Clinton to reduce White House staff

The Baltimore Sun

WASHINGTON—Saying he would tighten his own belt before asking voters to do the same, President Clinton announced Tuesday that the White House staff would be trimmed to fulfill a campaign promise, but critics immediately accused him of playing statistical games.

Clinton announced that he would reduce the executive staff by 350 positions, from the 1,394 employees of the Bush administration on Election Day last year to a projected 1,044 on Oct. 1 this year, the start of fiscal 1994.

The reduction was designed to match Clinton's campaign pledge to cut the White House staff by 25 percent. He also promised to reduce federal administration costs by 3 percent during his first term and slash the 2.2 million federal payroll, excluding postal workers, by 100,000 jobs, mainly through attrition.

Clinton's biggest single cutback will be administered to the office of the drug czar, a high-profile White House unit during the Reagan and Bush years. Clinton will reduce its staff from 146 to 25, putting most of the work back to the agencies directly involved in the war on drugs. A White House statement said the office had become "a political dumping ground" during the Bush administration.

The first lady's staff has also been reduced, officials said, but they were unable to say by exactly how many. The office of the president itself will be reduced from 461 to 419, and the executive

SIUC spring enrollment decreases

By Jeremy Finley
Special Assignment Writer

The spring enrollment at SIUC is down possibly because of a decreasing number of high school graduates in the state, an enrollment official said.

Spring enrollment totals 23,794 and the on-campus count is 21,014.

Roland R.E. Keim, director of admissions and records, said enrollment for spring will be down 1.3 percent, a drop of 304 students from last spring's enrollment.

Kiem said the decrease in enrollment was expected.

"We expected the number to decline," he said. "The spring of 1992 was down, the fall of 1992 was down, and so we expected the same for this spring."

The cause of the decline cannot be attributed to one problem, Kiem said.

A possibility for the drop in enrollment is the decreasing number of graduating high school seniors in the state, he said.

"Because Illinois is experiencing a drop of high school graduates, we will see an even fewer number in 1994," Kiem said.

Ross Hodel, spokesman for the Illinois Board of Higher Education, said since 1988, the number of high school graduates has decreased.

Kiem said the increase in 1995 could be the result of a new group of baby boomers.

Hodel said the enrollment has decreased in

Faculty Senate to vote on salary raise at SIUC

By Tracy Moss
Administration Writer

The Faculty Senate will vote Tuesday on a resolution supporting a 1.5 percent salary increase for the faculty.

Allan Karnes, chairman of the budget committee, said the Board of Trustees will vote on the increase Thursday, so it is important that the board realize the proposed salary increase has the faculty's support.

"It is important to let the board know the constituency groups on campus support the increase," Karnes said.

Karnes said the SIUC faculty salary level is 10 to 15 percent below salary levels of other state universities. He said this increase is important to attract and retain good faculty members.

Karnes said the proposed salary increase would represent between $1 million and $1.5 million and would benefit the economy of Southern Illinois as well as the University.

"That money will end up almost entirely being spent and invested in the community," Karnes said.

The Faculty Senate also will vote Tuesday on a resolution supporting implementation of the Clean Air Policy.

Jervis Underwood, Faculty Senate president, said the Civil Service Council already passed a Clean Air Policy calling for a smoke-free campus by July 1, 1995, but the council decided to move the date up to July 1, 1993,

Some residents concerned with proposed housing hike

By Shawna Donovan
General Assignment Writer

Some Evergreen Terrace residents are petitioning in opposition of a proposed housing fee increase.

Housing Director Edward Jones will try to explain the need for the increase for Southern Hills and Evergreen Terrace family housing tonight at the Graduate and Professional Student Council meeting.

Kim Huffman, Evergreen Terrace Residence Council president, said the rate increase is unreasonable.

"The increase was a surprise to us, (Housing) came to us and dropped it on our lap," Huffman said. "Some of us cannot afford it on a limited budget."

The proposed increase is $12 a month and will be presented Thursday morning to the SIU Board of Trustees as part of a fee increase package for all residential housing on campus.

"GPSC has invited Jones to discuss the proposed increase," said Susan Hall, GPSC president. "Any members have an opportunity to respond to the increase."

Jones said the 4.5 to 4.7 percent increase could be spent on either building a new addition for residents or more maintenance for the current buildings.

"We want to spend it on a new

Salukis continue road swing at Tulsa

By Karyn Viverito
Sports Writer

SIUC and Tulsa could run neck-and-neck to finish as the two teams head into tonight's game.

The Salukis and the Golden Hurricane are the top teams in the Missouri Valley Conference in scoring, rebounds, field-goal percentage, steals and turnover margin.

Any way tonight's game is looked at, the two teams are going into this one pretty even.

Saluki head coach Rich Herrin said he agrees the two teams are similar in some areas.

"Tulsa plays a 94-foot game and we will see a lot of the press," he said. "They like to play a run-and-shoot game just like us."

Herrin said it will be key for SIUC to handle the press.

The only area where Tulsa seems to have an advantage is in 3-point shooting, where they are second in the MVC in 3-point percentage at .396 and lead the league averaging 7.7 treys a game.

Herrin said Tulsa's 3-point shooting is an explosive part of its game.

"One thing we will have to do in this game against Tulsa is get out to stop the 3-point shot," he said. "We have to be able to do that and get some transition baskets."

Tulsa, 6-4 in the MVC, now stands at fourth place after beating Creighton on the road, 70-63. Now in third place, SIUC is coming off a road loss to league-leading Drake, 87-74.

Herrin said his team has had some time to rest and he finds it to be in a good frame of mind.

"We have nothing to be down about because our last three games against Bradley, Indiana State and Drake have been good ones," he said. "We were in the game at Drake, but lost it on the boards, so we will pick up our game in that area and get back on track."

This is the first meeting between the Salukis and the Golden Hurricane this season. The last time the two teams met, Tulsa upset SIUC, 82-79, in the semi-finals of the MVC tourney, after SIUC swept the Hurricane in regular-season play.

Tulsa is in the thick of the race this season, but the Golden Hurricane will not be able to display their talents in postseason play. Tulsa was banned from postseason play by the NCAA due to sanctions placed on the TU athletic program because of violations in its track and field program.

Leading the Golden Hurricane are seniors Mark Morse and Jeff Malham.

At guard, Morse is averaging 16.7 points a game and has received MVC player of the week honors after he averaged 28.5 points, 5 steals, 4.5 assists and 3 rebounds in two games for Tulsa.

Salukis, fans need to come together for run at NCAAs

Yes, the basketball Salukis have had their troubles this season — and Saluki fans are coming down hard.

Already this season, the "Fire Rich Herrin" sign has been painted on the blocks next to the Recreation Center. It came right after the Jan. 30 loss to Southwest Missouri State on ESPN, a little bit earlier than last season's, when it was posted after the Salukis lost the chance to go to the NCAA tournament, losing to Tulsa in the Missouri Valley Conference tournament.

This season, a new sign joined the repeated request of the firing of Herrin and stated "Lowery and Bell are ball hogs".

That one is very interesting, because last season some fans complained that our guards couldn't score from the perimeter, or basically, score period.

Now that the Salukis have a balanced game, with more support from three-point land, Saluki fans shout throughout the game to get the ball inside to Saluki star Ashraf Amaya.

Fans ask: Where is Amaya's 20 points a game? Why is he not dominating on the floor?

Amaya is still averaging his points and his presence is very much felt. He's not averaging 19.4 points a game as he did last season, but the 16.8 points he's averaging this year is not too shabby.

The decrease means that a lot more people are getting involved in the offense. A team that gets four or five guys scoring in double figures every game has a better chance of being successful than a team that can only get big scoring from one player.

And let's face it, Amaya is not the best-kept secret in the league anymore.

Most college basketball preseason publications picked Amaya as the premier player of the conference. NBA scouts have heard the noise about him and the coaches are well aware of him after the astounding season he had last year.

The Salukis have changed their game a little because of the defensive pressure on Amaya, and for the most part, they have been successful, with a total of 16 wins on the season and only six losses.

Four of those losses have come in conference play, including an embarrassing loss on the road to then Missouri Valley cellar team Creighton.

This is not the time to start criticizing the Salukis. It is easy to get on that track, but it is time to put forth support and look at the future of the Salukis this season.

The Salukis do not seem to be a happy team. Where are the smiles and the high fives on the floor during the game?

They are not playing with much emotion, but are playing with what looks to be a lot of tension. The answers as to why are not apparent.

The last thing this program needs is people naming the Salukis ball hogs. It is also not wise to send a message to the players that they need to start looking in the classifieds for a new coach.

Keeping it up will be a sure way to keep the Salukis out of the NCAAs.

Ashe paved way for many African-American players

The Sporting News

In a dormitory on the campus of Pepperdine University in Malibu, Calif., Lex Carrington took a moment to reflect on his past and on his future.

And on a man who helped make them both possible.

"Arthur was the first one of us to come through," says Carrington, a freshman. "He showed us that we could play the game."

Carrington is 18 years old and African American. And very talented at tennis. And because Arthur Ashe showed him that he could play the game, Carrington is one of a handful of young players poised to become the next black tennis star.

The next Arthur Ashe.

There are others just as ready to reach that level, including MaliVai Washington and Bryan Shelton, who already have turned pro and achieved a modicum of success. J.J. Jackson, a touch younger, is about to join them on the tour, all with the hope that they can stay on the other side of the wall that Ashe broke down in professional tennis.

None of them, though, knew Ashe like Carrington did. As the son of Art Carrington—a former touring pro on the satellite circuits and one of the country's

Byrd continues to make progress

Newsday

NEW YORK—On Super Bowl Sunday, Dennis Byrd told a national television audience that his hope was to walk unassisted in 10 days. Nine days later, the partially paralyzed New York Jet remains optimistic about achieving his goal.

Byrd, who broke his neck months ago, continues to make outstanding progress during rehabilitation at Mount Sinai Medical Center in Manhattan. Just last week, he walked approximately 60 feet with the assistance of two physical therapists, according to teammate and close friend Marvin Washington.

"He walked 60 to 75 feet, holding the guys' shoulders just for balance,"

Washington said Monday. "I think it's just a matter of time before he walks without assistance."

According to Washington, Byrd walked between the therapists, with one hand on each shoulder.

"It wasn't like they were carrying him or anything," Washington said. "He was holding on with only his hands."

She was in Washington Tuesday for a White House interview. Reno, 54, has been on a White House short list for the nation's top law-enforcement job, the sources said. But within the last 24 hours, Reno has vaulted to "the top of the short list," one source close to the Clinton administration believes.

Braun plans trip to Carbondale; will attend dedication of center

By Jeremy Finley
Politics Writer

U.S. Sen. Carol Mosely Braun will be in Carbondale Thursday for the dedication of a community center named in her honor.

Braun, D-Chicago, will come around noon to the Lake Heights Housing Development at 511 South Lake Heights for the opening of its community center.

Tracy King, resident coordinator, said the senator represents everything the Carol Mosley Braun Community Center will stand for.

"We decided to name it after her because of what she represents," she said. "She is a role model. She shows where hard work can get you."

King said the center is an effort of the Lake Heights resident organization to provide programs and services for the families in the public housing development.

"Our staff needs the center to offer to the kids and the families what is available to them," she said.

The center mainly will provide programs for the children in the housing development, but it also is open to rent for events for the residents, King said.

"We want to give the kids something better, especially when school gets out," she said.

King said tutorial and other programs will be available to the children, and the center also can be rented for other events such as bible studies.

James Seed, executive director of the Jackson County Housing Authority, said the residents of the Lake Heights development wanted help contacting Braun about the dedication of the center.

Seed said his staff talked with Braun and her representatives to find a time when Braun could be there for the center's dedication.

"She very graciously agreed to do so," he said.

Martha Allen, spokeswoman for Braun, said Braun will base her speech on the predominately single mothers that will be in the audience.

"It will be a motivational speech," she said. "She will encourage them to finish their education and to stay off drugs, that kind of thing."

King said individuals are needed to help for the tutorial program. If interested, call Jackie Greer at 549-0341.

Work to begin on science center

While a new biological sciences building will be equipped with the most modern laboratories and animal facilities, a retired University engineer remembers a time when campus science buildings lacked the simplest luxuries.

"When all these buildings were first built they didn't have air conditioning," said Carl Bretscher, a retired supervisor of architectural engineering at the physical plant.

Thursday marks the ceremonial ground-breaking for the biological science building, the newest addition to the College of Science.

Bretscher said the new building was preceded by Parkinson Laboratory and the Neckers buildings.

"Parkinson Laboratory was built back when this was a small teachers school, yet it was a very good science department," Bretscher said. "Around the '70s it got older and more obsolete."

Bretscher said Parkinson Laboratory had more than its share of uses in its earlier days.

"The attic served as the museum back then," Bretscher said. "The basement on the west end served as the physical plant and there were machine shops on the first floor."

Bretscher said Neckers was built during the radical time of riots and bomb scares.

"That was built in the bomb-issue years, back when the University was really growing," he said.

The new building will be occupied by the School of Medicine, the vivarium office of research and development and the College of Science.

The first floor of the building will be shared meeting and conference space among the three departments, said David Grobe, director of facilities planning.

"The building is being built primarily for research in the life sciences and other departments in

History month time to hail local leaders

BLACK HISTORY MONTH is a time to remember the struggles of African Americans and to celebrate the achievements. It is also a time to rededicate ourselves to working for the equality of all people.

In doing so, it is nearly impossible not to conjure up images of such great African American leaders as Martin Luther King Jr. and more recently, Spike Lee's compelling film portraying the powerful deeds of Malcolm X.

But many of our own leaders are right here in Southern Illinois, both at the University and within the community. These individuals have contributed to society greatly and should not go unrecognized.

From them, we can learn much about the past, present and the future as we celebrate Black History Month.

AT SIUC, LOCAL LEADERS such as Harriet Wilson Barlow, associate director of student development and co-chair of the University's committee for Black History Month, said this month's events should serve as an impetus to the continued study throughout the course of the year, not just during this month.

"America needs to be aware of her history. If we exclude certain parts for whatever reason, we became illiterate of our history and who we are," she said. Barlow said one of the accomplishments she is most proud of is that she is a second generation graduate of SIUC and has received three degrees.

Barlow carries the message that this month is for everyone. "I want people to realize that this is not just a month set aside for black folks. We all need to become aware."

OTHER GREAT LEADERS serve in the classroom. Anna Johnson, for example, is a ninth grade English teacher at Community High School. She is also a recipient of one of six distinguished educator awards for Illinois and a national educator's award.

She said it is important to connect with all people, regardless of race or gender.

Likewise, Linda Flowers, a first grade teacher at Parrish School in Carbondale and the president of the NAACP, said we will not know where we are going unless we know where we have been.

AS VICE PRESIDENT for academic affairs and provost, Benjamin Shepherd is the chief academic adviser of the University. Shepherd served as the keynote speaker at SIUC's Black History Month in 1992.

He said he views this month as a time of increasing awareness.

"I would hope it serves to improve relations between the races and to broaden all of our appreciation for the melting pot which gave rise to our society today.

Robert Buchanan, minister of the African Methodist Episcopal for the last 14 years, said people can all unite together if they become stronger Christians.

THERE ARE MANY MORE community African American leaders who have not been mentioned. What they each teach us is about ourselves and our future. Through them, we have learned that we must concentrate not just on the past but to study and learn from it to help the future.

Homosexuals miss minority status

The "boycott" of Colorado and the potential lifting of the homosexual ban in the military centers around whether or not homosexuals are a legitimate "minority" and therefore require special privileges.

However, the courts have held that there are three main criteria to be used to determine special status to "disadvantaged" minorities. Homosexuals satisfy none of the requirements (listed in the April 20, 1992 Citizen Magazine):

Requirement 1. They must have a history of a lack of adequate education or income. However, homosexuals have an average income of $55,000 compared to $32,000 for the average American and $12,000 for the disadvantaged African-American homes. The percentage of homosexuals that are college graduates are three times the rate for the average American.

Homosexuals hold managerial positions or professional positions at three times the rate of true minorities.

Requirement 2. True minorities should exhibit obvious, unchangeable or distinguished characteristics like race, color, gender or national origin. However, as Masters and Johnson have stated: "The genetic theory of homosexuality has been generally discarded today..."

Simon LeVay's homosexual study in Newsweek (Feb. 24, 1992) has been shown to be flawed. Kinsey's controversial work has even indicated that over 80 percent of the homosexuals shifted or changed the "sexual orientation" at least once. Those who practice homosexuality in prisons have shown to generally discontinue their behavior when released.

Requirement 3. "Protected" classes should be able to prove their political powerlessness. Yet the homosexual movement has tremendous political clout.

Homosexuals have won protected status in five states and 90 cities. They have positions in Congress, have forced Levi's to boycott the Boy Scouts, have implemented homosexual promoting curricula in schools, etc. Homosexual groups like ACT-UP vandalize and terrorize and are not arrested.

Homosexuals do not qualify for protected minority status. As an African-American pastor in Kansas City Missouri put it: "The Freedom Bus that went to Selma was never intended to go on to Sodom." — Wayne Helmer, professor, mechanical engineering and energy processes

Israel on defensive in actions involving Palestinian expulsion

This letter is responding to the outlandish charges made towards the Israeli government in a recent letter to the editor.

The writer claims the Israeli government has been "systematically and intentionally killing, torturing and expelling Palestinians."

The writer's charges have no basis. Israel has never provoked any violent confrontations with either the Palestinians or the neighboring Arab countries. Israel's surrounding nations have continually threatened and attacked Israel for the last 45 years. Since 1987 and the beginning of the organized Arab uprising within the country (the Intifada), the Israelis have had to protect their soldiers and their innocent citizens from the frequent violent acts of terrorism.

Israel is the only democratic country in an area of the world in which it is bordered by nations ruled by fascist rulers and military dictators that show a complete disregard for human rights.

The Israelis employ a judicial system similar to ours in the United States. If the expulsion of the 400 Palestinians was unjust, each of these individuals is given a right to an appeal to overturn the expulsion.

By listening to the appeals on an individual basis, this will ensure the individuals responsible for the random acts of terrorism will not be allowed to continue their destructive behavior on the innocent citizens of Israel. — Benjamin Goldman, sophomore, biological science

Protests create irony; Shawnee hurt either way

Another amusing incident was reported by the Daily Egyptian on Jan. 27 that may have gone unnoticed by many.

While protesting the "immoral" destruction of the forest environment at the Shawnee timber sale, the "environmentalists" quietly helped themselves to nature's bounty and built a nice little fire to keep warm.

If the first act of resource exploitation is wrong, isn't the second? — Carl Huettelman, researcher II, plant and soil science because the Environmental Protection Agency has declared second-hand smoke to be a second-class carcinogen.

"If the Faculty Senate passes this resolution, it will be supporting the resolution of the Civil Service Council to move the date for implementation of the policy to July of 1993," Underwood said.

The University has a policy now that restricts smoking in a number of areas.

The senate also is in the process of filling a new position for vice president of institutional advancement, which was created in the reorganization of administrative structures a year ago.

Underwood said the position is an expansion of the SIU Foundation presidential office. He said the new vice president will be involved in development, fundraising and alumni relations.

Underwood said a search process was conducted to fill the position, but the process did not produce satisfactory candidates. He said the senate will vote Tuesday on a resolution to speed up the search process.

Possible tax rate increase looked at by Clinton staff

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—President Clinton's administration is weighing an increase in the corporate income tax rate to put it in line with a likely new top personal income tax rate of 36 percent, administration officials said Monday.

A higher corporate tax rate would generate about $5 billion to $6 billion a year in revenues for the federal government, a relatively modest amount in a $1.5 trillion federal budget.

all higher education institutions in the state.

In fall 1992, public colleges dropped enrollment by 1.2 percent, he said.

Community colleges dropped 0.003 percent and private colleges are down 0.006 percent.

Kiem said the spring figures reflect drops in student components, including undergraduate, new, continuing, transfer and off-campus students.

"They all contribute the decline," he said. "There can't be one reason. It has to do with all the components."

Kiem said he does not expect the drop in enrollment to effect the financial stability of the University because the decrease was expected.

Kay Allen, SIUC budget analyst, said the drop was expected and more will be known after the 10th week of the semester when the wavers are usually completed.

social center for the residents at the Evergreen Terrace. The building would include a new study room and library, additional space for recreation, social and office activities," Jones said.

"In addition, there will be a shelter for children. We thought it was what they wanted. The project will be funded by the increase. The other suggestion is for more maintenance."

Huffman said the additional building would be unnecessary and there should not be an increase at all.

"We do not need this building. We need speed bumps, but not this building."

Huffman said. "If there is an increase, it should be put back into maintenance."

Jones said whether there is an increase now, the issues will have to be faced in some time.

"If we do not get the increase, it will only be short term. The maintenance will be deferred," Jones said.

"If there is one, Evergreen Terrace will not look like it did five years ago. It was an awful sight."

pronounced dead.

Hall said students questioning previous disputes, frisking techniques and training of staff at the nightclub were hoping to see a meeting to discuss these matters.

GPSIC and the African Student Association were organizing a meeting Monday when Carbondale Police Chief Don Strom called with a similar idea.

That idea has resulted in the closed meeting, where City Manager Jeff Doherty, Strom, Checkers representative David Kuan, and representatives from GPSIC, the Undergraduate Student Government, and the Black Affairs Council will discuss the questions about the nightclub, he said.

Willie Chatman, the SIUC student who led the march to Carbondale police after the Rodney King verdict, was asked to sit in during the meeting because of the respect he has earned as an activist, Hall said.

Hall said he hopes to discuss the Dram Shop insurance of bar owners concerning intoxicated patrons and the damage they could do.

He also wants to discuss the frisking policy of the nightclub, the doorman and bouncers training and the certification of the staff.

"We are also concerned that weight and strength should not be predominantly more important than reasoning," he said.

Strom said the meeting is a positive move for the entire community to make.

Chatman said the dangerous atmosphere he and others have felt at Checkers has brought him to take action in the meeting.

"The potential harm and tense atmosphere created by the bouncers, has taken away from the social atmosphere of the bar," he said.

Chatman said his time serving in the armed forces enabled him to visit bars around the world, and his treatment at Checkers has been the worst.

"If (Checkers) can't change the way their staff is trained and certified, I would rather see the place shut down," he said.

A spokesman from Checkers could not be reached for a comment about the meeting.

Police are expected to finish their investigation Thursday and report to the state's attorney on whether charges will be filed.

mansion staff will shrink from 95 to 89.

In what White House chief of staff Thomas L. McLarty called "real and symbolic" cutbacks, Clinton also restricted door-to-door, in-house service to just two White House aides, opened the White House mess—the executive restaurant—to all White House workers, and ordered a review of the big-ticket items of presidential travel and security.

The only two members of his staff who will be ferried between home and office are security adviser Anthony Lake and his deputy Samuel Berger. Previously six staffers had limo privileges. McLarty said he was offered the privilege but declined it.

Tuesday's economies were a prelude to wider government cutbacks being announced Wednesday and to the "sacrifices" Clinton said he will ask of the general public and business next week when he outlines his economic program in his State of the Union address. Clinton will prepare voters for the belt-tightening during a town meeting Wednesday in Detroit, which will link him with audiences in Seattle, Miami and Atlanta.

"We in government cannot ask the American people to change if we will not do the same," he said Tuesday. "The government must do more and make do with less."

Criticism of Clinton's announcement centered on his exclusion from the cutbacks of two of the largest executive branch agencies, the Office of Management and Budget and the U.S. Trade Representative's Office. Between them, they employed 738 in December 1992.

"It's arbitrary to leave them out. Right away there's game-playing there," said Murray Weidenbaum, chief economic adviser to former President Reagan in the early 1980s. "To selectively pick a few offices and leave out others, there's no conceptual basis for doing it. This is gamesmanship, but it didn't start with this administration."

Clinton said: "This is one of the few times any president has shrunk the size of the White House staff."

Psychological study uses scenarios to help define sexual harassment

By Jeffrey Wheeler
General Assignment Writer

Because attention on sexual harassment is increasing in society and at the workplace, an SIUC researcher intends to find an exact definition for it.

Barbara Yanico, associate professor of psychology, is conducting research this semester to discover what kinds of evidence people use when deciding whether sexual harassment has actually occurred.

Yanico said the study asks participants to pretend they are deciding the verdict in an alleged sexual harassment case. After their decision is made, the participants are asked to go back and indicate the exact pieces of evidence that influenced the decision most. The case used for the study is fairly ambiguous, forcing participants to use their own judgment.

"A lot of previous studies have used very clear-cut cases of sexual harassment. This case is more like real life in that there are two conflicting stories," Yanico said.

A similar study to this one was conducted three years ago by Barbara Burian, who was an SIUC doctoral student at the time.

Yanico and Burian decided to amend the study and run it again primarily to get a better understanding of what people's perceptions of sexual harassment are. However, a secondary consideration was the potential for change in attitudes in the wake of the increased publicity sexual harassment has received.

Peggy Stockdale, assistant professor of psychology who studies sexual harassment, said the research of sexual harassment is important for several reasons.

"There is no clear-cut theory about what causes sexual harassment," Stockdale said. "It's a matter that affects a large number of lives, and it's important to make work places and schools free from behavior or incidents that create disturbing situations."

"Research is needed to tease out factors that effect the way people perceive harassing behavior," Stockdale said.

Students prime victims of flu bugs during winter

By Jonathan Senft
Health Writer

This is the time of year influenza strikes most of its victims, but students can take precautions to avoid the bug.

According to the Illinois Department of Public Health, this is the time of year when reports of the flu increase. It can strike anyone, especially those in crowded living conditions, which makes students prime victims for the virus.

The department also reports that the flu ranks as the sixth leading cause of death in America. Last year there were 123 million minor episodes of the flu. It caused people 262 million sick days and cost the country $10.6 billion.

The flu is an upper respiratory infection that lasts between two to five days. Although most know what it is like to have flu symptoms—fever, headache, sore throat—most cases are not documented. The flu, if not taken care of, can result in death.

According to the National Centers for Disease Control, Illinois has had more regional cases in the past week than most other states. Also on the national level, 121 deaths have been reported since Jan. 1. So far this year there have been four documented serious cases of influenza in Southern Illinois.

Susan McSherry, Marion regional coordinator of the Department of Health, said the virus usually is found by general diagnosis, first by the symptoms, then by the presence in the community.

"Although the signs are characteristic of the virus," she said, "only 50 percent of the victims end up showing the classical symptoms. The symptoms are a fever, usually between 101 and 102 degrees, muscle soreness, headaches that occur abruptly and a runny nose. In some cases the eyes are more sensitive to light." The spread of the disease heavily depends on environmental factors.

According to the NCDC, the virus spreads easier where there are people living in close or crowded quarters.

"Although signs are characteristic of the virus, only 50 percent of the victims show classical symptoms."

—Susan McSherry

"The disease is spread on tiny infected droplets. It is moved through the air on the aerosolized particles and then breathed in. It's also spread by direct contact, but not as often," McSherry said.

In order for a case to be documented, throat cultures are done. If the case becomes confirmed, doctors keep an eye out for more to come.

The virus is divided into two classifications, A and B.

Type A usually affects all age groups. It has moderate to severe effects on the victims, and usually strikes during the winter months.

So far this year, there has been one documented report of it in Carbondale.

Type B is milder than type A. It affects more children than adults and usually occurs in warmer months.

There is an opportunity for immunization from the virus, however.

"People should highly consider influenza shots. The vaccine protects between 70 and 90 percent of those who receive it," McSherry said. "The shots must be received once a year, however."

The viruses that cause flu frequently change. As a result, the vaccine constantly is changing also, the NCDC said.

Because of this, a person who has had the flu in the past can become infected again.

Students may receive the shots at the SIUC health service between Oct. 19 and Dec. 19. This is the optimal time to receive the shots.

Elizabeth James, staff nurse for the health services, said in the past the cost has been free for the immunization, however this year it will be $2.55. The charge is what it costs to the health service for the vaccine.

Although there is no real cure for the virus, there are many suggestions that are made to help victims get through their sickness.

"The pain can be handled by pain-relieving medicine," McSherry said. "Children should avoid aspirin because of the dangers of Reyes syndrome. Also Erimantidine is used flu treatment, but rarely, and only on a case by case basis."

Pneumonia and Reyes syndrome also are complications that can come from the disease.

"Reyes syndrome occurs mostly in children, and is the sixth leading cause of death in children," McSherry said.

Although the Illinois Department of Public Health does periodic throat cultures to pinpoint the flu, often times results aren't accurate.

Chuck Jennings, an Illinois Department of Public Health administrator, said influenza really is not reportable.

"What we do is watch for any increased activity at all. This is the only way to realize if there is a problem," he said.

Sunscreen, soaps stop skin sickness

The Washington Post

To help reduce skin problems in winter, experts say: Put on protective clothing to minimize skin exposure outdoors. "Wear gloves, hats, mufflers, wind masks, anything to physically protect the skin," said Nelson Lee Novick, associate professor of dermatology at the Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York.

Apply a sunscreen every day. To reduce the risk of skin cancer, many dermatologists now recommend sunscreens all year long.

They advise using one with an SPF (sun-protection factor) of 15 or higher. Sunscreens are especially important for skiers and those spending time at high altitudes, where sun exposure is likely to be stronger.

Limit the number and duration of baths and showers. Best: two to five minutes in the water. "Taking a shower or bath every other day in the winter is reasonable," Novick said. Production of skin oils starts to decline at about age 25. Bathing further robs the skin of these oils.

Use mild, unscented, superfatted soaps. "I usually recommend Dove and Basis," said Joseph Bark.

dermatologist in Lexington, Ky. "But people should also avoid the liquid cleansers, which are very drying." Lather only key bacterial growth areas: under arms, the genital region, between buttocks and toes. Arms, hips, back and chest can usually suffice with a rinse and no soap.

Moisturize throughout the winter. Use products that contain the fewest possible ingredients and are less likely to cause skin irritation.

People with very dry skin may also want to try moisturizer containing urea or lactic acid. These substances are very effective at holding moisture in the skin.

But don't overlook inexpensive, old favorites. "Petroleum jelly is perfectly wonderful," said Barbara Reid, assistant clinical professor of dermatology at the University of Colorado Health Sciences Center in Denver. "It's cheap and simple; just don't use it on the face of someone with acne," since it is very greasy.

Apply moisturizing lotions after bathing or showering. First, pat, don't rub, excess moisture off the skin with a towel. Then liberally apply moisturizer. Athletes who need to shower more than once a day should be especially careful about moisturizing afterward. One tip for swimmers: Take a rinsing shower, without soap, right after chlorine. Then immediately apply bath oil.

Stephanie Duncan, director of health enhancement at the Prince George's County (Md.) YMCA, doesn't let cold weather hamper her workouts.

She jogs and walks outdoors. Indoors, she teaches bench classes, works out on the stair-climber and lifts weights.

All of which means that she often takes at least three showers every day.

And that, in turn, takes a toll on her skin, especially in the cold, dry winter months. "I just definitely have to moisturize a lot more" than in the summer, Duncan said.

Sisterhood of African-Americans exhibited for Black History Month

By Andy Graham
Entertainment Writer

While some groups celebrate Black History Month with lectures and exhibits but one group will attempt a more entertaining format to make their point.

Several female students in the Department of Black American Studies will be performing in a production today titled "Kaleidoscope: A Perspective Of The African American Woman."

"This program is a collage of poetry, prose and drama," said Harold Moses, professor of Black American Studies.

"Theatre is a powerful vehicle of political change."

The show will consist of performances by the students of eight different pieces by female African-American woman writers such as Toni Morrison, Linda Gross and Ntozake Shange, which will range from rap to poetry and drama narratives.

Songs by notable African-American women such as Sister Sledge, Aretha Franklin, Diana Ross and Whitney Houston will provide background music for the performances.

The primary theme of the show is womanhood, regardless of color or race.

The show has been redesigned to re-emphasize the plight of the African-American woman, said

Michelle R. Manning, student performer.

"This show is not all about being an African American or being a woman, it's about being a human being," Manning said. "Struggle knows no color."

Womanism is one of the topics that will be discussed in the program today.

"The issue of womanism transcends race, political, social and racial boundaries," Moses said. "This is a celebration of sisterhood, the bonding of women of color."

The program will take place at 7 p.m. in the Student Center Auditorium. Admission is free and the program is expected to last about an hour.

Role a two month-old male cocker-shepherd mix puppy, and Pallas-Athena, a nine-month-old female domestic cat want you to adopt them from the Murphysboro Humane Shelter. To find out more about them and other pets call the shelter at 457-2362.

Humane Society pets need people

By Angela L. Hyland
Environmental Writer

Long before visitors reach the Humane Society doors, they can hear the cries of the animals. Each year about 7,000 animals are brought to the shelter. Employees find homes for about 500. The rest are destroyed.

Some people believe college students are responsible for many of the strays, said Janet England, manager of Humane Society of Southern Illinois.

They assume students are unable to keep a pet in a new apartment or unable to take it home with them at the end of the year will abandon it, she said.

"Students have been given a bad rap," England said. "People assume they'll just dump off their pet—but we haven't noticed an increase in animals being dumped off either at the beginning or end of a semester."

Unwanted pets taken to the Humane Society by their owners have a better chance of being adopted than ones abandoned and brought in by animal control workers, she said.

"If owners bring them in, we'll have a history," England said. "If it's a stray, we have no clue how they were kept or if they've had their shots."

Employees wait seven days for owners to claim an animal. After that, it becomes Humane Society property.

"Many strays are either aggressive males or pregnant females and they're just not 'aceable,'" England said.

Most of the animals brought to the Humane Society are dogs and cats, but rabbits, ferrets, hamsters, birds, snakes — even sheep and pygmy goats — have ended up at the shelter.

"If it's sold as a pet, we'll get it," England said.

Two of the more unusual additions to the shelter are a pair of young, pot-bellied pigs.

"They just hang out and lead a pretty good life," England said. "We're not really looking for any one to adopt them, right now."

"Most of the people who come by asking about them are interested in breeding them," she said. "But, the world doesn't need any more pot bellied pigs. If they're ending up in shelters, there's too many of them."

The Humane Society is run entirely by donations and cannot afford to have animals spayed or neutered before they are adopted.

To ensure an animal's young do not end up one of the 6,500 animals put down annually by the agency, officials recommend having all pets spayed or neutered.

The cost varies depending on where the animal is taken, its size and its sex, said Kerrie Chambliss, a receptionist at the Animal Hospital. The cost at the Animal Hospital is between $40 and $90, she said. The animals are kept at the hospital for up to two days, she said, to ensure they do not consume food or water the night before the surgery.

"It's better to have (a female) spayed when they're young," Chambliss said. "If they've already been in heat it costs $15 more."

Some people do not fix their pets because they plan on finding homes for their animal's young, England said.

"People don't realize that every puppy and every kitten adds to the problem," she said. "If you're able to find homes for yours, it will just be taking away from someone else."

POWER & CHOICE

You have the POWER to maintain a healthy relationship with alcohol. Most college students make healthy CHOICES when drinking. The more of these healthy behaviors you CHOOSE, the greater your POWER over your health.

33% of SIUC students surveyed report they would prefer not to have alcohol available at parties they attend. (Up 10% from 1991). (Core, 1991, 1992)

In a survey at SIUC, 90% of women reported that they would prefer not to date men who drink heavily.

Any positive effects of alcohol work only at low dose levels. (1-2 drinks)

By alternating alcoholic and non-alcoholic drinks you slow the rise in blood alcohol concentration (BAC) and increase your drinking time.

Drug use by college students nationwide has dropped by over 50% in the last 10 years. (NIDA, 1990)

A 1989 survey of SIUC student attitudes toward drinking reports that 35% surveyed believe "you should never get drunk" and 95% believe drinking should not interfere with school.

Drinking party "punches" when you do not know the amount of alcohol present, increases your risk of over-intoxication, illness or injury.

Chugging drinks or playing drinking games increases risk of harm.

Food-poisoning scare may result in new system

The Washington Post

A meat inspector can't see it, or smell it, or feel it. Neither can a short-order chef or someone flipping burgers on a backyard barbecue. Microbiological contamination—the most serious public-health threat to the nation's food supply—can't be detected by human senses.

But the recent food-poisoning outbreak on the West Coast, in which hundreds of people became ill and two children died after highly virulent bacteria infected hamburgers at Jack in the Box restaurants has called into question the nation's meat-inspection system.

The entire system is based on a faulty premise, said James Marsden, vice president of scientific and technical affairs at the American Meat Institute, a trade association that represents meat packers and processors. "The inspection system was designed in 1906 to prevent diseased animals from entering the food chain. For that, it works beautifully," he said. But this was never the threat, he added. "It's microorganisms that cause human disease.

"All the inspectors in the world wouldn't have made any difference" in the recent poisonings, added Marsden. "Visual inspections have nothing to do with detecting microbial contamination."

Since 1985, three reports from the National Academy of Sciences have called for reforms of the nation's meat-inspection system.

The reports criticized the current system because it has not taken into account recent scientific research on meat contamination and has remained largely unchanged since the early 1900s.

None of the inspection systems in use at the time tested are "designed to detect or eliminate microbial or chemical hazards presented by meat products," according to a 1990 NAS report.

Last week, Secretary of Agriculture Mike Espy, appearing before a congressional subcommittee looking into the food poisonings, called for overhauling the meat-inspection program.

Developing a new system "from scratch," will take two or three years, he said. Espy outlined plans, including hiring more inspectors and encouraging the use of organic sprays to reduce bacteria on the surface of beef carcasses. He also recommended the use of explicit instructions for safe handling on the labels of raw meat and poultry and he pressed for approval of irradiation for raw beef.

Taking special precautions helps students avoid STDs

By Liz Niemann and Felina Santiago
Wellness Center

To Your Health

"I don't have any symptoms, so I can't have a sexually transmitted disease (STD), right?" Wrong.

All of the four most common STDs found on the SIUC campus; chlamydia, gonorrhea, herpes, and genital warts, can be asymptomatic or can be present with no symptoms.

This is important here at SIUC because those infected with an STD could be transmitting it to others without knowing it.

It is estimated that one in ten college students and one in four Americans between the ages of 15 and 24 has an STD.

These diseases can be transmitted through sexual intercourse or contact, including vaginal or anal intercourse and oral to genital contact.

If you are sexually active, the best way to protect yourself from contracting and STD is to become aware that it can happen to you and to be informed of what you can do to reduce your risks.

To protect yourself you can...

- Abstain from sexual activity.

■ Have a mutually monogamous relationship where both partners have been tested/treated. Choose not to become sexual until after test results have returned.

■ Limit the number of sexual partners and get to know your partners sexual history.

■ Use condoms with spermicidal lubricant plus your birth control method for each act of intercourse, from beginning to end.

■ Always use spermicidal foams or jellies.

■ Urinate before and after sex and wash the genital area with soap and water.

■ Never assume your partner will tell you, look and ask questions. Remember your partner may not know they have an STD.

You are responsible for taking care of your body.

For more information on STD's or sexual issues, contact the Student Health Program Wellness Center at 236-4441.

For STD confidential HIV/AIDS testing contact the Jackson County Health Department at 684-3143.

Police Blotter

SIUC Police charged a student with retail theft from the University Bookstore Monday.

SIUC Police arrested Manuel Tabora, 25, Monday morning. Employees of the bookstore spotted a person concealing an audio cassette and leaving the store without paying for it.

Tabora posted cash bond, and a court date was set for Feb. 25.

Carbondale Police are investigating a Saturday afternoon burglary.

An apartment at 714 S. College was entered sometime between 1 p.m. and 8 p.m. after a door was forced open to gain entry.

A Sony radio/CD cassette player, a Sony VCR and a black leather waist-length bag were reported stolen. The items and damages were valued at more than $1,000.

Individuals with information on the burglary can call Carbondale Crime Stoppers at 549-2677.

the College of Science," Grobe said.

Rhonda Feeber, departmental business manager of the School of Medicine, said the department has been requesting more space for the past few years.

"We've been documenting the need for space for the past five or six years and it took this long to get it through the system," Feeber said.

The building also will give a new look to the west side of campus.

"It will certainly have an effect on the west side of campus," Grobe said. "From the limited view I've had of the drawing, with its brick and masonry work, it will be quite an attractive structure."

Gov. Jim Edgar, President John C. Guyon, the Board of Trustees, and several state legislators will attend the ground-breaking ceremony.

Event stresses security issues, U.S. regulations

By Candace Samolinski
International Writer

The 1993 International Festival, dedicated to victims of the Pyramids apartment fire last December, has added a new event to increase safety awareness among international students.

The death of five international students in the fire raised the safety issue, and in response the International Student Council is sponsoring a safety seminar titled "Surviving in the United States" at 5 p.m. today in the Student Center Ballrooms A and B.

Organizations from around the community will present information on different safety procedures. Carbondale fire and police departments, the SIUC police department and the Wellness Center will be present.

"What we are trying to do is to make students aware of what to look for in housing as far as fire and life safety is concerned," said Cliff Manis, Carbondale fire chief.

Many international students are unaware of the different regulations on campus and in the city, Manis said.

"This seminar is geared toward international students to help them understand rules and regulations," said Sgt. Nelson Ferry of the SIUC police department.

International week kicks off with traditional food display

By Candace Samolinski
International Writer

The International Festival tried to leave a good taste in students' mouths on the first day during a cooking demonstration.

Six countries displayed traditional foods Tuesday in the Student Center, giving patrons the chance to taste the cuisine and get recipes.

"I am very happy with the turn out," said Nicholas Agrotis, president of the International Student Association. "This is the first event of the festival, and many people have told me they enjoyed the food."

Agrotis said many people seemed interested in getting recipes. About 40 people came to the event.

Shibaji Saha, a Bangladesh representative, said his group made four dishes for the demonstration: chicken curry in yogurt sauce, cauliflower curry, fish in ginger sauce and a traditional sweet meat.

"I am really glad they decided to have this during the festival," said Stacey Taheny, a freshman from Morton Grove. "I am interested in other cultures. I tried the food from Bangladesh—it was very good."

Other dishes included coconut rice from Malaysia prepared by Fatimah Jaafar, crab rangoon from Taiwan prepared by Chienhuei Wetherington and a Japanese nori roll prepared by Yukiko Tanaka.

The demonstration will continue on from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. today and Friday.

Study of major depression shows higher rate in Pentecostal groups

The Washington Post

The rate of major depression among Pentecostal Christians is three times higher than among members of other religious groups, according to a study of 2,850 North Carolina residents.

But whether this means that Pentecostal sects, a form of conservative Christianity, attract more depressed people or whether the prevalence of depression reflects a franker acknowledgement of emotional difficulties among Pentecostals, the authors cannot say.

The study, led by Keith G. Meador, assistant clinical professor of psychiatry at Vanderbilt University Medical Center, is one of the few to examine religious affiliation and mental health. Meador and his co-authors, who published their results in the December issue of the journal Hospital and Community Psychiatry, used data from a large study sponsored by the National Institute of Mental Health.

Researchers divided the survey respondents into six categories: mainline Protestant (which included Presbyterian, Methodist, Lutheran, Episcopalian, African Methodist Episcopal and Quaker); conservative Protestant (including Baptist and Seventh Day Adventist); Roman Catholic; Pentecostals (Church of God, Assembly of God); other (Unitarian, Jewish, Greek Orthodox, Muslim) and no religion (those who had no preference or refused to answer).

The age, race, socioeconomic status and gender distribution of the group reflected the population of North Carolina.

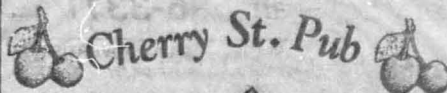

The authors found the rate of serious depression in the previous six months among Pentecostal Christians was 5.4 percent, compared to 1.7 percent for the entire survey group.

"One possible explanation for the increased prevalence of major depression among Pentecostals is ... that these groups frequently emphasize charismatic forms of healing and supernatural cures for illness," the authors write. Therefore, "religiously inclined persons experiencing the pain and distress of major depression might seek out such groups."

There are other possible explanations, the authors observe, among them that Pentecostal affiliation causes depression. "One could argue that despite the seemingly internally supportive milieu provided by Pentecostal groups, they simultaneously isolate members from the broader culture, thereby at least subtly fostering feelings of social-isolation and of powerlessness."

The other possibility, the authors point out, is that the findings are merely a chance occurrence.

Group wins financial aid video award

By Mikael Pyytel Business Writer

A radio and television student organization that specializes in television production won first place in a statewide video production contest to promote financial aid awareness.

Vernon Cowles, public relations manager for the SIUC chapter of Telpro, said Telpro used to have problems with inactivity, but winning the award shows the organization is back on track.

"Telpro is in a revival period and we are rebuilding it up to the powerful status that it once was," Cowles said. "We feel as though winning the contest puts us among the elite of the broadcasting organizations at the University."

The contest gave students from about 40 Illinois colleges and universities a chance to display their video production talents. Contestants submitted a 30-second video promoting a financial aid help line.

The Financial Aid Awareness Television Public Service Announcement Contest was sponsored by the Illinois Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators, the Illinois Association of College Admission Counselors, and the Illinois Student Assistance Commission.

Ruth Slottag, manager of media and community relations for ISAC, said that the help line will assist many people on various levels.

"The purpose of the help line is to answer any questions from parents or new or returning students about selecting a college and financing a college education," said Slottag.

The toll free help line number is 1-800-628-7939. It will be open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. through Friday Feb. 12. After Friday inquiries may be made at ISAC Client Support Services at (708) 942-8550 or (312) 793-3745 or (217) 782-2577, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Dr. J's basketball surgery cuts path to Hall of Fame

Newsday

To the surprise of no one, the legend of the fabulous Doctor J was certified when Julius Erving soared into the Hall of Fame during his first year of eligibility.

Erving, perhaps the most articulate ambassador that basketball has ever known, led an eight-player list of inductees. Also voted into the Hall were Bill Walton, Dick McGuire, Walt Bellamy, Dan Issel, Calvin Murphy, Ann Meyers and 7-foot Yuliana Semyonova, a former center for the Soviet Union women's national team.

Although Walton was on two National Basketball Association and two NCAA championship teams, Erving was the centerpiece player of the 1993 inductees. Professional basketball had its share of great athletes and exciting players before Erving, but there is little doubt that Erving elevated the game to new heights.

He possessed great physical gifts—extraordinary leaping ability and oversized hands. But Erving added the element of creativity, with his dunks being compared to windmills, helicopters, airplanes and various unidentified flying objects.

"He was one of a kind," former NBA coach Dick Motta once said. "I remember a game in Louisville when I was scouting some ABA players. A ball came off the backboard while he was jumping. You could watch the ball rotate because it was the ABA's red, white and blue ball. He was in the air, going by the basket when the ball came to him. He caught it with one hand while he was still in the air, reversed the spin, banked it off the backboard and it went in. I came out of my seat, just like everybody else in the arena."

Perhaps more than anyone, Erving understood his responsibility to help the game. Former San Antonio Spurs owner Angelo Drossos recalled when the American Basketball Association was struggling. Erving was with the Nets on a road trip to San Antonio.

"He left his hotel and walked to my office in downtown San Antonio," Drossos said.

"He asked what he could do to help the ABA survive. Can you imagine any other athlete doing that?"

Erving led the Nets to ABA championships in 1974 and 1976. He was probably the primary reason that four ABA teams were allowed to join the NBA in 1976. Erving's contract, however, was sold by the Nets to the 76ers before the 1976-77 season.

Erving won ABA MVP awards in 1974 and 1976, and was the NBA's MVP in 1981. He also led the 76ers to an NBA title in 1983. He averaged 28.7 points in five ABA seasons and 22.0 points in 11 NBA seasons. He scored 30,026 points in his career, third on the all-time NBA-ABA scoring list behind Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Wilt Chamberlain.

"I have been through many peaks and valleys as a basketball player," Erving said in Springfield, Mass., where the Hall is located.

"Such is the nature of the sport—winning, losing, cheering, crying. I am thankful to the millions of fans who with my family and friends touched me emotionally and spiritually. With their tears of sorrow, and of joy, I carry a feeling of oneness with them into these hallowed halls. Everything is racing through my head. I'm trying not to explode."

From modest roots on playground to NBA star, 'Doctor' was always in

Newsday

Appropriately, the man received his doctorate on the same playground on which he honed his skills. He was given the name Julius Winfield Erving Jr. at birth but, to a generation of fans and the selectors who elected him to the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame Monday, he forever will be Dr. J. It's an identification that, like the player himself, sprung from modest roots.

Leon Saunders was ultimately responsible. He was a teammate at Roosevelt High School, where he played neither as well nor as frequently as Erving. But he had a special talent that was very effective in pick-up games. Saunders could argue. Without a referee to call fouls, he would call them. He'd spot violations and almost always win the arguments that followed.

"I used to call him 'Professor,'" Erving recalled many years later, "because he always wanted to argue. In return, he'd always call me 'Doctor.' We went to college together and he'd call me 'Doctor' around the dorm and everything and it stuck."

Erving liked the sound so much that in the summer following his junior year at the University of Massachusetts—the same summer in which he signed with the Virginia Squires of the ABA—he brought the name with him to the famed Rucker Tournament in Harlem. When his moves and his swooping dunks inspired the public address announcer to call him Houdini, Black Moses and The Claw, Erving approached the man. "I already have a nickname," the player said. "Just call me Doctor."

In retrospect, they were two distinct people. The quiet, disciplined Erving who had both feet planted firmly on the ground and who was mature beyond his years, even as a child. And the flamboyant Dr. J who pushed the envelope of physical probability, who soared to unprecedented heights with a basketball in his huge palm.

At Roosevelt High, he literally grew into stardom. Erving didn't pass six feet until his junior year. He was the best player on the team then, but Coach Ray Wilson started five seniors and brought Erving off the bench. It wasn't until his senior year, when he was measured at 6-3, that his ability attracted interest from colleges.

It was immediately clear to observers that the player was extraordinary.

TU, from page 20

A 6-foot-6 center, Malham is averaging 13.1 points a game and ranks in the top 10 in the MVC in rebounds, averaging 5.6 a game.

Also coming on strong for the Hurricane in the past couple of games is freshman guard Cordell Love.

In two games last week, Love averaged 16 points and 5.5 rebounds. He scored 14 points in the second half to lead Tulsa over Creighton.

Senior forward Ashraf Amaya goes into the game against Tulsa leading SIUC, averaging 16.8 points a game. Senior guard Tyrone Bell (13) and junior guard Chris Lowery (12.7) join Amaya in leading the Saluki offense.

The Salukis come back off the road Saturday when Indiana State comes to the SIU Arena. Then, the Salukis hit the road for another three-game road swing.
