Sherry Craig 1956 Military Ball Queen

By Clarence Luckett

About 1,700 persons Friday evening witnessed the crowning of Sherry Craig, Pinckneville freshman, as queen of the fifth annual AF ROTC Military Ball in the Carbondale Armory.

The ceremony began when Col. Alexander R. MacMillan, SIU detachment commander, announced the entrance of the Honor Guard. Armed with rifles, the Honor Guard upon entering formed an aisle. After their positions were established, Col. MacMillan signaled for the Singing Squadron.

The two units formed a cross, with the top of the cross being the Queen's throne.

While the singing Squadron sang "Girl Of My Dreams," a waiting queen preceded through the Honor Guard and was escorted on to the stage by Col. MacMillan.

After Miss Bruce had assumed her position on the throne, the music stopped and the colonel introduced the five 1956 queen candidates. They were Miss Craig, Kay Sue Eadie, Marilyn Eckert, Joyce Hastings and Marilyn Rains.

Sherry Craig, Pinckneville freshman, radiates happiness on being crowned 1956 Military Ball Queen at the Carbondale Armory Friday night.

Outnumbered Coeds Hold Many Campus Leadership Positions

Although outnumbered two to one by men students, co-eds at Southern have been holding nearly half the campus leadership positions during the past three years.

This was revealed in a survey recently completed by Dr. Elizabeth A. Gerhardt, supervisor of student activities.

She also discovered that student leaders tend to make better grades, with point averages going up, not down, for those holding the larger number of offices.

'Council' Forum Thursday

SIU Chemistry Department Joins ACS

Southern's chemistry department, Dr. J. W. Necker, chairman, has been admitted to the American Chemistry Society by its Committee on Professional Training.

In bestowing Southern's chemistry department with membership to the ACS, the organization complimented SIU on its policy of inviting distinguished professors to visit the campus during the winter and spring quarters to give lectures.

The listing of approved departments in any university, however, is not granted for any definite length of time. If a school fails to live up to its rating, it may be dropped from the society. The department will be subject to periodic review and inspection at each meeting of the professional training committee.

"Now that we have been granted admittance to the society," Dr. Necker stated, "our graduates will be permitted to become professional members of the society within two years after their graduation; that is, if they conform to the curriculum that is set up by the society."

"It will also help in the placement of our graduates because this membership list is published nationally. Membership of the society is about 5,000."

Necker also remarked that it would help to attract a higher caliber of chemistry students to Southern.

Seven other institutions throughout the state are represented in the organization. They are University of Illinois, Northwest Missouri State, Loyola of Chicago, Bradley, Monmouth and Wheaton.

"About 170 colleges in the United States are credit schools (as determined by the ACS)," Necker said. "That's about 10 per cent of all the colleges within the states."

Radiological Defense Meet Draws 40 Towns

About 100 people, representing some 40 towns in 30 Southern Illinois counties, were present at the first meeting of the Radiological Defense Conference Thursday in the University School auditorium.

How is the student body on campus governed? If so, should the present system be changed?

These are the questions to be answered by Student Council members during the open forum on "New Methods of Representation" at 6:15 p. m. Thursday in the Life Science Auditorium. Following the regular meeting, the forum will begin. The public is invited to attend and voice their opinions.

Other business of the council meeting will include the reading of a proposed addition to the by-laws and discussion on the Student Union fee.

The subject of misrepresentation in the Student Council was brought up last spring quarter when eight students with Bob Edgell, past president of the council, as spokesman, introduced a constitutional amendment changing the present system of representation to one of equal representation from living groups.

"We could not act on what eight students wanted," said Clyde Reynolds, president. "So we brought it up at Fall Leadership Camp in session to be the discussion group on student government. Here we changed such of Edgell's constitution and in general decided in wouldn't work."

In November, Edgell asked the Council to hold an open forum on this subject so the students could voice their opinions. It has been delayed until now because of Homecoming and Christmas vacation."

In the former Reynolds said, the council will take "middle-of-the-road" policy. They are to get the facts of this new representation plan and present them for all sports. These co-chairmen may select students to work on each their committees.

Each of these three co-chairmen will be assigned to one of three committees. They are: public relations—publicity, budget, and decorations, and game activities—pre and post-game activities for all sports. These co-chairmen may select students to work on each their committees.

An Optimistic Outlook

From the healthy response of letters in Friday's Mail Box on the topic of "New Methods of Representation," we are looking forward to the all-school open forum Thursday night.

We hope that the group participating in the forum will be widely representative of the students on campus.

We are going to this meeting with an optimistic outlook, and we feel that a better system of representation to the Student Council will be the result.

We now feel that the SIU student body does have interest enough to warrant a change.

And we also feel that everyone who attends—regardless of whether he is Greek, ISA, "just plain Independent," or belongs to the "Andy Gump Political Agitators" will sincerely fight for the best solution to the problem at hand.

'If Area's Forests Were In Full Production, Products Utilized Unemployment Would Decrease'—Tudor

By Peggy Morgan

"If our existing forests and forest lands were put into full production and their products fully utilized, they could offset the unemployment caused by a large number of our citizens who are unemployed and reduce our critical unemployment problem."

This is what Dr. William J. Tudor, director of the Division of Area Services, told the House Subcommittee on Appropriations for Interior and Related Agencies in Washington Friday.

Tudor was testifying in behalf of increased appropriations for a strong forestry program in Southern Illinois and similar areas in the Midwest.

Forests Concentrated

"Illinois' forests are concentrated in the southern one-third of the state," Tudor said. "In the southern 16 counties, forests and prospective forest lands represent 40 per cent of the total land area. About 80 per cent of the forests are on farms, thus spreading the income among many farm families."

"The forests of these 16 counties contain enough saw timber if of the right grade and species to construct 250,000 modern frame houses. They are growing 103 million board feet of saw timber every year."

"Early results of research conducted jointly by the Forest Service and SIU indicate that this growth can be tripled in five or six years. However, nearly half of the annual growth is unused, leaving 46 million feet annually available to support new industries."

"Proper management and utilization methods, as now being developed by the cooperative research program, can improve greatly the contributions available from these forest resources. In addition to timber, a series of by-products can be developed which include watershed protection, recreational values and better hunting and fishing."

Planned Research

Six years ago SIU and the Carbondale Forest Research Center, operated by the Central States Forest Experiment Station, undertook a planned, cooperative forest research program," Tudor said.

SIU now has offices for the Research Center, a building to house the new Wood Products Pilot Plant, technical personnel, statistical services, and cooperative funds. Major cooperative contributions are also being made by the Woods Charitable Fund, Inc. and five industrial organizations: Caterpillar Tractor, Hyman, Mail Tool, Shihira Coal, and the Illinois Central Railroad.

Efforts have been directed toward improved harvesting, utilizing and marketing of forest crops, and the growing of crops for the maximum continuous production of high-quality products.

Gains Made

"The important accomplishments during the past year," Tudor said, "are many. The Illinois Division of Highways tested their specifications for forest products to suit some native hardwoods for certain uses. This will enable the Division of Highways to obtain quality good materials at a lower cost and at the same time open up additional markets for some of our surplus forest products."

"Several paper manufacturers, who are studying the possibilities of procuring pulpwood from Southern Illinois and adjacent areas, were given consultation and assistance."

"An Eastern metallurgical industry searching for a supply of wood chips that could be made from waste was referred to a local sawmill operator. It is now negotiating with him for the raw material."

"The Wood Products Pilot Plant, dedicated last November, is now being used by the University to train students for employment in wood-using industries, and by the Forest Service to conduct research leading to greater uses of hardwoods."

"The results of research just now getting underway will aid not only Southern Illinois and similar adjacent areas but also will be of value throughout many of the midwestern states."

Funds For Research

Tudor said that the additional funds being requested would be used to provide additional technical aid to wood-using industries desiring to expand operations or to move into Southern Illinois and similar adjacent areas, and to strengthen research in utilization of local hardwoods, directed toward expansion of wood-using industries.

Funds will also help to intensify research in production of forest crops, especially in the field of forest genetics, and to speed up completion of the Wood Products Pilot Plant and similar research facilities.

SIU Cars Go Million Miles

Survey Figures Include 25 Month Period

By Jerry Rombach

Total distances driven by the 29 University-owned fleet cars during a 25-month span from Oct. 6, 1953 to Dec. 19, 1955 amounted to 1,092,170 miles. These figures were revealed Thursday by William A. Howe, director of the physical plant.

From Nov. 16 to Dec. 15 of 1955 SIU cars traveled 70,700 miles.

"Most of the travel," Howe said,

"was done by the extension service, the area services, advisors, for administrative work, field trips and other necessary tours functional to the departments of the university."

"We have 34 cars out here at the physical plant garage, all Fords and Chevrolets, with models ranging from '53's to '55's. They're either four-door sedan or station wagons. Our garage maintenance workers keep the cars in shape, but for body work we turn them out to one of three Carondeal dealers."

"For body work," Will take an estimate of the costs from either a Chevrolet, Ford, or Oldsmobile dealer, with the low bidder getting the job. "I usually, however, we'll go to the company that made the cars."

All the cars are bought second-hand. Each vehicle will buy about 50,000 miles and last from 14 months to two years. Although used, they are traded off for newer models.

The operating costs for four from June 16 to Dec. 15, 1955 averaged 4.2 cents per mile, exclusive of depreciation. A charge of 5.5 cents per-travel-mile is assessed for a passenger sedan and 8 cents for a station wagon. Depreciation is a variable factor, running from 1.2 cents to 1.5 cents a mile.

Dr. Vavra To Speak At 'DeKalb' Dinner Here

Vavra, who has spoken at the dinner the last two years, will speak on "Increasing Corn Yields Through Using Fertilizers and Managing the Soil." He has been conducting soil fertility experiments at SIU.

'Nature Complex; Will Forever Resist Mastery'—Dr. James Fulton

By Peggy Morgan

"Nature is inexhaustibly complex; it will forever resist our mastery," Dr. James Street Fulton told the approximately 50 persons attending the first "Anatomy of Nature" lecture Thursday night in Woody Hall's formal lounge.

Fulton, who received his A. B. and M. A. at Vanderbilt University and his Ph. D. at Cornell, is a professor of philosophy at Rice Institute in Houston, Texas.

In a soft voice with a slight Southern accent, Fulton read his speech on general philosophy, ideas and developments both ancient and modern day—concerning nature. He discussed the philosophical contributions from Galileo, Aristotle and Roger Bacon to Ernest Cassirer, Dewey, and Whitehead.

"My task is to consider the idea of nature," Fulton said. "We generally use the term 'nature' to refer to all that takes place. It signifies the sum or the system of matter of fact. And since facts are the object of scientific investigation, nature is what scientists investigate."

Purpose of Talk:

"The purpose of my talk is to consider two or three critical moments in the times of the development of nature."

Until the time of the sixth century B. C., Greeks, life was accepted as it happened, he said. Then the movement changed toward distinct objectivity, and men in general tried to understand things in their own terms. During this period the principles of math, ethics, psychology, anatomy, and other sciences were laid.

The next moment Fulton talked about the extreme stress on scientific advancement from the 14th century A. D. to the beginning of the 17th century. Clocks and machinery of all types were used and improved. Especially notable, according to Fulton, was the expanded use of water, tread and wind mills in connection with mining, milling, and ore-crushing.

During this period the "pure sciences" such as astronomy, physics and anatomy also advanced.

"Until a few years ago the debt of modern scientists to those of earlier times was not realized," Fulton said.

He also quoted many of the philosophical attitudes of the various times.

"According to Democritus, 'Nothing is real save atoms moving in void,'" Fulton said. "Galileo insisted on the rules of physical nature."

Religion Vs Nature

"In the modern age, religious piety often vies with the piety of nature. Yet an earlier philosopher said, 'The whole world is moved by a love for God, a passion for excellence.'"

"No one believes that we can find a physical theory that will finally prove static. Nature is complex and can never be understood. But experimental science contributes more than anything else in our search for fact."

"The next crucial stage in the study of the development of nature is not yet recorded; it is still an intimate part of our lives. The possibility of a truly unified view toward nature becomes more remote with our increasing knowledge of nature. It's another case of 'the more we know, the less we understand.'"

"It is well, however, to recognize that despite their differences in field, specialists have a common desire for unity. I'll leave it to others to show the various aspects of the 'anatomy of nature,' and how they can be reconciled."

Cagers Fall To Western, Normal

The SIU cagers dropped two contests this week, succumbing to Western Illinois 72-57 Friday and Illinois Normal 94-81.

The losses left SIU with a 4-2 IHC record and a 9-7 overall record.

In Friday's contest the Salukis stayed on even terms with the league-leading Leathernecks until the final minutes, until the host counted 10 consecutive points to pull away and out of danger.

Gas, Davis and Seymour Abruzzi led the Saluki attack with 15 and 13 respectively. In addition to his scoring efforts, Bryson was the game leading rebounder, as he gathered in the 50th from three men on both teams.

Byron Nievesch led the Westers with 24 points.

Illinois Normal snuffed a three game losing streak at the expense of the Southern Illinois in their 95-81 triumph Saturday night.

The first half was a wild affair as the score was tied several times and the lead changed hands several times, but the host Redbirds went to the dressing room with a 37-45 lead.

The upstart came back strong to build up a 60-44 lead by 16 minutes left in the game. But, the Salukis caught fire and closed the gap to 60-63 with 11 minutes remaining in the fray.

The Southerners remained winning shooting distance for the next three minutes, and with eight minutes to go the score stood at 68-70. But the hosts pulled straight away after that, and the game ended at 81-94.

Leading the Salukis were Wayne Tally with 18, followed by Joe Johnson with 16.

Game honors, however went to Normal's outstanding forward Fred Marberry, the league's leading scorer and rebounder, with 30 points.
