Vice chancellors bring in wealth of experience

Dietz brings a record of success from University of Missouri-Kansas City

Larry Dietz's appointment as SIUC's new vice chancellor for Student Affairs and enrollment management brings a change in the title and a recruitment and retention focus.

Interim Chancellor John Jackson said the use of the new title stems from Dietz's same title, as well as his recruitment and retention background, at the University of Missouri-Kansas City. Dietz worked side-by-side with the UMKC vice chancellor since January 1998, and has worked in the Student Affairs division of UMKC since 1985.

"I am excited about the opportunity to go and be a part of a new management team," Dietz said. "I have great confidence in interim Chancellor Jackson."

Dietz is pleased with the steps SIUC has taken to initiate enrollment management efforts, including the consultation of Noel-Levitz, a firm that specializes in recruiting and retaining students.

"It sends a signal to me that the University is interested in recruitment and retention, and that is the first step," he said.

The enrollment management concept encompasses a broad approach to attracting students to an institution. Elements to the concept include looking at an institution's past and future, easing the admissions, registration and financial-aid processes, improving student orientation and mentoring efforts, and providing students with receptive faculty, Dietz said.

"It is a very positive kind of program, but it will demand a lot of work," he said. "It is a type of program that has as its main goal student service."

First steps in SIUC's enrollment management effort, Jackson said, include the University's plans to move the Office of Admissions and Records and the Bursar's Office under the jurisdiction of the vice chancellor for Student Affairs and enrollment management. These upcoming changes are in an attempt to approach students from a more holistic approach.

Currently, the Admissions and Records Office falls under the responsibility of the vice chancellor of Academic Affairs, and the Bursar's Office under the vice chancellor of Administration, forcing students to go back and forth between offices."

Jean Paratore will serve as the interim vice chancellor for Student Affairs until newly appointed Larry Dietz is able to fill the vice chancellorship April 3, interim Chancellor John Jackson announced Wednesday.

Since the retirement of Harvey Welch Dec. 31, the position has remained vacant.

"I am obviously very pleased, honored and appreciate Dr. Jackson's faith in me," Paratore said. "I am looking forward to keeping things in good shape for when Dr. Dietz comes in April."

Paratore, associate Student Affairs vice chancellor and dean of students, will oversee the Student Affairs division for about two-and-a-half months and will aid in upcoming recruitment and retention efforts of the University.

"It's a limited time, but it is important for me to have someone in place," Jackson said. "She has been at SIUC her entire, professional life — it seemed like a natural,

Two SIUC students are standing by their decision to display a Confederate flag in a University residence hall window despite fiery protest to the 130-year-old banner last week in South Carolina.

"It's really no different than all our other flags," said Tom Scheu, a sophomore in aviation maintenance from Savoy. "It's a part of our history."

Scheu said his Thompson Point window, decorated with a full size Confederate flag, has been attracting attention the past several months. Ever since hanging it at the beginning of fall semester, he has received criticism from many sources.

"It's usually turned into racism," said Mike Thompson, a freshman in administration of justice from Dawson and Scheu's suite mate. "I'm sure there are people who see us and say 'they're total bastards.'"

Thompson said his window is adorned with a U.S. flag because his suite mate and he like the historical north and south theme created by the flags. Although it was a coincidence that they both brought their flags, he said, they felt displaying both flags next to each other was an interesting idea.

The Confederate flag, viewed as a common symbol of racial hate and segregation by many, most recently ignited national controversy on Martin Luther King Jr. Day when about 48,000 protesters marched on the South Carolina Capitol, demanding to have the flag removed from above the Capitol Dome. The flag, which flies below the American and South Carolina state flags

City releases list of wanted criminals

Police ready to distribute list of Carbondale's top fugitives

DAVID FERRARA
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Dan Reed was about to slip the list of the top 10 Carbondale fugitives to Chief R.T. Finney for approval Tuesday but had to stop.

While he was organizing the list one of the warrants was quashed.

Amid his busy schedule, Reed, the planning, research and crime analysis Carbondale police officer, needed a day to find another fugitive.

He flipped through the list of 145 wanted felons in Carbondale and picked one.

And, about 3 p.m. Wednesday, after two weeks of working on and off compiling the list, he got consent from Finney to distribute it.

But Reed's work on the list, which includes the fugitive's name, photograph, the crime alleged, a security caution and possible alias, is not completely done. He and Community Relations Officer Don Elliott now have to get the list distributed and keep it updated when arrests are made. Elliott will run the names through a computer system about every two weeks to check if a fugitive is arrested.

The list comprises fugitives who have had associations in Carbondale. They have either lived in the area or had committed the crime in Carbondale. All of the fugitives have warrants issued by Jackson County, and two have warrants issued by the FBI.

"The Carbondale Police Department is familiar with these people for some reason or another," Reed said.

Finney said the police started distributing the lists because they need help finding the people. Reed and Elliott collaborated on the second of what police hope to be a continuous top 10 fugitive list for the department.

The first list was issued in October and five people on the list were arrested, of which the most recent suspect — Shuron A. Sherrill — was detained in Burbank, Calif., only weeks ago. Sherrill was wanted on a warrant for distribution of crack cocaine.

"If you're doing baseball batting percentages, that's 500," Elliott said jokingly. "That's pretty good."

Elliott said police expect to issue new lists about three times a year. Police want to give people enough time to get familiarized with the list. Elliott and Reed disburse the list to the media, parole officers, at city hall and various banks in Carbondale.

The fugitives are selected by the severity of the crime for which they are wanted.

"I'm sure there are enough to keep us in business for an indefinite period of time because there's always more happening," Elliott said.

Six of the 10 new fugitives on the list are considered "armed and dangerous," which means that they have been charged with an offense that involved a weapon.

"It's a safety factor for the cops on the street," Elliott said. "So they don't play with this guy and get hurt."

In association with the Crime Stoppers Tip Line, a reward is given for information leading to the arrest of a fugitive.

"There's nothing better than receiving a Crime Stopper tip on a crime that we have no suspects in," Elliott said.

Anyone with information regarding any of Chief Finney's Top 10 Fugitives should call 549-COPS.

Vice chancellor search narrowed down to six

Primary fundraiser position designed to help alleviate money problems

ANDY EGENSE
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

In hopes to increase fund-raising efforts at SIUC, the University is one step closer to placing the person in position to help alleviate those concerns.

The search committee for the vice chancellor for Institutional Advancement submitted six candidates to the chancellor's office last week. The vice chancellor for Institutional Advancement is the principle recruiter of private funds in order for the University to pursue extra projects, provide student scholarships and pay professor salaries.

Ray Lenzi was promoted Jan. 20, 1999 to serve as the acting vice chancellor for Institutional Advancement. The vice chancellor position opened after Tom Britton returned to the SIUC School of Law about a year ago.

Interim Chancellor John Jackson said he hopes to have someone in place by early to mid-April.

Filling the position is important to the University because the North Central Association cited problems at SIUC including poor fund-raising efforts.

Jackson said the vice chancellor will be working closely with the SIUC Foundation to raise money from alumni and new potential donors.

"It is crucial [the applicants] have excellent people skills," Jackson said.

Jackson also said he is looking for someone that possesses good internal management skills and has experience in raising money.

Samuel Goldman, a professor of educational administration and higher education, is chairman of the search committee. He said his hunch is that Jackson will move "fairly quickly" to fill the position. Goldman indicated this is a vital position for the growth of the University and should be taken seriously. The vice chancellor will be the external communicator with the 175,000 SIUC alumni who make up the majority of private donors.

"We are in a good economy, and we are in a giving mood," Goldman said. "We need to capitalize on that, and we need somebody who knows how to do that well."

Jim Gildersleeve, SIUC Foundation president, said he was pleased to sit in the committee meetings because he will be in direct contact with the permanent vice chancellor. Gildersleeve said the committee has fulfilled its obligation and thinks the process is moving in the right direction.

Last year, $11 million was raised in outside funds that go directly to projects that improve the quality of the University. Jackson said SIUC had a good year for raising outside private funds and that there was an increase from previous years. Lenzi would not comment about his status as a candidate.

An outside executive search firm called Isaacson, Miller — based in Boston — was hired by former SIUC Chancellor Jo Ann Argersinger. This was not traditional University policy in a search process, but Goldman said Argersinger's plan was to "spend a little and get a lot."

Jackson said the firm was used to find people who otherwise would not have applied for the position; but would not characterize Argersinger's distinct approach.

"They can go out and find people," Goldman said. "They spent a great deal of time with us here to learn what the job is all about, what kind of person, what kind of expectations there are."

"It is the job of the person to organize ways of raising funds for the University. After all, the University needs money."

OUR WORD

Success for Dietz a matter of priorities

The accomplishments of former Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Harvey Welch will mark the history of SIUC, leaving a formidable legacy for the incoming Larry Dietz.

Dietz must enter the new position of vice chancellor for Student Affairs and enrollment management with stride, as a permanent administrator. He must not be afraid to build a reputation as a student advocate or make a place for himself in the SIUC community. Dietz will be the man overseeing the quality of life at SIUC residence halls, how financial aid money is allotted, the standards for admission to our University and the plethora of student organizations on campus.

Welch was known to be visible in the University community and in contact with the students he served. His interaction with students at athletic events, in classes and on campus are examples of his willingness to listen. Welch's 25-year tenure at the University leaves big shoes to fill.

But anything is possible. Dietz brings a hefty load of experience and positive recommendations from students and faculty who worked with him at the University of Missouri-Kansas City. The fact that Dietz is a DeSoto native and SIUC alumnus bodes well for the potential he has at our University.

Now, the test is to see if all of his background experience will be put to good use here. By recognizing this University's needs, Dietz can begin to make positive change. In this tumultuous period for SIUC, the Daily Egyptian has identified five imminent issues within Student Affairs that have repeatedly surfaced as concerns for the future:

1. Bring them in and keep them here —

SIUC needs to better its ability to attract students. With recruiting efforts comes the need to look for quality in potential students. When students come to SIUC, apathetic and intending to just party, grades suffer and retention efforts are hampered.

Dietz enters the vice chancellorship bringing the title of vice chancellor of Student Affairs and enrollment management with him from UMKC. While enrollment rates at UMKC have increased since enrollment management was applied at that university, he will have to begin all over again here. Interim Chancellor John Jackson has already set the enrollment management ball rolling with the consultation of a national recruitment and retention expert. It is up to Dietz to pick up the pieces and follow through with the enrollment management concept at SIUC.

2. Walk softly and carry a big stick —

With the exception of Vice Chancellor for Administration Glen Poshard, several top leadership roles at SIUC are left up in the air. Dietz has the chance to be one of the building blocks for a stronger SIUC. He can set the tone for change by being aggressive and taking chances. In doing so, he can establish himself as a strong player in the University's future, just as he did in his 14 years at UMKC.

3. Keep the lines of communication open —

Most students may not care who is named as an interim vice chancellor, but Dietz's job directly affects student life on a daily basis. Dietz has the power to link the administration with the students, and engage students by seeking their input.

His face should become one that people recognize. He needs to know what the food in the residence halls tastes like, what equipment is available in the Recreation Center and how hard it is to find a classroom in Fanner Hall. By understanding the basic elements of student life at SIUC, Dietz can better understand how to serve students and how to make them care about the University.

4. Keep SIUC beautiful —

SIUC's deferred maintenance bill totals $120 million and includes 148 main projects. There is asbestos in Morris Library, and the conditions in Altgeld Hall are horrible. When dealing with recruitment and retention, the look and conditions of the University can't be ignored. Dietz, along with other administrators, need to place facility improvements on every agenda and discuss it in every budget meeting until improvements are up-to-date.

5. Home is where the students are —

More than 2,000 students call the SIUC residence halls home sweet home for nine months of the year, and a sour experience the first week of school could ruin a student's taste about what the University has to offer. Dietz needs to recognize the power he has to improve University Housing life.

Measures such as improving residence hall computer labs, insuring that Housing employees have clear background checks and replacing any semblance of pre-1980's furniture in rooms can make a big difference to a prospective student. When the residence halls are in the same condition as our parents remember them, it's definitely a bad sign.

The Daily Egyptian recognizes the possibilities Dietz possesses when he will step onto SIUC soil April 3. While Welch laid a strong foundation for Student Affairs at SIUC, Dietz must continue to build using his own strengths and ideas.

Greeks are not drunken losers

In the Jan. 26 "Our Word" editorial on the Millennium Initiative, it is stated that "just two years ago, a study conducted by SIUC and Cornell University found not only that greek students drink more than non-greeks, but that greek leaders lead the pack as far as binge drinkers." The part that caught my eye was that GREEK LEADERS are these binge drinkers. So, out of the entire student body, the leading binge drinkers on this college campus are the very people that put countless hours of work into the Greek Millennium Initiative? Are you saying that the people making decisions for the entire greek system are the "drunk losers" you refer to at the end of your editorial? Because if so, then the greek system has more to get across to the SIUC community than our stand on the alcohol portion of the program.

If you honestly think that greek life solely consists of parties after parties, maybe you should pay more attention to the people you are interviewing for your articles: the people who attend and run many meetings a week, hold offices that require actual thought and hard work, work with administration, members, and advisers to learn valuable communication skills and work experience for their future careers and the people who deal with more paperwork and risk management issues than most students even care to know about. I encourage you to remember some of the other aspects of the organizations before you predict that the success (or lack of) of one try at an internally written program will be "confirmation that greeks are just drunken losers."

Dieting woes reveal deeper issues

Is it just me, or are New Year's resolutions a load of crap? I mean, try and think of every person you know who has ever kept one. I bet you can't even use all the fingers on one hand.

This year, just as every other year, I made the same stinking resolution again — to get in shape.

After carefully selecting a diet plan I thought I could (for once) stick to for more than two hours, I headed home from the grocery store, my back seat packed with cases of protein diet shakes. At the end of the third week, I was ready for some positive reinforcement. I marched to the scale with a sense of pride and accomplishment, having weathered the hardship of drinking mud for the sake of my thighs. As I stepped onto the ominous metal square that had been my primary source of anguish for the last decade, I knew my willpower was about to pay off. I lowered my eyes slowly, ceremoniously acknowledging my victory. My eyes finally fell on the scale, and directly after, my jaw fell on the floor.

Not Just Another Priddy Face

jedimstr@midwest.net

Not Just Another Priddy Face appears Thursdays. Grace is a freshman in architecture. Her opinion does not necessarily reflect that of the DAILY EGYPTIAN.

I had gained five pounds. I began to panic, not wanting to believe those three vulgar digits staring back at me. At first, I tried to convince myself I was hallucinating. I leaped off the scale, paused for a moment to collect my thoughts, and then cautiously stepped back on.

Again, the same hideous number appeared, mocking me from the floor.

I hung my head in shame as I climbed back off the scale, not even bothering to muster any shred of dignity I had left.

Hours later, as I was rummaging through the kitchen for any possible source of calories to console my flattened ego, I suddenly stopped in my tracks. I reached into the cabinet and pulled out my old, beat-up Miss Piggy PEZ dispenser.

As I stared into her scuffed plastic face, I began to think about my childhood idol in a new light. As memories of her Hollywood character flooded my mind, I suddenly felt better about my heavy predicament.

Miss Piggy was never paper-thin either, I realized. But that sure didn't stop her from feeling good about herself.

And wasn't there always something about that pudgy snout that prompted Kermit to make those self-conscious gulps every time she smiled his way? So what was it about her that discredited society's beauty myths about voluptuous women? We all know the answer to that.

Piggy was a glam girl. She was happy with herself enough to look past her dress size, and because of it, everyone else did, too. Sure, there was the occasional crack about bringing-home-the-bacon, but on the whole, didn't men tend to be mesmerized by her charm? Didn't other women tend to be envious of her glamorous appearance?

We all knew that underneath that purple eye shadow and platinum hair was a pig, but it never seemed to be an issue because she didn't let it.

With a surge of newfound self-esteem, I flew to the refrigerator and ripped off the Barbie doll I'd taped to the handle to deter my appetite. Tossing Barbie in the garbage, along with the rest of those putrid shakes, I replaced her with the battered Muppet candy dispenser.

As I walked away from the fridge with an air of confidence, I took back my January resolution and replaced it with a new one — to love myself, at whatever expense.

Closed meeting selects Horton

Committee chooses Horton in the interim selection

BYRNN SCOTT
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Frank Horton's selection as SIU's interim president occurred during a combination of two closed meetings of the Advisory Committee and the Board of Trustees.

Sharon Hahs, chairwoman of the Advisory Committee, said despite recent claims to the contrary, the committee did have a voice in the selection.

"After reviewing the applications, we gave our suggestions and opinions of Mr. Horton to the board," said Hahs, who is also the dean of the College of Applied Sciences and Arts. "We were involved in the selection."

We are under very strict guidelines of confidentiality of the process.

SHARON SHROCK
Graduate Council representative

Some members of Southern Illinois HOPE, a group advocating the reinstatement of former Chancellor Jo Ann Argersinger, say that the University's constituency groups were not consulted prior to Horton's appointment. But Hahs said the committee, composed of various University members, met Jan. 6 in Nashville, where they first discussed a need for an interim president. The committee has representatives from Undergraduate, Student Government, Graduate and Professional Student Council, Faculty Senate, Administrative and Professional Staff Council, Graduate Council, Civil Service Council and the Deans Council. Of the 16-member group, eight are from SIU's Edwardsville campus and eight are from SIUC.

The committee was formed as an aid to the board, who is ultimately responsible for appointing the president. In the meeting, the committee reviewed applications from a group of interim president candidates.

Horton, who served as the vice president for Academic Affairs and Research from 1975 to 1980, will serve SIUC as interim president for six months beginning Feb. 1. Horton was hired after Ted Sanders announced his retirement from SIUC Dec. 16 to work for a Denver-based education group.

Horton was selected by the board Jan. 13 during a special meeting in the SIU School of Medicine in Springfield.

Scott Kaiser, media coordinator for the Office of the President, said Horton's name was first mentioned when Sanders recommended him.

"Horton's name came up as someone who was available for a short period of time — which is unusual because generally administrators do not have short amounts of time open, and there is only a small pool of people qualified to do the job," Kaiser said.

Board Chairman A.D. VanMeter would not return phone calls concerning possible interview processes.

Sharon Shrock, Graduate Council representative on the Advisory Committee, said the selection process for Horton was classified.

"We are under very strict guidelines of confidentiality of the process," she said.

But though the final decision concerning Horton was made during a closed meeting, some University leaders still feel comfortable with the selection.

Committee member Sean Henry, the Undergraduate Student Government president, said Horton's selection pleased many on the advisory committee.

"I felt pretty confident that Frank Horton was a good choice since he worked at SIU in the late 1970s and early '80s," Henry said. "Everybody [on the committee] pretty much agreed."

Member of search committee says Horton will be out in six months

KATE McCANN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The Graduate and Professional Student Council expressed doubt about the length of time Frank Horton will remain as SIU's interim president at its Tuesday night meeting.

Horton was announced as interim president Jan. 13 at a special Board of Trustees meeting in Springfield after Ted Sanders announced he will depart from office Jan. 31.

Graduate Council member Corrine Loyola, a part of the Advisory Committee in the search for a permanent president, said Horton is a good candidate for interim president.

"I think he is the most qualified for the job," Loyola told GPSC members. "The interim is a good guy so let's be as supportive as possible."

Loyola said the Jan. 3 deadline for accepting applications for a permanent president was prolonged indefinitely, and the committee will continue taking applications until the position is filled.

You can have my word that he'll be here longer than six months.

Ed Ford
GPSC President

Loyola estimated that between 40 and 45 applications were received. Although the extended deadline would give the candidates more time to turn in their applications, the prolonged deadline has caused concern for some GPSC members and GPSC President Ed Ford.

Ford said he worries the position will remain empty if the committee continues accepting applications, resulting in an extended stay in office for Horton longer than six months. During his tenure, Horton will receive $20,000 per month plus $5,000 for retirement benefits.

Loyola, however, assured GPSC that Horton will not overstay his position as interim. "We have been guaranteed Horton will be leaving after six months," Loyola said.

Despite Loyola's assurances, Ford remained skeptical.

"You can have my word that he'll be here longer than six months," Ford told other members. "Realistically, when you see what's happening, you know the Board of Trustees has no one to move in."

A Cosmopolitan magazine stands partially covered in a rack at the Carbondale Kroger grocery store, 501 N Giant City Road. New Kroger corporate policy dictates that the magazine's cover is concealed from plain view.

The Cosmo cover-up

Kroger covers up racy Cosmo magazine covers

 DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The February issue of Cosmopolitan magazine features a photo of actress/singer Jennifer Love Hewitt modeling a form-fitting gold Gus Bode

Gus says:
 What's an orgasm?

The stores have set up plastic blinders on the racks near the check-out line to cover the photo and headlines, but leave the title of the magazine showing. The company claims this will protect children and other customers who may be offended by the cover.

Larry Columbia, vice president of merchandising for Kroger, said the decision was made a few weeks ago because of numerous complaints the company had received regarding Cosmopolitan covers.

"We received complaints not just about photos, but also story lines and headlines on the cover," Columbia said.

Columbia said the new policy is not a case of censorship. He points out that the Cosmopolitans on the regular magazine rack inside the store are not covered. The company merely wants to cater to its customers' needs, he said.

"We just hope to alleviate customer complaints," Columbia said. "Comments so far are 10-to-1 in favor of what we have done."

Brannon Denning, an assistant law professor at SIUC, said this action taken by Kroger does not violate the First Amendment in any way.

"Since Kroger is not a governmental agency, this is not a violation of the First Amendment," Denning said. "Even if they stopped carrying the magazine all together, they couldn't legally be accused of censorship because they're a private business."

Columbia said his company is performing a public service for its customers.

"We've gotten comments by parents saying they don't want their kids seeing this so we were glad to implement this policy," Columbia said.

Some grocery store employees in the area are not so sure this new policy makes much of a difference.

Sharon Miller, a cashier/clerk at the Murphysboro Mini-Mart, said having the blinders on will not protect children in the long run.

"I don't see much point in it," Miller said. "Most kids already know about anything on a Cosmo cover and they're going to see it everywhere else, anyway."

Regardless, Columbia said this is a policy that he believes will catch on in the years to come.

"We've read about some other stores that have adopted this policy, and I think it could become more popular in the future," Columbia said.

Dietz said the enrollment management idea has been extremely effective on the UMKC campus since the concept's implementation. Enrollment management developed in 1994 at UMKC after a 6-year enrollment decline. In 1994, UMKC enrollment increased 1 percent, and has increased each year.

obvious choice."

Paratore is familiar with the demands of the position. She assumed the duties of the vice chancellor position when former Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Harvey Welch assisted the Edwardsville campus in establishing a housing system in 1994.

Jackson said he hopes to announce the interim vice chancellor for Academic Affairs Friday, replacing former interim Tom Guernsey. The three candidates for the position are Kyle Perkins, Margaret Winters and Richard Falvo.

high school, Alkoff, with a 17-3 record and a sparkling 0.33 ERA in her senior year.

The weak link last season for the Salukis (38-20, 12-4) was a lack of offensive production. A team average of only .248 (.227 in Valley games) proved costly as it could only push one run across in two MVC Tournament losses.

The Salukis will rely on Stremsterfer and SIU's all-time home run leader (18) junior center fielder Marta Viehhaus to lead the offense.

Viehhaus is one of the most feared hitters in the Valley. Posing as a long ball threat every at bat, Viehhaus can also hit for average and is very quick, stealing 26 of 29 bases in her first two seasons at SIU.

majority want it down, take it down," he said.

George Schedler, a professor of philosophy and author of the book "Racist Symbols and Reparations," said the issue is difficult to deal with because the symbol incites so many different feelings.

"It's an ambiguous issue," he said. "It's a genuine part of history, but it does have definite racial overtones in it."

Schedler added that, while the flag became a symbol of hate and segregation during the Civil Rights Movement, recent images associated with Harley Davidson motorcycles and musicians, such as Lynyrd Skynyrd and Billy Idol, appear to be painting a new meaning for a new generation.

"[The flag] has taken on a kind of shock value in the '90s," he said. "In a way, it expresses a kind of rejection of authority."

Thompson said it is important for a culture filled with so much diversity to learn to accept symbols such as the flag since this is a country based on freedom of speech.

"Our country was founded by people from all over with different beliefs, and part of living in a society like this is accepting other people and what they want to do," said Thompson. "If we can't do that, you may as well kick the Bill of Rights out the window."

Along with Stremsterfer and Viehhaus, Blaylock expects senior second baseman Lori Greiner and junior third baseman Julie Meier to put up some big numbers at the plate this season.

The biggest surprise for Blaylock, though, has been the progress of sophomore catcher Andrea Harris on the offensive end following an off-season shoulder surgery.

"(Andrea) was probably our best hitter, along with Erin, in the fall season," Blaylock said.

Two other Salukis returning from injuries are junior right fielder Jess Laughry and junior first baseman Chiara Calvetti.

"(Jess) will be one of our starting outfielders," Blaylock said. "She's very quick, her hitting stroke has come back from that injury."

As far as the Valley goes this season, Blaylock said there is a lot of parity, but believes Illinois State University is the front-runner to capture the MVC crown.

"I think it's going to be about five teams fighting it out," Blaylock said. "What's kind of crazy is that the middle of the pack is so close."

respectively, has been in place since 1962 when it was first raised to commemorate the centennial of the Civil War.

A new poll of South Carolina registered voters by Mason-Dixon Polling and Research Co. indicated that 52 percent favored removing the flag, 37 percent opposed bringing it down, and 11 percent remain undecided.

The issue raised even more eyebrows last week when Vice President Al Gore accused Republican presidential candidate George W. Bush of skirting the issue, as well as debating in other southern states that incorporate the symbol into their flags.

According to Carlos Del Rio, assistant program director of Student Development, there are no regulations restricting what students may display in their residence hall windows and that any such restrictions would violate students' Constitutional rights.

"We endorse freedom of speech at this University," he said. "Displaying flags is a form of symbolic speech."

Assistant Director of Housing Steve Kirk said he knows of no complaints that have been received this year regarding Scheu's flag or other similar displays on campus.

However, despite the Constitutional validity of publicly displaying the flag, it is still seen as a potent symbol of hate by minority groups.

Aaroshika Thornton, a junior in therapeutic recreation from Carbondale, said she is one of an overwhelming number of blacks who see the flag as nothing other than a symbol of racism.

"White power — that's what the Confederate flag stands for," she said. "It was socially acceptable back then, but it's not today."

Thornton said even though she does not like the flag and what it often represents, individuals like Scheu do have the right to display it.

"Everybody has their own opinion and their entitled to it," she said. "They can hang it, but not to symbolize an entire state. For [South Carolina] to bring attention to the entire state, that doesn't say too much about the U.S.A. to me."

Ike Howe, a senior in electrical engineering from Jacksonville and a resident on the floor where Scheu's flag is displayed, agreed and said the issue in South Carolina should be dealt with democratically.

"If the majority of people want it up, leave it up. If the

KERRY MALONEY - DAILY EGYPTIAN

Hilla Medalia, a sophomore in radio and television, practices triple jump at the Recreation Center Tuesday. Medalia placed second in the Saluki Booster Club Invitational Jan. 15 and hopes to improve her jump at this Saturday's meet.

Jumping to America, SIUC

Israeli triple jumpers, Turevsky and Medalia, combine forces for SIUC

CHRISTINE BOLIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIU women's track and field triple jumper Rimma Turevsky came to Carbondale at the start of the Fall 1999 semester from Israel a little unsure and confused about the new lifestyle she was about to begin.

It's a good thing fellow Israeli triple jumper Hilla Medalia was already at SIUC, waiting to lend a helping hand to her new teammate.

"In the beginning, I couldn't communicate easily," said Turevsky, a freshman in foreign language and international trade from LeZion. "It took me a couple months to get used to the language barrier. I felt strange."

"Hilla helped me with the language barrier, and explained to me what I didn't know. She has been a really good friend."

But the duo did not start off as friends, as Medalia and Turevsky were competitors in Israel.

"Sports is not that big in Israel, so all the athletes compete in the same arena. That is where I met Rimma," said Medalia, a sophomore in radio/TV from Moshav Yarkona, Israel. "We did not become friends until she came to SIUC and began to compete with me."

Medalia came to SIUC in 1998 after being recommended to head coach Don DeNoon by former Israeli Saluki cross country and track runner Noam Darsa. Pleased with her first year at SIUC, Medalia made sure she spread the word to her former competition, who just so happened to be interested in coming to America for an education and a chance to compete.

"I really liked going to school here so I told Rimma to come," Medalia said. "It is very important for international students to be at a school with an international program, and SIUC has a good [program]. I made a conference between her and the coach, and now she is here."

International recruiting, however, is not that easy. Israeli students have to go through a difficult process before coming to college.

At the age of 18, both men and women must serve in the Israeli military. The minimum amount of time served is no less than 19 months, unless the person is an athlete. The maximum for the time served for women is one year and nine months, and the maximum time served for men is three years. Although both sexes go through basic training, women generally serve by filling secretarial positions. Turevsky said she served 17 months.

After the military, if students choose to study overseas and compete for an American university, they must take the S.A.T. and score a minimum of 820 to fulfill NCAA qualifications. A Topel test is then taken to determine how well the student can speak English.

Once all tests are taken, the student must have their high school records translated into English. The NCAA Clearinghouse can then grant eligibility.

"[International recruiting] is a very difficult process; it's not as simple as one might think," DeNoon said. "It takes a long time, and is very costly. It may cost an extra $7,000 or $8,000 extra for each international student we recruit."

Although the recruiting process is tough, DeNoon thinks the results were well-worth it for Medalia and Turevsky. So far this season, Turevsky and Medalia have produced high-placing measurements that might land them a qualifying spot for nationals.

Turevsky currently holds the best measured distance in the long jump in the Missouri Valley Conference with a 18-3 3/4 and third place in the triple jump at a measure of 38-11.

Medalia holds the fifth spot in the conference in the triple jump with a 37-7 1/4.

"I think [Medalia and Turevsky] show a real pure example in tenacity, training regimen, and academic performance," DeNoon said. "They are no-fool-around type of individuals who come in and get the job done."

Medalia would like to see her results improve for the Salukis' next home meet, the McDonald's/Saluki Invitational Friday night and Saturday at the Recreation Center.

"I think Rimma and I can win the conference, but we are not ready yet," Medalia said. "I always want to be No. 1 — it is in the heart of every athlete. I am working towards my goal, which I don't want to get before conference. I want to get it at conference."

8:27.73 in the 3,000-meter run. At the Saluki Booster Invitational, he set the pace in the 3,000-meter run for the Salukis with another first-place finish.

Most recently, he ran a victorious 14:29.45 in the 5,000-meter run in a meet at the University of Illinois, good for sixth place on SIUC's all-time list.

Parks' teammates have recognized his contributions to the team. Senior distance runner Matt McClelland has been running with Parks since 1996, when McClelland was a freshman.

"Joe is hard-nosed and focused. He is always in tune with what he is trying to accomplish," McClelland said. "He is more of a silent leader than anything. He's not one to crack the whip on you, but if you are wrong about something, he'll let you know."

"He knows what he has to do and he does it."

Parks will get the chance to continue his quest for nationals this weekend at the McDonald's/Saluki Invitational at the SIUC Student Recreation Center Friday and Saturday. His coach expects more of the same.

"Joe is in the best shape of his life now," SIUC men's track and field head coach Bill Cornell said. "He has been dominant in everything he has ran this year, and he probably will be again this weekend."

CHRISTINE BOLIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The 2000 indoor track season is star Saluki distance runner Joe Parks' last opportunity to qualify for nationals, and so far this season, he is running on the right track.

"I think I am going to have the best indoor season I have ever had," Parks said. "I definitely think this is the year I can qualify for nationals."

Parks, a fifth-year senior in health education from Eldorado, has yet to lose a race this season.

At the first meet of the season, the Early Bird classic, Parks clocked in at

Bulldogs blown away by Salukis' balance

Weber's crew crush Drake with both offensive and defensive show

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIU men's basketball used a flurry of buckets by junior guard/forward Abel Schrader in the first half, combined with a balanced attack in the second half to cruise to their second-straight Missouri Valley Conference victory.

Schrader scored all 11 of his points off the bench in the first half of the Salukis 76-48 pummeling of Drake University

Wednesday night at the SIU Arena.

Using all of their resources, the Salukis placed three scorers in double figures, but had four players score nine points each, as the Salukis (11-8, 5-3) shot 53 percent from the floor.

Once again, the Saluki bench provided the spark to ignite the engine.

Along with Schrader's performance, junior forward Josh Cross scored nine points, while grabbing nine rebounds and swiping four steals in 19 minutes of action.

"Bench may be the worst term in basketball, but that's our job, to come off the bench and give our team a spark," Cross said.

Freshman guard Kent Williams led the Salukis with 13 points, scoring 10 in the second half, including eight in a span of one minute and three seconds, midway through the half.

"The first half I didn't feel really confident about [my shot], but after the second half I felt a little better," Williams said.

The Saluki defense also made its presence felt for the second straight game. The Salukis forced 22 Drake turnovers, well above the Bulldogs season average of 12 turnovers per game.

The Bulldogs shot only 35 percent from the field, including a dismal 1-of-15 (7 percent) from three-point range.

"I thought we were ready to play defensively right from the start," said

Saluki head coach Bruce Weber.

Drake (9-8, 3-5) was led by forwards Dontay Harris and Aaron Deeter, who both scored 10 points.

The Salukis now must face a week-long, three-game road trip starting Saturday at Evansville University in Evansville, Ind. The Purple Aces' loss at Southwest Missouri State University Wednesday night dropping their Valley record to 6-3, only one win ahead of the Salukis, setting up a game of great magnitude.

"We want to win the conference, and to do that we're going to have to win from here on out," Schrader said. "Tonight was just the beginning, but we've got a long road ahead of us."

The next step... MVC championship?

SIU softball season opener, Feb. 18-20, is first step to MVC crown

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIUC softball team has the pitching staff to go as far as its defense behind them will allow.

A few runs would help, too.

But first-year Saluki head coach Kerri Blaylock believes this scenario shouldn't be too demanding of a task for her veteran squad this season.

After a disappointing early exit at the Missouri Valley Conference Championships last year, this is the last chance at a Valley title for four talented Saluki seniors.

For the remaining upperclassmen, an MVC championship is one of the only accomplishments that have tainted some otherwise outstanding SIU careers.

The Salukis recently started spring practices in preparation for the upcoming season and reaching their ultimate goal of an MVC title.

"We've got pitching, there's no question right now," said Blaylock, who was a nine-year assistant at SIU under former head coach Kay Brechtelsbauer. Brechtelsbauer retired last season after 32 years as head coach. "If they keep throwing the way they are, all we need to do is get a good defense, squeak across a couple runs and you win ballgames."

Led by SIU's all-time strikeout leader (629), senior southpaw Carisa Winters, the Saluki pitching staff finished with the best ERA (1.35) in the Valley for the third consecutive season, last year.

Winters, an all-MVC selection, finished 18-11, while junior hurler Erin Stremsterfer, Kerri Blaylock another all-MVC selection, finished 15-9 with a team-high seven shutouts. Senior Tracy Remspecher, who may see time as a reliever this season, finished a perfect 5-0 in eight starts for the Salukis.

Stremsterfer poses as a double-threat for Blaylock, leading the team offensively with a .306 overall batting average last season and .410 in MVC games. The Manchester, Mo., native has a legitimate shot at Valley Player-of-the-Year honors this season.

"Erin is just miss consistency in everything," Blaylock said. "She hits the ball well, she runs well, she's a good pitcher, her attitude is great and I just think she is so consistent because her mental attitude towards the game."

The newcomer to the pitching staff is freshman Katie Kloess, who had a solid fall season: The Belleville native led her
