Lebanon off limits to U.S. citizens

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department made U.S. passports invalid for travel to Lebanon Wednesday in an effort to prevent more Americans from falling into terrorist hands.

Only members of hostage families, journalists on assignment and humanitarian workers will be allowed to use their U.S. passports to travel to Lebanon, if they seek special permission, the State Department said. Other Americans would be subject to prosecution with the maximum penalty of five years in prison and $2,000 fine if they use their U.S. passports to enter or to remain in Lebanon.

There will be a 30-day grace period so Americans who are already in Lebanon will have a chance to leave without penalty.

The State Department

estimates there are 1,500 Americans in Lebanon, most of them with dual nationality. Those with Lebanese or other national passports will be able to use them in travel without penalty.

Since most of the Americans there have dual nationality, the order will have little effect on those remaining in Lebanon, but the move will discourage travel to the country by more Americans.

Similar restrictions are in place for the use of American passports to Libya. Although some Americans remain in Libya, nobody has been prosecuted under U.S. law for passport violation.

Twenty-six foreigners are currently listed as missing in Lebanon, including eight Americans who are believed to have been kidnapped by pro-Iranian groups. One other American kidnap victim, William Buckley, the CIA station chief in Beirut, is presumed dead, but his body has not been recovered.

Abdallah Bouhabib, Lebanese ambassador in the United States, told United Press International: "As I told the State Department, I was shocked to see that Americans are still in Lebanon. This passport measure is understandable. We don't want any more hostages taken."

Political experts: Reagan address evades problems

By David Sheets
Staff Writer

Details about the arms sales to Iran, military spending and the federal deficit were, not surprisingly, absent from President Reagan's sixth State of the Union address Tuesday, some regional political experts said.

"His speech was distinctly positive on symbolism and negative on substance," said Ronald Mason, associate professor of political science. "He didn't have much genuine to say."

Reagan's speech was billed by many president-watchers outside Southern Illinois as the president's first chance to redeem himself for the growing Iran-Contra arms affair and the Republican party's loss of the Senate in November.

Reagan reportedly told: 'Don't go public'

But "his performance was built up to be more than it was," said John Jackson III, College of Liberal Arts dean. "He didn't dispel doubt and cynicism on Iran. Of course the problem is more fundamentally serious than any one speech could address but he virtually ignored the Iran deal. In that sense his speech was a disappointment."

Jackson also decried Reagan's handling of the federal deficit and described the president's budget policy as "vintage Reagan from 20 years ago."

"He has faulted the 'idiots in Congress' for government overspending. But he's been sending up vastly unbalanced budgets every year of his term. It's now been six years and he's still saying and doing and pretending the country's $3 billion deficit doesn't exist."

"I have doubts that Reagan seriously knows what the state of the union is," Jackson added.

Fire takes WSIU-FM off the air

Public radio station WSIU-FM lost power to its transmitter last at 7:15 p.m. Wednesday.

The loss of power, caused by a malfunction in the power section of the transmitter, resulted in a small fire, said Jak Tichenor, news and public affairs director for the station.

Station engineers expect to sign-on Friday at 5 a.m.

Lee O'Brien, director of broadcast services, said, "We regret any inconvenience to our listeners, and we are trying to correct the problem as quickly as possible."

Impatient skaters may find selves on thin ice

By Tracy Bartoni
Staff Writer

'Tis the season for gliding across the ice but not on Campus Lake — at least not yet.

Ice must be at least five inches thick for safe skating, said Bill McMinn, coordinator of the Recreation Center.

"Right now, the ice is extremely dangerous. It's only three and one-half or four inches thick," McMinn said. "It takes four to five days of temperatures in the teens and twenties to permit the ice to freeze enough to be safe for skating."

McMinn or one of his staff members tests the thickness of the ice each day. The procedure is simple, he said: break the ice and measure its thickness with a ruler.

People have skated on Campus Lake every year in the history of the University, weather permitting, McMinn said.

However, students should be careful when attempting to skate on the lake. McMinn suggests that people skate with one or more partners. "Even a lake has currents that could draw a person under the ice if they fell in," he said.

A red flag raised on the Boat

Dock pole means the ice is unsafe. A green flag signals that skating will be permitted in the dock area between noon and 4 p.m.

McMinn said a lifeguard will be on duty during skating periods.

Would-be skaters should consider dressing "comfortably warm, but in clothing that doesn't inhibit movement," he said.

Politburo leader ousted; Gorbachev reforms OK'd

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev ousted one of the remaining figures of the Leonid Brezhnev era from the Politburo Wednesday and promoted his own propaganda chief to further consolidate his power. The 307-member Communist Party Central Committee dropped Kazakh leader Dinmukhamed Kunayev, 75, and also approved Gorbachev's call for democratization through electoral reforms, including secret ballots and multi-candidate elections.

Iran, Iraq trade hostilities; 30 cities bombed

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Iraq said its warplanes bombed 10 Iranian cities Wednesday and Iran said it retaliated by shelling 20 Iraqi border towns one day after Baghdad rejected Tehran's offer to end the "war of the cities." In the Iraqi capital, the official Iraqi News Agency reported its forces "liberated" Iraqi territory held by the Iranians east of the Persian Gulf port of Basra Wednesday.

Pakistan opposition leader's aides kidnapped

KARACHI, Pakistan (UPI) — Opposition leader Benazir Bhutto said three of her aides were kidnapped Wednesday in a highway ambush by gunmen who intended to assassinate her. Bhutto, leader of the popular opposition Pakistan People's Party and daughter of former Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, said would-be assassins jumped her party's motorcade on the Indus Highway between Karachi and Dadu, about 140 miles to the north.

2 Sikhs get life terms for plane-bombing plot

MONTREAL (UPI) — A judge sentenced two Canadian Sikhs to life in prison Wednesday for the "mind-boggling" plot to blow up an Air-India passenger plane bound from New York to New Delhi. In passing sentence, Quebec Superior Court Justice Claire Barrette-Joncas said Santokh Singh Khela, 25, and Kashmir Singh L'Hillon, 42, were examples to the world of how Canada treats terrorists.

U.S. Navy shows power in Mediterranean

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States showed its naval power in the Mediterranean and Persian Gulf Wednesday, responding to a hostage crisis in Lebanon and threats the Iran-Iraq war may spill beyond the borders of those countries, Pentagon officials said. Two task forces headed by the aircraft carriers USS Nimitz and USS John F. Kennedy and totaling 22 ships maintained an indefinite presence in the Mediterranean, with the nuclear-powered Nimitz moving eastward toward Lebanon, they said.

End violence, Shultz warns S. African leader

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State George Shultz told South African black leader Oliver Tambo Wednesday his group's continued use of violence "will only lead to catastrophe" and expressed concern about Soviet influence in the organization. Tambo, president of the African National Congress, said following his 50-minute meeting at the State Department he had urged Shultz to rally the Western allies behind the same economic sanctions that have been imposed by the United States over the objections of the Reagan administration.

Parks' animals disappearing, ecologist says

NEW YORK (UPI) — Animals are disappearing rapidly from national parks in North America, possibly faster than they did before parks were established for their protection 75 years ago, according to a study released Wednesday. Reporting in the British science journal Nature, ecologist William D. Newmark said he has documented that 49 species of mammals — including wolves, spotted skunks, foxes and bears — have become "locally extinct" in 14 of the larger national parks in the northwestern United States and Canada.

Detroit set as last stop on pope's U.S. visit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pope John Paul II, apparently wanting to visit at least one large concentration of Polish Catholics, has added a 24-hour stop to Detroit to his September visit to the United States, church officials said Wednesday. A spokesman for the National Conference of Catholic Bishops said the visit to Detroit will be added on the end of the pontiff's nine-day eight-city visit to the United States that begins Sept. 10. The archdiocese is headed by Archbishop Edmund Szoka, a Pole and hardline supporter of the pope's crackdown on dissent in the United States.

Federal pay raises imperil food programs for poor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan proposed Wednesday to finance pay raises for federal workers by diverting money from nearly two dozen government programs, including food for the poor.

The measure would transfer $255 million from 23 accounts to provide the 3 percent raises, which took effect this month, said a spokesman for the president's Office of Management and Budget.

Included in that sum is $28 million from the Agriculture Department's Temporary Emergency Food Assistance Program, a six-year-old effort to help distribute food to the poor.

Another $2.4 million would be diverted from training programs operated by the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health.

The spokesman for the Office of Management and Budget described the transfers as "very routine" and part of an effort to have individual departments absorb the cost of the raises being paid to their workers.

The emergency food program "is no longer needed," he said, because other government efforts exist to help feed the poor.

The food assistance program pays specifically for distribution of government-owned surplus food to the poor.

"It has been the consistent position of the administration that those costs ought not be borne by the federal government," said Stephen Dewhurst, budget director at the Agriculture Department.

If Congress agrees to divert the program's money for pay raises, he added, "someone else besides the federal government is going to have to pay."

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., introduced a bill to block diversion of money from the food program, saying,

"Transferring funds from programs for the needy to pay for salary increases for federal bureaucrats is unconscionable."

Congress must approve the so-called spending deferrals before they take effect.

The Senate agreed Wednesday to begin debate and possibly vote Thursday on much larger pay increases for members of Congress, top administration officials and all federal judges — on top of the 3 percent that took effect Jan. 1.

Reagan outlines $1 trillion plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan fleshed out his $1 trillion budget message Wednesday with four new volumes of supporting documents outlining the nuts and bolts of the largest presidential spending plan in history.

The hundreds of pages of tables and analyses constitute a more elaborate explanation of Reagan's formal budget message, released Jan. 5.

The White House proposal calls for a $1.02 trillion budget for fiscal 1988, which begins Oct. 1. The measure would increase defense spending by 3 percent, plus adjustments for inflation.

It would meet the balanced budget law's deficit reduction target of $108 billion through program cuts, sales of government assets and new fees for people who use government land.

Meanwhile, Sens. Daniel Evans, R-Wash., and Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., Wednesday introduced a new version of the line-item veto that Reagan called for in his State of the Union speech Tuesday night.

The line-item veto would give the president the power to chop individual items from a spending bill without having to kill the entire measure. The proposal has met considerable resistance in Congress, where many members are unwilling to allow the president to slash pet projects they have tucked into larger measures.

The new version was a limited, two-year trial bill. However, that also was expected to have serious opposition in the new, Democratic-controlled Congress.

Jumping the gun

1987 MAY BE A TRYING YEAR for many of the University's 110 foreign-born, non-citizen faculty members and administrators, thanks to a new state law that went into effect Jan. 1. The law, passed over Gov. James R. Thompson's veto, requires that all college instructors be fluent in English. SIU-C officials are drawing up a test to conform to the statute.

Undoubtedly, it is the right of every student to be able to understand his or her instructor. After all, students are paying to be educated. But in enacting such sweeping legislation, the General Assembly clearly overstepped the bounds of academic freedom.

Apparently, the legislature acted after complaints were voiced by students at only one Illinois university, Northern. This is too slim a basis on which to enact legislation affecting every college and university in the state. SIU-C officials say the number of complaints voiced here have been few. Yet every instructor will now have to submit to a fluency test.

OFFICIALS ALSO SAY that many of the complaints voiced by SIU-C students are directed toward foreign-born teaching assistants. However, foreign graduate assistants have long been tested by the University before being assigned teaching positions. No new tests for the TAs would be required under the law.

The legislature also failed to take into account the possibility that some complaints about the language skills of foreign-born instructors may be more an indication of student laziness than the instructors' fluency. Listening is an active function. Unfortunately, many Americans have become so accustomed to being spoon fed information from radio, television and other media that they lack the extra effort required to understand an instructor with an accent.

Even worse is the possibility that complaints about understanding may be a form of retaliation against tough foreign instructors. Many foreign-born professors and TAs come from academic environments more rigorous than our own and expect the same level of dedication from American students that they experienced from students in their homelands. Many American students seem all too unwilling to comply.

Academic brain drain is another problem to be grappled with under the new legislation. The late physicist Albert Einstein was reputed to speak English with such a heavy accent that many had trouble understanding him. Yet, what university would deny a faculty position to such a certified genius?

CLEARLY, THE FLUENCY LAW leaves more questions unanswered than it purports to answer. For instance, will the University really dismiss tenured faculty members if they do not fulfill fluency standards? Will American-born instructors and instructors from other countries where English is the official language be required to take the test?

While some sort of screening process is necessary to assure that instructors' language skills are up to par, statewide legislation was not the proper course to take. Until the legislature was presented with a statewide problem, it should have let each university deal with its problem on a local basis.

Winnie merits recognition

Few people today are unaware of the role played by Winnie Mandela in the struggle to end the oppression of black people of South Africa. Her political activism and personal suffering have awakened the conscience of the international community and have successfully exposed the unjust and illegitimate nature of the South African government.

Why then do the editors of the Daily Egyptian (Mandela's wife detained, released after questioning, DE 1-24-87) feel it necessary to justify the newsworthiness of Winnie Mandela's arrest by the authorities by referring to her husband? Women throughout the world are fighting for an end to their oppression. One of the most insidious and effective forms of oppression is to deny legitimacy to the activities of the oppressed, in effect, denying them an identity of their own. If the editors of the DE fail to see the significance of the contributions of a woman of the stature and prominence of Winnie Mandela without subsuming her and therefore her identity under that of her husband, what importance do they accord to women in general?—Grainne A. Matthews, graduate student.

Gutting Miranda will escalate abuses of suspect rights

By David A. Cowan
Staff Writer

Viewpoint

The bells rang loud throughout Chicago firehouses on a cold winter's night in February 1985. Firemen scurried to their awaiting apparatus and officers checked the address of the fire they were to fight.

Upon arrival at the scene, firefighters were confronted with a major fire in a two-story electronics store. Orders were barked over the radio by chief officers and the men in the fire companies went to work. But this was to be no ordinary fire. Without warning, the roof of the building collapsed and, before night had turned to day, three Chicago firefighters were dead and a fourth was left critically burned.

EMOTIONS WERE drained. People were outraged, for this fire was found to have been the result of an arson-for-profit scheme. The next day, the owner of the business, a South Korean immigrant, was taken into custody by police and allegedly coerced by officers into confessing to the arson conspiracy through intimidation and beating. The suspected offender contended that, in South Korea, it was customary to be coerced into confession by police, and that he did not realize the existence of the rights provided by the Miranda ruling.

That is an interesting thought.

The recent Justice Department report endorsed by Attorney General Edwin Meese, which seeks to overturn the landmark 1966 Supreme Court Miranda decision requiring arresting police officers to inform criminal suspects of their rights, is shortsighted.

The report contends that advising offenders of the rights to remain silent and to have an attorney present during questioning is ineffective in promoting fair treatment of offenders arrested by police. The report also claims that the ruling hampers police in fighting crime.

MEESE HAS BEEN quoted as calling the Miranda a "legal smirk" that impedes the efficiency of police in combatting crime. He also claims that removal of the rights would not mean "a return to some dark age of police inquisition" in the U.S.

Meese has been quoted as calling Miranda a "legal smirk" that impedes the efficiency of police in combatting crime.

But what Meese and other supporters of this proposal fail to realize is what psychological effect this will have on the individual police officer on the street. The effects may be dangerous, as the removal of the requirement of police to inform offenders of their rights will give police officers greater power and could result in increased acts of police brutality and violence.

What immediately comes to mind is the potential for coercion of confessions by officers, particularly in cases in which officers are under emotional stress. Arrested suspects, particularly those unfamiliar with the legal system, would be increasingly more likely to confess without first knowing about rights which allow them not to answer self-incriminating questions, and inform them of the availability of legal counsel.

It is not my purpose to argue whether or not the South Korean was guilty in the case of the dead firefighters, or to determine the guilt of offenders in general. I simply want to provide an illustration of the implications involved in the removal of the Miranda ruling.

THE POTENTIAL for police flex their muscles and use intimidation and force to get confessions is enormous. It would therefore be to the benefit of the American people and to society at large if Meese and his cronies in Washington consider the possible long-term problems of denying those uninformed citizens their rights.

The Supreme Court must ensure that this does not happen. The ideology of the Justice Department report could be compared to that of the totalitarian regime that governed and controlled the people in Nazi Germany; or today in countries like South Africa or in the Eastern Bloc.

We can only hope that the idea that the Miranda ruling is ineffective will be rebuffed. Otherwise the cold cellars of police stations may be used for things other than the storage of unclaimed bicycles.

David Derge, professor of political science and an advisor to President Richard Nixon in the late 1960s, saw Reagan's speech as "pretty forceful" and not "low key or limp" as addresses by past presidents have been. Unlike Jackson, Derge didn't fault the president for leaving out Iran details.

"The administration's strategy has been to allow the investigation," he said. He noted that, historically, the State of the Union address is general in nature.

Despite some historians and analysts comparing the Iran issue to the 1970s' Watergate fiasco, Derge said the analogy wasn't appropriate.

"With Watergate, it was apparent that bad people did bad things for bad reasons. Here, good people did bad things for good reasons."

Derge didn't give much credence, however, to the president's request for line item veto power to help balance the nation's budget.

A line item veto would allow the president to veto or rewrite parts of bills submitted to Congress, a luxury that only 43 state governors have. Currently, the president can only veto whole pieces of legislation. Changes in presidential power could come only through a Constitutional amendment.

"I think the line item veto amendment fell on deaf ears. Legislatures don't like to give up power like that," Derge explained.

Mason said Reagan was "still within the realm of understanding" with plans to increase military spending while reducing the federal deficit "if you consider two factors, very large tax increases or brutal cuts in social programs. People won't consider either."

U.S. Sen. Paul Simon said some of the president's speech "rang hollow." In a prepared statement from his Washington, D.C., office, Simon said he thought it wise to keep statements on Iran to a minimum, "but when he talks about moving ahead on education, then plans to cut $5.7 billion from the education budget, that's inconsistent."

U.S. Rep. Ken Gray said, also in a prepared statement from his Washington, D.C. office, that Reagan's speech "was well written and delivered, but it contained platitudes that offered no real hope for the average American."

State Sen. Glenn Poshard, D-Cartersville, said the president "needs to take his own advice regarding Iran: insist not to negotiate with terrorists" to preserve Reagan's influence over Congress in his last two years as president.

"He also needs to take his own advice regarding the budget. Historically, the conservative agenda has been social, not fiscal. But his has been fiscal. He needs to get his house in order."

Two wallets reported stolen

Two wallets containing more than $100 were reported stolen to SIU-C police.

Tim Gornet, 21, reported that his wallet was stolen from a locker at the Recreation Center Tuesday afternoon. The brown leather wallet contained about $60, an identification card and a meal ticket, according to police reports.

A wallet with $45 and some identification was reported stolen to SIU-C police late Monday afternoon by Fatimah Yusuf of 414 S. Wall. The alleged theft occurred at Wendy's restaurant, 500 E. Walnut, according to police.

Somber tribute given to shuttle crew

ARLINGTON, Va. (UPI) — Families of five of the Challenger astronauts and NASA officials observed the first anniversary of the shuttle disaster today at a solemn tribute in an Army chapel, joining Americans across the nation to honor the dead space pioneers.

"The NASA family comes together today to remember some of the finest of God's creatures — seven brave Americans: Dick Scobee, Mike Smith, Judy Resnik, El Onizuka, Ron McNair, Greg Jarvis and Christa McAuliffe," said space agency Administrator James Fletcher.

"The crew of the space shuttle Challenger loved their work. They believed deeply in what they were doing together. They knew that by touching the future, they could help change tomorrow today."

"They would be pleased to know that the NASA family and the nation are carrying on in that spirit."

"We have dusted ourselves off, we are climbing again to the stars. The important thing is to go forward. We must not lose our way."

— Rear Adm. Richard Truly

Fletcher said the past year was one "of pain, of remembrance and of rededication," but he made it clear the seven Challenger crew members did not die in vain when their ship exploded 73 seconds after launch Jan. 28, 1986.

"We have dusted ourselves off, we are climbing again to the stars," said Rear Adm. Richard Truly, a former shuttle commander who now heads NASA's spaceflight program. "The important thing is to go forward. We must not lose our way."

The afternoon ceremony at the plain, drafty Fort Myer chapel near Arlington National Cemetery was attended by representatives of the Scobee, Smith, McNair, Resnik and Jarvis families. Onizuka's family plans an observance later this week in Houston and McAuliffe's family remained in New Hampshire.

President Reagan paid tribute to the Challenger crew as "pioneers of the mind as well as the stars" and saluted the space agency for its recovery from the worst disaster of the American space program.

"In the first moments of grief and shock, the bereaved families of the crew urged us to carry on and keep the space program moving forward," he said. "We owe it to them and to those whom we, too, lost to do just that."

In the Capitol, the daily prayer that normally opens the Senate session included a moment of silence and was dedicated to the Challenger astronauts.

Richard Halversen, the Senate chaplain, reminded the lawmakers of the session last year when the "chamber was stunned to silence" by news of the accident. He called the seven astronauts "heroes because they were doing their duty in the best tradition" of America.

At the Kennedy Space Center at Cape Canaveral, Fla., where plunging temperatures served as a harsh reminder of the frigid day one year ago when Challenger was launched, workers lowered flags to half staff at 11:38 a.m. EST, the time the shuttle took off on its doomed 73-second flight.

Poll: NASA officials to blame

NEW YORK (UPI) — A year after the Challenger explosion, a majority of Americans surveyed blamed NASA officials for the disaster rather than the scientists and engineers who worked on the space shuttle project, a poll reported Wednesday.

Of 1,590 adults questioned by telephone Jan. 18-21 in a New York Times-CBS survey, 60 percent said National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials were at fault.

Thirteen percent blamed scientists and engineers who developed the craft's technology. Eight percent blamed both and 3 percent blamed neither. The rest had no answer.

There was still public support for the shuttle program, the poll reported, though somewhat diminished — with 66 percent believing the program worthwhile despite its costs and risks, against 28 percent who said it was not.

A Times-CBS poll taker, a few days after the disaster a year ago found 80 percent of those questioned felt the program was worth continuing, with 14 percent opposed.

There was slightly reduced support for spending on space programs since the poll a year ago, which showed 40 percent thought too much money was being spent. This figure increased 6 percent age points to 46 percent in the latest survey.

Women were much less supportive of the program than men.

Fred's Dance Barn This Saturday Area Code 618
When you think of Area Code 618, you think of music with a complex simplicity and clarifying innuendo. You think of a group that is inseparably individualistic. With 618, words like incomparable, inspired, and inflatable must come to mind. But this is one group that is more than the sum of its whole: Dave Hilgediek plays drums with an intense malaise that well compliments the unique semblance of Eddy Goins on bass, Bill Carter, on lead and Steve Danley on fiddle share vocals in a style of intersecting parallelism that defies comparison. And Terry Mueller plays with everything else to fill the gaps. For a night that will certainly be soon forgotten, Saturday Area Code 618.

Chrysler pulls 'Amerika' ads

DETROIT (UPI) — A Chrysler Corp. spokesman confirmed Wednesday that the carmaker has pulled its commercials from "Amerika," a seven-night television miniseries about life in the United States after a Soviet takeover.

Chrysler spokesman John Guiniven said the carmaker's commercial themes would be inappropriate for the 14½-hour show, to be aired on ABC beginning the week of Feb. 15.

Chrysler had been the largest sponsor of the show.

Guiniven said Chrysler's top management, including Chairman Lee A. Iacocca, reviewed six hours of the show made available to them by ABC.

"We concluded that the subject matter and portrayal are so intense and emotional that our upbeat product commercials would be both inappropriate and of diminished effectiveness," he said.

"We have no personal quarrel with what we have seen and believe the miniseries will attract a huge audience," Guiniven said in a prepared statement.

Guiniven said that the carmaker did not yield to protests against the film's controversial theme.

"Chrysler is used to pressure, and we don't bow to pressure," he said, adding that its relationship with ABC continues to be good and that the network was given adequate notice of the cancellation.

Guiniven would not disclose the value of the sponsorship. The carmaker's advertising agency is Bozell, Jacobs, Kenyon and Eckhardt.

Accused American spy enters VA hospital

MIAMI (UPI) — Accused American spy Sam Hall apologized to the Nicaraguan people and returned to the United States Wednesday, set free by the Sandinistas for fear his "mental instability" would lead to suicide. He immediately entered a veterans' hospital for examination.

Hall, 49, arrived at Miami International Airport on a flight via Costa Rica at 12:20 p.m. EST. His brother, Rep. Tony Hall, D-Ohio, met him in a government van that drove him to the Miami Veterans Administration Hospital.

The congressman, seated inside the van, embraced his brother as he climbed into the unmarked vehicle. Neither man acknowledged the shouts of reporters, who were kept well away from the airport gate.

"I have been treated very well. The prison authorities were terrific. I was treated like a human being, with dignity."

— Sam Hall

Hall, a one-time Olympic medalist turned adventurer, was accused of spying on behalf of the Contra rebels fighting the Nicaraguan Sandinista government.

In Washington, VA spokeswoman Donna St. John confirmed Hall was being examined at the agency's Miami facility, but she declined to discuss the nature of the case.

Mike Gessel, a spokesman for the congressman, also declined to discuss any aspect of Hall's travels or any family matters.

"This is a personal family matter and he does not want his office to comment," Gessel said by telephone.

Speaking with reporters before departing Sandino International Airport in Managua, Hall said he wished to tell "the people of Nicaragua that I am sorry I brought some embarrassment."

"I have been treated very well," he said. "The prison authorities were terrific. I was treated like a human being, with dignity." He turned to wave at reporters from the cabin door of the airliner that took him to San Jose, Costa Rica, to catch the flight to Miami.

Asked by reporters if he tried to harm himself in jail, Hall, who was once hospitalized for mental illness, said "no." When asked about Nicaragua's allegation that he was mentally unstable, Hall only smiled.

Hall won a silver medal for diving at the 1960 Olympics in Rome and served in the Ohio Legislature in the early 1960s as a Democrat. His late father was the mayor of Dayton.

President Daniel Ortega originally had said Hall would be tried in a People's Tribunal.

Bush says Meese advised Reagan: 'Don't go public'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan was told to keep quiet about the Iran arms-Contra aid scandal, Vice President George Bush said Wednesday, saying the advice may have come from Attorney General Edwin Meese, who made some of the most startling revelations in the affair.

Bush said the president had been advised, "Don't go public yourself" about details of the affair. "I believe it was from the attorney general, and so, there is an inhibition about this," he said, explaining Reagan's refusal to comment on details of the scandal.

Justice Department officials later said Bush's suggestion Meese's gave such advice was incorrect and White House spokesman Larry Speakes said, "The vice president is not certain that it was indeed the attorney general that suggested that individuals not speak out on matters under investigation."

"It is quite common that one does not speak out publicly and draw conclusions in matters under investigation," Speakes said, then added:

"I don't think he (Reagan) is hidebound by it. He can speak out but he needs to be circumspect. He can't speak out until he has the facts. He's in the process of gathering the facts ... refreshing his recollection. Much of the story is outside the president's knowledge and ability to recall."

In his State of the Union speech Tuesday night, Reagan said he regretted that his arms-to-Iran initiative had failed, that "serious mistakes" had been made in the ploy, and he accepted "full responsibility" for the failure.

In his comments, his first on the issue in two months, Reagan did not say what the mistakes were or who made them, and his critics said he had not gone far enough to halt the erosion in public confidence caused by the scandal.

Some Democrats said a detailed explanation of Reagan's 18 months of secret dealings with Iran is needed to dispel the impression he was trying to buy freedom for American hostages in Lebanon, while at the same time sidestepping Congress's legitimate role in foreign policy, and perhaps evading legal restrictions on aid to the Nicaraguan rebels.

Bush, appearing on ABC's "Good Morning America," said, "The president is forestalled from going public since he has appointed the special prosecutor."

Meese, the nation's top law enforcement officer, has made some of the most startling public disclosures in the scandal that has rocked the Reagan presidency.

Adviser to visit Central America

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan's new national security adviser, Frank Carlucci, will visit El Salvador, Honduras, Costa Rica and Guatemala this week to assess the political and military situation, the White House said Wednesday.

He will not visit Nicaragua because he was not invited, a senior official said.

"The visit is primarily an opportunity for Mr. Carlucci to renew his acquaintance with Central America, to become familiar with current problems and to view firsthand the democratic gains that have been achieved in the region," spokesman Larry Speakes said.

Carlucci will meet with leaders of El Salvador, Honduras, Costa Rica and Guatemala between Thursday and Saturday to "listen to their views on the current state of affairs and the situation in each country," Speakes said.

Arena concerts appease local music market

By Mary Caudle
Staff Writer

The lack of variety in SIU Arena concerts may have some students thinking that Arena programmers have not catered to their tastes.

But only 18 percent of those who attend Arena concerts are SIU-C students, says Arena Director Gary Drake.

"We take about 300 surveys at every concert, ... and we've started paying people to stand at the turnstiles," he said.

"They ask one question of everybody that comes in: Are you an SIU student?"

CONSIDERING THAT 82 percent of all Arena ticket buyers aren't SIU students, Arena programmers concentrate their interests on the surrounding community, Drake said. Bands such as ZZ Top and John Cougar Mellencamp will sell to the community, he said. Both concerts were sell-outs last year, filling the 10,000-seat Arena.

The Arena has a potential market of 350,000 people within a 60-mile radius, which may sound like more than enough to sell out any concert. But when you rule out those who are "too young to come, too old to come, don't want to come, don't like rock 'n' roll, don't want to get involved in crowds, and don't have the money," the market is much smaller, Drake said.

"You have to book a band that will sell itself. You have to know you're going to break even."

BOOKING A BAND is not as easy as it seems because more arenas now are competing for the same bands, he said. When Drake came to Carbondale in 1971, the state had only three major arenas: Champaign, Chicago and Carbondale. Since that time, numerous arenas have sprung up, all competing for the same acts.

Arena programmers have to do their best to book bands that will attract the widest audience, "and you can't always book what you like. You have to book what will sell," he added.

DRAKE SAID he has found that, over the years, the safest way to do this is to stick with three basic formats: country, heavy metal and Top 40 — bands such as Bruce Springsteen and Van Halen.

ALTHOUGH SELLING tickets is top priority for arena programmers, they also are concerned with giving the public what it wants. Popularity surveys are taken during the year in an attempt to gauge current tastes in the community. But even these surveys can't always predict the success or failure of a concert, he said.

Booking a popular band still can prove to be risky, he said. The Thompson Twins came out very strong in popularity surveys and were on top of the music charts when it was booked at the Arena last spring. Only 1,800 tickets were sold. The concert was one of the biggest financial failures the Arena has ever suffered, Drake said.

THE FINANCIAL failure of the Thompson Twins concert and the Talking Heads concert in 1982 demonstrated that the Arena is not successful with "new music," which Drake termed too big of a financial risk.

Drake admits he might not buy tickets for some of the concerts the Arena presents, but many in the community do. Most of last season's concerts were sellouts, he said.

THE ARENA'S spring season will start with a concert featuring Alice Cooper on Feb. 11. Opening for Cooper will be the heavy metal band, Megadeth. Tickets can be purchased for $13.50 and $11.50 at the SIU Arena Box Office or the Student Center Central Ticket Office.

A Ricky Skaggs concert is scheduled for Feb. 21. Drake refers to the concert as an "experiment," a chance to see if a smaller-name performer will sell. The success of the concert may determine whether the Arena should take more programming risks later, Drake said.

Nomination forms, along with a more detailed description of the award criteria, are available from the Office of Student Development, third floor, Student Center. Nominations must be submitted to OSD by no later than 4:30p. Monday, February 2, 1987.

Study says hormone, risk of breast cancer linked

BOSTON (UPI) — Having a baby appears to permanently depress levels of a hormone in women, possibly explaining how becoming a mother early reduces the risk of developing breast cancer, researchers said Wednesday.

The findings suggest the need to explore the possible benefits and safety of artificially suppressing the hormone in women who remain childless to decrease their chances of developing breast cancer, the scientists said.

"If you were trying to solve the problem of breast cancer, you would seem to be able to reduce the incidence by giving all the women a pill that would suppress their (hormone) levels," said Delwood C. Collins of Emory University School of Medicine in Atlanta.

Previous studies have shown that women who have children before age 30 are about two-thirds less likely to develop breast cancer, which is second only to lung cancer as the leading cause of cancer death among American women.

To determine how early childbirth may have this effect, researchers measured the levels of three hormones in 24 women of various ages before and after they became pregnant and compared them to 40 women who did not become pregnant.

While the levels of luteinizing hormone and follicle-stimulating hormone were stable, the level of a hormone known as prolactin was reduced by about half after pregnancy, the researchers reported in The New England Journal of Medicine.

"It was quite a striking change," said Collins in a telephone interview. "We found it quite surprising."

Prolactin, which is produced by the pituitary gland, is responsible for milk production for nursing.

The researchers are uncertain why prolactin would influence the breast cancer risk, but the hormone may aid in certain tissue functions involved when a cell becomes cancerous, Collins said.

"It may be that prolactin is not the trigger itself, but may enhance the ability of other types of carcinogens," he said.

A follow-up study involving 29 women who had been pregnant a number of times and 19 women who were never pregnant found prolactin levels remained low for up to 12 years, indicating the suppression was permanent, said Collins.

Potassium-rich diet lowers stroke risk, scientists say

BOSTON (UPI) — People with diets rich in potassium appear much less likely to die from strokes, suggesting that eating more fresh fruits and vegetables may also help prevent strokes, researchers said Wednesday.

The University of California scientists in San Diego said the findings need to be confirmed by further studies and warned against taking large amounts of potassium. But they recommended moderately increasing the amount of potassium consumed through the diet.

"There is no evidence that increasing the customary intake of potassium-rich foods — fresh fruit and vegetables — by one or two servings a day is harmful in the general population," they said.

A 12-year study found men with low-potassium diets were more than 2½ times more likely to die after a stroke compared to those who had high-potassium diets.

The researchers said increasing the amount of potassium in the daily diet by about the amount found in an average serving of fresh fruit or vegetables could reduce the risk of dying from a stroke by 40 percent.

"These findings support the hypothesis that a high intake of potassium from food sources may protect against stroke-associated death," they reported in The New England Journal of Medicine.

Scientists call for atmospheric research

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Scientists called Wednesday for stepped-up research into an anticipated "greenhouse effect" global warming trend that could disrupt farming and cause seas to rise from the melting of polar ice.

While they said the greenhouse effect is real, the scientists told the Senate environmental subcommittee they are not yet certain how fast the world's climate will change.

The greenhouse effect is caused by the buildup of carbon dioxide and some other gases, including fluorocarbons, in the upper atmosphere. These gases act like a greenhouse, allowing sunshine to reach Earth but reducing the return of heat radiation to space.

The experts also expressed concern about the continued release of Freon-type fluorocarbons because they also damage the atmospheric layer of ozone that shields Earth from dangerous amounts of ultraviolet radiation from the sun.

Wallace Broecker, a Columbia University professor, blamed politics for what he said was an emphasis on short-term rather than long-term research. "There are no quick fixes," he said.

Research by the Energy

Department and the Environmental Protection Agency, he said, had been "a disaster."

"My message to you is that we must do far more research," the sharp-tongued professor told senators.

Broecker and other scientists appearing before the panel urged immediate action to reduce the release of carbon dioxide and other "greenhouse gases" into the atmosphere.

"I suspect we have been lulled into complacency by (studies) which suggest a gradual warming over a period of 100 years or more," he said.

Mumps vaccine ordered by state for schoolchildren

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — The Illinois Public Health Department Wednesday ordered every school child in the state to be immunized against the mumps by the time classes begin this fall.

The order is being implemented under the agency's emergency rule-making powers and comes in the wake of an eight-fold increase in mumps cases last year.

MUMPS IS A highly contagious disease characterized by high fever, swollen glands and in males, the swelling of testicles. Because many younger children are immunized for the disease, it mainly affects people age 12 and older.

There were 2,743 cases of mumps diagnosed in Illinois in 1986, eight times the number of confirmed cases here in 1985 and more than 40 percent of all 6,807 cases diagnosed in the United States last year.

THE OUTBREAK began in Chicago, but health officials have no idea where it came from or how the outbreak began, said agency spokesman Tom Schafer. Chicago and Cook County accounted for 81.9 percent of the cases.

Schafer said that about 78 percent of the 2.1 million school-age children in Illinois already are immunized for the disease through booster shots. But about 500,000 have not been protected from the disease.

"THE YOUNGER children have been protected by triple boosters," Schafer said, noting that since 1975 most children have received the shot against measles, mumps and rubella. "It's the kids over 12 that haven't had the shots."

School children are particularly at risk, Schafer said, because classrooms are very closed environments which make it easier for the disease to spread.

ALL CHILDREN, whether they attend public or private school, will be required to give local school administrators a doctor's statement that they either already have had mumps or have been immunized against the disease.

Students now are required to show proof that they have been immunized for diphtheria, tetanus, poliomyelitis, measles, rubella and whooping cough. Prior to the order, Illinois was one of only five states not requiring mumps immunizations. Indiana, Kentucky, Missouri and Iowa are the other states.

SCHOOL DISTRICTS will be responsible for ensuring their students are immunized against mumps, Schafer said. Districts that fail to have at least 90 percent of their students immunized by the time school bells ring in the fall could lose 10 percent of their state aid.

The department's order follows the passage earlier this month of a House resolution urging the health department of consider a rules change.

Museum group accepting membership applications

By Tim McCarthy
Student Writer

The University Museum Associates of SIU-C is accepting applications as part of its annual membership drive.

Chairman Robert A. Jensen, associate professor of psychology, said associates help operate the museum gift shop, participate in guided tours of the museum, sponsor exhibits and organize receptions. The group also sponsors the annual dinner dance in the fall.

Proceeds from the group's activities are added to a general fund for the museum, Jensen said, "and these events raise quite a bit of money for the museum."

The group is working to help produce an illustrated hardcover book entitled "The Architectural History of Southern Illinois." A display by the same title is a permanent exhibit at the museum.

Jensen said the group plans to provide more lectures for the museum, tours to other museums in the Midwest and more receptions when new exhibits open.

The early founders of the museum and university felt it was important to establish a collection of the arts, Jensen said. And he said it is important to continue improving the collection.

Applications for membership in the University Museum Associates are available at the museum gift shop.

Explosives unveiled in W. Germany field

BECKINGEN, West Germany (UPI) — Police investigating the Beirut revenge kidnappings of two West German businessmen Wednesday found more than 5 gallons of liquid high explosives hidden in a field.

The Thursday edition of the Die Welt newspaper said police learned about the explosives cache through information provided by Ali Abbas Hamadei, the brother of a Lebanese-born man wanted in the United States on murder and air piracy charges in the 1985 hijacking of a TWA jetliner.

The news agency DPA reported that Hamadei, arrested upon his arrival from Beirut via Geneva Monday night, was suspected of involvement in the Beirut kidnapping of two West German businessmen in an effort to extort the release of his brother, Mohammed Ali Hamadei.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl's Cabinet Wednesday discussed developments in the kidnapping case for the first time since the Jan. 25 national election in which Kohl's coalition government was re-elected.

The government maintained a tight lid of secrecy on the case, saying it did not want to jeopardize the lives of Hoechst chemical company executive Rudolf

Cordes, 53, and Siemens electronics technician Alfred Schmidt, 47, who were kidnapped in Moslem West Beirut after the United States asked for Mohammed Ali Hamadei's extradition as a hijacking suspect.

West German television said the explosives found Wednesday were in bottles with Arabic labels and were similar to three containers found in the possession of Mohammed Ali Hamadei when he was arrested Jan. 13 at Frankfurt Airport.

The federal prosecutor's office said the nitroglycerine-type explosives were removed by robot devices from underbrush near Beckingen. Witnesses reported the bottles, containing about 5.2 gallons of explosives, were detonated by police.

It was not known who hid the explosives.

After the arrest of Ali Abbas Hamadei in Frankfurt on Monday night, police raided a private home in Beckingen and detained four Arabs in connection with the kidnapping investigation, but later set them free for lack of evidence, DPA said.

DPA said the raid was at the home of Hamza Kassim, 49, a Lebanese man who reportedly knew the Hamadei brothers.

Militia scour Beirut in vain for signs of missing envoy

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Diplomats and militiamen searched for Anglican envoy Terry Waite Wednesday, fearing Moslem extremists may have taken him prisoner along with the hostages he was trying to free.

Growing concern for the 47-year-old Church of England trouble-shooter was accompanied by reports the United States is bolstering its military presence in the Middle East.

Diplomatic sources said a search for Waite, last seen in Beirut Jan. 20 on his way to a secret rendezvous with the kidnapers of two Americans, failed for a second straight day to determine his fate.

The hunt, involving militiamen of the Druze Moslem Progressive Socialist Party who have been acting as Waite's bodyguards, went on despite Anglican officials saying they have "no direct evidence" Waite is being held against his will.

Beirut's independent An Nahar newspaper said the Shiite Moslem kidnapers dealing with Waite had guaranteed they did not intend to detain him. The source of the An Nahar report is a Shiite doctor and former Cabinet minister who acted as an intermediary between Waite and the hostage-takers.

In London, a source close to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said Britain will not negotiate for Waite's release if he is kidnapped.

"We don't deal with terrorists," the source said.

In Washington, the Reagan administration announced it extended the deployment of the aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy in the Mediterranean while a second battle group led by the nuclear-powered Nimitz also scheduled port calls there.

Soviets, terrorism linked, Reagan charges in report

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan told Congress Wednesday terrorism is likely to be a global problem "for the remainder of this century" and charged there is a "conclusive" link between the Soviet Union and the growth of terrorism.

In his first "state of the world" message, a 41-page document covering U.S. foreign and defense policy, Reagan said, "Effectively countering terrorism is a major national security objective of the United States."

A senior administration official told reporters the biggest problems facing the national interest are the perception abroad of a weakened presidency, loss of U.S. diplomatic muscle and a growing inability to conduct covert actions.

In the report to Congress, required by last year's Defense Reorganization Act, Reagan said, "The most significant threat to U.S. security and national interests is the global challenge posed by the Soviet Union."

In addition to the Soviet threat, Reagan said, terrorism is a "worldwide phenomenon that is becoming increasingly frequent, indiscriminate and state-supported."

"Terrorism is likely to be a prominent feature of the international landscape for the remainder of this century," he said.

"The evidence of the relationship between the Soviet Union and the growth of worldwide terrorism is now conclusive," Reagan declared. "Even though the Soviet Union does not have direct control over most of the terrorist groups, it supplies massive amounts of arms, money and advisory assistance to revolutionary forces engaged in terrorist activities."

"The Soviets attempt to disguise such support by using middlemen — radical governments such as Cuba, North Korean, Nicaragua, Syria and Libya — which deal directly with radical terrorists and insurgents."

He did not mention Iran, which the senior official said apparently does not have direct control over the faction holding eight Americans hostage in Lebanon.

Master storyteller creates new muppet-style series

NEW YORK (UPI) — More magic from the Muppetmaster, Jim Henson, is coming your way in the form of a wise old hedgehog, a beautiful princess of sweetness and cherry pie, a trusty talking dog and a grand tale from a man with a Jimmy Durante nose.

"The Storyteller," a proposed series for NBC, debuts Saturday (Jan. 31, 8:30 p.m. EST), and it possesses the best of Disney and Dickens, along with a splashy twist from one of the fathers of the music video generation.

The story about "Hans My Hedgehog" thrives on imagination and will tweak at the child in all of us.

It begins like this: "Long, long ago, when people listened and words had magic in them, a story was the greatest gift of all. The most welcome guest at every fireside was the storyteller."

Henson, whose Creature Shop stable includes the fabulous Muppets, now moves on to grander things than Kermit the Frog. He wants to revive the tradition and art of storytelling and he does so beautifully in "The Storyteller."

He enlisted the aid of a brilliant director, Steve Barron, who has created such visual wonders as the "a-ha" video, Michael Jackson's "Billie Jean" and scores of other groundbreaking music videos.

Using computer-generated "paint-box" illustrations and backgrounds, unusual camera angles, and other high-tech techniques, Henson creates the feeling one gets from "hearing" a story from a master storyteller.

To tell the tale, Henson conjured up a pointy-nosed storyteller, who sits by a roaring fire, his tale interrupted only by questions from a trusty talking dog.

Henson's show revives poetry for television. It is magical and mystical, like the fairy tales of old, with kings and queens and a host of fantastic critters.

There is a farmer's wife who wants a child so desperately that she doesn't care "if it were ugly as a hedgehog." True to her wishes, she gets a beast of a boy. He is mocked by others for being so ugly, and it is a sad life indeed. Finally, Hans the Hedgehog must venture out on his own, riding a giant rooster deep into the forest where he hopes to find peace.

Drunken elephants terrorize village

GUWAHATI, India (UPI) — Beer-guzzling elephants went on a rampage and damaged 70 homes in northeastern Assam state and officials said Wednesday they don't know how to deal with the pachyderms.

The elephants damaged about 70 homes as they plundered the villagers' winter food stores, officials said.

The animals also discovered barrels of lac pani — a beer made from rice by the tribals of jungle-covered Assam — and proceeded to imbibe the hooch, becoming so intoxicated they fell asleep in the village, the officials said.

Conner ready to challenge Aussies for America's Cup

By Ruth Youngblood
United Press International

FREMANTLE, Australia — Skipper Dennis Conner, fearful his heavy air Stars & Stripes will flounder in light winds, scrutinized his sail arsenal Wednesday in preparation for Saturday's start of the America's Cup finals.

While Conner was concerned about the conditions, his opponent, Iain Murray, enjoyed the freak weather conditions far more suitable for Kookaburra III.

"With the ultimate yachting event so close, we're all apprehensive," said Stars & Stripes tactician Tom Whidden, acknowledging the Australian challenger "is probably better" in scant breezes.

"There are butterflies in my stomach."

Conner, the San Diego Yacht Club skipper trying to win back the trophy he lost to Australia in 1983, practiced against his trial horse Stars & Stripes '85 in 15 to 19 knot winds, far weaker than the heavy blasts that helped him defeat New Zealand in the challenger's finals earlier this month.

Conner, the successful 1980 defender and world's most experienced 12-Meter helmsman, challenges Murray's Kookaburra III in the best-of-seven series determining if the trophy remains in Perth or returns to the United States.

Both skippers are anxious to avenge losses at Newport, R.I., in 1983 when Conner's defeat snapped a 132-year U.S. winning streak and Murray was eliminated in the challenger series after only two wins.

Bolstered by a glimpse at Conner's keel and meteorological reports that the high pressure system keeping light winds and calm seas off Western Australia is likely to continue, Murray said he is not worried about losing the Cup.

"We have no fear of Dennis Conner," said Murray. Kookaburra III is optimized for heavy air, but Murray added, "We'll match him in the heavy conditions and be better off in the light airs."

"We could be in trouble," Stars & Stripes design chief John Marshall said of the weakening winds.

Although the London commission agent Ladbrokes is offering odds of 2-1 against Kookaburra III, Murray said, "They've got a few things on their boat that we tried and discarded."

Murray watched the measurement of Stars & Stripes, appraising the rival boat with the scrutiny of a breeder evaluating a stallion.

"Theirs is different than ours, so I suppose someone is right and someone is wrong," said the 28-year-old Murray, who started designing boats at 11 and now has six consecutive world skiff championships.

The front edge of Conner's keel resembles a Roman nose. That and a very large hull help the yacht rocket upwind in gusts of more than 20 knots.

After the measurement of Kookaburra III, Stars & Stripes President Malin Burnham said, "While there were dissimilarities, there was nothing that would give one boat an advantage or disadvantage."

"It appears they're not too different. They're about the same waterline length—within inches—and their total displacement would not be much different."

"They look like two racehorses."

With 44-year-old Conner demanding weather updates every 30 minutes, meteorologist Chris Bedford said historically the "Fremantle Doctor" sea breeze starts trickling off late in January but not drastically.

"I'm guardedly optimistic we'll have 22 knots Saturday," said Bedford, of Redford, Mich., "but the forecast has the prerogative of changing its mind."

Other meteorologists were predicting light to moderate 15 to 19 knot air Saturday with the pattern continuing next week.

Telephone company hires Bear free safety Fencik

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (UPI) — An Iowa long distance telephone company announced Wednesday it is expanding into Chicago and has hired Chicago Bears free safety Gary Fencik as Illinois marketing director.

Teleconnect President Clark McLeod said Fencik was hired because of his reputation among Chicago business and sports circles. The NFL veterans has played for the Bears the last 11 seasons.

"We're alike in a lot of ways," Fencik said about his new company. "We make up for our size by thinking ahead and working hard."

Teleconnect began in 1979 as a phone equipment firm and then expanded into discount long distance services after deregulation. The last two years "Inc." magazine has rated Teleconnect among the 50 fastest growing companies in the United States.

McLeod said the Iowa company will be competing with 15 other long distance providers in Chicago, but officials hope to stand out from the crowd with new fiber optic phone lines.

Upstream battle expected for swimmers at Cincinnati

By Scott Freeman
Staff Writer

The women's swim team faces an uphill battle in Cincinnati, Ohio, this weekend, Saluki coach Bailey Weathers said.

Cincinnati sports one of the top diving teams in the nation, against which the Salukis send only one diver, freshman Michelle Robinson.

"Most of the damage they will do to us will happen in diving," Weathers said.

Another problem, according to the Saluki coach, will occur in the distance events, such as 500 and 1,000 freestyl's, where Cincinnati team depth will tell.

But Cincinnati has a lot of talent in each event, so Weathers said he really doesn't know what to expect Saturday.

But he does expect his top six or seven swimmers to be right in there against Cincinnati's best.

"We're ready to swim very fast and could accomplish a lot (Saturday)," Weathers said.

"They are a tough team to swim against, but that's good because we really need someone to push us now."

Once again, the Salukis are led by seniors Wendy Irick (100 and 200 backstroke) and Sue Wittry (50 and 100 freestyle).

Weathers said his team is a little stronger than Cincinnati in the 100 backstroke, breaststroke and butterfly, but lacks Cincinnati's talent in the 200 stroke events.

The meet starts at 2 p.m. Saturday.

Belgian soccer official expects manslaughter charge for '85 riot

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) — Albert Roosens, secretary-general of the Belgian Soccer Federation, says he expects to be charged with involuntary manslaughter when investigations into the 1985 Heysel Stadium soccer riot have been completed, a published report says.

In an interview published Tuesday in the daily newspaper "Gazet van Antwerpen," Roosens said he met with prosecutors in December and was told that he, as the federation's top official, would be accused of involuntary manslaughter in the fan rioting at the European Champions' Cup final that killed 39.

Roosens said the soccer federation was being accused of choosing an inappropriate stadium and of careless handling of ticket sales in the game between Liverpool and Juventus.

Roosens said he did not expect charges to be brought until the close of the investigation, which he said may drag on for several months.

One hour before the final was scheduled to begin on May 29, 1985, English fans went on a rampage in an adjoining section of the stands, and 39 people, mostly Italians, were killed in a stampede that caused a wall to collapse.

An investigation revealed tickets for a "neutral" zone between the Liverpool and Juventus fans had been sold on the black market to supporters of the Italian club.

"If someone had told me two years ago, the Heysel was not a suitable venue, then I am sure everyone would have protested," Roosens said.

Wild Dogs blast Chargers, 12-0

By Scott Freeman
Staff Writer

Goalie Darin Kohlenberger netted his first shutout Monday night as the Wild Dogs hockey club defeated the Evansville Chargers 12-0.

In action at Evansville, Ind., the Wild Dogs, keyed by early Kohlenberger saves, jumped to an early lead they never relinquished.

Team Captain Steve

Pelkowski, acting as the behind-the-bench coach because of a one-game suspension for fighting, said the Dogs' blowout was just an example "of good all-around skating."

Co-captain Scott Boehm added that a Saturday practice "geared us up, and now we're on the winning track again."

With the win, the Dogs climb back into first place in the three-team league with a 10-4-1 record, followed by the Horizons (9-5-1) and the Chargers (2-12-1).

Dom Esposito topped the Wild Dogs' attack with six goals, while teammate Kevin Quinn had four goals and one assist.

The Wild Dogs play tonight at Evansville in a 7 p.m. tilt, and then travel to Nashville, Tenn., for two games against Nashville club teams Saturday and Sunday.

Sugar Ray Battles flu before Hagler fight

HILTON HEAD, S.C. (UPI) — Sugar Ray Leonard, in training for his April 6 title fight against middleweight champion Marvelous Marvin Hagler, is regaining his strength following an attack of flu.

Leonard opened his training camp headquarters at the Hotel Intercontinental last Thursday, but before he could even get started he complained of feeling ill.

"The first day I felt fine," the former welterweight and junior middleweight champion said Wednesday. "But on Friday I felt I was coming down with something. That virus really made me weak. It restricted my training and threw me off my training. I even lost a few pounds which I can hardly afford to do. I'm down to the low 150s now."

Irving Rudd, publicist for Top Rank, said that a few days before his illness Leonard weighed 163 pounds and was hoping to come into the fight at 157.

Leonard resumed light training Monday, working three rounds, and he put in another three rounds Tuesday and skipped round. Leonard will train at the hotel until mid-March, when he moves his operations to Las Vegas, Nev., site of the bout.

Dorr to speak to booster club

Indiana State's roller coaster stuck in Valley

By Steve Merritt
Staff Writer

Indiana State coach Ron Greene says it's been a roller coaster season for his 1-4, 6-13 Sycamores, with more downs than ups so far in MVC play.

"We haven't had many peaks," Greene said, noting a 72-65 win over Bradley on Jan. 15 as the high point of the season. "It's been a frustrating year. We just aren't getting many points or any breaks."

Last year, Indiana State struggled to a 5-11, 11-17 effort, despite sporting one of the nation's most prominent scorers (John Sherman Williams) and a nationally-ranked defense.

But those defensive numbers are gone now, along with the 6-5 Williams, who provided a majority of ISU's scoring and rebounding last year.

Defense still tops Greene's list of priorities, but last-place rankings in four of the league's six offensive categories have made winning tough for the Sycamores.

ISU has the MVC's fourth-best defense (65.5 points per game) and second-best field goal defense (43.9 percent). Also ranking second in steals, the Sycamores have played good defense at times, no defense at other times, and excellent defense on occasion.

Add the league's worst field goal percentage, a 14.2 ppg deficit scoring margin, a 54.5 percent free throw average, a 55 ppg scoring average and a 7.4 rebounds-per-game deficit, and one can understand Greene's frustration.

Ten halves of less than 35 percent field goal shooting magnify Greene's offensive troubles. And with his leading scorer averaging under 10 points a game, you know things are rough.

"It's no deep, dark secret," Greene said. "We just aren't getting the ball to fall in. You can't win very many games shooting 38 or 39 percent."

Examining SIU-C's lineup, Greene said guys like Steve Middleton and Doug Novsek "are pretty scary."

"We don't have anyone even close to Middleton's offensive abilities, and Novsek is also a much better shooter than anyone we've got," Greene said. "I was very impressed with SIU's ability to score 84 points against a pretty strong Creighton defense."

Greene's roller coaster ride started with three wins to open the season, but quickly went downhill with 13 losses in the next 16 games. ISU has dropped nine of their last 10 and four in a row. In comparison, the Salukis have dropped 11 of 15 since winning their first four games, and have lost seven of their last nine games.

"We get a good effort from the players," Greene said. "Sometimes it just doesn't seem logical."

Greene says he'll use a slow, deliberate offense, controlling the tempo in an attempt to complement ISU's defense.

The Sycamores recent skid has threatened even the long-standing winning tradition at their home court, Hullman Civic Center.

With a 4-5 home record this season with four games remaining at Hullman, the Sycamores could end the season with their first losing effort since moving there in 1969.

While Larry Bird was thrilling the home crowds in the late 1970s, the Sycamores compiled a lofty four-year 60-6 home record (84-25 overall). Since Bird flew into the NBA spotlight for the Boston Celtics, the Sycamores are 67-35 at home and have had just one winning season out of seven.

With Bradley ineligible for postseason play because of NCAA sanctions, the Valley team in fifth place will win the right to host the last of three first-round tournament games.

"We'd sure like to host a Valley tournament game," Herrin said. The second-year coach and his squad set that goal early in the season and haven't forgotten it despite a 1-5 standing in Valley play.

If the Salukis are to host a first-round game, they'd have to pass Creighton and Indiana State in league standings, as well as at least one of the Valley front-runners (Tulsa, Wichita State, Drake or Illinois State).

It is, at best, a long shot that Herrin readily admits but doesn't necessarily accept.

"When we shoot well, we can play with anyone in the Valley," Herrin said. "We haven't really played bad basketball against Valley teams. But to have a realistic shot, we have to start with Indiana State."

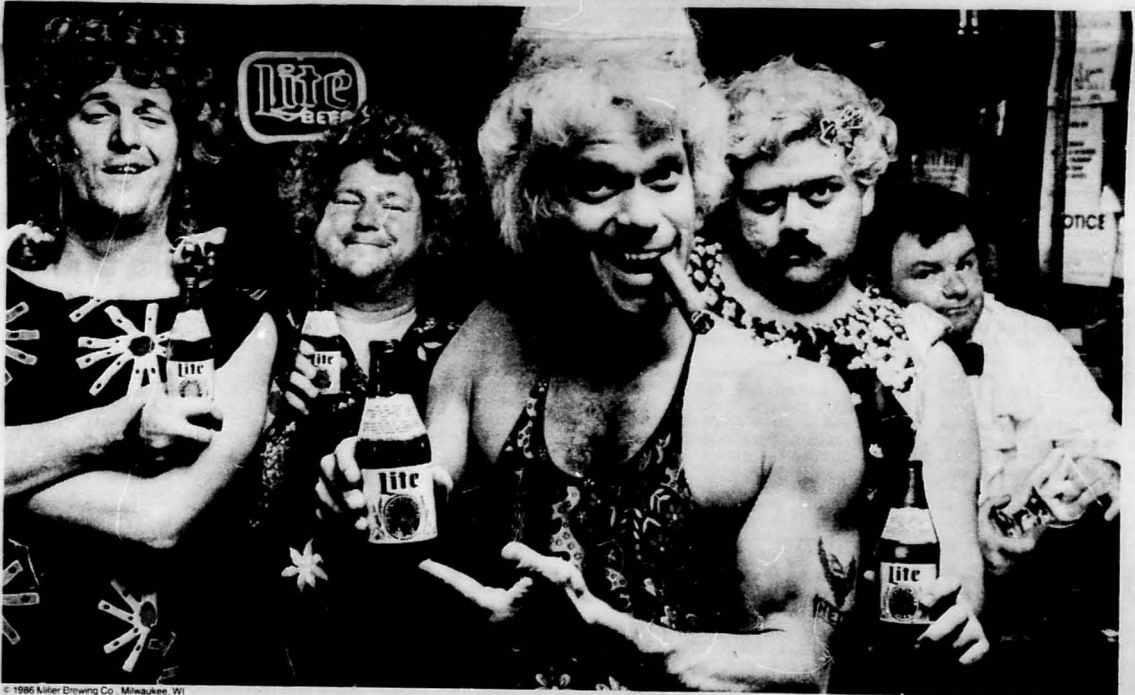

The Salukis have the league's second-best offense, averaging 75.7 points per game overall and 72.8 ppg in Valley play, and should provide an interesting test for the Sycamores' solid defense. "If we play like we did against Creighton — rebounding well and shooting good — we'll win," Herrin predicted.

The Sycamores have 13 players on the roster and used 12 of them as starters, making the job of scouting fairly difficult for Herrin and his staff.

Possible ISU starters for Thursday's game are 6-6 sophomore forward Darrion Applewhite (8.7 ppg, all-MVC freshman team last season), 6-8 forward Larry Busch (8.2 ppg, 7.5 rebounds), 6-5 guard Dion Campbell, 6-2 redshirt freshman Jeff Cooper (team high 9.0 ppg average) or guard Benji Frazier (8.1 ppg).
