Co-workers react to Yates' murder

BURKE SPEAKER AND DAVID FERRARA
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTERS

Despite periods of drug abuse and recent financial difficulties, co-workers of Frank Lynch were shocked by the events surrounding his arrest in connection with the death of an SIUC faculty member.

Ruth Harmon, assistant director of the Good Samaritan House where Lynch worked, said she witnessed no unusual behavior in Lynch when he left work Friday.

Lynch was charged with first-degree murder Saturday in connection with the death of SIUC Assistant Professor Loyd V. Yates. Yates taught in the College of Applied Sciences and Arts.

Harmon said Lynch's murder arrest was a shock to the entire staff.

"We never experienced any type of violent outburst," Harmon said. "I never had any verbal confrontations (with him). It wasn't in his nature."

Although Lynch underwent treatment in 1996 for drug rehabilitation, he failed a urine test during that time and admitted to cocaine usage, according to Jackson County court records.

Harmon would not comment on whether Lynch had a drug problem as of late, but she and coworkers knew Lynch

Senate calls for hold on Andersen suggestions

The Faculty Senate approved a resolution Tuesday urging the SIU Board of Trustees to postpone any action on recommendations outlined in a study recommending a shared service center.

The senate tabled a similar resolution at a special meeting Jan. 26 because of questions about the accuracy of the report and the complicated wording of the first resolution.

The resolutions dealt with a study conducted by Chicago-based accounting and consulting firm Arthur Andersen that recommends SIU centralize its purchasing and disbursements functions under the direction of one management.

The approved resolution recommends that the board not act on the study until four things are accomplished: a regional economic impact study is completed; issues involving procurement and disbursement is

USG seeks to make Recreation Center available to community

NOT SO LUCKY: Lucky Clay is the third USG casualty of academic standards this spring.

DAN CRAFT
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Carbondale residents may be joining students both working out and shopping in the Recreation Center if two bills written by Undergraduate Student Government President Jackie Smith are passed by the USG Senate tonight.

Smith authored both a bill that would allow the Recreation Center to sell a limited number of community passes to non-students and a bill that asks University administration to approve a plan to open a store within the Recreation Center.

The purpose of the community passes is to increase revenue to the Recreation Center and to help offset increases to the student fees, Smith said.

The store, Smith said, is a larger project that might involve the city as well. She said Recreation Center officials had supported a similar plan several years ago after polling Recreation Center users and finding they wanted a place to pick up drinks, apparel, equipment and other sports accessories. But Smith said the administration did not support the proposals.

Each of the bills will be considered by USG and, if passed, would be passed on to the administration for further consideration.

Provost John Jackson and Law School Dean Thomas Guernsey were scheduled to speak to the Senate tonight on the issue of technology, but the presentation has been delayed until the Feb. 24 meeting and now will be handled only by Guernsey.

The committee still does not have some information regarding whether a possible technology fee would violate the 3-percent cap on fee increases.

The senate vote on the proposal is scheduled for March 3. Technology Commissioner Ray Gering will report to the senate tonight.

The senate again will consider a constitutional amendment that would abolish the current GPA standards for participation in USG — 2.25 for senators and 2.5 to run for

Almanac

THIS WEEK IN 1978:

- The Illinois Division of Labor Law Enforcement was investigating several off-campus resident hall cafeterias for compliance with the minimum wage laws.
- Several student kitchen workers at Stevenson Arms, 600 Mill St., refused to work that semester after receiving a "meal rebate" of $1.56 per hour instead of minimum wage. Some employees said they did not receive their full rebate due to careless recording of hours worked by the staff. Stevenson advertised for dishwashers, meal servers and checkers with a sign saying "Student kitchen help needed." Work for Meals' money paid to food, will be credited to you. In the previous semester, employees worked without time cards or an official contract.
- Movies playing up and around Carbondale were "Saturday Night Fever," "The Goodbye Girl," "Network," "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," "One and Only" and "Happy Days."
- Plenty of seats were still available for the Valentine's Day Concert which featured Emerson, Lake & Palmer.

Sonography program focuses on abdomen

KELLY E. HERTLEIN,
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A new ultrasound program has been implemented into the College of Applied Sciences and Arts in hopes of adding more emphasis and skill for students enrolled in radiologic sciences.

Gus Bode

Gus says: Excuse me! Can I get a little privacy?

During lab work within the sonography class, students primarily focus on the abdomen area of the body and are able to practice their skills on volunteers and classmates.

The sonography program, launched in August, is completed in the last year of the four-year degree for radiologic sciences majors. A student will complete general subjects, two years of radiology and then a fourth year of a second specialty.

Ultrasound processes have been in use since the late 1950s. During an obstetric ultrasound, a woman in her first, second or third trimester of pregnancy may view her unborn child on a screen.

Karen Having, associate professor in radiologic sciences, said the procedure is not harmful and many pregnant women are interested and volunteer to see their babies for the first time within the lab setting.

"When we get to the O.B. (obstetric) portion of it we accumulate a list of volunteers who would like to come in," she said. "This gives our students some practice and allows the women to take a look and see their baby and that is kind of exciting. We even do scans on each other."

Steve Tarr, a senior in radiologic science from Murphyboro, said the experience he has received in the classroom, and the coinciding lab work allows for an easier transition into the medical fields.

"The lab work gives us a chance to experience hands-on work in a classroom setting," he said. "It makes for a much easier transition into the practical or clinical work."

Having said CASA is striving to meet the needs of the growing medical industry while supplementing new opportunities for students.

"The students must pass the registry to become a registered sonographer," Having said. "And this is really fitting a need and the need in this area for sonographers as well. These students will be coming out with double credentials. They are multi-modality people, which is what the health-care delivery system is really looking for right now."

In recent years, CASA has transformed the radiology program from supplying a certificate or associates for graduates to a bachelor's of science and radiologic sciences degree.

Once enrolled in the program, students will participate in class and lab work on campus during the fall semester and then transfer into clinical work during the spring.

"They are out now developing their skills," Having said. "They have learned the basic

Board likely to reject USG binding fee proposal

SARA BEAN
POLITICS EDITOR

Following advisement from the University's legal counsel, the SIU Board of Trustees will likely vote down a student government proposal Thursday that requests students be given a binding vote on fees.

Peter Ruger, general counsel for SIU, said the recommendation is based on his interpretation of Illinois laws governing universities.

"The law imposes a mandatory duty to set the fees," Ruger said. "This is not a duty they can delegate to anyone else."

"So if they delegate the duty it would be against the law,"

Ruger said student government could provide input to the board through referendums.

Former Undergraduate Student Government President Kristie Ayres and Graduate and Professional Student Council President Michael Speck were met with some opposition from the board when they presented three proponents for change Nov. 12.

Following its November meeting, Board Chairman A. D. Van Meter said the board always welcomes input from all constituencies but ultimately is responsible for decisions on issues such as fee increases.

Ayres and Speck proposed that all new student fees, such as a technology fee, be subject to approval by a simple majority by the student body.

The proposal called for a super

Interim manager appointed to Main Street program

The Carbondale Main Street program will have a longtime Carbondale business owner as acting manager while a search is made to fill the position.

Sally Carter, owner of Hangar 9, 511 S. Illinois Ave., was asked by Main Street President Steve Payne to become the interim manager of the program after former downtown manager Joel Fritzier announced he would be leaving his position Feb. 12.

This role will be nothing new for Carter, as she has served as a volunteer for the organization for several years and became the vice president of Main Street about a year ago. She will be acting manager until a statewide, and possibly nationwide, search is completed and a new downtown manager is hired, Carter said. She expects a new manager to be in place by June 1.

Party spurs meningitis scare at Penn State

About 300 students at Penn State have sought medical treatment after potentially being exposed to bacterial meningitis during a weekend fraternity party.

Doctors say the chances that any students at the party will contract the disease are low, but they have given a single dose of an antibiotic to most seeking treatment.

A young woman enrolled at Shippensburg University, whose name has not been released, was diagnosed with the illness and listed in critical condition at a local hospital on Monday.

The presence of a legend

EAGER EARS: Area residents look forward to the inspirational harmonics of Bob Dylan.

THORRIE T. RAINEY
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Some call him a poet. To others he's a legend. During the '60s, his lyrics and verses were second to only the Bible.

But we're only talking about a musician right? Or are we?

Bob Dylan, mythical songwriter and musician, has touched the lives of just about everyone who has listened to his music. Now, with his fast-approaching Friday concert at the SIU Arena, Carbondale residents impatiently await the legend.

Born Robert Zimmerman, Dylan originally played rock 'n' roll in high school. After changing his name to Dylan, he entered the world of folk music during college. Dylan then moved to New York

THORRIE T. RAINEY

The Bob Dylan concert's over, but your energy is still high. What are you going to do? Look no further.

Hanger, 9, 5111 S. Illinois Ave., will host a Dylan tribute featuring St. Stephen's Blues after the SIU Arena concert.

The party begins at 10:30 p.m. with an acoustic set and early Dylan folk music.

Robbie Stokes, lead vocalist for the group, said although the group is heavily influenced by Dylan, there will be a mixture of music.

"I don't want people to think that we are going to play Dylan all night," said Stokes, who is also lead guitarist for the band. "It will be a heavy emphasis on Dylan."

Admission is $3. For more information call 549-1233.

City and began playing in local coffeehouses.

Known as a constantly evolving performer, Dylan has influenced every genre of the music world from rock 'n' roll to hip-hop. Inspired by artists such as Hank Williams and Muddy Waters, Dylan frequently is called pop music's master poet.

Dylan earned numerous Grammy Awards for his albums since his debut in March 1962. As an icon of the '60s, Dylan was the spokesperson for his generation.

Carbondale residents are not immune to Dylan's style and inspirational harmony.

Jimmy Salatino, guitarist for the band St. Stephen's Blues, is heavily influenced by Dylan's music. He also has a harmonica holder similar to Dylan's.

"The first album that I ever heard was 'The Other Side of Bob Dylan,'" Salatino said. "I liked his voice and his acoustic sound. He was definitely a lyricist."

Salatino remembers many of Dylan's lyrics by heart.

"One of my favorite songs is 'Visions of Joanna,'" Salatino said. "There is a line that goes, 'The ghost of electricity howls in the bones of her face.' That line alone gives me chills."

Salatino said he admires Dylan's way with words.

"He writes and assumes the roles of the songs. He has a lot of insight," he said. "I write my own music, but the way he can take 20 words and write one line, I would just think 'Wow.' It's all in the phrasing."

Salatino agrees Dylan had a hypnotic influence on his listeners.

"In a lot of ways he transcended over people," he said. "Some people took him too seriously when he would perform, and people looked to him as if he had all the answers."

Julie Bickler, a senior in art from Lake Forest, has been listening to Dylan since she was 14. Bickler's parents played Dylan frequently in their home, and she slowly developed an interest in him. Now with seven of his albums, she plays Dylan regularly.

Although she enjoys much of Dylan's early work, she thinks Dylan gets better with age.

"I think that he gets more refined in his later albums," Bickler said. "He is a great lyricist."

Although Bickler has seen Dylan on numerous occasions, she eagerly waits to see him Friday night. Bickler plans to enjoy the concert surrounded by her friends and teachers.

"I can't wait to see him. He's the greatest."

majority, or two-thirds approval by the student governments of fee increases above the rate of inflation, on all existing student fees.

The final facet of the proposal requested the language regarding student fees in the current board policy be changed. Section 2(a)(2) of Board Policy deals with student fees.

Student government proposed all reference to fees outside that section be referred to simply as fees, and all references in that section be referred to as student fees, rather than the current "general or mandatory student fees."

Trustee John Brewster said, following the Nov. 12 meeting, the proposal would be seriously considered and student input is always appreciated, but he did not see the board going to a position of making student approval mandatory.

Board members said they felt the authority and responsibility of decisions on fee increases rested with the board.

Ruger's legal opinion supported this consensus.

"To me, the language of the statute is clear that the board could not have the students bind the University on fees," he said.

Three person rooms gain popularity GOING FAST: Students sign up a year in advance for a room at the end of the hall.

RHONDA SCIARRA
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Unlike students living in typical suite-style rooms in Steagall Hall, roommates Dan DeBartolo, Mark Hartman and Paul Koverdan say they are fortunate to live in the three-person room at the end of the hall.

At the end of the floors in the residence halls of Thompson Point, up to three students occupy two rooms containing two sinks, a bathroom and multiple closets.

The three roommates in Steagall Hall have turned the front room into a living area complete with couches, an entertainment system and refrigerator, while their beds and a computer occupy the back room.

"Seven or eight people can hang out in our room and watch television comfortably," DeBartolo said. "We have more than enough room."

Teri Schaefer, coordinator of residence hall life for Thompson Point, said these three-person rooms are increasingly popular among students who continue to live on-campus.

"People who get into a three-person room usually sign up for that room the following year," Schaefer said.

According to Schaefer, the rooms were built to avoid wasting space at the end of the halls.

Schaefer said the rooms first housed four students but were unpopular. In the early 1990s policy changed, and three people were assigned the rooms.

Schaefer said living in the rooms can be a positive experience.

"The room is beneficial, especially for three people who have become close friends," Schaefer said. "They can have their own little environment."

According to Dorothy Schemonia, acting supervisor of contracts for University housing, each of the 36 available three-person rooms are filled already for the 1999-2000 school year.

DeBartolo, a senior in radio and television from Niles, chose to live in the three-person rooms with Hartman after living off campus last year.

"I am graduating in May, and I moved back on campus because it was the best deal for my money," DeBartolo said. "The three-person room adds to it."

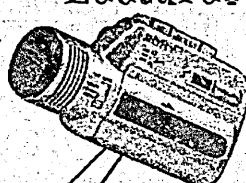

Hartman, a sophomore in electrical engineering from Peoria, lived in the same room last year with two people he did not know.

"One of my roommates kept the whole back room to himself," Hartman said. "It was hard to adjust with three different personalities."

DeBartolo and Hartman were fortunate to be placed with Koverdan, a friend DeBartolo knew from high school.

"One more personality to deal with is hard, especially if it is someone who has a hard time getting along with people," DeBartolo said. "We all seem to mesh well, and it has turned out to be a great situation."

This year, the class has 23 students, while in the fall the class will take only 20 students.

"A lot of this has to do with the fact that we do not have a sufficient lab and spacing equipment to handle any more than that," she said. "But we are trying to get more lab equipment now."

Tary, one of only two male students in the class, said with many new programs there are niches which must be worked out, but the overall appeal of the program has been rewarding for him.

"Although the equipment is out of date, it's like watching a black and white TV and going to color," he said. "If you can perfect your skills on the older version, it makes it that much easier to work with the newer equipment."

Having said the lack of specialty training within the radiological field has created an open market and expanded opportunities for her students.

"We find there is more and more call for these people who have more credentials," Having said, "This is going to be a really big interaction. There are not a lot of ultrasound programs in the nation and so this is really filling a gap in Southern and central Illinois."

"A number of facilities have already called me seeing if we had anybody they could get. They are looking for sonographers. They even say 'Can we have some of your students?'"

iMacs catching all eyes

New colored Macintosh interests consumers with advanced features

KATIE KLEMAIER
 DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Is blueberry your favorite flavor? Maybe lime, tangerine, strawberry or grape will tantalize your taste buds, or at least your computing desires.

Patrick McCarty, a freshman in information systems technology from Evansville, Ind., recently purchased Apple's latest technological innovation — a lime iMac.

"I think for most people it's the iMac's looks," McCarty said. "People really like having a machine that doesn't look like a whitish-tan box sitting in front of them. It is more of a personality machine."

The introduction of the iMac took the computer market by storm. iMacs were the top-selling computer for the last quarter of 1998 with 6.2 percent of unit market sales.

McCarty, an avid user of Apple computers since the sixth grade, works at the Faner Computer Laboratory because of his Macintosh knowledge.

McCarty said high-end users like the iMac because of its power and price. He said PC buyers have to spend twice as much for the same features iMac offers. iMacs are being sold in the United States for $1,199.

Matt Maccrimmon, an SIUC procedures and systems analyst, said the new colorful iMacs have sparked a lot of interest in the computer industry.

"Seems to be with the introduction of the more colorful iMacs sales are continuing to be strong," Maccrimmon said.

Maccrimmon provides information to students for SIUC's Macintosh sales center. The sales center has been at SIUC for two years and it allows students to purchase computers directly from Apple.

- 266-MHz Power PC G3 processor
- 512K backside level 2 cache on processor module; 133-MHz dedicated 64-bit backside bus
- 66-MHz system bus
- Integrated floating-point unit and 64K on-chip level 1 cache (32K data and 32K instruction)
- 32MB of SDRAM (3.3-volt, unbuffered, 64-bit wide, 144 pin, running at more than 100MHz, 10-nanosecond cycle time); two SO-DIMM slots
- support up to 256MB
- 64-bit memory bus

Maccrimmon said SIUC receives a 5-percent rebate from iMac computer sales.

The University averages $2,000 per month from rebates and the money is used to purchase more demo models and enhance sales presentations.

Maccrimmon said the University is considering a proposal for a computer repair center also.

The University recently opened a computer lab in Quigley Hall with 26 Macintosh stations and 26 PC stations. There is also an iMac computer lab located in Communications Building room 1211 containing 14 iMacs.

The new Power Macintosh G3 is a step above the iMacs. The G3 is built for speed and outperforms the fastest Pentium IIs in high-end PCs.

Charlie Rodriguez, an assistant professor in aviation technology, said he purchased Macintosh's G3 and it far exceeds the performance of his old PC.

"I would be very reluctant to give current PC users a Macintosh," Rodriguez said. "I think you would find a lot of PCs collecting dust."

Rodriguez uses his G3 to write textbooks and to do digital video editing, and he said it makes a "tall job real easy."

"My PC labored, but the G3 digests things like it was nothing," Rodriguez said.

McCarty said the most frequent complaint about the iMac is the lack of a floppy disk drive, but he says "disk drives are becoming a thing of the past."

"Floppy drives are dying out," he said. "People need to get over it."

McCarty said Macintosh has always been an innovator of new technologies and other companies mimic their trends.

"iMacs have done what no other Mac has ever done," McCarty said. "It is not only getting people out who have never bought a machine, but PC owners are actually going out and buying iMacs."

resolved; the Oracle computer system and other business-related initiatives are fully operational on campus; and doubts and questions about actual savings through a shared service center are answered.

The senate amended the resolution to state the "senate's approval be sought by the administration before making its final recommendation to the Board of Trustees."

College of Education representative Donna Post said she supported the resolution and believed it addressed the concerns of the faculty and the community.

"The community is concerned about the Arthur Andersen report," Post said. "This resolution says that 'We have concerns about this Mr. President. Please hold up on any decisions until we feel more comfortable about this.'"

Faculty Senate President Jim Allen argued the main cost savings from the shared service center study would come from reductions in staff and would not be a substantial savings.

Additionally, he said an April 1998 Andersen study recommending SIUC give priority to preferred vendors is already saving the University money.

Information supplied to the faculty senate in a report by Associate Vice Chancellor for Administration Bill Capie shows the initial Arthur Andersen report did not adequately represent the payback schedule for recovery of the implementation costs.

Capie's report shows the expected savings would not be realized until fiscal year 2003 and would amount to about $33,000.

These savings would primarily come from reductions in staff.

"A good part of the records are manually kept, and therefore it requires a great deal of effort to collect."

— TED SANDERS
 SIU PRESIDENT

The prime vendor study reported that purchasing and disbursement functions currently operate separately on each of the three SIUC campuses.

The purchasing functions employ 44 full-time employees and cost more than $1.7 million to operate each year.

The disbursement function employs 26 full-time employees and costs more than $700,000 a year to operate.

According to the prime vendor study, SIU utilized preferred vendors in 4 percent, or $5.2 million, of its purchases for fiscal year 1997 and bought more than $132 million in goods and services. About $107 million of the $132 million was spent on orders of $10,000 or more. The remaining purchases were made from about 11,000 vendors.

The Carbondale campus purchased from 8,383 vendors, while Edwardsville purchased from 2,482 vendors. The Springfield School of Medicine campus purchased from 1,014 vendors.

Tuesday morning SIU President Ted Sanders said he would give a brief status report as part of his general report at the SIU Board of Trustees meeting Thursday.

He said the economic impact study, being conducted by Arthur Andersen, is not complete because of difficulties and that the shared service center study is not an agenda item for the meeting.

"Arthur Andersen, at our direction, is conducting an economic impact study for the preferred vendor and shared service center recommendations," Sanders said. "They have encountered significant difficulties in finishing the reports."

"A good part of the records are manually kept, and therefore it requires a great deal of effort to collect."

executive office — and replace them with a "good standing" clause, meaning all USG participants must maintain only a 2.0 GPA.

Smith also is expected to announce the finalization of the Student Programming Council's move from Student Development to the Student Center. Smith said Greg Tatham, director of the Student Center, and Andrew Daly, SPC Executive Director, have presented a plan outlining timeliness and transfers to Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Harvey Welch Tuesday and that she did not expect any problems in getting Welch to approve the plan.

Planning is also the major concern of Governmental Affairs Commissioner Joe Monis, who is setting up several voter registration drives to occur between the primary and general city elections. He will be updating the Senate on his progress.

In other business, Smith said Tuesday that Lucky Clay was removed as executive assistant because of academic ineligibility. Smith said because there is no requirement the position be filled and because of the relatively small amount of time remaining in the school year, the position will remain vacant.

was having problems financially. "We were aware that he was having some financial difficulties, and we were talking with him about it, counseling him about it," Harmon said.

Lynch discussed with Harmon the prospect of filing bankruptcy last summer and had recently spoken with coworkers about it.

But because of previous convictions for deceptive practices, in which he bounced 27 personal checks, Lynch would have been unable to claim bankruptcy under Illinois' bankruptcy code because of his prior convictions.

Lynch was initially hired at the Good Samaritan House, 701 S. Marion St., in 1997 as a house manager. His duties included cooking for the shelter, ordering supplies from USDA and other food banks, and other day-to-day operations.

"He was an intelligent man — he had a strong knowledge base," Harmon said.

Last year, Lynch stayed for a short time at the shelter because of financial strain and problems with drug abuse.

"I'm shocked that this all occurred," Harmon said. "It was unforeseeable by many of the people that worked with him."

Police would not release information about the relationship between Lynch and Yates and could not confirm a motive for the crime.

As of press time, Lynch was being detained at Jackson County Jail in lieu of $1 million.

Marcia Anderson, a professor in SIUC's Department of Work Force Education, was Yates' wife, but the two had been separated for some time. Yates had been on a two-year leave of absence from the University following the onset of chronic fatigue syndrome, a debilitating disorder that results in prolonged fatigue. The disease is not improved by bed rest and is worsened by mental or physical activity, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Around 1 p.m. Saturday, an unidentified man entered the Herrin Police Department to report a homicide at Roxanne Mobile Home Park, 2301 S. Illinois Ave. Police would neither confirm nor deny where the man was from to protect his identity.

Herrin police then notified the Carbondale Police Department. Carbondale authorities arrived at the trailer park about three hours later and evacuated nearly 15 trailers.

Police staked-out Lynch's trailer, No. 25, for about six hours before two search warrants were served. The search revealed Yates' body, a baseball bat and a large knife, which police said may have been used in the murder.

Yates' body was found in the trunk of Lynch's vehicle, and the weapons were found in his trailer.

Yates' funeral services will be at 1 p.m. today in Van Natta Funeral Home, 427 S. Park Ave., in Herrin. The burial will be in the Herrin City Cemetery.

time. She could not be reached for comment.

Eileen Trout-Ervin, an associate professor in health care professions, said she has spoken with people at the University who are shocked and upset about the nature of Yates' death.

"There's certainly a sadness within the college. It's the loss of a colleague," Trout-Ervin said. "Anytime someone 52 dies, it's even more of a surprise with a mur-

Video games beckon Generation-Xers

GROWING MARKET:
Technology helps gaming evolve into part of American culture.

MATT SMENOS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The digital age has arrived in an accelerated 3-D video-card environment where polygon princesses chase mushroom powers.

"You know what I hate? I hate when you go to see the big, gold Buddha, and you pick the leaf with the virus on it."

I recently overheard this statement on a local bus. A young man lamenting his video-game difficulty to an elderly woman who was staring at him as if he had just licked his own eyeball.

The young man was discussing a game called "Burn Cycle" by Digital Planet. Though his choice of an obviously un-hip elderly woman to discuss his cyber-troubles was an unfortunate one, his passion is widely shared.

"Video games are the new technological crack-pipe," said Marcus Janacek, a senior in political science from Las Vegas.

"They're very addictive. They can make you stop going out, stop studying, even stop drinking beer."

While this is probably an exaggeration in Carbondale, the popularity of video distraction is spreading like wildfire.

"Our generation is the first in history to have video games available on an everyday basis all our lives."

—DAVE URBASIC
SENIOR AT UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS

The easy access of technology has accelerated this trend. Superfast Internet connections and personal computer networks have all contributed.

In 1996, Blizzard Entertainment introduced a "Battle-Net" project that incorporated cutting edge, Internet-technology with real-time game-play.

On the "Battle-Net," individuals can log-on and play their favorite Blizzard titles such as "Diablo," a medieval, dungeon-crawling quest to save humanity, or "Starcraft," a real-time strategy simulation in which alien races compete for galactic supremacy.

And among these new cyber-arcades lie a plethora of websites and home pages devoted to Playstation and Nintendo 64 game systems.

According to Kevin Budny, an employee of Babbages in the University Mall and a 1997 SIUC alumnus in cinematography, computers and game-systems are selling madly.

"The game systems are very popular," Kevin said. "We also have several different accessories for the PC to enhance and accelerate graphics and gameplay."

Games like Nintendo's "The Legend of Zelda: Ocarina of Time" and "Final Fantasy VII" from Eidos Interactive have become huge sellers.

"We had 'Final Fantasy VII,'" Kevin tells a curious customer, "but we've been sold out of it for a while."

Not all of these avid gamers even seem interested in buying these games for themselves. Rick McCall, a customer service representative for Blockbuster Video, 1330 E. Main St., said video game rentals are more and more common.

"Games like 'Zelda,' 'Final Fantasy' and 'South Park' are pretty new and pretty popular," he said.

Three-dimensional graphics cards and sound systems from companies like Creative Labs Inc. and Sony all adorn the shelves of video stores most everywhere. Their unified purpose? To enhance gaming for the video generation.

Some claim video gaming is evolving into a part of our culture.

"Our generation is the first in history to have video games available on an everyday basis all our lives," said Dave Urbasic, a senior in computer engineering at the University of Illinois.

"I think they'll become more and more popular as time goes on."

With the advent of entertainment bars such as "Dave and Buster's," a chain of video-game arcade/bars in Chicago, it seems that forecast might be right.

"Dave and Buster's" are entertainment centers that offer video games and virtual reality to an older crowd. Video games, billiards tables and virtual reality shows are offered in an adult environment. Alcohol and food are readily available so gamers can blast an alien back to the stinking desert planet he came from while at the same time nursing a beer.

According to Judy Royce, an assistant supervisor at a "Dave and Buster's" in Atlanta, the original creation of the concept was to bring video games to an adult level.

So while the baby boomers miss that old time rock 'n' roll, Generation X won't be listening to them. After all, Princess Zelda won't wait forever.

Love and war: 'Shakespeare' and 'Ryan' top Oscar list

JAY BOYAR
KNIGHT-RIDDER NEWSPAPERS

With so many different movie awards - and so much attention being paid to them by the media these days - it's impossible for the Academy Awards to be as surprising as they once were.

By the time this year's nominations were announced early Tuesday morning, the Golden Globe group, all the major critics' organizations and the big movie guilds had already weighed in with their awards and/or nominations. So when actor Kevin Spacey and academy-president Robert Redline announced the five best-picture Oscar nominees, it was almost a case of rounding up the usual suspects.

Those nominees are three films about World War II and two set in Elizabethan England.

The war movies are "Saving Private Ryan," Steven Spielberg's sensational epic; "The Thin Red Line," Terrence Malick's more poetic and elliptical version of the war; and Roberto Benigni's bitter-sweet "Life Is Beautiful," the Italian film in which he plays a resourceful concentration-camp inmate.

The Elizabethan films are John Madden's "Shakespeare in Love," the airy romantic comedy about the Bard as a young man, and Shekhar Kapur's "Elizabeth," the melodrama about the young queen's rise to power.

The unsurprising Oscar nominations had movie pundits scrambling for a juicy angle on the story. I feel their pain.

"I think that the biggest shock here was that 'Elizabeth' bumped 'The Truman Show,'" exclaimed Entertainment Television commentator Tom O'Neil.

Shock may not be quite the right word. 'Elizabeth' was certainly in the running, having already received a best-picture (drama) nomination for a Golden Globe.

In terms of total Oscar nominations, "Shakespeare in Love" is the big winner with 13, nearly tying the record of 14 jointly held by "All About Eve" (1951) and "Titanic" (1997). "Saving Private Ryan" came in second with 11, followed by "The Thin Red Line," "Life Is Beautiful" and "Elizabeth," all tied for third place with seven apiece.

The nomination totals seem to confirm that the best-picture contest is really a two-way race between "Shakespeare in Love" and "Saving Private Ryan." But we'll find that out on March 21, when the 71st Academy Awards are held.

The acting nominations, too, were less than shocking.

"Life Is Beautiful's" Benigni and Tom Hanks, the captain of "Saving Private Ryan," were nominated as best actor. So were Ian McKellen, who plays director James Whale in "Gods and Monsters"; Nick Nolte, as a cop whose life is unraveling in "Affliction"; and Edward Norton as a neo-Nazi in "American History X."

Best-actress nominations went to Gwyneth Paltrow as the Bard's muse in "Shakespeare in Love"; Cate Blanchett in the title role of "Elizabeth"; Meryl Streep as a woman who is dying in "One True Thing"; Emily Watson as cellist Jacqueline du Pre in "Hilary and Jackie"; and Fernanda Montenegro as a cynical woman who reluctantly cares for a child in Brazil's "Central Station."

Except for Norton, all of these actors and actresses had already received awards and/or nominations from other major groups. I suppose that the nomination for Norton - instead of for Jim Carrey of "The Truman Show" - actually does qualify as a surprise, especially if you ignore the academy's traditional neglect of comedians.

"Jim Carrey was considered to be a lock," observed a delighted Charles Gibson on "Good Morning America," who later crowed that his own nephew had something to do with the production of American History X.

The supporting actor and actress categories came off as expected. Nine of the 10 nominees mirrored Screen Actors Guild nominees.

The single exception is Ed Harris of "The Truman Show," who was nominated instead of David Kelly of "Waking Ned Devine," the guild's choice. But Harris was an obvious contender, having already received Golden Globe and National Board of Review prizes.

Others nominated as supporting actor are James Coburn of "Affliction," Robert Duvall of "A Civil Action," Geoffrey Rush of "Shakespeare in Love" and Billy Bob Thornton of "A Simple Plan." The nominees for supporting actress are Kathy Bates of "Primary Colors," Brenda Blethyn of "Little Voice," Rachel Griffiths of "Hilary and Jackie," Lynn Redgrave of "Gods and Monsters" and Judi Dench of "Shakespeare in Love" - playing the same person that Blanchett plays in "Elizabeth."

Nominations in the best-director category were the same as those for best picture, except that Peter Weir of "The Truman Show" was nominated instead of Kapur of "Elizabeth."

"Elizabeth" was also slighted in the screenplay nominations, of which there are 10, divided into original and adapted categories. All the other best-picture nominees received nominations in those categories, along with "Bullworth" and "The Truman Show" in the former and "Gods and Monsters," "Out of Sight," "Primary Colors" and "A Simple Plan" in the latter.

Students receive unwanted porn e-mail

JUSTIN GOLDSBOROUGH
DAILY NORTHWESTERN

(U-WIRE) EVANSTON, Ill. — Last week was an interesting week for Northwestern U.'s Willard Residential College President Chris Rogers.

The Weinberg sophomore returned to his dorm room Wednesday afternoon and checked his e-mail just like any other day. But what he found in his mailbox was not a casual message from a friend.

Instead, Rogers saw that the entire Willard listserv had been subscribed to "NetXotica Adult Ezine," an online pornographic magazine.

"I came back from class and saw it sitting in my e-mail inbox," Rogers said. "I knew that meant that it was sitting in every person's inbox."

Rogers quickly sent out an e-mail to the listserv, telling dorm residents the situation was under control. He also called Willard residential-networking consultant Dave Laskowski, who took control of the problem.

"What we have been receiving over the listserv is confirmation letters that acknowledge that someone has tried to join Willard to all these different Web sites," said Laskowski, a McCormick sophomore.

Someone subscribed the dorm to three adult mailing lists on Friday, and to Chicago Cubs and Radiohead mailing lists on Saturday, Laskowski said.

No pornographic images have actually been sent over the listserv because the letters ask for a confirmation before any material can be sent, Laskowski said.

Part of the reason this problem persists is because there is little evidence of who is at fault, Stein said.

"We're not sure if it's someone inside or outside the dorm," he said. "We're going to do some more investigating."

Without any leads as to who the culprit is, Rogers and Laskowski have been working to eliminate the problem as best they can. Certain Web sites kept logs of subscribers, so Laskowski asked the Radiohead listserv manager to check his recent log for Northwestern e-mail addresses.

"Hopefully, after the owner checks his log, we'll be able to find out who's been doing this," Rogers said.

NU's director of network security, Roger Saffianca, is also advising Willard officers on the problem. Saffianca was unavailable for comment Monday.

Chair-ished way of life

JESSICA ZAMORA/Daily Egyptian

Rory Jaros of Cobden demonstrates his talent for making chairs on the corner of Washington Avenue and Jackson Street Tuesday. Jaros made his first chair ten years ago and sets up on various sidewalks around Southern Illinois to create his chairs. His work is on display at Southern Sisters Workshop on the boardwalk in Makanda.

Football player finds worm in hamburger, sues McDonald's

COLLEGE PRESS EXCHANGE

EAU CLAIRE, Wis. — McDonald's deserves no break after serving a hamburger that contained a wiggling worm, a quarterback at the University of Wisconsin at Eau Claire says.

Sean Hoolihan has filed suit against the Eau Claire fast-food restaurant and its parent company.

"...It still makes him queasy, the idea of eating a fast-food burger."

— CHARLES HARRIS

seeking more than $5,000 and an apology, according to records filed in the Eau Claire County Circuit Court.

Hoolihan, quarterback on the university's team that reached the semifinals of the NCAA Division III playoffs last fall, said he bought the bad burger June 13, 1997.

While driving down an Interstate, Hoolihan said he had just taken a bite out of the burger when he first noticed a worm crawling inside of it.

"He got sick to his stomach," his attorney, Charles Harris, told the Associated Press. "It still makes him queasy, the idea of eating a fast-food burger."

Hoolihan said he re-wrapped the burger and put in a freezer, at home.

He also reported the incident to local McDonald's management the next day. Company representatives said the matter was brought to their attention 18 months ago.

Hoolihan took the burger to be analyzed by a biology professor who determined the worm was a beetle larva.

McDonald's representatives said they never got a chance to examine the burger because it was taken off the premises and not returned for inspection.

The company has sound operations when it comes to food preparation and serving, Jim Hoeft, director of operations for Courtesy Corp., which owns several franchises in western Wisconsin, said.

IN MANY COMPANIES IT TAKES YEARS TO PROVE YOU CAN LEAD...

WE'LL GIVE YOU 10 WEEKS.

Ten weeks may not seem like much time to prove you're capable of being a leader. But if you're tough, smart and determined, ten weeks and a lot of hard work could make you an Officer of Marines. And Officer Candidates School (OCS) is where you'll get the chance to prove you've got what it takes to lead a life full of excitement, full of challenge, full of honor. Anyone can say they've got what it takes to be a leader, we'll give you ten weeks to prove it. For more information call 1-800-MARINES, or contact us on the Internet at: www.Marines.com Wrestling) Monday Night Nitro.

Both programs are on different channels at the same time, but that is not a problem! They just set up two television sets and watch grown men in under-wear go at it for three hours.

The rest of the team is slowly following the only players from Tennessee — maybe that's why they bond so well together into the realm of wrestling. Freshman David Carney said he'd watch more if they had the USA network in the residence halls. Junior Chris Thunell watches it sometimes.

But thanks to Mells, Watts and Tilmon, the entire team got a chance to enjoy all the high-risk maneuvers, kicks to the solar plexuses, steel chairs, foreign objects, Irish whips, cage matches and all that other wrestling lingo during a recent bus trip to Evansville, Ind.

"We're going down the freeway, and somebody pops in a tape," assistant coach Alan Major said. "I think it's going to be a movie because we usually watch movies. I look up there, and it's (The Undertaker), and he's standing on the screen."

"I said, 'Well hold up. Wait a minute. Come on now!'"

But maybe watching pro-wrestling before games is good. They sure could have used a "Rock Bottom" or a "Tombstone Pile-Drive" against physical teams such as Wichita State University this season. Or when they traveled to the Dominican Republic for the exhibition games back in August.

Against those guys there were no scripts: There was no acting.

"We thought those were wrestling matches for real," Tilmon said. "We were getting body-slammed, suplexed, clotheslined and under-cuts. We received a lot, but we dished some of it out. [Watts] slammed somebody, and the floor started shaking."

Look out rest of the Missouri Valley Conference. These Salukis put the same value of a "Stone Cold Stunner" from Steve Austin as a Michael Jordan fadeaway. And why shouldn't they? The Texas Rattlesnake entertains us just like Jordan or Dennis Rodman.

Where else can you see your hero drink a cold beer immediately after opening a can of you know what on somebody? And unlike Lattrell Sprewell, Austin is applauded for assaulting his boss — Vince McMahon.

Saluki coach Bruce Weber won't knock his players for getting caught up in a male soap opera. Actually, he likes to look at it as part of the whole "team bonding" thing.

"It's kind of all part of that building as a team," Weber said. "Then when you get into a tight game, they kind of hang together and fight through the tough times."

You want to know why? Because Bruce Weber said so. And that's the bottom line. Oh, hell yeah!

Wizard's Strickland pure magic

TONY KORNHEISER
WASHINGTON POST

Our first question today comes from A. Pollin, who asks, "Who won, and who lost in the Rod Strickland negotiations?"

That's easy. The Wizards won. Strickland won. David Falk lost.

The Wizards won, because they have a terrific point guard for the next three seasons (and for a fourth season if, at 35, Strickland is still rated among the premier point guards). By signing Strickland the Wizards have given themselves a more compelling argument to make with Mitch Richmond to stay in Washington — because Richmond would have to look far and wide before he finds a better fit in the backcourt. And as long as we're playing out this scenario, with Strickland and Richmond in place, the Wizards are going to look more attractive to other free agents

Strickland won, because he got much, much more money from the Wizards than he could have gotten any place else. He is now guaranteed $40 million, thanks to some 11th-hour beneficence from the owner — a sweetening of the pot that should play well with players around the league. Strickland is on a team that needs him in a city that likes him. (And he knows the lay of the land at MCI Center, which is to say, where all the refreshment stands are in case he wants to grab a hot dog during a timeout — though Rod insists he's eating healthy during games these days.)

Falk lost. Falk is obviously a skilled negotiator, but his battles with the Wizards are too personal. He trumpeted the fanciful amounts of money he could get Strickland. But by the endgame of this negotiation the Bird of Prey was so preoccupied with his own ego that he'd put his client in jeopardy; if Strickland hadn't signed with Washington (for a guarantee far below the Bird of Prey's demand), his only alternative elsewhere was a one-year, $1 million contract.

With a rookie salary scale, and the ability of free agents to make a big score by changing teams now curtailed, agents have lost their clout. They no longer wield as much power to act as de facto GMs; blackmailing franchises and arranging for sign-and-trades.

Ironically, in their zeal to unseat David Stern as NBA commissioner, high-profile agents like Falk and Arn Tellem have killed their golden goose.

They were rainmakers under the old system — and they wanted more. Now, under the new system, the agents are the biggest losers. C'est la guerre.

Our next question comes from an E. Holyfield, who asks, "Please tell me what's happening with Mike Tyson. I'm all ears."

At the moment, Tyson's boxing career is on hold while he gets ready for an exciting career in the growing field of making license plates.

HOME

But gradually senior O'Desha Proctor and sophomore Courtney Smith became familiar with their new guard positions. And it showed Saturday, as five players reached double-digits — just in time for the crucial homestand.

The Salukis are still without point guards sophomore Tiffany Traylor (knee) and freshman Kim Holloway (back) for the rest of the season because of injuries. But those who can play are almost or are completely healthy again.

"We're getting healthier, and that's the good news," Beck said. "We're sore, but I gave them two days off for the first time since October. Hopefully, they will be fresh and ready to go [Tuesday] for our two-week homestand."

Playing their best basketball, getting a week to prepare for a four-game homestand, and a chance to rest a couple days — these could be the best of times for the Salukis.

But the Salukis now play host to three of the top four teams in the conference, including Valley-leader the University of Evansville

Saturday. They also have yet to face third-place Southwest Missouri State University this season.

This just might be the best of times for the Salukis now, but what happens on this homestand will determine how the season will be remembered.

"I think everybody is still learning how to compete," Beck said. "They're learning how to survive without a true point guard and learning how to play together."

The Salukis begin a four-game homestand at 4 p.m. Saturday against the University of Evansville.

Tyson may serve sentence and fight

JAIL HOUSE ROCK:
Boxer seeks transfer into pre-release center after 60-day period.

KATHERINE SHAVER
WASHINGTON POST

Heavyweight fighter Mike Tyson could be back in training within 60 days — while serving his jail sentence in Maryland — and could even ask a judge for permission to leave town temporarily for a prizefight while incarcerated, a jail official said Monday.

The possibility that Tyson could continue his fighting career — and perhaps stave off being returned to prison in Indiana at the same time — might have been behind his failure to appeal his one-year jail sentence Monday, said lawyers familiar with his case.

Although it was widely anticipated that Tyson would file an appeal and a request for bond as soon as the courthouse opened, neither was filed. He has 30 days to challenge the sentence he received last week for attacking two motorists after a minor automobile collision in Gaithersburg, Md., last summer.

Lawyers familiar with the case said Tyson's attorneys might be weighing the possibility that his boxing career, worth millions, might have a better chance of staying afloat if Tyson serves out the jail sentence now rather than contesting it.

A District Court official said

Tyson's Rockville, Md., attorney, Paul F. Kemp, "started the paperwork" on an appeal by requesting the proper form Monday morning but never completed it. "He said he'd come back," the court official said.

Kemp did not return calls seeking comment Monday.

In addition to continuing his training, lawyers said, Tyson could use his time in a Montgomery County detention facility — as little as seven months with good behavior — to show the Indiana judge and the Nevada Athletic Commission that

— RUSS HAMILL,
ACTING DIRECTOR OF MONTGOMERY
COUNTY DEPT. OF REHABILITATION AND CORRECTION

he is being duly punished.

Though he said he has not decided what to do about Tyson's probation status, George Walker, Tyson's Indiana probation officer, suggested Monday that the Maryland jail sentence would not automatically lead to a probation violation hearing in Indiana. Tyson would have to be returned to Indiana for such a hearing to determine whether he should be returned to prison for his 1992 rape conviction there, Walker, said. "Somewhere along the way, we might get everyone together and say, 'Hey, do we really want a big circus in town to do something with him, or can we do something without a hearing and save a lot of taxpayer money?'" Walker said. "There are different ways of working on it."

Tyson is five weeks away from completing probation in Indiana. If he stays in jail here, it might not be much longer before Tyson is back in the ring — at least to train.

Officials said that after serving 60 days in the county jail, he could be transferred to the Pre-Release Center.

Like any inmate at the center, which is designed to rehabilitate inmates and help them adjust to society, Tyson would be required to work during the day in his chosen profession, said Russ Hamill, acting director of the Montgomery County Department of Rehabilitation and Correction.

"Since boxing is his employment and his job, we'd have to verify where he is and that he remained drug- and alcohol-free," Hamill said.

Tyson's workplace, Hamill said, could be a gym.

Tyson's attorneys argued repeatedly during his sentencing hearing last week that Tyson is millions of dollars in debt and, at 32 years old, has perhaps one year left in his boxing career.

Shelly Finkel, Tyson's adviser, testified that Tyson could pay off that debt with three or four more fights. Tyson is scheduled to fight April 24 against an unnamed opponent.

Southwest boasts one of the league's top backcourts in Kevin Ault (11.7) and William Fontleroy (10.3).

To lessen the scoring load off Collum, Weber is hoping senior guard Monte Jenkins (14.1) and junior forward Chris Thunell can pick up the slack. Thunell is starting to show some signs of life after nailing a key three-pointer late in the win against the Redbirds Sunday.

"I'd like to get him more looks," Weber said. "Some of that is we've got to screen a little more for him. But he's done a good job of taking what he can get."

The winner of this game gets the inside track on the other in their quests to the MVC regular season title. The Bears (16-7; 8-5) and Salukis, who were picked eighth in the preseason polls, are tied for third behind the University of Evansville (10-3) and Bradley University (9-4).

"I'm just telling kids that we're not supposed to be here," Weber said. "Just enjoy, have fun, feel good and compete. We're not under any pressure."

They smell what 'The Rock' is cookin'

SHANDEL RICHARDSON
SPORTS EDITOR

The most electrifying move in all of sports is a question that has unlimited answers. Because basketball is my favorite sport, the answer has to come from the hardwood.

Let's see.

There's Tim Hardaway's cross-over dribble.

Um, a Kareem Abdul-Jabbar sky-hook. Wait, you couldn't stop Kevin McHale's up-and-under. Or maybe my very own baseline drive to the basket (those of you at the Recreation Center know what I'm talking about).

After spending a few hours coming up with all kinds of signature moves — didn't World B. Free have the most gorgeous spin move? And Jack Haley's towel wag was something special — I decided to ask Seluki freshman point guard Brandon Mells his opinion. You wouldn't believe the answer I got. Here's a hint: Can you smell what "The Rock" is cookin'?

For the World Wrestling Federation impaired, Mells is speaking of the "Corporate (formerly People's) elbow, the finishing move of The Rock. Once he raises the Corporate (again formerly People's) Eyebrow, Mells and a few other Saluki know the most electrifying move of all sports is coming.

"Folks started to stop liking ("The Rock"), but they still wait for that move," Mells says. "They're all still waiting for the 'People's Elbow,' or shall I say the 'Corporate elbow.' It's just his flavor. Everybody likes his flavor."

Not only has pro wrestling captivated the nation, it has Mells, junior forward Derrick Tilmon and senior center James Watts glued to their television sets on Monday nights.

At 7 p.m., it's not hard to find them — over at Watts' girlfriend's house watching WWF Raw or WCW (World Championship

ROAD WARRIORS:
Men's basketball team looks for fourth straight win over Bears.

SHANDEL RICHARDSON
SPORTS EDITOR

The Southwest Missouri State University basketball team saddled up and rode off into the sunset in its first meeting with the Salukis this season.

"We just rode our horse in the second half," Bears coach Steve Alford said after his team defeated the Salukis 76-62 Dec. 12 at the SIU Arena.

The horse he was speaking of was the Bears 7-foot senior center Danny Moore. Moore scored 18 of his game-high 22 points in the second half to beat the Salukis.

"When we played them last time, it seemed like anything he shot inside the three-point line he was making it," Saluki junior forward Derrick Tilmon said.

Tonight, the two teams meet in the grudge match, and the Salukis (13-8, 8-5) get a chance to corral the "horse." Tip-off is 7:05 at the Hammons Center in Springfield, Mo. Moore is sixth in the Valley in scoring (17.0 ppg) and first in blocks (2.43).

"We're going to post-trap him," Saluki coach Bruce Weber said. "I mean everybody does on him — you have to. The key thing is who you bring over, and that's what we have to decide as a staff as we watch film."

Said Tilmon: "We were a different team then. Now we're starting to learn the defensive system. You really don't want (Moore) to touch the ball.

Tim Schuster/Daily Egyptian

SIUC men's basketball coach Bruce Weber is hoping junior forward Chris Thunell (32) will help with the scoring responsibilities as point guard Ricky Collum recovers from an eye injury.

Basically, you try not to let him get it where he is comfortable."

As an added boost to morale, SIUC junior point guard Ricky Collum's status has been upgraded from doubtful to probable for tonight. Collum, the Salukis' second-leading scorer (11.5), suffered a blowout fracture to his right eye socket after taking a knee to the eye in Sunday's 69-63 win over Illinois State University.

Collum did not practice

Monday, and went through only light workouts Tuesday. Weber said Collum will wear a protective mask to prevent any more damage to the injury.

"[Tuesday morning] he saw two doctors, and they OK'd it," Weber said. "Everybody said if he plays, it's not going to endanger him."

Collum has been one of the Salukis' primary scorers as of late, and the eye problem could pose problems in shooting.

Freshman Brandon Mells could see a lot of action if Collum struggles.

"I'm ready for it," Mells said. "I've got the system down, but hopefully Rick will be back. He's been on a hot streak, anyway."

Mells is not as much of a scoring threat as Collum, but Mells is a solid defender.

Can Salukis take game one step higher?

HOME SWEET HOME?

Women's basketball team plays next four games at SIU Arena.

PAUL WLEKINSKI
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

This just might be as good as it gets for the SIUC women's basketball season.

The 64-60 win over Bradley University (6-14, 0-12) Saturday all but solidified a berth in the Missouri Valley Conference tournament March 6 in Des Moines, Iowa. The Salukis (6-14, 5-7) own a four-and-a-half-game lead over Illinois State University for the eighth and final spot with just six games remaining.

"We always talk about splitting on the road," said SIUC coach Julie Beck, whose team lost 65-61 to the University of Northern Iowa Thursday. "It probably couldn't come at a better time. That puts us in a lot better position in the tournament."

Eighth place is not the best position, but optimism fills the air. The Salukis have won two of their last three games and are on the brink of a four-game homestand that could move the Salukis into the heart of the MVC field.

"We had 80 minutes to play on the road, and I would say that for probably 65 or 70 we competed as hard as I've seen us compete consistently all year," Beck said. "That was exciting."

A bit behind schedule from where they should be as a result of numerous injuries, the Salukis may be playing their best basketball. Beck was left juggling the lineup in hopes of finding any effective combinations of a once-deteriorated team with only nine healthy
