3 state schools raise minimum pay

SIU-C, ISU, WIU not included

By Tim Crosby
Staff Writer

Minimum wage for student workers increased at least 40 cents per hour at three state universities within the last two months.

Student workers at Eastern Illinois University, Northern Illinois University and the University of Illinois all received increases, while minimum wage at SIU-C, Illinois State University and Western Illinois University remained at $3.35 per hour.

"There hadn't been a raise in nine years for student workers," Barbara Sullivan, work-study coordinator and employment adviser at EIU, said. "We were losing many workers to off-campus jobs where the pay was better."

The minimum wage for EIU student workers increased, as of July 1, to $3.85 per hour — a 50 cents per hour increase and the largest increase of the three universities.

Sullivan said anticipated increase in revenue from the state tax increase prompted the raise.

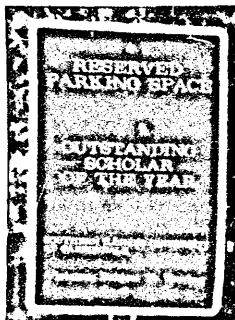

"We had been trying to get a raise through for a long time. The tax increase provided the extra push," Sullivan said. "Shocked, is a good way to describe the students' reaction."

The University of Illinois and Northern Illinois University both raised minimum wage by 40 cents per hour bringing it up to $3.75. The increases went in to effect

A parking space located in the Morris Library parking lot is reserved for the Scholar of the Year.

By Douglas Powell

A parking sticker is like a hunting permit, George Gummerman, anthropology teacher at the University said.

Gummerman is no longer on the hunt because he has bagged his prey: a year-long front row reserved parking space in the Morris Library parking lot.

Gummerman is not the only faculty member with private parking privileges. Carol Anderson has a private parking space in lot No. 1 behind Rehn Hall.

Gummerman received his reserved spot after the Parking and Traffic Committee passed a resolution at its April 4 meeting.

The resolution called for the distribution of two parking spaces to honor a teacher and a researcher (scholar) who has distinguished him or her self.

Gummerman was the recipient of the "Scholar of the Year" award and Anderson was the recipient of the "Teacher of the Year" award.

A recommendation for the awards was introduced to the Parking and Traffic Committee by Donald Paige, head of the Faculty Senate.

"I wanted to acknowledge the fine researchers and teachers we have here," Paige said. "I got the idea from one of the malls in town."

"They had a private parking space for the employee of the month and I said, 'Why can't we do that here?'"

The motion was passed by Vice-President of Campus Services Clarence Dougherty.

In September, the committee will vote on two more parking spaces that will be awarded to the "Administrative Staff Employee of

Thompson stops at Morris Library to research quote to use in speech

By David Walker
Student Writer

Gov. James Thompson took time out from his busy schedule Sunday afternoon to stop at Morris Library to look up a quote in a speech he is writing.

The governor, his daughter Samantha, the governor's personal assistant, state trooper Scott Giles and three security guards drove up to the south entrance of Morris Library.

With a little assistance from the library's front desk the governor proceeded to the third floor to find his quote.

"It's (the quote) from an 1832 election pamphlet that argued for better education written by Abraham Lincoln when he was running for the legislature," Thompson said. "I'm going to use it at the President's Conference for Education at the University of Virginia at Charlottesville on Sept. 27," he said.

"Governor Thompson is in the area for the DuQuoin State Fair," Giles said, "and he wanted to stop at the nearest library."

"The governor is staying at the Hayes House on the fairgrounds for the duration of the fair which started Saturday morning and will last a week," he said.

As Samantha waited for her father to finish, she mentioned her plans. "I haven't seen much of the fair," Samantha said. "I've been driving a golf cart for dad."

Gus says at least Gov. Thompson found his text intact.

AIDS policy educates University community

By Phil Pearson
Staff Writer

The University's AIDS policy was designed with all students, faculty and staff in mind, Cathy Devera coordinator of the Wellness Center, said.

"The policy is to protect everyone," Devera said, adding that people without AIDS are often more of a threat to AIDS victims than the other way around.

"Someone with the virus is not contagious to a person sitting next to them in class," Devera said.

She said that when a person has the AIDS virus, his or her immune

Proposed parking lot draws criticism

By Jeanne Bickler
Staff Writer

Plans for an additional parking lot on campus will interfere with the physical education department's use of Stehr Field, the department's chairman said.

"No one ever contacted me about the lot in Stehr Field," Ronald Knowlton, chairman of the physical education department, said. "We use the field heavily. It is the best grass surface available to teach PE on."

Construction of two lots is planned and one behind the Student Recreation Center will be open by October, Tim Hildebrand, Undergraduate Student Government president, said.

"There will be two new lots," Hildebrand said. "One is behind the Student Recreation Center, and one is slated to be at Stehr Field (behind the Wham Educational Building)."

Turning Stehr Field into a parking lot is not receiving the welcome reception the Student Recreation Center lot did.

Knowlton also said the field is a memorial to Jean Stehr, a former PE faculty member and women's field hockey coach.

"You wouldn't tear down half of a building on campus to build a parking lot because the buildings have historical importance. So goes Stehr Field," Knowlton said.

Hildebrand said the lot would take only half of Stehr Field, but Knowlton said half of the field would be aseless.

Trudy Hale, Graduate and Professional Student Council president said she doubts the need for the new lots.

"We are going to be putting big money into mass transit," Hale said. "We shouldn't spend money tearing up the field when mass transit is coming."

Hale also questioned if mass transit would be necessary if parking lots are going to continue to be built. "This decision needs more discussion," she said.

"We have not talked it all out with these people," Clarence G. Dougherty, vice president for campus services, said. "Some objections (to the lot) have been cited and they will be taken into consideration."

"What really bothers me is that

Solidarity leader urges halt on strikes to restore order

GDANSK, Poland (UPI) - Solidarity leader Lech Walesa said Sunday he will call a moratorium on strikes in Poland to help the new Solidarity-led government form a plan for restoring order to the economy. Walesa told a group of visiting Norwegians he would announce the moratorium on strikes Monday or Tuesday.

Archbishop asks for end to stonings, arson

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (UPI) - Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu appealed to local youths Sunday to halt a three-week spate of stonings and arson attacks, calling the battle against apartheid "too noble to be undermined by ignoble methods." Just hours later, however, a group of about 20 mixed-race youths who had attended one of Tutu's two Sunday services returned to their own township of Bontheueval and clashed with police on the street.

Spiritual leader asks pope to visit West Beirut

ROME (UPI) - The spiritual leader of the pro-Iranian Hezbollah extremist group in Lebanon has invited Pope John Paul II to visit Moslem West Beirut and offered him "all security guarantees," an Italian newspaper said Sunday.

Professional diplomats sue State Department

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The organization representing the foreign service announced this week it is suing Secretary of State James Baker to force him to disclose the qualifications of political ambassadorial appointees. At issue in the suit brought by the American Foreign Service Association is the so-called "certificates of competence" that tell the Senate how political appointees are qualified for their posts.

Administration vague on funds for war on drugs

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Despite recent stepped up efforts to combat international drug trafficking, the Bush administration remained vague Sunday on how the government would finance its war on drugs both at home and abroad. Questions about the issue come on the heels of a U.S. pledge to commit an additional $65 million to aid the South American nation of Colombia in its fight against the powerful Medellin drug cartel.

Consumer group to seek massive crib recall

WASHINGTON (UPI) - A consumer group planned Monday to demand the recall of millions of baby cribs in America because they have protruding corner posts that can snag a child's clothing, necklace or pacifier cord and cause strangulation. The Danny Foundation, named for a boy who suffered brain damage after his shirt got caught on a crib post, planned to file a petition with the Consumer Product Safety Commission asking for a regulation banning protruding corner posts or knobs and seeking a recall of cribs with such features.

Marchers protest high court civil rights rulings

By Irene Oplio
Staff Writer

About 50 demonstrators marched on campus to protest recent Supreme Court rulings affecting minorities on Saturday morning.

The "Silent March," part of a nationwide protest, assembled at the Student Center at 10 a.m. and walked across campus to the Lesar Law Building, where organization leaders spoke about problems and potential solutions for concerned minorities.

At the demonstration were members of the NAACP Youth Council, high school students, Carbondale residents and others.

The march, organized by the local chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the University's Black Affairs Council, included several short speeches outlining the problem in the courts and other problems facing minorities.

"There is a crisis in the courts, where decisions have been regressive in terms of the hard fault gains in civil rights," according to Nathaniel Felder, President of the Carbondale NAACP.

Six Supreme Court cases this year have served to erode the civil rights gains as outlined by the national organization of NAACP, Felder said.

"The goal of the protests is to try to get Bush to work with Congress to overturn the actions taken by the courts," Felder said.

The case of City of Richmond vs. J.A. Croson Company is a landmark case because it allows for minorities to be excluded from employment contracts, Felder said.

In the case, the courts ruled against a "set-aside" plan that required contractors hired by the city to subcontract at least 30 percent of the dollar value of each contract to one or more minority businesses.

The Supreme Court declared that the set-aside plan violates the 14th Amendment of the Constitution.

"We are being systematically excluded from economic development," Felder said. "Federal money must allow minorities to participate."

"These cases are not just a blow to the minority population, but the female population as well, according to Harriet Wilson Barlow, associate director for student development.

"These cases will allow the right to discriminate against women and blacks," Barlow said.

In Ward's Cove vs. Antonio, the burden of proof shifted from the employer to the victim of the discrimination, Felder said.

NAACP supporters marched Saturday morning to protest recent Supreme Court decisions regarding civil rights. The march, which began at the Student Center and ended at Lesar Law Building, was held for those who were unable to attend a similar march in Washington, D.C.

"The Supreme Court is rethinking and looking at the laws from a different perspective," Seymour Bryson, assistant to the president for affirmative action, said. "The bottom line in these cases is diversity and equality: we can't rely on the court to enforce it. You can't legislate equality or fairness."

affirmative action in higher education is yet to be determined, Bryson said, but this more conservative view does reflect the attitude of some greater parts of our society.

Also at the demonstration were members of the NAACP Youth Council, high school students, Carbondale residents and others.

How these decisions will affect "Education is a liberating force," Madlyn Stalls, developmental skills training specialist from the Center for Basic Skills, said.

Stalls urged the mostly black crowd not to confuse movement with progress and emphasized the need to learn as much as possible and become active in shaping the future.

World's Most Dangerous Band rocks crowd of 2,000 at Du Quoin

Proving worthy of more than the 30 second pre-commercial Letterman snatches, Paul Schaffer and the World's Most Dangerous Band rocked the Du Quoin State Fair Saturday, bringing the crowd of about 2,000 to its feet.

The most apparent aspect of the band was its energy and enthusiasm, which seemed boundless.

Schaffer and the band took the audience on a historical music tour, verifying the fact that Schaffer is a musical connoisseur with his versatile tributes to a variety of regional sounds.

The band brought an unlimited repertoire of songs from many artists and played a variety of sounds, including blues, jazz, rap, ballads and country, making their collaboration with countless performers more than apparent.

Ray Charles, James Brown and Booker T and the MG's were among the artists the band paid tribute to.

Each of the members supplied talent and experience to the band and their exceptional credits are impressive. There is no weak link in this band, as the members have played with the best of the best,

The Faculty/Student BOWLING LEAGUE

Now being formed. Rolling Mondays at 7:00pm. Teams will consist of 5 people (5 men, 5 women, or any combination of 5). League is open to the entire SIU community. For fun, relaxation, as well as the competitive challenge and social environment. For teams and individuals.

Students deserve parking place too

A MEMBER of the SIU-C faculty is honored with "Scholar of the Year" and guess what he received as an award. No, not money, nor was it a plaque: The scholar of the year received a parking space. No not just for a day, week or even a month. This scholar got his own personalized parking space for an entire year. Forget a raise in salary, or perhaps a promotion. Just give'em a parking space.

It is amazing that something as trivial as a parking space is so precious at this University. Those of you who leave for class 45 minutes early in hopes of securing a parking space know what the current value of a private parking space might be.

Currently, two spots are reserved for "Scholar of the Year" and "Teacher of the Year." This was made possible after a resolution was passed at the Parking and Traffic Committee meeting on April 4. The resolution was recommended by Donald Paige, head of the Faculty Senate.

WE DO agree that such awards as "Scholar of the Year" and "Teacher of the Year" are worthy of such inestimable gifts as a private parking space. And we encourage the passage of another resolution pending that will secure two more parking spaces awarded to "Administrative Staff Employee of the Year" and "Civil Service Employee of the Year."

However, isn't someone, somewhere forgetting somebody. Now let's see who's covered: the scholar, teacher, administrative staff and the civil service employee. Who else is there?

Yes, we were thinking perhaps a "Student of the Month" award could be given. Students do make up a rather large part of this University, and we do believe that some of them should be awarded a parking space. Many students have accomplished great things and should be justly recognized. They have just as a hard a time finding parking as faculty and administration. Students could be chosen from each college on the basis of grades or some outstanding achievement.

WE REALIZE that these awards are important, and that the parking space is an excellent reward for achievement. However, students need to be recognized too. There are so many students who excel and should be complimented by something that is more valuable than a plaque or a check for $50. Just think of what it would be like to not have to worry for an entire month about where you are going to park, not to mention a huge sign with your name on it in front of the spot.

So let's be sure when handing out something as priceless as a parking space that students are included. Students need to park too.

State fair boost to area

THE 67TH annual Du Quoin State Fair has expanded this year offering a wider range of events and exhibits.

The once failing, privately owned fair was purchased by the state of Illinois through the efforts of Gov. James R. Thompson four years ago. Since then, the fair has enjoyed a revival and has continued to break previous attendance records.

The fair not only creates a different way to spend the day or night: It gives the area some recognition and draws others to the region.

THE AGRICULTURAL exhibits, AgriLand and AgWorld, have been expanded this year and provide another indication that the fair is successful once again. It is important that there are such exhibits since agriculture is a vital part of the Southern Illinois economy.

The grandstand has events scheduled for every night of the 10-day event. It's important to provide a wide range of events for the area to get a chance to see. USA Ballet performed at the fair Friday afternoon. In Southern Illinois not everyone has been exposed to ballet performances and even more likely, not many people ever aspire to study ballet or even try it.

A trip to the fair could be an enjoyable experience if you have never been, and even if you have, there is always something different waiting.

POLISH JOKE

Commentary

Rose should consider himself lucky

Every time I drive past the park I look at the spot. It's near the field house, exactly 381 feet from home plate. I know, because I paced it off.

Years ago, scouts from the St. Louis Cardinals held an open tryout camp in that park. A buddy and I showed up with our gloves, bats and spikes.

We and dozens of others ran, shagged fly balls, fielded grounders and threw.

Then a game was played, with players being shuttled in and out so the scouts could take a look at all of us.

When I came to bat, the pitcher was a tall, gangly with a high kick and a fast ball.

He threw it down the middle, waist high, and I hit it as hard as I could. It landed at the spot near the field house and I trotted around the bases.

I had one more time at bat and I lined a single to left.

When the camp ended, one of the scouts talked to me. He said I had a good swing, which was true. I had always been able to hit.

But he also said I was slow, which was true, had a weak arm, which was true, had bad hands, which was true, and there was absolutely no chance of me being anything more than a class D minor league player.

In those days, that meant about $20 a week in Piddiepool, Ala.

So my buddy and I got back on the street car and went home. End of dream of being the next Joe Dimaggio.

Which means I have something in common with millions of men, ranging in age from teen-agers to geriatrics. Some of us could hit well, some could run fast, some could throw hard, some could scoop up ground balls.

Some were good enough to play on their high school teams. Others made it into college lineups, and even the minor leagues. There were fine sandlot players and semi-pros.

But of the millions and millions of young guys who played the game at one level or another, only an incredibly small percentage had the talent to get to the majors.

Mike Royko
Tribune Media Services

Since they started keeping records, there have only been about 13,000 who have made it to The Ground, including those who were in and out after only a few swings or pitches.

And of those, only 168 have been good enough to be voted into the Hall of Fame.

This popped into my head when I heard a radio babler use the phrase "American tragedy" while talking about the Pete Rose case. I snorted and jabbed a button for another station.

A tragedy? Here is a man, by all accounts, was a lousy husband, an indifferent father, a poor judge of friends and a liar.

Of course, that doesn't make him any different than a few million other guys.

But what set him apart was that he was born with exceptional hand-eye coordination and athletic ability. That, plus total determination, made it possible for him to play major league baseball for 24 years; to come to bat more than 14,000 times in 3,562 games and get 4,256 hits.

Oh, to have spent 24 years enduring such tragedy. Or would you settle for a month, a week, even a day? You bet you would. It beats sitting at that desk, trying to sell that customer, driving that truck or drilling that tooth.

So now Rose is out, banned from the game because he knew the rules but chose to ignore the rules. Justice at its simplest.

But what difference does it make? He was no longer playing anyway. And the way his team was going, he probably wouldn't have been managing much longer.

What matters is that he had those 24 summers and those 3,562 games. And whatever kind of jerk he may have been in his private life, it was obvious that whenever he stepped out on the field he loved every moment of it. How many people can say that about 24 years in the same job?

It may be that his gambling habit has left him broke. But a lot of people are broke or close to it. He can find work, which is what most people do when they need money.

There's silly jabber about whether he will or won't be in the Baseball Hall of Fame. What's the difference? It's just a plaque on a wall. What counts is that he played the games, got the hits and had the magic moments. That was the reality, not some plaque.

Besides, there are no halls of fame for those who do things that are far more useful than hitting a baseball. The paramedics who give mouth to mouth to strangers; cops that walk into dark gangways; men who spend their life emptying garbage cans. Or even women who put up with husbands like Pete Rose.

It's not a tragedy. It isn't even sad, as the baseball commissioner put it. Tragedy is a kid getting hit by a car. Sad is being old, alone and lonely.

Rose had the life that almost every American boy has dreamed of. He played The Game and was paid and cheered for it.

Now it's time for him to become a grown-up. The game is over.

But he'll have the memories, and that has to help.

I know. As I said, the ball landed exactly 381 feet from home plate. Of course, the wind was blowing out.

New bill requires schools to educate chronically ill kids

By Phil Pearson
Staff Writer

Several area elementary school superintendents said a bill waiting for Gov. James R. Thompson's signature won't have any effect on the way their schools treat children with communicable diseases.

The bill, sponsored by state Rep. John Dunn, D-Decatur, would require public schools to design and maintain a plan insuring an education to students with chronic illnesses, such as AIDS.

Of the elementary districts surveyed in Jackson County, all have a policy for dealing with the problem and have had for more than a year.

"I think we're ahead of the law," Desoto Superintendent Wade Hudgens said.

Hudgens said Desoto has had a policy in place for a year that includes district employees as well as students.

"In all likelihood, (individuals with communicable diseases) would not be excluded (from school)," Hudgens said.

Hudgens said a student or employee would only be excluded after a multi-disciplinary review by physicians, health officials and, in the case of students, teachers and parents to determine placement of the individuals.

"We've had an in-place, standing policy for over a year and a half," Murphysboro Superintendent Michael Muggie said.

Muggie said students would receive a multi-disciplinary staffing that would include the Department of Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga.

The Carbondale district's policy, which was adopted in the spring of 1988, is similar to the policies of the other districts in that it would be administered much like special education programs and guarantee an education for students with chronic illnesses.

Wilmer Nall, superintendent of the Shawnee Elementary School in Grand Tower, and F. Dee Wiley, superintendent of the Mississippi Valley Community School District in Gorham, said they have had AIDS policies in their districts for a couple of years.

All the superintendents agreed the bill on the governor's desk, if signed, will have little or no effect on local policy.

Aug. 13 at the U of I, and Aug. 16 at NIU.

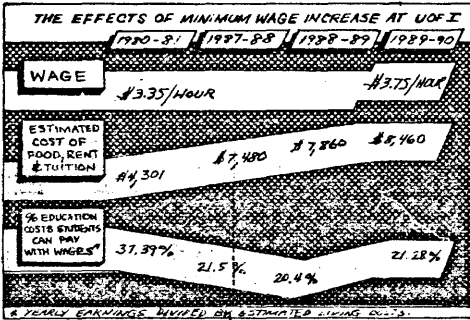

Melody Amundsen, coordinator of student employment at NIU in Dekalb, said every student, including those making more than minimum wage, received a 40 cent raise.

"It wouldn't have been fair not to give those students who had put in their time a raise also," Amundsen said. NIU, which has approximately 3,500 students on hourly wage, has four pay classifications. The average salary is about $3.95 per hour, she said.

Pam Britton, director of financial aid at SIU-C, said discussions have begun in the area of raising minimum wage for the University's approximately 5,884 student workers.

"We have opened discussions in this area and we're working on it," she said.

Charles Hindersman, vice president for financial affairs, said unless more money is put into the student payroll, wage increases would mean lay-offs.

"It's simple arithmetic. More dollars per hour, with the same amount of money, means less workers," he said.

"Bill Bushaw, director of financial aid at WIU, said student layoffs also was one of their concerns.

"Of course we're looking into it and we would like to raise it. But we have to have to be sure there is enough money in each departmental budget. Otherwise you lose jobs."

Amundsen said because of the timing of the increase, when budgets for the fiscal year are already set, NIU may have to raise costs for room and board.

"They have that option," she said. "We hope that it's not necessary."

system is often too weak to overcome infections and viruses that don't effect most individuals.

The only time a student with AIDS would be advised to stay out of class is if his immune system has been dangerously weakened by the virus, Devera said.

The year-old SIU-C Policy Statement on AIDS promises that the University shall not discriminate in enrollment or employment against individuals with AIDS. AIDS related complex or those who have tested positive for the HIV-1 antibody.

The policy also promises confidentiality of medical information of individuals with AIDS. The confidentiality clause extends to cover most situations, except those that may be pursuant to legal matters. The AIDS victim must give written permission for personal information to be released, even to their parents.

Along with testing and other medical responsibilities, the University is responsible for the implementation and maintenance of a comprehensive educational program about AIDS.

The Wellness Center, which Devera called the "focal point in AIDS education," at SIU-C has a number of programs, from grassroots to professional, aimed at AIDS awareness.

Devera said there are a number of health advocates in the residence halls that provide information and guidance to interested students. The center also has graduate students, professional counselors and medical specialists for individuals, in need of advice or medical help, like testing.

The center also operates support groups for AIDS victims.

Educational presentations are made in classes in various departments, Devera said. She added that AIDS education is also included in Alcohol Awareness Week, scheduled for the third week of October. AIDS Awareness Week, the University's main educational push, comes in March 1990.

Devera said anyone can get information about AIDS or the University's policy any time by contacting the Wellness Center or a health advocate in one of the residence halls.

Those interested are also invited to attend the next meeting of the AIDS Task Force, which is scheduled for Aug. 31 from 2 to 4 p.m. in Kesner Hall on Greek Row, she said.

those involved in making the lot are aware that PE uses it, but they never contacted me," Knowlton said. "I never even heard anything about the lot until I read about it in the July 13 Daily Egyptian."

Hildebrand said the lot behind the Student Recreation Center will add 200 new spaces and the Stehr Field lot will add 280 spaces. The Board of Trustees still has to approve the Stehr Field lot.

"Students complain about parking, but you give it to them and there's more complaints. I just don't know what to do," Hildebrand said.

Knowlton said he was chosen through the importance of the park-

Comedy Cellar fall season opens with Berwyn native

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

The Comedy Cellar's fall season opened with a winner as Ed Fiala delivered a hilarious comedy routine to a near-capacity crowd in the Big Muddy Room Friday night.

Fiala, a native of Berwyn, sprinkled his routine with numerous Illinois jokes, impressions and sound effects. Magically, he managed to entertain the audience without using an overabundance of obscenities or offending everybody in the room.

Fiala's routine included observations about Chicago winters, childhood, parents, foreign cars, American cars and koala bears. A lot of Fiala's material tied into his excessive weight, but he never seemed to overdo the point. He complained about his inability to drive a Yugo, to ice-ski behind Volkswagens and for his sister to dance without making the band skip.

Fiala first demonstrated the versatility of his voice by doing an impression of an SIU-C graduate at his first job. He then went on to do William Perry hailing a cab, his parents, his teachers, his two sons and the 7,200 neighborhood kids he used to get into trouble with.

The best part of his act, however, was the sound effects he simulated through the microphone. Fiala did cars, trains, helicopters, dripping water, snow, hair, shootouts, the Indianapolis 500 race, locking doors, people toasting each other with styrofoam champagne cups, snowballs hitting cars, shotguns, heavy metal guitarists and dueling underwater banjoists.

The effects were quite loud at times and occasionally caused feedback through the speakers in the room, but the laughs were well worth the noise. If this is the quality of performer students can expect from the Comedy Cellar this season, probably no one will have a legitimate gripe about the $1 cover charge. Fiala gave a thoroughly enjoyable routine.

Remy Billups, special programs coordinator for the Student Center, joined WTOAO radio personalities in giving away T-shirts in a short trivia contest before the show. The highlight of the contest was a "cluck-off" between two students to see who could give a better Chicken Man call.

University student David Romanelli provided a brief warm-up act for Fiala, joking about grandmas, the Brady Bunch and being famous in Carbondale.

Although rather vocal toward Billups and Romanelli, the audience calmed down during Fiala's act. The room was crowded but never out of hand, and everyone seemed to enjoy the show.

sophomore in journalism, said. "I think this shows that there's plenty of great times available right here at the Student Center within reach of all the students, and really no need to go off campus.

Student Programming Council is doing a great job running this. They really worked overtime this year and came up with some really good ideas, off-the-wall ideas. I think the hard work will show," she said.

Every corner of the Student Center was packed with fun and exciting things to do. For only the small admittance charge of $1.99, the carnival provided an evening of entertainment.

Many of the events, like the Comedy Cellar, oatmeal wrestling, wacky catfish races, glo-bowl and the palm reader were standing room only.

"I think the psychic should start earlier because she has this line that's backed up on the second floor, and I tried to get in line early," Joanna Raskiewicz, senior in physiology, said.

"I want to boldly stick like no man has ever stuck before," Rich Lazik, freshman, premajor, said after throwing himself face first into the velcro wall. The carnival's wall, modeled after the velcro wall seen on the David Letterman Show, didn't hold up as well as Letterman's. The velcro suit was made to be taken on and off fast, and for that reason it wasn't as sturdy as it could have been.

The glo-bowl attracted a wide group of bowlers. With the lights turned down, black lights highlighting the pins and a mist of dry-ice smoke, the lanes were transformed into a flashback from the '60s.

Six-year-old James Nicholas, Carbondale, was bowling for his first time and had a 25 in the sixth frame.

"I spread my legs out, put the ball between my legs and just roll it down. I like this because (the strobe and black lights) make it look like cartoon animation," he said.

"He's wanted to come black light bowling all week. I think he was disappointed that there weren't more black lights because he wanted to see my teeth glow in the dark," George Nicholas, James' father, said.

Another big attraction was the oatmeal wrestling which featured two scantily clad "muffin girls" carrying cards announcing the rounds and two tag teams of oatmeal throwing wrestlers. The crowd showed its enthusiasm by cheering on its favorite girl or guy wrestler.

For some the "muffin girls" were the biggest attraction, but others were less than happy to see something like that at a University function.

Paula Bell, junior in music business, said she felt that having the "muffin girls" were sexist.

24-7 Spyz worked the crowd into a frenzy of slam dancing and stage diving and ended the show with most of the audience sitting on the stage singing with the band.

contributing to the band's sophisticated style.

Judy (Judy, Judy, Judy) Tenuta performed her in her usual brash manner and was anything but the "petite flower" she claimed to be as she opened up for the band.

Tenuta claimed she had come to Du Quoin equipped with her accordion looking for a love slave, which she is in a constant search for. One wonders just how far Tenuta will take her act because she seemingly can get away with anything, including some brazen suggestions for Gov. James R. Thompson.

Tenuta has her own distinct style that is part braggart. Tenuta alleges she could have been in a sorority, but she already had a personality and she was a philosophy major, but she proved that her professor did not exist, leaving the audience to respond with the habitual "ya right" response.

The other side, or sides, of Tenuta belong to an array of people, including Elvis, Diana Ross and Yoko Ono, who, as Tenuta puts it, "wants to possess me."

Tenuta verges on the vulgar and her coarse, crass style might be considered "female locker room humor."

Tenuta also performed her newly-found form of worship "Judyism".

Resignation of Colombian minister is reported

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI)—Cocaine traffickers escalated their war on the nation Sunday with bombings at seven branches of a bank partially owned by the government, and a newspaper report said the justice minister resigned because of threats.

El Espectador newspaper said the rumored resignation of Justice Minister Monica de Greiff had been "fully confirmed" by high political sources, but an aide to de Greiff said the report was "pure speculation."

De Greiff, who is in the United States to discuss U.S. aid to help fight the cocaine cartels, could not be reached for comment. Colombian embassy officials in Washington were also unavailable Sunday.

El Espectador said de Greiff did not intend to return to Colombia because of threats against her and her family and "was to stay for an indefinite time in the United States."

Asked on the CBS News show "Face the Nation" if de Greiff would be allowed to remain in the United States, Attorney General Dick Thornburgh said: "Of course she would be welcome...It would not be surprising if that is the case because of the tragic record of violence and intimidation that has almost effectively neutralized law enforcement in that nation."

A paramilitary group linked to the cocaine cartels, "The Extraditables," declared "total war" on the government, politicians, judges, industry and journalists Thursday after President Virgilio Barco imposed a state of siege, reinstated an extradition treaty with the United States, and began confiscating property believed to belong to the cartels.

Barco's declaration came after a series of assassinations of judges and government officials, including the Aug. 18 killing of leading presidential candidate Sen. Luis Carlos Galan, who was shot by gunmen believed to be working for the drug barons.

De Greiff, 32, told television stations two days before her departure for Washington that she was "not prepared to govern in wartime."

An official at the National Police headquarters of the most powerful cocaine cartel, said seven bombs exploded Saturday night and Sunday morning in branches of the Banco Cafetero. No one was wounded, but damage was estimated at $165,000, police said.

Four more bombs—one with 100 pounds of dynamite—were deactivated by police at other bank branches, the police spokesman said. The bank is owned by the government and the Coffee Merchants Federation, the financially important group of coffee growers and exporters.

"The Extraditables," the death squads linked by authorities to the cocaine cartels, claimed responsibility in telephone calls to the bank, the police spokesman said.

Holocaust survivors meet

Nazis' victims are commemorated

JERUSALEM (UPI)—Concentration camp survivors buried bags of ashes from Birkenau Sunday in memory of Holocaust victims and urged others to remember Nazi atrocities, especially those carried out by "Angel of Death" Dr. Josef Mengele of Auschwitz.

"I have testified once before, but I feel I have to testify once again because I have to get it out of my system," said Vera Kriegel, who attended the Second World Conference of Auschwitz-Twins at the Yad Vashem Holocaust Memorial.

"This is very important because half the world is saying that there was no Auschwitz, no Zyklon B (gas), nothing," Kriegel said. "We have to go on and go on and go on. Even if we have to testify each and every day, we have to do it. This is our holy obligation."

Kriegel, who now lives in Israel, and her twin sister, Olga, were 5 when they reached Birkenau with their mother and father. Kriegel's father was killed, but Mengele kept the two girls and their mother from the gas chambers.

Mengele, who carried out brutal experiments on twins, dwarfs and others at Auschwitz and Birkenau, kept the three alive because he wanted to find out why the children's eyes were brown while their mother's were blue, according to Martin Gilbert's "The Holocaust." Kriegel's story is one of hundreds recounted in Gilbert's comprehensive account of the Holocaust.

Mengele earned the moniker "Angel of Death" as the official who decided which prisoners at the Nazis' Auschwitz concentration camp in Poland were sent to the gas chamber and which he would use in his experiments. He was responsible for the deaths of 400,000 Jews at Auschwitz. He fled to South America after the war and died of drowning in 1979.

At Sunday's opening ceremony for the three-day World Conference of Auschwitz-Twins, five Christians were given the honorary title of "righteous gentile" for saving the lives of Jews during the Holocaust.

The Nazis killed 6 million Jews as well as hundreds of thousands of Gypsies, political opponents and others the Nazis deemed undesirable or dangerous. Among those honored for their help Sunday were a Lithuanian couple who sheltered two Jewish children in an attic and a Dutch officer who provided Jews with forged documents. Officials said 8,000 people have received the honorary title, with about 6,000 of them from Poland and Holland.

The conference also included a ceremony in which bags of ashes from Birkenau, adjacent to Auschwitz, were lowered into an underground burial chamber for a symbolic burial place for those killed. Members of Israel's Parliament, "Mengele twins" and relatives visited Auschwitz and Birkenau last week.

Japanese leader and Bush to discuss trade

TOKYO (UPI)—Barely two weeks in office, Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu will be in no position to offer concessions when he meets with President Bush at the White House on Friday.

Bush has taken a hard line on trade, and Japan has taken a beating in U.S. public opinion polls due to growing resentment of Tokyo's unbridled economic advance. Americans now see Japan's economic power as a greater threat to their future than the Soviet military challenge, according to several surveys.

Kaifu's visit, which begins Wednesday with a five-day trip to San Francisco, Washington and Boston followed by visits to Mexico and Canada, comes at a time of need for a strong and stable Japanese leadership.

The last two prime ministers left office in the midst of scandals that have put Kaifu's ruling party in jeopardy of losing the next general election. A defeat could force the governing Liberal Democrats into a coalition with other parties, or out of power altogether.

Kaifu's new government was hit by its first scandal last week when his chief spokesman, a key Cabinet minister, was forced to resign after admitting he had an extramarital affair with a 21-year-old bar hostess.

Unfortunately for the Americans, Tokyo's political turmoil coincides with a new way of thinking in Washington that is changing the basis for trade talks.

The Bush administration has taken to heart the thesis of many American scholars arguing that Japan's economic system simply does not respond to the free market principles that guide Western nations.

Israel deports Palestinians to Lebanon, France

Five men charged with directing uprising; expulsion seen as deterrent to violence

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israel deported four Palestinians to Lebanon and a fifth Arab to France Sunday, charging that the men directed the 20-month-old Palestinian uprising against Israeli occupation and were active in the PLO.

Chief of Staff Dan Shomron told Army Radio the government viewed expulsions as a deterrent to Palestinians attempting to escalate violence in the Israeli-occupied territories.

"Even though in the short run things may heat up a little in the field, in my opinion it (the deportation policy) is very effective," Shomron said.

Although the United States and other nations frequently have criticized Israel's policy of deportations, Shomron said the practice would continue. Since the start of the uprising, 57 Palestinians from the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip have been deported.

The five West Bank Palestinians expelled Sunday received their deportation orders Aug. 17, 1988 and had exhausted all legal avenues within the Israeli justice system, an army spokesman said. Four of the men arrived in southern Lebanon by helicopter just before 4 p.m. while the fifth boarded an Air France plane bound for Paris about 90 minutes later, military sources said.

With his deportation to France, physicist Taysir Aruri of El Bireh became the first Palestinian from the territories to be deported to a country besides Lebanon.

Aruri argued his life would be endangered in Lebanon because of fighting in the war-torn country. "In the Geneva Conventions, the country who wants to deport must report that person to a safe place, and you know the situation in Lebanon," Aruri's wife, Amal, said.

Authorities accused Aruri, 43, a lecturer at Bir Zeit University and member of the Palestinian Communist Party, of subversion and incitement. Before his arrest Aug. 8, 1988, he was held under administrative detention from 1974 to 1978.

In Paris, the French Foreign Ministry announced it had offered political asylum to Aruri and also denounced the Israeli policy of deporting Palestinians.

Lebanese sources said the other four Palestinians were flown by three Israeli helicopters to the edge of the Israeli security zone at Zemraya Gateway and were driven out of the buffer enclave in a Lebanese taxi. From a Lebanese checkpoint, they were taken to a

Israeli planes raid Hezbollah base

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israeli warplanes bombed the headquarters of the pro-Iranian Hezbollah movement in southern Lebanon Sunday in the first such attack since Israeli commandos abducted the organization's leader.

In Beirut, Hezbollah said the planes hit "civilian targets" and wounded at least two people. Lebanese security sources in southern Lebanon said two people were killed and 10 others wounded in the raid, the ninth by Israel into Lebanon this year.

In the previous air attacks, 28 people have been killed and 96 others wounded, according to Lebanese sources.

The raid, the first since Israel abducted Lebanese Hezbollah leader Sheikh Abdul Karim Obeid, comes nearly three weeks after a Shiite Moslem clergyman carried out a suicide car-bomb attack against an Israeli military convoy in Israel's self-declared "security zone" in southern Lebanon.

Hezbollah officials said the Aug. 9 suicide attack, in which five Israeli soldiers and a member of the South Lebanon Army were wounded, was in retaliation for Obeid's abduction. Although the army declined comment on the reason for Sunday's raid, it was believed to be in retaliation for the car-bomb attack.

"Israel air force planes this evening attacked a terrorist target in the region of Ein Abusawar in Lebanon's eastern sector," an army spokesman said. "(The target) served as the headquarters of Hezbollah north of the security zone."

The spokesman said all Israeli planes returned safely.

Israeli commandos kidnapped Obeid in an effort to gain the release of Israeli soldiers believed held by Hezbollah.

Israel ended an unofficial six-month moratorium on expulsions in June when it deported eight Arabs accused of leading the uprising and being PLO members. The six-month lapse coincided with Israel's attempts to formulate a peace plan and efforts to win worldwide support for its initiative.

When the Palestinians were deported in June, Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said if tension and violence decrease in the territories, those Arabs might be allowed to return within three years. They also must forswear anti-Israel activity, Rabin said.

In a statement released Saturday, a group of Israeli academicians and political activists condemned the deportation orders as "only further undermining the possibility of dialogue with an authentic leadership of the Palestinian people."

Also Saturday, Egyptian Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Boutros Ghali delivered a protest to Israeli Ambassador Shimon Shamir over the deportation orders and demanding a prompt end to expulsions. Egypt is the only Arab nation to have made peace with Israel.

Israeli planes also bombed headquarters of the pro-Iranian Hezbollah movement Sunday north of Israel's self-declared "security zone" in southern Lebanon. In Beirut, a Hezbollah statement said the planes hit "civilian targets" and wounded at least two, while Lebanese security sources said two people were killed and 10 others wounded.

Israel said three of those deported to Lebanon were active in the Democratic Front while the fourth was accused of membership in Yasser Arafat's Fatah wing of the PLO.

Weekend gang shootings leave 3 dead, 5 injured

Car-to-car shootout between gangs involves sheriff's deputies in next auto

LOS ANGELES (UPI) - Three people died and five others were wounded in weekend gang violence, including a gang member gunned down in the parking lot of a restaurant where he had just been turned away from a birthday party, authorities said Sunday.

The dead also included a 17-year-old boy killed in a car-to-car shootout between rivals that also embroiled two unwitting sheriff's deputies.

The latest shooting left a gang member dead in the parking lot of the Proud Bird restaurant near Los Angeles International Airport, about 9:20 p.m. Saturday, detective Bill Humphry said.

Vicente Gamez, 23, and his cousin, Noe Macias, 21, had gone to the restaurant to attend a friend's 15th birthday party. But Gamez and Macias, who had not been invited, were turned away because they were not wearing ties, Humphry said. The pair were walking back to their car when another vehicle drove up. Two men got out of the car and both fired several shots at Macias and Gamez, he said.

Gamez, of Inglewood, was hit several times in the upper torso and died at the scene.

Macias, of Culver City, suffered bers, although they belonged to different gangs, he said.

The shootout witnessed by deputies in the unincorporated county area near Compton began as the deputies pulled up in their patrol car next to two carloads of gang members stopped at a traffic light about 8:25 p.m. Friday, Deputy Roger Hom said.

The deputies were waiting for the light to change. A brown Chevrolet containing three teenagers and a beige Chevrolet began shooting at each other," Hom said.

The deputies drew a shotgun and .9mm pistol and ordered the gang members to drop their weapons, he said.

"One of the suspects failed to comply and pointed a handgun at the deputies," he said.

Both deputies fired as the two cars sped away. But one car crashed into the wall of a motel a short distance away, Hom said.

Ricky Holden, 17, of Compton, was in the car and was wounded in the chest. He died a short time later at a hospital. A coroner's autopsy will determine whether he killed by rival bullets or shots fired by deputies, Hom said.

Arrested at the crash scene was Mike Thomas, 28, of Compton, who was held without bail at the Lynwood sheriff's station, Hom said.

Deputies nabbed the three teenagers in the other car at Martin Luther King Jr.-Drew Medical Center, where two 16-year-olds were treated for wounds. A 15-year-old boy escaped injury.

All four suspects were booked on suspicion of murder, attempted murder and assault with a deadly weapon on a police officer, Hom said. A pistol was found in the wrecked car.

In East Los Angeles, a man investigators said was a former gang member was shot and killed early Saturday. Humberto Gonzalez, 35, died at the County-USC Medical Center.

Chadjo Street, 17, was shot in the head as he sat on a wall in front of a West Los Angeles house Friday night, Lt. John Desmond said.

He was in critical condition and in life-support systems at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center. "Street is a known and admitted gang member," Desmond said.

In South Central Los Angeles, a man was shot in the knee from a passing car when he denied he was a street gang member, Sgt. Ted Amstone said.

"The motive for the shooting is gang rivalry," Humphry said. Both victims were admitted gang mem-

Bakker trial to focus on greed

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) - Prosecutors in the criminal trial of PTL founder Jim Bakker begin Monday painting a portrait of an evangelist who fleeced the faithful and squandered the money on personal extravaganzas.

Like the film classic "Portrait of Dorian Gray," in which the protagonist never aged while his portrait grew uglier by the day, prosecutors will attempt to show Bakker as an evil man whose gluttony is masked by a handsome face and personal charm.

Bakker, 49, is charged with 24 counts of fraud and conspiracy stemming from the way he raised and spent money at PTL. He insists he is innocent and his actions at PTL were for the glory of God.

In an effort to strip away the mask of innocence, prosecutors have subpoenaed FBI agents, bankers, car dealers, security guards and three plastic surgeons who were paid with PTL money to make him look good on camera.

Opening arguments in the trial are scheduled for 9:30 a.m. EDT at the U.S. District Court in Charlotte. Hundreds of reporters and Bakker followers are expected to compete for space in the 72-seat courtroom.

Bakker was upbeat last week during jury selection, but whether he will remain upbeat as federal prosecutors whittle away at him remains to be seen. He is sensitive to criticism and has suffered at least one nervous breakdown.

"Jim's nerves finally got so bad he couldn't take a shower because the water felt like pins pricking him. Then it happened. Jim had a nervous breakdown," wife Tammy Faye recalls in her book, "I Gotta Be Me."

Bakker was working for Pat Robertson at CBN when he suffered emotional turmoil.

"He lay in bed for a month in the back bedroom with his Bible in his hand, begging God not to let him lose his mind totally," Tammy Faye said. "I could hear him cry, 'Please, God, don't let me lose my mind.'"

"Jim could not go out of the house. He could not eat," Tammy Faye said. "He could hardly stand to have anyone come into our house because he couldn't stand to have them walk on the floor."

Ice geysers found on Triton

Voyager 2 pictures indicate structures explode in 19-mile-high spouts of gas

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) - Voyager 2 pictures indicate Neptune's strange moon Triton may be dotted with active volcanoes, bizarre ice geysers fed by deep pools of liquid nitrogen that may "explode" in 19-mile-high plumes of ice and gas, scientists said Sunday.

"This is a crazy idea; it's probably wrong," said geologist Laurence Soderblom. "But it's the best we have at the current time."

Researchers also released a spectacular photograph showing Neptune's gossamer rings stretching all the way around the planet and a tape recording of the machine-gun-like bursus created by Voyager 2's passage through a "halo" of microscopic dust particles surrounding the eighth planet from the sun.

Other data revealed Sunday showed Neptune's magnetic field is tipped a whopping 53 degrees from the planet's rotation axis, raising the possibility of flickering auroral displays over the globe's equator - not its poles.

"It's getting more interesting all the time," said project scientist Edward Stone. But the news that electrified a packed news conference was word that Neptune's moon Triton may have active or seasonal volcanoes that periodically spew plumes of nitrogen ice crystals into the dark sky.

"The idea that has been suggested is we see deposits on the surface of the icy polar cap," Stone said. "One way to think of them is that they're material that's been ejected out of a vent, which is then blown by a wind (that) deposits a long plume-like feature on the surface."

"We see literally dozens of these wind-blown structures. The suggestion is these are reasonably recent, small volcanic eruptions."

Soderblom said umbrella-shaped plumes of ice magma blown skyward by Triton's presumed volcanoes could reach altitudes of up to 19 miles or more before falling back to the moon's frozen surface.

Voyager 2 raced past Triton Friday, passing within 24,000 miles of the frozen moon five hours after a high-speed flyby of Neptune, the spacecraft's fourth and final planetary encounter since launch in 1977.

The highest-quality pictures of Triton were stored on Voyager 2's eight-track digital tape recorder and beamed back to Earth Saturday and scientists were delighted to discover a strange patchwork of topography types ranging from relatively young surfaces to older, cratered terrain and strange "caterpillar-like" terrain.

Data revealed showed Neptune's magnetic field is tipped 50 degrees from the planet's rotation axis, raising the possibility of auroral displays over the globe's equator - not its poles.

In several images of this terrain, dark, teardrop-shaped streaks are visible on the surface that appear to stretch away from what look like volcanic vents.

The streaks, Soderblom said, could be nitrogen ice deposits on the surface that result when the ejected ice cloud is blown down-stream by 225-mph winds in Triton's nitrogen atmosphere.

"I believe these things are occurring now," he said. "You need to go down 20 or 30 meters (66 feet to 98 feet) on Triton and you get to a pressure in which liquid nitrogen is stable. It's not unlikely you'll find liquid nitrogen down there."

He said if the liquid nitrogen rises, the pressure on it will decrease and "it's got to explode, and it will explode in a shower of ice particles and gas."

"The model is it's a shower of material coming out of a vent, forming a mushroom shaped, or umbrella-shaped sheet of material that's raining back down on the surface," Soderblom said.

He said the ice can reach altitudes of six miles or so with ejection velocities of up to nearly 200 miles an hour. The ground deposits measure up to 165 miles across and 250 miles long.

"The only reason we think they may be young is they appear to be deposited on what appears to be a retreating ice sheet, and presumably that ice sheet disappears seasonally," Soderblom said. "And we're talking about 100-year time scales."

"Whether or not they're active today one can't say, whether or not they're intermittently active, one can't say. It depends on the nitrogen supply. The suggestion is they're active in modern time."

He stressed that the volcano interpretation was strictly preliminary and subject to change.

In other research, Donald Gurnett of the University of Iowa said Voyager 2 data recorded during the probe's flyby of Neptune showed the planet was surrounded by a halo of microscopic dust particles the size of the material making up smoke.

Gurnett played a recording of the impacts and said that by studying their frequency, it was determined "there's sort of a halo region of dust particles over a very broad region ... and then there's a very intense disk, a very dense concentration, of particles" in the plane of Neptune's rings.

"It is generally believed they come from meteorite impacts on the moons or a ring particle."

Revenge, gunman targeted

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) - A notorious prison gang reportedly will issue, or already has issued, a "death sentence" for the accused murderer of black revolutionary Huey P. Newton, a newspaper reported Sunday.

Thousands of mourners, meanwhile, filed past the open casket of the Black Panther co-founder on Sunday, and overflow crowds were expected to attend his funeral on Monday.

The San Jose Mercury News, citing "informed sources," said Tyrone Robinson, 25, accused of gunning down Newton on an Oakland street in the predawn hours of Aug. 22, faces retaliation from the Black Guerrilla Family gang.

Robinson told investigators he was a member of the BGF, a prison gang that grew from the Black Panthers, and that he shot Newton three times: with a 9 mm pistol because Newton tried to rob him of crack cocaine and money.

The sources said Robinson would face retaliation regardless of whether he was a member of the gang.

As a member of BGF, Robinson violated one of the organization's most sacred rules: that members remain "invisible," especially in dealings with law enforcement agencies.

Orioles' Hendricks recalls fond memories of Baltimore

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ellie Hendricks has worn the Baltimore Orioles uniform more often than anyone else in their clubhouse today. More than manager Frank Robinson, more than fellow coach Cal Ripken Sr.

"Rip still is the senior," Hendricks said. "We still call him 'Senior' because he's been in the organization 31 years."

Hendricks came a bit later. He began wearing Baltimore's colors in 1968 and, with an exception here and there, has done it ever since. When you count spring training and winter instruction, it comes to about 4,000 times.

That's a lot of laundry and, for Hendricks, a lot of pride. His love for his job and his pursuit of a dream may make him more qualified than anyone else to savor the 1989 Orioles. They have gone from laughingstock to contender in one season.

"There's no one in the world who picked us to do what we've done," he said. "Not where we are, but how many games we've won."

Hendricks, 48, was born and raised in St. Thomas, Virgin Islands. He came to the United States as a Milwaukee Braves prospect, and was released. St. Louis got him and let him go. Hendricks played in Mexico and eventually was signed by the Orioles.

He averaged just .220 in his major-league career, but he did appear in five playoffs and four World Series. He knew days when the Orioles bullied the AL East. He also saw the club in decline, including last year's record for worst major-league start.

"It hurt," he said. "I take great pride in this organization."

Hendricks calls the '69 club the best Oriole club he ever saw, even though the Mets won the World Series that year. Now in his 13th season as Baltimore bullpen coach, he avoids comparing this club to the others. After all, as he points out, it's still just August.

He does, however, try to explain how a released player can help so much. He stressed the value of a second chance.

"It's like getting a new suit or a pair of shoes," he said. "You don't want anything to happen."

Not much happened to Baltimore's new suit over the weekend. With four players who have been released at one time or another, the Orioles took four of five from the Yankees, including Sunday's 8-5 decision.

The Yankees did nothing right, unless you count the 5,000 pounds of food their wives collected for charity. Three times during the game, the fans chanted, "George Must Go." They were referring to Steinbrenner, not Bush.

Meanwhile, released players such as Tim Lincecum, Jamie Quirk, Kevin Hickey and Dave Johnson all played during Baltimore's weekend excursion.

So did people named Stanley Jefferson, Bob Melvin, Mike Devereaux, and Rene Gonzales.

Not one has ever been accused of being a superstar, but all are trying to prove they can play.

Former Benton High School star and Chicago Bulls coach Doug Collins speaks at the Rend Lake Country Club Saturday night. Collins was in Southern Illinois for a fund-raising event to benefit the Saluki basketball program.

Collins could not resist a few good-natured jabs at his former coach. Once he referred back to his high school playing days when he would run to stay in shape. "Coach Herrin used to follow me in his car. He would bump me with his car and tell me I didn't want it bad enough," Collins joked.

The entire basketball staff was present, along with most of the Saluki basketball team. Collins praised the work done by the staff and players.

"Coach Herrin wants to win and he wants to do it with quality people," Collins said of assistant coaches Ron Smith and Sam Weaver, and part-time assistant Rodney Watson. "He has really worked hard to develop a quality program."

Collins referred to the new recruits as "diamonds in the rough." "The recruiting class you have is terrific. These guys are great people and quality players."

Reflecting on his recent firing by the Chicago Bulls, Collins seems to have made the most of it. Collins said the last two years have been tough, but now there is a lot less pressure on him.

"Coaching kept me away from my family more than I would have liked," Collins said. "For once, I can put my family first. Now I can schedule my work around my family's activities instead of the other way around."

Collins has this advice for someone going through rough times like he did. "The best thing to do is take it, learn from it, and move on. Don't burn your bridges. When something closes, something else always opens up," he said.

"There is a certain price you pay for success. Regardless of what you choose to do, it's great to have support behind you. I have always had this behind me," Collins said, crediting his family and friends.

Collins has joined Turner Communications and will be broadcasting for WTBS for the next year or so. His coverage will mainly consist of NBA games and the Goodwill games. He will cover approximately 40 to 50 events.

"I look forward to broadcasting," Collins said, without ruling out the possibility of coaching in the future. "I've been involved in basketball since 1973, I would like to stay with that profession."

"I will not be coaching for at least the next year, maybe in the future. I'll just have to wait a while and see," Collins said. "I never close the doors behind me. I like to keep all my options open."

Herrin also spoke at the fund-raising event. "I think we have the best show in town. We're looking forward to an outstanding season."

Massive rains block European football match

HAMBURG, West Germany (UPI) — Heavy overnight rain washed out Sunday's final of the European Championship of American Football.

Organizers said that the championship game between Britain and Finland could not be played due to standing water on the field at Hamburg's Wilhelm-Koch stadium.

"We are desperately trying to find another stadium, where we can play the game Monday morning," said organizer Axel Gernert. "But there is no chance of playing (Sunday)."

10-year-old discovers technique to catching giant trout by accident

By Tom Stienstra
San Francisco Examiner

A secret way to catch giant trout has been discovered by complete accident.

It happened at Big Lake in Shasta County (130 miles north of Sacramento) on a hot, clear summer day, just the kind of day when big fish aren't supposed to bite. Guy Carl, 10, tried to cast out a 5-inch bass lure while on a trout fishing trip with his father, George, but ended up with a massive tangle of a mess on his fishing reel.

Guy, all of 4-1/2-feet tall, didn't ask for help from dad to unsnarl the backlash. For several minutes he worked on the tangle, but meanwhile, the lure was just floating about, occasionally twirling a bit.

"For some reason I looked up and right then I saw one of the biggest fish I've ever seen attack my lure," Guy said. "He got hooked, then jumped way out of the water, and the battle was on!"

Guy eventually led the fish to the boat, his father netted it, then lifted it high — a 22-inch, 3-pound brown trout, hooked completely by accident. They looked at the fish as if it were a crystal ball, telling their future fortunes.

That day was back in 1981, and in the years since this episode, Guy and George Carl have taken it a step farther, developing a new system of utilizing bass fishing techniques to catch giant brown trout and rainbow trout.

In the past eight years, making four weekend trips per year, the father-son team has caught 150 trout weighing 3 to 10 pounds. In one day this summer, they caught six trout weighing more than 6 pounds, including three weighing 9, 9-1/2 and 10-1/2 pounds. In addition, a pal, Frank Rowley, landed a 12-pounder the same day.

"We call it bassin' for browns," said George Carl, 47, of Napa, just north of San Francisco. "The fun part is that we're using typical bass gear and a variety of top-water plugs and deep-water jigs. We don't troll. We don't use bait. But we catch big trout."

"We may make 1,000 casts a day and just catch one or two trout. But we don't fool around by trying to catch the little Fish and Game planters. Instead we use lures that emulate them. That's what the big trout eat. You examine their stomachs and that's what you find."

If the water is calm, they choose surface lures, and if it is windy, they instead tie on deep-water jigs.

Their favorite lures are the 5-inch Rebel minnow, No. 13 Rapala, Heddon Lucky 13 (that Carl paints white), quarter-ounce Hair Raiser jig, quarter-ounce Scrounger jig, and an eight-ounce crappie jig.

"The size and color depends on the kind of minnows and feed you find at the lake," said George Carl.

The techniques are not as specialized as some anglers might first believe. Just pretend you are fishing for bass, advises Carl. That means popping your surface lures, and with the jigs, hesitating your retrieve, sometimes bouncing them off the bottom. In addition, the Carls almost never fish deep water but prefer shorelines and gentle dropoffs.

FBI halts investigation into Rose's gambling link

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The FBI has ended its investigation of former Reds' Manager Pete Rose and does not intend to file any charges relating to gambling or drugs.

Edwin Boldt, spokesman for the agency's Cincinnati office, said at a news conference Saturday. "The FBI simply isn't investigating Pete. I'm happy to say that on the record."

The Cleveland Plain Dealer said, however, Rose is still being investi-

The FBI has officially stopped investigating Pete Rose and does not plan to file any charges relating to drugs or gambling.

gated by a federal grand jury on income tax allegations.

Friday, a prosecution witness at the trial of Tommy Gioiosa said Rose owned most of a $47,000 race track ticket Gioiosa had claimed as his own. Gioiosa, a former house guest of Rose, is on trial on drug trafficking and tax-evasion charges.

Boldt said the FBI had collected evidence Rose had bet with bookmakers and had associated with members of a cocaine trafficking organization, but that the agency would not take action on the information.

"The FBI simply does not go after bettors, not individual bettors," he said. "If there was something at the next level, like large-scale bookmaking or organized crime, the answer would be different."

He said the investigation of Rose began in the spring of 1988, when a multi-agency task force infiltrated a cocaine trafficking gang headed by Donald Stenger.

Several members of Stenger's gang, most of whom have been sentenced to prison, were friends and associates of Rose.

Stenger and Paul Janszen, who also was a member of the gang, pleaded guilty to racketeering and became federal witnesses, with both supplying information against Rose to Major League Baseball.

The Plain Dealer said unidentified federal officials dismissed as "sheer fantasy" a report Friday by a Chicago radio station that Rose would be indicted this week.

Respect for Rose replaced by pity

By Bill Parrillo
Providence Journal

The Hall of Fame ballot will arrive in the mail and his name will be on it.

Pete Rose. Not so long ago, the next moves would have been very easy. Just check the box next to his name, sign the ballot and mail it back to the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Now, of course, we know differently. We know that it can be another way. It's very possible Pete Rose will not be voted into the baseball's Hall of Fame in 1992, his first year of eligibility. If he does, it's almost certain he will be. In fact, he might not ever get in. There is the chance of that, too. For Pete Rose, the Hall is no longer a lock.

"I did my part to get in the Hall of Fame," Rose said at his press conference Thursday. "It's up to you people who do the voting. I got all the hits and scored all the runs. I can't worry about something that's not in my control."

Even now, Pete Rose can't see. Even now he can't see that he owes the game more than his base hits and his head-first slides. He could have controlled things. Should have controlled them.

For anyone holding a vote ... as I do ... that's the surprise here.

How could it come to this? If you have watched him any length of time, if you have been around him to see what baseball means to him, this is the unthinkable happening.

Pete Rose out of baseball? Pete Rose not in the Hall of Fame?

Think about it. If someone had asked me to create a model baseball player, I might have simply pointed to Pete Rose. He was the quintessential player.

He loved the game. He reveled in the joy of it, the competition of it. He seemed so true to the game. I'll never forget that Sunday afternoon in Chicago when we were following him around the National League in his pursuit of Ty Cobb's hit record. Rose needed only two more hits to tie and there was a Sunday game in Chicago to be followed by a long homestand back in Cincinnati.

The script was set: Rose would pass on the Chicago game, go back to Cincinnati and set the record before his legion of home admirers. Except there was a late pitching change in Chicago, player-manager Rose put himself back into the lineup and, in a rain-delayed game, banged out two hits to tie Cobb's record.

What's more, he had two more at-bats to break the record. Wrigley Field was only half-filled but Rose tried. Forget all the glory that was waiting back in Cincinnati. His team was in a pennant race and there was a chance to win a game.

He grounded out sharply to shortstop and then, in the ninth inning, struck out against Lee Smith.

"I'm trying to win a pennant here," Rose said later to those who couldn't understand how he could put history on the line in a damp, half-empty ballpark.

You had to admire that. He played the game hard, every inning of every game. He played with a certain abandon, a certain arrogance and there was never any middle ground. You either liked him or you didn't. But there was always respect.

Now the respect is gone. It's replaced by pity. And sadness.

How could a guy be so selfish, so stupid, so arrogant to betray so many people. To betray the game that defined him. Even now, even as commissioner Bart Giamatti tells us that Rose has been suspended for life for betting on games involving the Cincinnati Reds, Rose steadfastly denies it.

He will go along with the suspension, sure, but he insists he hasn't bet on baseball. Forget the mountain of evidence to the contrary. The arrogance remains. That will not help Pete Rose.

And down the road remains the Hall of Fame. The voting. I have been asked what I would do now. How I would vote.

There is no easy answer right now. That's not a cop-out. The best answer is that I'm glad we still have three years.

Of this I'm sure: Rose deserves to be suspended. In fact, I don't think he should be allowed to manage a team again. A manager can influence a game even more than any single player and Rose would always be under suspicion.

As for the Hall of Fame, I suppose I should separate on-the-field from off-the-field, even if there are words such as character and integrity somewhere in the rules. There's no ignoring the numbers — the 4,256 hits, the 1,972 winning games. The way he played the game.

And it's not as if we're voting for sainthood here. This is not the Vatican. This is the baseball Hall of Fame, which already has a few louts and womanizers and bigots among its membership. Not that I think the Hall needs a gambler to round things out.

I could go with a qualified "Yes" vote at this point, except that I also think something else. I think this story is far from over. I think there will be more to tell. More to find out.

If we find that Pete Rose has, indeed, bet against his team, then the "No" vote is easy. If he bet on games as a player, again I would vote "No."

Smith, Hart ask students for support

By Tracy Sargeant
Staff Writer

Student support. Those two little words are going to mean a lot for the Saluki football team and head coach Bob Smith.

"We need the students to come out and be obnoxious, loud and behind the Salukis. We need the student body to support us. Particularly early in the season to get us off on the right foot," Smith said.

A very enthusiastic crowd turned out for the football pep rally Friday at the Carnival of Crazyness. Both Athletic Director Jim Hart and Smith rallied the crowd, helped by an opening cheer of "do it like a big dog" from the Saluki Cheerleaders. Smith and Hart were on hand to rally support for the upcoming home opener next month against Western Illinois.

"It's neat to see so many students here this evening and we'll need them all year. I think the potential for the student support is fantastic here at Southern Illinois. And that's what we're here appealing to," Smith said.

"The excitement and enthusiasm of the people I've seen so far this year far exceeds last year's," Hart said. "It's a difference between night and day in the excitement involved. Just seeing the people that have come around tonight with no game to promote; yet we're still two weeks away from that first home game."

When asked how student support compares to Southeast Missouri State, Smith said that because Southern is a larger school, that there are more opportunities here than at SEMO.

"They like to have a good time and there's nothing better than a fall football game, a tailgate party and all that goes along with it," Smith said.

Hart said that the ticket sales are coming along well, but, as he pointed out, the student side is far from being sold out. "The side I've been concerned most about has been the student side. And in recent years it's been difficult to fill that area. But I'm so excited about the enthusiasm of the students so far that I don't think that's going to be a problem. I think there are going to be some students that are going to have to stand at the games," said Hart.

A huge cake, shaped like—of all things—a football field with chocolate sidelines, miniature goal posts, green AstroTurf, and of course a stadium packed full of excited jellybeans, was divided up and served. Home game tickets also were hidden inside the cake.

Coach Smith commented that promotions like this helped to get the fans excited, but that he was ready to get down and dirty with the thing he knows the best—coaching a winning football team. "We just want to make sure that the students know how much we sincerely need their support."

Dawson's clutch hit in 10th lifts Cubs to win over Braves

Chicago still in first place in NL East

CHICAGO (UPI) — Andre Dawson hit a two-out RBI single in the 10th inning to lift the Chicago Cubs to a 3-2 victory Sunday over the Atlanta Braves.

Shawon Dunston opened the 10th by walking off loser Mark Eichhorn, 4-5. Ryne Dunston moved to second when Ryne Sarzberg bounced out to the pitcher. Rick Sutcliffe, pinch hitting for Mitch Williams, bounced to first and Dunston took third. Mark Grace received an intentional walk and Dawson followed with a sharp single to center to make a winner of Williams, 4-2.

The first-place Cubs took two of three games from Atlanta after compiling a six-game losing streak that severely cut into their lead in the National League East.

Chicago tied the score 2-2 in the ninth. Lloyd McClendon led off with a walk against Joe Boever and Domingo Ramos sacrificed him to second. Vance Law bounced out to third, but Darrin Jackson punched a soft single to left, scoring McClendon from second.

Atlanta scored twice in the seventh to take a 2-1 lead. Jeff Treadway led off with a single and was sacrificed to second by Marty Clary. Oddibe McDowell hit an RBI triple into the right-field corner to knock out Steve Wilson. Les Lancaster relieved and was greeted with an RBI single by Jeff Blauser.

Grace opened the Chicago fourth with a double and scored on Dawson's sharp single up the middle.

The Cubs had runners on first and second with one out in the second inning, but Ramos flied out a In the third inning, Dunston got a one-out double, but was stranded when Sandberg flied out and Mitch Webber bounced out.

Cards lose to Houston, Forsch earns the win

HOUSTON (UPI) — Bob Forsch scattered four hits over six innings and Ken Caminiti drove in three runs Sunday helping the Houston Astros snap a five-game losing streak with a 6-3 triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Former Chicago Bulls head coach Doug Collins was guest speaker at the SIU-C basketball fund-raising event held Saturday evening at the Rend Lake Country Club.

Collins began his basketball career at Benton high school when Saluki basketball head coach Rich Herrin still coached at Benton. After graduating from high school in 1969 with all-state honors, Collins went on to star at Illinois State where he received All-American honors.

He also played on the 1972 Olympic team which lost to the Russians in the controversial Gold-medal game, and went on the spend several seasons in the National Basketball Association. He is probably best remembered as a member of the Philadelphia 76ers, where he played with such stars as Julius "Dr. J." Erving and George McGinnis. Collins was an assistant coach at Arizona State before the Chicago Bulls hired him as head coach.

Collins stated he would like to return to Southern Illinois more often, but his past professions have kept him away for long periods of time. "It's great to be home and see all the people who have supported me through the years," Collins said.

After thanking his supporters, Collins took time to give credit to Herrin for inspiring him through the years. "Coach Herrin has been more than a coach to me for more than 20 years," Collins said. "He drives you to be the best you can be."
