Kustra demonstrates learning tool

By Dean Weaver
Senior Reporter

Illinois Lt. Gov. Bob Kustra sat next to a televised image of SIUC President John C. Guyon at the Du Quoin State Fair Sunday, while discussing how long-distance learning will change students' view of education.

Kustra, who is up for re-election this fall on the gubernatorial ticket with Gov. Jim Edgar, said one of the best ways to explain long-distance learning would be to provide an example of the system.

This was done by using a television monitor combined with a video camera to interact with Guyon in Carbondale.

The system uses phone lines to allow people to hear and see each other over long distances, and Kustra hopes technology like this will put all high school students on an equal footing regardless of which high school they attended.

"In the short run it is critical we make sure all students have access to the same type of instruction," he said. "Courses available in the most expensive schools will be available in the most rural schools."

Kustra said in three years all high schools should be able to teach students using this two-way interactive long-distance learning.

"My number one priority is to have the greatest impact on rural high schools," he said. "Because of this, there will be no excuse for students not having access to upper level math, science and language classes."

Kustra said he hoped this would allow all students in Illinois to have the same chance at getting a good job or attending a college of their choice.

Guyon, appearing on the monitor, said SIUC will use long-distance learning to teach classes to students at Rend Lake College, Shawnee Community College and SIUE.

"People will be able to take our courses at Shawnee without going to the SIUC campus," Guyon said.

Guyon also said this technology

Greek life more than parties

By Charlotte Rivers
Campus Life Editor

Mention the word "fraternity," and most people conjure up images of the stereotypical behavior portrayed in Animal House—a bunch of wild, irresponsible students whose only thoughts are tapping their next keg.

Although members say socializing is a part of Greek life, there are other more important aspects, too.

"There's more to it than just parties," Mike Brown, Interfraternity Council rush chairman, said. "Being in a fraternity is not about just going out and being rude. We work as hard as we play."

Brown, a member of Phi Sigma Kappa, said even though each fraternity house is diverse, they share some common goals of leadership and community service. Out of the 12 IFC houses, four are on Greek Row on-campus and eight are off-campus, Brown said.

"The on-campus houses follow the same University rules, just like the dorms," he said. "Ten years ago, the University allowed kegs in the houses, but it's not that way anymore. It's toned down since then; all parties have to be University-approved."

Scott Stonebreaker, Delta Chi rush chairperson, said fraternities are a good way to get involved in the University and community.

projects each semester," he said. "It opens the doors for involvement. I learned more through being Greek than in I learned in school. It's about real life and relating with people. With 50 guys living in a house, we all learn to get along."

Stonebreaker, a senior in construction management from Elgin, said rush is a way for potential new members to shop around for the fraternity that is right for them.

"Rush is a perfect way to get to know people," he said. "It's about joining the people, not

Board reveals agenda

By Marc Chase
Senior Reporter

The ability of students to directly or indirectly voice their opinions on fee increases at state universities highlighted the agenda Saturday at a higher education student committee meeting.

The Illinois Board of Higher Education Student Advisory Committee (IBHE-SAC) is a body consisting of student representatives from state universities and some private colleges that consults with the Board on issues concerning students.

Jenny Rubin, committee representative for SIUC, said the committee passed a general resolution affecting the input of the student body at state universities concerning fees which are raised by administrations of the institutions. Examples of

WIDB adopts new strategy

By Aaron Butler
Staff Reporter

The management of WIDB, the radio station behind the music students hear in the halls of the SIUC Student Center, met Sunday to discuss some new strategies they hope will make the station an even more interesting source of music and information.

Bill Leathers, general manager at WIDB, said the station has a new plan. Getting a broadcasting permit, while still a priority, will be lowered on the stations agenda.

"We've re-evaluated our priorities this year," he said. "Fighting to get on the air does us no good until we have something people want to listen to. We will work on the small things first; getting on the air, while still important to us, will not

MEXICANS PROTEST 'FRAUDULENT' ELECTION — MEXICO CITY — More than 70,000 angry Mexicans packed the capital's historic "zocalo" Saturday to back opposition presidential candidate Cuauhtemoc Cardenas' call for a national crusade to prove last Sunday's elections were fraudulent. The protest came as the official results were released, confirming that candidate Ernesto Zedillo won with 48.87 percent of the vote.

MILITANTS THREATEN CONFERENCE VISITORS — CAIRO, Egypt — Islamic militants Saturday threatened to attack foreigners who attend a United Nations conference on population that opens here Sept. 5. Saturday's statement was the first explicit threat of violence against foreigners planning to attend the conference, which some Islamic organizations view as a plot by the West to impose its ideas of birth control and morality on the socially conservative Islamic world.

SOUTH AFRICAN POLICE ARREST HUNDREDS — JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — In a dramatic attempt to stem a fast-growing wave of crime and violence, armed South African police and soldiers clamped down across the country Friday night, searching thousands of homes and vehicles and arresting 1,742 people, authorities said Saturday. About 18,000 members of the once-infamous security forces took part in the overnight police sweep.

BEIRUT EMBARKS ON PLAN TO RECONSTRUCT — BEIRUT, Lebanon — In an effort to bounce back from 15 years of civil war, the Lebanese government has started a campaign to repair its capital. Beirut is being reborn after the war that ended in 1990 damaged and destroyed dozens of its buildings. The ambitious reconstruction plan pushed by Prime Minister Rafik Hariri is billed as the largest such public project anywhere in this decade. It will develop a 400-acre swath of central downtown largely gutted by the fighting.

OPEN-HEART SURGERY PERFORMED ON APE — SAN DIEGO — In the first open-heart surgery done on an ape, a medical team led by an internationally known heart surgeon worked for seven hours Saturday to repair a life-threatening hole in the heart of a young Sumatran orangutan, an endangered species, at the San Diego Zoo. The surgery was virtually identical to the procedure commonly performed on humans with the same heart defect.

CALIFORNIA SENATE APPROVES DRILLING BAN — SACRAMENTO, Calif. — The California State Senate on Saturday approved legislation that would permanently ban new offshore oil drilling along the entire 1,100 mile length of the California coast, replacing the current patchwork of long- and short-term restrictions. The drilling ban bill was approved on a 22-13 vote, one more than the simple majority needed for passage. It was returned for a final vote in the State Assembly, which earlier approved it with no votes to spare.

POLICE BACKGROUNDS INCLUDE VIOLATIONS — WASHINGTON — A recent investigation by The Washington Post found that 1989-1990 graduates of the District of Columbia's police-training program, who make up about one-third of the city's police force, account for more than half of the 201 D.C. police officers arrested since 1989 on charges ranging from shoplifting and forgery to rape and murder. The high rate of crime among officers in the country's capital partly is blamed on a 20-month hiring frenzy brought on by pressure to meet a congressional deadline.

Safety awareness promoted at State Fair booths

By Dave Katzman
Staff Reporter

Tucked between tents of food vendors, area artisans and broadcast stations at the DuQuoin State Fair, public awareness organizations were present to inform children and adults about safety and other issues.

The Illinois Department of Transportation's Division of Public Safety had a tent set up with exhibits to convince the public to buckle their safety belts. A simulator was used to show the impact of a seven mile-per-hour head-on collision.

As the volunteer's body lurched forward from the impact, the safety belt caught and held his body in the seat.

Vince and Larry, two crash test dummies, performed a skit on safety belt use. They got their "buckle up" message across to wide-eyed children with a humorous yet sobering performance.

Don Schaefer, of the Safety Programs Office at Eastern Illinois University, said only 68 percent of drivers use their safety belts.

"Our project is encouraging the use of seat belts," he said.

Schaefer travels the state to put on demonstrations at high schools, industries and fairs.

Along with the skit and demonstration, several educational games attracted curious children.

When the Wheel of Safety landed on a statement about safety belts, players hit either the "correct" or "incorrect" button and a light told them if they were right.

Play It Safe challenged children to match a picture dealing with safety with its corresponding statement.

The Illinois State Police hosted a booth with information on several programs. Trooper Tom Taylor, D.A.R.E. (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) field coordinator, had a table set up to promote the program.

"The whole idea is to promote prevention of drug use," he said.

Information was also available for the new Illinois State Police program, V.E.G.A. (Violence Education and Gang Awareness). The program emphasizes conflict resolution without the use of violence, and the consequences children face when joining a gang.

Parents express day care woes

By Diane Dove
Staff Reporter

Parents of children who attend Gilbert and Bradley Day Care Center expressed concern, anger and betrayal over the impending closing of the center at a meeting Friday.

Center officials met with parents and board of trustee members of First Baptist Church, which houses and subsidizes the center, to discuss extending the closing until December.

Melanie Bray, advisory board chair and a member of the church, said the center, which is being shut down for financial reasons, may be able to reverse its fiscal situation if given an extension.

Bray said both she and center director Denise Mezo are working with the Department of Children and Family Services and Child Care Resources and Referral to keep the center open.

"Denise and I aren't going to give up looking for other options," she said. "If I come back with a financial solution I know (the church) will hear us out."

Bray said the center had difficulty improving its economic situation because it could not afford to hire another teacher, and could not take in more children without hiring more teachers.

Still, Bray said she was surprised when the board of trustees voted to give the center 60 days notice to close a week ago Thursday.

Police responded at 4:20 p.m. Thursday to a call for assistance at the 400 block of East Chestnut in regards to shots being fired.

Witness' statements said two black men exited a blue Ford Escort and went around to the back of 505 N. Brush, a community housing development. Witnesses said the suspects ordered residents and guests to lay down and empty their pockets. The suspects then fired shots into the air and fled in their vehicle.

The men were believed to be carrying a Glock 9mm pistol and a TEC-9 9mm pistol.

Caution more useful than fear or paranoia

BEGINNING COLLEGE FOR MOST IS A TIME to look forward to the new experiences a university education has to offer. This enthusiasm brought to a school is not only appropriate but also is the main reason colleges and universities exist. And, although this spirit should not be dampened by isolated incidents, students should be aware that all new experiences need to be approached with a certain degree of caution.

Providing a key example was one such incident only a day before the fall semester officially began. Sunday Aug. 21, an SIUC student was sexually assaulted on campus. Walking home alone between Schneider and Boomer halls at about 2:30 a.m., she was attacked from behind and sexually assaulted.

According to SIUC Police there were nine rapes on campus in 1993. Five were date rapes, or rapes committed by someone with whom the victim was acquainted. A common aspect of all nine reported cases was that all of them occurred on weekends and in the early morning hours. A second frightening, but unfortunately entirely believable, fact is that six of the nine rapes were alcohol-related. Additionally, the Carbondale Police Department has been notified of 14 rapes in the city this year. Many rapes go unreported, however, and the importance of contacting authorities if an attack occurs is crucial.

The message that needs to be taken from the above is one that applies to new and returning students, as well as anyone with activities on campus. It is a message grounded in the basic principle of awareness. Blame cannot be placed on someone for walking alone at night on campus because it is something well within their rights to do. However, a dose of reality must be applied when considering the chances one is taking when the decision to walk alone at night is made. It must be realized, either by looking at statistics or just through common sense, that there are people who look for and exploit situations exactly like the one described above.

The need for awareness on campus is one that is not gender-based. Attacks have been made on campus on males and females alike for reasons including verbal disagreements and racially-motivated instances. Whether situations like these are always avoidable by using caution is difficult to say. But, if someone is consciously aware of the situation they are in and are able to determine if there is the possibility of danger, the odds of avoiding trouble would seem to be much more in their favor.

OBVIOUSLY THERE ARE NO FOOLPROOF methods for staying safe. But, even a simple measure such as going out to the strip with friends and walking home together could reduce your chances of trouble. It is important not to see statistics and develop fear and paranoia to the point of limiting yourself. But, it is appropriate to cover your own back by developing a realistic view and applying some common sense when you do go out.

Students are University's main commodity

This editorial is in reply to Professor Karen Midden's misguided remarks in the DE on July 24 about the new parking spaces SIU is going to provide this fall. I was outraged that a respected and mature individual would result to juvenile tactics by calling students spoiled because we would like to drive to be able to drive to campus.

As a student and a motorist, I feel that parking on campus should not be a privilege but a right for all who pay to attend this school and choose to drive. Why else do we pay $15 for a parking sticker. I don't think it's because we like the way it looks. I believe I purchased one to be able to park on campus. Spoiled we are not! Fed up to listening to people to accuse us of being spoiled? We are.

I tend to believe that your views, Professor Midden, are biased due to your profession and not in the best interest of the students but in the best interest of your own beliefs. If your so against these new spaces then I only have one thing to suggest, why don't you and all the other faculty that agree with you give up your spaces and we the students will gladly agree with you. After all, you can park in the Arena too. But I can't remember the last time I saw a blue sticker down there.

Also, contrary to your belief that the visual beauty on campus is this school's main commodity, I tend to think that about 20,000 of us student would strongly disagree. This school's greatest commodity is the students. After all Professor Midden, what good is a university full of visual beauty without students to attend. For far too long this University and it's faculty have forgotten why their here. Let me enlighten you Professor Midden, it's for us and not yourselves. Thank you!

Singaporean leader criticizes U.S. values

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—Who said the following about the moral values in Britain and the United States?

"Liberalism has led to the breakdown of the family in both countries, and that has been the cause of drug abuse and crime." Was it Jerry Falwell or Pat Robertson or Sen. Jesse Helms? No, it was Lim Boon Heng, a minister without portfolio in the office of the prime minister of Singapore.

As reported by the Associated Press, Lim declared: "When some Singaporeans think we should copy what Western democracies do, we should ask questions. Are they recommending the right policies for Singaporeans? Or will these policies lead to our ruin?"

He added: "We highlight the U.S. and British examples not because we want to criticize them, but because we want to draw lessons for ourselves, so that we will not end up the same way." Presumably some of his best friends are Americans and British.

If the United States government and many in America — including us — could denounce the Singapore government for its inhumane caning of Michael Fay, a 19-year old American, it was inevitable that the government would turn around and lecture back. But Lim's comments speak to a deeper issue than the horrible caning episode. Many East Asian leaders, particularly in Singapore, have been speaking for some time as if there were a kind of global culture war going on in which "Western" or "American" values are coming up against "Asian values."

The Westerners—the "liberals" in Mr. Lim's speech—are criticized as being so sympathetic to freedom that they promote license and irresponsibility.

The "Asian" ideology praised by these leaders is tougher stuff—more hierarchical, more conducive to hard work and discipline. And, yes, more sympathetic to authoritarian forms of government and critical of democracy. It's not surprising that this ideology is especially popular among those who happen to be running the governments of many Asian countries.

We have no doubt that the United States (we won't speak for Britain) is experiencing problems related to family breakup, and that our crime and drug abuse rates are, indeed, much too high. What Americans should not concede, now or ever, is that these problems are some inevitable result of our personal freedoms and democratic values.

On the contrary, free speech, free elections, religious tolerance, an open press, the rejection of censorship, racial and gender equality, rights even for those accused of crime — these are all rights sought by citizens, often at their own peril, in more superficially orderly societies.

would be beneficial in improving rural health care because by next year SIUC will be hooked into Veterans Hospital in Marion and Union County Hospital in Anna.

Harry Crisp, president of the Illinois Community College Board, said SIUC belongs to two distance learning consortiums giving them access to SIUE and other colleges like Southeastern Illinois Community College.

Crisp said that distance learning networks will reach grade schools, prisons, high schools and hospitals, making education more available to everyone throughout Illinois.

Kustra said in Southern Illinois, SIUC would be the hub of the long-distance learning network which will include community colleges, high schools and colleges as far north as Olney.

The system is not only beneficial for younger students, but will also help place-bound students, those who cannot return to a university campus due to other responsibilities.

Kustra said Illinois began funding distance learning last year with the help of the community college board, who is coordinating its efforts with the Illinois Board of Higher Education.

Crisp said the board has come up with a five-year funding plan for distance learning that allows schools to purchase the necessary equipment.

interfere with the station's other goals."

WIDB's graduate assistant advisor, Paul Cotter, said professionalism was critical to success in both the sound of the station, and the business relationships behind the scenes.

Cotter said the station has adopted a new management structure, with a clear chain of command and carefully planned interdepartmental relationships.

"The infrastructure of our organization needs to be well defined in order for us to continue to improve," he explained. "People need to know what is expected of them, and the departments need to cooperate. Communication is the key to accomplishing this, and the new infrastructure will make communication much easier."

Tom Birk, WIDB faculty advisor, described focus, example, ability, and time management as key to a successful radio station.

"We have a very good managing staff this semester," said Birk. "However, the station is always looking for people interested in contributing, and I would encourage anyone interested in getting involved to contact us. Our staff is all volunteer, and we depend on students to keep improving the station's quality."

Leathers also said the station was always looking for new people.

"If someone wants to dedicate a great deal of time to the station, that's great, but we are also flexible," he said. "People who can only spare a couple hours a week can also be very helpful, and should come talk to us."

Greg DeVolpi, a graduate student in geography, said he was glad WIDB tried to represent many different styles of contemporary music.

"The station adds to the school atmosphere, especially in the Student Center," said DeVolpi. "The variety is excellent; you can hear rock, rap, and alternative songs you can't hear anywhere else."

Cotter said the station has the widest variety of music in the area.

"We also have the most ethnic and racial diversity of any registered student organization on campus," Cotter said.

WIDB can be heard in the Student Center, as well as in all campus residential facilities.

"The Breakfast Connection," providing urban and rock hits, news, and sports, airs Mon.—Fri. from 7:00 to 9:00 a.m.

Alternative music is played Mon.—Sat., 2:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m. and 2:00 a.m. to 8:00 a.m. Urban music is featured Mon.—Sat., 9:00 p.m. to 2:00 a.m. and 10:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. Jazz can be heard Saturday nights from 8:00 p.m. to 10: p.m.

Formal rush begins Monday evening when prospective members meet at 7 p.m. in the Student Center to board buses that take them to a 45-minute visit to each of the 12 houses.

The tours, which cost $5 for three days, continue through Wednesday night. During informal sessions last Friday and yesterday, representatives from IFC houses provided information to potential rushees.

After visiting each house, rushees are invited to return on Thursday. Bids, which are invitations to join, are issued by the houses on Friday and rushees are expected to call to accept.

"There's a house to fit everybody," Rob Reed, IFC public relations officer and co-rush chairperson for Theta Xi, said.

Nearly everyone who participates in rush joins a fraternity, Reed said.

About 200 are expected to attend rush, Stonebreaker said.

"Because the drinking age has gone up, more people will be looking for other ways to socialize," Reed, a junior in public relations from Collinsville, said.

Brown said each fraternity tends to emphasize a different aspect of campus life.

"Some are sports-oriented and others are ag-based," he said. "Minc (Phi Sigma Alpha) is academic-based."

Dues range from $150-300 per semester, which are used for operating budgets, supplies, philanthropic projects, scholarships and rush activities. If a funds in-kind locally with money, training or private contributions," Crisp said.

Crisp said after the first year's funding, 127 classrooms will be using this distance learning technology beginning next month, and this year's funding will make an additional 155 classrooms distance learning accessible.

"This technology will contain the cost of education, and in many cases lower it," he said.

student chooses to live in the fraternity's house, there is an additional charge for housing. Stonebreaker said the monthly cost of living in the Delta Chi house is about $430, which includes utilities, food and dues.

"It's a little cheaper than the dorms," Ryan Geddes, a freshman with an undeclared major from Peoria, said.

Geddes, who plans to participate in rush activities, said finances are not the only reason he is interested in joining a fraternity.

"I know some guys who belong already," he said. "It's going to open up the college experience and add another dimension."

More than 1,000 SIUC students belong to the Greek system. Besides the IGC, there are two other councils. The Panhellenic council, which has four sororities, will have rush Sept. 7, and the Pan-Hellenic council, with three fraternities and four sororities, will have rush Sept. 25.

All three councils are governed by the Inter-Greek council, Harnet Wilson Barlow, associate director of Student Development, said.

Barlow said there are a few things students need to think about before joining a fraternity.

"Before joining any student organization, students look for those with philosophies and values similar to their own," she said.

"They join those they are most comfortable with. Fraternities and sororities are one of the few remaining traditional college activities."

Kustra said additional funding is coming from a four-year $75 million grant that Edgar proposed this year and from private grants solicited by the Illinois Distance Learning Foundation.

Kustra said Illinois has taken a decentralized approach to funding distance learning by encouraging private industries to assist colleges in providing the technology to make this type of education possible.

The average American will visit their medical doctor five times in 1994. Migraine or common headache will account for one half of these visits. Over a billion dollars are spent each year on over-the-counter headache remedies.

It appears that we are doing rather poorly in our fight against this seemingly common ailment. It also appears to be a very big business. Is it possible that we have overlooked the obvious remedy? The results Chiropractors are getting in headache cases is nothing short of phenomenal. Language center means world to SIUC

By Katie Morrissey
Staff Reporter

One SIUC program does more than provide cultural diversity — for thirty years it has played a large role in making the University one of the largest international schools in the nation.

The Center for English as a Second Language has drawn students to SIUC since it began in 1964.

Joan Friedenber, center director, said the program attracts students from around the world by word of mouth.

"I don't need to put advertisements for CESL in international publications because its reputation travels without our help," she said.

This semester there are two CESL programs scheduled. The first started Aug 22 and ends Oct.14.

Joy Carter, an assistant to Friedenber, said CESL students come from almost every continent on the globe.

"We have students enrolled from Asia, Africa, Europe and South America," Carter said.

These CESL students may or may not become SIUC students when they finish the program.

James Quisenberry, director of International Programs and Services, said participants who remain at the University play a big part in shaping SIUC.

"International students assist SIUC in increasing its academic programs, faculty research and international reputation as well as provide international exposure."

"They do more than raise the GPA's of our most difficult classes," Quisenberry said.

CESL students pay tuition and all costs of living and find housing with the help of CESL workers.

Friedenber said the program helps prepare students for University life.

"We want to give them more than a run through the TOEFL mill," she said.

"We help them with survival skills and University preparation so that when they get into SIUC classes, they can do well."

Approximately 500 students come to SIUC annually from all over the world to attend CESL.

Registration for this semester has not yet ended, so more participants probably will join the program, Carter said.

"We are still expecting more students to sign up," she said. "As it is now there are 71 new CESL students for this term."

The large influx of international students has altered the University's student body, Friedenber said.

"One third to half these students graduate from SIUC — the other half go on to attend other universities in the United States," she said.

Carbondale has been selected by the Illinois Bureau of Tourism as a destination to market to international travelers because of its international population, International and Economic Development representatives say.

Students have told Friedenber they like Carbondale because of its relatively low crime rate, its quiet atmosphere and its unusually high number of international grocery stores for a small town.

Friedenber said SIUC has gained a new nickname because of its global appeal.

"It has for some begun to mean, 'Southern International University in Carbondale,' but that depends on how you count the students," she said.

Friedenber said SIUC is ranked eleventh in the nation for international student population, but International Programs and Services said this included the campus in Nakajo, Japan and graduate students.

Some Carbondale residents say they are pleased with SIUC's diversity.

"I haven't been able to travel the world, but living in a college town has made it seem like the world comes to me," one resident said.

Health-care bill needs change to become law

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—Following the apparent collapse of efforts to pass a comprehensive health reform bill, lawmakers may seek to enact a modest "consensus" bill in the remaining weeks of Congress, based on proposals with broad support in both parties.

A bill of that type, many observers said, would scrap the controversial provisions — including employer "mandates" requiring firms to pay part of the cost of employee coverage, federal cost control measures and expansion of Medicare — that have made it all but impossible to pass President Clinton's plan or bills sponsored by Senate and House majority leaders.

Many observers say a "consensus" bill would seek incremental changes in the existing health-care system instead of providing for the creation of a new one.

Party on, Wayne: Program permits viewers air space

By Paul Elsenberg
Entertainment Editor

A new program is in the planning stages for a cable television company which will provide local film makers an alternative venue to PBS affiliate WSIU-TV and dormitory television SPC-TV.

TCI Cable Company in Carbondale has requested locally produced videos or films for a new series to begin sometime in October. The series will be televised in more than 48,000 homes and businesses stretching from Carbondale to Alton, a company official said.

Armondo Pellerano, a producer and director for TCI, said the new program is not a public access channel, because TCI does not have production facilities, but it is an outlet for anyone who already has something on video tape or film.

"We'd like to see music videos from local bands, some student films, and even live plays," Pellerano said. "We are open to any kind of original programming."

He said submitted work will be televised free of charge, but TCI cannot pay for the submissions.

"Basically, it's just a great opportunity for local people to get their work on the air," he said.

Pellerano said if the program, which will air locally on Channel 10, is popular with viewers, the program could appear statewide.

He said the program will replace many things currently appearing on channel 10, which now operates under the title "Cable Marketplace," that he feels are money-losers.

"People don't want to watch ads," he said. "So what better way to get people to watch than by putting on what they want to see."

There are some great student films out there, some high quality work. But currently, there's no place to see these things."

Pellerano said the films will be screened for suitability and proper airing time, but no editing will take place.

"The films will be shown just as the producer made them," he said. "We're not looking for stuff like full frontal nudity, unless it's art.

We also look for copyright violations."

Scott Munson, who graduated with a masters in film from SIUC in December, said the program should be a great outlet for filmmakers in Carbondale. He has already submitted several of his student films, as well as some videos he made with the Carbondale band "Il," the band he plays guitar and keyboards for.

"I gave them my entire portfolio," he said.

"Basically, (Channel 10 is) just a great opportunity for local people to get their work on the air."

—Armondo Pellerano

Jim Engelston, temporary master control supervisor for WSIU-TV, said WSIU does accept submissions from students and community members, but because of the station's PBS affiliation, much of the work does not air.

"We're in the heart of the Bible Belt, so even when we get a documentary with cuss words in it, we broadcast the edited version," he said.

He said a public access program is long overdue in the Carbondale area.

"I think it's awesome," he said. "I'd like to see a lot more independent video."

"People are covering their asses these days — they're afraid of controversial issues. Public access allows different sides of the story, many of which wouldn't get on the air otherwise."

Bob Gerig, WSIU-TV station manager, said his station always is looking for good programming, but it must fit within the Southern Illinois audience.

"Any submissions we receive, we'll screen," he said.

Gerig said only a handful of programs actually appear on the air, and most of those are produced by students in radio-television classes.

"In those classes, the students and I work so close together, that they seldom submit anything that is substandard," he said.

and Jackson County sheriff deputies located and stopped the car shortly after at the intersection of Route 13 and Route 127.

The weapons were retrieved from the car.

Michael Scott Jr. fled on foot after the vehicle was stopped. A manhunt ensued, involving the Federal Bureau of Investigations, Jackson County sheriff's deputies, the Southern Illinois Enforcement Group and Carbondale and Murphysboro police, a helicopter from the Illinois Department of Transportation, and a police dog.

The other suspect, Corey T. Robinson, also of East St. Louis, was taken into custody and charged with armed robbery, armed violence and aggravated discharge of a firearm.

Carbondale Police Chief Don Strom said police believe Scott is no longer in the area and may have returned to East St. Louis. Police have notified East St. Louis officials of the incident and a warrant has been issued for Scott's arrest.

Displays showed facts about safety belts and driving under the influence of drugs and alcohol. Free gun locks were also available.

Taylor said he trains volunteers from local police departments in a 17-county area to be D.A.R.E. representatives.

The Herrin Fire Department, the State Fire Marshall's Office and other volunteers had a scaled-down house set up as part of Operation E.D.I.T.H. (Emergency Drills In The Home).

Capt. Russ Rader of the Chester Fire Department was on hand to give out tips on what to do in case of fire.

"It (the display) teaches kids what to do in a smoke situation," he said.

A small building was dedicated to the concerns of senior citizens. Free foot and blood pressure screenings were offered, along with information from Blue Cross Blue Shield, the Illinois Department of Aging and the Illinois Department of Veteran Affairs. A performance of old American songs was given to those who wandered in to sit and escape the 90-plus heat.

"I felt we were never told that if we don't turn around before this date then we would be closed," she said.

Lori Longueville, of Child Care Resources and Referral, said the situation could have been avoided if there had been better communication between day care officials and the board.

"There's a lot of solutions that could have been reached if there had been discussions," she said.

Board member Trece Brown said it was possible the trustees could be persuaded to keep the center open if center officials could come up with solution before Sept. 8, when the trustees have their next board meeting.

"The church is not throwing the day care into the street," Brown said.

"If you want to stay here then come up with a plan and show that from now on you can make it."

Kathy Bonn, one of the parents at the meeting, said she felt betrayed by the sudden notice and was unwilling to give the center a chance to save itself.

"I am jumping ship," she said. "I found one (day care) slot open and I'm taking it."

Bonn said she spent about 90 minutes "frantically looking" for another day care center for her child after she learned of the closing.

"I will be forever in fear that one day I will receive a memo saying 'Surprise, surprise, good luck finding a slot,'" she said.

John Hetherington, another parent at the meeting, said however, he is willing to stay with the center and would support an increase to save it.

"If that (increase is) $5 or $7.50 a week I'm sure that most people are willing to commit to that," he said.

India invaded by insects

The Washington Post

NEW DELHI— Hundreds of thousands of grasshoppers rose from their usual habitat in the marshes surrounding the Yamuna River last week and headed for the big city. This year, the monsoon has been longer than usual. More rain means more grasshoppers, and that means wider grazing grounds. This year, the grasshopper's life cycle should end sometime in the next week, ending the siege.

National Endowment for Humanities awards grant

Ben Golshahr
Staff reporter

A $190,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities was recently awarded to SIUC's John Dewey Correspondence project.

The project, headed by Larry Hickman who has written literature on John Dewey, is a multi-year effort to collect all of American philosopher John Dewey's letters of correspondence.

The grant goes into effect October 1994 and lasts until September 1996.

Dewey, who lived from 1859 to 1952, wrote and received over 13,000 letters of correspondence from some of America's most prominent and influential people.

Supreme Court justices, politicians, and major intellectuals are a sample of the people Dewey communicated with, Hickman said.

Eventually all of Dewey's letter's will be published on a CD-ROM format.

Hickman said selected letters will be published in standard book form.

Hickman sees a revived interest in Dewey's work currently taking place among American business leaders, educators, and social planners and reformers.

"The only way you could save democracy was to make sure that all citizens had the best education possible."

— Thomas Alexander

Dewey's work greatly influenced American philosophical thought concerning education and other institutions, Hickman said.

SIUC philosophy professor Thomas Alexander said that Dewey was interested in saving democracy.

"The only way you could save democracy," Alexander said, "was to make sure that all citizens had the best education possible."

Hickman said many of the letters were handwritten and much of it is hard to read.

Three project editors work from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., cleaning up the letters to get them in a form suitable for publication.

John Dewey stayed active late into his career, Alexander said. He was on the chair that investigated Stalin's charges against Leon Trotsky.

Dewey also helped found the NAACP and the AAUP (American Association for University Professors).

Alexander said that perhaps one of Dewey's most revolutionary thoughts was to synthesize art and feeling with reason and knowledge.

This concept of Dewey's is elaborated on in Alexander's book "The Horizons of Feeling."

Offspring's debut album is a 'Smash' with critics

By Aleksandra Macys
Senior Reporter

Music Review

The way young people feel about today's violent and often unfair society is stylistically reflected through the music and lyrics of Offspring in their debut album, "Smash."

People who listen to the radio may know their hit single, "Come Out and Play," with the chorus lyrics of, "You gotta keep 'em separated," but the rest of the album deserves recognition as well.

The hard-hitting bass, guitar, drums and especially interesting lyrics like, "I'm just a sucker with no self esteem," makes listening to the album worth-while.

With a mix that combines sounds inspired by bands ranging from the Sex Pistols to Megadeth, the album offers a variety of musical expression and reflective lyrics.

Two songs, "Nitro (Youth Energy)" and "Not the One" reflect how many young people feel about the society they live in and how today's society seems to be more violent and aggressive than those of the past.

"Our generation sees the world not the same as before. We might as well just throw it all and live like there's no tomorrow."

Other topics provided through the lyrics include the environment and pollution, war and kids packing guns to school. Topics such as relationships are also approached.

With movies in theaters now such as "Natural Born Killers" and albums like this one showing a violent world that most of us do not see, "Smash" offers a look into a world that people may or may not experience by telling stories through the lyrics about violence and mayhem.

The album is a must-hear because all the songs on the album take their own forms musically by changes in guitar, bass and drum rhythms, and through the sometimes graphic lyrics by changes in subject matter and voice tonality.

The fast-forward button on the tape player will not be needed for this album.

"Smash" is currently available in local record stores.

Unisex fragrance reflects times, changing sex-roles

By Kellie Huttes
Senior Reporter

All for one and one for all is the selling strategy for the new unisex Calvin Klein fragrance cK one. The cologne, due to hit stores in late September, is the first unisex fragrance to be introduced and mass marketed. The target audience is people in the 20-40 age range.

sample will be sold in October to introduce the fragrance, she said. The fragrance counter will be set up in the middle of the men's and women's cosmetic area.

Jane Workman, an SIUC clothing and textiles professor in workforce education and development, said cK one is a reflection of the times and the changing roles of men and women. "cK one seems to really grasp the spirit of the times," she said. "It's sort of like saying there are no rules — it's the continuation of the 'do your own thing' attitude."

The August issue of Vogue magazine quotes Calvin Klein as developing the fragrance after his top waif-like model, Kate Moss. Workman said he probably did this because she seems to be so much more androgynous than other models, representing both males and females and individuality.

The entire selling point of the fragrance packaged in a plain, flask-like bottle, is the celebration of the individual, a natural fragrance to be shared by men and women.

It is about being one with yourself and everyone else, according to Stiff.

Workman predicts students will accept the new fragrance because they are open minded and does not think they are hung up on masculine or feminine labels.

Unisex dressing came about in the late 1950s with the introduction of jeans, T-shirts and the new fabric technology, and has expanded today to unisex hair and jewelry, she said.

"With the advent of knits, more fashions became unisexed," she said. "Before, designs were made specifically for men and women."

Sports also helped bring unisex clothing to the fashion forefront as men and women both needed comfortable and easy to care for uniforms, she said.

Denise Bond and Teri Marshall, graduate assistants in clothing and textiles, predicted people who are more sports-minded, rather than traditional perfume wearers, will try the fragrance.

"Some women think women's fragrances are too florally and are more readily accepting than men to try a new cologne," Bond said.

The fragrance is made from rose, violet, cardamom, papaya and musk and products will be priced between $20-$50.

Kennedy ad claims crime bill credit

The Washington Post

BOSTON—Less than 12 hours after passage of the crime bill, the re-election campaign of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., had created a television ad incorporating the crime-busting message into this year's political mix.

By editing film of the senator shot earlier, the campaign assembled a 30-second spot that gives Kennedy credit for putting

"2,300 new police on Massachusetts streets" and imposing life sentences on third-time violent offenders.

The ad also reminds voters that Kennedy, a former Judiciary Committee chairman, earlier wrote laws abolishing parole for federal crimes and denying bail to dangerous suspects.

Although Kennedy has no Democratic opponent and faces no primary, the campaign decided to air the advertisement now in order to address the public's concern about crime, according to Kennedy's nephew and campaign manager, Michael Kennedy.

He said the "tough-on-crime" theme is not an attempt to reposition the senator, who is one of the nation's foremost liberals, but an effort to build awareness of the senator's record.

"It's a major issue out there, in people's minds," Michael Kennedy said Friday.

Unisex fragrance cK one

SIUC students received a sample of the fragrance last week. Many expect the spicy, floral scent to be widely accepted.

Adam Kuffel, a junior in automotive technology from Schaumburg, said although he would have to try the fragrance before he purchased a bottle, he thought both men and women will like it.

"If you like it (the fragrance) you should be able to wear it," he said. "It shouldn't matter if you're a guy or a girl."

Rae Stiff, manager of cosmetics at Famous Barr in University Mall, said she expects the cologne to go over well because it is targeted towards a market that has never been reached.

"We have both male and female customers buy and wear men's and women's fragrances for themselves, but this is entirely different," Stiff said.

"It kind of compares to Calvin Klein's men's Escape or Ralph Lauren's women's Safari, with a soft musky smell."

Venezuela emerges soggy victor in Little League Championships

Los Angeles Times

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. — What is it with Northridge and Mother Nature?

An earthquake could be overcome. A thunderstorm could not.

After a three-hour rain delay, Northridge was at times as sloppy as the field conditions when play resumed, losing, 4-3, to Maracaibo, Venezuela, in the Little League World Series championship on Saturday.

"That rain really got us," Northridge shortstop Matt Fisher said. "We had the momentum, but after we stopped, they scored right away and turned it around."

After the delay, Maracaibo racked up seven of its eight hits and Northridge had only three.

Still, Northridge (20-2) stayed close before the 15,000 left from the 35,000 in attendance before the delay.

Maracaibo scored in the third and fourth innings, but Northridge answered with two in the bottom of the fourth to tie.

Maracaibo responded with two runs in the fifth on four hits and two wild pitches, but Spencer

Gordon homered in the bottom of the inning to keep Northridge within one run.

Maracaibo right-hander Cesar Hidalgo retired the side in order in the sixth, however, giving Latin American its first Series championship since Monterrey, Mexico, won in 1958.

"This was so important to us and to our country because no Latin American team had done it in so long," Manager Ramon Diaz said.

Hidalgo, who turns 13 Sunday, seemed to get stronger after the delay, striking out the side in the third and finishing with 10 strikeouts.

The opposite was true for Northridge.

The rain and thunder caused us to lose, it totally disrupted our game," outfielder Michael Nesbit said.

Affected the most was Northridge right-hander Justin Gentile. He was much sharper before the rain, retiring seven of eight batters. There were two out with none on in the third when play was suspended.

The thunderstorm, though short, dropped three inches of rain and about 10 inches of standing water in the left field corner had to be drained.

Also drained was Northridge Manager Larry Baca, who fell asleep in his dormitory during the delay.

"I was talking to (a Little League official), then the next thing I knew I was waking up," he said. "I felt the way I do after a game is over, worn out."

When the game resumed, Efinson Mora doubled down the right field line. Gentile's next pitch sailed over catcher Matt Cunningham's head and Mora advanced to third. Esteban Avila singled sharply to right and Maracaibo led, 1-0. Erik Villalobos singled to put runners on first and second, but Avila strayed too far off second after a pitch to Guillermo Quiroz, and Cunningham threw to second to start a rundown that ended the inning.

Maracaibo's baserunning bordered on reckless, but a gamble in the fifth scored the decisive run. After driving in the third run with a single and advancing to third on two more singles, Avila broke for home after a pitch in the dirt that slipped past Cunningham only a few feet.

affecting the input of the student body at state universities concerning fees which are raised by administrations of the institutions. Examples of such fees are activity and athletic fees.

Rubin, a member of the Undergraduate Student Government, said the resolution came about as a result of a study from the IBHE-SAC Committee to Study Affordability in Higher Education.

She said the committee will recommend a plan to IBHE allowing the student governments at each university to choose if students would be able to voice their opinion through a voting referendum or a panel of student government officials who would consult the administration.

Rubin voted in favor of the compromise, but Monty Peerbhai, the alternate committee representative who represents SIUC if Ruben is absent, said the resolution could compromise students' interests.

Peerbhai, who is a member of the Graduate and Professional Student Council, said the best interests of students may not be achieved if student government panels make decisions on fee increases.

"Many student governments are dominated by the administration and student affairs offices which propose these fee increases," Peerbhai said. "Also students in student government can be bought off with assistantships and tuition waivers."

Peerbhai said there is little threat of the student government at SIUC using a panel system rather than a student referendum system because the University has historically had student referendums to poll student opinions on fee increases.

According to Peerbhai, many of the committee members that voted for the resolution said students are not knowledgeable enough to make decisions on fee increases.

"This is a very elitist attitude," he said.

Rubin said the resolution came about as a compromise between members who wanted a panel system and other members who wanted a referendum system.

Peerbhai said the compromise is not effective, however, because it allows a body which may be controlled by a university administration to decide if students will be able to vote on issues that concern them.

The movements of Aikido are not designed to stop attacks, but rather to blend with the movement of the attack and then redirect it.

Pitch pizzazz

Dave Piazza, a freshman from Waukegan, Ill., was playing catch with a fellow student at the sport fest on Sunday. Piazza, like other students, kept himself busy while waiting for some of the events to start at the sport fest.

Name of game is wait for Wheatley

Los Angeles Times

CHICAGO — At last the truth can be told: The answer to the greatest Michigan football mystery since "Why can't Bo win Rose Bowls?" is located along a stretch of make-believe property that runs from Atlantic Avenue to Ventnor Avenue and ends at Marvin Gardens.

"I call them, 'The Flamingos,'" said Tyrone Wheatley, budding Monopoly real estate magnate, All-American tailback and centerpiece of the Wolverine off-season drama. "The reason I call them 'The Flamingos' is because it's like a little resort ... right before you go to jail."

Wheatley knows all about monopolies. He and San Diego State's Marshall Faulk cornered the college rushing market last season and then had to decide between the NFL draft and returning to school. Faulk bolted, but Wheatley wasn't so sure. Should he stay or should he go? The choice seemed like no choice at all.

Top-five pick or letter sweater? Face the Indianapolis Colts or Indiana Hoosiers? Advance to Go and collect millions, or settle for a Chance card?

Wheatley thought about it for a while, trusted his instincts and gave the NFL one of his famous crowbar stiff-arms.

He was staying for his senior season. A campus rejoiced.

Of course, the trouble with Chance cards is that sometimes they bear bad news. Wheatley got his on Wednesday, when X-rays revealed a second-degree separation of his right shoulder, caused by a hit he had taken during a contact drill a day earlier.

As soon as the initial prognosis was announced — Wheatley is a likely no-show for the season opener Sept. 3 against Boston College, and a maybe against Notre Dame Sept. 10 and Colorado Sept. 24 — you could almost hear the I-told-you-so's from second-guessers.

Wheatley, said his critics, took a huge, unnecessary financial risk by passing up the NFL. This is what he gets in return: his worst nightmare — another injury to the shoulder he hurt last season.

Some nightmare. If any of this bothers Wheatley, he isn't showing it.

"Even if I didn't get injured many would say, 'He still should have gone pro and taken the money,'" Wheatley said Friday. "I haven't lost anything I said I wanted to strive for. Sure, a Heisman would be nice, but a degree from Michigan, a Big Ten championship and the Rose Bowl is what my main goals were and still are at this time. Am I disappointed? Yes, but I'm not out for the season."

"Even if I didn't get injured many would say, 'He should have gone pro and take the money.'"

—Tyrone Wheatley

Seasoned Wheatley-watchers aren't surprised by the response. Other players would have gone into seclusion. Wheatley returned phone calls hours after the bad news.

Come to think of it, most other players in Wheatley's position wouldn't be at Michigan. They would have joined Faulk and ditched college for the pros.

"Honestly, Tyrone is just a little different guy and he'll do the unexpected thing," said Michigan Coach Gary Moeller, who didn't have a clue about Wheatley's senior season preferences until shortly before the Jan. 10 news conference.

As it turns out, Moeller and anyone else who hums "The Victors" in their sleep could have saved themselves a peptic ulcer or two by simply asking Wheatley about Monopoly. Understand the significance of those three yellow properties — Atlantic, Ventnor and Marvin Gardens — and in a weird sort of way you understand why. Wheatley is on scholarship and not on an NFL payroll.

"You got to have a plan," said Wheatley at the recent Big Ten media day. "You got to have a plan."

And Wheatley's plan goes like this: Never over-extend yourself. Never rush to a decision. Never change the plan.

So Wheatley wheels and deals until he collects all three Flamingos and lets everyone else battle for Boardwalk and Park Place in the volatile high-rent district. After all, what's the use of owning a blue property if you can't enjoy the view?

"The way a lot of guys get out of the game quickly is they buy early, then try to put hotels up and they have no money," Wheatley said. "Then if you hit me, you're out of the game. You mortgage your property and then I buy that mortgage."

"It's just patience. Just collect the rent and then you get enough money. Then you buy your houses."

Patience is mostly why Wheatley is back at Michigan. He could have left early and no one would have said boo, especially after he rushed for 1,357 yards and scored 17 touchdowns as a sophomore and 1,129 yards and 14 touchdowns as a junior. And just think what he might have done last year if Moeller hadn't stuck him on the Wolverine punt coverage team, where Wheatley first injured his shoulder while making a tackle against Illinois. He missed two games, including a crucial matchup against Wisconsin, which the Wolverines lost.

Now he faces a similar layoff. Team doctors will wait until next week to re-examine the newest injury, but when he does return to lineup it will be business as usual.

"I don't have a lot of fancy moves," Wheatley said. "It's just me and the trusty stiff-arm." Fancy or not, Wheatley was usually at his best when it counted most. He ripped through Notre Dame for 318 all-purpose yards and two scores.

Cross country team at head of pack

By Doug Durso
Senior Reporter

The SIUC men's cross country team has been picked top Dawg by the other coaches in the Missouri Valley Conference preseason poll.

SIUC received all 10 first place votes giving them 110 points while Illinois State is predicted second with 92 points.

Bill Cornell, coach of the team, said this is a place he is not comfortable with.

"I don't like being in the hot spot very much," he said. "I would much rather be the underdog."

Even though there is pressure being picked No. 1 the team should be able to handle it.

"If we stay healthy and continue to run the way we can, we should win," he said. "But you never know how things are going to work out."

He is most concerned with Illinois State, Southwest Missouri and Northern Iowa as a dark horse in a conference that returns 15 of its top 20 runners.

"Illinois State has a really good team returning and as their coach said 'they are not going to concede anything to us,'" he said.

"The conference has also really improved since Southwest Missouri State and Northern Iowa entered the conference."

Cornell is concerned about Northern Iowa even though they were ranked only fifth by the coaches.

"Northern Iowa always keeps quiet, but they were a strong team last year finishing third in the championship, and I expect them to be strong again this year."

The injuries are already starting to mount up for the squad as two of the teams' key runners, Neil Emberton and Martin Fysh, are battling with physical problems. Emberton, who had the best time at last year's championship, has a leg problem that has slowed down his practice time.

Martin Fysh has a pulled groin that has kept him from practicing at all.

Cornell said that besides the injuries, he thought the first week of practice went well.

"I was pretty impressed with the runners. They came in this year in good shape and are preparing well for the season," he said.

The squad opens up with one of its hardest meets of the year in the Kansas Invitational on Sept. 10. The Salukis will face nationally-ranked Kansas and Arkansas among others.

"We beat Kansas last year but they have two red-shirt runners coming in, and Arkansas is always one of the top teams in the country," Cornell said.

"We are getting a toughest competition early, so we will know how good we are after the first tournament."

Saluki volleyball team to test skills in Florida

By Sean Walker
Staff Reporter

The Saluki volleyball team will see if their preseason work has paid off as they travel to Tallahassee, Fla. for the Florida State University Invitational tournament this weekend.

The three team tournament, which includes Florida State, Iowa and SIUC, is part of a challenging non-conference schedule that the Dawgs will face before diving into the Missouri Valley Conference opener at Northern Illinois Sept. 9.

Senior setter Kim Cassidy said the trip will be a good opportunity to prepare the team for the MVC opener against Northern Iowa.

"This will be a real test for us," she said. "The tournament will show us what we have to work on before we play Northern Iowa."

"After practicing for so long, it's going to be great to finally play against someone. I've never been to Florida, so that will be pretty cool too."

SIUC assistant coach Jill Doty said the Salukis have a good shot at beating FSU.

"We play Florida State twice during the tournament, so with two looks at the same team, we should beat them," Doty said. "I look to see the entire Saluki team step up and give the other two team problems."

Junior outside hitter Beth Diehl said it is important to do well in games out of the Missouri Valley Conference.

"When it comes time for the NCAA tournament bids, it looks good for us if we do well against Big Ten and Southeastern Conference teams," she said.

"A lot of teams start the year off with easy teams to pad their records, but not SIUC."

"If we go down there and win, then not only have we made us look good, but the entire conference as well."

Junior right side hitter Heather Herdes said opening the season with a couple of big schools will give SIUC the confidence to beat anyone in the conference.

"If we go out and play well against a big team that will challenge us, I think that will set the tone for the year," she said. "We play each team in the conference twice throughout the year, so it is fun to play different teams."

The Salukis will play FSU at 6 p.m. Sept. 2, Iowa at 9 a.m. Sept. 3 and Florida State again Sept. 3 at 7 p.m.

Tai Chi competitor wins gold at first tournament

By Chris Clark
Staff Reporter

SIUC has another regional gold medal winner, but he is not a swimmer or a runner. James Francis, a student of Tai Chi, won the medal over the summer at the Central States Regional Championships, an eight state regional tournament, held this past summer in Kansas City, MO.

Francis had never entered a tournament of any sort before, but had been studying Tai Chi for eight years before entering this one. The gold medal came as a small shock to Francis.

"I was a little surprised, because I had never been in a tournament before," he said. "It was a new experience, and something I really hadn't seen before."

"I am very proud for what Jim has done," said Han Chao Hwang, Francis' Tai Chi teacher. "He is a very good student."

According to Francis, Tai Chi is a martial art that when done right and studied for the correct amount of time, will make students stronger, healthier and more flexible.

"Tai Chi differs from other martial arts in its method of practice," he said. "Because it is done slowly, it is easier to learn the correct movements and lessens the chance of injury."

Francis says he became interested in Tai Chi through a friend, and the rest is history.

"My friend told me a little about it, and I saw it on the board at the Recreation Center, and I signed up," he said. "I study it more for the health aspects rather than the competition."

Francis may be a champion, but he gives much of the credit for his success to his teacher.

"Master Hwang is probably as experienced, or more experienced, than anyone at the advanced level," Francis said. "He's been doing this for 35 years, and is a very good teacher."

After his tournament days are over, Francis hopes to teach Tai Chi to those willing to learn, as Hwang has done for him.

"Tai Chi has been passed on and taught for generations. I would like the opportunity to pass on the things that I have been taught by Master Hwang," Francis said.

Although he won the gold medal in his first competition, Francis says he will continue to compete. He looks forward to entering next year's regional tournament.
