Students Say 'If' On GOP

If randomly sampled SIU students are indicative of the "average man," then the ultimate leader of the Elephant Party rests on a big "if."

The only student interviewed who refused to give his name for publication fairly well summarized the feelings of his peers.

The noncommitted electors at the Cow Palace will be the deciding factor in the GOP's choice for the 1964 presidential election.

He said this statement will be true whether Barry Goldwater wins on the first ballot or a "dark horse" candidate wins on the fifth ballot.

Carl Hinds, a sophomore majoring in psychology, gave Scranton about a ten-to-one chance to beat Goldwater.

"I feel that the public at large wants Scranton more than they do Goldwater, but it appears that Goldwater has received more electoral support for two reasons," Hinds said.

"Firstly, the electors want to be 'on the winning side,' that is, they want to follow the leader," he said. "Secondly, Goldwater has shown some apparent strength in the state primaries."

Hinds, a native of Aurora, feels that Scranton has a definite possibility to be chosen as his party's standard bearer if he could stave off a first ballot landslide for Goldwater.

William P. Gillen, a sophomore from Taylorville majoring in English, stated flatly that "Scranton has no chance to capture the Republican crown because he got into the race too late."

Gillen credits Goldwater with an outstanding ability to speak. "He has a fabulous sense of timing and confidence, and knows how and when to play on people's emotions."

In Gillen's opinion, the return of Henry Cabot Lodge from Viet Nam and the backing of Gov. Nelson Rockefeller for Scranton, has had a dual effect. It has helped Scranton little but has severed the Republican Party into two factions.

"Either Rocky or Lodge would have had a chance to beat Goldwater, but Scranton has little hope," Gillen concluded.

Sam Campanella, a freshman from Steelville, said,

Arts Committee Urges SIU To Aid Women in Careers

By Leonor Wall

SIU could do more to alert woman students to the increasing number and variety of careers that are open to women, according to a 12-page report on improving women's education. The report has just been completed by a committee in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences and submitted to Dean Henry Dan Piper of the college.

"SIU is doing an excellent job in training women for many different kinds of careers," according to Dean Piper. "But the number of women going to college, and the quantity and kinds of careers open to them on both part-time and full-time bases are increasing so rapidly that it is helpful to take a hard look at the situation as a whole and see if we are responding in the most enlightened and flexible manner."

In 1946, according to Dean Piper, there were only 806 woman students enrolled on the Carbondale campus, while in 1963 the number was 4,335.

Not only that but during this time the proportion of women to man students has also gone up—from 30 per cent in 1946 to 35 per cent in 1963. In the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, the proportion has increased even more drastically.

The committee that prepared the report at the request of Dean Piper and the Liberal Arts and Sciences Council consists of Imogene C. Beckemeyer, instructor in mathematics; Elizabeth R. Eames, lecturer in philosophy; Margaret Kaeiser, associate professor of botany; and Eloise C. Snyder, associate professor of sociology, who served as chairman.

The committee devoted six months to examining recent literature on the subject and consulting with such figures on the campus as Eileen E. Quigley, dean of the School of Home Economics; Alice P. Rector, assistant director of the Student Work Office; Loretta K. Ott, assistant dean of student affairs; and officers of the American Association of University Women and other interested groups and persons.

In addition to the recommendation that the administration and faculty do everything in their power to keep woman students aware of the tremendous number of new job opportunities opening up for women, the committee has also urged that the SIU advisement program give greater emphasis to the special problem of counseling woman students about future careers.

Contrary to the policy existing at some other universities, however, the committee has

Families of New Students Come to Enroll, Sight-See

Preregistration for the fall quarter at SIU will be open until Aug. 24, according to Marion B. Treece, supervisor of the Sectioning Center.

He said there will be one break during this period; the Sectioning Center will be closed July 31 and will be reopened Aug. 10. This covers the period of the close of the eight-week summer session and summer commencement, Treece said. Preregistration is closed because of possible conflicts in advisement.

Technically, summer preregistration is reserved for

Editors' Assembly To Hold Service Honoring Lovejoy

Elijah P. Lovejoy, the Illinois editor, who was killed in 1837 by an angry mob while defending his press, will be honored today by a group of weekly newspaper editors.

Editors attending the annual meeting of the International Conference of Weekly Newspaper Editors will take part in a memorial service at the grave of Lovejoy in Alton.

The International Conference of Weekly Newspaper Editors is holding its annual meeting at Pere Marquette State Park this week.

Their schedule today includes a boat trip through the Chain of Rocks Locks, and the confluence of the Mississippi and Illinois Rivers and the confluence of the Mississippi and Missouri Rivers.

Following dinner at 6 p.m., there will be a report by officers of the organization and an open discussion led by Houston Waring of the Independent, Littleton, Colo.

new students, Treece said, but the center also accommodates continuing students. Preregistration of as many students as possible cuts down on the major rush with the opening of the fall quarter, he explained.

Prospective new students from many parts of the nation are showing up at the Sectioning Center to register for the fall quarter, Treece said. Many families combine a vacation trip with a visit to SIU. This serves to enroll the new student in the family, to find housing, and to give the entire family a first-hand look at the campus, Treece pointed out.

Treece said he often sees familiar parental faces; inquiry establishes that this is their second trip to Carbondale and is for the enrollment of another new student from the family, he added.

Treece said he could not furnish any estimate of enrollment prospects from his running tally of preregistrations.

Library Closes; Air Cooling Fails

Morris Library was closed at 5 p.m. Monday because of failure of the air conditioning system.

Ralph E. McCoy, director of Libraries, said the air conditioning had been off all weekend and that the temperature in the building was in the 90s.

Repairs from St. Louis were working on the equipment Monday night.

McCoy said he hoped the library could be reopened today, but that it would have to stay closed until the cause of the trouble could be found.

55 Students in Workshop

Computers, Laser Research Tackled by Young Scientists

What is multi-channel time division multiplex frequency modulation of laser?

Ask Dwight Borses, Nogales High School, La Puente, Cal. He is sending five signals simultaneously through a laser and separating them by their time characteristics.

And what is a laser? Everyone should know that it is a monochromatic light formed from stimulated emission of neon and helium.

Dwight is among 55 high school students attending a science workshop here. The group of 20 girls and 35 boys is made up of youngsters with special talent in science.

The students have chosen two fields of study from among engineering, electronics, animal psychology, taxonomy, mathematics and computers, physiology and organic chemistry.

There is an attempt to avoid duplicating things the students have had in high school. They have an opportunity to work with complex equipment that high school cannot afford.

"This is a sharp group of kids. Although some of them have not seen electron microscopes and electronic computers before, they have read quite a bit and have some understanding of them," said Howard Stains, director of the workshop.

The students are engaged in an assortment of highly technical science research projects.

Sherwin Levinson of Roosevelt High School, Chicago, is working on a thermionic propulsion plasma jet engine. An electric arc heats the fuel to a temperature of 30,000 degrees, hotter than the surface of the sun. The hydrogen does not burn. It is the heat from the arc that operates the engine. The electricity will be provided by 12 six-volt batteries. The carbon electrodes last only 3 minutes.

"Tungsten electrodes would last about 10 hours, but I can't afford them. Tungsten would be quite expensive," Sherwin said.

Patty McBee of St. Aloysius Academy, New Lexington, Ohio, is working with an instructor on research in taxonomy. They are studying a parasitic worm and trying to determine whether it is aerobic or anerobic. They are making a study of the enzymes in its body.

"After removing worms from pig entrails, I didn't care for the noodles that we had for supper," Patty said jokingly.

Jan Schmidt of Highland Park High School is compounding a chemical mixture. When she has completed her work, the mixture will be examined with a spectroscope to see whether she has compounded it correctly.

TWO HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS ATTENDING THE SIU SCIENCE WORKSHOP PERFORM AN EXPERIMENT IN A LAB.

Anne Wesseling, Mother Mercy High School, Cincinnati, Ohio, is working with computers. "I was confused when I first saw a computer," she said. "I am still a bit confused, but I hope to learn about them."

Eileen Howell, the only girl involved in an engineering project, thinks that being the only female in the group has decided advantages. She says that although chairs are sometimes scarce, she always gets one.

Carmen Reed, Juanita Valley High School, Alexandria, Pa., explained that she came this great distance because she wants to travel. She thinks that SIU has one of the best workshops for high school science students. "It is much tougher than high school," she added.

Linda Carlson from University of Chicago Laboratory School is trying to find out whether one learns better by audio or by visual stimulus. One set of rats is taught to press a key when the light is on while another group is taught to press the key when a tone is sounded. This is a pilot study. If there is significant difference in the learning, further studies will be made.

Linda tried this experiment using her friends as guinea pigs. She showed some of the words on flash cards and played the words to some of them with a tape recorder. The experiment, however, proved nothing, she said.

Linda prefers to use the rats in the experiment. She explained that there is little problem of environmental differences, and rats are always around when she wants them.

Elsie Pechter of South Shore High School, Chicago, is studying the blood of salamanders. "I have seen red cells with an electron microscope. I have been looking for white cells," she said.

John Carmichael of Sarasota, Fla., is studying behavior changes that result in rats when portions of the brain are destroyed. When the amygdaloid is destroyed, the food preference seems to change. The work is a pilot study for a master's thesis.

John Cipora, Ferndale High School, Johnstown, Pa., is studying the effect of diethyl sylbestral in oral form on mice. The results will be determined by comparison with a control group. This chemical is commonly used in livestock feed.

Michael Munter, Central High School, Bridgeport, Conn., is studying the result of animal burrows on erosion. He is also searching local ponds for hybrid toads that are a cross between the American and Fowler's toad. In his study of hybridization, he is looking for toads that have characteristics of both breeds.

Barry Lehman, Jersey Shore High School, Jersey Shore, Pa., is studying two-phase modulation of color television signals.

Prof. Mitchell Awarded $8,224 for Research

James C. Mitchell, assistant professor of psychology, has received an $8,224 research grant from the Illinois Department of Mental Health.

The grant, covering a one-year period, is for research titled "Studies of Visual Discrimination Deficits Following Cortical Lesions." It marks the second year the mental health department has supported the study.

Mitchell, a native of Youngstown, Ohio, came to SIU in 1962. Formerly a research associate at the University of Mississippi Medical Center, he holds three degrees including the Ph. D. from Ohio State University.

SIU Dietitian Wins Contest With New Sandwich Recipe

A gourmet sandwich concocted by an SIU dietitian has brought her national recognition.

Christina Richart, food service supervisor of residence halls at SIU, submitted her recipe for a "Steak Roll Broil" in the ninth annual sandwich contest conducted by the National Restaurant Association.

Her offering was one of four selected in the category sponsored by the Wheat Flour Institute, and has been published in a leaflet, "How to Make the 20 Best Sandwiches of the Year."

Judges were the staff of the School of Hotel and Restaurant Administration of Oklahoma State University, augmented by a panel of distinguished food editors and writers and representatives of the hotel and restaurant industry.

Here is her recipe, which she recommends as a welcome variation for the summer cook-out:

STEAK ROLL BROIL

1/3 cup sliced fresh mushrooms; 1 tablespoon diced green onion; 2 teaspoons butter; 1/3 cup dairy sour cream; 1 teaspoon chopped parsley; Dash salt.

6 slices beef tenderloin, cut 1/2-inch thick; 2 tablespoons butter, softened; 1 teaspoon chopped parsley; Dash garlic powder; 6 enriched coney or hot dog buns, toasted.

Cook mushrooms and onion in two teaspoons butter, stirring until onion is transparent. Remove from heat and gradually blend in sour cream, stirring constantly. Blend in one teaspoon chopped parsley and salt. Flatten beef tenderloins to four-inch squares. Spread with sour cream mixture. Roll up and secure with toothpicks. Blend the remaining butter with the parsley and garlic powder. Cook steak rolls slowly on grill or under broiler, brushing with butter mixture each time the rolls are turned. Serve hot on buns. Makes six sandwiches.

Percy Backs Senator Dirksen As Choice for Vice President

SAN FRANCISCO—Charles H. Percy is keeping Sen. Everett M. Dirksen's name alive in the Republican vice presidential speculation despite Dirksen's assertion he isn't interested.

Percy, GOP nominee for Illinois governor, told a news conference Sunday that Dirksen would be an "offsetting balance on the civil rights issue" and would make the strongest vice presidential candidate in Illinois.

Percy is going along with the majority of the Illinois delegation in favoring Sen. Barry Goldwater for the presidential nomination but he has expressed disagreement with Goldwater's vote against the civil rights bill.

A number of Illinois delegates to the party's national convention, acting on the assumption Dirksen has removed himself from the vice presidential picture, begin booming Sen. William E. Miller of New York for the second spot.

Losses Are Heavy In Viet Battle

SAIGON, Viet Nam—A weekend battle around a mud-walled fort called Vinh Cheo shaped up Monday as the second biggest engagement between government forces and Communist guerrillas in the Mekong delta this year.

A roll of government casualties compiled by Vietnamese and U. S. sources totaled 225-50 dead, 110 wounded and 65 missing.

The Communist Viet Cong assault forces also were reported to have suffered heavily. One Vietnamese officer estimated Communist losses at 300. U.S. advisers, however, said they doubted more than 100 were killed or wounded.

The Communists were said to have captured about 100 weapons.

Decomposed Body Found in Louisiana

JACKSON, Miss.—A pathologist checked the remains of a mutilated body Monday while the main search for three missing civil rights workers shifted location.

The body—the lower half—was found draped across a log in a sluggish offshoot of the Mississippi River, about 17 miles south of Fallulah, La. The feet were bound with rope.

There was a "good possibility" the body was that of one of the three missing men, an officer said.

Officers said divers were called to help search the Old River which used to be the main channel of the Mississippi but now is a slow, muddy loop with little current except during high water.

An all-out attempt was mounted to try to identify the portion of the body, which was badly decomposed. The effort was directed by the new head of Mississippi's FBI office, Roy Moore.

In addition to laboratory work on the body, police tried to identify some of the personal effects taken from the blue jeans on the corpse.

The blue jean pockets gave up several clues. Police said one of the best was a key chain. Two keys were on it, one of them embossed VBI 47.

There also was a gold wrist watch, stopped at 5:55, a water soaked piece of paper bearing the words "A & M college, rural Mississippi," a penny and a package of cigarettes.

A leather belt bore a buckle with the initial "M" on it. From the size of the belt, police deduced that the dead person stood 5 feet 6 or 5 feet 7 and weighed about 135.

Michael Schwerner, 24, one of the missing three, stood about 5 feet 9 and weighed about 178 pounds.

A spokesman for the Council of Federated Organizations—a civil rights group—said "evidence, so far, on the Tallulah body discovery is conflicting. Because it is conflicting, we prefer not to comment."

The other missing were Andrew Goodman, 20, and James Chaney, 22.

Russian Workers To Get Pensions

MOSCOW—The people at the bottom of the Soviet economic ladder, collective farmers and public service employees, were promised a better deal Monday by Premier Khrushchev.

Raising Soviet living standards is the most important ideological consideration now, Khrushchev declared at the opening summer session of the Supreme Soviet.

The premier announced a decision to provide pensions for the first time to about 6.5 million collective farmers and called it a measure of great historic importance.

Goldwater Grabs 42 Ohio Votes

SAN FRANCISCO—Front-running Sen. Barry M. Goldwater grabbed 42 of Ohio's 58 Republican National Convention votes Monday in a two-hour caucus.

Ohio's favorite son, Gov. James A. Rhodes, kept 13 votes. Pennsylvania Gov. William W. Scranton saw his Ohio strength dwindle to 2 votes and Sen. Margaret Chase Smith of Maine picked up one vote.

Prior to the caucus the Associated Press survey of the delegates' first ballot votes stood at 20 for Goldwater, 8 for Scranton and 30 uncommitted.

One report from San Francisco pegs Southern Illinois delegates Donald Mitchell, Murphysboro and Harold Watson, Mt. Vernon, as leaning toward the Goldwater camps.

The report says the two had been leaning toward Scranton, but appear to have reversed themselves in the face of the Illinois delegation's majority for Goldwater.

Mitchell rode to the convention on a special train from Chicago with former President Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Civil Rights Rally Denounces Barry

SAN FRANCISCO—Sen. Barry Goldwater was denounced as a totally unacceptable Republican presidential candidate by speakers at a massive civil rights rally Sunday.

The demonstrators, both Negro and white, were estimated by police to number around 35,000. They moved slowly, 15 abreast, up Market Street to the Civic Center Plaza where they were addressed by Negro civil rights leaders including James Farmer, national head of the Congress of Racial Equality and William Chester, chairman of the San Francisco Negro Labor Assembly.

New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, Henry Cabot Lodge, and New York Sens. Jacob Javits and Kenneth Keating also addressed the marchers. They did not mention Goldwater by name.

Rockefeller and Lodge praised the demonstrators.

Floor Fight Possible

'64 GOP Platform Tops Today's Agenda

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)-- The Republican National Convention, its opening formalities behind, prepared today to consider the controversial 1964 platform.

Rep. William E. Miller, the national chairman, who has been mentioned as a vice presidential possibility, wielded an oversized gavel about 12:30 p.m. (Carbondale time) Monday to call the convention to order.

The convention convened amidst wide agreement that Sen. Barry Goldwater was a shoo-in for the nomination Wednesday evening.

Monday, the delegates went through such formalities of a convention opening as entertainment, the local welcome, reading of the formal call of the convention, addresses, messages and a dramatic reading.

All of this led up to the keynote speech delivered Monday night by Gov. Mark Hatfield of Oregon.

The convention goes into its second day with a late-afternoon session featuring important committee reports which include the proposed Republican platform. In the week prior to the opening of the convention, the drafting of the platform was one of the points of issue between the forces of Sen. Goldwater and those of Gov. William Scranton of Pennsylvania.

The platform committee's report may touch off a floor fight as Scranton supporters seek to carry their program to the convention. As presented by the committee, the platform is regarded as a victory for the Goldwater faction.

The Republicans' last chief executive, Dwight D. Eisenhower, will address the convention tonight as the closing order of business. He will be introduced by Rep. Charles A. Halleck of Indiana, the House minority leader.

The balloting for the nominee for president is scheduled for Wednesday after nominating and seconding speeches have been completed. If the convention selects the nominee Wednesday, the nomination of the candidate for the vice presidency will follow on Thursday, and the convention is scheduled to adjourn that day.

The winner will need 655 votes to take his party's biggest prize, and by Monday, Goldwater forces were claiming well over 700. Chairman Miller was predicting a first-ballot total of 700 to 710 for Goldwater, and the senator himself said he counted 739 votes for his candidacy.

Here's Program For GOP Events

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) -- Following is today's program at the Republican National Convention:

Barry Is 'Boiling' Over Debate Bid

SAN FRANCISCO--(AP)-- Backstage action exceeded that onstage at the opening of the Republican national convention Monday.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, the front-runner for the nomination, was described as "boiling mad" at a challenge from Gov. William Scranton of Pennsylvania. The governor invited Goldwater to a convention debate.

Scranton's challenge was in the form of a letter which Goldwater called "ridiculous," and returned.

Scranton posed this question:

"Will the convention choose the candidate overwhelmingly favored by the Republican voters or will it choose you?"

Goldwater's aides printed several thousand copies of the Scranton letter, in the hopes that it would boomerang on the governor. Scranton charged that "Goldwaterism has come to stand for a whole crazy-quilt of absurd and dangerous positions that would be soundly repudiated by the American people in November."

Fever Invades Campus

Magic Word 'Goldwater' Stirs Usually Sleepy Summer Class

By John Matheson

It was a quiet, sultry July day in the classroom in which Comparative Language Systems was meeting.

The instructor was discoursing on the difference between Urdu and Finnish when a hand was raised in the fourth row from the front. The question was:

"Do you think Goldwater has a chance of being elected if he receives the nomination?"

The instructor was not the intended target of the query. It was addressed, indirectly, to the Goldwater partisan in the front row.

Its intended effect was realized; his head rotated 120 degrees to the left before the "Gold-" in Goldwater had been uttered. With the phrase "a chance of being elected" the hackles were rising and his blood pressure was on its way up.

And thus it happened; with the posing of a seemingly innocuous question, the instructor lost complete control of the class for the remainder of the 50 minutes.

Momentarily, the Goldwater supporter was at a loss for a rejoinder; finally, he sputtered out, "you--you liberal-winger, you!"

Thus was the issue joined. The foreign students were agast at what followed. All quarter, these Americans had been sitting stoically in the classroom. The instructor could range far and wide over Comparative Language Systems without creating so much as a ripple amongst the scholars seated before him.

Now, one simple question had the class in a turmoil. Partisan invective was heaped upon the opposing sides; the agitator who started the whole hassle injected an occasional well-placed needle to keep things going and add fuel to strategic places in the fire.

"It's a natural sort of discussion," one observer pointed out to the foreign students. Within a four-year career in an institution of higher education, politics erupts spontaneously every Leap Year in the classroom.

"It's difficult to ignore a contemporary situation," he explained, as erasers flew through the air and two strong partisans wrestled in a corner. Two coeds fought for possession of a campaign button; the table in front of the room.

Ideally, the observer informed the foreign contingent, political matters are discussed without violent disagreement.

About this time, two forthright debaters were at each other's throats; one seemed to have the upper hand because his adversary was halfway through the window on the second floor of Old Main.

The bell broke it up. The original agitator, whose actual intent was to filibuster the scheduled quiz, escaped without a scratch. He was first out the door, followed by the less seriously injured and the untangled disputants who filed out for their coffee break at the center.

The agitator, it turned out, was neither Democratic nor Republican in political preference. He was from Canada and a strong progressive-conservative who has found the magic words to sidetrack any normal course of class discussion in election season.

The Glut of Things Right Now Worth Waiting For

Let's not run this civil rights thing into the ground. That all men are created equal is a farce. It just isn't so. No two human beings are exactly alike; they differ in intellect, in physical type, in ambitions, in myriad ways. Yet, that all men should have the right to seek equality is an ideal worth striving for, an ideal basic to our country's system of government.

Yet there are those in this country today who would deny this right. There have always been minority groups in this, the great melting pot of the world. The speed with which they are assimilated is proportional to the extent of their differences. In other words, the more different a person is from the American norm, the less rapidly he is accepted. Skin color, language, and cul-

Zwei Pfennig on Cafeteria Prices

In regard to the University cafeteria, may I add my zwei pfennig worth?

I have been associated with business enough to find that two establishments in the same business have approximately the same expenses. Furthermore, one can feel he is getting a fair return if he gets 10 per cent of his investment after all expenses. Now, I have never heard of the expenses of Slater's in the Center, nor anything of their investment in this food service. But can they justify charging $1.25 to $1.50 for a meal that one can get from Blank's Restaurant downtown for 75 to 90 cents? And Blank's ture are formidable obstacles. There have been lots of minority groups. The pilgrims were a minority group. Always minority groups have had to tolerate derogatory terms. Today, America is a land of limeys, krauts, dagos, chinks, shanty Irish, niggers, Jews, polacks, spics, and big dumb Swedes.

So now we have a civil rights law, a legal document succinctly acknowledging specific objectives of a crusade that has been going on for a long time. To the outward accomplishment of these objectives it will undoubtedly do much. Yet for integration, or any other social movement for that matter, to be truly successful, sincere understanding must be the motivating force.

Bearded, unbathed misfits, the cause does not need you. You who are looking for just any cause to champion, find yourself another. Church ladies, if you seek to send a student south only because it's just another item on your long list of do-good policies, forget it.

Let only worthy people support worthy movements, for sincerity, not fad, is the decisive element. Average Joe American, be your name Yamasaki, Romero, Schneider, Goldstein, or Jones, it's all up to you. Now what are you going to do about it?

A Nice Try—but Belatedly?

More than 40 years have passed since the Baltimore Sun's long famous political correspondent, Frank R. Kent, wrote a wise and perceptive book which he called "The Great Game of Politics."

The title of the Kent book comes to mind as we look back at the intra-party moves and counter moves leading up to the Republican national convention. For what we have been witnessing is a play out in the framework of the great American game of politics. Goldwater, Scranton and Lodge, Rockefeller, Nixon and Eisenhower are the leading players in the game.

The stakes are high indeed—perhaps even the survival of the Republican party is in the balance. If this sounds like an extreme statement we need only to remember that foresight is not as good as hindsight. When the Whip party started on the downhill trail before the Civil war it did not know that oblivion was at the end of that bitter road.

No matter what the delegates do at San Francisco's Cow Palace, a group of outstanding, forward-looking Republicans will have the satisfaction of knowing that they did their best, if belatedly, to save the political party of Abraham Lincoln from the millstone of a Goldwater nomination.

First honors go to Nelson A. Rockefeller. New York's Republican governor fought a good fight from the snows of New Hampshire to the golden sands of California where he came within a hair of winning the delegates that narrowly went to Goldwater. Rockefeller invested a great deal of time and money and energy in his campaign for the nomination and his party owes him a debt of gratitude for the character and quality of his effort.

When the photo-finish in California took him out, the New Yorker generously threw his support to his fellow governor in Pennsylvania, William Scranton. He did it in good spirit—as a loser in politics should but often fails to do.

Scranton deserves a warm hand. It was obvious that he did not want to be put in the position of running against President Johnson in November. But when the progressives in his party told him that it was up to him to try to save the day for Republican candidates for Congress and the governorships he valiantly took on not only Goldwater but seemingly a majority of the Republican delegates.

A similar debt is owed to Henry Cabot Lodge. From a difficult role in South Viet Nam, as American ambassador, he came home to a job almost as hard. If Lincoln's party is spared the downhill trail before the Civil war it did not know that oblivion was at the end of that bitter road.

Meantime Goldwater has voted in the Senate Labor committee against the "war-on-poverty" bill. Joining the majority in the 13-to-2 vote were Republicans Javits (N. Y.), Prouty (Vt.), and Jordan (Idaho). Add this vote to his votes against closure and the civil rights act and his proposal to sell TVA and Goldwater invites defeat as out of step with his times, with his party and with American history.

Bylines Requested on Theater Reviews

On page two of the Daily Egyptian of July 8 there is an article concerning the Proscenium One production, "The Moon Is Blue." The headline mentions audience reaction; however, the copy appears to be the opinion of the reporter only.

If the article does reflect the opinions of several members of the audience as collected by the reporter, it should, in my opinion, attribute those opinions to their rightful owners, or at least employ the device of "...said a member of the audience."

If the remarks are those of one person, I believe that the article is editorial in nature and should be signed or carry a by-line.

Towboat Class Begins July 20

The first part of a special School for Towboat Masters will be offered for the fourth time at SIU July 20-24, according to Alexander R. MacMillan, director of Southern Transportation Institute.

The short course is a joint program of the Institute and the University's Division of Technical and Adult Education.

The program, developed in cooperation with representatives of the inland waterways towing industry, will include such topics as supervisory responsibilities and operation, safety practices and responsibilities, labor relations, human relations, communications, and the latest information about some phases of admiralty law and navigation.

Specialists from Southern's faculty and from the waterways industry will comprise the school staff.

The school is intended to bring towboat masters up to date on the latest developments in the industry and to improve their abilities to work with others more effectively. Those completing the part one course return at a later date for a more advanced Part Two school.

Committee Making Summer Active

The Summer Steering Committee, under the chairmanship of Yvonne Stevens, is taking on the broadest program ever in its third year of existence.

This is the first summer that the committee has had to plan activities for a 12-week period, and in the first four weeks has already planned 39 activities.

In the summer of 1958, SIU had 24 planned events. Last summer the Steering committee planned 84 activities. At the present rate, the committee should double that figure.

Several major events were included this summer for the first time, among them Southern Follies, Student World Conference and Saluquarama.

GLENDIA SPICER AND JAMES KEERAN REHEARSE A SCENE FROM "THE MILLIONAIRESS."

Comedy of High Finance

Shaw's 'The Millionaires' Billed by Southern Players

A delightfully penetrating view of high finance is being "invested" on the stage of the Southern Playhouse this week. George Bernard Shaw's classic, "The Millionaires," opens Wednesday.

This comic drama, concerned with the trials and tribulations of a fabulously wealthy "working girl," has been produced all over the world. The first performance premiered in Vienna in 1936. A recent film version stars Peter Sellers and Sophia Loren.

Such brilliant actresses as Edith Evans and Katherine Hepburn have tackled the difficult and exacting role of the millionaires. Shaw fashioned this character after two famous women, Beatrice Webb and Lady Astor.

Like Shaw's other dramatic masterpieces, "The Millionaires" exposes crucial weaknesses of society in a hilarious manner.

The play presents the story of Epifania, a strong-willed, powerful, but completely undisciplined woman. Through a series of comic situations, she is forced to find a man who can turn a small sum of money into a fortune in a very short time.

Critics have said that Shaw is a dramatist who writes with a feather sharpened at one end to a lethal point. "The Millionaires" has just that sort of sharp, cutting humor.

The cast of "The Millionaires," the third offering of the Southern Players tenth summer playbill, includes Brenda Spicer as Epifania.

James Keeran is cast as Adrian Blenderband, Richard Boss as the Doctor, Carleton Winters as Julius Sagamore, Phil Potter as Alistair Fitzfassen, Jo Ann Forte as Patricia Smith, Jerry Powell as The Man, Beverly Byers as The Woman, and Charles Gilroy as The Manager.

The production is directed by Sherwin Abrams, and the setting designed by Darwin Payne.

"The Millionaires" will be staged nightly, Wednesday through Sunday. Curtain time is 8 p.m. All seats are reserved. The box office is open 10-12 a.m. on weekdays and at 7 p.m. on show nights.

Liberal Arts Committee Urges Review of Women's Programs

recommended that no special curricula or training programs be developed for woman students, other than those already existing.

They suggested also that research into more effective ways of preparing women for careers should be encouraged at Southern, and that a greater effort be made to keep routine statistical data about the educational progress of SIU's woman students.

Other recommendations, according to Dean Piper, are that SIU undertake to establish closer association with other colleges that have developed special programs in the field of women's education; and that some thought be given to the possibility of undertaking experimental programs in this field. At the present time there are over sixty programs in women's education operating in more than thirty states. Many are being supported by foundations and other outside agencies.

"Since there is every indication that the proportion of woman college enrollees will continue to rise, nationally as well as at SIU," the report comments, "it is essential that Southern review its present courses and programs, so that our woman students will be trained not only as future wives and mothers, but so that they can also support themselves, if necessity arises, in creative and remunerative occupations."

The report points out that the average woman today no longer has to make a choice between marriage and career. She expects to enjoy the best of both worlds. Women are marrying earlier than ever before, and are having children earlier. They are also living longer. Therefore, they can look forward not only to marriage but also to many opportunities for jobs and careers.

During its investigations, the committee turned up a number of other interesting facts. For example, SIU woman students tend to have higher high-school grade averages than male students. Yet in spite of this they appear to have more modest educational aspirations.

In the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences it was found that a larger percentage of woman students work than male students. But this does not appear to be a handicap. For not only do woman students, who are also working, do better academically than their masculine counterparts, but working women also get higher grades than fellow women who are not working.

All of this indicates, according to Dean Piper, that woman students at SIU represent one of the campus's richest intellectual reservoirs of energy and talent, and that everything possible should be done to assure that this potential be fulfilled.

40,000 Prospective Hunters Seek Shotgun Deer Permits

More than 40,000 persons have applied for shotgun deer hunting permits, according to William T. Lodge, director of the Illinois Department of Conservation.

Applicants may expect a delay in receiving their permits, Lodge said, because of the tremendous volume of mail and walk-in requests for permits for the coming season.

Under department policy, all unsuccessful applications will be returned. The applicant then may re-apply for a permit for another county.

All successful applications will be held and the permits mailed at a later date. Director Lodge said that the applicants could assume that they will receive their permits if not notified by the department during July.

The season in the 16 northern counties will be Nov. 20-23. The 21 central and 22 southern counties will be permitted a season of two 3-day periods -- Nov. 20-22 and Dec. 4-6.

The following counties have reached the quotas established by the department: Carroll,

Somberg Accepts U.N. Forestry Job

Seymour I. Somberg, associate professor of forestry, has accepted an assignment as forestry officer to the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization for special projects in Peru.

He will help establish a five-year professional school of forestry in the Agriculture College at Lima, Peru; set up a two-year technical school of forestry, and develop forestry research programs for Peru. The technical institute will be established in the Amazon region of the country.

He expects to begin duties in Lima about Aug. 15 after 10 days in Amsterdam and Rome. His resignation from the SIU Forestry Department will become effective at the end of summer term.

Somberg, who is a specialist in forest management, was a private consulting forester in the U.S., Central and South America before coming to SIU in 1962. A native of Brooklyn, N.Y., he received his bachelor's degree from Iowa State University, and his master's and doctoral degrees from Duke University.

Squirrel Season

Will Begin Aug. 1

The squirrel season will begin Aug. 1 and close Oct. 15 in the Southern Conservation Zone, the Illinois Department of Conservation has announced.

In the Northern Zone the squirrel season will open Sept. 1 and end Oct. 31.

Limits in both zones are five squirrels a day and 10 in possession after opening day. On the first day of the season, the daily bag limit and possession limit are the same, five squirrels. Shooting hours are from sunrise until sunset every day of the season.

It is unlawful to kill a white squirrel anywhere in the state.

The following counties make up the Southern Conservation Zone: Alexander, Bond, Calhoun, Clay, Clinton, Crawford, Edwards, Effingham, Fayette, Franklin, Gallatin, Hamilton, Hardin, Jackson, Jasper, Jersey, Jefferson, Johnson, Lawrence, Madison, Marion, Massac, Monroe, Perry, Pope, Pulaski, Randolph, Richland, St. Clair, Saline, Union, Wabash, Washington, Wayne, White and Williamson.

The remainder of the state is in the Northern Zone.

Students Say 'If' On GOP Choice

"Goldwater will win on the first ballot."

"I think that Scranton started too late to be considered a real contender for the GOP leadership."

Nasrin Zarafshan, a freshman from Tehran, Persia, spoke out openly for a "dark horse" victory.

Miss Zarafshan chided Goldwater for being "too narrow-minded...too simple."

"A man with his attitudes toward Viet Nam, toward Cuba and toward civil rights is simply wrong," said Miss Zarafshan.

As her "dark horse" victor she picked Richard Nixon.

$24,224 Granted Southern for Science

SIU has received from the National Science Foundation an institutional grant of $24,224 to be used for scientific purposes.

John O. Anderson, coordinator of research and projects, said the foundation makes these grants to institutions of higher learning that have individual research projects in operation under the NSF program. The amounts given are based on the total amount of foundation grants made to the institution during the fiscal year ending March 31.

Institutions receiving these grants determine the best means for using the money to strengthen their scientific programs.
