Southern Illinois cranking up methamphetamine use

SARA BEAN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The methamphetamine capital of America is just one state away, and some area law enforcement officials believe the drug is infiltrating Southern Illinois.

Though many recognize that meth is in the area, opinions are divided on how serious the problem is. Investigations in recent years have uncovered an increase in its manufacture and use, yielding the busting of labs.

"The concept is coming over from Missouri and is spreading across the area," said Tom McNamara, director of the Southern Illinois Enforcement Group.

McNamara said Missouri had more identified methamphetamine labs in 1996 than any other state in the nation. In its February 19 issue, Rolling Stone magazine recently declared Jackson County, Mo., "the methamphetamine capital of the world." Kansas City is located in Jackson County, Mo.

In 1996, the Drug Enforcement Administration shut down 235 clandestine labs in Missouri, 80 more than it shut down in California, which has been the perennial leader in meth manufacturing. Only two labs were identified in 1992 in Missouri. In 1997, that number increased to 455.

Methamphetamine use and trafficking is notorious among biker gangs in California.

Due to ongoing investigations, McNamara could not elaborate on how extensive the meth problem is in Southern Illinois but said there were more than a half dozen labs identified in Southern Illinois last year.

Methamphetamine, also known as speed, crank, crystal and ice, can be smoked, snorted, orally ingested or injected. Research shows meth releases high levels of the neurotransmitter dopamine, which stimulates brain cells, causing enhanced mood and increased body movement.

Methamphetamine stimulates the central nervous system and the effects may last anywhere from eight to 24 hours. Meth users often binge and go days without sleeping. Its high is more intense and lasts longer than that of cocaine or crack. A June 1997 study by the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy indicated that many longtime crack addicts are

Faculty Senate rails against elimination of professors

CUTBACKS: Senators suspect money as cause for reduction of tenure faculty.

J. MICHAEL RODRIGUEZ
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A resolution was passed unanimously by the Faculty Senate Tuesday that requested that the administration avoid the elimination of tenured faculty.

The Faculty Senate also resolved that the ratio of students to tenured and tenure-track faculty be decreased to levels of 10 years ago.

The senate's Budget Committee contends that there has been a 15.8 percent drop in tenure faculty from 866 in 1987 to 729 in 1997. The amount of non-tenure track faculty has increased from 359 in 1996 to 466 in 1997.

Geoffrey Nathan, chairman of the Budget Committee, mapped out the scenario in very literal terms.

"People with professor before their name have gone down," Nathan said. "They are being replaced by people who do not have professor before their name."

Jim Allen, chairman of the Undergraduate Education Policy Committee, said these results affect the main purpose of the University.

"This ... decrease means a loss of expertise in the classroom," Allen said. "That's alarming."

Another concern Faculty Senate members expressed is the ratio of students to tenured and tenure-track faculty has increased from 27.9 in 1987 to 30.1 in 1997.

"Our faculty-student ratio has not gotten better," Nathan said.

In relation to the faculty-student ratio, the student headcount has decreased from 24,160 in 1987 to 21,908 in 1997.

Nathan said lost tuition revenue from the enrollment drop may have played a part in the University not hiring tenure faculty.

John Jackson, vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and provost, said one reason the number of non-tenure-track professors increased is because they can teach more classes because they don't conduct research.

"To some extent, we tried to free up more teaching power," he said in an interview after the meeting. "You get much more teaching out of a term position who is willing to teach four courses or sometime more than that during a semester."

"We had to make sure there were enough classes covered to offer the curriculum and particularly its core curriculum."

Jackson maintained that 83 tenure-track professor searches throughout the University are under way, and that SIUC does not have more non-tenure track faculty than other universities.

"When I looked at our percentages of tenure-track and non-tenure-track compared to others in the Chronicle for Higher Education, we were a good deal lower than the universities nationwide," Jackson said. "Meaning, our University stood up well compared to others on this list."

Although non-tenure track faculty do not conduct research, Jackson said many of them still are very knowledgeable and have exceptional teaching skills.

"In the best of all worlds we would want the numbers not to go down on the tenure-track side," Jackson said, "but we live in a very imperfect world and we've learned to deal with it in the best way we know how."

Program helps those wanting bias-free office

SAFE ZONE: To help students struggling with sexual identity, participants must complete two hours of sensitivity training.

Tommy Self sat in his room putting a lining in his coat when his unknowing roommate asked him if he was a "faggot."

Self, a junior in psychology from Joliet, remembers his experience with discrimination when he "came out" a month after he arrived to SIUC and how it affected him.

"I was called a faggot I don't know how many times," he said. "I was also called queer, ac/uc, fence sitter, weirdo, freak, confused — and on more than one occasion [I was told] I was going to hell."

The SIUC Counseling Center aids those like Self by offering a Safe Zone program to all faculty, staff and graduate students who wish to declare their office "bias free."

Rosemary Simmons introduced the Safe Zone program to a supportive SIUC campus in spring 1994, mimicking a program offered at Ball State University. She also created an additional mandatory two-hour training that would allow faculty, staff and graduate students to obtain pink triangle "Safe Zone" stickers for their office doors.

The required sensitivity training teaches participants in the program how to effectively interact with students

TRAINING

Dorn named International Programs director

RELATIONSHIPS: Former head of SIU-Nakajo brings wealth of experience to post.

HAROLD G. DOWNS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A current SIU administrator and former SIUC graduate has been named International Programs and Services Director.

Jared H. Dorn, director of SIUC Nakajo, Japan, will take over the position because the department is being split. Rhonda Vinson, who is currently the head of International and Economic Development, will focus on the economic aspects of the department. Dorn's position will encompass the international aspect.

Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs and Provost John Jackson said Dorn will take over as director either June 1 or July 1, depending on how soon he can leave Nakajo.

Jackson said the unwavering support for Dorn made the decision clear. Five finalists were in contention for the position.

"Dorn was clearly the best choice," he said. "I had more support in the feedback for Dorn than any other candidate."

An important qualification for the position is the ability to deal with international students — a quality Dorn possesses — Jackson said.

"He's had vast experience in all aspects of this job," he said. "He has a deep appreciation for Asian cultural values and has language skills in both Chinese and Japanese. He's had much time spent in the Middle East. All of that helps us in recruitment for a much different part of the world.

"Dorn knows this University and knows the people here who care about international relationships, and he can build on those relationships."

Dorn has been director of SIUC Nakajo since 1988. Prior to that, he served from 1984 until 1988 as director for International Programs and Services at SIUC, and from 1974 to 1984 he was assistant director of international education. He received his master's degree in history from SIUC in 1966 and his doctorate in higher education from SIUC in 1973.

Dorn's relationship with SIUC was a key factor in his hiring, Jackson said.

"He knows the University, knows our problems and our strengths," he said. "All that will help him get a quick start on the agenda."

Proposed athletic fee increase may meet protest

CONTROVERSY: Students Organized Against the Athletic Fee Increase hopes to bring students to USG meeting.

TRAVIS DE NEAL
DE POLITICALS EDITOR

A possible protest may accompany the Undergraduate Student Government meeting Wednesday night as USG senators discuss a bill to oppose an increase in the student athletic fee.

Rob Taylor, a spokesman for Students Organized Against the Athletic Fee Increase, is spearheading a movement to bring students to the meeting.

"SOAAFI's choice is that there be absolutely no fee increase for fiscal year 2000," Taylor said.

The SIUC Board of Trustees approved an $80, four-year increase in the athletic fee in June. The approval circumvented a $20, one-year increase compromise between SIUC Chancellor Donald Beggs, USG President Dave Vingren and Graduate and Professional Student Council President Tim Hoerman.

The compromise also was to include a campus-wide survey of students during the fall semester.

Since the board's decision, Beggs has scrutinized the Athletic Department's proposed budget and reduced the increase. He now proposes a $60, four-year increase.

In January, GPCSC unanimously voted to oppose Beggs' suggestion. Two weeks ago, USG Senator Chet Lunsford submitted a revision of the GPCSC resolution to the USG agenda. The resolution was struck from the agenda.

However, Lunsford now is bringing the resolution back.

Coinciding with the reintroduction of the resolution is a large number of fliers that have appeared across campus. The fliers, some of which lampoon Vingren, are the products of SOAAFI.

Lunsford said he hopes the interest generated by the fliers will prompt a large student crowd to voice opinions, either in protest or in favor of the athletic fee increase, at the USG meeting Wednesday.

"I would love it if everybody comes and puts in their two cents," he said. "Hopefully there will be a large turnout."

Lunsford originally submitted the resolution along with several other USG senators, but he now is the only remaining senator sponsoring the legislation.

"I strongly opposed the increase last year, and I intend to maintain that position," he said.

Joyce Newby, chairwoman of USG's Finance Committee, said she originally co-sponsored the bill, but she has since removed her name and support from it.

"I think the resolution, as it appears now, is a little misleading," she said.

If a large number of concerned students attend to protest the fee increase, Vingren said they likely will settle down after listening to presentations by Beggs, Athletic Department Director Jim Hart and Athletic Department Associate Director Charlotte West.

"I think the fliers have gotten a good response, and I think it will be a matter of having students sit down and informing them about where their money is going," Vingren said.

Our Word

Fixing problems requires talking

So students, you want a better place to live. You are sick and tired of "tyrannical" landlords taking advantage of you while the city council has only done what the law requires them to do. Mayor Neil Dillard said Tuesday he has not spoken to the landlords as a group because he feels the public has the most influence. It bothers you does it not? If it does not, it should.

The question though, is what are you going to do about it? After all that has been done to try to rectify the tenant-landlord relationship there are two possible solutions.

One — the city council could step in and more strictly regulate landlords. Or two — students could do more by getting involved. It is up to the students to get the wheels of change moving because the city will not recognize the need for change unless it is brought to their attention.

A standardized lease, proposed by Undergraduate Student Government to improve the situation, will be unveiled Thursday in the Student Center at an open forum. The point of this forum is to get those concerned to come together and discuss and compromise on different issues concerning tenant-landlord relationships.

To simply get everyone together to argue is not an appropriate approach. Instead this is a chance to actually talk about the solutions to these problems. The point of the forum is not for cases to be made or defended, but it is a perfect opportunity for the landlords and students to show up and speak about issues they are concerned about. A productive dis-ussion could lead to a middle ground or understanding between the parties.

In 1994, Carbondale began the Mandatory Rental Housing Inspection Program. Last July, it was stated that of the 7,900 registered units in Carbondale, 2,260 had housing code violations. None of the units that were in violation were closed or fined, but the landlords were given time to correct the problems. The program was an important step in improving housing in Carbondale, but the revisions should not end there.

There are many complex issues at stake with one of the most important being the development of communication between landlord and tenants. If the scenario of the tyrannical landlord is wrong, it is up to the landlords to defend themselves at this forum. Unfortunately, it seems the possibility of that happening is slim, since only one of the 40 invitations sent out to landlords has been returned.

Even if the city is unable to take more action, student action could bring change. Items like the new USG landlord catalog will provide a way for students to avoid renting a trouble property.

As owners of businesses, landlords should be concerned with taking care of their customers while attracting new ones. It is time for all of this arguing to subside by sitting down and talking like intelligent, concerned people to institute more changes that will benefit all.

"Our Word" represents the consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Board.

Valentine's advice to survive dating

Ah, yes, Valentine's Day, the holiday of love and stuff Created to honor the memory of St. Valentine, the patron saint of Victoria's Secret Catalogs. The holiday of "One-rose-won't-be-cutting-it-sir-might-we-interest-you-in-our-fresh-bouquet-of-rare-diamond-rings-with-ambiguous-meaning."

Yes indeed, Valentine's Day and all of the relationship voodoo that goes along with it can be one tough sonofagun to figure out.

Life is hard, relationships with fellow human beings are borderline impossible to sustain without the aid of fairly strong sedatives, and this entire Valentine bit really throws a wrench into the proverbial universal machine of being. (I have no idea what I just said.)

Fortunately, I am here to help. Now, I know what you are thinking, "Mr. Robison, you are a sincere dimwit, and I am personally more apt to cover my room with Michael Jackson posters than I am to listen to one iota of advice that you might be so foolishly arrogant to offer me."

I can understand this. I generally have no idea what I am talking about, but this time I think I might. I have been in a number of relationships. Some lasted more than a quarter decade though others ended five minutes into the conversation — when she realized I was that jerk from the paper. I know what I am talking about. Plus, I can lie really good (well).

First of all, let's discuss the flower scenario. Some guys are not into flowers, which is silly. Flowers are the ultimate 'Get-out-of-the-doghouse-free' ticket. They are like kryptonite to an angry woman. You can dance naked with her mother in the street, and if you bring flowers the next day you have won the argument. You will still have issues, but at least you will not be dodging steak knives. The secret is to avoid consistency. As soon as she starts to expect a flower, the power is practically gone. Sporadicity is the key — even if it is not a real word.

Also, you must remember dates. A guy would forget his own birthday if it was not on his driver's license. Girls can remember the exact date of every mundane bit of trivia that has ever happened to them in their entire lives. They might not know who was President during World War II (Franklin Roosevelt), but you can bet they know the exact date you first told them they had nice legs (August 28, 1997). An example of a typical conversation:

Her: Well, does this song remind you of anything?

You: What?

Her: This song was playing at the dentist's office that time you drove me there to get my wisdom teeth cut out. When I was on the morphine, I told you I wanted to name our first boy Squirely. Don't you remember anything?

You: Yeah, I do. I was just seeing if you remembered.

There's more but I have been cut down to 500 words. So, just remember, flowers and dates, dates and flowers — that and foot speed.

Reading the stories would prevent errors

Dear editor,
If only the Daily Egyptian copy desk would get its act together, I would not be writing this.

But they apparently have very little regard for the importance of their work, so I must once again attempt to get the facts out to the public myself.

The Graduate and Professional Student Council has not — I repeat NOT — reversed its position on the athletic fee. Friday's headline is DEAD WRONG.

If the DE copy desk had actually read Travis DeNeal's excellent article on the most recent GPSC meeting before writing the headline, this letter would not be necessary.

But apparently, reading an 18-inch story is too much work for them to handle.

To prove my point, I have selected the following quote from the story, "...while GPSC's official position remained unanimously opposed to the increase, several members had changed their mind ..."

To make matters worse, the copy desk directed readers to page five for the second half of the story, but the "jump page" was actually page 13, so the odds are that most people did not even read the part of the story that contradicted the headline.

Speaking as a former editor at the DE copy desk, there is absolutely NO excuse for this kind of sloppiness. In the real world, you would be fired for this kind of gross negligence.

I realize you are still learning students, but for crying out loud, get with it.

This is a very important issue on this campus. Getting the word out to the public is hard enough without you throwing a monkey wrench in the process.

Please either try harder to provide the public with accurate and professionally presented news in the future or do us all a favor and quit your job.

Alleged Police bribe a misunderstanding

Dear editor,

I was extremely disappointed by the content of the article concerning the allegation of an SIUC Police officer attempting to solicit a bribe during a traffic arrest (Feb. 5 "Police Officer accused of soliciting bribe").

In my opinion, as an officer of the SIUC Police Department, stating the incident is under investigation and possibly a misunderstanding exists, does not adequately address the circumstances of this allegation.

SIUC Police officers perform their duties in a multicultural environment where language barriers are a constant challenge.

I am confident that the investigation of this incident will reveal that officer Charles Diggins' and Sachiko Oishi were victims of a verbal communication breakdown. The process of posting bond seems simple enough to those experienced with traffic arrests. The arresting officer will take your driver's license or offer the opportunity to allow you retention of your driver's license should you wish to post cash bond.

Often drivers are reluctant to surrender their driver's licenses and will desire the cash option. When a language barrier exists, as it did in this incident, the confused offender may reach a false conclusion.

I have complete confidence in the honesty, integrity, and professionalism of officer Diggins. Oishi's accusations are untrue but without malice.

I consider this incident most unfortunate for SIUC, the SIUC Police Department, and involved parties.

Faculty musicians honor African-American composers

FOUND: Discovered songs to be performed tonight at Shryock.

JASON ADRIAN
DE ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

Two SIUC associate professors in the School of Music will perform newly discovered songs from 15 African-American composers tonight in Shryock Auditorium.

Taking heed of a fan's suggestion, soprano Jeanine Wagner and pianist Margaret Simmons conducted research to find pieces to perform by African-American composers for Black History Month, but the initial search for the songs didn't uncover much.

"This particular project had grown from some spirituals we had done, and then someone suggested that we look for art songs. But when we started to look for some we couldn't find any," Simmons said.

The women were not looking in the wrong places. Aside from an obscure anthology published more than 20 years ago, Simmons and Wagner soon discovered music by these composers was simply not available.

The interest in the music continued to grow for Simmons and Wagner, who have been performing together for nearly 20 years. Last year, they took sabbatical last year and ventured to the Center for Black Music Research in Chicago.

They then compiled a list of African-American composers all over the country to contact, and Simmons said the response was fantastic.

"[The Center of Black Music Research] gave us their database of composers and we sent out 125 letters to the composers and told them what we were doing," Simmons said. "We ended up with much more music sent to us than we can use in the program."

The music chosen for the program tonight consists of African-American spirituals and art songs. While the spirituals evolved from a religious background, the art songs came about from composers writing from the heart.

"An art song is something that basically speaks to the human emotions or human situation," Wagner said. "Spirituals are something that came out of the call and response when one person would sing something and the congregation would sing it back to them. You hear a lot of repetition in spirituals. They're much more religiously based."

Simmons said the focal point of the performance will be on the art songs because those songs were not easy to find and are not as familiar to the average listener.

"Our focus is not on the spiritual because that music is fairly available. Our focus is on the art song where the music and poetry are equal in attention," Simmons said. "As soon as you say African-American music, people just say, 'Oh, spirituals.' They assume that's all there is."

Wagner said that while some of the pieces are immediately likable and palatable to the ear and others are challenging, every song is well written and has qualities that make it enjoyable in its own way. But she and Simmons still want to hear feedback from students.

One thing Wagner would like to hear from students and local musicians is that this music is something they would like to perform.

"I hope they'll be excited and it will encourage some of the musicians in the community to go in search of these composers or to go hear the music because it is wonderful," Wagner said.

"With the exception of two of the 15 composers, these are living composers and they're very anxious to talk to people and have folks do their work." "Music isn't music until it's performed."

There will be a free dessert lecture at 7 p.m. in the Old Baptist Foundation behind Shryock Auditorium, just north of Faner Hall. A speaker will share special insights into the evening's program.

Meth is also much cheaper than cocaine, which may have earned it the title "poor man's cocaine."

McNamara said while street values of meth and cocaine are fairly similar, about $100 a gram, wholesale values of meth are considerably lower than that of cocaine.

He said meth usually runs about $6,000 to $8,000 a pound compared to cocaine, which runs about $12,000 a pound.

Meth causes a severe crash after the effects wear off. The crash is more intense and longer lasting than that experienced with cocaine.

The Drug Enforcement Administration reports that users may experience feelings of suspiciousness, hyperactive behavior and dramatic mood swings. Abusers tend to engage in violent behavior and change from friendly to hostile quickly.

The National Clearinghouse for Alcohol and Drug Information states that effects of methamphetamine use include anxiousness, nervousness, depression, aggressive and violent behavior, fatal kidney and lung disorders, brain damage, hallucinations and death.

Fred Gray, a counselor at Gateway Foundation, 318 E. Walnut St., said that most of the clients he encounters that have used meth now say they wish they never had.

"At the point they start using meth they realize that it is out of control," Gray said.

"We are definitely seeing more use of meth in the last year. A couple of years ago we had never heard of adolescents using meth, but in the last year there has been a large percentage of our clients that have used it."

"I even have clients who know where actual labs are and a few have even participated in the production of it."

Chad and Sharon (not their real names) are clients of Gray's and both think methamphetamine has been more accessible in the last few years. They attribute its popularity to the fact that it is cheaper than many drugs and has a longer-lasting high.

Anyone with basic knowledge of chemistry can set up a meth lab and produce meth in a few hours. Most of the ingredients needed for meth as well as the equipment needed can be acquired at local grocery and hardware stores.

A simple search of methamphetamine on the Internet yields several recipes, as well as tips from other cooks on the best ways to cook meth. The Internet also provides information on how to purchase "Secrets of Methamphetamine Manufacture" by a man known as "Uncle Fester." This book is regarded by some as the "meth cooker's bible."

Books such as the Merck Index, which can be found in Morris Library, also provides all the information needed to manufacture meth.

History of Meth

Credit is given to Japanese chemists for first manufacturing meth in 1917. Combat pilots on both sides during World War II are said to have used meth because of its ability to mimic adrenaline and its "fight or flight" property, according to an article in the Feb. 19 issue of Rolling Stone.

There have been three distinct meth epidemics in the history of the United States: one in the 1950s, a second in the late-1960s and the current wave of the mid-1990s.

Methamphetamine surfaced commercially in the United States in the 1950s in the form of "pep" pills. It was most commonly used by truckers and college students in need of a way to stay awake for long periods of time.

It took its toll on the San Francisco hippie community of Haight-Ashbury in the late '60s. A fatal mixture of pharmaceuticals and subculture caused the drug to retreat from the mainstream until the late '80s when biker gangs in California began smuggling ephedrine, one of the main ingredients in meth, in from Mexico and setting up their own labs.

Government regulations began to reduce the availability of ephedrine, so some cooks began to use pseudoephedrine, the main ingredient in over-the-counter cold remedies such as Sudafed, to manufacture meth.

The pills are crushed into powder form, and then the pseudoephedrine is separated using water and methanol. The resulting substance is mixed with a concoction of red phosphorus and black iodine in a process requiring careful temperature control.

The brew must be stirred or shaken with toluene, more commonly known as paint thinner. The resulting paste is spread out to cool for a few hours. The crystals left behind are pure meth.

Some cooking methods — there are more than 30 — give off noxious smells and toxic fumes. For this reason, meth labs are often located in, but not confined to, rural areas.

McNamara said the method used in the labs in this area is particularly inexpensive and easy.

"For $167 spent on materials, a cooker can easily make $2,000 worth of meth."

On the Streets

Sitting on the old blue couch in the small counseling room, Chad and Sharon look like ordinary teenagers, but the last few years of their lives have been anything but ordinary.

Chad and Sharon are recovering methamphetamine addicts going through an outpatient treatment program at the Gateway Rehabilitation center in Carbondale.

Chad, 19, has a mild-mannered disposition and is wearing a black, hooded Nike sweatshirt with blue jeans and white Reebok high-tops. With big, blue eyes, dark hair and braces, he looks like the average boy next door.

Sharon, 15, is soft spoken with brown eyes. She sits nervously at the corner of the couch playing with her long blond hair.

Both Chad and Sharon live in Makanda with their families. They both go to high school in Carbondale. They say they both come from good families that are very supportive.

Chad begins to speak, his words coming steadily and clearly, but his eyes seem to focus on something far away, across the room.

"When I was younger I never wanted to do anything. I was against everything. If someone came up to me and asked me if I wanted to get high, I was just like, 'get out of my face.'"

"Then my eighth-grade summer, I got high for the first time 'cause all my best friends started to get high, and when I was high I began to wonder what it would be like to be high off other drugs. Then I started drinking and doing a lot of other drugs."

"The first time I ever smoked crack, I had always been like 'F that. That is sick. I'll never do that.' But I was with a friend and we met this guy that said if we got him high he would get us high."

"So we smoked some pot with him and then he handed us a rock and I was like 'No way.' But my friend talked me into it, and after that we started smoking it a lot."

Sharon said her parents and brother always smoked marijuana, and so she never thought anything of it. She got high for the first time in her backyard, with her brother and a neighbor.

Sharon said she first started smoking marijuana in seventh grade and then started drinking and doing other drugs.

"Nitrous and inhalants were my first thing," she said. "It wasn't until later that I started getting into some of the heavier drugs."

Sharon said the first time she used meth she was on a lot of other drugs.

"I was taking Prozac and morphine. I was a pill freak, and then I main-veined meth," she said. "I kept main-veining for six months before I got arrested and had to quit."

"[Meth's] bad, though, because you don't think about anything because you don't care."

Clean and Sober

Certain experiences have helped Chad and Sharon to see they had a problem and needed help.

For Sharon, her arrest helped her realize the need for help.

Chad remembers one time when he was taking tranquilizers and overdosed. He was driving around in his car and kept taking the pills. He was unable to remember what kind of pills or how many he had taken. He was sitting in his car and passed out. He awoke when a police officer came and knocked on the window of his car, but he was too drugged up to do anything. His eyes were rolled back in his head. Chad was rushed to the hospital where his stomach was pumped and the doctors told him he almost died.

Sharon and Chad are both clean now. Chad says he has not done any drugs in about eight months.

Both of them agree programs such as Drug Awareness Resistance Education and Just Say No were good programs. However, they think there is not enough emphasis placed on drug resistance education these days.

"I remember back in the '80s you would see it all over TV and everywhere, you know 'Don't do drugs' and all that," Chad said. "You never see that anymore. Instead you see people getting high on TV programs."

Sharon says the entertainment industry plays a major role in influencing America's youth.

"Now, you've got movies like 'Dazed and Confused' and 'Trainspotting' and 'Half Baked,' she said. "They glamorize drugs and make it seem like it is all good and nothing ever goes wrong."

"They don't show all the trouble that comes with it."

Both Chad and Sharon have been in the rehabilitation program at Gateway for a year now. Chad said he would have been out already, but he relapsed and has to remain in the program longer. Sharon said she has relapsed so many times she has lost count.

"I wouldn't come here for months at a time. I would get drugged up and then I got arrested and I had to come here," she said.

"But I didn't want to quit, and if you don't want to quit then you are not going to do it."

"I think that if it weren't for this

Local clinic trades services for donations to buy officers' vests

CORINNE MANNING
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

In celebration of Valentine's Day, a local chiropractic clinic is donating its services for "Save a Heart Day" in exchange for a $10 donation toward the purchase of a bullet proof vest for the Murphysboro Police Department.

Bird Chiropractic, 100 S. Glenview Drive, is hoping to raise enough money to buy at least one bulletproof vest. Vests cost anywhere from $375 to $500 each, depending on the size.

"Officers are initially equipped with their full uniforms," Murphysboro Assistant Police Chief Phil Royster said. "But that only includes full-time officers."

The Murphysboro Police Department currently has one part-time officer, Detective Mark

Woodsides, who does not have a bullet-proof vest.

Few of the officers in the auxiliary have a vest because they

“If I'm doing my investigations [not having a vest] doesn't bother me as much as when I'm on the street.”

MARK WOODSIDES

would be responsible for supplying their own.

"If I'm doing my investigations [not having a vest] doesn't bother me as much as when I'm on the street," Woodsides said.

Any extra money received will be donated to the Murphysboro Police Department.

The offer is available Thursday and consists of a stress examination, a fitness evaluation and a physical examination. These tests are also done to evaluate the condition of new patients and usually cost $100 to $110.

"[The exams] are to find out if you have a problem you would need chiropractic care for," Dr. Julie Bird said.

Bird chose the Murphysboro Police Department because some of the clinic's patients work for the department. She also said that about half of the clinic's patients are from Murphysboro.

who are struggling with their sexual identities, how to help students become comfortable with homosexuality and also provides sample case scenarios to prepare participants for various situations.

The pink triangle featured in the Safe Zone emblem dates back to World War II when an estimated 15,000 homosexuals were branded with pink triangles and exiled to concentration camps.

When allied troops arrived to set those in persecution free, gays were relocated to prisons rather than rescued.

Simmons said the reason for bringing the Safe Zone program to campus was she believed that gays, lesbians and bisexuals continue to be an oppressed group with minimal support.

"Usually you can see if people are supportive of ethnic oppression," she said, "but you can't tell just by looking at someone if they were supportive of gays, lesbians or bisexuals."

The triangle is a message to gay, lesbian and bisexual students and colleagues that anyone displaying the symbol on their office door is one who will be understanding, supportive and trustworthy and are willing to help or give advice.

The number of gay, lesbian and bisexual SIUC students who would be assisted by the Safe Zone program is unknown, but in a pioneering study in 1948 by researcher Alfred Kinsey, statistics found that one in 10 people are homosexual.

As a result of SIUC's fall 1997 enrollment figure of 21,908, Safe Zones may offer a sense of acceptance and liberation to an estimated 2,191 SIUC students — students like Self who have experienced forms of discrimination.

The National Gay and Lesbian Task Force surveyed more than 2,000 homosexual respondents and found 90 percent had experienced some form of victimization because of their sexual orientation.

The Safe Zone program, with 78 campus offices participating, provides protection from discrimination upon entering University doors adorned with pink triangles. The program even allows some incoming students to feel welcome.

"Some students who were looking at the SIUC campus compared to other schools saw the pink triangle," Simmons said. "They were persuaded to attend this university because they thought this was an affirmative campus."

Kendra Sweezey, co-chairwoman of the Gays, Lesbians, Bisexuals and Friends, also supports Safe Zone but wishes more people were involved.

"I kinda wish that wherever I go I could feel accepted," she said. "But I realize that it's not always possible because people haven't had the opportunity to understand gays and lesbians."

"If more people went through the training, there would be more safe havens for people on the campus."

'Titanic' ties record with 14 nominations

LOS ANGELES TIMES

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — The Ship of Dreams pulled triumphantly into port Tuesday when "Titanic" garnered 14 Oscar nominations, tying the record — set in 1950 by "All About Eve" — for most nods for a single film.

As expected, the epic love story about the ill-fated luxury liner won James Cameron a nomination for best director — and, in an unusual occurrence, he and his four fellow nominees were all first-time honorees.

Unlike last year, when the success of films nurtured outside the studio system dominated the nominations, this year the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences spread the kudus around. Big budget studio movies shared the stage with independent, shoestring productions, comedies held their own with dramas, and little-known stage actors got top billing alongside big-name Hollywood stars.

At the predawn ceremony in Beverly Hills, the academy's 70th nomination ceremony revealed only one bonafide trend: the British invasion.

Four of five best-actress nominees hail from England — Helena Bonham Carter ("The Wings of the Dove"), Julie Christie ("Afterglow"), Judi Dench ("Mrs. Brown") and Kate Winslet ("Titanic") — with Helen Hunt ("As Good As It Gets") as the lone American contender. Anthony Hopkins was nominated for best supporting actor for "Amistad," while "The Full Monty," the ensemble comedy about unemployed steelworkers who become strippers, got four nods, including best picture and best director.

The best-actor nominees — all Americans — are Matt Damon for "Good Will Hunting," Robert Duvall for "The Apostle," Peter Fonda for "Ulee's Gold," Dustin Hoffman for "Wag the Dog," and Jack Nicholson for "As Good As It Gets."

"Good Will Hunting," a drama about a working-class math genius confronting his demons that was financed by Miramax, got nine Oscar nominations, including best director (Gus Van Sant) and best picture. It tied with director Curtis Hanson's noir mystery "L.A. Confidential" for the second-most nods.

Cameron, meanwhile, sounded a bit overwhelmed. Fresh off the plane from Russia, where "Titanic" just opened, he described how he got the news of the 14 nominations in the air, as his plane approached the coast of Greenland.

"They were able to get me the news by satellite phone fax. ... I was pretty happy," he said. Then, the captain came back into the cabin and suggested to Cameron that he should look out the window.

"He told me to slide open the shade and look down.... There were thousands of icebergs below us," said the man whose film depicts perhaps the world's most famous iceberg. "I have never seen a (real) iceberg in my life."

program, I would have dropped out of school and be going nowhere."

Chad said programs like the one at Gateway are helpful.

"Most kids that get on drugs, if they don't go through a program like this, they never learn," he said. "They never learn where it leads to."

Sharon said she would like to stay clean and finish the program but it is difficult. She said that if she's around someone who rolls up a joint, it is hard to say no. She said the consequences are the last thing she thinks of.

"It's an addiction. You love it," Sharon said. "You don't think about the consequences."

Sharon and Chad have real dreams. She wants to finish high school and go to college. She would also like to get married and have a family someday. This was put on hold by her addiction, and she said she feels like she lost a few years of life and may never escape the problems created by her addiction.

"I just fed everything up. I made Fs my freshman year and got kicked out of school several times, and that will always be on my record," she said. "Colleges will see that, and it will hurt my chances. Drugs just screwed up everything for me and it will take a lot to rebuild that."

Chad wanted to play football but said now he is just concerned with staying clean and getting his diploma.

"Right now I am just trying to get my life back on track," he said. "I'm back in school, I'm 19 years old and I have my whole life ahead of me."

Still Divided

Law enforcement officials in Southern Illinois are still divided on whether methamphetamine is a problem or is becoming a problem in Southern Illinois. Illinois State Police Master Sgt. Bill Stanhouse said in Williamson County, methamphetamine is not viewed as a problem.

"We are seeing some problems farther south — around Randolph County," Stanhouse said. "But in Williamson County most of our problems are still with crack and dealing with the typical drug distribution system in this area.

He said there are three kinds of distribution systems. The first is the organized Mexican criminal cartels running meth out of Arizona, New Mexico and California.

The second type is the regional lab that utilizes a certain type of manufacturing method and serves an area of several counties to several states.

The third type is the most unusual, he said. These "Nazi labs," named for a production method that originated in Nazi Germany, are surfacing in Southern Illinois.

"These labs are based on a cell structure," McNamara said. "There are usually like 10 people with one guy that can cook."

He said these labs sell locally and often some of the meth is used by the cooker.

"These small systems are unique and we have to investigate them individually," McNamara said.

McNamara said they are trying to establish investigative outlines on how to deal with this system and are training first responders to the scene on how to deal with the situations.

He said this will not only involve the police but also emergency medical teams and the fire department.

"There were 455 labs identified in Missouri last year and hundreds identified in Kentucky and Arkansas also," McNamara said. "We know it's out there."

"We are not so foolish as to think we are not going to have the same problem if we don't do something about it."

"We have a saying here, 'Speed Kills.'"

It's an addiction.

consequences.

marijuana."

Stanhouse said there was one major bust a few weeks ago. A lab was busted and one pound of meth was seized.

Ralph Friedrich of the Organized Crime Drug Task Force Unit in the Illinois State's Attorney's office said his office had been prosecuting more cases of methamphetamine manufacturing in Southern Illinois. He said there was a definite increase in the number of cases regarding manufacturing, and meth is considered a problem.

Friedrich would not comment on any ongoing investigations.

McNamara said they are not

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING POLICY

Please Be Sure To Check Your Classified Advertisement For Errors On The First Day Of Publication
 The Daily Egyptian cannot be responsible for more than one day's incorrect information. Advertisers are responsible for checking their ads for errors as they appear. Errors due to the fault of the advertiser which lessen the value of the advertisement will be adjusted. All classified advertising must be processed before 12:00 noon on the first day of publication. Anything processed after 12:00 noon will go in the following day's publication. Classified advertising will be paid in advance unless for those accounts with established credit. A 2% charge will be added to bills for classified advertising. A service charge of $15.00 will be added to the advertiser's account for every check returned to the Daily Egyptian unpaid by the advertiser's bank. Early cancellation of classified advertisement will be charged a $2.00 service fee. Any refund under $2.00 will be forfeited due to the cost of processing.
 All advertising submitted to the Daily Egyptian is subject to approval and may be revised, rejected or cancelled at any time without notice.
 The Daily Egyptian assumes no liability if for any reason it becomes necessary to omit any advertisement.
 A sample of all mail-order forms must be submitted with the ad to deadline for publication.
 No ads will be classified as "For Rent" or "For Sale" unless they are placed prior to 6:00 PM on Friday or before 4:00 PM on Saturday at the Communications Building, room 1250.

NHL players arrive in Nagano

WASHINGTON POST
NAGANO, Japan — Wayne Gretzky stepped off the bullet train at Nagano Station Tuesday morning and was mobbed. Girls were screaming, camera flashes were going off like strobe lights and the crush of people clamoring for his autograph was so intense that Canadian Olympic Association officials finally had to escort him off the platform.

The NHL has arrived. I've been a lot of places," Gretzky told a phalanx of reporters who had also been lying in wait for the Canadian team. "But I've never seen anything like this."
This is the first Olympic Games to include NHL players, and although both the men's and women's hockey tournaments started four days ago, the stars came out Tuesday. After an 11-hour plane ride, the U.S. squad, which took a three-hour bus ride from Nagoya Airport to the athletes' village, arrived after midnight and held its first practice Tuesday evening.

Most of the NHL players here will not begin competing until Friday, when the tournament's main draw begins.

if we're going to move up in the rankings. We know Drake is not a good team, but that's no reason not to give it your all."
Sophomore guard Matt Woodley leads a futile Bulldog scoring attack that averages a league-low 61.3 points per game. Woodley (10.9 points per game) is one of three sophomores in the starting lineup, and Drake has only three seniors on the entire roster.

The Bulldogs also recently lost back-to-back games against Bradley University 79-53 Feb. 1 and 67-54 Feb. 7.
"They're young and they don't have great confidence," Herrin said. "It's hard to have great effort and intensity when you struggle."

The last time the two teams met, SIUC squeaked out a victory in Des Moines, Iowa. Sophomore forward Chris Thunell does not want to have to deal with the embarrassment of losing to the worst team in the conference.
"The last time we played them, we made a lot of turnovers," Thunell said. "We need to turn it up because we don't want to be the team that loses to them."

Parcells looks to trade away O'Donnell in time for April draft

LET'S MAKE A DEAL:

Reports claim Jets coach searching for takers on quarterback.

WASHINGTON POST

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. — Bill Parcells will attempt to trade quarterback Neil O'Donnell in the off-season, three NFL sources familiar with the New York Jets' situation have told Newsday.

Despite recent reports that Parcells hopes to keep both O'Donnell and Glenn Foley to compete for the starting job in 1998, the sources said it is virtually a foregone conclusion that Parcells will look to deal O'Donnell before the draft April 18-19. If Parcells can't strike a deal for the 31-year-old O'Donnell, he will release him after June 1, thereby cushioning the team's salary-cap hit.

However, Leigh Steinberg, the agent for both O'Donnell and Foley, said Parcells has told him he would like to work out a contract situation whereby both quarterbacks would be with the team next season.

"Bill Parcells said he wants them both back, and he wants to make some modifications in Neil's contract," said Steinberg, who added he has no knowledge about a possible trade.

Steinberg said O'Donnell would help Parcells work out a contract restructuring by agreeing to delay a scheduled payment of more than $2 million as an advance on his 1998 base salary. Steinberg said the payment is due in March but could be delayed indefinitely if the Jets so requested. "It costs us nothing, and perhaps things would be a little clearer in time," Steinberg said.

But the sources familiar with the Jets' situation are convinced Parcells is ready to move on without O'Donnell. The coach and his quarterback grew apart over the course of the 1997 season as Parcells benched O'Donnell twice and barely hid his displeasure about the quarterback's performance.

According to a report two days after the Super Bowl, Parcells and O'Donnell cursed at one another near the end of the Jets' season-ending 13-10 loss to the Detroit Lions.

"O'Donnell's out," one source said. "They're not bringing him back."

Parcells has not commented on O'Donnell's situation but is expected to address the issue when he meets with reporters later this week.

Although there are a number of unsettled quarterback situations around the league, it's uncertain whether any team would be willing to pick up O'Donnell's $5 million-a-year deal. If the Jets do trade O'Donnell, they will have to take a $5.2 million hit on the 1998 salary cap; however, a rise of between $10 million to $12 million in next year's salary cap could more easily allow such a move to be made.

Women left in the snow, as first snowboarding event not successful

WASHINGTON POST

SHIGA KOGEN, Japan, Feb. 10 — Poor weather conditions, unfamiliar snow, nervousness and "death cookies" all contributed to the incredible debacle for the U.S. women's snowboarding team in the giant slalom Tuesday, the U.S. riders said.

Whatever the explanation — and a great variety were offered — the results were identical for the four U.S. competitors: They tumbled in a snowy first run in which numerous riders crashed, highly unusual in this event.

As American after American took major spills, the high hopes for the United States' first Winter Olympics medal were slowly and stunningly extinguished.

"The women are not as bad as this," said Sondra Van Ert, the only American entitled to a second run because she finished first despite her fall. "It's a terrible showcase. I don't think anyone looked good."

Actually, Karine Ruby of France looked rather good, winning the gold medal with a combined time of 2 minutes, 17.34 seconds. Heidi Renoth of Germany won the silver in 2:19.17 and Brigitte Koeck of Austria was third in 2:19.42. Highly favored to win at least one medal in this event, the U.S. women instead dominated the "did not finish" listing, which claimed other casualties.

After the first run, U.S. rider Rosey Fletcher approached teammate Betsy Shaw and said in an agonized pitch: "Betsy, what were we doing?"

The U.S. women's debut in this new Olympic sport offered the same medal-less result as the American men in their giant slalom snowboard competition Sunday. Both failures were considered upsets of a high magnitude. The United States, after all, invented snowboarding.

SONDRA VAN ERT
UNITED STATES WOMEN SNOWBOARDER

Of the 24 medals awarded in the first three days of Olympic competition, U.S. athletes have won precisely zero.

"Every person here was a medal contender," Van Ert said. "This women's team was phenomenal."

The competition took place in a steady, heavy snowfall that Fletcher said affected visibility. U.S. rider Lisa Kosglow, however, said the visibility was just fine.

At least there was consensus about the fact the Americans were unaccustomed to the course preparation. Because of heavy snowfall overnight, the course was watered down before the race to pack down the snow. The result, Kosglow said, was that the course was in perfect shape, but the U.S. women — used to poorly prepared World Cup courses — were thrown off by it.

According to Fletcher, however, the course was laden with death cookies, which is snowboarding lingo for hard ice chunks.

"For a high caliber race like this, snow conditions should be top notch," Fletcher said. "This is a race of survival."

Despite the results, the U.S. team members did not seem despondent. They actually shared laughter and jokes about their performances just moments after falling. Van Ert dissolved into tears as she talked to reporters, but her tears, strangely, were tears of joy.

"There's nothing I would treasure more than a gold medal at the Olympics, but I've got a lot to treasure just being here," she said. "It's the nearest thing to ever happen to me in life, being part of this."

Rodeo Club competes in three locations over weekend

The SIUC Rodeo Club was in action over the weekend at three different locations.

At Flickerwood Arena in Jackson, Miss., senior Barry Montalla roped two steers in 21.2 seconds to move into the final round but placed out of the money.

At the Horse Palace in O'Fallon, Miss., senior Brian Taylor was bucked off D Bar C's Rough and Tumble. Sophomore Marc Undesser was bucked off D Bar C's Sam T, while sophomore Nick Ruhmann was bucked off D Bar C's Broken Arrow.

At Triples Arena in Harrisburg, senior Jeff Pearce was bucked off T-N-T Rodeo Co.'s bull and senior Mark Undesser was bucked off T-N-T Rodeo Co.'s Wolfman.

The Rodeo club will next be in action Feb. 21 at the Horse Palace in O'Fallon, Miss., and Triples Arena in Harrisburg.

NFL

49ers cut Woodson, Green; save $5.9 million

Rod Woodson and Kevin Greene, former Pro Bowlers who helped the San Francisco 49ers defense earn a No. 1 ranking last season, were waived Monday in a dramatic cost-cutting move.

The 49ers gained $5.9 million in salary cap space by releasing the two, both of whom starred elsewhere and had productive campaigns for San Francisco in their only season with the team.

"Even though we anticipate an increase to the salary cap, it won't be enough to allow us to keep Rod and Kevin at their current salaries," general manager Dwight Clark said in a statement.

Clark left the door open for the possible return of the players, though it would be at lower pay.

"We would like to have both players back and will continue to work with their agents, Eugene Parker and David Dunn, respectively, to see if we can agree on something down the line," Clark said.

Woodson, a seven-time Pro Bowler in 10 seasons with Pittsburgh and a member of the NFL's 75th anniversary team, joined San Francisco prior to last season as a free agent. Greene also joined the 49ers as a free agent after being released by Carolina at the end of a bitter contract dispute.

Greene finished with 10 sacks as a situational pass-rusher after leading the league with 14 sacks while with the Panthers in 1996.

Woodson had three interceptions as a starting cornerback for the 49ers but struggled in his last game for San Francisco, a loss to the Green Bay Packers in the NFC Championship game.

Salukis stay close but fall 65-53

TRAVIS ARIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The Salukis wanted to be tested one more time against a ranked non-conference team.

They got their wish Tuesday against Vanderbilt University at SIU Arena. They also got a little more than they could handle.

The Salukis led 46-40 with 12:50 left, and from there it was all Vanderbilt's defense as the Commodores beat the Salukis 65-53.

Coach Cindy Scott said the Salukis could not get the shots they needed in the closing minutes, and their 38 percent shooting performance hurt them.

"We just really didn't get what we wanted done offensively in the last eight or nine minutes," Scott said. "They picked up their defensive pressure up, and we couldn't get the ball inside to [senior center] Theia [Hudson]. I think we made Vandy sweat a little bit more than we have in our past couple of outings with them."

Sophomore forward O'Desha Proctor said the Salukis' problem offensively was waiting too long to get their offense in motion.

"I thought we played great for 38 minutes, but the last two minutes we fell apart," Proctor said. "We weren't running any offense, and we waited until the last minute to get into anything."

The Salukis are now 8-13 overall. The Commodores move to 17-5 overall and extend their win streak to seven against the Salukis.

Vanderbilt showed strength on offense. They came out strong, and it looked like the Salukis clearly were outmatched. The No. 10 Commodores fired up seven straight points and had a 10-1 run to open the game.

"They came out the gates fast," Scott said. Freshman guard Courtney Smith got things going when she drained a field goal, and the Salukis began an 18-3 run that gave them a lead and helped them carry a 32-30 lead at the halfway mark.

The defensive strength of the Commodores crumbled a little under the strong shooting performance of the Salukis, who put up a red-hot 54 percent performance from the field and shot 50 percent from the three-point line.

Dawgs look to demolish toothless Bulldogs

BACK TO .500? SIUC tries to even up their record with victory over Drake at SIU Arena.

SHANDEL RICHARDSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Drake University had plenty of reasons to believe it was set for a turnaround.

After starting the season 2-4, the Bulldogs defeated intrastate rival Iowa State University 63-61 Dec. 10 before facing the SIUC men's basketball team 10 days later.

Since the Iowa State win, Drake has lost 14 straight, including a 80-78 setback to the Salukis Dec. 10 to begin the streak. The Bulldogs have not been competitive during the skid either, losing by an average of almost 17.

In tonight's rematch at the SIU Arena, the Salukis look to continue Drake's losing spell.

The Bulldogs sit in last place in Missouri Valley Conference at 0-13 and 3-18 overall. Drake was 0-18 in league play the previous year.

But SIUC coach Rich Herrin knows this can be a dangerous game, especially after Drake eliminated Wichita State University from last season's MVC tournament.

"Our players know that Drake beat Wichita last year," Herrin said. "You always have to be concerned when this team comes in."

"They don't have anything to lose, and the pressure is on us a little bit. If they have luck hitting the three, then we'll struggle all night."

The Salukis are coming off a win at the University of Northern Iowa Saturday. A win tonight would put them at the .500 mark, as SIUC is 11-12 overall and 6-7 in league play.

Junior guard Monte Jenkins led SIUC with a career-high 30 points in the win over the Panthers. But Jenkins said he was fortunate enough to hit the big shots, and he expects to see a more balanced effort tonight.

"I'm just going to go out and play my game and let it happen," he said. "I'm not playing for myself, I'm trying to win."

"We've got to beat these teams if
