Students learn sappy lesson

Workshop teaches participants the art of tree-tapping

By Melissa Jakubowski
DE Assistant Features Editor

Matt Ewertowski decided to spend his Saturday afternoon standing in the middle of a forest waiting for a chance to taste one of nature's sweetest products. Ewertowski, a senior in business from Huntley, was one of 20 people who attended a two-hour workshop on making natural maple syrup at SIUC's Touch of Nature. The program is part of the Environmental Ed-Venture Programs offered at the outdoor facility.

Ewertowski said he saw the advertisements for the event and thought he would take advantage of the beautiful day.

"Most of my friends are out barbecuing, but I decided to come out in nature for the day," he said. "I know it's an unusual way to spend a Saturday, but I figured it might be interesting."

Participants were taken to the sugar bush — a sugar maple tree grove — to learn tree identification, tapping techniques, boiling procedures and syrup making.

John Wallace, an environmental educator with the program, said many people fail to realize the energy that goes into making maple syrup. He said the workshop tries to reacquaint people with nature and help them appreciate everyday products that are nature-made.

"So many people are used to going to the store and buying syrup," he said. "But when you're

USG creating advisory board for SPC funding

By Signe K. Skinion
Daily Egyptian Reporter

An Undergraduate Student Government proposal to change the funding process for the Student Programming Council could save the USG Finance Committee time and resources, committee members say.

David Vingren, Thompson Point senator and a member of USG's Finance Committee, said the senate is creating an advisory board that would closely monitor council funding.

"As it looks right now there would be three USG representatives, two Graduate and Professional Student Council representatives and two faculty members on the board," Vingren said. "This board would lessen the burden of funding SPC."

SPC sponsors various activities for students, such as movies and concerts, throughout the school year.

Eric Bottom, USG Finance Committee chairman and College of Business senator, said the proposal, still in planning stages, may also allow SPC to have representatives on the board, but they will not have a vote in the decisions.

"We're (USG) also considering other representatives to be on this board from Student Development, possibly the Black Affairs Council, International Student Council and Inter Greek Council," Bottom said. "But if the board gets too large, it won't be as effective."

The USG Finance Committee allocates about $400,000 a year to various organizations on campus, with about $200,000 of that money going to the four priority one organizations, such as SPC. The money comes from a percentage of the student activity fee taken by SIUC through student tuition and fees.

Vingren said through the proposal, the council would not have to go through the annual review and fee allocation process by the USG Finance Committee.

"The funding for SPC would come out of the student activity fee and go straight to SPC," Vingren said. "It would not touch USG's hands."

USG normally makes SPC go through an annual review and funding allocation procedure to receive funding for the next year.

Bottom said by taking the money straight from the student activity fee and giving a set amount to SPC, the time spent on reviewing council funds would be transferred to the board. He said this will make everyone's job easier.

Bottom said for the past three years, USG has allocated about $130,000 to the council to sponsor student events, and the advisory board would help to oversee the spending for the events, while not taking additional money from students.

"This process would take $3.60 (per student) from the student activity fee per semester to go to SPC only," Bottom said. "The students won't be paying more than what they already are, and SPC would

Speaker emphasizes self-education

Missouri state representative says knowledge, diploma not necessarily the same

By Tammy Taylor
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Schools are not necessarily places to receive knowledge because having a degree does not guarantee success, a speaker for Black History Month said Friday.

At a lecture in the Student Center, Lloyd Daniel, a member of the Missouri House of Representatives, said education is more than getting a degree.

Daniel's speech, titled "The Concept of Economic Democracy and the Liberation of Education," was sponsored by the Black Affairs Council.

Daniel said he knows many useful, talented and witty individuals who have not set foot on a campus. Daniel said Supreme Court Justice

Clarence Thomas is an example of an educated man who possesses no understanding of the struggle of the working class, women and people of color.

"A person can have two or three degrees and still be a damn fool," Daniel said.

Daniel, who is also a poet, educator and activist, stressed the importance of gaining knowledge through independent reading outside of school. He is the author of several publications including, "Liberation Education: A Strategy for the 21st Century."

He said in the 21st century, America's youth should take responsibility for leading the country.

He said individuals can accomplish this through involvement in movements aimed at cultural, economic, political and spiritual growth.

Black History Month

"Knowledge is the only thing the system can't take away," Daniel said. "And time is the only thing you can't get more of."

Aside from speaking on education, Daniel said Affirmative Action is still necessary in hiring minorities because nationality has nothing to do with one's abilities.

He said qualified people of all nationalities have been "passed over and discriminated against."

He also said the color of a person's skin does not reflect what is in the person's head.

Also, Daniel compared models of historical struggles for democracy to illustrate the importance of social justice.

He said past attempts by the United States to overthrow legitimate governments in places such as Cuba, Iran and Vietnam are examples of the dominance of the military elite.

"The greatest threat to peace on Earth is the United States," Daniel said.

Wil Sanders, Chairman of the Finance Committee and Director of Operations for Black Affairs Council, said he was pleased with student attendance at the speech.

"Very few speakers focus on specific points a listener can learn from and apply later," Sanders said. "But Lloyd Daniel was able to do just that."

RUSSIAN CONSUMER CULTURE CREATES GARBAGE — MOSCOW

One whiff of the Khimki landfill makes it abundantly clear: Capitalism stinks. To be fair, the dump was also smelly in Russia's Communist days. But back then, comrades threw out mainly organic waste — potato peels, stray cabbage leaves and the like. Moscow has moved way beyond the humble peasant garbage of Soviet days. The almighty consumer culture has arrived. And trendy young Russians have embraced it with glee: Western packaging — plastic, aluminum, cardboard — now clogs Moscow's three landfills. With no recycling programs and just one functioning incinerator, sanitation workers are struggling to cope. Confronted with the garbage explosion, sanitation workers have doubled the number of public trash cans in Moscow, to 40,000. But most of the receptacles still tend to be squat and small — throwbacks to the Communist era, when Russians strolling city streets had little to toss except cigarette butts and they tended to recycle almost everything that could be recycled.

CANADIANS TAKE OVER U.N. MISSION IN HAITI — TORONTO

As U.S. troops complete their withdrawal from Haiti this month, the unfinished job of bringing peace and order to the beleaguered country will be turned over to a diminished force of less than 2,000 United Nations peacekeepers under Canadian command. The U.N. Security Council reportedly is within days of establishing the mandate for a renewed international troop commitment to Haiti now that the 16-month-old, U.S.-led mission is being wrapped up with the departure of the last 1,700 U.S. personnel by month's end. Officials in Washington and Ottawa confirmed that Canada would be asked to increase its current military and police presence in Haiti and take charge of the U.N. mission there as early as next month.

CLINTON TESTS NEW PITCH ON VOTERS IN IOWA — IOWA CITY, Iowa

President Clinton, barnstorming the caucus state of Iowa on Saturday as an unopposed candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, is road-testing a new pitch to voters anxious about the economy: If you're feeling good, he'd like some credit — but if you're not, he still feels your pain. Clinton said he is trying to respond with the modest measures he outlined in his State of the Union Address last month: a higher minimum wage, continued federal support for student loans and better protection for health insurance consumers. The dilemma for Clinton, advisers say, is this: How can he persuade voters to give him some credit for economic good news without alienating voters, including low- and middle-income Democrats, who are angry about economic bad news?

FORBES VOWS COMMITMENT TO CONSERVATIVES — DES MOINES, Iowa

The last weekend of political skirmishing in Iowa flared into a supercharged test of the religious right's influence over the Republican presidential race, as millionaire publisher Steve Forbes continued efforts to prevent doubts about his commitment to the conservative social agenda from eroding his once-growing base of support. Trying to repel escalating charges from his opponents that he is a "social liberal," Forbes said he would reverse President Clinton's "don't ask, don't tell" policy on gays in the armed forces if advised to do so by military leaders. He also reaffirmed his acceptance of a constitutional amendment to ban abortion "if you had the culture with you," and insisted he opposed homosexual marriages.

CALIFORNIA 'FREEWAY KILLER' AWAITS DEATH — LOS ANGELES

William G. Bonin, a truck driver who scared his way into Southern California's consciousness 16 years ago with a terrifying string of hitchhiker murders led him to be dubbed the "Freeway Killer." Bonin, believed responsible for the sex killings of at least 21 young men and boys during a yearlong spree across several counties, sits on Death Row at San Quentin Prison awaiting a Feb. 23 execution date. If he is put to death, Bonin, now 49, would be the first California inmate to die by lethal injection and only the third executed since the U.S. Supreme Court reinstated the death penalty in 1976.

U.S. official: Surface mining a top priority

By C. Kuhlmeier
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Environmental concerns about coal mining are at the forefront of the U.S. Department of Interior's policy agenda, a department director said during a presentation at the Student Center Thursday.

Robert J. Uram, director of the Office of Surface Mining for the department, discussed regulatory and legislative trends in surface mining of coal and improvements in environmental mining techniques.

"There is a notion out there that surface mining is bad for the environment because of its reputation for accidents and environmental carelessness," Uram said.

"The truth is that the Government has been putting protective measures in place since the Surface Mining Act in 1977, which for the first time established minimum safety and environmental standards. We are helping to build a safer tomorrow for the mining industry today."

Instead of digging underground shafts and tunnels, surface mining involves gradually removing layers of earth, creating a deep pit.

In the past few years, there has been a lot of research on protective mining procedures, Uram said.

"Progress in areas such as hydrology, which has improved mine drainage and water displacement, and the use of fly ash, which is used as a type of grout to prevent water seepage in the mines, has greatly improved the quality of mining over the last decade," Uram said.

The state of the coal mining industry in Illinois is another issue of concern, John S. Mead, associate dean of the Graduate School and director of the Coal Research Center said after the presentation.

"The number of surface mines in Illinois has been cut in half over the past couple of years," Mead said. "A couple of reasons for that are the state's stiff clean air and pollution laws and the depth of the coal in the ground."

Mead attributes the expensive cost of mining in Illinois to exploitation of coal resources over the past 100 years.

Campus recognizes non-traditional students

By James Lyon

College can be a difficult time for some people. But according to the SIUC Student Development coordinator, college for someone with a family, who is a single parent or is going back to school after 20 years can be an extremely frustrating time.

Non-Traditional Student Services, in an effort to bring awareness to students on campus who fit the above categories, is sponsoring Non-Traditional Students' Week beginning today. "It is easy to forget sometimes that there are other students out there that are not just out of high school," Chuck van Rossum, coordinator of Student Development Transitional Programs and Non-Traditional Student Services, said. "People tend to associate college with the traditional student, when in fact only 20 percent of the students nationwide are considered traditional. We hope this week will bring a little attention to those students out there who may feel a little lost because of their circumstances." The programs scheduled are a series of speakers in the Thebes and Troy rooms of the Student Center between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. through the week.

Non-traditional students are welcome to bring their lunches and listen to lectures on topics from academic advising, successful non-traditional students and financial aid for non-traditional students.

There also is a special program on adult learning taking place at 3 p.m. Wednesday in the Missouri/Kaskaskia room of the Student Center, van Rossum said.

"The purpose of these speakers, as well as the adult learning program, is to focus on some of the difficulties people may face when deciding to go back to school," he said. "The adult learning session, for example, will focus on learning techniques for those who may have been out of school for a while and some techniques and strategies that work best."

Non-traditional students face a difficult time with their decision to go back to school, whether it is because of more training, or simply because a person wants to get a better job, van Rossum said.

He said that from his experience, school was very difficult after he got out of the military.

Eagle watching provides insight into local refuge

By Erik Bush
Daily Egyptian Reporter

They were not planes, but thousands of birds taking to the air, as some SIUC students stood watching the awesome display of nature firsthand Saturday through a trip to a local refuge sponsored by the Student Environmental Center.

As heavy fog descended upon the Union County National Wildlife Refuge, Cahleen Tracy, program coordinator for the center, attempted to outline the center's purpose and make points she said many people may miss in the realm of environmental awareness.

"It is not a matter of what issues the center can help address but how we can address them," Tracy said. "The Crab Orchard Incinerator, Shawnee logging — these are local issues facing immense financial battles from those people who do not care, but can pay, against those who care, but cannot pay. By offering discussion, we may be able to come up with some solutions to local problems."

Dawgs, Cats battle for blood rights

By Erik Bush
Daily Egyptian Reporter

With the score tied at one each, SIUC and Eastern Illinois University will fight like cats and Dawgs to claim the title of Blood Battle victor this week, says the area blood drive coordinator.

In what has become an annual skirmish for bragging rights, SIUC and the American Red Cross will hold a six-day blood drive as the University attempts to go one ahead of blood-collection rival Eastern Illinois University.

Vivian Ugent, regional American Red Cross blood drive coordinator, said this drive is crucial as the need for blood increases nationwide.

"With all the storms back east recently, a need for blood makes drives such as this very important," Ugent said.

"There is a national emergency in response to the extreme weather; 43 regions nationally have been shut down because of all the problems."

Last year, SIUC came back on the last day of the drive to beat Eastern with a collection of 1,276 pints to Eastern's 1,210, Ugent said.

"We would like to see more of everybody come out and donate," Ugent said. "We have added Trueblood Hall as a collection point, so students and faculty have another convenient location to donate."

Persons wanting to donate can sign up for an appointment in the Hall of Fame area of the Student Center or show up on a first-come, first-serve basis at any of the locations listed.

Donors will be given a mini-physical to screen for HIV, syphilis and hepatitis. Donors whose blood tests positive for any diseases will be notified confidentially.

Refreshments, a T-shirt and five-dollar Taco John's gift certificate will be given to all donors.

Carl Berry, Boomer Hall head resident and Uni versity Park drive coordinator, said bringing the drive to Trueblood Hall has many benefits for donors and volunteers alike.

"This is a convenient way for people to do something good for the community," he said. "The other housing areas have made space available for the drives and I just realized the Trueblood would work if people missed the other locations."

Those wanting to volunteer can contact Ugent at 457-5258. Help is needed for blood buddies, refreshment servers and registering appointments.

"This is an opportunity to give the real gift from the heart for Valentine's Day," Ugent said. "There are a wide variety of dates and times, so everyone will have the opportunity to donate."

The drive is being sponsored by the Saluki Volunteer Corps, the Daily Egyptian, American Red Cross, the Student Center Dining Service, Taco John's and the Public Relations Student Society of America.

BOT's Bosnia policy reassures University employees on duty

THE SIU BOARD OF TRUSTEES DECIDED TO make a contribution to the peacekeeping efforts in Bosnia-Herzegovina last Thursday.

A policy adopted at Thursday's board meeting will let SIU employees called to active duty with the peacekeeping mission rest a little less worried about their lives at home while they're helping with the peacekeeping effort.

The policy calls for employees that work at least half-time to remain on the SIU payroll for up to one year after they go to military duty.

We believe this action is a good idea. These people are making a sacrifice for our country. The least we should do, as a University, is make sure they do not suffer as a result of their service.

These employees won't receive full pay from the University. Instead, they will receive the difference between their military pay and their wages at SIU. Insurance and other benefits also will be kept intact while the employees are away.

GOV. JIM EDGAR ALONG WITH THE BOARD and SIU President Ted Sanders should be lauded for the policy.

Edgar recently signed an executive order, similar to SIU's new policy, which grants state employees who are called to duty for the peace-keeping mission. Edgar then asked the University to consider implementing a plan that would do the same thing for its employees.

Although there are only three employees at SIUC that have been called to help with peacekeeping efforts, the policy is still significant.

University Relations officials said they were not clear about one facet of the policy, however. Will the people serving in the peacekeeping mission be guaranteed the same position when they return from their service? is a question that remains unanswered.

We think if the policy does not insure that the employees on leave will have the same job waiting for them when they return that it should be modified to do so.

ADMITTEDLY, SUCH A MODIFICATION MAY not be needed for practical purposes. Only three SIU employees, all from the Carbondale campus, have been called to duty. Two of these are faculty members. The other is a physical plant employee. It is likely that these employees will pick up where they left off upon their return. It would be preferable to see this officially guaranteed though.

Despite the lack of this guarantee, the action is still commendable.

During Operation Desert Storm, SIU adopted a comparable plan to help employees from having financial problems when they were called to active duty.

We believe that action, coupled with the board's decision Thursday, shows a pattern of commitment on the University's part to helping people who serve all of us.

Quotable Quotes

"The fact that you ask the question answers it. It's like asking, 'Is there still racism in this country?' Racial progress in Hollywood is mostly cosmetic. Hollywood has always been a conservative place. It's about making money."

—Actor Danny Glover, response when asked if Hollywood had moved away from old stereotypes.

Letters to the Editors

Bias in search difficult to see

In a previous letter, I commented on law professor Darrell Dunham's charges concerning the law school's hiring procedures. I would like to respond as well to his charges concerning the law school dean search.

Professor Dunham claims that the law school "attempted to engage in only an internal search knowing that there would be only one candidate for the position." The fact is that any number of faculty members could have stepped forward as candidates if they so desired. Moreover, many faculty felt that there was at least one internal candidate that they were prepared to support for the position, and that in a time of limited resources an external search would have been unnecessarily costly (note that many, if not most, of the present SIUC deans were selected via internal searches). However, after consulting with various groups — law students, law alumni, friends in the legal profession and various SIUC officials — the faculty reversed its position and voted to recommend an external search. Therefore, it is difficult to understand Professor Dunham's point. Moreover, when the faculty initially voted to conduct an internal search, Professor Dunham was quoted in the Daily Egyptian as favoring an internal search.

Professor Dunham notes that only one internal candidate emerged and he was not a tenured faculty member. The issue, however, is not whether the candidate was already a tenured faculty member but whether he was qualified to be dean. That issue was not reached because the candidate withdrew prior to interviews, but most faculty members felt he was well qualified to be considered for the position.

Professor Dunham implies racial bias by stating that the "law school attempted to limit the search even though it was informed that an external minority candidate had shown interest in the position." Whether anyone outside the law school — minority or otherwise — was interested in the position was irrelevant to the faculty's initial preference for an internal search. Moreover, any implication of bias is groundless. As a member of the dean search committee, I can report that the applicants and nominees included women and minorities, all of whom were given full consideration.

Reader disagrees with artist

This is in response to Professor Jed Jackson's letter defending Michael Beam's obvious lack of talent, taste and academic achievement illustrated by doing little more than adding that special something omitted by the original.

His claim legitimizes making art by merely adding restroom graffiti as being perfectly normal. Professor Jackson should be more concerned with teaching Beam a marketable skill rather than practicing law by suggesting that Beam hide behind the First Amendment.

Beam's work leaves me wondering about his inspiration. Was it a deeper, mystical vision? A true insight? Was it that since the genitals were not more artistically presented, we should be made more aware of Mauldin's oversights in the original? My guess is that he thought to himself: Hey, I'll borrow someone else's work (lack of originality), play a juvenile prank, show that I can use design equipment, make my statement (dub), submit it for a grade and then hide behind my professors.

Although I agree with Professor Jackson's claim that this poor excuse for a doormat is protected under the Constitution, it's only because I can't argue that its message is inflammatory speech.

The only messages that I got from the work were that the artist had no real message and is simply not talented enough to produce an original piece worthy of some patron's hard-earned money.

The public must answer two important questions. Would you pay good money for this work and let it hang on your wall? Why are your taxes squandered to instructors and programs that do not produce people able to support themselves by using their gifts? We consumers are the ultimate critics and I know my taxes have been grossly misappropriated.

As a suggestion, the School of Art and Design should clean its house and maybe start adopting the drawing test found in many magazines (Can you draw me?) as a prerequisite for enrollment. There are too many starving artists out there, so maybe Beam should take Clinical Anatomy and quit looking for inspiration on the restroom wall. Sadly, he could end up a poet and not know it.

Southern Illinois youngsters learn water friendliness

By Mary Beth Arimond
Daily Egyptian Reporter

SIUC lifeguards are pooling their efforts for the Youth Swim, a program designed to teach area children how to swim.

On Saturday, SIUC students taught 73 children the basic stroke techniques, water friendliness and pool safety in Pulliam Hall pool under the direction of the Office of Intramural and Recreational Sports.

Paul Fawcett, aquatics coordinator of the Youth Swim, said the program, which runs twice every semester, was designed to teach children from 6 months to 18 years how to swim.

"Children needed to learn how to swim because they are surrounded by a series of lakes and water recreations, such as boating, in Southern Illinois," Fawcett said. "These kids will be able to save their lives if they know how to swim."

He said the Youth Swim teaches water adjustment to kids ranging from 6 months to three years.

"Parents participated in the swimming instruction with their kids," Fawcett said. "We also had a half-hour toddler class for 3 and 6-year-olds which had more instructors on hand."

Michelle Johnson, a senior in political science and philosophy from Olney and the on-site daily supervisor for Youth Swim, said children from 7-18 went through an advanced swim level. "It's like a workout class," Johnson said. "The kids learned how to be competitive."

She said parents were happy to get a closer look at what their children were learning.

"Pulliam Hall pool is designed better for swimming lessons than the Rec Center pool because the seating is right next to the pool rather than being up above," Johnson said.

Fawcett said some Youth Swim instructors teach the lessons because it could benefit them and their career, but there are others who teach because they care.

"People like Michelle don't need to instruct for her major; instead, she does it because she wants the kids to know how to perform a skill that will last a lifetime," he said.

Johnson said if students are interested in teaching or lifeguarding, they could apply at the Aquatics Desk in the Rec Center.

"We're looking for students who want to help children learn how to swim," she said. "They don't need their Water Safety Instructor certification, but they must demonstrate adequate skill and have a good rapport with the kids."

Johnson said being a swimming instructor is gratifying.

"It's great to see them go from not being able to put their face in the water to swimming across the pool," Johnson said.

Anyone interested in learning how to swim can sign up for a five-day session, from Feb. 19 to March 18. The sessions take place from 8:00 a.m. to noon every Saturday. The cost is $30 for the general public and $25 for any student or member of the SIUC Rec Center.

Despite bombing, British and Irish leaders to continue peace process

Los Angeles Times

LONDON—Confused and off balance in the wake of a deadly terrorist bomb that ripped through London's East End, British and Irish leaders across the political spectrum Saturday vowed not to abandon the 17-month-old Northern Ireland peace process despite the outlawed IRA's return to violence.

British Prime Minister John Major declared that "the prize of peace is too precious to be squandered," and the Irish government issued a statement insisting that negotiations are the only way to heal the divisions of Northern Ireland.

Gerry Adams, president of Sinn

Fein, the Irish Republican Army's legal political wing, agreed that talks now are more urgent than ever.

"We need to deal with that new situation and speedily get into the necessary negotiations to bring about a peace settlement," he said.

The IRA on Saturday erased any doubt about the origins of the attack by claiming responsibility for planting the bomb, which exploded in the basement of an office building, killing two people and injuring at least 36.

The blast left a swath of wreckage and broken glass across the city's docklands redevelopment area.

But perhaps more important for those trying to end the sectarian violence in Northern Ireland, it also destroyed some key assumptions about the power structure of the IRA and Adams' ability to control its actions. And it left the path toward peace littered with unanswered questions.

The attack marked the first major IRA terrorist action since it agreed in August 1994 to abandon its 25-year-old campaign of violence in favor of negotiations.

Just why the organization decided to end its self-declared cease-fire remains unclear, but it was well known that IRA hard-liners had become increasingly frustrated by the lack of progress toward genuine negotiations.

Syrup

out tapping the trees and putting all of this energy into making syrup, the more you appreciate the products that nature can provide."

Shannon Weger, assistant program director, said the program is offered once a year in the late winter months because the cool nights and warm days cause sap to flow in the trees.

"The sap is stored in the roots over winter," Weger said.

"As the weather becomes warmer, the sap tries to flow up to the buds of the tree to provide water. This water that has been stored all winter contains a high concentration of sugar," he said.

Wallace said all plants have sugars in their sap flow, but sugar maples contain the highest percentage of sugar.

He said when trees are tapped, the sap is about 3-percent sugar and 97-percent water.

"Many people think the sugary taste of the syrup will be apparent right away," he said. "But it actually tastes like water with only a hint of sugar. The sap has to be boiled off to separate the sugar from the water."

Participants were taught proper tree identification before they tapped a tree. Weger said maple trees can be identified by their leaves or branch structure.

Wallace said Southern Illinois has an abundant amount of maple trees.

Weger said after a tree is identified, the age of the tree has to be assessed.

She said if a tree is too small or has too many taps, the tree can be harmed.

"A tree should be about 10 inches in diameter around the trunk and at breast height," Weger said.

"If you don't pay attention to the size, you can harm a growing tree. The tree will become stressed, and its growth may be stunted," she said.

After a tree is picked, a hand drill — called a brace bit — is used to drill a two-inch hole into the trunk. A spile, or small spigot, is tapped in the trunk to direct the sap flow out of the tree. A bucket also is attached to the tree to collect the sap.

Wallace said depending on the quantity, the sap needs to be cooked for about eight hours to evaporate the water and sterilize the syrup.

The sugar concentration increases to about 80 percent when the water is evaporated.

"The thickness and color of the sap begins to change the longer it cooks," Wallace said.

"The longer it cooks, the more brown it becomes," he said.

Wallace said the syrup can be frozen or preserved for a long period of time.

He said some of the uses for maple syrup are as a sweetener, a cooking additive and candy.

"It's a very sweet and good-tasting product," Wallace said.

"Very few commercial syrups contain maple syrup. If they do, it contains only about 3 percent," he said.

Wallace said a gallon of syrup sells for $30-35 dollars, but 40 gallons of sap make only one gallon of syrup.

"I wouldn't recommend going out and collecting sap if you haven't been properly informed," he said. "It takes a lot of energy to produce and takes a long time to collect."

Jennifer Waggoner, a senior in dietetics from Waggoner, said she and her sister Penny came to the presentation to learn more about the procedure.

"We have a sugar maple at home and have always wondered about making our own sugar," she said.

"It's a healthier source than a lot of marketed sugars because there are no preservatives."

After learning all of the proper techniques and information necessary in creating maple syrup, Ewertowski said he never realized how difficult a project it is.

Additional maple syrup workshops will be Feb. 17 at 2 p.m. and Feb. 25 at 2 p.m. at Touch of Nature on Giant City Rd.

Mining

mining, a lot of the resources in Illinois have been stripped," Mead said. "Unlike most mining states, Illinois coal is deeper in the ground, which makes it less cost-efficient to mine it."

Mead said many states have lenient environmental laws than Illinois to make it more profitable for mining companies to operate.

"Many state legislatures trade off environmental policies to keep their unemployment rates down," Mead said. "They make it easier for mining companies to operate in their state because they cannot afford to lose those jobs."

Uram addressed the state of surface coal mining in Illinois in his speech, attributing its decline to decreasing profits and increasing operation costs.

Most mining companies are shutting down and moving to Wyoming and West Virginia, where mining is more profitable, he said.

Uram said he wants to establish a positive outcome for the mining companies without compromising environmental standards.

Uram was invited to SIUC by Uday Desai, chairman and professor of political science.

"Our University is far away from Washington," Desai said. "It is good for comprehensive universities like ours to bring someone in to make us aware of what is going on in our government, and I think Mr. Uram helps us accomplish that by opening our eyes to the trends in mining on a national basis."

still be getting the same amount of money as they have been. This just makes the fee process easier for everyone."

Bottom said the proposed board will benefit everyone involved in the process.

"This board will be a good communication tool between USG, GPSC and SPC," Bottom said. "Also, the faculty members on the board will provide some consistency because they will be there year after year."

Vingren said the faculty members also pose one of the only problems for the proposal.

He said because faculty members will have seniority over USG and GPSC members, more weight could be given to the faculty members' decisions.

"Maybe the faculty members won't take that stance, but it does give them an unfair advantage over the USG/GPSC members who would be changing every year," Vingren said.

"And it's not even the faculty money they are dealing with. It's the students' money," he said.

Bottom said the senate is considering setting up a similar board for the other priority one organizations on campus — Black Affairs Council, International Student Council and Inter-Greek Council — but it is not the right time.

"SPC is a program council and is different from the other priority ones, because they are self-interest groups," Bottom said. "Separate boards for each group are not feasible at this time because they aren't the same in their functions or target audience," he said.

Bottom said if the proposal passes at this week's senate meeting, the board will begin July 1, 1996 at the beginning of fiscal year 1997.

He said if the proposal is approved, the board should be in full swing by next fall.

The USG meeting will be at 7 p.m. Feb. 14 in the Student Center Renaissance Room.

behind-the-scenes look at the actual maintenance of a wildlife refuge, Tracy said.

Alene Lillico, a senior in zoology from Bethany, said the trip was worth the drive and said she looks forward to attending more events with the center.

"From a zoological standpoint, it was very informative," Lillico said.

"Personally, seeing all the geese and eagles was really exciting. The highlight was seeing a bobcat they caught. The fog made everything a little eerie, sort of like we were visiting their world, not ours," she said.

Dan Woolard, Illinois Department of Natural Resources wildlife biologist and discussion leader, said outings such as these can help people learn about the need for wildlife refuges like Union County's.

"Seeing the eagles is great, but the main goal is to help people understand what role the refuge can play in wildlife maintenance," Woolard said.

"Activities, such as this outing, account for about 15 percent of my time. I enjoy it," he said.

The center, located at the Interfaith Center, 913 S. Illinois Ave., began in 1972 in the hopes of bringing a means of environmental education to Carbondale.

Tracy said focusing on environmental education will be a center goal this semester.

"Our hope is to re-educate people by using trips like this and holding discussions on the importance of not only wildlife but the forest as well," Tracy said.

"Helping people be aware of their role in natural maintenance is essential," she said.

Dave Beals, the center's office coordinator, said the group's mission is clear, but removing some of the kinks out of its present operation will be needed before it can define its direction.

"Right now, we are just getting used to where we want to go," Beals said. "It's frustrating to watch people assume the government will take care of everything just because they do not want to try and figure out how the issues really affect their surroundings."

Events such as action meetings, letter-writing campaigns and planning group trips will be used as the core of center efforts to bring an alternative method of environmental education to the area, Tracy said.

Stephen Hill, a doctoral candidate in counseling psychology from Richmond, Va., said he used the trip Saturday to find out more about the area and see what student groups, such as the center, have to offer.

"I wanted to come and check out the eagles and see what I could gain from the SEC," Hill said. "Everyone has been helpful, and this is a nice way to spend a Saturday."

having no control over my surroundings," he said. "After a job earns a title or works at a job for years, going to school where everything is taken away from you can be somewhat frightening. There is such a feeling of being lost that many don't know how to overcome it."

Some examples of difficulties non-traditional students face are simple things some students may take for granted, van Rossum said.

He said things like stepping into a classroom after being out of school for some time and finding housing can be trying.

"Finding family housing in this town is very difficult," van Rossum said. "A person out of the military who has a family can have a very hard time finding a place to live. The housing situation in this town is geared primarily for young, single students."

Stephanie Chancy-Hartford, graduate assistant for Non-Traditional Student Services, said child care also is a big issue for non-traditional students.

"Child care is very limited sometimes, and factoring in money with classes and studying can be very difficult," she said.

"One of the reasons for this week is to let people out there know that they are not alone, and that there are people who can help."

One of the activities asks non-traditional students to wear buttons that say "STUC Non-Trad — All students matter."

"That is an important slogan because everyone counts," van Rossum said. "We didn't know how people would take to wearing buttons because a lot of times, people already feel a little out of place and they might not want to draw attention to themselves. But the buttons have really caught on, and during the week we have secret spotters on campus, and if they see a non-trad wearing a button they could win prizes that have been donated.

"The buttons are to let others know that there are non-traditional students on campus and it is important for people to realize that they have not been forgotten," van Rossum said.

The first event of the week will be held at 11 a.m. today in the Thebes Room to give people a chance to meet with some University administrators.

women's meet, the 4x400-meter relay, the SIUC 4x400-meter relay "A" team finished second behind MSU in the event with a time of 3:55.37, but a pleasant sight to coach DeNoon was his "B" team, made up of four mid-distance runners, who had a fourth best time of 4:04.38 on the day in the relay.

"I had about 12 kids who were all supposed to be available for the 4x400-meter "A" and "B," SIUC women's coach Don DeNoon said.

"When we started moving people up to the "A" team, to fill three spots and that left basically my middle distance people, and it just happened that all four of them were ready to go."

Top individual performances for the women's team were pulled in by junior sprinter Lesley Batson, who broke her own school record and qualified for the NCAA Championships with her time of 6.97 in the 55-meter dash.

Also turning a stellar performance was senior Joy Williamson, who won both the long jump, landing in at 19-1 1/2, and the triple jump, with a leap of 40-0—tying the eight-year-old school record.

Other top performances were turned in by sophomore mid-distance runner Mindy Bruck won the 600-meter run with a time of 1:36.19 which was a personal best for her.

"It felt good to beat her (conference leader from Indiana State Kristin Heinichen) because the previous weekend she beat me," Bruck said.

"We're neck and neck in races."

Bruck said the conditions for the race were not ideal.

"I've been ill, so I felt weak," Bruck said.

"If I set my mind to do something, then I'm going to do it." Junior multi-event athlete Heather Greeing, who was sick with the flu according to DeNoon, won the Pentathlon on Friday with a total score of 3354 points.

Greeing went on Saturday to place second in the triple jump (38-4), and third in the long jump (18-10).

Although the women's team won the meet by over 50 points, DeNoon said there is still room for improvement on their team.

"I would hope that none of my athletes are satisfied," DeNoon said.

"We can be thankful with what we did, but we don't have to be satisfied."

On the men's side, coach Bill

Cornell said he was realistic going into the meet.

He said he had some good performances, but was let down by the overall performance of the team.

"I knew coming into the meet that I wasn't going to be satisfied with what they (the team) did today."

"There were some people who did a tremendous job," Cornell said.

Some of those on the SIUC men's team who did have "tremendous" performances was junior Stelios Mamerros, who won the 5,000-meter run with a time of 14:56.22.

The men's high jump squad placed first, second, and third with senior Cameron Wright leaping to first place with a height of 7-3 3/4. Sophomores Neophytos Kalogeros and Rodney White jumped 6-11 and 6-9 respectively.

Senior triple jumper Jerome Kiaku leaped 47-11 1/4, placing second in the event.

Cornell had a team meeting after the meet to discuss the past season and the road ahead.

"He said the team's reaction was, 'dead silence.'"

"We've got no place for losers on our team," Cornell said.

"I told them they're going to see the coaches get tougher on them the next couple of weeks."

"People are starting to think they can do their own thing, whining about little aches and pains—all of that has got to stop."

"We've got to get some team unity and a winning attitude," Cornell said.

"We've got some people who just haven't been doing the job, and they have got to start doing it or ship out. If they don't want to win, we don't want them on the team."

Purdue fights on as coach fights own off-court battles

The Los Angeles Times
WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind.—While Indiana will always be Bobby Knight's domain, Hoosier country and red sweaters, this year's story of a season on the brink appeared to be breaking farther north, where the Purdue Boilermakers had threatened to boil over.

But stretches of on-court slumber in December, and heartbreak in January, have suddenly given way to February and hope.

In what has been a painful season personally for Purdue Coach Gene Keady, he has leaned heavily on six seniors to get him through the rough times.

"We don't have stars," Keady says, "we have moons."

The team that had looked so dreadful at the Wooden Classic in December is now poised to win their third consecutive Big Ten title.

Purdue is a team with poise and purpose.

"We've dedicated this season to Coach Keady's daughter," Jennings said.

After the game, Keady boarded a

Back to the real world.

It would be the fifth getaway trip Keady has made since Jan. 10, the day his 30-year-old daughter slipped and fell in the kitchen of her Alpine, N.J., home, struck her head and fell into a coma.

Had a maid not discovered her, Lisa probably would have died. "It's amazing she's alive, really," Keady says.

"I didn't know coming home from Northwestern that night if she was alive or not," Keady recalls. "That was a long drive from Evanston to Lafayette that night. That's a situation I don't want to go through again."

Lisa was alive, but in critical condition after undergoing brain surgery.

The next day, Keady flew to Hackensack University Medical Center in New Jersey only to receive news there that his 85-year-old father, Lloyd, had died of respiratory failure in California.

"He was a great man, my hero," Keady says. "Any success I've had comes from him."

Lloyd worked in a Kansas greenhouse for more than 50 years, potting plants he would later sell to flower shops.

As a Depression-era boy growing up in Larned, Kan., Gene worked eight-hour Saturdays with his father, helping make ends meet.

In two swift January kicks, his father was gone and daughter was fighting for life. What freak-accident irony. As a child, Gene Keady was struck in the head with a shotgun and nearly died.

Saluki Track/Field

Track squads finish at, near top of field

Saluki women's team blows past opposition while men finish in second place

By Jared Driskill
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The SIUC women's track team ran away from its competition and the men held their own as they hosted the McDonald's/Saluki Invitational at the Recreation Center Saturday.

The women's team blasted the field of competition as it scored 209 points. Indiana State University fell into second place with 152 points and Mississippi State lodged the third best overall score with 92 points. Eastern Illinois, Memphis, Murray State, and Emory filled the remaining slots.

On the men's side, the Salukis, who scored 100.5 points, did not fare so well, as they stood behind second place Mississippi State who tallied 151 points, and winner Indiana State who slipped by MSU totaling 153.5 points. Memphis, Emory, and Murray State drew the fourth, fifth, and sixth positions respectively.

The SIUC women's team was on a roll after grabbing 54 points from the first four events of the meet, and never looked back. An example of their continued success over the weekend was taking first, second, and third in the 400-meter dash.

SIUC hands Aces 72-52 loss after solid second-half

By Michael DeFord
DE Assistant Sports Editor

Win or lose, there are 40 minutes to every basketball game; a harsh lesson the SIUC women's basketball team taught the University of Evansville Saturday.

Overcoming a mediocre first-half performance on behalf of both teams, SIUC managed to defeat Evansville 72-52, improving its record to 10-2 in the Missouri Valley Conference. Evansville led throughout the first half prior to going cold in the second half.

SIUC women's basketball coach Cindy Scott, who voiced her fear of Evansville earlier in the week, said she was relieved to emerge the victor in Saturday's conference matchup.

"It was a struggle, but coming away with a 20-point win on the road certainly feels good," Scott said. "I think we really played very well in the second half. Offensively we did not shoot the ball well all evening."

The Salukis shot a mediocre 14 of 26 from the field in the first half and fared no better in the second.

However, despite shooting a meager 30 percent from the field in the second half, the Salukis were able to hand the Aces their 11th loss of the season in conference action, edging close to first place in the MVC.

SIUC's offensive attack was led in part by senior forward Christel Jefferson and sophomore forward Thecia Hudson, who combined for 27 of SIUC's points. Jefferson contributed 13 points while Hudson added 14.

By games end, four Salukis were in double figures — a statistic very pleasing to the eyes of Scott.

"Anytime we can look down and see four kids in double figures we feel good about that," Scott said. "We did shoot the ball well offensively in the first half."

Junior guard Kasia McClendon contributed 12 points while senior guard Nikki Gilmore added 10.

Although she was held scoreless in the game's final 20 minutes, forward Jill Sajevic led the Aces with 12 points on the afternoon.

With Saturday's win the Salukis are in second place in the Valley, directly on the heels of unbeaten Southwest Missouri State University. Currently, SMSU's record remains untamished at 11-0 in the MVC.

The Salukis return home to host Bradley University Thursday evening. Tip-off is 7:05 at SIU Arena.

Between the Lines

Ted Marchibroda, Indianapolis Colts head coach will not return next season. Bill Tobin, Colts' director of football operations, said Marchibroda was relieved of his duties due to an inability to reach a contract agreement.

Minnesota Vikings linebacker Broderick Thomas was released by the team after he was charged with drunken driving and possession of an unauthorized handgun in Texas. It was Thomas' second time in six months that he had been arrested with an illegal weapon.

Retired coaching legend Don Shula may be going to work for Art Modell's Baltimore franchise.

Several owners said he may become the president of the Baltimore team.

Brian Agler, Kansas State women's coach, was suspended pending an NCAA rules violation investigation and former men's coach Jack Hartman replaced him as an interim coach. Backup point guard Carlene Mitchell, a senior, was also suspended.

School officials would not comment on the reason for her suspension or whether it is related to Agler's.

Oscar De La Hoya and Julio Cesar Chavez both dropped their opponents in the second round in Las Vegas. Hoya stopped Darryl Tyson at 2:39 and Chavez stopped Scott "Pink Cat" Walker in 2:45.
