PROPOSED BUILDING--This architect's model of the Humanities-Social Science Building, to be constructed near the center of the campus, shows its relation to other major buildings. This view, looking south, has the University Center in the background. To the right is an annex to Morris Library planned for the future. For details, see story this page.

Page Encourages Dissenters to Use Lawful Procedures

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Ray Page told the SIU Board of Trustees Saturday he intends to plead with each state university in Illinois to enforce lawfulness on dissenters.

Student Hit On Wall St.

BULLETIN

An SIU student was struck by a car and seriously injured on South Wall Street at approximately 10 p.m. Monday.

Ken Bauder, a senior from Chicago majoring in English, was hit near the University Traller Court on Wall Street in an unlighted area.

Further details of the accident were not available. Bauder lives at Mecca Dorm.

Doctor's Hospital reported that Bauder's condition was serious.

At the same time, Robert MacVicar, acting president of the University, said he is creating a study commission of faculty, administration and students to recommend a clear policy on handling dissent and protest, and on providing a free airing of discussion.

MacVicar, saying he believes the country is in its most crucial time since Pearl Harbor, indicated he believes existing machinery and rules at SIU may not be adequate to deal with current unrest.

Both speakers praised the students of SIU for what they termed their coolheadedness and peaceful approach to protest.

"I in no way question the right to dissent," Page said, but condemned tactics such as stopping interviewers from seeing students.

Last week some SIU faculty members announced they are distributing a petition asking the University to prohibit armed forces recruiters from appearing on campus.

Page specifically urged that recruiters should be guaranteed the right of peaceful activities on campus, and urged expulsion of students "who show disrespect for the law."

Page added that he will carry his plea for upholding the law to the governing board of each state university. The SIU Board, he said, was the first to meet since he decided to urge such action.

Mac Vicar said he was "aroused and stimulated both by what has happened in the country and in the state" and said he believes the matter is

Board Promised Results February On Survey of SIU Athletic Future

By John Epperheimer

released its report on May 9.

The SIU Board of Trustees was promised Saturday it could be ready for action on the future of intercollegiate athletics at Southern by February.

That is when President Delyte W. Morris returns from an around-the-world trip, to receive a set of recommendations on athletics from vice president for academic affairs Robert MacVicar.

MacVicar promised the Board members Saturday they would receive the same recommendations, along with reports of various councils, committees and commissions which have studied the problem for more than a year.

Members of the Board demonstrated an impatience to act on the athletics question, due in part to letters and petitions they say they have been receiving since the Commission to Study the Role of Athletics

This was the second consecutive meeting of the Board at which members reported they are under increasing pressure from the public to act on the future of athletics. And their comments indicate the pressure has been for expanding the scope of the program.

Dr. Martin Van Brown of Carbondale and Board chairman Kenneth L. Davis of Harrisburg, long identified as boosters of athletics, were the most vocal in urging prompt action. Members Lindell Sturgis and Melvin Lockard also spoke of the pressure they were under to make some decisions soon.

In reiterating a pledge he made at the last Board meeting, MacVicar promised President Morris would have three sets of alternative recommendations for athletics through the 1971-72 fiscal year--one for operations at approximately the present level, one for a higher level, and one for a top level.

At the same time, MacVicar revealed that many of the recommendations of the Study Commission have already been implemented, and that the athletics budget had been upped about $100,000 over last year, to nearly three-quarters of a million dollars. About one dollar in seven of this comes from student fees.

Among actions already taken, MacVicar listed these: hiring of assistant football coach James LaRue, and busi-

Woody Hall to Become Office Building in Fall

Sixteen-year-old Woody Hall will become SIU's newest office building next fall, and planning is underway for a major facelifting project in the center of the campus.

A major part of that facelifting will be the construction of a long, open Humanities-Social Sciences building, to stretch from just North of the University Center to the home of President Morris.

The building's ground floor will contain classrooms and offices, and will feature a covered walkway over the same area which now carries thousands of students past "temporary" barracks constructed in the 1940s. These buildings will be torn down.

Being planned for future consideration, the SIU Board of Trustees learned Saturday, is an addition to Morris Library, designed initially to provide space for two million volumes.

FEE DEADLINE NEARS--This was the scene Monday afternoon in the Bursar's office as hundreds of students tried to pay their fees before Wednesday's 4 p.m. deadline. Graduate students will have until Jan. 15 to pay fees. No payments for the student insurance plan will be accepted after Jan. 6, the last day for late registration, according to Bursar's office personnel.

Trustees Board Approves Director, Two Professors

A director of the newly established Department of Religious Studies and two visiting professors in the Departments of Technology and Agricultural Industries, were approved at the recent SIU Board of Trustees meeting. They headed a short list of faculty and staff changes presented by Acting President Robert W. MacVicar.

John F. Hayward was named professor of philosophy and director of religious studies. Hayward, 50, received the Ph.D. degree from the University of Chicago and has served as professor of theology at Meadville Theological School of Lombard College, Chicago. He is the author of "Existentialism and Religious Liberalism." Religion courses, formerly taught by the various denominational foundations at the Carbondale campus, now are consolidated as a department in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Ivan Hostetler, formerly a professor at North Carolina

State University, will serve during the winter and spring quarters as visiting professor in the School of Technology.

Willard P. Ranney will come to a visiting professor in agricultural industries. He holds a Ph.D. degree from the University of Minnesota and has been a professor at the University of Tennessee.

Library Addition Plans Told to SIU Trustees

Consulting architects said the library addition would be constructed to provide for still more future expansion. They recommended that the addition be constructed on the east side of the library, and extend almost to the new Humanities - Social Sciences building.

Seven-and-one-half million dollars has been allocated by the Illinois Building Authority for the Humanities-Social Sciences building.

A new home for President Morris will be planned for construction southwest of Campus Lake. His home, office and many offices of the University administration will be torn down to make way for the new Humanities-Social Sciences building.

Morris and other administrators will move to Anthony Hall, where the south wing will be renovated. Woody Hall will be used in the future as "surge" office space--accommodating those departments and schools which are displaced by construction or expanded beyond their present capacities. Bonds on the 422-bed dormitory, now housing coeds, will be retired this year, 29 years ahead of schedule.

Also slated for work soon are Shryock Auditorium and Parkinson Laboratory. Both will be renovated and air conditioned.

Work is being completed on Old Main, now housing the SIU museum. Completion of the University Center and work on an addition to it will begin next spring.

Letters to the Editor:

Barring Recruiters Is Wrong Approach

Faculty members circulating a petition asking the administration to bar armed forces recruiters from campus are misguided.

Their anger at Selective Service director Lewis Hershey's pronouncement that protesters should be drafted is commendable. But barring recruiters would be a negative step.

Among the justifiable outrage at the policies of a man too old and tradition-bound to hold his influential office, a point is being missed.

It is this: the recruiters also have rights. It is their right to come on campus, if accredited by the University, to seek students for service.

By denying them this right, the faculty members will also have shut off the privileges and convenience of a group of students the faculty members seem to choose to ignore: those who wish to seek induction by the recruiters. They too must be considered, as much as the recruiters who wish to come on campus or the students who wish to protest without fear of retaliation from the Selective Service.

A more commendable plan of action would be to press for the administration to cease providing information to draft boards, or for Hershey's plans to be blocked.

Dissenters (or their sympathizers) must not support actions against the rights of others solely because they protest the usurpation of their own rights.

It is to this very point that State Superintendent of Public Instruction Ray Page spoke at the SIU Board of Trustees meeting Saturday. At that same meeting, acting president Robert MacVicar spoke of the great urgency of the atmosphere on campus and created a commission to recommend a definitive University policy on such matters.

One can not help but think their actions were tied to such things as the faculty's petition. They are to be commended on their action, and the faculty members circulating the petition are to be condemned for their narrow and negative approach to a large and serious problem.

John Epperheimer

War Weary

The American people are weary of war, but hopefully the majority will not become unrealistic enough to start demanding "out of Vietnam" along with today's young pacifists.

These pacifists, who think of themselves as liberal intellectuals or humanitarians, are completely illogical in their thinking. They do not seem to realize that if the United States quits this war and never fights another, it shall surrender the world to armed predators with fewer scruples than the pacifists now contend the U.S. has. This obviously is not what the humanitarians want, but this is where their logic is leading them.

Revulsion against war—any war for any cause—is understandable. War is on television every day, and lately it seems to bear the blame for everything unpleasant—from race riots to high tax rates. Even to the Negro militants the war seems just another device by which the white power structure is avoiding racial equalization.

If the U.S. does pull out of Vietnam now, it could soon be finished as a world power, unwilling to help less fortunate nations and incapable of protecting its own world interests.

No one can prove that war is anything but cruel and barbarous. No one likes war, but some seem to tolerate it better than others. It is hoped that the majority of the American people will not be so taken in by these pacifists that their vision is clouded and their thinking, too, becomes unrealistic.

Margaret Perez

Acceptable Protest Needs Definition

A petition is being circulated among the faculty of SIU which calls upon the Acting President of the University, Dr. MacVicar, to suspend on-campus recruiting by the various armed services until such time as the Government will agree to instruct local draft boards not to reclassify and subject to immediate induction deferred students who have been involved in protests. I have signed the petition because I believe that the University ought to be deeply concerned with this matter. But I write this letter to state some reservations I have about the petition and the stand the University ought to take.

The petition does not say—and this is its greatest weakness—what kind of protests the University ought to strive to protect by this measure, nor does it state what form permissible protest should take. It is this very issue, however, which must be clarified before the University or its members can legitimately be called upon to take a stand. I write to you in the hope of clarifying these issues.

Students are citizens and have both the rights and obligations of citizens. As such they should be afforded the protections given by the constitution, in such matters as due process of law etc. Students are not only citizens but also members of a community of scholars and as such they are subject to the rules and regulations governing that community. If their conduct in expressing their views on campus violates the regulations of the University, then the University has the right to sanction their behavior.

While it is not possible, strictly speaking, always to separate the two activities of citizen and student with regard to every individual acting in every situation, it is plain that such matters as placard carrying demonstrations on campus, the right to pass out literature to fellow students and faculty, and the right to walk out of a class room or lecture hall as a means of expressing disagreement with Government or University policy or on any other issue involving the open free expression of ideas, on such matters the University must take a stand.

For those of us who view the university as a market place for the free, open exchange of ideas, the paramount question must always be one of judging how actions of one sort or another affect the market. Clearly, the Government's position—in so far as it threatens to punish participants in demonstrations which are conducted by students, on campus, and for the purpose of informing students, faculty and others of their views—will have an adverse effect on the free exchange of ideas, for it says in effect that certain views concerning the conduct of the war may not compete for acceptance here on pain of Government sanction. We must, I believe, protest this kind of intervention. The rules governing the market place must be made by those who participate in it—the sellers and their customers.

It also seems to me, however, that the manner in which student protests have been carried out must also be stipulated. Their conduct in recent months on a number of American university campuses has also been in clear violation of the rules governing the operation of the market place. The rules state that all legitimate commodities, and even trivial ones in most cases, must be admitted to the market to compete for acceptance, not simply those that are "safe", or those which are approved or even those which please the ears of students. In these terms Army recruiters, Chemical representatives, hippies other others must all be made welcome. But they must be made welcome only when they come to hawk their wares, not when they come here to cut off debate!

Student protesters have put themselves in much the same position as the Government regarding their actions in the market place at times. The Government has sought to restrict debate by drafting protesters and thus removing them from participation in the free exchange of ideas; the students have often sought to restrict debate by barring entrance to the market place or, once admitted, to drown out the voices of sellers with cat calls, sit-ins, etc. Both actions are inimical to the healthy functioning of the University and we are all bound to use whatever means we have to tear down these barriers to our work.

So long as these are understood to be the basic issues, then the University must, I think, take a stand. To do otherwise is to obfuscate its first obligation—to provide a vehicle for the exchange of ideas. When that obligation is challenged, whether by government, or by students or by others, we must act immediately and decisively.

We at Southern Illinois, students and faculty alike, can take pride in having so far appreciated and respected the rules governing University life. We have some close at times to losing sight of the real issue, but so far have managed to make a place in the market for all who wish to sell their wares.

That's Life

To the Editor: What is my life? I don't know. I've never had it. The schools have my life. Money has my life. Who gave me away? Who sold myself away from me?

I want to be reasonable—to live practically and with sense. Don't assume my cares are ethereal. I'm just scared, that's all, just scared. Why fear? Because suddenly my owners are throwing my estranged life to me—to me of all people.

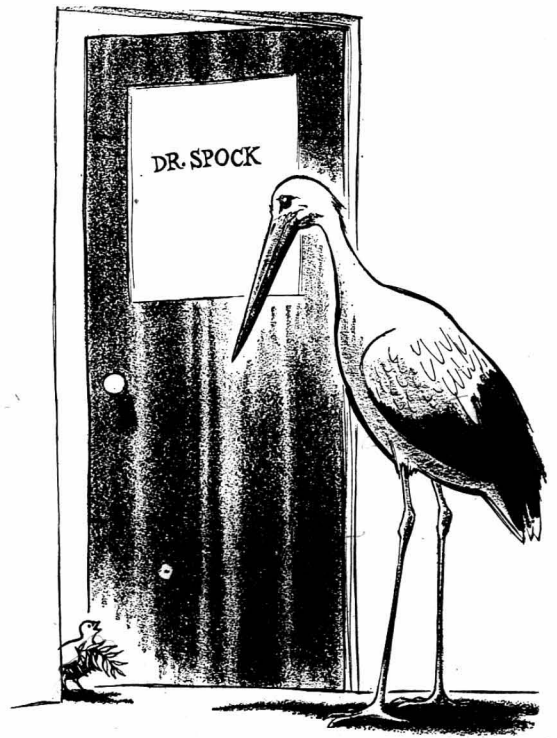

I don't know what to do. A bull session won't help. My parents are far from me. Only God knows; but, I don't know God. It's frightening to have a life, especially your own. What shall I do with it?

The Doctor Is Out

Sad Products of Our Penal Systems

In The Country Squire,
Kansas City, Mo.

It was just a year ago this month that I first wrote about the Rat Pak—a group of boys from Prairie Village and Leawood who were causing all sorts of serious problems in the community.

A few days ago I met once more with three of those in the original group—three who had been among the most active. Gary, Charley and Steve recently had been released from jail. In fact, the trio had served five different jail terms in the past year.

We talked for nearly two hours in The Squire office. And from the moment they started talking I knew things were different. These weren't the boys I'd known a year ago. Then they had been cocky, a little confused and a lot more youthful. But now most of the cockiness was gone, the confusion was a different kind of confusion and most of the youthfulness had vanished.

Jail didn't add a thing to those boys. It didn't make them good, it didn't make them bad. There had been no attempt at rehabilitation inside the jails. It just took a year out of their lives—a lonely, isolated year that drove them deeper inside themselves. It left them with the same problems they started with—only now the problems were a year older, a year more entrenched.

I was never more aware of our failure to come to the aid of the boy in trouble as I sat there with three who a year ago I had known needed help. But instead, they had only been thrust down a little farther by a society that seemingly doesn't care.

They told about the Johnson County Detention Home, the Johnson County jail, the Boys Industrial School in Topeka—and the Jackson County jail. They'd been in them all. And what did they bring out? More of the same things they went in with—despair, feelings of inferiority, loneliness and that bugaboo of the released convict—resentment against all the people who have it made.

And now that they're out, their prospects for jobs are slim. Gary explained why. He wore a khaki army-type jacket and blue jeans. His hair needed cutting.

"We don't have a high school diploma, we've got a police record—and we've been in the Rat Pak," Gary said. "Nobody will take a chance on us."

Gary did work for a while at a car wash where they paid him $1.00 an hour. Charley had a job as a bus boy at Indian Hills Country Club, but then someone found out he'd been in the Rat Pak—and they let him go. Soon after he was back in jail.

The Rat Pak doesn't exist any more. In fact, except for these three, the group seldom gets together. Soon after the articles came out last year, a combination of things hit the boys. The one that hurt the most was a crackdown by the law. Some went to jail, others broke away to lead lives of their own.

Gary explained where some of the members are now.

Dennis ("The Boy in the Filling Station") joined the Army and is in Texas. In fact, Gary proudly carries a picture of Dennis in uniform.

Jan has a job and was recently separated from his wife. He still lives in the area.

Pole operates a service station, is married and has a child.

Carl has a job, and he and his wife recently had their second child.

Another former member is back in high school, and according to Gary, is doing okay.

"We don't get together to raise hell any more," Charley said. "A few weeks ago Jan asked us to come out to some tavern and have a drink on a Saturday night, but we didn't go."

Not only has the gang broken up, but even the youthful hanger-ons who were always around now have gone other directions, too, they said.

"A year ago, you couldn't find glue in the stores around here," Gary said. "We'd bought it all. We used to buy it up by the case—and so did a lot of other kids. But things have changed. We went away and a lot of things stopped."

What would you do if you had it to do over again? How would you keep from getting in trouble? We asked Gary.

"I'd finish school," Gary said. "And I'd be more sociable with all the kids. I'd make friends with everyone—not just certain guys."

And then Gary started to talk about the other kids—the ones at Shawnee Mission East. He'd gone there a while. And he believes that social pressures help push a guy into the kind of life he's had. Here's how he explained it:

"When we first went there we liked to wear long hair—and maybe our clothes weren't as nice as most of the other kids. So they made us outcasts, and pushed us together with guys that dress like us. Nobody would sit with us in the cafeteria. If we wanted to have friends, we had to bum around with guys just like us.

"We didn't choose each other," he said, looking at Charley and Steve. "The other kids sort of force you to make a certain choice of friends. It's like me saying you can be friends with him—or you won't have no friends at all."

Gary paused a moment and looked to the other two for approval. They nodded agreement. Then he went on:

"The kids at East looked down at us and called us hoods. They judged us by our hair—not what we were. I didn't want to judge them by their looks. After all, no two people have the same taste.

"They say we look grubby—and I guess we do. But they make us a minority group—and no minority group has a chance.

"When somebody looks different or gets in trouble, people should have more of an open mind. The Bible says 'Don't judge anybody' yet nobody practices it."

Charley said that the first time he got in trouble a lot of kids stopped speaking to him.

"You know they're talking about you," Gary added. "It drives you inside, and you start sneaking around."

They told about the jails they've been in. Month after month where they've lived in the "tanks" with all sorts of people. Jails that teach nothing and give nothing except sordidness, toughness and an insight into how to be a smoother criminal.

For a period during the past year, Gary was out of jail. That's when he took part in the Seven Steps program at Lansing—the one where the convicts there try and help boys in trouble. But despite some hopeful signs that he might be on the right track, Gary soon violated his parole and went back to jail.

Now that he's out, he still believes in the Seven Steps program—but admits that he hasn't been going to the meetings. Neither have Charley or Steve.

We asked Gary what kind of homes the boys came from—the ones he met in jail.

"Everybody I know says their folks were never close to them," Gary said. "Their parents either weren't there or wouldn't talk to them."

Where do parents go wrong with their kids, we asked?

"Parents should have a firmer hand to help their children," Gary said seriously. "My folks used to tell me to go to my room and I'd just sneak out the window—and they never said a thing. Parents should be stricter—but not too strict.

"The trouble is they wait until you're older and then try and correct you. They don't seem to know that by the time you get to 10 years old you're set in your ways."

All three live in Prairie Village—and they complained that the city doesn't provide anything for kids to do.

"There's no bowling alley, no pool tables, no place to dance, nothing in Prairie Village for kids to do," Gary said. "What do they expect when kids get in trouble?"

Are you going to stay out of jail, we asked? All three shook their heads "no." But Gary talked about the struggle to stay out—and why most guys go back in. "Once you've been in jail, you say you'll never go back," Gary explained. "But a lot of guys do. That's because jail makes you feel so inferior. You feel so bad and when you're out you swear you'll get even.

"People look down on you for being in jail. You don't want to go back, but you feel like you want to show up all the guys driving around in those nice cars. You remember the things you learned in jail—how to pull jobs without getting caught. And before you know it, you don't care what happens to you. You just want to get even.

"If we only had jobs, I know we could stay out," Charley and Steve nodded in agreement.

"But nobody wants to give us a chance . . ."

State Cycle Laws Intended To Curb Injuries, Fatalities

Three new Illinois safety regulations aimed at cutting down the high fatality and injury rates among motorcyclists and their passengers will go into effect Jan. 1.

The most significant of the three requires that all Illinois motorcycle operators and passengers must wear approved protective headgear which must be accompanied by safety glasses, goggles or a transparent shield.

The second rule states that "motorcycle operators and passengers are required to ride astride only, and upon the permanent regular seat or saddle."

In addition, "the operators must not permit more than one other person to ride as a passenger, and must not permit a passenger to ride unless the motorcycle is designed to carry two people." Motorcycles designed to carry two persons must be equipped with permanent handgrips and adjustable footrests for the passenger.

According to the third regulation, "no motorcycle may be operated with handlebars rising more than 15 inches above the level of the seat."

Although the three new regulations become law Jan. 1, enforcement may not begin immediately. Both SIU Security Officer Thomas L. Lefler and Carbondale Police Chief Jack Hazel said they would await orders from the State Police before cracking down on violators.

Lt. Dan O'Brien at the State Police headquarters in Springfield also indicated that enforcement will not begin immediately after the first of the year.

MacVicar Explains Proposed Plan For Medical School 'Without Walls'

Acting SIU President Robert MacVicar has told the Board of Trustees more about his un-conventional proposal for a new medical school in Illinois.

He predicted Saturday "an interesting year ahead" as he fights for his concept of a "school without walls" designed to serve all this area of the state by decentralizing the physical facilities of a medical school.

Presented as an information item, the 20-page proposal was prepared by MacVicar at the request of the state's Planning Committee for Education in the Health Fields.

The plan proposes a shortened but more comprehensive M.D. program; an interlocking system of existing universities and hospitals; and a separate but coordinated medical research unit and computerized information program.

MacVicar criticized medical education as it now stands, saying it is often redundant and is too long a process.

He said the system he is proposing is feasible because state schools have strong departments in the biological and behavioral sciences basic to medicine, and that many areas in the state have regional medical centers not being utilized for education.

Obviously referring to the University of Illinois medical school in Chicago, he said proponents of the conventional approach to medical education would not be pleased with the plan. He mentioned "the only state-supported medical school" and said those present could "draw their own conclusions" concerning which school he was referring to.

He cited medical centers in Rockford, Peoria, Springfield, Quincy, Bloomington, Decatur, Champaign-Urbana, St. Louis metro-east and Carbondale as resources not now being used for medical education.

MacVicar's proposal would eliminate two years from the process of obtaining an M.D. degree. A stringent four-year undergraduate program followed by a second phase upon entering medical school equivalent to the current second year would accomplish this shortening of the process.

A category of "medical aides" would provide paraprofessional care, mainly for emergency treatment and diagnostic care, and would help relieve the need for more general practitioners.

Medical students would go through a two-year clinical-professional program, with emphasis on experience, and a final professional year geared to particular interest.

"Medinet," part of MacVicar's proposal, would be a statewide information system combining computers, closed and open circuit TV and data-transmission systems to link the hospital and universities.

nness manager for athletics James Barrett; increasing travel funds; making improvements south of the Arena, including parking lots, baseball field bleachers and a new baseball practice field; completion of engineering studies for a new stadium and preparation of two alternate plans for golf courses on both campuses.

On the Edwardsville campus, MacVicar noted that intercollegiate athletics have been initiated with the hiring of Harry Gallatin as athletics director; beginning of basketball and soccer; plans for baseball and golf in the spring, and preparation of an application for associate membership in the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA).

John S. Rendleman, vice president for business affairs, in commenting on the feasibility of constructing a new stadium, said he thought that financing could be arranged. Cost estimates for a 30,000 seat stadium have been approximately $6 million.

"In my opinion," Rendleman added, "we should either discontinue football or build a new stadium when the new General Offices building is constructed."

The General Offices building, to house administrative offices, will be built on the north edge of McAndrew Stadium, which has been without lighting since the old system failed last year.

3 SIU Students Held in Burglary

Three SIU students have been arrested by Carbondale Police after an investigation of a burglary at Wallace Chevrolet on November 29.

Mario Solis 20, Chicago; George Dee Wilson 20, Midlothian, and James T. Williams 20, Markham, appeared Monday in Jackson County Court on a charge of burglary. Bond was set at $2,000 each and continued their case until January 4, 1968 at 9 a.m.

Police said entrance into the building was gained by kicking in a small door on the North side of the building then unlocking the large sliding door. Four tires, and two automobile carburetors were reported missing from the building.

The same detachment also sponsored another Korean foster child in 1964, who, after two years, was transferred to another supporting program. The Foster Parents' Plan is a non-profit organization.

Solis is currently on probation in Jackson County for theft of SIU property.

House Votes Budget Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted Monday to force a cut of $4.1 billion in government spending during the fiscal year ending next June 30.

It sent to the Senate a bill requiring federal agencies to trim personnel costs by 2 per cent and slash other controllable expenditures by 10 per cent.

The economy plan had been proposed by the Johnson administration as part of its campaign for a 10 per cent surtax.

A tossing of rolls was countered by the pitching of mashed potatoes and broccoli Sunday in the Stevenson Arms cafeteria.

Bruce Potts, Junior, from Carlyle, and a resident of the dormitory, reported some 12 to 14 residents were involved in the plastering.

Stevenson Arms was rated the number one among dormitories during the past school year for providing good food. Potts said that during the summer the food was "excellent" but the dorm "is now serving poorly prepared food."

Dale Boatright, junior from Carlyle and a dorm resident said the food quality is not the same as it was the beginning of the quarter.

He added that a lot of dissatisfaction has arisen over the fact that residents must move their belongings out of their rooms over the Christmas vacation.

Boatright reported that firecrackers were ignited at 2 p.m. Sunday afternoon and were still being fired at 3 a.m. Monday morning.

W. B. Giles, director of the dormitory, said the food-throwing incident involved a disagreement between residents. He added that the food is excellent and that the dorm sponsors a food committee system through which residents approve or disapprove of menus.

Giles cited the firecrackers as "malicious mischief" which resulted from final week tension.

Much of the rising pressure building up is related to the freshmen housed in the dorm, he said.

Giles said the dorm broke no contract by moving out residents' belongings so he can house 175 visiting basketball players that will play in the Carbondale Holiday Tournament.

SIU Governance Bid Rejected

CHICAGO (AP)—The Citizens Advisory Committee voted Monday to recommend that governance of a new senior college in the Springfield area be assigned to the University of Illinois.

It also decided to suggest that the governing role for a new senior college in a suburban area south of Chicago be given to the Board of Governors.

The recommendations will be passed along to a special committee of the Illinois Board of Higher Education, which plans to meet on Dec. 18 and Dec. 20 in Chicago.

The special committee had called for advice of three other groups. The Faculty Advisory Committee recommended that the Board of Regents govern the Springfield college and the Board of Governors run the Chicago area college. The Presidents Advisory Committee suggested that the Board of Governors operate both proposed new colleges.

The first vote was to recommend that the governing body take over immediately and that its assignment be "not temporary." The language may have been rooted in a proposal from SIU that it develop one of the campuses for a five-year period. The voice vote was unanimous.

Robert MacVicar, acting president of SIU, said Southern Illinois would be a logical choice.

The proposal from the University of Illinois for development of an educationally autonomous campus in Springfield, Henry said, "has been with the intent of serving the people of Illinois in a way the university at this time is uniquely and appropriately qualified to do."

MacVicar recalled that the SIU trustees had suggested that they handle development of one of the campuses for a five-year period. Ultimately, he said, governance could be turned over to whichever system proved compatible.

He said SIU had successful experience in developing a new campus.

"We think we have expertise and experience that should be put to use," he said.

Supreme Court Kills Subversive Act Section

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Supreme Court Monday struck down a section of the Subversive Activities Control Act of 1950 that made it a crime for members of "Communist-action" organizations to work in a "defense facility."

Chief Justice Earl Warren said, in the 6-2 decision, the provision "unconstitutionally abridges right of association protected by the First Amendment."

The section struck down makes defense-plant work a crime for any member of an organization that has been ordered to register as a Communist-action group.

Warren said the court recognizes that Congress can prescribe penalties for spies and saboteurs, that sensitive defense industries can be put off limits and that the government can bar access to secret defense information.

But the 1950 section, he said, "quite literally establishes guilt by association alone, without any need to establish that an individual's association poses the threat feared by the government in prescribing it. The inhibiting effect on the exercise of First Amendment rights is clear."

The ruling, which drew a dissent from Justices Byron R. White and John M. Harlan, is another in a series of court decisions severely limiting the scope of the 1950 law.

Two years ago the high court said Communist party members could not be required to register with the government because compulsion would violate the Fifth Amendment guarantee against self incrimination.

Students, Citizens, Businessmen of Carbondale WE NEED OUR ST. LOUIS TRAINS

1. How many students will go to school elsewhere because of loss of transportation?
2. Why does Alto Pass have an overpass over railroad tracks built by the State?
3. Why do Cobden and Jonesboro have overpasses from one side of town to the other built by the State when their populations are 900 and 2,000 respectively?
4. Are these towns more forward than Carbondale?
5. Why can't we have an underpass and walkway for students at the Mill Street crossing?
6. Why do our city officials wish to support the cut-off of rail service to our city?
7. Who is going to hire the 50 or more railway employees when they lose their jobs? Some already have.
8. What industry is going into a city without transportation?
9. How much money in taxes will be lost to city and county?
10. How much money would the Carbondale business people and the city lose if all union people did their shopping elsewhere?
11. Why haven't the Rail Union and the workers been called to meetings on rail re-location when it is their livelihood they are talking about?
12. Why weren't the workers consulted when the cut-off of the passenger trains was brought up? Before decisions were made and opinions formed? We, the railmen and women, live here too.
13. Why shouldn't the St. Louis trains stay? They only block crossings for less than 5 minutes per day. Trains 15 and 16 run at 2 a.m. and 4:30 a.m. What traffic do they block?
14. How would this help the majority of the people when over 1,000,000 dollars each year shall leave the city and area?
15. Why must we, the railroad people, lose homes we have paid on for years and have to move away?

We the employees do not have the answers to all of the above questions. However we do have this to say:

If the students, citizens, and business people of Carbondale don't write to the Interstate Commerce Commission, Washington D.C., making a complaint and asking for trains 101-102-152-105-15-16 to remain in service we all shall suffer.

Salukis Cool in Win Over Arizona

Although the Salukis shot a cool 29 per cent from the field, Coach Jack Hartman was pleased with Southern's victory over Arizona State, 62-59.

"This was our best game to date, although inexperience still hurt us," Hartman said. "Arizona State also had a very fine defense."

While the Sun Devils indeed did have a good defense, Southern's own defense was not exactly lacking, as SIU held Arizona State to only 23 field goals in 80 attempts.

"SIU has got a real fine defense," Sun Devils' Coach Ned Wulk said after the game. "All of Jack's teams do."

The Saluki defense held Arizona State to 29 points below its season average. The Sun Devils came into the Arena with a 2-1 record and an average of 88 points per game.

While Arizona State's front-line of Bob Edwards, Willie Harris and Jeff Mackey averaged 6'8" per man, Southern still outrebounded the Sun Devils 63-55. The man most responsible for that was Chuck Benson, who grabbed off 17 rebounds.

Following Benson in rebounds were Willie Griffin with nine and Dick Garrett and Bruce Butchko with eight apiece.

Garrett was a surprise Saluki starter at guard after playing last year and the first three games of this season at forward. The 6'3" junior responded with 19 points, 10 coming in the second half.

Replacing Garrett at forward was Howard Keene, who didn't score but picked off four rebounds. When Keene went out, Jay Westcott came in, and scored 11 points and snared five rebounds.

With 6'6" Keene in there, we strengthen our rebounding," Hartman said, "And with Westcott we increased our scoring punch."

The difference in the game was determined at the free throw line. While the Sun Devils converted on 13 of 16 from charity stripe, Southern hit on 22 of 29 attempts.

Southern committed 14 fouls while Arizona State was charged with 20.

Southern's only sustained scoring drive was near the end of the contest when Griffin converted two free throws, Garrett made a technical, the Sun Devils' second of the contest, and followed with a long jumper. Griffin and Westcott then followed with a field goal apiece.

The Sun Devils then followed with three field goals, but Garrett's layup gave the Salukis 60 points, and put the game out of reach for Arizona State.

Beside Garrett and Westcott, other Saluki scorers were Butchko with 13, Benson with eight, Griffin with six and Bobby Jackson with two.

Juarez Rosbrough did not score.

SIU was still bothered with turnovers. They had 17.

In a preliminary contest, the SIU freshmen were defeated by one of the best junior college teams in the country, Paducah, by a 78-73 score. Mike Hessick had 19 points and 19 rebounds to lead the frosh.
