Walker campaign visits Carbondale

By Monroe Walker

Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Dan Walker, Democratic candidate for governor, greeted students in Carbondale on September 22 after a campaign walk. Walker scheduled the walk-up campaign at 1:30 p.m. but was delayed until 3 p.m.

He arrived in a red jeep in front of Baskin-Robbins at 901 S. Illinois with his blue and white sleeveless shirt and walking boots. After shaking hands with people on the sidewalk, Walker went into Blum's, a clothing store next to Baskin-Robbins, and greeted the people there.

"My name is Dan Walker," he said, "and I'll need your help to win the election."

After leaving Blum's, he continued down Illinois Street to the SWC office to hear to more students.

Tentative plans for reorganization of student affairs

Walker said he met Truitt last night to discuss his recommendations which will be forwarded to Mace in a written report in about two weeks.

Mace said the purpose of the retreat was to discuss problems encountered in the reorganization with an aim of alleviating many of those before they became critical. The retreat would be followed up late winter or spring quarterly with another meeting involving those leaders that have become apparent in the tentative reorganization would be discussed.

Mace said task forces would examine these problem areas, and that another retreat would be held during the following year. Mace said this would be a continuing process of review which would be repeated yearly.

"We're after continual input, advice and criticism," said Mace.

The retreat this September will be attended by Mace, Loretta Orr, assistant to Mace; Samuel E. McVay, director of student services; and the directors of student life and student services areas. Mace said he could not name the men in these two positions because their appointments have not been made before the Board of Trustees.

Mace said the major characteristic of the reorganization plan for student affairs is decentralization of authority and accountability. He said many decision-making power would be given to area heads, hopefully eliminating the need to contact several offices or administrators to get a question answered.

"There may be problems and resistance with this," Mace said, "but the authority goes with the heat."

Mace said he was confident the proposal would be forwarded to the Board of Trustees.

Fee hearing draw various reactions

By Jan Tranchita

Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Fee hearings have been held in a double session Friday afternoon and evening to discuss the elimination of students. The group will formulate a final plan for presentation to Dean of Students George Mace and the Board of Trustees at this time. LaSaine said.

LaSaine said Mace has already told him he will not consider SWC recommendations for this fall. However, LaSaine will present the plan for consideration in future quarters.

A cross-section of views and recommendations were presented by individual attending the hearing. LaSaine continued.

"In general, students felt they should not have to support social groups of limited interests," he said. "The majority are in favor of the checkoff list and allowing all students some input in fee allocations."

Indiana consultant recommends post of dean of students be eliminated

By Sue Roll

Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Tentative plans for reorganization of student affairs call for elimination of the post of dean of students and organization of four main areas -- student life, student services, health services and student work and financial assistance -- reporting directly to the vice president for student affairs.

George Mace, dean of students, said Wednesday this plan for a retreat meeting of six top student affairs area administrators to be held the weekend of Sept. 22 was discussed with John Truitt, vice president of student affairs at Indiana State University (ISU), by the governor.

Mace said Truitt was called to consult with ISU student affairs personnel because ISU recently underwent a reorganization experience similar to that of ISU. He said Truitt is a nationally known expert on student affairs and Truitt has visited ISU several times previously.

"There are always unexpected and unanticipated problems that occur when a reorganization like this is undertaken," Mace said. "Truitt has been through it and can tell us what to expect and how he has dealt with it."

Truitt spent Monday meeting with students affairs area heads and Tuesday meeting with staff in each area. Mace said he met Truitt last night to discuss his recommendations which will be forwarded to Mace in a written report in about two weeks.

Mace said the purpose of the retreat was to discuss problems encountered in the reorganization with an aim of alleviating many of those before they become critical. This retreat would be followed up with late winter or spring quarterly with another meeting involving those leaders that have become apparent in the tentative reorganization would be discussed.

Documentary slated on Cuban refugees

By University News Service

The impact which the influx of Cuban refugees in the early 1960's has had on the economy and culture of south Florida, particularly Miami, will be the subject of a television documentary, "This Exile and This Stranger," which will be seen from 8:30 to 9 p.m. Tuesday on WTVJ-Channel 6, Carbondale, and WUSI-TV, Channel 16, Oleta.

Although a majority of the more than 350,000 exiles in this country come from Cuba's middle and upper classes and are well educated, most have been unable to fit themselves into the American scene for one basic reason—they cannot learn the English language.

The gulf between them and the American culture is widened by the fact that their young children—many of them born in this country—do learn English very easily and with it the ways of a society which is totally alien to the older generations of Cubans.

Older Cubans find American youth a "corrupt breed," the result they say of "excessive freedom." Meanwhile, Cuban mothers continue to chaperone teenage daughters to parties and grand parents still command the family's greatest respect as the honored heads of households.

Through interviews with the exiles themselves, the show will probe their struggle to begin life all over again in the United States.

"This Exile and This Stranger" is a production of educational station WPBT-TV in Miami and is transmitted nationally by the Public Broadcasting Service.

General studies 'proposals debated

By Bernard F. Whalen
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Debate over the general studies joint ad hoc committee proposal, which includes a recommendation to cut back course offerings 50 percent, will be renewed at the Faculty Council's Tuesday meeting.

On July 18 the council put off action on the proposal after hearing a presentation from a five-man ad hoc committee to study alternative changes.

In the opinion of some council members, the five-man ad hoc committee was said to have recommended a course change which they said was not approved by the committee.

The ad hoc committee resolved that the President's office suspend implementation of the five-man committee's recommendations until the council and Student Senate reviewed the proposals.

The ad hoc committee cites seven examples of standing committee proposals that involve policy changes:

- A reduction in approximately 50 percent of the number of course options open to the students, a dramatic shift from the existing policy of many options.
- A significant shift in course offerings for the year as evidenced by the return to departments of many courses that met before in each of the course offerings.
- A change in structure of general studies from a general oversight rule involving faculty and student approval.
- The dropping of courses from general studies without prior request or approval of the parent department, a departure from the current policy.
- The general studies ad hoc committee recommends that another study body be appointed to review general studies, it's history, philosophy and rationale in the context of SIU's educational program.
- The council has planned to discuss the policy committee report that this reduction in options be accomplished by winter quarter, 1973, an action contrary to the council's long-standing policy of gradual change.

"A new requirement that courses with multiple sections have a common syllabus and an official coordinator.

"A new principle that a general studies course not be allowed as an elective for any student whose major undergoing the course.

"A significant shift in course criteria for inclusion in the program as evidenced by the return to departments of many courses that met before in each of the course offerings.

"The elimination of foreign languages from the program as a structural change requiring faculty and student approval.

"The dropping of courses from general studies without prior request or approval of the parent department, a departure from the current policy.

"The general studies ad hoc committee recommends that another study body be appointed to review general studies, its history, philosophy and rationale in the context of SIU's educational program.

Walker campaigns in Carbondale

Concern over organized crime, Walker said he plans to work closely with the Illinois Bureau of Investigation to combat organized crime in Carbondale. That's why it was created and that's what it should be doing." He said he favors lower auto insurance rates and faster handling of claims.

"I am convinced that the state's present sources of revenue are adequate to meet the state's needs over the next four years," he said. "Therefore, I am against any increase in existing taxes and I am against any new taxes.

He said black people and women should be more involved in policy-making in government and in society and that they should be advised and consulted.

"As governor, I have pledged to take action to improve racial and sexual discrimination against women and minority groups," he said, "particularly with regard to employment.

Elmination of dean post recommended authority would be assumed without problems once the administrators learn that their authority will not be undermined.

An advisory board of students is to be created to advise and consult with student affairs staff, Mr. Scott said. "We want to provide the opportunity for more student input and student decisions on student affairs.

The major problem Trust saw with the past organization of SIU's student affairs area has been that areas such as student services encompass too wide a group of activities, Mr. Scott said. Also, deans and associate deans in the areas had not been given specific job responsibilities, he said. Mr. Scott said he and Trust discussed the need to improve the student environment at SIU as well as attitudes toward SIU and the University's image.

He said other new programs will be oriented toward recruitment of high caliber high school students through direct contact with an SIU faculty member directing literature for recruiting new students to the students themselves rather than to their parents and assigning honors students at SIU to a particular faculty member perhaps through the President's Scholars Program.

Mr. Scott said he did not expect that any personnel in the student affairs staff would be phased out of the program. He pointed out that the area had already been subjected to rather severe cuts in staff.
Running away?

Two weeks ago, 34 top SIU administrators had a "retreat" at Kentucky Dam Village State Park. They were planning and looking ahead in hope of achieving academic excellence for SIU.

But within the college community, the academic excellence is personified by administrators and faculty alike. Is it necessary for 34 administrators to leave the college atmosphere just to "think about the mission of the University and to look ahead?" Apparently Willis Malone, executive vice president for academic affairs and provost, thought that it was.

Malone, along with President David R. Derge, organized the "Deans' Retreat." Malone said the retreat was held in Kentucky so that the administrators would not be distracted by telephone and meeting calls and therefore would attend every session held during the conference. Inevitably, this raises some basic questions:

- Is the atmosphere at SIU, or anywhere else in Illinois for that matter, not conducive to important planning sessions such as this?
- Why can't 34 mature top administrators simply neglect meetings and telephone calls within a two-day period? Are their secretaries incapable of warring off such calls?
- Can't President Derge keep his flock in a conference room for twofloating days? Must he hold the conference in Kentucky just to prevent his administrators from "fleeting" elsewhere between sessions breaks?

If anywhere other than the SIU campus promotes full attendance, then classes should be held all over the country so students also can't "escape" from class sessions. Malone reported that much had been discussed at the conference for "informational and communication purposes." Yet this retreat leaves me in one's mind that SIU administrators cannot inform or communicate with each other in an inter-office capacity. It apparently has to be a head-to-head meeting before they can even tell each other what's happening.

Another point that is amazing about this retreat, is that nothing was resolved—there were no solid conclusions reached. Malone has said that it was not the purpose of the conference to make decisions.

What then is the reasoning behind the $1,000 price tag for long range planning sessions? Or shall we say "bull" sessions?

Support the town

A town stands and grows not on its own. The town's vital organs are its citizens and it is they who must function as a concerned unit for the town's health and welfare.

To run a town, the community must show an interest. For a time shortly after receiving the All-American City Award, Carbondale's citizen's concern flicked brightly.

Carbondale's townspeople including students are losing interest. The Goals for Carbondale Steering Committee has met twice, first to discuss the community's reactions and gather proposed goals, and second, to act on suggestions contributed by citizens for the betterment of the goals.

Both times community participation was weak. Though numerous ramifications were offered, they came from afar.

To run a town, the citizens must show an interest above all else. Concern should be directed toward results in immediate and personal rewards. Communal contributions don't delegate their responsibility to a few selected officials. Although the Goals Steering Committee members were chosen to be representative of every segment of the Carbondale community, they cannot adequately and completely formulate the various programs without additional input from their respective peer groups.

The rest of the community is not absolved of its responsibility for failure or success of this program simply because of these representative spokesmen. A town can only be what its citizens make it. The whole should be representative of the parts. The city is theirs and they must relinquish their privilege to contribute.

As stated in the goals booklet: "...citizen participation is the key to the goals program." Give a hand. At least they're trying.

No more 'johns'

To the Daily Egyptian:

As founder of the Society for the Discomance of the Practice of Calling Toilets Johns (SDPECTI) with world headquarters in Carbondale, I warmly applaud John Malone's letter which appeared in the Daily Egyptian on August 3.

My exhaustive researches into this grave matter have revealed that the quasi-euphemistic use of the word 'john' to refer to a toilet dates from the latter part of the sixteenth century during the reign of Elizabeth I. Her godson, Sir John Harrington, invented a water closet which was not a success because it had no facilities for piping water into his head. Fortunately for all of us named John, his Christian name became associated with his unsuccessful invention, and, since then, with toilets in general. Johns the world over have often found occasion to wince inwardly ever since.

Library warning

To the Daily Egyptian:

This letter is a warning to all people who believe that as responsibility is demanded, so it shall be given.

A week ago I took a book (that was not a library book) to the library to have some pages copied. The girl behind the counter told me that the person in charge of that service was not in, and the book would have to be left overnight. Trustingly I left the book in their charge. Who, thought I, should be better trusted with a book than a library?

The following day my request for my book was met with a search, and then puzzled glances and a guarded statement that perhaps the book had been mailed to me via campus mail. The next day the copies arrived by mail, but with no sign of the book.

After waiting a sufficient amount of time, I retraced the library naively expecting that I would be reimbursed in some way for my lost book, only to be met once again with frustration. I was wrong?" said their reply, but we cannot be held responsible for books left here.

Now I ask you, what do you think the library would say if I responded to a bill for an overdue or lost book with the statement that I could not be held responsible for books left here?

An Editor's Outlook
What's in store for the Republicans?

By Jenkin Lloyd Jones
Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Barley 24 hours after the Democratic National Convention, in a shouted voice, had condemned the "sacrifice" of an army called the Vietnam Veterans Against the War, six members were indicted by a federal grand jury in Tallahassee.
The five-page indictment charged that during the August 21-24 Republican convention the TVAA intended to "organize numerous fire teams to attack with automatic weapons, fire and incendiary devices police stations, police cars and stores in Miami Beach.

Whether the assembled Democratic delegates had inside information that those charges were baseless and whether the grand jury swallowed a tissue of Department of Justice lies will not, of course, be known until the evidence is presented in open court.

But only the most naive could imagine that the burly mild demonstrations that took place in Miami while Sen. McGovern was running to victory were not scheduled to be heaved up when the Republicans should arrive.

As one zippy demonstrator, Janet Bala, told the Associated Press: "This is a social event. August, the Republicans, will be the heavy scene."

Newsmen all over America on July 18 received a press release, entitled: "Outline of Scenario and Tactics for Protest Demonstration at Republican Convention," produced by something called the Miami Conventions Coalition.

Samples: August 20: Women will assemble to show Nixon "they cannot be pacified...they will protest every bomb dropped over Vietnam, every woman forced into prostitution, every family living in substandard housing, each new victim of U.S. imperialism.

August 21: "A jury of senior citizens...will bear testimony on the crimes of the Nixon Administration from Vietnam veterans, ex-prisoners, unemployed black Newark recipients, Third World people, gays, senior citizens."

August 22: "As the delegates drive from their luxurious hotels to the convention they will travel a Street Without Joy. To dramatize the crime of participation in the nomination of Richard Nixon, thousands of people will line both sides of the boulevard, forcing the delegates to pass through a 'gauntlet of shame.'"

August 23: "Day of Unacceptance—Delegation will go to Nixon's headquarters to ask his response to the people's demands which will be passed on to the mass rally at Flamingo Park. We will then march to the Convention Hall and let him know that his acceptance speech and all his representatives are totally unacceptable to millions of people."

Now, the kicker in all this—if there is one—will come on that last march on Convention Hall. One of the most venerable of revolutionary tactics is the climactic confrontation with the authorities which gives the authorities two bleak choices—either a retreat into impotence or a reaction that is likely to produce the 'bloody shirt.'

The bloody shirt, preferably, would be owned by a relatively innocent participant. It becomes a symbol of martyrdom and a device for further alienation. One of the most successful bloody shirt performances was the one President Stalin covertly engineered by the imported strategists who stepped back a moment before the guns exploded.

It is not known yet, of course, whether the "non-violent militancy" (whatever that means) which has been promised at the Republican convention will stay non-violent.

Perhaps the indictments at Tallahassee have upset some circles. Perhaps the real revolutionaries will decide that such is the mood of the nation that the contrivance of a melee at Miami Beach would be counterproductive.

But America again faces a situation, as it did at Chicago four years ago, when a mob which was never elected to anything will attempt to confuse, if not disrupt, a lawful political process.

Some of the leaders of this mob will be the same people who scoured campuses from weak-kneed academicians, who firebombed cities and who tried to shut down public officials with whom they disagreed.

Force, alas, breeds counterforce. There are ominous rumblings among the cab drivers, the "harsh drunks" around the country store, increasingly, they seem to be saying, "If we're going to have government by confrontation, let's get into the business."

The Innocent Bystander

More good times in Miami

By Arthur Hoppe
Chronicle Feature

The Republicans are billing their upcoming 1972 Convention in Miami Beach as "a fun thing for the whole family.

We think political activity should always include the fun stuff. Says Mrs. Paula F. Hawkins, the GOP Committeewoman, in charge of such fun things as the Achievement Brunch and Cuban Calypso Festival.

With this in mind, she said she saw "no reason why abortion and homosexuals should come up in the discussion of our party platform."

It's so exciting," said National Chairman Robert Dole in announcing the other fun things scheduled, "that I can hardly wait to get there."

In addition to brunching, festivaling and avoiding abortions and homosexuals, what the delegates are going to do in Miami Beach is go to the movies.

Among the movies that will be shown in the Convention Hall during prime time, Mr. Dole said, are: "A Tribute to President Eisenhower," starring Mr. Eisenhower; "Pat Nixon, First Lady," starring Jimmy Stewart and "Nixon, the Man," starring John Wayne.

What Mr. Dole didn't reveal—and who can blame him?—is that these films were originally segments of a 2-hour epic that was to be shown the delegates during their three-day stay in Miami Beach.

This fun-filled program for the whole family was entitled, "Dick and Pat Go to Washington."

In the un-cut version, Dick (played by Jimmy Stewart) and Pat (played by Helen Twelvetrees) go to Washington to destroy Communism, clean up corruption, embattle entrenched wealth, save the nation and get out of Whittier.

When asked, "What will you do in Washington to make better the lives of all Americans, deary?" "Let me say this about that," says Dick. And that comes, the first fun thing.

The second 24 hours are devoted to film clips of Dick's 4,632 major addresses. The climax comes in prime time of the third day.

Dick and Pat have made a new friend in Washington, a tall, handsome lady-killer (in a nice way) from Texas named Dr. Henry Kissinger. Dr. Kissinger is played by John Wayne.

The crisis comes when the people demand Dick accept the Presidency to save the country. "Gosh, I'm just an average guy," says Dick modestly, "with a brilliant mind, a crowd-pleasing smile and the finest instincts. But I don't want to be President. I'm just not that pushy."

"Consarn it, podner," says Dr. Kissinger, "you haven't got no right to turn 'em down. You're the only poke who kin do it. Show 'em you got true grit."

But because of his shyness and humility, Dick is torn. Then trumpets blast! The heavens open up! And there, riding on a pink cloud, is President Eisenhower, his finger pointing at Dick.

"You're my boy," he says.

With that, a golden shaft of light beams down on Dick and Pat, announcing him President and her First Lady. Dr. Kissinger goes off to join the Green Berets and win the war in Vietnam. At the country's saved.

Unfortunately, plans to show the entire film were cancelled at the last minute for fear the hearts of some of the more elderly delegates couldn't stand the strain of having so much fun.

So the film was chopped up into segments of 14 minutes and ten seconds—to allow time for 50-second commercials. It is hoped the fun-crazed delegates will settle down long enough during one of these to nominate their candidates for President and Vice President.

McGovern sets up panel of mayors

WASHINGTON — Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern began organizing a panel of mayors to study urban problems and to spruce up his image as a city voter.

The South Dakota senator and his new running mate, Walter Mondale, conferred at a private breakfast at the Capitol with nine mayors.

In an interview with the Daily Egyptian, New Jersey, who was named to head the panel, said he had given McGovern an earful of the problems of urban poverty, crime, transportation and unemployment.

"I think the senator and Mr. Mondale must think about the problems of the cities," Gibson said. He said he expected several mayors may eventually join the panel.

Invitations for Wednesday's hastily-arranged meeting were sent just two days earlier, the same day McGovern was briefed by the Democratic mayors of Houston, Nashville and San Leandro, Calif., who accused him of ignoring urban problems and their support to President Johnson.

Phi Sigma Kappa, an all-male fraternity, had given McGovern an earful of their problems, too. He has said that far from showing any gallantry when they are playing against women, men usually are "more vicious" because at the center of our concerns."

An aide said McGovern had given a flat commitment to the mayors to help get quick passage in the Senate of a bill to share federal revenues with states and localities. Less than an hour later McGovern said he had had a long talk about the matter with Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana.

During the day, McGovern held pep talks with Democratic governors at a convention in National Capital for four they could lead to violent disorders.

"The idea was discarded because we foresaw the mass unaccountable factors which might possibly lead to the violence," said Jeff NIGHTY, a youth International party said on Wednesday.

The proposal had been included in an early draft of convention talks. Nightly added.

"We rejected this plan because we wanted to maintain complete good faith in our non-violent pledge to the Miami Beach community."

"Our goal is to protest against the Republican party in its war strategy, not to disrupt the community."

Shari Whitehead of the Miami Conventions Coalition said the group had a "heritage of non-violence from the civil rights movement."

The two spikes at a news conference in front of Convention Hall where Republicans will meet, 23-34 to renominate President Nixon and Vice President Spiro T. Agnew as their standard-bearers. Detailing the plans of non-delegates, the two said Republican delegations would be surrounded at the Convention Hall Aug. 22 in what they called a "March for Murder."

Miss Whitehead, of San Diego, Cal., said the demonstrators would present demands that Nixon accept the Viet Cong seven-point peace program and a $5,000,000 grant in come for all American families of four.

If the President does not accept the demands by the following day, non-violent confrontations will be staged, Miss Whitehead said. The confrontations would involve three groups of protesters, she said. One group would conduct a rally with speeches in front of the hall, second would conduct sit-ins and accept arrest, while the third would conduct "mobile sit-downs," moving from spot to spot as police arrived on the scene. Miss Whitehead added.

Women checkmated on chess board

By the Associated Press

Women's liberation has been checkmated on the chess board and the white pieces are the first to admit it.

"The fact is that women are definitely not as good at chess as men," said Marilyn Braun of Minneapolis, Minn., one of 217 1972 U.S. Women's National Championship.

"Women have always been in a minority and they've never done as well," said Pearl Pease, a leading expert who checked 800,000 games played in the U.S. Chess Federation. "And I think it's the way things have been for a long time."

Until this year, the strongest women's competitors in chess are not as strong as the strongest men, said Kathryn Skoalar, U.S. representative to the Ladies Commission of the World Chess Federation.

The world championship match between American challenger Bobby Fischer and Russian defender Boris Spassky in Reykjavik, Iceland, has sparked an equal interest in chess among both men and women.

Eva Aronson of St. Petersburg, Fla., who shares this year's women's title with Mrs. Braun, estimated that there are about 300 rating women in the U.S., compared with 1,300 men. There are 46 men and 2 women who rate 2,000 and above, she said.

"Mrs. Aronson, who has been playing chess for 20 years, said that the scores of chess is "too strenuous for some women, there's too much pressure."

Other factors in the lack of women players are the absence of sharing and childbearing responsibilities and the shortage of willing male competitors.

"Men usually don't like to be defeated by women," Mrs. Aronson said.

Col. E. B. Edmundson, president of the American Chess Federation, agreed. He said that far from showing any gallantry when they are playing against women, men usually are "more vicious" because they would hurt their ego to lose to a female.

Miss Mann, who also directs tournaments in Milwaukee, said, "I don't think there is a predominantly a women's game because women aren't the sort of people that are aggressive and I think it takes a certain amount of aggressiveness to play well."

Both Mrs. Braun and Miss Mann said that women's liberation could bring more women into chess.

"You're coming into new times now as far as sex is concerned. Women are concerned. Women are free to express themselves in any way they want," Miss Mann said.

Mrs. Braun said she met Fischer in New York in 1969 and went to lunch with him. "I thought he was very polite, friendly and sociable," she said.

"He told me he wanted to play against him, adding, "I don't want to humiliate myself."

Aided why there aren't more women players. Edmundson said Fischer's statement that he was "very polite, friendly and sociable," she said.

"I don't think there's enough insight into that," Edmundson said. "Women just don't want to spend that much time.

Fatalities pass 500 mark in Ireland

By Ed Blanche
Associated Press Writer

BELFAST, Northern Ireland—British troops strove yesterday to maintain a low profile despite constant harassment by the demonstrators. But they were forced to fire volleys of rubber bullets when rioters tried to breach sandbagged barricades at a military post at Spenfield Road with a tear gas attack. Elsewhere in Belfast, soldiers said they shot two guerrilla gunmen and the army claimed that at least one, who was dragged away by comrades, was killed. Three soldiers were slightly injured.

As the protests went on, there was strong speculation in Belfast that the British administration, William Whitelaw, is ready to end internment within a month and open the way for talks on a political settlement.

Phnom Penh attack feared

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP)—The Cambodian high command expressed relief Wednesday that the enemy is preparing a major offensive in southeastern Cambodia that could endanger Phnom Penh.

Maj. Chang Song, command spokesman, said two regiments of tanks were backing at least two infantry regiments around Kompong Trabek, the town on strategic highway 1 about 50 miles southeast of the capital.

"We think this is a major attack against the Cambodian republic," Chang told reporters. "We don't know if this is a local attack or it is merely to open or widen an infiltration corridor into South Vietnam."

The high command, which claims 24 enemy tanks have been destroyed by aerial attacks around Kompong Trabek, reported that intelligence sources have spotted 30 more tanks in the area. The Cambodians have no armored vehicles capable of engaging the Soviet-built tanks.

Loss of the control of the east bank of the Mekong River would probably knock the Cambodians out of the war, say military observers here. Without the security afforded by the Cambodian forces on the east bank, enemy forces bring fuel and ammunition supplies by river would be at the mercy of enemy gunners.

The spokesman said fighting at Kompong Trabek was fierce but sporadic and the enemy had not sent its tanks into action during daylight hours.

He gave a provisional casualty figure for the Cambodians since the battle began early Sunday as 98 killed, 134 wounded, and at least 240 missing. Most of the dead and missing came from the Cambodian battalion ambushed Sunday near the village of Krahm, 20 miles south of Kompong Trabek.

Grad election results reported

Six graduate students were elected Tuesday to fill seats on three college of education committees.

Elected to the graduate affairs committee are Marge Kolar, special education; Mary Ann Powers, guidance, and Stuart Stein, elementary education.

Donna Inglesbee, special education and Michael Luck were elected to the graduate student concerns committee, and Todd Mommens was selected as representative to the college advisory committee.
Musicals scheduled; four for quar:il

The Student Government Activities Council (SGA) has announced the return of "depression period" musicals to the spring program—"Thirties Musicals."

In keeping with the SGA's theme of "Again and Again," the St. John's SGA announced Friday and Saturday nights in the Student Center Auditorium for the spring, "Again and Again," will feature Thirties musicals. The Friday night program will include the musical "Swing High, Swing Low." Another Brother's property, "Footlight Parade," "42nd Street," "A Star Is Born," "Broadway Melody," and "Shanghai" will be presented in the Student Center Auditorium.

On Saturday night, April 27, "The Late Show," another Warner Brothers' musical, will be shown. It was the last musical given at the Student Center Auditorium. Starring in this film are the Bricktop Sisters, and Ginger Rogers. This is the film in which Ginger Rogers sang "We're in the Money." On Saturday, film-goers will be shown "Broadway Melody," "42nd Street," "A Star Is Born," "Broadway Melody of 1936," and "Give Me Some" and "On Your Toes." The Midnight Men will provide music. The film will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Women on warships given a "aye, aye!

Frozen mouse eggs produce normal mice

BAR HARBOR, Maine (AP) -- A University of Cambridge geneticist reported Wednesday that he has been able to freeze fertilized mouse eggs for storage, thaw them later to produce normal mice.

While sperm, including human sperm, has been frozen for later use, the scientist said this is the first time a fertilized egg has been deeply frozen in storage.

The report came from Dr. David G. Whittingham, of the Cambridge Strangeways Laboratory and Physiology Department, at a meeting on medical genetics.

Although Whittingham's research interests include embryonic development in mammals, he did not discuss possible implications of the work for human beings.

Whittingham gave his report to a Short Course in Medical Genetics conducted by the Jackson Laboratory in Bar Harbor, and Johns Hopkins University.

The researcher said he has taken fertilized mouse eggs—technically, embryos, but developed only to eight cells—and frozen them at 39 degrees below zero centigrade.

The cells are then thawed, cultured further in the test tube and implanted in foster mothers, not necessarily the original source of the eggs, where the cells continue growing to eventually produce normal kittens, which Whittingham displayed on color slides.

The new technique enables genetic researchers to preserve mutant strains for later use if desired and also enables the researchers to establish the standard of strains of mice.

After the strain has been reproduced many, many times, he explained, researchers would be able to take a sample from the latest litter and compare it to the original and see if it is genetically still the same, thereby insuring standards of accuracy for laboratory experiments.

Ogilvie signs 12 bills into law, regulates officials' investments

SPRINGFIELD (AP) -- Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie signed into law Wednesday legislation requiring public officials to invest local and state funds in interest bearing accounts unless the money is to be spent within 30 days.

According to legislation, which the governor also signed, requires treasurers in counties exceeding 150,000 population to provide a monthly report of investments and deposits to the state. The counties affected would include Cook, Champaign, DuPage, Kane, Lake, Madison, Peoria, Rock Island, St. Clair, Will, and Winnebago.

In all, Ogilvie signed 12 bills including one which broadens the capability of downstate communities to receive state grants for mass transit systems.

The law earmarks up to 10 percent of the state's $320 million mass transit bond issue to downstate communities, some of which will be available without matching grants whatever.

Police stop dispute at post office site

Carbondale police were called early Wednesday morning to quell a labor dispute at the construction site of the new Carbondale regional post office on E St. east of the J.C. Pen- ney department store.

According to police reports, the incident started when members of the carpenters' union complained that electricians, who were digging a trench for an electrical line, were disturbing the work of laborers. The car- penters also objected to the elec- tricians handling wood forms.

Police Chief Joe Dakin and five police officers arrived at the scene about 7:45 a.m. A fight between two workmen was in progress and was stopped by police.

One officer, Jerry Osman, was at-tacked by a man who claimed he did not know Osman was a policeman. Osman was in full uniform at the time.

A work stoppage was called about 10:30 a.m. Here, plumbers and carpenters continued work on the inside of the building while the laborers and carpenters and electricians waited for a decision from their business agents.

Police remained until 11 a.m. to prevent further violence. The business agents placed calls to their respective unions offices in St. Louis and, at 10:45 a.m., told the men to resume work on the inside of the building.

Work on the outside of the building will not resume until a decision is reached by international union representatives in St. Louis.

Police said no arrests and no changes were filed.

General electrical work at the site is being done by the Electric Utility of St. Louis and the sub-contractor is Sullivan Electric of Johnson City.

Walker, Gray to speak at Democratic picnic

Dan Walker, Democratic can- didate for governor and Kenneth Gray, U.S. Congressman from the 3rd district, will speak at the an- nual Democratic "Old ed Basket Picnic" to be held at 1 p.m. Sunday at Lake Murphyboro.

Other speakers at the picnic will be Neal Hartig, candidate for lieutenant governor; James Hallaway, state representative; Gene Johns, state senator; Kemmott Busbee, candidate for state senator; Barney Winkle, candidate for county clerk, and Harry Flynn, county coroner.

The picnic will be an old- fashioned affair with good food and handstand speeches, according to H.L. O'Connell, entertainment chairman.

Sponsored by the Jackson County Democratic Central Committee, the picnic festivities include a cake auction and refreshments.

The event is open to the public. County chairman Ray Chatley said he expects at least 500 people.

"It's an election year and we expect a lively, big crowd here. This will be the beginning of our successful 1972 victories in county, state and national elections," Chan- cey said.

Washington—The Senate passed a bill Wednesday prohibiting the sale of easily concealable hand- guns. The vote was 68 to 23.

The chief target of the bill, which now goes to the House, is the kind of stub-nosed, cheap, lightweight han- dgun commonly called Saturday night special.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., the bill's sponsor, said it would "take out of the market place the weapons most frequently used by criminals."

He estimated it would halt the sale of about one million of the .22 caliber pistols and revolvers sold each year in this country.

The bill, passed after three days of debate during which tougher con- trols were rejected, had languished in the Senate until the attempted assassination on May 15 of Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace.

By setting standards for barrel length and other factors, the bill would bar the sale of some small, high-quality handguns that are easily concealed as well as the cheap Saturday Night Specials.

However, it would do nothing about the millions of pistols and revolvers now in private hands.

The final vote came after the Senate's 59-32 rejection of an amend- ment which Bayh said would have put his bill out of line with the amendment by Sen. Roman L. Hruska, R-Neb., which would have been permitted for sale to dealers to sell the supplies they now have of the handguns that would be barred by the bill.

It also would have permitted the continued sale of all kinds of hand- guns until the Secretary of the Treasury acted to disapprove of particular models under the stan- dards set by the legislation.

While Hruska contended his amendment would make the bill fairer and more enforceable, Bayh said "it not only opens the back door, it takes the roof off one side of the building."

Bayh accepted another amend- ment by Sen. Ted Stevens, R- Alaska, to permit the sale of hand- guns meeting the bill's criteria if they are suitable for self protection as well as sporting purposes.

And adopted by a 58-22 vote, over Bayh's objection, was an amend- ment by Sen. Paul J. Fannin, R- Ariz., striking from the bill discretionary authority for the Secretary of the Treasury to set ad- ditional handgun standards.

The bill is designed to close the loophole in legislation passed in 1968 prohibiting the im- importation of handguns not suitable for sporting purposes.

Fischer settles for draw in 12th chess title game

REYKJAVIK (AP)—Bobby Fischer, vigorously attacked by world chess champion Boris Spassky's game, was forced to set- tle for a draw after the fifth move of the 12th title game Wednesday.

Each player gained half a point, and Fischer kept his two-point lead with the score at 7-5. Fischer needs 12½ points in the 24-game match to win the title. Spassky can retain it with 12 points.

As the American challenger, playing the advantageous white pieces, tried in vain to bring his rook to bear in an attack, Fischer disegnately asked chief referee Lehtar Schmid to enforce quiet. Spectators were streaming in and out of the auditorium.

Schmid gestured to the audience to be quiet.

Twenty minutes later, Spassky slammed his one remaining bishop down the kingside, twice giving check, and Fischer conceded a draw was inevitable—24 hours after grand- masters said so.

Fischer appeared flustered, fuming with his score sheet, but Spassky was composed as he walked away to tremendous apa- plaus.

Animal science specialist says meat prices may soar

By University News Service

So you think 79 cents a pound is pretty far out for ground beef? How about 49 cents a pound?

That's what an animal science specialist at SIU-Marion says might happen now that the Food and Drug Administration has ruled on the market a synthetic hormone called DES.

DES is the acronym for diethylstilbestrol, a synthetic hormone additive that has virtually revolutionized the American beef industry. It's the stuff they feed cattle to fatten them up quicker and make them convert what they eat into animal tissue more efficiently.

DES came on the market in the late 1950s and almost everybody who raises beef has been using it in cattle feed. Marion—chairman of the animal industries department at SIU—says the average beef producer has been making $10 a head profit from his meat carcass, about $7 of that directly attributable to the use of DES.

Knock out that $7, Marion says, and two things are going to happen: first, a lot of beef cattlemen won't be able to afford labor costs under such a slim profit margin, and, second, the price of beef will then go out of sight.

So why would a regulatory agency allow the public to think about flushing DES down the pipe?

Mostly because of a seven-year-old laboratory study which showed that a certain level of DES, fed to a special strain of laboratory mice, caused cancer.

Others then took that study and introduced "calculations" based on it which indicated that any amount of DES is cancer-causing if eaten. And as a result, the law of the land—enforced by the FDA—now states that there must be no trace of DES in residual meat destined for human consumption.

This regulation says cattlemen can feed their steers 20 milligrams of DES a day, but must take them off it completely for seven days before slaughter. In this length of time the trace of DES are normally eliminated.

But when you're managing a feeding lot, maybe thousands of steers, mistakes are bound to happen. Mistakes are bound to happen.

And while the inspectors will tolerate a certain amount of mistakes, they are now finding some low levels of DES in about one per cent of beef fanners they sample at random.

It so happens that the seven-year-old study was done by George Gass, head of SIU's Endocrinology Pharmacology Research Laboratory. What that research showed was that cancer-prone mice fed on daily tapings containing 6.25 parts-per-billion of DES did, indeed, get breast cancer slightly more frequently than others that weren't fed DES.

What it also showed, however, was that up to twice and even four times that much DES—in the same study—didn't cause an increase in breast tumors.

In other words, there's a dosage-response problem here somewhere, enough to make Gass think that the whole thing may be a statistical fluke. On top of that, the hormone used in the experiment was pure crystalline DES, not the conjugated form found in cattle tissue.

Gass and Marion have teamed in an effort to launch a $14,000 research project to nail down the facts about DES—whether it really is cancer-causing, and if so, at what dose levels. They are being encouraged by the National Cattlemen's Association, the Illinois Beef Industry, animal science organizations, the Dawes Pharmaceutical Co., even the U.S. Department of Agriculture and FDA itself.

What still hasn't developed, however, is research financing. If the proposal gets off the ground, Gass and Marion will need $1,300,000 in funds spread over two years and approximately 5,000 mice. Several different control groups will be designed. Some steers would be fed low levels, others medium levels, others up to 300 or 300 parts per billion of DES in their food. Some won't get any DES.

The experimental mice will be fed liver, some from DES-fed cattle, and some—control groups—with "clean" liver without a trace of DES.

The result, they hope, will be not the development of yet another highly-sensitve technique to detect DES in tissues, but to find out precisely how much DES it takes to cause cancer, if in fact it causes cancer at all levels that may exist in the edible tissue of cattle.

To date there is no conclusive scientific evidence to indicate that diethylstilbestrol causes cancer in man. Marion says American beef, doesn't go out in Europe and South America because it's believed that the synthetic hormone food additives cause sex problems.

No evidence for that, either.

In any case, as one supporter of the Gass-Marion proposal puts it (Murray Applebaum of Dawes Laboratory): "It would be ridiculous to allow 10 per cent of the beef supply to go down the drain for a very small effort... Namely a scientifically solid look at the effects of DES on people and cattle."

Otherwise, perhaps as Marion says, $1.49 hamburger.

Opera premiere set for November

By University News Service

After two years of negotiations, the Midwest premiere of an opera by black jazz composer Scott Joplin will be presented this fall by the Marylinen Lawrence Opera Theater at SIU.

"We became interested in presenting "Treemonisha" a couple of years ago," explained Mary Elaine Wallace, director of SIU's musical productions. "But financing posed a serious problem. Now we have a $2,500 grant from the Illinois Arts Council, which will help defray production costs."

An all-black cast and chorus will be assembled, Mrs. Wallace said. Lawrence Branch, black instructor in the School of Music will be the conductor. Michael Tyson, graduate assistant in Opera Workshop, will also be involved in all aspects of the musical preparation.

Joplin is renowned for his "Maple Leaf Rag," which sold more than a million copies, could not persuade a publisher to issue his folk opera, so he personally published it, and indentured himself to the vocal score in 1911. Failing to have the score done properly, he left an informal, unsung masterpiece in Harlem in 1915.

The composer's orchestration manuscript vanished following his death in 1917, but the work with a new score was resurrected in 1970 in a production at Macaulay College in Atlanta, Ga., which attracted widespread interest.

Now the opera has been published, with an entirely new orchestration, which the SIU Opera Theater will use for its production in Stuyvesant Auditorium Nov. 17-18.

There are eleven roles for solo singers, who will be coached by Miss Wallace, former Metropolitan and Paris opera star, in the opera workshop which she teaches.

"Treemonisha" tells the simple story of a Negro girl in the post-Civil War South, who because her foster parents are determined to give her an education, struggles to free her people from the conditions which controlled them, and who, because she is the only educated person in her community, is chosen as their leader.

Auditions will be held Sept. 30 in Stuyvesant Auditorium, starting at 7 p.m. Candidates for solo roles may check out audition scores at the School of Music office; chorus applicants may arrange auditions with Branch and dancers and others interested in participating should apply to Mrs. Wallace.

Credit may be earned for the chorus class, which will meet from 3 to 4 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays during September.

Disgruntled farmer uses portable mailbox

KENNEDY, Miss (AP)—Like J. Mungle has had 20 mailboxes destroyed by vandals over the last 15 years, but now he thinks he's got his problem solved.

The southeast Missouri farmer carries his mailbox from his house each morning to the road just about the time the mail is delivered. He has a box handle attached to the mailbox, and he slides the bottom of it into a pipe in the ground. After the mail arrives, Mungle takes the box back to the house a quarter mile away.

Mungle usually drives the distance from his house and goes about other business while the box is left for the mail. So, for a short time he's been more vulnerable.

His mailboxes have been blown apart and into pieces. Bullets with a hammer, ridged by a screwdriver, and then by a nail driven dead into the box.

Mungle, of Route 3, Kennett, said he believes he has found a solution to his mailbox as a target for pranks with each new generation taking up the challenge.

Postal authorities have investigated but to no avail. They say they cannot bring the mail all the way to Mungle's house because rules prevent it.

Drive to link scenic S. Illinois

By University News Service

The long talked-about George Rogers Clark Scenic Drive (formerly the "River to River Road") through Southern Illinois' Shawnee National Forest country would amble along some of our most prized natural and scenic areas.

Linked by the 163-mile drive would be such choice sites as Giant City, Ferne Clyffe and Cave-in-Rock State Parks, Lake Glendale and Pounds Hollow Lake, and Fountain Bluff, Pine Hills, Belle Smith Springs, the Garden of the Gods, Tower Rock, the Ohio River and others.

The U.S. Forest Service has estimated the project would cost something like $85 million and would return annual tourism benefits of $15 million.

A pertinent question is, how much and what kind of use do the parks and recreation areas along the proposed scenic way get right now? Who are the visitors to these places?

A couple of forestry researchers at SIU at Carbondale decided to try and find out, and their conclusions may be a bit surprising.

Dwight McCurdy and Glenn Marlow put questionnaires on parked cars at parks, picnic sites, camping grounds and sightseeing spots across the Shawnee corridor.

Daily and weekend sampling throughout their test year produced replies from 1,400 groups.

Most of the visitors, it turned out, were from Southern Illinois and nearly half of them had travelled less than 50 miles to go picnicking, sightseeing, camping or whatever.

Nearly two-thirds of the people who sent back questionnaires were campers and about 70 per cent of them stayed no more than three days.

Judge seeks panel rule in Kerner case

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal appeals court judge said Wednesday he would examine in a Chicago courtroom a three-judge panel from outside Illinois to sit as an emergency panel in the case of Illinois Gov. Otto Kerner.

Kerner, a former Supreme Court justice, was sentenced Monday to three years in prison for bribery and fraud, conviction that stemmed from the 1968 Democratic National Convention.

The defense claims that Mrs. Everett, who had threatened to be a key Kerner witness, was illegally induced by the alleged intervention of Illinois attorneys in California to obtain a seat on the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals.

Theodore Israels, 41, former state director for the California Democratic National Committee, and William Miller, 70, former chairman of the Illinois Racing Board, and Paul McMahon, 54, a Cook County attorney, where associated with Kerner.

They were overthrown specifically with conspiracy to commit mail fraud, interstate banking facilities, and bribery.

Kerner also faces charges of perjury, tax evasion, and filing a fraudulent tax return.

Kerner, who was serving as a U.S. judge for the 7th U.S. Circuit, was deposed on Thursday when the indictment was returned, has taken a leave of absence.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Treasury Secretary John B. Connally said Wednesday he has resigned as chairman of a board organized by the Democratic National Committee to fill a vacancy created when the board's chairman, former Democratic presidential candidate John J. Kennedy, was assassinated.

The new Connally committee was organized to raise money for organized Democrats as vice chairman, include Robert F. Kennedy, 37, who was an Illinois House speaker, and Robert B. Bryan, Tennessee, National Chairman; and James V. Page, 43, a lawyer in Chicago, chairman.

Secretary of State John Lewis said that the contractors who organized the committee had signed a combination bond on the 1966-70 project.

Olympic swimmers could be best ever

KNOXVILLE, Ten. (AP) — The U.S. Women's Olympic Swimming Team is the best in the nation's history, Coach Sherman Chavoor says.

"There aren't any superstars on that team, but we have more depth and balance and better speed," said Chavoor, who also coached the 1968 team which won 21 gold medals in Mexico City.

Chavoor conceded that the 23-member team training at the University of Tennessee may not win 21 gold medals at Munich because of stronger competition. But "as an Australian girl, I think we are generally regarded as the finest girl swimmer in the world," Chavoor said. "And the Japanese have some great girl swimmers." Miss Gould, 15, owned five world records until last week when two of her marks were won in the Olympic trials.

Starting Babashel, 15, of Fountain Valley, Calif., cut six-tenths of a second; Miss Gould, her 200-meter freestyle with a time of 2:02.82. Also 15, lowered the 00-meter freestyle record from 58.81 to 58.30.

Miss Gould is an odds-on favorite to win gold medals in freestyle events. Babashel is an outside chance to win a medal in the 50 free, 100- and 500-meter freestyles and in the 800-meter medley relay.

Cubs lose to Expos

CHICAGO (AP)—Mike Jorgensen and Ron Fairly each drove in two runs as the Montreal Expos doubled the Cubs Wednesday in a 6-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Fairly's two RBIs came on a single in a five-run ninth-inning rally, which also included a single by Leo Ditka, a run in the ninth, and the second run for the Cubs.

In the inning came under Chicago's Smathers in double and Ron Hunt's single.

Jorgensen's other RBI came in the fifth when he tripled home Tim McCaffrey. McCaffrey produced a run with a bases-loaded single in the eighth, but the Cubs couldn't put together a choice with the bases loaded in the second.

Bulls acquire 6-8 center

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Bulls are not finished in this NBA season. They have acquired the contract of center Darke Murray from the Hammond Bullets for an undisclosed amount of cash.

Murray, 6-foot-8, 215 pound six-year veteran of the National Basketball Association, began his career in 1966 with the Detroit Pistons. He has also played for Seattle, Spirt and the Los Angeles Lakers.

His best year was as a junior in 1970 when he scored 500 points for a 73 average. His work with the Miami Dolphins has improved his talent further.

Outdoor fun

SIU's Outdoor Laboratory is sponsoring the Outdoor Labs Underway program from August 10 to 24. The program is open to all students of faculty of the University.

Included in the course are camping, canoeing, climbing, fishing and repelling. During the seven-day period, students have an opportunity to repel down one hundred foot cliffs and explore the enchanted caves of Southern Illinois.

All interested persons should contact Hank Schaffriere, at 434-224.

For U.S. participation in World Games preparations

Two women coaches at SIU are helping screen U.S. candidates for the 1973 World University Games to be played in Russia, and one SIU woman athlete is among the promising basketball stars being groomed.

Marie Ballard of Carbondale, Illinois, is being considered along with 50 collegiate women basketball players to attend a pre-World Games training camp Aug. 26-Sep. 9.

Miss Ballard, stellar player on SIU's varsity basketball team, also heads the school's 1973-74 Women's Recreation Association (WRA).

The basketball camp, to be held at Parsons College, Fairfield, Iowa, is the first hurdle in selecting a 13-member team to represent the U.S. at the 1973 summer World Games in Moscow, according to Charlotte West, co-chair of the WRA basketball team and a member of the national committee to select the U.S. candidates.

Miss West will also attend the training camp at Parsons to participate in evaluating the players. A second camp will be held next summer before the final selection of the U.S. team is made, she said.

SIU also is being represented on the national committee to select the U.S. volleyball team for the World Games, by Jo Anne Thorpe, chairwoman of the men's physical education department and volleyball coach, who will be involved in screening potential players, and in the volleyball training camp at Illinois State University at Normal Aug.. 21-27.

The World Games, both summer and winter tournaments, are endorsed by the International University Sports Federation which has 53 nations as members.

To provide sound administration for the 1973 World Games, major sports organizations representing both men and women are being joined to form the United States Collegiate Sports Council.

One of these organizations is the American Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation, which supervises women's participation. Another is the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW).

Southern Illinois holds an institutional charter membership in the AIAW, with Miss West as the institutional representative.

Rhodesia gets Olympic ok

MUNCHEN, Germany (AP)—Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, reaffirmed Tuesday the IOC's decision to allow Rhodesian participation in the Munich Summer Games, the organizers reported.

In a telephone conversation with an organization committee president, William Dunbar, Brundage spoke very firmly that the IOC considers its decision on Rhodesia of last September as final.

The governing board of the International Olympic Committee has decided to uphold its decision on Rhodesian participation in the Munich Summer Games.

Earlier Tuesday, Black Africa's supreme sports body dispatched a delegation to Munchen to press arguments against Games participation to the white-supreme government of Rhodesia. The delegation is scheduled to meet with games organizers on Wednesday.
