver on a computer in the humanities section of Morris Library.

On the computers in Lesar Law Library the web addresses of previously visited sites include www.spankymonkey.com and www.whitegirlonline.com.

An estimated 60,000 pornographic websites are available in the United States. According to a study by the American Psychological Association, sex is the No. 1-searched topic on the Internet.

With the Internet used in public institutions, the controversy about what people view on public computers is nothing new. The debate has evolved into a fight over Constitutional rights with powerful groups on either side of the argument, including the American Civil Liberties Union on the anti-filtering side and the Family Research Council on the pro-filtering side.

On Jan. 24, the Arizona House of Representatives rejected a proposed state law that would have required all government entities, including public colleges and universities, to install anti-pornographic filters.

In Illinois, there is currently no legislation concerning filters.

Supporters of the legislation do not approve of computers bought with taxpayer money being used for viewing pornography, according to a Jan. 26 article in The Chronicle of Higher Education. Those who opposed the bill not only used First Amendment rights in their argument, but also costs and lack of need.

While the controversy rages nationally, the debate over whether to put anti-pornography filters in Computer Learning Centers and libraries at SIUC is not much of a discussion. SIUC has no written policy against looking at pornography, which means people are free to look at any subject they choose. University officials do not consider it a problem.

Patty Cosgrove, assistant director of Information Technology, said the use of filters in an academic setting could cause problems as censoring that hinders people who are simply doing research.

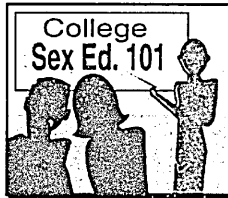

Cost, pointed out by those who oppose the Arizona bill, is another problem with filters. Filtering, especially at a large university, could be expensive considering the number of computers that would have to be upgraded. One Web-filter software program, SOS Guardian, specializes in educational settings and costs $249.95 per department. SIUC has about 56 academic departments alone.

Cosgrove said it was not the place of the learning centers to decide what students can and cannot look at.

"We don't do censorship," Cosgrove said.

She said the only problem would be if other students were offended by the material. Learning center employees do not monitor what students do at the computers, unless it is disruptive.

Although the learning centers have no policy against pornographic material, they do have a practice of reporting complaints to the offenders.

"Ninety percent of the time, people are embarrassed and stop doing what they are doing," Cosgrove said.

Cosgrove said complaints do not happen very often. With Computer Learning Center 1 (Faner Hall) open until 3 a.m. during the week, students have the opportunity to use the lab late at night when it is less busy. This makes it easier for a student who wants to view pornography to separate themselves from other students.

Raj Ray, a student worker in Computer Learning Center 3 (Rehn Hall), said he rarely sees anyone looking at pornography. Ray, a senior in information management systems from Wheaton, said it may be because the lab he works in closes at 11 p.m. and is less likely to be used by students at night.

The learning centers are not the only places to view pornography on campus. Both Morris Library and Lesar Law Library, unlike the learning centers, are open to the public.

Carolyn Snyder, dean of Library Affairs, said the only policy the library has concerning individual computer use

Office admits to errors

Controversial report on faculty productivity to be re-written by Provost office

KATE MCCANN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A report regarding faculty credit hour production that came under scrutiny after some faculty members questioned its validity will be re-examined by the Provost's office.

Tuesday's Faculty Senate meeting resulted in a promise of a re-release of the report this summer after some minor errors are corrected.

The report, entitled "Who Teaches SIUC Courses," was released two weeks ago through interim Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs and Provost Margaret Winters' office.

The author of the report, Cheryl Farabaugh-Dorkins of the Institutional Research office, was accused by Faculty Senate representative Mary Lamb of using "skewed statistics" as an excuse to make faculty cutbacks.

Farabaugh-Dorkins is out of town and could not be reached for comment.

Winters admitted the report had minor errors and gave her assurance of a correction.

"I had obviously not read it carefully enough and it got through with a few errors," Winters said.

Winters, who said her office is working on correcting the errors, said any accusations that the report was conducted for the purpose of cutting faculty lines were unfounded.

"There's a lot of discussion going on around here on whether or not we used the right number of faculty or not," Winters said. "But most of that report was absolutely accurate."

The major contention Lamb and other Faculty Senate members have with the report is that the numbers used for faculty head count were that of "Faculty (Full and Part Time)" as opposed to "Full-Time instructional faculty."

Winters said using Faculty (Full and Part Time) is required by the Illinois Board of Higher Education when measuring faculty credit hour production.

"I find that very hard to understand," Lamb said. "I would like to verify that."

Lamb was overall disappointed with the meeting's outcome.

"I'm very unsatisfied with her response," Lamb said. "[Winters] does not accept that there are better numbers to measure faculty productivity."

Proposed fee information to go before Board

Dietz to present an array of fee increase proposals

RHONDA SCIARRA
STUDENT AFFAIRS EDITOR

A $123 increase to University Housing Rates beginning in fall of 2001 is one of several proposed student fee increases that new Vice Chancellor Larry Dietz will present at his first Board of Trustees meeting Thursday.

The new vice chancellor for Student Affairs and enrollment management, who has been in the position for a week, is scheduled to let the board know of a collection of fee proposals when the board meets at 10:30 a.m. in Ballroom B of the Student Center.

As the new vice chancellor, Dietz said his job is to see what students and constituency groups think about such proposals, but he added it is up to the board with what happens.

"My role is to have dialogue and discussion about these issues," Dietz said. "At some point in time a decision has to be made on these fees, and the board makes the final decision."

Included in the package of fee changes is a 5.99-percent increase in housing rates each semester, an $8 increase in the Student Medical Benefit fee, an $8.50 increase in the mass transit fee, a $3 increase in the Student Center Fee and a $5 increase in the athletic fee.

Housing rate changes would be effective summer 2001, while all other fee increases would be effective fall 2001. Action on these proposals will be taken at the May board meeting.

Both the Undergraduate Student Government and the Graduate and Professional Student Council have reached decisions on the proposed fee increases.

All fee increases, except the athletic fee increase and the full 5-percent Student Center fee increase, have been approved by USG. Instead, USG approved a 3-percent Student Center fee increase.

Proposed Fee Changes Effective Fall 2001

Mass Transit Fee	$8.50 increase
Intercollegiate Athletic Fee	$5 increase each fiscal year
Student Medical Benefit Fee	$8 increase, fall and spring semesters $4.80 increase, summer semester
Student Center Fee	$3 increase
Student Recreation Fee	$2 increase
Residence Hall Rates (Effective Summer 2001)	$123 increase per semester for double occupancy room and board

USG President Sean Henry said he thinks the bulk of fee increase proposals are fair.

"I think it's important to ensure adequate funding for all of these services and make sure we provide the best services we can," Henry said.

Saluki abduction saga comes to an end

Dog's return to Scheduling Office leaves employees smiling

GEOFFREY RITTER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

When Shella Nickell came into work Monday morning, a disfigured green mummy in the Scheduling Office window told her that the Saluki kidnapping caper had finally come to a close.

Almost a week after his kidnapping on April 4, the yellow plastic foam dog, known as Butter, returned to the office in the same mysterious way he had disappeared.

Found wrapped in green linen and with a tattoo on his leg re-christening him as "Butch," Butter had returned from his adventure and lived to tell the story.

His hat, which had been used to collect donations to pay his ransom, had disappeared from the scene.

"He did have alcohol on his breath," Nickell said jokingly, "but we're glad to have him back."

During the past week, the compromising pictures and ransom notices, which included such demands as a Lear jet, the release of the Dalhaj Lama and the international banning of grits, had attracted attention to the office as employees have steadily posted them in the window.

Assistant Student Center Director Susan Coriasco said even interim Chancellor John Jackson chuckled at the caper when he saw the window Sunday.

"A lot of people are stopping and reading the notes," said Lori Morrison, secretary to the director of the Student Center. "It's brought a lot more attention to that area of the building."

Despite his return, however, employees are still scratching their heads trying to figure out who his abductors were. Because the demands and photos were left in the office during the night, Coriasco said she suspects the culprits had office keys. While they have hunches, office workers are still unsure who the culprits were.

"I still want to know who did it," said Bree Trammell, a senior in psychology and administration of justice who works in the Scheduling and Catering Office. "They didn't really give us a lot of clues."

While the fiasco has left office workers wondering, they agree that the caper has added some fun to the office. All are glad to see the dog return, and Coriasco said she would like to start a scrapbook of the ransom demands and pictures.

"We had a good time with it," said Catering Coordinator Carol Dyer. "We have a difficult spring semester, so it was fun."

However, while office workers can breathe easy for now, it appears the saga may not be finished quite yet. Tuesday morning, just when everything looked safe, Nickell came into the office, only to find a mysterious manila envelope lying on the floor. The enclosed note included the following passage:

"... I will accept these trinkets in the hat for now, but you must know that nothing is safe and nothing is sacred. I will return!!!!"

Student Legal Services helps with leases

Prevention is the key to avoiding problems

DAVID OSBORNE
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The Students' Legal Service Office wants students to do their homework.

It is not the assignments given by their professors that concern Steven Rogers, an attorney with Student Legal Services. Rogers wants students to thoroughly read and understand their leases before signing, and do a little background check of their prospective landlord.

Rogers' office handles about 500 landlord-tenant complaints each year, and he thinks most could be prevented if students took time to thoroughly understand their lease.

"Ask the landlord for a copy of the lease, and if there's anything you don't understand, let us review it," Rogers said.

Rogers said if the landlord does not want to let a prospective tenant take a copy of the lease with them for review before signing, reconsider renting there.

"You have to ask yourself 'why? What's in the lease he doesn't want a second party to read?'" Rogers asked.

Chris Peters, a senior in microbiology from Auburn, Mich., agrees reading a lease would eliminate most problems that might plague a tenant. Peters was able to obtain a copy of his lease to take home and study before he signed it. He also asked questions and got a detailed explanation of his lease by his landlord.

New group provides a touch of common ground

Fun and support for GLBTF grad students comes in form of Graduate Rainbow Caucus

JENNIFER WIG
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

For Kevin Menken, it is not always easy to find a social group where he is completely at ease.

The Graduate Rainbow Caucus is a new social group for graduate students with a variety of relationship orientations. The group, which began about a month ago, increased its numbers within two meetings from eight students to about 30.

Menken, a recent new member, said because many of the members are teaching assistants, the group increases awareness among the faculty members with whom they work.

"Just having a policy doesn't give you protection, it just gives you recourse," said Menken, an undeclared student from Atlanta. "It's important to be in touch with other graduate students in different fields."

Not only does the group support Menken in his scholarly pursuits, it is an emotional cushion as well. He said homosexuals have things in common culturally that many people just do not understand, even undergraduate homosexual students.

Paulette Curkin, adviser to the group, said the organization was started by graduate students who thought they needed an outlet, away from the younger members of the Saluki Rainbow Network. And although the network focuses primarily on political goals, the Graduate Rainbow Caucus is essentially a group of friends.

"They don't have the time to go out and do late-night bar stuff, so they decided to meet once a month to do something social," Curkin said. "They decided that was the fellowship they needed."

Goddard, 35, has been at the Carbondale Police Department for more than eight years. He started working as a detective about four years ago. The Anna native started working as a police officer in June 1989. Goddard said he promises to always work hard as a policeman "as long as I can."

OUR WORD

How much is it worth to you?

Imagine causing the death of another by driving while under the influence of alcohol, an offense that carries three to 14 years in jail if convicted of reckless homicide in Illinois. Imagine sitting in jail with nothing to do but think about what you've taken from another human being, another family. It can happen.

Imagine a friend having to remember going to the bars and drinking shots that night, laughing and having fun until last call. The friend offered to take you home, but you had to go to work the next morning and didn't want to risk leaving your car. Imagine that friend thinking, "I could have taken the keys ..." for the rest of his or her life.

And the family. How do you imagine losing a child or sibling to something so sudden and random? How do you imagine walking past your child's graduation picture to answer the door to a solemn-faced state-trooper? "Are you the mother of ...?"

Most of the people behind Alcohol Awareness Month and organizations like Mother Against Drunk Driving don't have to imagine — they know. They have designated April as a time to reflect on all that's been lost to the irresponsible use of alcohol. It seems like every month is something else: breast cancer awareness, eating disorder awareness or AIDS awareness. After a while, especially on a college campus, it may become easy to walk past the posters or ignore the television commercials.

Maybe this is the year to care, though. Every 53 minutes someone dies because of alcohol-related accidents, and more than half of those people are between the ages of 21 and 34. If all those people had just taken time to think of the real impact of their actions — if they considered, for just a minute, what a gamble it was and how high the stakes were, there would be no Alcohol Awareness Month.

We could tell you what to do and what not to do, but if you don't know about the dangers and laws by now, you're not listening anyway. We would rather tell you to think of the dead, the parents, the friend, and the prospect of jail. Maybe next time someone offers to take you home, you can think of the people who'd miss you, or the people who don't even know who you might have the misfortune of driving on the same roads. It's simply not worth it.

The Way I See It

jhugg@midwest.net

The Way I See It

It appears Wednesdays. Julie is a sophomore in journalism. Her opinion does not necessarily reflect that of the DAILY EPIPHAN.

April 22 will mark the 30th anniversary of Earth Day. What are you doing for the Earth?

Several events during the 1960s stimulated increasing concern for the environment including: the proclamation that the Great Lakes were dead, the grounding of the Torrey Canyon off the coast of England (the first catastrophic oil spill from a super tanker), and the publication of Rachel Carson's Silent Spring in 1962 — about the devastating misuse of pesticides on wildlife — to name a few.

One senator from Wisconsin, Gaylord Nelson, found himself troubled and frustrated by the fact that the critical matter of the state of the environment was effectively a non-issue in the politics of our country. Inspired by the non-violent activism occurring at college campuses over the Vietnam War and civil/women's rights, Nelson proposed a series of environmental learning experiences, or "teach-ins" across the nation.

Nelson asked the American people: "Are we prepared to say to manufacturers, you must take that thing off the market or prove that the waste it generates doesn't pollute the atmosphere?" Are we prepared to say to the oil companies that they must not drill offshore? Are we prepared to develop a land-use policy to say, "You must not destroy any more?" The founders of Earth Day realized that industry and the government would not protect the Earth unless people forced them to. Author Denis Hayes said, "We will not appeal any more to the conscience of institutions because institutions have no consciences. If we want them to do what is right, we must make them do what is right."

Following start of Earth Day, the Environmental Protection Agency was established; the Clean Air Act was signed into law; the National Environmental Policy Act was signed into law, which requires an analysis of the environmental impacts of federal actions; and the President's Council on Environmental Quality was established. Locally, starting Saturday with Cordonsale Clean-Up from 8 a.m. until noon at Turley Park, Earth Week 2000 will be happening on and off SIUC's campus until the conclusion and climax of events on Earth Day, April 22nd in Turley Park.

Some highlights of Earth Week will be: the "Flash your Trash" art show at Harbaugh's Cafe at 901B South Illinois Ave., from Friday to April 21, an Environmental Justice Fair with live music on Monday in the Free Forum area. Tuesday will be Alternative Transportation Day with Saluki Express providing free bus rides for all. Wednesday will be Human Impact Day, Thursday will be Waste Reduction Day and the SIUC Earth Fair, Friday will be Habitat Day and then Saturday, April 22, EARTH DAY 2000's theme will be "actions speak louder than words."

Please join your friends and neighbors in celebrating the one week out of the year when the Earth, the only home we will ever know, receives the focus of our attention.

"After we squander (Earth's) resources and make it uninhabitable, will we be able, even with our material wealth, to restore the air, to reanimate our Earth, to repair the genetic damage we have done?"

"...We are greedily eating the very heart of our tomorrow and our children's tomorrow. And meanwhile our god — the dark force of international corporate power-decides, hour by hour, how destructive the day's economic engine will be; how much long-term gain will be destroyed in the race for short-term profit."

Grades should count for student leaders

DEAR EDITOR:

In regards to the grade point average affair with [Rob] Taylor and his campaign to become our next Undergraduate Student Government president, we must ask ourselves that while the USG Judicial Board has vindicated Taylor, and he will be allowed to run, is he appropriate for the position?

I don't wish to tackle the legal reasoning, that has been settled by the USG Judicial Board. Nevertheless, I challenge students to look at the academic implications at hand. Our president should be one of not only exemplary character and attitude, of which I am confident that Taylor possesses these qualities, but also must be outstanding in academics. Isn't that our primary purpose as students — to enhance our academic ability? Therefore, the USG president should be an example of superior academic ability and represent traits we deem highly respectable as a student. As we all know, an intelligent person doesn't imply an effective president. It takes a person possessing wisdom and the proper use of intelligence to lead our students. However, excellence in academics is a necessity. I do not suggest that students with a 4.0 GPA be the only candidates for president, but we should re-examine the criteria and introduce a higher GPA restriction of possibly 3.0.

Our continuing compromise to academic standards will prove to be detrimental to us as students.

Grade replacement policy is working how it is

DEAR EDITOR:

I am writing in response to the [April 4 DAILY EPIPHAN] story on the Faculty Senate's vote to change the grade replacement policy.

The statement that Jim Allen, member of the Undergraduate Education Policy Committee, made about the current grade replacement policy benefiting non-traditional students is wrong. Under the current system, any grades received for repeated courses before Summer 1996 are averaged. If a non-traditional student received an F in a class 10 years ago and retook the class in 2000 and received an A, the A and the F would be averaged. According to Mr. Allen, this benefits us non-traditional students. According to me, a non-traditional student, this DOES PENALIZE us. While currently enrolled, students can replace their mistakes by proving that they have the skills to do well in a class, we must struggle to raise our GPAs to "average" levels.

The current grade replacement policy rewards students who are willing to take the extra effort and time to correct themselves. It is nice to see that the Faculty Senate cares so much about what our parents approve of. It is who make up this institution called SIUC, and it is our time and money that is wasted by repeating classes. We pay the faculty for the service of acquiring their knowledge. This institution is a service-based industry; if we can't receive the service that we want to pay for, we just might look elsewhere for an institution willing to offer the services we crave.

History has rewarded those whom have tried and failed then tried and succeeded. We don't remember Thomas Edison for his 10,000 failures at creating the light bulb — we remember that one success that gave light to the world. That's all we want, to be remembered for our successes, even if it takes us a few tries — at least we have learned something.

I do not support the decision to change the policy; it will hurt the University more than it will benefit it. At this crossroads in SIUC's future, we need to think about whether this institution will survive the next century. I am very worried about our current path chosen through poorly conceived plans such as this one.

A festival of lights, camera and action

SPC film festival honors deceased former staff member

TRAVIS MORSE
ACADEMIC AFFAIRS EDITOR

To support artistic diversity in Carbondale and honor a fallen comrade, the Student Programming Council is sponsoring its second annual Yai Mi Memorial Film Festival Saturday in the Student Center Auditorium.

Yai Mi, a member of the SPC staff three years ago, died in a tragic car accident soon after he graduated. Last year, SPC decided to turn its festival into a memorial for this much-loved figure.

Tom Denney, director of advertising at SPC-TV, said Yai Mi was a constant source of inspiration and guidance for student workers at SPC-TV.

"He did a lot for the station and he made people feel important. He was a big influence," Denney said.

Also, Denney said the festival offers student filmmakers the perfect venue to display their work and get feedback from an audience of their peers.

"The most important part is that we have a lot of student productions and it's great when students can come together and help support each other," Denney said. "Getting feedback helps the process and it makes us feel like the cinematic community here in Carbondale."

Mike Meyer, chairperson of SPC-TV, hopes the young, fledgling filmmakers involved in the festival get a sense of pride from having their work recognized.

"I hope they get out of it what every new producer or director gets out of it, enormous pride in a job well done," Meyer said.

In addition to pride, participants are also eligible to receive a cash award if their work is judged worthy. First place receives $300, second place gets $200 and third place winners are given $100.

All entries for the festival must be in by Thursday and all must be on VHS tape with 10 seconds of black and a countdown. There is a $2 admission fee as well.

This year, there are 10 submissions so far for the judged event. These range from two-minute shorts to hour-long documentaries. Meyer said the festival will only continue to expand in the future.

"I'm going to see to it that it does grow," Meyer said.

PORNOGRAPHY

is that priority be given to people using the computers for academic purposes. The policy is stated on signs throughout the undergraduate library.

She said filters have been discussed, but the library has no plans to install them.

Bill Byrnes, a library technical assistant II, said he has seen people looking at pornography on occasion when he works evenings in the library. He said that it does not happen very often, even though the undergraduate library is open 24 hours a day during the week.

Byrnes said if someone were looking at pornography, the only reason to stop them would be if another person needed the computer for schoolwork.

"They are really within their Constitutional rights if they want to do that," Byrnes said.

Findings in an online survey by MSNBC and the APA correspond with Byrnes' observations. While 78.8 percent of the 9,177 people surveyed stated they would only use their home computers for sexual pursuits, less than 3 percent stated they would use a computer outside of their homes or offices for looking at pornography or visiting sex chat rooms.

With pornography not considered a problem on campus, the question rises of whether few people are looking at pornography on campus or if people are just not being seen.

A few minutes after the computer in the humanities library displayed a photo of a naked woman left there by the previous user, on-duty student worker John Linville has only seen a few people looking at pornography in three years working there. Linville, a senior in finance from Mount Vernon, said he has never received a complaint about someone looking at pornography.

He said people are more likely to use the undergraduate library because it is open later, even though the humanities library, on the second floor, is quieter and less busy.

"Well, I don't really think that matters to them," Linville said.

Peter Kulbek, a student worker in Lesar Library, said he has never seen anyone actually looking at pornography, but he knows people do. Kulbek has seen pornographic sites listed among previously viewed web addresses.

One aspect of Lesar Library may make it easier for some students to view pornography without being seen by others:

"Law students have keys, so they have 24-hour access," said Kulbek.

Another factor that may cause Lesar Library to be a target of those seeking porn is a small number of unique workstations. At these stations the computer monitor is completely submerged into the desk and tilted upward, which makes it difficult for anyone but the person seated to view what is on the screen. These desks, which are designed to be ergonomic, may be attractive to the more bashful pornography viewers.

Lesar Library Director Frank Houdek said although it may happen occasionally, it is far from being a problem.

Houdek said the option of putting filters in the computers is very unlikely.

"We're not in the business of trying to censor the information people seek," Houdek said.

REPORT

Larry Schilling, who helped compile the report and was present at the Faculty Senate meeting, said Farabaugh-Dorkins went off on a "tangent" in computing faculty productivity, and that was not the original intent of the report.

Lamb, who asserts that both interim Chancellor John Jackson and Winters are "determined" to cut faculty lines, accused the Institutional Research office of reaching a conclusion before writing the report.

However Jackson discredits all accusations of misleading statistics and said there will inevitably be arguments when conducting research.

"Nobody told the person who wrote the report what the conclusion should be," Jackson said. "And I do object to the insinuation of malicious intent."

The revised report is scheduled to be released this summer.

FEES

The GPSC has expressed opposition to the athletic fee increase, the mass transit fee increase, the Student Center fee increase as well as others.

Jon Hageman, GPSC member and graduate student in anthropology, said GPSC, as a representative of graduate students, thinks the increases and fees seem to be much larger than cost-of-living increases.

"GPSC is really concerned about the total costs that are passed on to the individual student, and we saw some of these fee increases as fairly high," Hageman said.

Dietz said there has generally been two instruments that institutions of higher education have used to gauge how to adjust fees to that of inflation — the consumer price index and the higher education price index. And those indexes have reflected an increase in student fees in higher education across the board. At the same time, Dietz said institutions need to be aware of the impact fee increases can have on incoming student populations.

"There is also a sensitivity about increases and how increases can affect student's choices for institutions," Dietz said.

"Some of them actually live in an extended family, which is common in India, where you have the kids, the grandkids, and the grandparents all in the same household; whereas, most households in the United States have just the parent and children," Wendt said.

In its research, WSIU-TV found Asian Indians to be the largest international community, with about 300 families in the Southern Illinois region. Many among the adult Indian population are in professional positions, such as professors and physicians, opposed to those in other areas where Indian immigrants are present.

The program captures the Indian community and its cultural identity through Indian music, classical dance and art, as well as the challenges presented by assimilation into mainstream American society. In addition, it displays how many first generations seek to pass onto their American-born children some of their traditional cultural WSIU/AVUSI-TV hopes "Finding Home" will add to the celebration of different cultures that exist in the diverse River Region, Tichenor said.

"I think this program could work just about anywhere because it really does focus on what it's like being an immigrant and the reasons they come," Tichenor said. "Why do people come to this country? Are they here temporarily? If so, how do they adapt? The program answers those questions."

A new local television program aimed to examine immigrant identity in Carbondale has depicted the various ways in which Asian Indians "find home" by recreating cultural, religious and social traditions.

The documentary, called "Finding Home," is produced by Jyotika Ramaprasad, associate dean for the College of Mass Communication and Media Arts and Indian native.

While making the pilot program, she wanted to help establish a sense of community among Asian Indians in the area and also with other international populations, said Monica Tichenor, coordinator for WSIU/AVUSI-TV Promotions.

Carmex survives slew of rumors

Professor and Carmex spokesman deny core of a "ridiculous" rumor

BY RYAN SCOTT
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

After using it throughout his entire college career at SIUC, Martin Moloney still never leaves home without a jar of Carmex.

Gus Bode

Gus says: My name is Gus Bode and I'm addicted to Carmex.

Dan Moloney. "For smokers, they can dip or chew and it is almost the same — but anything compared to Carmex just isn't."

The Moloney brothers may well be an example of what a swarm of rumors have alleged in the past two years: that Carmex, a popular lip balm, is addictive.

Carmex has been under fire since 1998, after rumors surrounding its ingredients surfaced. In addition to the rumor that Carmex is addictive, an unknown source alleged that Carmex contains shards of fiberglass.

But one of Carmex's top-three executives, Paul Woelbing, whose 99-year-old grandfather founded the company, said the rumors are completely unsubstantiated.

"It is beyond my comprehension that there are actually people out there naive enough to actually believe that the U.S. Food and Drug Administration would either allow a manufacturer to grind up fiber glass and put it in a product for human consumption or after our being in business for more than 63 years not catch us if we actually did do this," Woelbing said. "Spooky, [isn't it?] Oh well — it makes my job interesting."

The one ingredient that could cause lip irritation is salicylic acid. According to Woelbing, the acid, an ingredient related to aspirin, could produce a burning sensation for someone who has very sensitive skin.

That ingredient is the only one proven to be in Carmex that has caused any controversy.

But James Tyrrell, an SIUC professor in chemistry and biochemistry, said salicylic acid softens the lips.

"The main function of it is that it puts a protective layer on the lips and serves as a moisturizer," Tyrrell said.

Carma Laboratories, a family oriented company that employs about 60 people and produces Carmex, recommends unmedicated products such as Vaseline or petroleum jelly to people who have extremely sensitive skin.

Woelbing said if the acid was harmful or the fiberglass was present, the company would have been out of business. He emphasized that no lawsuits have been filed against Carma Laboratories. Woelbing generally presumes that the rumors started were not meant to hinder the company.

"It's probably similar to all urban myths that spring forth from the stress related to contemporary life," Woelbing said. "I doubt that our competitors have started these rumors."

Carma Laboratories has never advertised its product, and the company does not employ salespeople. The company relies on word-of-mouth sales.

"We treat the company as an organism and let it grow at its own pace," Woelbing said. "That makes for slow, manageable growth with a loyal and greatly valued customer base."

According to Woelbing, the company has not produced Carmex in alternate flavors because the logistics of balancing stock with multiple products would be a nightmare for a company of such a small size.

The company refuses to release net profit figures and all stock in the company is owned by the

Ad for free pets clogs student government phone lines

BILLY O'KEEFE
COLUMBIA COLLEGE

Five classified ads offering free goods ran in the March 31 edition of the University of Florida's student newspaper, the Alligator, and had phones subsequently ringing off the hooks. That's not too unusual, except that the ads, placed anonymously, were fake, and the numbers - two per ad, 10 in all - were those of Student Government party members and candidates, none of whom were giving away any free puppies.

The ads, which ran on election day for the candidates, offered, among other things, furniture, rottweiler puppies and Persian kittens, all for free. The outpouring of calls made it difficult for candidates to keep their phones and answering machines plugged in, let alone use them to communicate with fellow party members.

For SG presidential candidate Ian Lane, who was listed as giving away the free puppies, it was a good idea at a very bad time.

"If it was done on Thursday, I probably would have thought it was funny," said Lane. "The fact that it was done on Election Day - I would have to say it was disrupting rather than funny."

"The intent is clear," said Mark Adler, whose number was listed alongside Lane's in the same ad. "The intent is to screw up communication."

Not everyone's feathers were ruffled by the incident, however. Some shared the sentiments of candidate presidential David Winchester, who admitted the prank was a hindrance but nevertheless found it to be "hilarious."

Jeremy Kaplan, who ran for treasurer, took it one step further. He was honored to be involved. "I was happy they included me in there because I want to be in on the fun," he said.

CARMEX

Woelbling family.

Woelbling, who said he almost attended SIUC in the early 1980s, uses Carmex several times a day — more when he rides his motorcycle. Woelbling said his grandfather and Carmex founder Alfred uses it "with greater frequency."

Aaron Wise, a freshman in political science from Onton, Ky., said he loves the smell and taste of the pale-yellow product.

"I used Carmex for five months, two times per day, and I have never heard of anyone being addicted," Wise said. "It sounds ridiculous to me."

LEASES

Leases often contain legal terms, and detail charges for such things as late rent payments, fees for overnight guests, parties, pets and parking. Students need to be aware of all the charges contained in the lease, Rogers said.

Patricia Onyiah, community manager for Southern Illinois Studio Apartments, cites little problems with student tenants. Her office explains the lease covering all the important points, and provides each tenant with a copy of the rules and regulations.

"When we do have violations, we send out notices and invite the tenants to discuss any questions with us," Onyiah said.

She said her office usually has no problems talking to tenants, and most issues are readily resolved.

Gina Pokorny, a junior in food nutrition from Darien, admits she did not read her lease thoroughly. She did mail a copy of the lease to her parents and signed it after they had reviewed it for her.

"I thought it would be just the basic stuff," she said.

Rogers said that students should not rely on verbal modifications to a lease. If it is not in the lease, get it in writing. If a dispute arises later, a tenant will need proof that the lease was modified.

Rogers recommends talking to current and former tenants to learn how those tenants were treated by the landlord.

"Ask if this is someone they would rent from again," Rogers said. "Ask what they wish they'd known before they signed the lease."

JAMES BOOZER
COLUMBIA COLLEGE

Do you find yourself working two or more jobs to pay for college? Have your parents decided that the money has come for you to be more independent? Or have you wasted that trust fund your grandparents gave you on a car, beer and other things you couldn't live without?

If so, you're not alone. You now find yourself joining thousands of other college students who search for financial aid each year. Today, more than ever, many future and present college students are searching for alternative means to pay for their college education, which has become more expensive in recent years.

According to the College Board, the typical annual tuition bill at a four-year private college averages $23,651, while tuition at a state school costs an average $10,909 per year. In fact, the price of a year at a private school can easily top $30,000, which has made the need to find financial aid a priority for most college students.

And one of the most important questions students are now asking themselves is whether or not they want to go through the normal routine of filling out a handful of financial aid forms and talking to a financial aid advisor if they don't have to.

With Internet technology changing and growing each year, so has financial aid resources on the Web. Because of this, more college students have turned their attention to searching the Internet for scholarships, grants and loans.

Over the past several years, a number of Web sites have emerged, giving students financial aid advice and in most cases, scholarships to help pay for college. And because the field has become so crowded, most sites will do whatever it takes to meet the needs of a large and growing audience of financial aid seekers.

One of the most popular sites online is FastWeb.com. Created in 1996 and originally called Student Services, FastWeb has more than five million registered users and gives high school and college students access to more than 400,000 scholarships valued at more than $1 billion.

In addition, the site offers its users expert advice on various topics ranging from career planning and jobs to money management. Students also receive updates on new scholarships via e-mail. Like most sites of its kind, FastWeb supports itself with ads as well as fees for generating marketing research.

As one of the largest scholarship search Web sites online, FastAID.com has more than 20 years of experience researching scholarship sources and is the oldest site of its kind on the Web. FastAID is the publisher of "The Scholarship Book" from Prentice Hall.

While all of this may sound appealing at first glance, there are some risks and options a student gives up if they choose to find financial aid on the Internet.

However John Olino, director of Financial Aid at Columbia College Chicago, warns that the Internet shouldn't replace financial aid planning by a student and his or her parents.

"Nothing gets the job done like face-to-face communication between two people."

A.D. position to be filled in a week

Final candidates waiting for phone call from Jackson

ANDY EGENSE
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Interim Chancellor John Jackson will not need much longer before finalizing details about the athletic director search.

Jackson plans to announce his choice for SIU's next athletic director a week from today, but who will take the reins of the athletic department will likely remain a mystery until then.

The final three candidates for the position are Robert Fournier, senior associate commissioner of the Mid-American Conference; Paul Kowalczyk, associate director of athletics at Northwestern University; and Daniel Spielmann, chief of staff and former athletic director at the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay.

Interim Athletic Director Harold Bardo has been in the position since January 1999, but did not make the cut to the three top-tier candidates.

searching for LEADERSHIP

Bardo said he has not made any final decisions concerning his future.

Jackson said he has been in contact with all three of the candidates "in one form or another" since their interviews. He does not want to release too much information until a final decision has been made.

"I don't think anybody knows who is going to be the next A.D.," Jackson said. "I don't want to comment on who I've talked to and who I haven't."

But two of the three candidates say they have not received any feedback since their departure from campus last month.

"Nobody has contacted me since my visit to Carbondale," Fournier said. "There is nothing else I can do. I'm going to hold out and hope until I hear something directly from somebody."

Similar to Fournier, Spielmann has also not had any contact with Jackson.

"I haven't heard specifically where the process is at," Spielmann said. "My impression was that the interviews went pretty well and I would call myself a viable candidate."

The other candidate, Kowalczyk, did not return phone calls Tuesday. Jackson could not confirm or deny that he has been in touch with Kowalczyk in recent days.

"It's been pretty tight-lipped," Fournier said. "Other than what I've read in the EGYPTIAN, I haven't had any contact with Jackson."

Ron Knowlton, chairman of the athletic director search committee, said the committee has met once since each candidate visited the campus in late March, and the decision on who to hire is up to Jackson.

Knowlton said no assumptions can be made from the meetings, but believes the athletic department will be in good hands, no matter who is hired.

All three candidates visited the campus between March 22-27, meeting with administration, campus leaders, alumni, faculty and students.

Jackson's original plan has the new athletic director beginning the term on July 1.

Brown No. 1 above Arrington

ALEX MARVEZ
KNIGHT-RIDER TRIBUNE

FORT LAUDERDALE — Want to make Tom Bratz drool?

Just ask the Dolphins director of college scouting for his thoughts on Penn State defensive end Courtney Brown.

"He's a defensive end who can rush the passer and he's big enough to stop the run," Bratz said. "There isn't anything wrong with that guy. He's the real deal."

Bratz, though, is well aware the Dolphins have no shot at landing Brown in this weekend's NFL draft. In fact, Brown might not make it past the Cleveland Browns.

Cleveland once was considered a lock to draft Peter Warrick with the No. 1 overall selection, but that changed when the Florida State wide receiver failed to break 45 seconds in the 40-yard dash last month during his private workout in Tallahassee.

Browns coach Chris Palmer now says Brown and Nittany Lions linebacker LaVar Arrington are neck-and-neck atop his team's draft board even though Cleveland spent a truckload of money in the offseason on free-agent ends Orpheus Roye and Keith McKenzie.

"They are just unbelievable specimens," Dwight Clark, the Browns director of football operations, said of Arrington and Brown. "It's like somebody chiseled them out of granite."

Softball trying to overcome 2-6
MVC start at Western Kentucky

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EXPLORER REPORTER

Katie Kloess never expected she would have to play catch-up when she came to SIU.

The freshman softball pitcher joined a team accustomed to owning one of the top positions in the Missouri Valley Conference, but after a rocky 2-6 conference start, things aren't what they used to be.

Heading into today's non-conference doubleheader at Western Kentucky University in Bowling Green, Ky., the Salukis are tied for last place in the Valley with Drake University.

Although it is early in the season, many players on this talented squad are in unfamiliar territory.

"Everyone [on the team] says that this is the worst they've ever started," said Kloess, who is 6-1 on the year. "It is going to take some character on our part to turn this around and get back on track before conference play starts again."

The Salukis (29-15, 2-6 MVC) are coming off their second straight disappointing 1-3 Valley weekend, including being swept Monday courtesy of Southwest Missouri State University.

The mind-boggling turn of events the last two weeks has left many Saluki players run-down mentally.

"We're kind of doubting ourselves

Team	Conference			Overall
Northern Iowa	5	1	0	21	21	0
Creighton	6	2	0	23	14	0
Indiana State	4	2	0	15	23	0
Evansville	5	3	0	30	14	1
SMS	4	4	0	20	20	0
Bradley	3	3	0	17	18	0
Wichita State	3	5	0	13	23	0
Illinois State	2	4	0	11	25	0
SIU	2	6	0	29	15	0
Drake	2	6	0	15	20	0

right now, we're killing ourselves thinking about it," junior outfielder/second baseman Amanda Rextor said.

"We're trying to [put it behind us], but as soon as you try to put it behind you, it happens again. Anytime you're losing a lot of games, it's exhausting mentally."

First-year Saluki head coach Kerri Blaylock wants her team to respond from the early conference setbacks by fighting their way through this little funk. As for the downfall in her team's play the last few games, she remains puzzled, but is not going to think herself crazy looking for answers.

"I wish I had the answers, we would be undefeated if I did," Blaylock said. "You could sit and analyze it forever, but we need to just come out and play."

The road to recovery runs through the Hilltoppers, who are 20-16-1 on the season.

ON DECK

• THE SIU SOFTBALL TEAM TRAVELS TO BOWLING GREEN, KY., FOR A NON-CONFERENCE DOUBLEHEADER WITH WESTERN KENTUCKY UNIVERSITY TODAY AT 3 P.M.

Following SIU's last tough Valley weekend when it split with the University of Northern Iowa April 1 and was swept by Bradley University April 2, the team responded by smashing Southeast Missouri State University 8-0 and 8-1 in a non-conference doubleheader three days later.

Blaylock is hopeful her team returns in a similar fashion again this time.

"I'm looking forward to that," Blaylock said. "You're not going to win every game 8-0, but all I want them to do right now is play well. You won't necessarily win every game that you play well, but I just want them to play well."

NCAA attempting to get a grip

SCOTT M. REID
KNIGHT-RIDER TRIBUNE

The NCAA Division I Management Council approved a landmark series of legislation aimed at reforming men's basketball and reasserting the NCAA's grip on a sport many within the organization fear is on the verge of spiraling out of control.

In recommending nine pieces of legislation during its meeting in Indianapolis, the 34-member council of athletic administrators and faculty representatives hoped to "have a substantial effect of the culture of men's basketball and the way we operate," said Stanford athletic director Ted Leland, the council chairman.

The most controversial of the proposals is a plan that would eliminate the current summer basketball recruiting structure beginning in 2002. Under Monday's recommendations, the current 24-day summer evaluation period would be reduced to 14 days in 2001, with the current summer recruiting system eliminated the following year.

Leland, NCAA executive director Cedric Dempsey and other NCAA officials said their plan is to have in place by 2002 a new summer recruiting structure that diminishes the influence of shoe companies and other outside influences such as AAU coaches.

"We've had a lot of people having an influence on young prospective student athletes who should not be in that position," Dempsey said.

The legislative package approved by the Management Council is expected to be passed by the Division I Board of Directors on April 27 in Indianapolis.

The board and leading conference commissioners in recent months have increasingly called for sweeping reform for men's basketball, especially in regards to summer recruiting following a series of NCAA investigations of top players.

Nearly half of the universities in the top-10 spots in this season's final Associated Press Top 25 poll, seven of the top 25, had key players ruled ineligible for part or all of the 1999-2000 season for receiving benefits in violation of NCAA rules.

The Management Council also approved legislation designed to make universities more accountable in regards to graduation rates.

In a move designed to improve graduation rates and discourage coaches from running off players, the council approved a legislation that limits to eight the number of basketball scholarships a university can award in any two-year period with no more than five in any one year.

solid line coming at the two-guard spot. Molly McDowell, the Salukis' third leading scorer at 7.3 ppg, attempted to fill the point guard void when Holloway went down, but struggled after being forced out of her natural position of the two guard.

Hopefully, on Buck's next recruiting trip, she can find a true point guard that can produce immediate results for the Salukis. However, experience and youth is always a factor when recruiting freshmen who are obviously unfamiliar with the way college basketball is played.

If Heiden and Crutcher's talents transfer over to the collegiate level, all five SIU forwards stay healthy next season and Hathaway and McDowell continue to lead SIU following the departure of Bardley, the key to a successful Saluki women's basketball season will lie in the hands of the next true point guard Beck recruits.

New Beck has to find her, wherever she is.

UGLY

"I saw some things, especially late in the game that I didn't like," SIU head coach Dan Callahan said. "At the same time, our wins lately have been few and far between."

The Salukis have now won two straight and will start a four-game series on the road Friday against conference rival, Southwest Missouri State University.

The win figures to give SIU some momentum in this weekend's series which figures to be a hard-fought battle.

"These are four really important conference games and if we can go out there and pull three of four, it'll really help us in the standings," Kohberg said.

Beck Saluki hunting

Aaron Shunk

With three scholarships remaining for the 2000-2001 season, SIU women's basketball head coach Julie Beck is on a mission to find replacements for the one position the Salukis sorely lack — a true point guard.

Beck has been on numerous recruiting trips throughout Illinois, Missouri and Florida to find a solid point guard for her Salukis, who went 8-20 in the 1999-2000 season.

"We have been hitting the trails and trying to get three or four guards," Beck said. "For the past two years, we have had problems with youth and injuries at the guard position. We are trying to solidify the 1-2 spot."

When the Salukis only true point guard, sophomore Kim Holloway, went down with a wrist injury in February, Beck looked to freshman Lynn Moranic to pick up the pieces. Not surprisingly, youth and inexperience showed. Moranic was not ready yet, leaving the Salukis without a solid point guard.

Recently, both guard positions became even more desolate because of the departures of LaToya Graves and Janina Lopez, two freshmen who opted to leave the Saluki squad because they were homesick.

The defection of Graves and Lopez is making Beck's hunt for guards even more crucial.

"You always hate to see kids leave your program," Beck said. "I knew Janina had been fighting it the whole season, living all the way in San Antonio and LaToya wants to be closer to home, too. I hate to lose them."

The Salukis are also losing senior captain Melaniece Bardley to graduation. The 6-foot-3-inch center captain averaged 8.9 points and 6.8 boards a game. Also departing from the Salukis is senior center Ann Morgan, who spent the entire season injured, but was still under scholarship.

During the NCAA early signing period, Beck inked two centers to letters of intent who will fill Morgan and Bardley's place on scholarship — Jodi Heiden and Tiffany Crutcher.

Heiden is a 6-foot-2-inch forward/center out of Altamont High School in Mason and Crutcher is a 6-foot-2-inch center from Bolingbrook, who attended Romeoville High School. Beck expects the two young centers to immediately make an impact on the Saluki squad next season.

"We certainly took care and solidified our inside position," Beck said. "Jodi is a great rebounder, with great hands around the basket. She can do a lot of drop steps, and has a pretty good repertoire of offensive moves."

"Crutcher is a power player, maybe one of the stronger players in our program. She's got so much ability and will be a force to reckon with."

With the addition of the two young centers and junior Kristine Abramowski, the Salukis have three centers to fill the middle. If injury does not conquer the forwards like last season, SIU has five forwards available to vacate the position.

Sloppiness manifested itself on Abe Martin Field Tuesday afternoon.

Fortunately for the SIU baseball team, by the third inning it had already scored four runs off seven hits, which foreshadowed its 12-6 victory over the University of Tennessee-Martin.

UT-Martin committed four errors in the game while SIU slipped up in the eighth inning with two of their own.

UT-Martin pitcher Jonathan Spiceland already had two outs in two at-bats in the second inning, but had trouble getting the last out. SIU catcher Kyle Kohlberg and second baseman Joe Meeks both singled. Designated hitter Sal Frisella doubled, driving in Kohlberg. Left fielder Jason Rainey got enough off of Spiceland's pitch to homer, which drove in Meeks and Frisella.

"I know I got quite a bit of [the home run pitch]," Rainey said of the baseball he floated over the right-field wall.

The Salukis followed up their hot second inning with another four runs and three hits in the third inning, which made the score 8-2.

An embarrassing play for the Skyhawks came in the sixth inning when Rainey on third base and Steve Mazzola on first base and Steve Cenkush doubled to left field and advanced to third on the throw attempting to gun down Mazzola at the plate. UT-Martin catcher Lee Bethune then overthrew third base trying to make a play on Cenkush, which allowed him to come all the way home.

The Salukis would not get through the game without a few errors of their own, though. Mazzola started the eighth inning by dropping a fly ball near the right-field wall. UT-Martin's Casey Bevis would advance to third on a wild pitch and then score on a passed ball, which catcher Dusty Feldman was charged an error.

The Skyhawks would score three runs in the inning and another run in the ninth inning, but it was too late.
