Group backs end to certain jail terms

WASHINGTON (AP)—A federal crime commission Thursday recommended an end to jail sentences for such crimes as marijuana use, prostitution and pornography.

The commission said laws against such crimes should be reviewed with an eye toward liberalizing them, though it stopped short of advocating outright repeal.

Atty. Gen. Elliot L. Richardson refused to endorse the proposals, but called the commission report a "document of uncommon importance."

The recommendations were contained in a report by the National Commission on Criminal Justice Standards and Goals, a 22-member group initiated by former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell. The report developed from a two-year study financed by a $1.75-million federal grant.

Members included present and former governors, judges and state and local police and prison officials.

Among other key recommendations, the commission said:

—All states should outlaw the private possession of handguns within 10 years and confiscate those now in civilian hands. Collectors should be allowed to keep inoperative guns.

—States should require public officials to disclose their financial interests and should limit campaign contributions.

—Plea bargaining, the practice of allowing a suspect to plead guilty in exchange for a light sentence, should be abolished within five years.

Although addressing several other controversial topics, the commission made no recommendation about the death penalty.

The chairman, former Delaware Gov. Russell E. Peterson, explained, "That's the one major issue we ducked. It was not because we didn't want to face up to it, but because we felt it wasn't very pertinent to reducing crime."

Discussing what Peterson called the "victimless crimes"—marijuana use, gambling, pornography, prostitution and private sexual acts between consenting adults—the commission said:

"Some citizens may be angry, embarrassed or frightened because these activities take place in society. Other citizens may express resentment that these activities, which they may consider to be relatively harmless, are condemned and punished at all."

At any rate, it concluded, "These crimes place a heavy and unwelcome burden on law enforcement resources."

Turning to firearms, the commission said it "believes that the violence, fear, suffering and loss caused by the use of handguns must be stopped by firm and decisive action." It urged states to prohibit the possession of handguns except by law enforcement and military personnel and to ban the manufacture of handguns except for those officials.

Vets Club to sponsor marathon to nowhere

The Southern Illinois Veterans' Club will sponsor a bicycle marathon Saturday—but the riders won't be going anywhere.

The plan, according to John Sheridan, vice president of the veterans' group, is to set up a stationary bicycle exercise machine in the 300 block on Illinois Avenue.

Veterans and other ambitious parties will ride the device as long as possible.

A "big old trophy" and prizes will be awarded to the rider who racks up the most pretend miles at the fastest clip, Sheridan said. The marathon competition will begin at 1 p.m.

The purpose of the bicycle marathon is to raise money for a "therapeutic playground" which the veterans will design and build for children served by the Curriculum Demonstration Center in Murphysboro.

The veterans hope spectators will toss money to the bicyclists which will be gathered and used to create the playground.

Ceiling slows prices, few beef shortages

WASHINGTON (AP)—Despite angry protests from the beef industry, administration spokesmen say the beef price ceilings so far are accomplishing the goal of restraining prices without widespread shortages.

Kenneth Fedor, director of the Office of Food Price Monitoring for the Cost of Living Council, said there are spot shortages. But nationwide, he said, the total supply of beef is 80 to 85 per cent of normal according to the council's own information.

He added that the supply could get tighter prior to lifting of the price ceilings Sept. 12.

A major purpose in keeping the price ceilings on beef has been to keep beef prices from rising at the same time other prices are increasing in the economy. The council has estimated supermarket prices for beef will increase 10 per cent when the ceilings are removed.

Fedor said in an interview that food prices generally have been going up too fast since President Nixon removed the freeze from all of the food industry except beef on July 18.

He said the council is particularly concerned over a continued sharp rise in prices of pork and hogs. He said the price of hogs has gone up from $37.31 per hundredweight in the first week of June to $59.13 this week.

Agnew refuses bid for financial records

WASHINGTON (AP)—Vice President Spiro T. Agnew held on to his financial records Thursday despite a request from federal prosecutors probing political corruption in Maryland that they be permitted to study the documents.

It was reported that the prosecutors had given Agnew an indefinite extension on complying with the request while the vice president's lawyers studied the possibility of claiming immunity.

Meanwhile, a federal grand jury which since January has been investigating political kickbacks in Maryland went back into session in Baltimore. Several persons appeared before the jury but federal officials refused to say if the testimony involved Agnew.

U.S. Atty. George Beall, who has been directing the politically explosive inquiry, had requested that Agnew voluntarily turn in by 2 p.m. Thursday all financial and tax records from January 1967 to the present. The date coincides with the beginning of Agnew's two-year term as Maryland's governor.

One of Agnew's lawyers, Jay H. Topkis, said he would be in touch with the prosecutors next week. He indicated the delay was due to questions of executive privilege and not on Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination.

Never before had any president or vice president been involved in a federal criminal investigation while in office. Aaron Burr was tried and acquitted of treason in 1807, but this was after leaving the vice presidency.

At a news conference Wednesday, Agnew unequivocally denied any charges that he accepted political payoffs, calling them "damn lies," and saying he had "absolutely nothing to hide."

He said he would "make available at the appropriate time and in the appropriate way to the appropriate authorities as determined after consultation with my counsel, whatever records, my own body, for interrogation—whatever is needed."

But, he added, "there are certainly high unprecedented constitutional questions that must be considered."

Agnew was notified Aug. 2 that he was under investigation for bribery, extortion, conspiracy and tax violations in a letter from Beall requesting—not subpoenaing—his financial records.

Deputy White House Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren declined any further discussion Thursday of Agnew's legal problems. He repeated that "the President has confidence in the vice president and the fact of the investigation does not change that."

Government says price ceiling working

He added that while some people may be buying pork where beef shortages are occurring, that alone would not explain the extent of the price increase. But Fedor ruled out re-imposing price ceilings over pork.

Since the price freeze was removed from the rest of the food industry, there have been indications of beef shortages throughout the country.

But Secretary of the Treasury George P. Shultz, Fedor and other believe the long range impact of the ceilings will be minimal even if cattlemen hold back their cattle from market until after Sept. 12.

"Even if they are holding back 20 percent, they are going to be available in September," Fedor said.

He said the industry as a whole is operating at about 85 percent of capacity. The number of cattle slaughtered on Wednesday totaled about 90,000 which he said compared with 118,000 during a typical day in July last year.

The administration predicted for stretching out the potential increase in prices throughout the economy during Phase 4 is as follows:

Food prices have gone up since the freeze was lifted on July 18.

Prices charged by many small and medium-size nonfood firms will go up Aug. 13 after the freeze expires for much of the rest of the economy.

Prices charged by the country's 1,700 major nonfood companies will not go up until Sept. 13 at the earliest and the council can delay the increases even longer.

East St. Louis man shot to death

EAST ST. LOUIS (AP)—An East St. Louis man has been shot to death following an argument in a parking lot.

Police said Clarence Coleman, 21, was shot Wednesday as he helped a 14-year-old youth into a car to take him to a hospital. Officers said the youth had been hit in the head with a baseball bat in a fight with other youths.

240 join union as charter members

About 240 persons have signed up to become charter members of the credit union being formed by Student Government, Mike Carr, student body president, said.

A total of 300 prospects must sign before a charter can be obtained.

A table will be set up on the first floor of the Student Center again Friday until 300 persons have joined.

The union is open to all students and staff of SIU and to Carbondale residents.

SPRINGFIELD (AP)—Gov. Daniel Walker's office Thursday announced he signed the Illinois Act On Aging into law.

City to disconnect No. 1 water tower

Water pumps at East Grand and South Wall will be shut off at midnight Friday for about two or three hours while the main line to the No. 1 water tower is disconnected, Bill Schwegman, public works director, has announced.

"The people most affected will be those near the area, especially those in Lewis Park Apartments," Schwegman said. He noted these people will probably have no water while the pumps are off.

The other two towers should keep up water pressure in the rest of the city, he said, although it may be low in some areas.

The No. 1 water tower has not been used for about three years. City Manager Carroll Fry said. "We have no further need for it for maintaining pressure," he said.

Fry said the city will be adequately serviced by the water towers in Chataqua Road and Helen Street.

The land on which the water tower stands belongs to SIU, Fry explained.

SIU acquired the property in a land exchange with the city which was approved by the Board of Trustees in February.

Willard Hart, campus architect, said no plans have been made for use of the land. The first decision which must be made, he said, is what to do with the tower.

In the agreement, SIU accepted responsibility for the tower. Hart said there are two possibilities the University may follow.

One is to find a city which could use that type of water tower and sell the structure. If no customer can be found, the tower will be torn down.

Since the land will be near the planned recreation complex, Hart said it will probably be left open. He added that a future campus drive in that vicinity may go through the land.

Completion of courses required for transcripts

Students will not be able to get official transcripts of summer quarter work at the end of the eight-week session unless all of their courses have been completed by that time.

Assistant Registrar Sue Eberhart said Thursday students requesting transcripts of completed work will not be issued transcripts unless all their coursework is completed.

"We can't give incomplete records," she said.

If a student has some 11-week courses, but needs grades received in earlier classes reported, a letter certifying completion of individual courses will be given to students, Ms. Eberhart said.

Complete record of summer quarter work will be added to a student's official University record and transcripts issued when all classes are completed.

There is no charge for either transcripts or the letter reporting grades, Ms. Eberhart said. A fee for transcripts was discontinued for a trial period beginning in May.

Hearing reset on dismissal of libel suit

A hearing on a motion to dismiss libel suit brought against a former SIU student by Murphysboro landlord Gale Williams has been rescheduled to Aug. 23.

Williams filed an $800,000 libel suit against Douglas Diggle and the SIU Board of Trustees in June, alleging advertisements published in the Daily Egyptian in November, 1972 were defamatory.

Diggle was named in the suit because he was chairman of a committee which paid for the allegedly defamatory ads, placed during the 1972 campaign for state senator. The board was named because as governing body of the University, it has final authority and responsibility for the Daily Egyptian.

Williams was defeated in the state senator contest by Ken Buzbee of Carbondale.

Circuit Court Judge Richard Richman dismissed the portion of the suit against SIU for lack of jurisdiction. Arguments were to have been heard Thursday on motion by Diggle's attorney to dismiss the libel suit.

Police may uncover more slaying victims

HOUSTON (AP)—Pasadena Police Inspector Lee Gilbert said Thursday the bodies of other slaying victims may be buried in southeast Texas, following discovery in Houston of the remains of 11 teenagers in shallow graves at a rented boat shed. Police said they were the victims of a sex pervert.

Gilbert said the information came from a 17-year old junior high school dropout who had led officers to the graves at a southwest Houston boat storage shed.

Officers said the case broke Wednesday when Elmer Wayne Henley, 17, telephoned them and said he had shot to death Dean Allen Corll, 33, Houston Lighting & Power Co. employee, at Corll's suburban Pasadena home.

"We have information from Henley there will possibly be other bodies at High Island and Sam Rayburn Lake. We plan to begin digging at those sites after conferring with Houston police," Gilbert said.

When asked if the additional bodies may number as many as 25 or 30, Gilbert replied: "Yes, we have information that there are more bodies."

Houston Police Lt. Breck Porter confirmed the 25 to 30 figure as a possibility.

High Island is some 60 miles southeast of Houston. Rayburn Lake is some 125 miles northeast of Houston.

Police found three bodies at the shed in rapid-fire order once they resumed digging operations Thursday at noon. The remains of eight bodies had been found earlier.

Police said they had been digging at a depth of four feet in graves laced with lime in a rented stall of the boat building.

Police said an all-night sex party in suburban Pasadena Tuesday night led to the shooting of Corll's shooting and discovery of the graves.

Police said they had dug up only one-third of the 12-by-30-foot boat storage area and completion of the digging would take several days.

"We haven't positively identified anybody," said detective Larry Earls. But police said most of the decomposed bodies appeared to be those of young men previously reported missing.

Police said Henley told them he could lead them to the graves of eight teen-agers. All were victims of Corll, Henley told police.

The Cleaning of America

Can American politics be cleaned up?

Before this question can be answered one must examine two causes, of many, of political crimes. These are money and zeal.

When some people are offered money, a lot of money, they tend to do things they might not do otherwise. The same holds true for the zealot. If he feels strongly enough that his country is in danger he may just do about anything to halt or stamp out that danger.

Money and zeal have contributed to dirtying up the 1972 presidential campaign. The seven men who broke into the Democratic Headquarters at Watergate did so out of their zeal to protect their country and for money. And now the Senate committee has found that money might have been spent to cover it up.

At worst the investigation could result in the impeachment of the President. But even if it doesn't go this far the steadiness and credibility of the presidency has been jeopardized. Another scar is appearing on the face of American politics.

The original question now arises. Can American politics be cleansed? Can such scandals be prevented? The consequences for crimes is there but apparently their deterrent value is limited. If the legal consequences for crimes had such deterrent value. Watergate perhaps wouldn't have happened. The answer for prevention of future Watergates lies elsewhere.

A president cannot always be sure his subordinates will act rationally and wisely under all circumstances, that is granted. But a president should be able to choose trustworthy and wise men as his counsels so as not run the risk of losing his own position and the trust of the American people through his counsels' own ineptitudes and lack of sound judgement. Unfortunately the ability or lack of it to choose good men is not foreseeable by the voters.

The checks and balances of the branches built into the American government allows for the president's cabinet choices to be approved by the Senate. Such approval for all personal aides is not the answer. It would be too cumbersome and time consuming and not necessarily foolproof. After all the Senate approved John Mitchell as attorney general and he has been indicted for campaign financing law violations.

The matter comes down to a question of judgement. If the President is innocent and was not involved in the affair at all then he erred in his judgement by not selecting his counsels more wisely. If Nixon is indeed involved then the American people erred in its judgement by electing him.

Can such scandals be prevented in the future? Perhaps tougher campaign financing laws could be passed, but that may not be the answer. Senate confirmation of all executive employees is not practical nor foolproof. Perhaps the government could take over the campaign financing. It would eliminate the money factor that entices corruption, but it doesn't seem the American thing to do.

Just as there is no panacea for murder or robbery there is none for political crimes. It seems almost inevitable that some men without scruples creep into a campaign and create a scandal. Fortunately such actions can be taken to punish such men, but there is little that can be done to prevent it.

Perhaps the only thing that can be done is to sit back and sigh with relief that our democratic system is still working. It cleanses itself.

Daily Egyptian Opinion & Commentary

EDITORIALS—The Daily Egyptian encourages free discussion of current issues through editorials and letters on these pages. Editorials—labeled Opinion—are written and signed by members of the student news staff and by students enrolled in journalism courses and represent opinions of the authors only.

LETTERS—Readers are invited to express their opinions in letters which must be signed with name, classification and major, or faculty rank, address and telephone number. Letters should be typewritten, and their length should not exceed 250 words. Letter writers should respect the generally accepted standards of good taste and are expected to make their points in terms of issues rather than personalities. Acceptance for publication will depend on limitations of space and the timeliness and relevance of the material. Unsigned letters will not be accepted, and authors of all letters must be verified by the Daily Egyptian. It is the responsibility of the Daily Egyptian to determine content of the opinion pages. Other materials on pages four and five include editorials and articles reprinted from other publications, syndicated columns and articles, and interpretive or opinion articles authored locally.

Further comments on Managerialism

To the Daily Egyptian:

This comment on the excellent article (which you recently reprinted) by Professor Detwiler is not an attempt to refute it, but simply to extend some of its possibilities for discussion. "Managerialism as an Ideology" speaks of the "deeply rooted distrust" in our society "of intellectual individualism," with its often "baleful impact—the more so as it has many unwitting advocates not only among academic administrators, but also among 'anti-administration' staff and faculty, not to mention their organizational spokesmen." The article points out that those who are troubled by the invasion of education by managerialism, however well-intentioned it is, "are not the latter-day Luddites seeking to veto the future or even to delay progress by persecuting responsible administrative and educational reformers." On the contrary, they are welcomed into the academy, though they should apply "their technical skills and scientific methodology" in connection with "their technical skills and own sensitivity and integrity in pursuing the educational interests of students as individuals, and on the personal confidence and loyalty they consequently command on the part of faculty, staff, students, governing boards, and the public."

Fair enough; and Dr. Detwiler distinguishes between managerialism and managerial science, the former "dedicated to managerial success as an end in itself, easily falling into self-fulfilling ritualistic procedures and a simplistic jargon parroting and parodying the legitimate technical concepts of the serious intellectual discipline to which it stands in approximately the same relation as quackery to medicine."

Again, fair enough; but perhaps it isn't out of place to suggest that the Humanities, which have a discipline of their own, may be training students to react against the bad side of managerialism. The bad side; it can have its good sides, as Professor Detwiler suggests. And, incidentally, history is often classified among the Humanities, just as it is often thought of as one of the Social Sciences. But history and the Humanities do overlap and even at times integrate, particularly when literature is concerned. Dr. Detwiler mentions the Luddites in the bit I have quoted from him here, and in his opening paragraph he has defined them. In a general discussion they have to be defined, for they are just a chapter or paragraph in the enormous history of the industrial revolution. But certainly all university students who take history seriously would know who they were. And here is one of those cases in which literature and history intertwine. Although the Luddite riots of 1815 took place in England, every student of modern German literature will also know what they are because of Ernst Toller's "Die Maschinenstürmer" ("The Machine-Wreckers," 1922), probably his greatest play. But students of modern drama would also know this. And I like to think that English majors would also know who the Luddites were, since Byron defended them in the House of Lords.

As for managerialism, literature also has a number of examples of it. In modern writing in English, the businessman occasionally is seen in a favorable light, as in William Dean Howells's "The Rise of Silas Lapham" (1885). But usually the managerial people are viewed rather nastily, as in Sinclair Lewis's "Babbitt" (1922), which gave the language a new word (not often—or not often enough), applied these days. I can think of at least two other novels out of America after World War II, "Executive Suite" and "The Man in the Grey Flannel Suit"; I can't remember the names of the authors and wouldn't expect English majors to do so; the books simply don't belong to what we can seriously call literature.

Certainly the finest novel in English about managerial men occurs in E. M. Forster's "Howards End" (1910), one of the truly important works in fiction in this century. Its title-page motto is "Only connect." This refers to the necessity of an alliance between the artistic and intellectual worlds on one side and the business world on the other. In telling Forster that he was wrong in "glorifying those business people in 'Howards End,'" D. H. Lawrence was himself wrong, for Forster didn't glorify them; he often showed them at their worst, as I pointed out in my little book on Forster a few years ago, the cultured Schlegel girls in the story, when associating with the Wilcox family of businessmen, view these men differently: Helen Schlegel is strongly against them, saying that they are "just a wall of newspaper and motor-cars and golf-clubs," a wall behind which only emptiness and panic exist." But Margaret tells her that "there is a great outer life," which she and her sister don't know, a life "in which telegrams and anger count." Personal relations don't know, a life "in which love means marriage settlements, death, and death duties." Without such men as the Wilcoxes, "there would be no trains, no ships to carry us literary people about, no fields even. Just savagery."

In that sentence, Margaret's view might seem mostly utilitarian in outlook, but it really isn't as her explanation to Henry Wilcox shows: "Only connect the prose and the passion, and both will be exalted, and human love will be seen at its height. Live in fragments no longer. Only connect, and the beast and the monk, robbed of the isolation that life is to either, will die."

Henry (Reader, she married him!) doesn't understand her, and Forster doesn't indulge in the oversimplification of resolving the contradiction with a pat ending. What he does, however, is remarkable (one of the other themes of the book is the opposition between city and country), for he engages our attention as well as our emotions; this is what gives literature its special quality. The Germans speak of Einfühlung, "in-feeling"—we transform this into empathy, built on a Greek word. This is what gives literature its uniqueness, whether it is dealing with Luddites or businessmen or whatever—but literature functions at its best when studied in conjunction with its sister arts, not only music and art, but also history and philosophy and political science. And of course the well-rounded man, all too rare in our time, would also know at least and grammar of the physical and biological sciences. What we have to hope for is that those in managerial positions at educational institutions understand some of these matters. (I'm happy that Professor Detwiler's very fine article was so stimulating.)

Watergate senators sue Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate Watergate committee sued "defendant" Richard M. Nixon" individually and in his capacity as President Thursday, asking a federal court to enforce its subpoena for White House tape recordings and documents relating to the Watergate investigation.

The committee also asked the court to force a response from the President within 20 days, seeking to obtain the material before the vacationing panel resumes "its hearings next month."

"The defendant President's refusal and failure to make available said electronic tapes and other materials cannot be excused or justified by resort to any presidential power, prerogative or privilege," said the suit.

"If there be any doctrine of presidential power, prerogative or privilege that protects materials... such a doctrine does not extend to the protection of materials relating to alleged criminal acts..."

The committee asked the court to rule:

—Its subpoenas were legally issued and lawfully served on the President "and must therefore be responded to and complied with..."

—Nixon may not refuse to comply "on the basis of any claim of separation of powers, executive privilege, presidential prerogative or otherwise..."

—That the President in revealing and permitting others to reveal the subject matters of some of the materials "has breached the confidentiality of those materials and has waived any claim" to applying separation of powers, executive privilege or presidential prerogative.

It also asked, if necessary, that the court issue an injunction directing the President to make the materials available.

The committee said Nixon's continuing refusal is "irreparably injuring the work of the select committee and the interests of the United States on whose behalf and in whose name the select committee sues."

Nixon is preparing to speak out publicly on the Watergate scandal, perhaps by the middle of next week.

The suit is the second filed against Nixon over the tape recordings and documents. Special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox filed a similar action. The President's lawyers Tuesday replied in court that any attempt to enforce a subpoena "would be an unsupportable violation of the constitutional doctrine of separation of powers." Oral arguments are scheduled for Aug. 22.

Nixon's lawyers argued in the Cox suit that "no court has ever attempted to enforce a subpoena directed against the President of the United States," nor has any department or agency head been held in contempt for refusing to produce information the President wanted withheld.

The constitutional issue involved is certain to reach the U.S. Supreme Court.

Chief U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica, who will preside over the matter as he has in the Cox suit and the January Watergate trial, took no action immediately on the motion to shorten the period for the President to respond from the normal 60 days to 20.

The suit said normally defendants need 60 days to respond, but:

"These factors are not relevant here. This suit runs directly against the President... Surely," the President's counsel are well advanced in their preparation for this case..."

The Senate committee and special prosecutor Cox had already asked the President for documents, when on July 16, former Nixon aide Alexander P. Butterfield revealed that conversations in the President's offices and over his telephones had for two years been automatically recorded.

That led to demands for the tapes and the eventual showdown, pitting one branch of government against another—with the decision resting in the hands of the third.

The committee's suit notes that the testimony of ousted White House counsel John W. Dean III demonstrated that the subject matter of the five specified conversations the committee asks falls within committee's probe.

The president said the tapes would not finally solve the issues before the committee and said they contain comments that could be interpreted in different ways.

False bomb reports started with LBJ

WASHINGTON (AP)—Deputy Defense Secretary William Clements Jr. testified Thursday that the Johnson administration apparently originated a system that led later to falsification of Cambodian bombing reports to Congress.

Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., acting chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, replied: "Two wrongs don't make a right."

Clements said he had discovered a memorandum in 1967 from James T. McNaughton, a former assistant secretary of Defense under Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara. The McNaughton memo gave approval for B52 strikes to be made simultaneously in Laos and South Vietnam so that questions would not be raised about the strikes in Laos.

McNaughton's letter says the practice was intended "to serve as a press cover." McNaughton has since died in a plane crash.

Clements said he has been unable to find a specific directive establishing the elaborate dual reporting system. It was used during the Nixon administration to report publicly that 3,630 B52 strikes in supposedly neutral Cambodia occurred in South Vietnam.

Adm. Thomas H. Moorer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said throughout most of the years of the Indochina war there has been a double reporting system—one for a few high officials with a "need to know" and another for the thousands of military men charged with keeping supplies moving and administrative needs met.

While the committee continued its investigation into allegations that many aspects of the Indochina war were deliberately kept secret from some key members of Congress and the public, Symington questioned Clements and Moorer about the current bombing campaign in Cambodia.

Clements said the bombing had risen by about 20 per cent in the last two or three days from about 40 B52 sorties daily to about 49.

Clements said he was ignorant of an agreement worked out between the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the White House prohibiting almost all military escalation in Cambodia before an Aug. 15 congressionally imposed halt to the bombing.

Symington said the only exception to the agreement was a clause insisted upon by President Nixon's chief national security adviser, Henry A. Kissinger, that only "unless provoked" could the United States step up the pace of the bombing.

But Clements said the recent attacks by Cambodian insurgents toward the capital city of Phnom Penh "could well qualify within that phrase."

When falsified bombing reports went to Congress, Clements was acting defense secretary because Elliot L. Richardson had left

Communists not waiting; going for Phnom Penh

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP)—The minutes are ticking off quickly toward this city's moment of truth — Aug. 15, when American bombing is to cease in Cambodia.

In Phnom Penh you can measure the approach of zero hour — 11 a.m. Wednesday, 11 p.m. Tuesday CDT — by the clock as well as by the ear. The crescendo of U.S. bombing has increased.

Windows rattle and shake through the night from the vibrations of explosives. Each morning Phnom Penh is ringed with bomb smoke.

The United States is trying to inflict maximum punishment in the shortest possible time on the Communist-led insurgents, yet they continue to press forward.

"The little blighters are mad," commented a western military attaché this week when he heard that the guerrillas had launched another abortive attack on the Prek Ho bridge stronghold on Route 2, six miles from Phnom Penh.

Around-the-clock U.S. air strikes have saved the bridge, plus the three other major strongpoints that form the outer crust of Phnom Penh's defenses.

"Why don't the insurgents just wait until Aug. 15?" the western attaché asked.

Why the Communists fight on, through the bombs, and what will happen to this city of nearly two million people and Lon Nol's government after the bombs stop falling are the two most important questions asked here now.

There seems little doubt any more in the most informed circles about why the insurgents are fighting hard.

"They are coming for the city, it's as simple as that," said an Australian diplomat.

The intensified American bombing has slowed the steady Communist advance. The thrust from the south and southeast has bogged down at Prek Ho bridge and the village of Wat Sleng eight miles from the city.

The north and northwest thrusts toward Phnom Penh are hung up in an arc about 15 miles away. The Communists seem only temporarily held up.

Despite the bombing, the insurgents have been able to:

—Frighten off a defensive force of 100 men at the international radio transmission center near the airport, and blow it up.

—Cut minor highways south and southeast of the city, and strike at the government relief forces.

—Infiltrate increasing numbers of men and materials into the city. Estimates of commando forces now in and around Phnom Penh go as high as 1,000. They probably are just waiting for the signal to attack.

In addition to the infiltrators, the Communist side has amassed about 60 battalions of soldiers in the Phnom Penh war region.

American officials estimate the total insurgent force at 50,000 men, but that is lower than estimates by representatives here of other western nations.

The Australian embassy believes the insurgents are now fielding 60,000 men, backed by a 100,000-man village and local militia force "ranging from armed men to little boys carrying messages in forked sticks."

The enemy force is estimated to have from 2,000 to 5,000 North Vietnamese advisers.

What will happen when the American bombing stops Aug. 15?

"There are a lot of unknowns at this stage — psychological unknowns," commented one senior U.S. official. He spoke of increased American equipment being brought in, a larger army recruited from Phnom Penh, and the "back to the wall" syndrome that might finally push the Cambodian army into fighting.

The Americans also see help from the monsoons.

"Phnom Penh becomes an island in September," said one U.S. diplomat. "If we can keep them off the island, then we can hold out at least 'til later in the year. That gives us time."

That is the best that could happen: that Phnom Penh hold out for a couple of months until political negotiations get under way to determine Cambodia's destiny.

But some American officials, and many other senior western diplomats, see a much "black" scenario shaping up.

They see the bombing halt leading inevitably to the crumbling of Phnom Penh's outer defenses.

"I am absolutely convinced that the government will not hold the Prek Ho bridge for long after the bombing ends," said one diplomat.

He said Wat Sleng in the southeast also would fall along with the north and northwestern defenses.

"Don't forget, the Communist insurgents now want the city. They do not want to negotiate," he added.

This black view of the next few weeks sees the Cambodian army, now four divisions strong but will all its reserves totally committed, forced from the strongpoints at the outer defense crust.

Diplomats who hold this view expect the Cambodian army to give up and not fight to the end.

"Don't forget, the people of Phnom Penh are not committed to the government on this," a western diplomat said. "They will go home and lock their shutters."

Raid errors total five in two weeks

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP)—American warplanes killed Cambodia government soldiers and civilians in at least five separate bombing accidents in the last two weeks, military sources said Thursday.

Three of the bombing errors came before the B52 strike that left 145 dead and 280 wounded on a government base at Neak Luong Monday, the worst bombing accident of the Indochina war.

On Tuesday, a U.S. F111 struck a friendly village on an island near Neak Luong, killing 8 persons and wounding 16.

Daley says city may cut ties with firm

CHICAGO (AP)—Mayor Richard J. Daley said his staff is looking into the possibility of canceling the city's contracts with an advertising agency reportedly owned by Daley's former press aide.

Daley said a federal investigation of Earl Bush is a "very unfortunate incident, a very sad incident."

Bush, 57, resigned from the mayor's office last week.

The investigation centers on allegations that Bush organized and was the sole owner of a firm that holds exclusive contracts for advertising at O'Hare, Midway and Meigs airports.

Daley said at a press conference that he was "reluctant to make any comment at this time with an investigation going on."

However, he said, "it is sad to have a relationship with a man for 20 years and then find out something like this is going on."

Daley said he learned of the investigation and Bush's role with the advertising firm only "recently."

Other U.S. bombing accidents have been reported at Prey Bang 15 miles northeast of Phnom Penh on July 29, and at Setbo 13 miles southeast of Phnom Penh on July 30.

Sources said that at Prey Bang 3 Cambodian soldiers were killed, 10 wounded and 4 persons listed as missing and probably dead. At Setbo, eight soldiers and eight civilians were wounded and four other persons were missing, the sources said.

At Prateah Lang, where there has been heavy fighting for several weeks, U.S. jets were reported to have damaged an armored personnel carrier, killing three government soldiers and wounding 11.

The sources said the bombing occurred last week but they did not give the exact date.

"The first three errors were caused by the normal fatigue of war," said a military source. "Cambodian controllers gave the wrong map coordinates."

Col. Am Rong, chief spokesman for the military command, meanwhile announced that government forces have reopened Highway 1 to Neak Luong, 32 miles from Phnom Penh.

Supported by massive U.S. bombing, government columns from Phnom Penh and Neak Luong lined up at the Mekong River town of Dei Doh, 26 miles southeast of the capital.

Col. David H.E. Opfer, an Air Force attaché, denied reports that American planes are responsible for killing 15 civilians in the village of Veal Sbau, three miles from Phnom Penh, on Sunday.

Opfer said the U.S. officials at Nakern Phnom, Thailand, informed the embassy here that no U.S. air strikes went within half a mile of Veal Sbau.

Some villagers at Veal Sbau said the bombs were dropped by jet fighter bombers. The Cambodian air force has no jets. Other villagers could not identify the planes.

State Fair reflects meat shortage

SPRINGFIELD (AP)—The troubled economic situation and the accompanying meat shortage are in evidence as the numbers of livestock entries in the Illinois State Fair are lower this year than a year ago.

The fair, which will open its gates Friday for a 10-day exposition on the fairgrounds on the north side of Springfield, is still billed by state fair officials, however, as the "strongest agricultural fair in the nation."

Gov. Daniel Walker planned to be on hand to snip the ribbon officially opening the fair.

"Our livestock entries are down a little from last year," said Robert Park, now in his second year as fair manager.

There are 1,677 sheep entered this year as compared with 1,889 last year; 1,844 beef breeding entries are being shown this year as compared with 2,183 last year and the number of swine entries has fallen to 5,713 this year as compared with 6,170 last year.

One of the new categories in which an increase in the number of entries is reflected is that of the goat. This year 307 have been entered as compared with 301 last year.

"The decrease in the entries has a lot to do with the price farmers can get for livestock today," Park said. "A lot of people are selling their steers rather than showing them at fairs," he said.

Park said many farmers feel they should get the price they can now for beef and pork animals and do not want to risk the possibility that the prized steer or pig could die of the heat or from disease while housed at the fairgrounds.

"The rains this spring hurt the livestock showings, too," he continued. "Many farmers were too busy in the fields late in the season to get their livestock fitted for the fair."

Nevertheless, Park expects as many as 750,000 persons to travel to Springfield to take in the fair, which offers the old standbys such as bakeoffs, horse and flower shows and nightly grandstand entertainment.

Admission to the fairgrounds and the grandstand shows is $1.50 for adults and 50 cents for children and senior citizens.

The entertainment lineup includes folk-rock duos, Seals and Crofts and Loggins and Messina, the singing group The Fifth Dimension and television personality Jim Nabors. Country singer Charley Pride, the Grand Ole Opry, trumpeter Doc Severinsen and singer Bobby Goldsboro will also entertain.

Absent this year will be the politicking which was once as much a trademark of the state fair as are the pigtail contests and rooster crowing jamborees.

Record high crops predicted in corn, soybeans, wheat, oats

WASHINGTON (AP)—The nation's corn crop is estimated at a record high 5,661,000,000 bushels, up 2 per cent from 1972 production, the Agriculture Department announced Thursday.

A record soybean harvest of 1,540,000,000 bushels, an increase of 20 per cent from last year, also was predicted.

Both crops are in big demand for exports and to help rebuild the nation's feed supply in hopes that more meat, poultry and milk can be turned out next winter.

The Crop Reporting Board said 1973 wheat production, forecast earlier at a record level, would total 1,717,000,000 bushels, a 11 per cent gain from last year.

Wheat also is in large demand for the export market. Department officials have said foreign sales for the entire 1973-74 marketing season may total about one billion bushels, well over half of this year's wheat harvest.

The production figures for corn and soybeans, as well as some other spring-planted crops, were the first by the department based on actual field surveys and yield estimates. Those were based on findings as of Aug. 1.

In July, however, USDA did "project" 1973 production for those crops, including a possible output of corn at nearly 5.9 billion bushels. The soybean harvest last month was projected at 1.588 billion bushels.

Corn production in 1972 was 5.553 billion bushels. The previous record was 5.641 billion bushels in 1971. Soybeans have set new records annually, including production last year of 1.283 billion in 1972.

The August report said this year's output of the four major feed grains—corn, oats, barley and sorghum—is estimated at 7,745,179,000 bushels.

In reporting yields based on Aug. 1 conditions, the department said the 1973 corn crop would average 92.1 bushels per acre, compared with 96.9 bushels in 1972; soybeans 27.4 bushels compared with 28.0.

The August wheat estimate compared with a July forecast of 1,748,533,000 bushels and a production in 1972 of 1,544,775,000 bushels. The previous record crop was 1,617,789 bushels in 1971.

The wheat estimate included 1,293,053,000 bushels of winter wheat, compared with 1,319,702,000 forecast in July and production last year of 1,185,890,000 bushels. The yield was put at 33.5 bushels per acre, compared with 34.0 last year.

Durum wheat production, in demand for spaghetti and other pasta food products, was estimated at 82,264,000 bushels, compared with 87,035,000 in July and production in 1972 of 73,037,000 bushels. The yield was estimated at 27.7 bushels per acre, compared with 28.6 last year.

Spring wheat other than durum was estimated at 341,676,000 bushels, compared with 341,796,000 in July and production last year of 285,848,000 bushels. The yield average was put at 29.1 bushels per acre, compared with 28.0 in 1972.

The oats crop was estimated at 707,756,000 bushels, compared with 716,615,000 indicated in July and production last year of 694,967,000 bushels. The yield average was put at 48.8 bushels per acre, compared with 51.1 last year.

Graduate Council to discuss plans for new office

Recommendations for administration of the Graduate School and the Office of Research and Projects (ORP) will be heard by the Graduate Council Friday.

The two offices were formerly one, but plans are being considered to formally separate their functions. The recommendations are in response to a for ideas on the matter from Keith Leasure, vice president for academic affairs and provost.

The ad hoc committee to review the proposed campus governance document will present its report and suggestions. Action to adopt or reject the proposal may be taken.

Standing committee reports also will be given at the meeting at 8 a.m. in the Student Center Mississippi Room.

New telecasting gear display set

A display and demonstration of new broadcasting equipment will be at SIU Monday in Telecommunication Mid-west, Inc.'s Video Van.

Telecom, a large manufacturer of television equipment and producer of television programming from Maryland Heights, Mo., will display new cameras, controls and tape equipment in the van.

The van will be parked by the theater dock behind the Communications Building from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Several technicians from Telecommunication will explain the equipment.

Governor's accountability session moved after threat

MOUNT VERNON (AP)—An accountability session of Gov. Daniel Walker has moved from an outdoor amphitheater to a community center building Wednesday night after police received a threatening phone call earlier in the day.

Police chief Fred Dedman said an anonymous phone caller told police "There's going to be trouble" at the accountability session, one of a series Walker is holding around the state.

There were no incidents. A packed house sprinkled with plainclothesmen at the Mount Vernon Community Center listened to Walker attack the Nixon administration.

The governor said that because of the Watergate scandal, "the store is not being minded to the extent that it should be."

Citing confusion and holdups in federal aid to states, Walker urged the White House to stop "shuffling," shrug its "preoccupation" and "get back at the business of running this country."

Walker drew his loudest applause when he pledged to prosecute welfare cheaters that he said are robbing taxpayers of about $40 million a year.

"We are going to send them to jail for fraud," he said.

Oil industry warned to deal squarely

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Nixon administration put the oil industry on notice Thursday that allocation of scarce fuels may be made mandatory if it is not done fairly on a voluntary basis.

The White House proposed "for comment only" a detailed plan for mandatory allocation of crude oil and refined petroleum products, but said "there is no intention to actually implement a mandatory program at this time."

The allocation proposal would apply only to wholesale distribution. John A. Love, director of the President's Energy Policy Office, said there was no consideration of rationing petroleum among the final consumers. He called end-use rationing a "horrendous" prospect to be considered only if the nation's fuel situation became desperate.

Love said the administration still believed voluntary allocation would work, but he admitted the program "is not in as good shape as it should be."

He said the White House hoped the prospect of mandatory rules, plus some "persuasion," would stimulate greater cooperation with the voluntary program, begun last May 10.

"We hope it will have some of that effect," Love said.

Last June 11-14, public hearings on the voluntary program revealed complaints that some independent refiners and marketers were having difficulty getting petroleum from their usual suppliers, and some purchasers said they were being charged exorbitant prices.

Love said Thursday he was "concerned about the difficulties being experienced by some independent sectors of the industry" but was not convinced that mandatory allocation would be the best answer.

No allocation program could increase total fuel supplies, Love said. All it could do would be to spread shortages fairly, he added.

Like the present voluntary program, the proposed mandatory program would follow a guideline distributing petroleum products to purchasers in proportion to the supplies they received in the past.

It would set aside 10 per cent of the products for non-proportional allocation to priority uses. But priority allocations, now handled by the federal government, would become the responsibility of the state governments.

The proposal would allocate crude oil from major producers to small refiners—those with capacities under 175,000 barrels a day—in a manner designed to permit their operation at 90 per cent of capacity or better.

Love said the Office of Management and Budget would set up a task force to evaluate comments on the proposed plan and to report by Sept. 21.

Decatur firms, men indicted for illegal campaign donations

SPRINGFIELD (AP)—Two men and two companies from Decatur were indicted Thursday by a federal grand jury on charges of making illegal campaign contributions totaling $7,654.75 to a Republican party congressional primary campaign.

Donald B. MacKay U.S. district attorney, said in a statement a 13-count indictment was returned against the Andec Corp., Midstate Machinery Co., William L. Booth, owner of the two companies, and Donald V. Lindsey, a political coordinator.

Rep. Edward R. Madigan, R-Lincoln, was nominated in the Republican primary over two opponents in the 21st District. He defeated Lawrence E. Johnson of Champaign, who also was nominated in the 1972 Democratic congressional primary.

Madigan won the primary election over O. George Ryan and Elbert S. Smith.

MacKay said corporations are prohibited from making contributions to campaigns for federal offices.

The announcement did not identify the contribution with any candidate but MacKay told a newsmen in an interview that Madigan was the victory in the campaign.

The Andec Corp. was accused in four counts of making four contributions from Jan. 1972 to March 1972 totaling $7,008.50 in connection with the Republican primary election held March 21, 1972.

Booth, an officer and director of the Andec Corp., was accused in four counts of consenting to the same contribution. The indictment said he authorized the contributions during January, February and March.

Lindsey, identified in the announcement only as a county campaign chairman for a candidate for federal office, was accused in the three counts of unlawfully receiving illegal campaign contributions from Andec during the same months.

Madigan has been quoted in news stories as identifying Lindsey's role as buying and analyzing television commercials.

Lindsey was identified by Madigan in the same accounts as a television station sales manager who later went to work for Booth.

Both on Sept. 9 last year was quoted in news accounts as alleging that Madigan had asked for the money to be contributed to his GOP primary campaign and had accepted slightly more than $7,000 from Booth in that manner.

Madigan repeatedly denied the allegations Booth made public in a sworn statement during a press conference called by Madigan's Democratic opponent, Johnson.

Midstate Machinery Co. was accused in one count of contributing $646.25 in February 1972 in connection with the Republican primary.

Consumers warned about meat deals

CHICAGO (AP)—Consumers were warned this week in light of the beef shortage to be wary of deals involving large meat purchases tied to sales of home freezers.

Atty. Gen. William J. Scott said his office has received an increasing number of complaints from dissatisfied customers of allegedly fraudulent plans.

Scott said most of the plans include a membership charge of several hundred dollars; the option to buy a new freezer; and delivery several times a year of frozen meat, poultry and fish.

Typical complaints from consumers were that payments average more than the retail price of meat; and quality of meat is poor; or the freezer is a used model, Scott said.

These suggestions were offered the consumer interested in a home freezer plan:

—Get all guarantees, promises and financial terms in writing.

—Check others who have bought the plan to determine if they are satisfied.

—Contact the attorney general's office to determine if it has any legal action pending against the company.

—Determine what guarantees come with the freezer and if the model is to be new.

—Know that if the salesman came to the home unsolicited, the consumer has three business days after the date of purchase to cancel the contract.

Union must hire minorities

CHICAGO (AP)—The government put the pressure on three trade union locals Thursday in an effort to get them to hire more blacks and Latin-Americans.

The justice Department asked the U.S. District Court to permanently enjoin the locals from discriminating in its membership or referrals for jobs on the basis of race or national origin.

Shortly after the suit was filed one of the defendants, Local 597 of the Pipefitters Association, signed an agreement to admit 150 more new Black or Spanish surnamed journeymen or apprentices next year and 180 more in each of the succeeding five years.

The others sued are the Ornamental Ironworkers Local 63 and the Asbestos Workers Local 17.

The government contends that while almost a quarter of the Chicago area population is Black or Latin, they hold only a very minor percentage of the jobs in these crafts.

Drug rehab center may close its doors

By Sam Denoms
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Hill House, a drug-free rehabilitation center on old Illinois 13 west of Carbondale, may be forced to close its doors next week unless funds can be obtained to continue the program.

The Jackson County Board Wednesday denied the center's request for $4,700 in revenue sharing funds.

"No one could have presented that budget request and gotten it approved by the county," Ted Osborne, Hill House director, told the board members.

Osborne said he plans to do everything possible to locate other sources of financing for the operation.

Tom Wagner, business and financial manager of the 708 Board, informed the Hill House group that the board will hold a special meeting next week to discuss a funding contract for Hill House.

The possibility of moving the operation into the Carbondale University City Complex, along with a comprehensive drug program, was discussed by the board.

Hill House program has facilities to treat 20 residents on an "in-patient" basis and a limited number of "out-patients."

The program was started in September of last year and has operated mainly from private funding sources.

Under an existing contract with the state, Hill House is expected to be able to operate at a break-even level by late October.

Latin feminists oppose bid by Peron's wife

By The Associated Press

A woman for vice president, Si! Isabel, no!

That appears to be the predominant view of Latin American feminists to the nomination of Juan D. Peron's wife as his running mate in presidential elections next month in Argentina.

Their comments reflect indignation, even wrath, as if Peron's action had reduced the feminist cause to a joke.

If he agrees to run, Peron is considered a certainty to win the presidency, from which he was ousted in a military coup 18 years ago. His wife is expected to step aside before the election for a prominent male politician.

But the action has stirred feminist ire in many parts of Latin America.

SIU parachutists busy this summer

By Tom Kuncie
Student Writer

While most SIU students try and get up for the weekend, there are some who get their thrills by coming down. They are members of the SIU Sport Parachute Club.

This summer, eight members are practicing the sport every weekend that weather permits. They are Bruce Fassero, Bob O'Keefe, Karen McQuarrie, Keith McQuarrie, Bill Boughton, Randy Vaughn, Mike Kipling and Bob Mudd.

The club has performed at several events around the area, including the Anna State Hospital Fourth of July Celebration and the Grand Tower Tri-Centennial.

All sports thrive on competition and parachuting is no exception. SIU's parachutists comprise one of the most competitive teams in the nation, as they proved last fall by capturing first place in the non-military division of the National Collegiate Parachuting Championships in DeLand, Fla.

SIU took third in overall competition behind the Air Force Academy and West Point. Although six of SIU's nine starters were lost to graduation, this year's team has high hopes of retaining the national title.

Between jump fees and equipment, parachuting can be an expensive hobby. Most of the club members hold parttime jobs so they can keep jumping.

A jumper's equipment includes a canopy, container for the parachute, a reserve chute, boots, helmet, a jumpsuit, altimeter and a stop watch. Jump fees can run anywhere from $2.75 to $6.25, depending on the height of the jump.

Anyone who is interested in joining the club should contact Keith McQuarrie, club treasurer. It costs $40 to join the club. The fee, according to Keith, includes "training, use of the equipment, and a one-way plane ride."

Weaver: Bright athletic future ahead

Editor's note: This is the last of four articles concerning SIU's athletic history. Today's story deals with the future of the program.

By Jim Braun
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

Getting ready for the future growth of Southern Illinois' intercollegiate athletic program is no easy task for anyone. Take it from Doug Weaver. The school's fourth athletic director, Weaver is just completing his first six months at the new job, a position the 43-year old Chicago native had never held before. He contends that the AD post is "a real challenge."

"This job is a real demanding one," Weaver said from his office in the SIU Arena. "The athletic director nowadays has to be a public relations man. It demands more awareness and the students' role is getting increasingly more important."

Athletics nor administration is anything new to Weaver. He rooted for the White Sox and Bears while growing up on Chicago's South Side. Later, he was a linebacker on Michigan State's football team and played on the 1952 national championship squad.

The SIU athletic director coached at his alma mater, then moved on to the Big Eight, where he coached at Missouri, Kansas and Kansas State, getting a law degree in the meantime. Weaver worked with Pepper Rodgers at UCLA in '71 and '72 before succeeding Donald Boydston as AD.

One of Weaver's major aspirations is to continue maintaining the prestigious overall program begun by Boydston that flung SIU into the national limelight with ten national championship teams in a 15-year span.

"I want to keep the tradition going," Weaver said, "and we can stay up there with the excellent coaching staff at present."

One of the first things on Weaver's itinerary is for SIU to join a conference. He thinks it will help the fans and athletes.

"Belonging to a conference would increase student and fan interest," he said. League play would also make Southern's team eligible for post-season tournaments, depending on the number of schools in the conference.

The Mid-American, which has recently admitted Northern Illinois, is a possibility, according to Weaver. But the most logical choice, he said, would be to band together with other Midwest independents like Cincinnati and Memphis State.

Another topic is the question of adding more sports to the already-large ten sports program. Soccer is still recognized as a club at SIU, "but if it gets stronger in popularity in this country, we just might add it on," Weaver said.

Other sports to be considered include lacrosse and hockey, popular events in other sectors of the U.S.

Taking his eyes out of the crystal ball, Weaver sees a promising road ahead for the oldest of Saluki sports — football. Both the NCAA and a Chicago engineering firm, The Engineers Collaborative, are helping.

A $1.8 million renovation of McAndrew Stadium is in the planning stages now, but work is expected to be finished by the start of the 1974 season. When completed, the seating capacity will have more than doubled, with new stands, larger restroom and pressbox facilities, better lighting and additional parking.

The NCAA's Statistics and Classification Committee changed SIU's football status from college to university-division earlier this summer. With the NCAA's more recent approval of a split into three separate brackets, Southern was put in Division I with the bigger schools.

It's a big jump for Dick Towers' grid-ders, since all other Saluki sports have long been classified in the university division. The first challenge comes late next month when Southern, a 1-8-1 team a year ago, faces Big Eight school Oklahoma State.

A new Recreation Building is in blueprint at present, waiting to be okayed by the Board of Trustees. When completed, Bob Steele's swimmers will transfer from tiny Pulliam Pool. Weaver thinks that the new building can host the national championships then.

A couple of projects that are on the Board's "low priority list" include a fieldhouse which would serve as an indoor track, and a university golf course south of the Arena.

"When we built the Arena, that was Stage 1," Boydston said. "Stage 2 was the construction of a fieldhouse in the middle '60s. That was to have been finished by 1972."

"The golf course was considered informally by the Board of Trustees. But with the recent tight money, both of these projects dropped from high to low priority."

Even with "tight" money, Weaver said that the budget for intercollegiate athletics hit $1,200,000 during the past fiscal year. That's an astounding figure from the days of William McAndrew and Abe Martin, when no scholarships were offered and the teams had to travel by railroad.

But if that's what keeps athletic teams going to tournaments and bringing back more trophies, you can bet that Doug Weaver is willing to pay every penny.

That's his job, in the coming of athletics' 100th anniversary at Southern Illinois.

Here comes Merlin's Ron Sass sliding into third base. But there's the ball, held by Bonaparte's David Kramer. It was a close play but the game wasn't Wednesday as Bonaparte's went on to win the Intramural 16-inch softball championship, ripping Merlin's 12-2. (Photo by Tom Porter)

Expos win 5-3

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Two-run homers by Jim Lyttle and Ken Singleton powered the Montreal Expos to a 5-3 victory over the San Francisco Giants Thursday.

The Expos jumped to a 2-0 lead in the first inning off Jim Barr, 9-11, with a two-out single by Singleton and Lyttle's homer.

Bobby Bonds opened the Giants' scoring in the third inning with a solo home run off winner Mike Torrez, 7-11.

Carlton going 'downtown' this year

SAN DIEGO (AP)—Steve Carlton says National League hitters are taking him "downtown"—and it hurts.

The 28-year-old Philadelphia Phillies left-hander, now 10-13, has given up 21 home runs this year, four more than all last season when he captured 27 victories to win the Cy Young Award.

"I can't complain about that one," Carlton said Wednesday night after San Diego catcher Fred Kendall blasted a three-run homer to beat him. "It was a low fast ball. I threw it for the outside corner but it came back in just enough for him to get wood on it." The Padres won 3-0.

"I suppose you can put that down as a one-pitch disaster," said Carlton, who complained of a "two-pitch disaster" in a recent 3-1 loss to Pittsburgh in which he gave up homers to Willie Stargell and Manny Sanguillen.

"Not only that," Carlton added, "but they're taking me downtown home runs when it hurts the most."

Coming off his 27-10 season, this year has been an enigma for Carlton, whose earned run average stands at 3.87, compared to his 1972 mark of 1.98, second-lowest among National League starters.

The weak Phils bullpen, depleted by injuries and ineffective work, has further hampered Carlton's productivity. In the 3-1 loss to the Pirates, Manager Danny Ozark let Carlton bat with a man on in the seventh because there was no able replacement.

But the major problem is how to get the stylish southpaw back on the winning track.

He blanked the Pirates in a recent game in Pittsburgh, but his next start was the "two-pitch disaster" in Philadelphia, followed by the "one-pitch" fiasco in San Diego.

And Steve Carlton still doesn't know how to resolve his dilemma.

High winds take toll at PGA

CLEVELAND (AP)—Longshots Al Geiberger and Don Iverson matched early, four-under-par 67's, then sat back and watched gusty winds sweep away the challenges of the game's big guns Thursday in the first round of the 55th National PGA championship.

Geiberger, who hasn't won since taking this title in 1966, and Iverson, of LaCrosse, Wis., whose lone victory in three years on the tour came in a satellite event, shared a surprising two stroke lead after the first 18 holes of this, the last of the year's four major championships.

Bob Dickson, the San Diego Open champion, and Mike Hill, making a comeback from back trouble, were next at 69 while most of the glamor names, of the game had problems that ranged from mild to serious.

The best of that group was big Tom Weiskopf, who had to sink a 35-foot birdie putt on the final hole to salvage a 70. He was tied with a group that included England's Tony Jacklin, former PGA title-holder Ray Floyd, Don Bies and Gibby Gilbert.

Leading money-winner Bruce Crampton of Australia matched par 71 on the 6,852 yards of the old Canterbury Golf Club course.

U.S. Open champion Johnny Miller, who played when the winds and the brick-hard greens were at their worst, bogeyed three holes in a row at one stretch en route to a 72.

Jack Nicklaus was another at 72, with only a single birdie.

In the group at 73 were South African Gary Player, the defending champion, and Masters title-holder Tommy Aaron.

But Arnold Palmer probably had as many problems as anyone as he struggled to a five-over-par 76 that included a fat 40 on the back nine.

"I three-putted the 11th and that was the straw that broke the camel's back," said the 43-year-old Palmer, who has won almost everything the game can offer—except the PGA title.

"I'd missed putts of reasonable distance about nine times, not even hitting the hole, and then I three-putted," Palmer said. "I've done that so often I just got discouraged and disgusted with myself."
