Carbondale Muslims are Building a place to worship

Islamic faith more than just about a building to area practitioners

DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

TED SCHURTER - DAILY EGYPTIAN

Iman Abdul-Haqq will serve as the spiritual leader of the new mosque located at the corner of Wall and Chestnut streets in Carbondale. The Muslim community began working with the city four years ago to begin work on the mosque, which is set for completion by the beginning of March.

Followers of the Islamic religion will finally get their own place to worship with the building of a new Muslim mosque in Carbondale.

The mosque, located at the corner of Wall and Chestnut streets, is the first ever in Carbondale. The Muslim community began working with the city four years ago to build a mosque for the area. A mosque is a Muslim religious temple of worship.

The building took almost a year to build and is set for completion by early March. The mosque was built facing west, toward the direction of Mecca in Egypt, a place of Islamic worship.

"Our mosque is built on the principles of the Qur'an and in the example of the life of Mohammed," said Iman Abdul-Haqq, who will serve as the spiritual leader of the mosque.

Mohammed, a Muslim prophet, is considered the founder of the Islamic faith. His teachings are the basis of the holy Qur'an, the spiritual bible for Muslims. The title of Iman in terms of the Islamic faith is similar to that of a minister.

Faisal Ahmad is a member of the SIUC Muslim Student Association. He said although the mosque is good for the community, he wants people to know that the Islamic faith is about more than just a building.

"It really doesn't matter whether you call it a mosque or not, wherever you worship is what's important," said Ahmad, an undeclared student from Carbondale.

The Islamic Center served as a base for area Muslims. The Center will continue to be an activity area for the Muslim community, but the new mosque will become home.

"The Islamic Center will still be an active place of worship, but it makes things more convenient in terms of the students who attend the University here," said Najjar Abdul-Musawwir, a professor of art and design, who also worked to establish the mosque.

He said the mosque's funding was supplied by private donors and from fund raising, but would not disclose the total cost.

Abdul-Haqq, a life-long Carbondale resident, said the Muslim community established its roots here in 1971. They started out having meetings and services in a little garage, he said. They have used other facilities during the years, including the Eurma Hayes Center and the Islamic Center of Carbondale.

Abdul-Haqq said they plan to establish workshops and

Suspect at large in Carbondale man stabbing

Police looking for man accused of attempted murder of neighbor

DAVID FERRARA
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Carbondale police are searching for a man who allegedly stabbed his neighbor after an argument outside an apartment on North Brush Street Tuesday night.

The two Carbondale men got into a debate that nearly turned deadly, police said, when J.D. Carter knocked on Junior

H. Bradsfield's apartment door with a knife.

Bradsfield opened the door, and he was stabbed in the stomach.

Police arrived at the apartment building around 10:30 p.m. Tuesday and found Bradsfield, 62, clutching his stomach and bleeding from a stab wound. He was rushed to Memorial Hospital of Carbondale.

Blood stained the sidewalk, a few feet from the apartment's west door Wednesday afternoon.

Though police are saying the attack on Bradsfield was directed at him, they are considering the suspect armed and dangerous.

"It was obviously from this argument earlier," said Carbondale Police Media Relations Officer Don Elliott. "It wasn't random. The suspect definitely knew who he wanted to harm. It was directed at [Bradsfield] specifically.

"We'll treat anybody like that as dangerous."

Court records indicated Carter had a long history of trouble with the law, with arrests ranging from unlawful use of a firearm to robbery, domestic battery and drug arrests.

Police said Bradsfield knew the suspect before the argument Tuesday evening, and that both men lived alone in the apartment building on Brush Street.

Police said no one witnessed the crime.

Carter is a 45-year-old, 5-foot-9-inch African-American man with brown hair and brown eyes. He was last seen wearing a blue shirt and blue pants. Police said they believe he is in Carbondale.

A warrant has been issued for his arrest. Upon apprehension, police will charge Carter with attempted murder, armed violence and aggravated battery. Carter's bail is set at $100,000.

Bradsfield was in stable condition at Memorial Hospital of Carbondale at press time Wednesday.

Anyone with information regarding Carter's location should call the Carbondale Police Department at 549-2121.

BOT will hear real story about weekend Schneider fire

First BOT meeting of the semester tonight

ANDY EGENSEN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Fire safety in the SIUC residence halls were ironically placed on the Board of Trustees' agenda before fires destroyed a room on the 12th floor of Schneider Hall last weekend.

The item, which is under the Architecture and Design Committee, will be a detailed topic of discussion at today's meeting in Student Center Ballroom B. Interim Chancellor John Jackson has scheduled a two-part meeting concerning what exactly happened with the fire last weekend.

All public safety and University Housing authorities reported to Jackson Wednesday, and will follow-up their findings at the board meeting today. Jackson said the reports will provide him with additional details of the incident.

"We are working on the issue of exactly why the student worker that was at the desk didn't understand that the alarm went to the fire station," Jackson said.

According to Jackson, false claims were made that the fire alarms in Schneider Hall did not work properly. He met with fire and University Housing officials Wednesday to get a broad array of viewpoints about the weekend fire.

Jackson's original plan to investigate the fire did not include bringing in students to tell their side of the story.

After being asked why students were not included, Jackson said he would look into the possibility of including their input.

Jackson said University Housing will talk about every aspect, including why some students are telling false accounts of the incident. He said plans may include briefing additional residents of Schneider Hall.

Jackson thought the routine fire procedure worked well to his knowledge, but wonders if eyewitnesses misconstrued their account.

"When you get a bunch of students getting interviewed by the media, you get a bunch of different stories," Jackson said. "But we emptied the building in record time, that is the bottom line."

Interim President Frank Horton said there are no special plans for the meeting, but the board will want to review the fire safety aspects. He thought the weekend procedures worked well and was happy everyone exited the building safely.

The board will also discuss the Interim SIU President Frank Horton settles into his new position at the Stone Center. Horton was hired as interim president after former President Ted Sanders resigned from the position last December.

Horton ready to hit the ground running

Highest University official can relate to small wardrobes of students

ANDY EGENSES
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Interim President Frank Horton was tied up all last week — Literally.

He had to wear the same tie to work for two consecutive days because he has yet to move all of his belongings to campus.

Horton, 60, began his new position more than a week ago, but needed to do some more shopping to hold his wardrobe through the beginning period of the job.

In preparation of the Board of Trustees meeting, Horton needed to purchase a new tie.

"I get all of my old ones back this weekend so I don't want to buy too many," Horton said.

Horton's first week in the president's office has been similar to a student returning to campus. Some of the main things he needed to do involved getting acquainted with different leaders on campus and reacquainting himself with Carbondale, the town he called home from 1975 to 1980.

"Just driving down Lincoln Drive brings back memories," Horton said.

But his lifestyle has not changed too much since he took the interim position at SIU. Horton begins his day about 5 a.m. with a morning run, if his schedule allows for it. And it appears his enthusiasm for life filters into the president's office as well.

Scott Kaiser, assistant to the President, said change of atmosphere has been a chance for the office to be re-energized.

"He's an energetic guy. He's always moving, and I don't know when he might pop in the office here," Kaiser said. "He's not just going to be a seat warmer; we found that out."

Kaiser said Horton's first week was successful because he made a good first impression at the state legislature in Springfield.

Kaiser said it was a key time because Gov. George Ryan proposed his budget and it was a good budget for SIU.

SIU recommended budget highest in recent history

Ryan's budget request has good chance of approval

KAREN BLATTER

As Gov. George Ryan recommended to fully fund all of the Illinois Board of Higher Education budget request for fiscal year 2001; SIU received one of the highest dollar increases in recent years.

Last year, SIU received $218.7

million in state general funds. This year Ryan recommended a 5.7 percent increase, giving SIU $231.3 million.

SIU received a similar percentage increase as three other state schools, but was still behind Eastern Illinois University's 6.9-percent increase and above Northern Illinois University's 5.1-percent increase.

Elaine Hyden, vice president for planning and budget services, said the dollar amount increase is one of the best that SIU has been recommended

Pepsi's deal with SIU will not be investigated by state

Initial investigation plan vacated regarding contract

JAVETTE BOLINSKI
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The Illinois Attorney General's Office has no intention at this time of investigating a 1997 no-bid contract between SIU and Marion Pepsi bottler Harry Crisp, making it the second state entity to forego such an inquest.

Scott Mulford, spokesman for Attorney General Jim Ryan, said Wednesday Ryan's staff believes the contract has violated no state laws.

"There's nothing that our folks can see in the statutes or anywhere else that has been violated," Mulford said. "We have not been asked by anybody to look at it, and checking with other folks in our office, there's no reason at this point that we would be involved."

The Illinois Legislative Audit Commission unanimously accepted SIU's fiscal year 1998 audit during a hearing in Springfield Monday. Area media speculated last week that members of the commission would question SIU's representatives about a 1997 no-bid contract with Crisp. The contract was created after Crisp donated $500,000 toward a new floor in the SIU Arena. In exchange for the donation, University officials agreed to allow only Pepsi products to be sold at basketball, football and baseball events.

But during Monday's hearing, none of the commissioners questioned SIU representatives about the contract, leading SIU general counsel Peter Ruger, who was present at the hearing, to believe the state is in agreement that the contract is on the up-and-up.

Rep. Julie Curry, D-Mount Zion, co-chairwoman of the commission, said after Monday's hearing that the Crisp contract is a legal matter, not the subject of an audit. She added that other Illinois colleges and universities have entered into similar contracts with Crisp, and that SIU should not be singled out if the issue is to be discussed.

The Legislative Audit Commission is responsible for oversight of the State Audit Program, review of the stewardship of public funds and the monitoring of action to correct weaknesses disclosed by the audits of state agencies.

The commission's membership consists of 12 legislators appointed by the General Assembly leadership and is equally apportioned between the two houses and political parties. Six of the 12 members were absent during SIU's hearing Monday.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

U. of Pennsylvania stage anti-sweatshop sit-in

Students at the University of Pennsylvania are staging a sit-in outside the president's office as a part of their campaign against the sweatshop manufacturing of goods bearing the institution's name and logo. Starting at noon on Feb. 7, 17 students, all members of the University of Pennsylvania Students Against Sweatshops, sat in the foyer outside the president's office.

The students staged their protest in reaction to a letter from President Judith Rodin. In it, Rodin stated she would not remove the university from the Fair Labor A, an organization charged with coming up with a code of conduct for the production of collegiate apparel, and join a new group, the Workers' Rights Consortium.

Student protesters on several campuses have urged their institutions to drop their affiliation with the FLA, which is supported by corporations such as Nike and Reebok. The students favor the consortium, which requires full disclosure of factory locations and independent inspections of those facilities. Students also seem to favor the WRIC because it counts the international human rights organization Global Exchange among its members.

Rodin issued a statement on Monday night stating that she would determine Penn's participation in either anti-sweatshop group after she receives a report from a committee made up of student, faculty and administrators. The report is due March 22.

OUR WORD

The words of the millennium are recruitment and retention

Recruitment and retention have been the buzzwords on campus lately. SIUC recently hired a recruitment and retention firm, administrators often name them as a top priority and the DAILY EGYPTIAN reports about them in relation to topics ranging from basketball coaches to grounds maintenance.

The big Rs are big news at this point in SIUC's history because as the University struggles with administrative leadership, faculty salary issues and other pressing problems, a drop in enrollment could turn a bad spell into a perilous spiral downward. Interim Chancellor John Jackson told the DAILY EGYPTIAN Editorial Board, even with help from an outside contractor, big jumps in enrollment numbers are simply not an achievable goal in the short term. Anyone who ever tried a crash diet can tell you big, fast change is rarely real change. As SIUC's reputation slowly recovers from the Animal House-esque image, students looking for the quality education SIUC has to offer will find their way here and stay here. Meanwhile every segment of the University can work to expedite that process. Encouraging high school faculty to visit SIUC can help crumble the distorted and outdated images many still cling to. Once a school counselor walks through campus and experiences the beauty and academic excellence SIUC has to offer, they may be more inclined to encourage students to attend our school.

One positive step that has already been implemented is the Cancellation Call Center. In past semesters, when a student failed to meet the deadline to pay tuition, their classes were automatically dropped. Now, students receive a call reminding them of the impending pay date. Many colleges like the College of Liberal Arts, which garnered the highest number of students this semester, makes the effort to call prospective students who request information. When a high school senior is wading through a sea of university brochures, a phone call from a human being can really set SIUC apart.

The College of Mass Communication and Media Arts has student ambassadors so prospective students can email their questions and get answers from an SIUC student's perspective. How many student advisers or department heads know how the cafeteria food tastes or which dorms have the best rooms? All of these suggestions come down to the same issue: Students need individual attention. SIUC offers its students the vast resources and opportunities of a large school, but many also need to be sure they will not become anonymous and slip through the cracks.

This school is not so large that instructors don't know most of their student's names. SIUC's future hinges on our ability to attract students, which hinges on convincing them we have something more than other institutions. To a prospective student or a student experiencing difficulty here, it is vital that we show them no matter how big we are, we will always have our Southern hospitality.

Put focus on citizens with no loyalty to country

DEAR EDITOR,
I am writing in regards to the controversial subject of the death penalty. To me, it is totally ineffective. I consider it a drawback of society, and I think it creates a complete flaw in the judicial institution. It is unfair for any man to take a life. At any time, under any circumstance, man should not be able to murder under right of law. Even criminals, habitual offenders, and murderers are human beings, they are criminals. To make a difference, I think that capital execution is not a viable solution. This could sound mocking and contradictory, but I believe that the focus should be taken off of the "criminals" and put on the people in society who show no loyalty to country, no honor for the law, no respect for the law and no responsibility for duty as citizens. These are the social parasites; these are the ones most subject to that sort of harsh treatment.

THEIR WORD

Written by Deveron Q. Sanders, Campus Correspondent for the University of Michigan on February 7, 2000.

So, researchers say college students are largely apathetic about politics.

Well, duh.
But for those still struggling to explain this sorry state of student political affairs, consider this a little primer. It's really not hard for anyone in college to explain.

So here goes: This generation is really into having fun. Sports and technology are fun. Sex is fun. Politics? Uh-huh.

There aren't too many of us who would ditch a night out with friends in favor of hanging by a TV to catch some 60-year-old rambling about healthcare reform. Republican party or keg party? Senate floor or dance floor?

Hmmmm... those aren't tough calls at all. And if you want to see a real landslide, just poll college students on those two questions alone.

Looking for another reason why so few of us seem to care about all the political blather? Here it is: No one is talking about issues that really interest us, and no one has made much of an effort to reach out to us.

Unlike the past, we don't have prominent, young and exciting political figures like John F. Kennedy or Martin Luther King, Jr. calling us to action or rallying us around any one, central cause. The assassinations of Kennedy and King made a big and bad impact on the status of politics among the nation's youth and left us with a gap in the ages of prominent politicians. As a result, today's college students were stuck growing up with an aging Ronald Reagan and George Bush. With all due respect to both men, it's highly doubtful today's college students would list them among their role models.

Because of the big age gap, politicians aren't speaking our language. Many, if not most, of us aren't collecting pensions, struggling with poor health or paying taxes. Those issues don't really touch us, so why bother with them? We are talking about abortion, affirmative action and the death penalty — three issues that haven't scored much of a mention among any of the frontrunners in this year's presidential campaign.

So, are we hopeless? Are we going to snap out of our apolitical funk?

Yes. Our vision will clear up pretty quickly once we leave the utopian environment of college to become active, contributing members of the "real world." It's a pretty safe bet that relatively recent college grads — say those between 27 and 35 — now have a much bigger interest in what goes on in Washington than they when they were still in school. That's because what our government decides has a much more direct impact on them — and their pocketbooks.

I have faith that we will see more students getting interested in politics and government. There are a lot of oldersters on Capitol Hill, and someone will have to take their place.

For those who are impatient to see us jump into action, I suggest running a campaign insisting on drastic reductions in federal student financial aid.

I guarantee you'll see us snap to attention then.

Play the game of love

It's February again, and we all know what that means. Your mailbox is going to be crammed full of advertisements, each store trying to get a little chunk of profit from the big V.D.

Valentine's Day, that is.
Each year, we get bombarded with commercials telling us the right way to say "I love you." And at some point, each of us have been sucked into that atrocious lie, convinced that without the traditional flowers, chocolates or diamonds, we are not really loved. But the truth is, we've forgotten the best part about being loved — feeling special. How special is the cellophane box of chocolates we know every other person in America is going to receive that day?

I remember one year in elementary school, I had a crush on one of the boys in my class — let's call him Billy. For weeks before Valentine's Day, I plotted to find the perfect way to express my feelings to him. I decided to make his Valentine special, putting little conversation hearts in the envelope spelling out my secret. I just knew when he opened that Valentine and saw my clever candy plot, he would return the affection and we would live happily ever after.

When the fateful day arrived, I could hardly contain myself. As the rest of the class traded valentines, I spied on my crush. I anxiously watched him make his way through the pile of envelopes on his desk, tossing each aside after a quick glance. Was he searching for mine? I wondered to myself. Suddenly, his hand landed on my card. I trembled as he tore open the little white envelope, bulging with candy messages from his secret admirer. He pulled out my hand-picked "She-Ra" valentine and flipped it over to see the name. As he did, my candy hearts tumbled out of the envelope. This was the moment of truth; I thought as I held my breath. Nothing will ever be the same again.

Without a glance, Billy picked up the hearts and shoveled the handful into his mouth, my clever plot foiled forever.

That was the moment I realized men don't understand Valentine's Day. It's become so much of a tradition, they think it is just a scheme cooked up by girlfriends and wives to con them out of some hard-earned dough and cough up an expensive present.

Well, guys, here's a secret about Valentine's Day — it's not about candy or flowers. It's not even about presents. I know many people disagree with the holiday altogether, on the grounds that every day should be special, not just one holiday out of the year.

Many of us have abused the holiday in the past, using it to lure our partners into giving expensive presents and promises of commitment. But Valentine's Day is special for a totally different reason. It's a game — a battle of wits, mind you — between a couple, to find new ways to make the other feel special. It's a celebration of love, not a tactic for winning presents or fodder for commercialism. Of course we should love each other every day, and not just on Valentine's Day or anniversaries. But once in a while, it is nice to have a special day set aside, just to spend with your partner and invent new ways to make that person feel special.

So this year, save your money. Do something more precious than exchanging flowers or chocolate. Play the game of love.

possibility of making a parking expansion on the west side of campus near Lesar Law Building. The plan calls to expand Lot 59, allowing about 145 additional parking spaces.

The drawings and specifications for the project will be prepared by Physical Plant engineers and will be given to the board for the opportunity to review the plans.

The total cost of the project is estimated at $150,000.

Also, renovations to replace carpeting in six buildings of the Thompson Point housing area will go before the board. The selected buildings in Thompson Point are Pierce, Abbott, Bowyer, Warren, Smith and Brown halls.

The cost of this project is estimated about $135,000.

Both plans concerning the parking lot and the carpeting need to be approved by the board before action will take place.

Post-graduation outlook good for students with disabilities

Workforce Recruitment Program helps students reach goals

JASON COKER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

It's the goal of most college graduates to find a job when they leave school, but graduates with disabilities face a bigger challenge finding jobs than everybody else.

The Workforce Recruitment Program came to SIUC to help find jobs for disabled students Tuesday. SIUC's Disability Support Service worked with the Workforce Recruitment Program to help disabled students reach their post-college goals.

Nationwide, 69 percent of people with disabilities are unemployed, according to a 1999 Louis Harris Poll. The poll is conducted each year and monitors disability employment nationwide. SIUC has worked alongside the Workforce Recruitment Program for about 10 years.

"This Workforce Recruitment Program is a great opportunity for disabled people to get experience," said Lisa Belville, an English major from Marion who graduated in December 1999.

Belville, who travels everywhere with her companion, Hunter, a black lab-golden retriever mix, is blind. She was one of twelve students who were interviewed by Jim Grubb, a volunteer with the Workforce Recruitment Program.

Grubb graded the students on a scale from one to five based on how well they presented themselves. Receiving a grade of three or higher means their names, resumes and transcripts are entered into a national database where potential employers across the country can access them.

Graduate student Bill Kaiser, of Viennes, Ind., is working toward his masters in business administration to prepare him for a job in recreational facilities management. Kaiser, who is in a wheelchair, went to gain the experience of being interviewed with hopes of finding a job.

Many SIUC students are familiar with the Channel 3 News segments "Unsung Hero" and "Class Act." They are produced by SIUC graduate Time Ulmer, who has epilepsy. As part-time employee of Channel 3 News, Ulmer is counting on this chance to give him the full-time job he needs.

Snow joke: UNC students to make up classes missed due to foul weather

Students at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill thought they'd witnessed a miracle after a record snowstorm meant no classes for three days in a row just two weeks ago. Now, the Board of Governors of the UNC System says those classes have to be made up, even if students miss out on Good Friday and a few weekend hours.

The make-up proposal, reported in The Daily Tar Heel on Monday, faced objections from students, faculty, and even UNC-CH Acting Chancellor William McCoy, whose request that reading days during finals week count as class days was denied.

Now the question isn't if, but when and how, said Monika Moore, UNC-CH's Student Body Vice President.

Moore chairs the Student Advisory Committee to the Chancellor, a group that has requested the classes be made up on one Sunday, one Saturday and Good Friday.

Moore said UNC students had to attend class a minimum of 150 days. With the loss of three days, the schedule had been bumped down to 147. The proposed make up ideas took into consideration religious practices, but that some sacrifices—especially Good Friday—may have to be made, she said.

"I would encourage students to take it seriously," Moore said in an interview with Tribune Media Services. "It's kind of a detriment to their education if they do not go to the class."

Of course, one question is how seriously the faculty members—many of whom restructured their class syllabi already—will take the make-up idea.

Students said their professors had floated ideas such as counting online discussion forums or exam study sessions as a way to make up the hours.

Because many students work on weekends and faculty members have lives outside of the classroom, it's likely that the process will be a lenient one, Moore said.

"It was my understanding that the university is definitely not going to be policing this," she said.

Tallahassee community college sponsors race car

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — With football season over, students at Tallahassee Community College are flocking to watch another other favorite sport: stock-car racing.

And this time they'll be rooting for No. 53 — a blue and yellow car bearing the college's name and college logo. Across the hood, emblazoned in red is, "Guaranteed Job Offer!"

The college's president, T.K. Wetherell, said he got the idea to sponsor a car after looking for ways to promote the institution. TCC paid $500 for the paint job and found a driver: Bob Kelly, co-owner of a local sheet metal company and a part-time race-car driver.

The advertising play has worked like a charm, Wetherell told The Chronicle of Higher Education.

Jeff Aranyos, a junior in aviation from St. Charles, performs a pre-flight check on a Cessna 152. Aranyos is one of 14 members of the Flying Salukis preparing for the National Safecan 2000. The competition marks 28 years of Flying Saluki participation in the National Intercollegiate Flying Association, with consistent top 10 finishes over the last two decades.

Flying Salukis fly high on confidence

Members of SIUC flying club hope to surpass last year's performance at national flying competition

CODELL RODRIGUEZ
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Logan Fifer is ready to lead the Flying Salukis to a top three finish at the national flying competition in May.

Fifer, a senior in aviation management from Woodstock, is the co-captain of the Flying Salukis and was named top male pilot and top pilot overall at last year's competition. Fifer is confident about their chances this year.

"In the four years I've been here, this is the best team I've been a part of," Fifer said.

Fifer, Steve Skoda, Dominic Telenko and Holly Hargadine are excited about competing in the national flying competition in Grenada, Miss. as the top ranked team in the region, a feat accomplished in October. The competition takes place the third week of May and features 29 of the top aviation schools in the nation. Events include power-off landings, simulators, navigation and an event called the message drop. The planes being used will be a Cessna 152, which is a two-seat aircraft, and a Cessna 172, a four-seat aircraft.

The Flying Salukis, who finished fourth in last year's competition, are looking to finish in the top three this year.

While the national competition is certainly a big event, the team members do not let the pressure bother them.

Telenko, a senior in aviation management from Lake Zurich, said the stress does not get to the team.

"Everyone on the team has more fun than stress," Telenko said.

Hargadine, a junior in aviation flight and management from Benton, thinks stress is a small price to pay for being a part of the team.

"I do find it stressful, but it's what I love to do," Hargadine said.

To get to the national competition, SIUC had to finish in the top three in the regional competition. The Salukis finished first against tough competition such as Lewis University, Purdue University and the University of Illinois.

SIUC's biggest rival has always been Illinois. The regional trophy has plaques added to it every year to commemorate the first-place team. The only two teams on the trophy are SIUC and the University of Illinois.

However, Telenko has a personal vendetta against Lewis University. When Telenko was attempting to land during an exercise at last year's competition, he had to follow a pilot from Louis University in. Because of the technique the pilot was using, Telenko was unable to make a normal approach.

"I'm coming for you Lewis," Telenko joked.

The rivalries do not stop at the regional competition. At the national competition, the Salukis will have to deal with the best teams in the nation.

Two of these teams come from Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University, which is an aviation-only campus. Because it has two separate campuses, Embry-Riddle gets to have two separate teams. The Flying Salukis compare it to having to fight two Mike Tyson's at one time.

Being on the Flying Salukis is a great experience for those involved, offering an exciting form of job training, said Skoda, a junior in aviation management from Lake Forest. He said he was glad to have the opportunity to be a part of the Flying Salukis.

"I didn't know what to expect," Skoda said. "I was so excited to be a part of the team."

Fifer, showing true loyalty to the team, turned down his Certified Flight Instructor certificate last year so he could compete with the Flying Salukis for another year. Having the certificate makes a team member ineligible to compete. Fifer did recently get his certificate, but waited until after the regional competition so he could compete in the nationals.

Fifer does not regret the year-long delay in getting the Certified Flight Instructor certificate.

"I got a lot of experience with the Flying Salukis," Fifer said. "I've gone beyond all my expectations."

Professor works to tear down the barriers

Lecture to add new insight into the affairs of black men

GEOFFREY RITTER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A lecture tonight by an influential black psychologist will help shed light on the black man's struggle for acceptance, and what the future holds for the fight to gain racial equality.

Joseph White, professor emeritus of psychology and psychiatry at the University of California at Irvine, will speak at 7 p.m. in the University Museum Auditorium to help commemorate Black History Month. The lecture will primarily deal with the conditions endured by black men in America.

"It will be a message of moving beyond the stereotypes that characterize the black man," he said. "They've been mad for 400 years, and I'm mad too."

White has had a long and influential role in dealing with issues involving African-Americans.

He is the author of numerous books, papers and articles on black psychology.

"Dr. White is highly regarded as the father of black psychology," said Kevin Cokley, a professor in psychology who was instrumental in arranging White's latest visit to SIUC. "He really prompted a lot of people to do research in that field."

One of White's most enduring achievements is the establishment of an educational opportunity program at California State College at Long Beach. In 1968, with the assistance of a California legislator, White helped to bring the program to all 19 California state colleges.

In addition, he was the recipient of the Citation of Achievement in Psychology and Community Service from President Clinton in 1994.

"I thought he would be an excellent choice to highlight a conference on the black male," said Seymour Bryson, associate chancellor at the SIUC affirmative action office. "I think he has a lot to offer, not only on a personal level, but a professional one as well."

White began his undergraduate education in the 1950s at San Francisco State University. He proceeded to do graduate work in clinical psychology at Michigan State University where he was trained as a child psychologist.

When he finally earned his doctorate in 1961, at the height of the civil rights movement, he was quickly whisked into a world of tension and violence.

"People were marching and screaming and burning the place down," he said of the explosive situation that had enveloped the nation. "As the only licensed black psychologist, I couldn't hide in a children's clinic."

White said he set out to study black psychology using the same techniques pioneered by the famed psychologist Sigmund Freud. Mingling in churches, fraternities and other varieties of meetings, he said the key to his research was observing the black community when they were not under the watch-dog eyes of whites.

"I wanted to see black people when there were no white people around," he said. "They behave very differently."

Black History month

The results of White's studies were first presented in an article in Ebony Magazine in the 1970s and further elaborated on in his first book in 1984. Presenting a three-dimensional perspective on the black experience and demonstrating that not all psychological experiences are universal, the results took the psychological world by storm.

"He showed that traditional theories didn't always apply to blacks," said Cokley. "It offers a more critical approach to psychology."

Now that White has retired from his teaching

Date rape drug laws pending legislature in Missouri

Arrest of St. Charles man prompts stricter laws against use of GHB

ANTONIO YOUNG
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

If precautions are not taken, there is more of a chance people could be sexually assaulted or even lose their lives after drinking from a glass spiked with GHB.

The use of the clear, slightly salty liquid drug called gamma-hydroxybutyrate has facilitated many sexual assaults across the nation. Carbondale police suspect GHB in about 12 incidents in Carbondale in the past three years.

In Missouri's first arrest of a suspect in a case involving GHB, a 21-year-old St. Charles man was questioned Feb. 2 for the near-deaths of two 19-year-old women. In December 1999, the women, also from St. Charles, were hospitalized after influenced by the date-rape drug while at a Maryland Heights dance club.

Although it is widely illegal, GHB legislature is pending in Missouri because of this case.

House Bill 1308, sponsored by Rep. Bill Boucher, D-Kansas City, would make it illegal to knowingly possess GHB. The first violation would be a misdemeanor, the second a Class-D felony punishable by up to five years in prison. A second bill, HB 1704, sponsored by Rep. Craig Hosmer, D-Springfield, would classify GHB as a Schedule II controlled substance, meaning it has a high potential for abuse but has an accepted medical use. The penalty would depend on the amount.

Illinois legislation was passed in 1997, classifying GHB as a Schedule I drug, meaning it has high potential for abuse and no accepted medical use. Penalties range with the amount sold or possessed.

In the past few years, the use of GHB has become prevalent at SIUC, drawing attention from various organizations, including the SIU Counseling Center. The Student Health Program offers sexual assault education and prevention workshops in residence halls and fraternity and sorority houses.

"One thing that I always suggest is that people watch their drinks while they're out. Make sure that you get closed containers and get your drinks directly from a bartender if possible," said Carol Sommer, a campus safety representative. "It's really a good idea to let people know where you are, so if you're not back when you think you will be, people might know where to look for you."

GHB can be slipped into a drink and dissolved within seconds to produce a hypnotic state and amnesia in only 15 minutes after ingestion. Overdosing can cause spasms, seizures, drowsiness, irregular heartbeat and vomiting.

The Women's Center in Carbondale said GHB can incapacitate men just as much as it can women, and sexual assaults against men do occur.

"A rapist chooses a vulnerable individual for their assault, and if you have been drugged and immobilized, you are an easy target for anyone," said Kelly Cichy, the center's executive director. "It's very important for men to realize that this is not just something that women have to worry about."

BUDGET

to receive.

"We are very pleased with the recommendations from the governor," she said. "Compared to [other universities] it is very favorable."

The governor's recommendations of the state call for a $525 million general funds increase for education institutions, which is the largest increase a governor has recommended without a tax increase.

In 1999, Ryan recommended a $536 million increase.

Ryan's budget was released Wednesday in his State of the State Address, where he granted $155 million to the IBHE, which continues to support his pledge for improving education.

The money is intended to allow state colleges and universities to prepare students to successfully enter the workforce and allow Illinois to compete with world changes.

Ryan's budget still awaits approval from the General Assembly, which should vote on the budget by the end of April.

Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, said Ryan has a very good relationship with the General Assembly.

"The governor has a great working relationship with both sides of the aisle," he said.

Bost said the good relationship will help to get the budget passed the way it is without changes.

Last year, the Senate Appropriations Committee made drastic reductions to Ryan's budget. The committee recommended and approved zero funding for several of SIUC's new program requests, but did target dollars for deferred maintenance.

Sen. Dave Luchtendorf, R-Okawville, said the budget for SIUC has a good chance of getting approval.

"It is the most increase ever," he said. "[SIUC Administrators] seem pleased with what they have so far. [We'll] see if we can get it all to a vote."

This is the first year that the governor has recommended the same budget that was presented from the IBHE. In 1999, Ryan reduced the increase to 6.2 percent, rather than the recommended 7.5-percent increase.

Overall in the governor's budget, SIUC will receive $162 million for programs, and SIUC-Edwardsville will receive $67.2 million.

SIUC may receive a much needed $10.5 million for the $12 million in needed renovations to Altgeld Hall and the Old Baptist Foundation.

HORTON

Many people have been trying to get in touch with Horton since he returned to campus.

"People want to meet him and see what he's all about," Kaiser said. "It has been busy, and I think it will be for several weeks."

Horton said he enjoyed attending a symphony dinner Tuesday night because he ran into people he has not seen for 20 years or more.

"That is what is great about the job — you get the chance to interact with a lot of great people," Horton said.

Horton said people come up to him and say they cannot believe he is back at SIU. The University is a special place for Horton.

"I told some people if it hadn't been SIU, I probably wouldn't have done an interim presidency," Horton said. "I've never had an interim job in my whole life."

“He's an energetic guy. He's always moving and I don't know when he might pop up in the office here. He's not going to be a seat warmer; we found that out.”

This time around, Williams, last week's MVC Player of the Week, hopes to contain the current Valley Player of the Week for both halves.

"He's probably the best scorer in the league and I look at that as a big challenge, defensively for me," Williams said.

Williams, SIU's leading scorer (13.5), said he is not going to worry about the offensive end too much and intends to just let the offense come to him, while his main concern will be shadowing

Perez

However, if given the open look, Williams will not think twice about shooting a jumper. Williams scored 15 points in the last meeting with the Shockers, despite putting forth most of his energy on the defensive end.

Weber said junior forward Abel Schrader would guard Perez when Williams is out, and if Perez gets hot, he may have to put junior forward Josh Cross on him. Weber also may institute some gimmick defenses to muzzle Perez.

Perez only scored 10 points in the Shocker 53-40 victory in a non-conference matchup with Centenary College Tuesday night. It was an ugly game that featured a 13-percent shooting display by the Gentlemen of Centenary in the second half. The Shockers only shot 33 percent for the game, going 0-for-12 from three-point range.

While Centenary maintained its primary focus on Perez, sophomore guard Terrell Benton snuck in a season-high 19 points for the Shockers.

Weber is well aware that the Shockers have other guys that can score, but would like to halt Perez's recent MVC outbursts.

"We can't let someone else go off," Weber said. "I hope Perez doesn't get 30 on us, but if we can hold him in the upper teens or around 20, then we have to do the job on every one else."

SHOCK

"It will not be easy," Weber said. "Perez is definitely one of the best players in the league, they're very athletic and they play very hard."

SIU can ill-afford to lose any of the upcoming three home games if the Salukis plan on remaining a factor in the MVC title hunt, but Weber doesn't want his team walking on eggshells.

"You've got to play to win, not worried about losing," Weber said. "That's the attitude we've got to take."

Weber can rest assured that Williams, who is coming off a career high 24-point effort against Drake last Saturday, will not be playing with any fear.

"[Williams] is kind of the guy that you hate to play against but you love to have him on your team," Weber said. "He sticks his nose in all the action and I love that. That makes him successful, and not many freshmen will do that."

Matched up against the senior Perez tonight, the Salukis' star freshman should feel right at home.

"I've always been the young kid playing with the older kids, the little pest that won't go away that you keep beating up on," Williams said.

"I don't mind playing that role. They can pound on me as much as they want, but I'm not going to go away."

responsibilities in California, he spends much of his time traveling throughout the country lecturing at universities on issues spawned by the sub-discipline his research has created.

His most recent tour is aimed to help promote his new book, "Black Man Emerging: Facing the Past and Seizing the Future."

Cokley said interest in White's work is greatly because of not only White's revolutionary studies, but also to his unique perspective on the current affairs of black people.

"He speaks everywhere and he's thoroughly sought after," he said. "Given his role in the articulation of black psychology, I think he brings an historical insight into the spirit of the times."

DOUG LARSON - DAILY EGYPTIAN

Freshman guard Kent Williams drives past a Drake defender toward the basket in a recent game at the SIU Arena. Williams, SIU's leading scorer, has been an asset to the team with his ability to infuriate opponents through aggressive play and willingness to go up against large players. The Salukis play Wichita State at the Arena at 7:05 tonight.

Salukis hope to extinguish red-hot Perez

CORY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Why was SIU head men's basketball coach Bruce Weber pleased that an opposing player scored 22 points against his ballclub?

Because that player was Wichita State University's Jason Perez. And he only scored 22.

Perez, the leading scorer in the Missouri Valley Conference (20.6 ppg) lit up Southwest Missouri State University for 33 points Feb. 2 in Wichita, Kan., and followed that up with a 34-point performance against the University of Evansville Feb. 5 in Wichita.

Perez

The Shockers (8-12, 2-9) won both MVC games, their first conference wins of the season, and are riding a three-game win streak.

The senior guard shot an uncanny 22-for-38 from the field, including an astounding 14-for-20 from three-point range in his two-game, 77-point outburst.

"There's no doubt he's the best offensive player in the league," Weber said. "We held him to 22 — and I'm saying held him — I think we did a decent job on him."

Given the task of covering the all-MVC performer was Saluki freshman guard Kent Williams. After Perez scored some quick first-half baskets amounting to 16 points by the half, it looked as if he would turn in another scoring gem.

"The last time, I started off struggling and I just worked and tried to figure out his moves and what he does," Williams said.

But after one half, Williams made the proper adjustments and learned what to do and what not to do against the 6-foot-4-inch, 205 pound Valley Player-of-the-Year candidate.

Williams held Perez to only six second-half points, which was a key element in the Salukis 87-79 road win Jan. 16 in Wichita.

"I knew where he was going to be a little more and just basically would not let him get the ball," said Williams of his second-half performance. "If he can't get the ball, he can't score."

Wichita State brings three-game win streak to SIU tonight

JAY SCHWAB

SIU freshman guard Kent Williams has been battered around all year long. On several occasions, Williams has found himself in a heap on the floor, fresh from a shove to the ground or a not-so-friendly bump from a tenacious defender.

Perhaps the most notable incident came in a loss to the University of Tennessee in the Puerto Rico Holiday Classic, when well-known Volunteer guard Tony Harris became agitated with Williams and threw the skinny Mount Vernon native to the ground. Harris was whistled for a technical foul, but the play irked Williams more than any of the others.

"[Harris] is supposed to be the big star, and all I did was set a hard screen on him and he kind of took it out of hand," Williams said. "He didn't even wait for the next play, he just turned around and whacked me. I was kind of disappointed to see it in a superstar like that."

Tonight's game between SIU and Wichita State at the SIU Arena could result in more bumps and bruises for the 6-foot-2-inch, 175 pound Williams. The Shockers (8-12, 2-9) are a rough bunch and will undoubtedly stop just short of a mugging to try to throw Williams off his game. Tip-off is set for 7:05 p.m.

"[The Shockers] play aggressively and hard and were going to have to be ready to deal with that style of basketball," Saluki head coach Bruce Weber said.

Especially Williams, who has probably not been completely innocent of stirring up all the trouble. Williams had a reputation of being a feisty player when he came to SIU, and has shown little desire to change his ways in college. Although soft-spoken off the court, Williams is a different guy when there is a victory on the line.

"He's a hard-nosed kid and plays aggressively, there's no doubt," Weber said. "He goes to the basket hard and gets hit hard and doesn't back down to anybody."

"I told him the other day I don't want everybody in the league disliking him and I don't want the referees angry with him. He's got to learn to control his emotions."

Although he does not consider himself a dirty player, Williams takes pride in infuriating opponents.

"I'm not out there trying to get into it with anybody," Williams said. "I'm not the strongest person in the world, so I have to be physical to a certain point."

Williams, SIU's leading scorer, will have the unenviable task of guarding the Shockers' best player tonight, senior guard Jason Perez. Perez, who averages 20.6 points a game, is a deadly shooter who is capable of making tough shots even when closely guarded.

The Shockers, riding a mega-hot streak from Perez, have won three straight games after getting off to a disastrous 0-9 start in the MVC. Wichita State, bear Southwest Missouri State University and the University of Evansville, then earned a non-conference win over Centenary College Tuesday. However, the Shockers have yet to win a road game this season.

Meanwhile, SIU (13-9, 7-4) is all alone in second place in the MVC, courtesy of Illinois State University's overtime win against Bradley Tuesday. The Salukis have the same record they had after 22 games a year ago, but SIU limped home to a 15-12 finish last year. This season, however, the Salukis have a favorable schedule down the stretch, with five of the remaining seven regular season games to be played in Carbondale.

SIU beat Wichita State 87-79 at Wichita, Kan., Jan. 16, but Weber is not taking the rematch for granted.

SIU (13-9, 7-4 MVC) vs. Wichita State (8-12, 2-9 MVC)

Series Notes

SIU leads 30-29, following a Saluki season sweep last year and an 87-79 SIU win in Wichita, Kan., earlier this year.

The word on the Salukis:

SIU is beginning a tremendously important three-game homestand against some of the league's lesser teams. The Salukis are coming off a blowout win at Drake Saturday that capped a 2-1 road trip. Kent Williams scored a career-high 24 points for the Salukis in that game.

The word on the Shockers:

Wichita State has won three straight games, in an attempt to salvage what has mostly been a miserable season. Shockers head coach Randy Smithson is on the hot seat, and his team will have to show a major turnaround if he is to keep his job. Leading scorer Jason Perez is a great scorer and Terrell Benton can provide a spark.

Projected SIU starting lineup:

#	G	Ricky Collum	(Sr.)	5-11	ppg.	rpg.
#3	G	Brandon Melis	(So.)	6-1	7.2	3.1

Miscellaneous:

The Salukis are continuing their charitable ways, as the first 250 students to tonight's game will receive a free welcome pack from the Saluki Pride Committee of the Carbondale Chapter of Commerce. Six students will also receive round trip Amtrak tickets to Chicago.

Bottom Line:

The Salukis are in striking distance to make a late push for the Valley championship. Provided SIU can handle the Shockers' physical play and pays close attention to Perez, tonight should mark a step toward solidifying a high finish in the Valley standings.
