Council drafts ordinance to stop topless dancing

By Tony Davies
Staff Writer

The Carbondale City Council is out to stop topless dancing and has taken a step in that direction with a draft of an ordinance to regulate adult entertainment in the city.

The ordinance, which was introduced at an informal meeting Monday, defines adult entertainment as that which "features topless dancers, strippers, male or female impersonators or similar entertainers." Three establishments in the city offer topless dancing.

The council will await an alternative ordinance and a legal opinion as to which ordinance would be most applicable before a topless dancing ordinance becomes law. Previously the council had considered an amendment to the liquor code to regulate topless dancing.

"If we want to stop the activity by placing an amendment in the liquor code that won't stop it, and a majority of the council wants the activity stopped," Mayor Neal Eckert said.

According to the proposed ordinance, adult entertainment would be subject to the following guidelines: "No adult entertainment establishment shall be allowed within 1,000 feet of another existing adult entertainment. No adult entertainment establishment shall be located within 1,000 feet of any zoning district which is zoned for residential use. No adult entertainment establishment shall be located within 1,000 feet of a pre-existing school or place of worship."

Councilman Hans Fischer said that if one starts thinking about the establishments in Carbondale and where they are located this ordinance has in fact eliminated this type of activity.

At its formal meeting on Monday the council approved its 1978-79 Sidewalk Program after hearing four residents who were opposed to having sidewalks installed on Lark Lane.

John Young, of 102 Lark Lane, said he was concerned about how far the sidewalks would come up on the property.

City Manager Carrol Fry said sidewalks are placed one foot off the property line in case street expansion is necessary. On residential streets, expansion is not likely and sidewalks could be built closer to the street, Fry said.

Other Lark Lane residents complained that the sidewalks were not necessary and said that if they were to be installed the city and not residents should bear the cost.

Mayor Neal Eckert said it was the police who have sidewalks on all streets in the city limits.

In other action, the council annexed property owned by J. W. Land Trust located south of the University Mall. Expansion of the mall will be located on the land.

Property owned by Sam Hunter located on the west side of Route 51 North and north of Charles Road was also annexed by the council. The property adjoins existing city limits and was recently rezoned industrial.

Buffalo Bob's gets 3-day suspension

By Pat Karlah
Staff Writer

Buffalo Bob's will be closed for business Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday because the Liquor Control Commission suspended its license for allowing patrons to remain inside past the 2 a.m. closing time.

The suspension was levied at the commission's meeting Monday night after the Liquor Hearing Committee recommended the action. The committee held a hearing last week and found the bar, located at 101 W. College St., guilty of violating the liquor code.

Commissioner Archie Jones originally suggested a one-day suspension, but it was later stretched to three days after complaints that the punishment was too lenient.

"I tend to be less sympathetic with this particular violation because it occurred at 2:30 a.m., well after closing time,"

Mayor Neal Eckert said. "This is the same license holder who was subject to the same violation at their other establishment. Repeats of the same violation should tell us something."

Buffalo Bob's and the Plaza Motel Lounge, 680 E. Main St., are owned by the same individual. The Plaza Motel Lounge has also had its license suspended for remaining open past closing time.

Commissioner Hans Fischer said, "I'm a little concerned that this is a second violation. To me this is an indication that the management in these two places is not really interested in complying with the law."

After issuing the suspension, the commission renewed the bar's 1978-79 Class A liquor license, which was held up pending the outcome of the hearing. Liquor licenses expired July 1. Buffalo

F-Senate says no to center

The Faculty Senate Tuesday took a stand against a faculty development center and asked for a study of other ways to achieve the aims of the proposed center. The request for a study came in opposition to a proposal from the ad hoc Committee to Study Faculty Development, which recommended establishment of such a center.

According to the committee's proposal, the center would be designed to provide a number of services to faculty members, including assistance in instructional development, instructional evaluation, course development, and preparation and review of publications.

According to the proposal, the center would be funded by funds transferred from related campus programs, with additional funds coming from the state, if necessary.

The Senate approved a resolution authorizing the Faculty Status and Welfare Committee to investigate faculty development alternatives other than of the establishment of a development center.

In other action Tuesday, the Senate rejected a resolution requesting a 30-day "grace period" before implementation of any changes in campus motor vehicle and bicycle regulations.

The Board of Trustees is scheduled to vote on several amendments to the regulations at its meeting Thursday. The regulations would take effect August 1 if the board approves the changes.

Law school bill may be reconsidered

By Mark Peterson
Staff Writer

A special session of the General Assembly may be called to reconsider a bill that must be passed before capital development funds could become available for construction of the SIU law school, Rep. Bruce Richmond, D-58th District, said Tuesday.

However, Richmond emphasized this was just speculation and that Gov. Thompson has given no indication whether or not he would call such a session. Richmond declined to say where he heard the reports but said that if the session is called it would be within the next two weeks.

Jim Skillebeck, a spokesman for Thompson, said a special session had undoubtedly crossed the governor's mind but said it would be speculation to say it would be held.

Thompson, who was attending his uncle's funeral, could not be reached for comment.

No money can be released for construction of the law school until the authorization bill is passed. The ceiling on capital development bonds would be raised for future projects.

Richmond said the bill would authorize the Capital Development Board to release at least a portion of the $7.6 million appropriation that recently passed the legislature and is awaiting action by the governor.

"The authorization bill was defeated at the closing of the spring session," Richmond said, "by Republicans that were probably just being spiteful."

He added that if a special session is not called, the bill will be brought up next November when the legislature convenes for its fall session.

A press aid to Thompson said the law school appropriation is currently going through a legislative review process and will probably not be acted upon by the governor for at least two weeks.

Thompson has promised to release $250,000 for the planning of a new building but officials and legislators alike have expressed concern that this will not satisfy the ABA, which has threatened to revoke the school's accreditation unless construction of a new building begins soon.

Sen. Ken Buzbee, D-58th District, wrote a letter to Thompson recently urging the governor to sign the bill.

Although the bill calls for money not contained in the governor's budget recommendation that was released March 1, Buzbee told Thompson it would be impossible to spend anywhere close to the amount called for in the bill during the coming fiscal year.

In all likelihood no more than $1 million to $1.5 million would be spent during fiscal year 1979," Buzbee said. "This amount of money, of course, would make no major dent in the community development bond commitments."

Buzbee also re-emphasized, in the letter, the ABA's position of withdrawing accreditation from the law school "if the state does not show sufficient good faith and get this project underway."

Buffalo Bob's to be closed for 3 days

Bob's had to appeal to the state Liquor Commission to remain open until the hearing took place. The commission granted the request.

ABC Liquors, 109 N. Washington, was also granted license renewal. ABC's renewal was delayed pending investigation of the store's alleged sale of alcohol to a minor. The city dropped charges against the store because of a lack of evidence, paving the way for renewal.

Results of the Jackson County Health Department's June inspection of 22 city liquor establishments were also released.

Scores are based on a scale of 100 points. An inspection team deducts points on the basis of the severity of the problems at the establishment. Establishments may be warned that their licenses might be suspended if they:

—Score less than 85 total points.

—Have 10 or more total violations
—Have not corrected at least one-half of all problems listed in the latest previous inspection.
—Have a five-point violation.

—Have four or more one-point violations.
Scores for the establishments inspected are:

Booby's, 406 S. Illinois Ave.—98, a loss of two points since its previous inspection in March.

Buffalo Bob's, 101 W. College St.—97, a gain of four points since its previous inspection in April.

Solar-powered federal building starts to take shape

By Joe Sobczyk
Staff Writer

From steel spires and slabs of concrete, the new federal building on the corner of West Cherry and South University should begin to take shape in a few weeks, according to James Sutton, construction engineer for the General Services Administration (GSA).

"So far the progress has been excellent," he said.

The $3.7 million project is quickly moving toward completion. Sutton said the target date for completion—May 22, 1979—will be met. The GSA marked that day for construction to be substantially finished.

Sutton said the GSA is keeping a close eye on completion goals, wanting to move about 80 federal employees into the building as soon as possible.

The building is being constructed in two phases: Phase I, the foundation, and Phase II, the finished product. Sutton said the contractor for the first part of the project had a two-week delay but that time has since been made up by additions to the work force. He said the present contractor, Blaise Construction, has an average of 30 men on the job each day.

In general, Sutton said, the construction has proceeded smoothly with a minimum of problems.

"It was very well engineered from the start," he said.

The building is designed to withstand the world's worst earthquake, he said. Caissons, steel and concrete support structures have been sunk 18 feet into bedrock below the foundation to keep the structure rigid.

Just above the steel foundation beams, but still well below ground level, two large red steel tanks nuzzle against the building's basement floor. Sutton explained that those containers will store the liquid bromide which is vital to the building's solar heating and cooling system.

Eight thousand square feet of solar panels will soak up the sun's rays, heating the bromide to provide the steam which will heat the offices in the winter and cool them in the summer.

Another system of the same design has been providing half the heating and cooling needs of a federal building in Saginaw, Michigan, Sutton said.

Sutton said the building's unique triangular design is necessary for the proper working of the solar panels.

He said both floors will be completely accessible to the handicapped. Both ramps and stairs will be used throughout.

While the building won't tax the Carbondale water and drainage system any more than the 12 houses previously located on the site, Sutton said, the new building will feed directly into the new Carbondale sewage treatment plant when the plant is completed.

Clearer evidence of the building's final shape and size will be apparent in the next two weeks, Sutton said. By that time the basic structural work will be done, he said.

Wright returns to Carbondale, sets

new office hours

Student Trustee Kevin Wright said Tuesday that he has established office hours and will remain in Carbondale until the end of July.

Wright said his office hours will be from 10 a.m. to noon and from 2 to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. The student trustee's office is located in Barracks T-40, west of Fanner Hall.

Wright had previously announced that he would remain at his parents' farm in Bridgeport through the entire summer in order to earn enough money to return to school in the fall.

But because of a lack of rain, Wright said work on the farm has slowed enough to allow him to return to Carbondale for the month. He said he would return home in August to work with the family's livestock and to attend agriculture and livestock shows with his family.

Wright said that despite the work slowdown, he would still be able to earn enough to attend school in the fall and spring.

He said he would continue to hold regular office hours during the fall semester, but added that his fall hours would be more limited than his current office hours.

Wright arrived in Carbondale on July 4. His term as student trustee officially began on July 1.

He will attend his first board of trustees meeting Thursday in Edwardsville.

No fall vacancies in University dorms

By Mike Field
Staff Writer

All on-campus housing has been filled for fall semester and most university-approved off-campus freshman housing may be full by the end of this week.

Thompson Point, Brush Towers and University Park have all been filled to capacity, as has the married student housing at Evergreen Terrace and Southern Hills, Joe Gasser, an administrator in University Housing, said Tuesday.

"There may be a few cancellations," he said, "but anyone who submits an application now will be referred to off-campus housing."

However, the off-campus housing which is approved for freshmen is also nearing capacity, and one of the dorms, Stevenson Arms, is already full.

"We're running way ahead of last year," said JoAnn Lindsey, manager of Stevenson Arms.

"I don't know what they're going to do with the freshmen," she said. "They have to live in approved housing and there may not be any available."

Another of the approved housing units is expected to be full by the end of this week.

"If there are any spaces left by Friday I'll be surprised," said Robert Klinge, manager of 600 Freeman. "We have 60 or 70 spaces left but the way it's been filling up, I'm fairly sure there won't be any room after this week."

The Baptist Student Center, the only other housing approved for freshmen, may also be filled soon. According to the center's director, Larry Shacklee, about half the spaces have been rented already and applications for the other half have been received and are being reviewed.

"In a couple of weeks we will be full, I'm certain," Shacklee said. "If all of the applications that we have received are accepted, we are going to have more than enough to fill up all of our rooms."

Russian dissident charged with espionage

MOSCOW (AP)—Dissident Anatoly Shcharansky was charged by a Moscow court Tuesday with passing state secrets to an American reporter. A separate Soviet court 100 miles away accused the wife of another Jewish dissident, Alexander Ginzburg, of threatening the life of a witness.

Authorities pressed their charges in the two trials amid a growing storm of international protest, closing the doors of the Shcharansky proceedings for security reasons and ejecting Ginzburg's wife Irina when she shouted at a prosecution witness, "God will be your judge."

Shcharansky, 30, faces the death penalty on an espionage charge involving an accusation that he passed scientific and military secrets to known American spies. It indicated Robert C. Toth of the Los Angeles Times was one of these. Toth has denied the allegation.

Ginzburg, 41, is charged with "anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda" for distributing books by exiled author Alexander Solzhenitsyn and others. He could receive a total of up to five years in prison, five years at hard labor and five years in Siberian exile.

The trials proceeded despite earlier requests by Washington to call them off and as Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko flew to Geneva, where he is

Thompson holds back on property tax relief

CHICAGO (AP)—Gov. James R. Thompson said Tuesday a jump of nearly $1,300 in his property tax bill this year will not change his mind on his refusal to provide property tax relief for Illinois citizens.

Thompson also replied firmly to criticism leveled against him by the Illinois Public Action Council. The council said that property taxes on his Chicago townhouse were too low in past years and that he should have asked that the tax be reassessed at a higher level.

"I had no idea that I was un-

Gas explosion ravages Spanish campground

TARRAGONA, Spain (AP)—A runaway truck loaded with butane gas exploded in a Mediterranean coastal campsite Tuesday, engulfing hundreds of campers in flames and hurling some of them into the sea. Estimates of the casualties ranged as high as 180 killed and 250 injured.

Witnesses said the truck was traveling about 40 mph down a road next to the camp when it caught fire.

Police searches make media's job harder

The Supreme Court decision allowing police agencies to obtain warrants and make unannounced searches of newsrooms for evidence relating to criminal activities could have far-reaching effects on the media's ability to function as a watchdog.

The case involved a 1971 search of the Stanford Daily, an independent student newspaper at Stanford University. Policemen who conducted the search were looking for photographs and negatives that might enable them to identify demonstrators who had attacked and injured nine policemen.

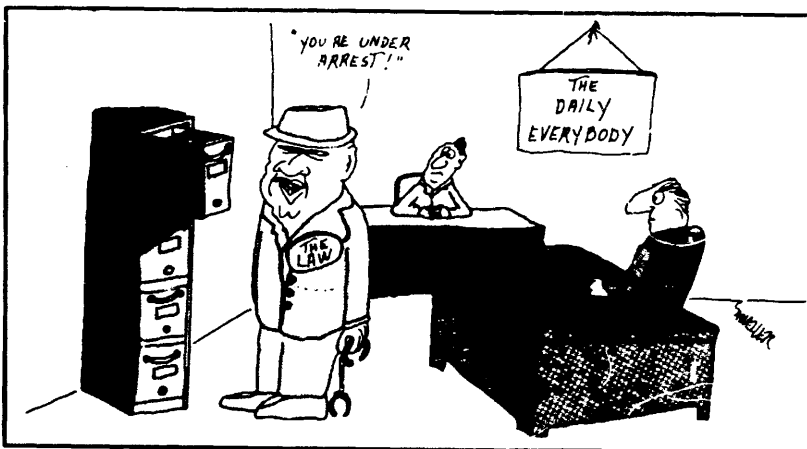

The property they sought didn't involve a crime committed by anyone at the newspaper, and that was the reasoning used by a U.S. District Court and Court of Appeals when they upheld the claim that the paper's civil and constitutional rights had been violated.

In overturning the lower courts' decision, the Supreme Court ruled that the most important point was not that the owner of the property was not involved in the crime, but that there was a reasonable likelihood that the material to be searched for was on the premises.

Such logic gives a lot of power to police organizations—power which may or may not be abused. Newspapers have not traditionally been police agencies, at least not in democratic countries. Police agencies have their own resources to gather information, without relying on newspapers to do it for them.

The decision could also have a negative impact on a newspaper's ability to do investigative stories on government abuses. Search warrants give police the authority to search the entire newsroom while looking for the specific item(s) named in the warrant. Files on investigative stories which the police have no business seeing would be subject to the search.

Two national awards for public service in journalism given this year by Sigma Delta Chi, the society of professional journalists, went to the Philadelphia Inquirer and the Jackson (Miss.) Clarion-Ledger. Both papers won the award with stories on abuses in their cities' police departments.

One can't help wondering if those stories would have come out if the Supreme Court decision had been made earlier.

Congress has responded to the decision with a number of bills which would give back some of the protection necessary for newspapers to serve the public. One, sponsored by Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., would make it necessary to get a subpoena for evidence in the possession of someone not involved in a crime.

A subpoena can be fought at a court hearing, and doesn't allow police to search the entire premises. Under Dole's bill, a warrant could be obtained if it appears likely that requesting a subpoena would lead to the evidence being destroyed.

Newspapers will continue to perform their watchdog role; the Supreme Court's decision won't be a muzzle, but it could certainly tighten the media's collar.

Lock is new American symbol

By Bob Greene

In the house where I grew up, it was our custom to leave the front door on the latch at night. I don't know if that was a local term or if it is universal. "on the latch" meant that the door was closed but not locked. None of us carried keys, the last one in the evening would close up, and that was it.

Those days are over, of course. In rural areas as well as in the cities, doors do not stay unlocked, even for part of an evening. Suburban and country areas are, in many ways, even more vulnerable than well-patrolled urban streets. Some recent police statistics show the crime rate rising more dramatically in those allegedly tranquil areas than in the cities. At any rate, the era of leaving the front door on the latch is over, no matter where we live.

It has been replaced by dead-bolt locks and security chains and electronic alarm systems and trip-wires hooked up to the local police station or a private guard firm. Many suburban families I know have sliding glass doors on their patios, with steel bars elegantly built in so no one can pry those sliding doors open. It is not uncommon, in the most pleasant of homes, to see potted on the window decal announcing that the premises are under surveillance by this security force or that guard company.

The lock is the new symbol of America. Indeed, a recent public service advertisement by a large insurance company featured not actuarial charts, but a picture of a child's bicycle with the now-usual padlock attached to it. The ad pointed out that, yes, it is the insurance companies that pay for stolen goods, but who is going to pay for what the new atmosphere of distrust and fear is doing to our way of life? Who is going to make the psychic payment for the transformation of America from the Land of the Free to the Land of the Lock?

For that is what has happened. We have become so used to defending ourselves against the new atmosphere of American life, so used to putting up barriers, that we have not had time to think about what it may mean. For some reason we are satisfied when we think we are well-protected; it does not occur to us to ask ourselves: Why has this happened? Why are we having to barricade ourselves against our neighbors and fellow citizens, and when, exactly, did this start to take over our lives?

And it has taken over. If you work for a medium-to-large-sized company, chances are that you don't just wander in and out of work. You probably carry some kind of access card, electronic or otherwise, that allows you in and out of your place of work. Maybe the security guard at the front desk knows your face and will wave you in most days, but the fact remains that the business you work for feels threatened enough to keep outsiders away via these modern "keys."

It wasn't always like this. Even a decade ago, most private businesses had a policy of free access. It simply didn't occur to managers that the proper thing to do was to distrust people. Certainly there were people out there who might have harm in mind, but they were the exception. The norm, the people it was assumed would be coming in the building, were presumed to be all right. Now it is the opposite that is true. The assumption is that anyone who might wander in without a reason is a cause for concern, danger.

Look at the airports. Parents used to take their children out to the departure gates to watch the planes land and take off. That's all gone. Airports are no longer a place of education and fun; they are the most sophisticated of our security encampments. With the electronic X-ray equipment we seem finally to have figured out a way to hold the terrorists, real and imagined, at bay; it was such a relief to solve this problem that we did not think much about what such a state of affairs says about the quality of our lives. We now pass through these electronic friskers without so much as a sideways glance; the machines, and what they stand for have won.

Our neighborhoods are bathed in high-intensity light; we do not want to afford ourselves even so small a luxury as a shadow. Businessmen, in increasing numbers, are purchasing new machines that hook up to a telephone and analyze a caller's voice. The machines are supposed to tell the businessman, with a small margin of error, whether his friend or client is telling lies.

All of this is being done in the name of "security"; that is what we tell ourselves. We are fearful, and so we devise ways to lock the fear out, and that, we decide, is what security means.

But no; with all this "security," we are perhaps the most insecure nation in the history of civilized man. What better word to describe the way in which we have been forced to live? What better indictment of all that we have become in this new and puzzling time? Behind our smugness and satisfaction at how we have triumphed over the fears lies a people more insecure than we would ever have dreamed possible.

We trust no one. Suburban housewives hang rape whistles on their station wagon keychains. We have become so smart about self-protection that, in the end, we have all outsmarted ourselves. We may have locked the evils out, but in so doing, we have locked ourselves in. We have been so afraid that the most menacing forces of our society would take away our freedom to live at peace that, in attempting to combat those forces, we have removed that very freedom on our own.

That may be the legacy we remember best when we look back on this age: that in dealing with the unseen horrors that lurked among us, we became prisoners of ourselves. All of us prisoners, in this time of our troubles.

Law school periodical now quarterly

Ken Yalowitz, a third-year law student, examines a copy of the SIU Law Journal. Yalowitz is editor of the journal, which has just expanded to quarterly publication. (Staff photo by Brent Cramer)

The SIU Law Journal has expanded to quarterly publication, marking what its editors call "an important stage in the growth" of the two-year-old journal.

Editor-in-Chief Ken Yalowitz, a third-year law student, said Thursday that the new format was designed to help keep readers more abreast of current legal issues.

The journal has been published only two times a year since its inception in 1976. Yalowitz said the journal will now be published once in each of the four seasons.

"From the beginning, we planned to expand," said Yalowitz, who worked with the journal for one year before being elected editor in April, B.C. he said, publication during the first two years was limited to give staff members time "to get the feel of things."

"At this time, we feel we're ready," Yalowitz said.

According to Yalowitz, quarterly publication will "add some prestige" to the School of Law. However, he said it is not expected to affect the school's chances of receiving full accreditation from the American Bar Association (ABA).

The ABA has denied full accreditation because of the school's inadequate physical facilities.

Future issues will be concerned primarily with facets of Illinois law, said Yalowitz.

"Our board of editors has decided to attempt to address Illinois law, to reach the Illinois practitioner," he said. "Of course, when there are important national issues, we will address them too," he added.

Yalowitz said that about one-fourth of the articles and reviews will be written by students at the School of Law. Other articles, he said, will be solicited from lawyers and legal experts outside the University.

Student articles may increase to as much as one-third of each issue, depending on the quality of work submitted, according to Yalowitz. As a result of the expansion, the cost of publication will go up "a little bit," said Yalowitz.

To offset that increase, the subscription rate has been increased to $8, one dollar more than the old rate.

"We're also saving money because we're now able to send it by second-class mail," he said. "That was holding us up before, because it must be a quarterly publication to be sent second class."

About $2,800 comes from 350 subscriptions to the journal, according to Yalowitz. The remaining funds are provided by the School of Law, he said.

In 1977, publication of one issue of the journal cost $460,857. Yalowitz described the journal as "service to graduates and the legal community in general."

"It is also very beneficial to law students to write or review articles, and to work with the publication of the journal," he said.

There are about 40 student members on the Law Journal staff.

The next issue is scheduled to be released at the end of August, Yalowitz said.

A fourth off-campus dormitory, Wilson Hall, lost its approved status last semester.

Shacklee and Lindsey said they feel that this revocation has been a factor in the large number of freshmen applying at the Baptist Student Center and Stevenson Arms.

"It had a bearing on it, I'm sure," Lindsey said. "Because of Wilson Hall not housing freshmen, there may be some who don't get rooms anywhere."

Shacklee said he feels that the Baptist Student Center will feel the effects later this summer.

"The closing of Wilson Hall to freshmen probably will hit us during the last two weeks before school starts," he said.

"I'm sure there will be a great demand for housing this year," he added, "and anyone who waits until the end of the summer to look is going to be out of luck."

Other housing around Carbondale is also filling up steadily. Lewis Park and Georgetown Apartments have both been full since early this summer, and Royal Rentals, one of the largest rental firms in town, has five efficiency apartments left out of 300 units.

There are still quite a few mobile homes left, however, and Carbondale Mobile Homes manager Larry Hoffman said that 50 to 60 of his trailers have not yet been rented.

SIU-E appoints executive

The appointment of James R. Buck, 35, of Moline, as executive assistant to the president of Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville has been announced by Kenneth A. Shaw, president of the University.

The appointment, subject to approval by the SIU Board of Trustees, will be effective Aug. 1.

Buck, who is college development officer and assistant to the president of Black Hawk College, will assume two of the major responsibilities at Edwardsville: management of the office of the President and line-staff responsibility for University relations—currently assigned to Ralph W. Ruffner.

Ruffner is retiring Sept. 1, and his position, senior vice-president for planning and review, will be terminated at that time.

Fair signs Head East, Dallas girls, Camel Pro

By Marcia Heroux
Entertainment Editor

Besides the appearance of singer Hardy Boy Andy Gibb, the Du Quoin State Fair has signed up three more acts for the grandstand: Head East, a band that originally began in the midwest; a variety show led by the Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders; and the Camel Pro Series, a motorcycle racing event.

Head East will appear with the group Wet Willie at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Aug. 25. The band is made up of several group members from St. Louis and it got its start in the rock 'n' roll business in Champaign.

Their first LP, "Flat As a Pancake," sold over 500,000 copies this year and their most recent album entitled simply, "Head East," has sold 300,000 copies since its release in February.

Wet Willie's most recent single is "Make Me Feel Love Again," a part of their "Manorism" album.

Tickets to Head East are $6 in advance or $7 at the door.

In an "All-Star Disco Variety Show" on Wednesday Aug. 30, the Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders, who now sing and dance besides cheer, will lead a group including the Los Argentines Gauchos, the comedy team of Jan Howard and Helena, the acrobatics of the Elkins Sisters and the music of Russ David and his orchestra.

The Los Argentines Gauchos were the winners of the "Best Act of the Year" award by Las Vegas critics. Their act consists of native Argentine dances with drum rhythms and flashing knives.

The Elkins Sisters are the only acrobats in the world who use three white poodles and three Afghan hounds in their routine.

Tickets for the variety show are $6, $5 and $4.

The Camel Pro Series will be coming from the West Coast to DuQuoin to compete in the $20,000 Du Quoin Mile-National on Sunday, July 30.

Time trials begin at noon. The program of racing includes four ten-lap heat races, two ten-lap semi-final races, one 12-lap expert trophy race and the 25-lap Mile-National feature race.

Tickets are $10 and $8.

All tickets for the shows may be purchased by writing the fair box office at P.O. Box 182, Du Quoin State Fair, Du Quoin, Ill. 62522 or by calling.

Al Pacino picks up a gun and joins the family in night and Part II Saturday night in the Student Center. Part I, Part I will be showing Friday.

Corny musical is the word

by Mary Field
Staff Writer

The song says, "grease is the word." The song is wrong. Corny is the word.

"Grease" from beginning to end is pure cornball fun. Every unbelievable cliché from early musicals and beach party movies is in "Grease," including Frankie Avalon.

The film opens to the strains of "Love is a Many Splendored Thing" and highlights of young love in the summer sun, with endless waves of water cascading on the beach.

Danny (John Travolta) and Sandy (Olivia Newton-John) are seen saying goodbye and pledging their eternal love for each other, not knowing if they will ever meet again.

As luck and the movie world would have it, Sandy, an Australian transfer student, begins her senior year at the same high school where Danny is also a senior. The two meet up in a tongue-in-cheek bonfire sequence and the movie continues with the couples exploits from there.

Travolta is a natural for the role of Danny, who is really the Vinnie Barbarino of the big screen. Danny is an endearing and very earnest character. Some of the funniest parts of the movie are enhanced by the fitting emotions that encompass Travolta's face.

The only jarring flaw in Travolta's performance is his manner of walking. The strut that worked so well for him in "Saturday Night Fever" just does not fit in with Danny's personality. In "Grease" the strut seems to be forced and very fake.

Newton-John can sing, which she does very well in "Grease," but the most convincing thing about her acting was her accent.

"Look At Me, I'm Sandra Dee," sung by Stockard Channing, is a hilarious insight into the role played by Newton-John. Sandra Dee, an actress who always played the virginal, all-American, native type creature of "Tammy and the Doctor" fame, is the person upon which Newton-John's character is based.

There is so much that could have been done with this character but Newton-John isn't the one who could have done it. She has the innocent, wide-eyed little girl act down pat, but she doesn't put enough strength into her role. In short, she doesn't match up to the caliber of the other people in the film.

An example of an excellent comedic actress is Stockard Channing. She portrays Rizzo, the bad girl of "Grease." Channing, like Travolta is worthy of her role. She's funny and poignant at the same time. Her voice is strong and adds depth to the songs that she sings. Channing's sad-eyed presentation of "There Are Worse Things I Could Do" is the lament of many high school "bad girls."

A Review

The members of the T Birds and the Pink Ladies add a supportive cast to the main characters. Most notable of this group are Dick Conn and Jeff Conaway.

Conn is amusing as Frenchy and Conaway as Kenickie does the tough-guy-with-a-heart act so well, that he fits in great as a partner for Channing.

"Grease" is fun, because it's unbelievable. The music helps with the farcical nature of the film. Frankie Avalon descending from Heaven to sing "Beauty School Dropout" to Conn in a dream sequence is hilarious.

Appearances by movie veterans Sid Caesar, Eve Arden, Joan Blondell and Alice Ghostley considerably round out the film. Shanna-Na add to the authentic flavor of the film, presenting the music they do best, such as "Blue Moon," "Those Magic Changes," "Tears On My Pillow" and "Born To Hand-Jive."

Coppola films to be shown

"The Godfather," Francis Coppola's successful film, will be shown at 8 p.m. Friday at the Student Center Auditorium by "Cinematheque." "The Godfather, Part II" continues the saga of the Corleone family, and will be shown at 8 p.m. Saturday. Tickets, which cost $1, will go on sale at 7 p.m. both nights.

Alan Thatcher, chairperson of the SGAC film committee, said that the films would be shown on two nights, with only one showing each because of the length of the movies.

"The Godfather," which stars Marlon Brando as the aging head of a powerful Mafia clan, is one of the best gangster films ever made. The film deals with the life of Don Corleone, the part Brando brought to life so convincingly that he won an Oscar for best actor of 1972.

"The Godfather," Part II, begins where "The Godfather" ended. Michael Corleone, the film flashes back and forth between the early life of the late Don Vito (Brando) and the ongoing story of his family after his death.

College dropout races to fortune

HIGHLAND PARK (AP)—Carl Haas is a college dropout who has built his passion for cars into a $3 million-a-year business.

His firm, Carl A. Haas Automobile Imports Inc., is the world's largest distributor of race cars, gearboxes and components, selling about 250 new and used autos a year.

"I guess we're about as big as anyone in the country in the racing business," said the 48-year-old Haas. "Other guys run pretty big outfits, but that includes regular car dealerships. We just sell race cars and parts."

As the exclusive American outlet for Britain's Lola Cars Ltd., the firm sells nearly 60 percent of the company's products.

Haas also has exclusive North American rights to distribute the Hewland gearbox, the standard for nearly every type of racing car.

He also has fielded one of the most successful racing teams in the nation for the past 10 years. It campaigns Lolas in Can Am and Formula 5000 series as well as Formula Atlantic, Super Vee and Formula Ford.

"I like the racing business a whole lot because you've got to keep up and that's exciting," Haas says.

His love affair with cars started 27 years ago when he watched a parade of foreign sports cars at Elkhart Lake, Wis.

That prompted him to buy an MG TD. The next year he was racing the MG in Sports Car Club of America races. Then he acquired a Porsche Speedster, in which he won 14 races in 16 starts, followed by class victories in other cars in such races as those at Sebring, Nassau and Road America.

Still looking for more victories in racing and in business, Haas has other plans.

They include distributing miniature Lola Grand Prix cars, popular at rent-a-racer tracks around the country. He already has orders for 150, which should add $2 million a year to his business.

Orders also are coming in for duplicates of the Indianapolis 500 winner this year, the Chaparral Lola, which sells for $70,000 without engine.

Unique turtle may classify as endangered

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Interior Department wants to classify as endangered the Illinois mud turtle, a little-known turtle that lives in Illinois and Iowa.

"There's nothing too spectacular about it except for its rarity," said U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service biologist Ken Dodd. "About 200 survive."

The turtle's top shell is brown and the bottom shell is yellow, said Dodd. It lives in arid, sandy areas.

Most of the surviving turtles live in Iowa in an area known as Muscatine Island, a sandy area on the west bank of the Mississippi River.

Most of the island is owned by Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric Co. Dodd said, adding that the utility has set aside land to preserve the habitat.

State: Caveat Emptor

Complaints to insurance companies listed

By Bob Springer
Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD (AP)—Buying homeowner's or auto insurance from a company you know nothing about could cost you money, state officials advise.

The Illinois Department of Insurance has issued a list showing how many consumer complaints were lodged last year against firms selling such coverage in the state.

The list, released last week, might also help you decide whether you want to stay with your current insurance company, or switch. It shows the number of consumer complaints filed with the state Department of Insurance against various companies in 1977.

It also tells you how many complaints were received for each $1 million in insurance the firm wrote—a "complaint ratio."

Richard D. Rogers, head of the department's consumer division, said the department has found that companies with high complaint ratios "very often prove to be problem companies."

However, he cautioned that the list does not reflect how many of the complaints were considered valid, since that would require a subjective evaluation.

The list covers companies providing auto insurance, homeowner, mobile homeowner, fire and casualty insurance. More than 15,000 complaints against insurance companies were received last year, the department said.

Kenilworth Insurance Co., of Chicago, was listed as having one of the highest ratios of consumer complaints on its auto insurance coverage. It wrote $3.2 million worth of business, and was the target of 118 consumer complaints last year, the department said. That runs about 36 consumer complaints for each $1 million in business.

"That company is under examination," said Rogers, adding that if Kenilworth's marketing conduct is found unacceptable it could lead to a 30-day suspension of the firm's right to do business in the state.

Bob Heiser, a department examiner, said a team of three agency experts went to Kenilworth's offices last week to begin the examination, which he said could take four to six weeks.

"People complain often about many things and some of them are not meritorious," said Rudy Chalko, the firm's claims department head.

He said Kenilworth generally sells auto insurance to high-risk drivers—those who have been dumped by other companies for having too many accidents or traffic violations.

"They complain more and they demand more," Chalko said. "And they've been to the well so many times they know complaining to some official agency might get some results."

A spokesman for State Farm Mutual of Bloomington, the state's largest auto insurance seller, said the firm pays close attention to the department complaint guide.

"Most complaints involve a question of damages, in other words 'why do I have coming ... are you paying me the right amount?'" said Bruce Patton, deputy regional vice president for State Farm, which did $280 million worth of automobile insurance in 1977. The state insurance department listed 560 consumer complaints against State Farm.

Heart disease ties dog's life to pacemaker

CHICAGO (AP)—Moo, a 4-year-old Pekinese, is under strict doctor's orders to avoid microwave ovens, Citizen's Band radios, electronic ignition systems and electromagnetic machines.

Moo is one of few canines who wears a pacemaker to correct a malfunction of the heart called "sick sinus syndrome." The affliction causes irregular heartbeats and used to cause Moo to pass out because of inadequate oxygen to the brain.

"We always shoo the dog out of the kitchen before we turn on the microwave, and we don't let him ride in our boat anymore because he likes to sit on the motor housing," said Mrs. Roger Altie of Madison, Wis., Moo's owner.

"But aside from that, life is pretty normal for Moo. Fortunately, there aren't any CB radios in our neighborhood for us to worry about," she said.

Moo received his "recycled" pacemaker earlier this year in the Small Animal Clinic of Purdue University in West Lafayette, Ind.

"Putting a pacemaker into a dog has been done before, but it's not common," said Dr. Walter Weirich, the Purdue veterinarian who performed surgery on Moo.

"The pacemaker alone costs more than $2,200, and most pet owners wouldn't spend that kind of money on a dog."

Fortunately for Moo's owners, the pacemaker was free because it was a device considered too old for insertion into a human.

Despite the dangerous surgery, Moo now plays with the Altie children unaware of his damaged heart and its artificial regulator.

But like humans with pacemakers, Moo has to avoid contact with electronic gadgets that could confuse his implant. Electromagnetic radiation from CB's, microwave ovens and other equipment can upset the pacemaker's monitoring of Moo's heartbeat.

Social servant honored with university degree

CHICAGO (AP)—"I was the child of activists, militant persons in public life," said Alfreda Barnett Duster. "It made me decide as a youngster to get married, have six kids and not get involved in public life."

But getting involved was in her blood, and now at age 74, Mrs. Duster's credo is service to others "is the rent you pay for the space you occupy."

Because of her dedication, Mrs. Duster, grandmother of 15, recently received an honorary doctor's degree from Chicago State University.

"Many years ago, a young woman with five children sought to create a home filled with love and understanding in the inner city," the Chicago State accolade read. "Thus, marked the beginning of Alfreda M. Barnett Duster's commitment to serve all mankind."

"Mrs. Duster, while providing a supportive environment for her children, always found time to extend love and concern to others in need of love and support."

Her commitment to social service is a legacy from her parents.

Her mother, Ida B. Wells, was a crusading journalist who campaigned against lynching and was a champion of black rights.

Her father, Ferdinand L. Barnett, founded Chicago's first black newspaper and in 1896 was appointed Illinois' first black state attorney.

After she received her bachelor of philosophy degree from the University of Chicago in 1924, she married Benjamin C. Duster, a clerk in her father's law office, and for 20 years she was busy as a wife and mother to four sons and a daughter.

She became upset with inadequate public education offered by Chicago schools to black children and took action.

"I knew for it to be a better school for my children, it had to be a better school for all children," Mrs. Duster said. She joined the Parent-Teacher Association of Stephen A. Douglas Elementary School. It was the beginning of a 25-year relationship.

She aided her children's education by holding her own classes in the afternoons and on Saturday.

"I like to go myself," said Warden Richard English. "They reach a guy and hold his attention. They're not hung up on the old-type religion. They're entertaining. They make it fun to do good. It's fun just to be with them."

prisoners with their gospel songs, dramatic sketches and Bible classes. English says their presence helps soothe relations between inmates, especially among members of rival gangs.

"They [gang members] can't get along with each other and always war: to fight. There's been a tremendous change in their attitudes. We can mix gangs together in the same living quarters with no problems," because of the Lucas' influence. English says.

"Our main ministry is with music, drama, poetry and dance to communicate the Gospel," said Mary Lucas.

Street work to continue into fall

Carbondale motorists can expect the construction on Grand Avenue and Wall Street to continue through the fall months according to sources at City Hall. The two streets are currently being patched, widened, and resurfaced, by the city.

The target date for the completion of work on Grand Avenue is Oct. 23, while the Wall Street project should be finished before the bad weather comes, said Public Works Director Bill Boyd.

"Right now we are running ahead of schedule," said Boyd.

Grand Avenue is being widened to four 12-foot lanes with a median at the intersection of Wall and Grand. The rebuilding will extend from Wall Street to Illinois Avenue.

However, the SIU parking lot 45 near Brush Tower will be kept open throughout the construction, according to E.M. Webb, project engineer.

Wide wheelchair ramps will be provided on the sidewalks by the SIU Recreation Center, Webb added.

Evansville Cement Finishers has the contract for Grand Avenue. The cost of the project is $320,153. The city of Carbondale will pay $28,569 and Economic Development Association Grant will cover the rest.

The grant went into effect on Dec. 23, 1977 and work had to be started within 60 days from that date.

"We ran into very unseasonable weather, as you know, but we were able to start within that time period," Webb said.

The Wall Street project is being conducted by E.T. Simonds Construction Co. of Carbondale. It runs from Freeman Street to Park Street. The cost is $310,955 and is being paid with motor fuel tax funds.

Wall Street will be widened to 44 feet from Freeman to Grand, and to 52 feet from Grand to Park, ac-according to Boyd.

"The city has added waterline work on Wall Street. Both Wall and Grand are rather unique. The existing utilities, everything above and below ground, had to be fitted. This was very difficult. Our data doesn't always correlate with what you find in the field," Webb said.

One of the difficulties, he said, was the unintentional hitting of a thrust block which in turn hit and broke a waterline two weeks ago. The break resulted in a loss of water pressure and Carbondale residents were obliged to boil drinking water for two days while bacteria levels in the water were checked.

Love conquers 'miracle boy'; Couple to be married Sunday

"ELROSE PARK (AP)—Linda will be at Peter's side in marriage Sunday, as she has been for two years in helping him return to life.

Peter Saraceno, just out of the Marines in 1976, and Linda Fraschalla were planning to wed then. But Peter was in a terrible auto accident. His head was cracked open and doctors pronounced him dead on arrival at Westlake Hospital.

Feeling for a pulse one last time, a doctor found a very faint one.

How Peter fought back, with Linda making the difference, was told Tuesday in The Chicago Tribune.

Peter was in a coma for 3½ months.

"Three or four times they told us he had just a few hours left," said his mother, Louise Saraceno, said. "But I didn't believe it and neither did Linda. Every night Linda was at his side, talking to him just as if it was any other night, as if they were on a date, as if nothing had ever happened."

Mrs. Saraceno said Linda was in tears one night. "She had talked to a doctor who had told her that he was young and pretty—and she should go out and have fun and try to forget Peter. He said Peter would never walk again, or talk again—that he'd never be the same," the mother said. "I told Linda, 'Linda, they are only doctors. Doctors are only humans, and humans can be wrong. Don't give up.' And Linda didn't."

Finally Peter opened his eyes. A relative said that "his eyes followed Linda around the room," but he couldn't talk, could barely move a finger. He lay there and looked at Linda.

On Halloween, Linda decorated the windows. On Christmas his room was full of lighted trees. On New Year's Linda filled the room with crepe paper and balloons.

"I had a cake and favors, and at midnight I put a hat on him and I blew horns and told him the new year was here," Linda said. "The nurses thought I was crazy, but I figured Peter could hear me."

As Peter slowly recovered, hospital attendants called him "miracle boy." His movements returned, first in a finger, then an arm, then a leg. And he began to try to talk.

"I could only mumble," Peter said. "Nobody understood me but Linda. She knew everything I said. I could communicate through her."

Eventually, Peter went home. Linda quit her job, took special training to care for Peter and moved in with him and his widowed mother to help around the clock. With her savings she bought an outdoor swimming pool so Peter could exercise his legs and work at his physical therapy.

Peter worked hard at learning to talk, and a year ago he spoke to Linda's father. "Mr. Fraschalla," he said. "I'd like permission to marry your daughter."

Jim Fraschalla said, "Peter, when you can walk down that aisle she's all yours."

It has taken Peter, with Linda's help, a year to walk well enough to go down the aisle Sunday at Our Lady of Pompeii Church. He will have to take it slowly, cautiously, with the help of a walker and Linda at his side.

Cop jailed for protecting informants

CHICAGO (AP)—It reads like television fiction: Cop arrests drug dealer, helps him go straight, uses the ex-junkie and his wife to uncover narcotics trafficking, then goes to jail rather than reveal their names for fear of underworld reprisal.

But it happened in real life to detective Bruce Warner of suburban Harvey.

There is a happy ending, too. The ex-junkie and his wife step out of the shadows, meet with prosecutors and secure the release of their cop friend. Prosecutors promise to arrange secret new lives for the couple.

The drug bust that caused the controversy occurred on a cold December day last winter. The ex-junkie told Warner of two dealers. The wife—determined to stop the drug traffic—helped Warner set up a drug purchase.

Warner arrested two men who were charged with possession of one-third pound of heroin, one-half pound of cocaine and one-quarter pound of PCP or angel dust.

Then the pressure began. The Cook County state's attorney said it couldn't prosecute the case if Warner didn't reveal the names of the informant or the witness. Judge Louis B. Garippo of Circuit Court threatened Warner with jail for contempt of court.

Warner didn't bend, telling a reporter: "My source told me we've known you for a long time. You've helped us get out, helped us get straight. Don't go to jail for us. We'll just run."

But he refused to give their names to a grand jury, saying: "I have no other alternative but to protect them."

Teacher advocates edible ship

By Steve Weiner
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — The sleepy astronaut stretches and yawns, then reaches out to grab a quick snack as his spacecraft hurtles toward Mars.

He selects the control knob by his bunk. He snaps it off, sighs to himself with pleasure and begins chewing, enjoying the crunchiness and mild flavor.

In Douglas Wolf's world, our next space heroes may well eat the ship that carries them to the planets and beyond.

In Robert DelVecchio's world, they almost did.

"It would pay NASA to have someone think this thing out," says Wolf, a visiting professor of environmental studies at North Carolina State University.

"It might well save a flight someday. It might be worth an extra thousand pounds or so. You've got to use materials and designs for as many purposes as possible."

"I don't know, it could well be crazy. If NASA buys it, they may be crazy too. We'll find out."

Wolf was chief of biological life support programs for the space agency in the late 1960s when he first came up with the idea for "edible structural materials"—things to build space ships from that could be eaten in a pinch.

Independent of Wolf was a small group of scientists at Grumman Aircraft Corp., who in the early 1960s choked back comic images of plump astronauts and produced a pleasant-tasting, strong, board-like substance. It was tough enough to be used in building—so tough that it would break teeth—a flaw DelVecchio's men never overcame, though they tried.

Wolf and DelVecchio thought parts inside and outside of the spaceship could be made of edible substances, such as proteins and carbohydrates. In an emergency, they reasoned, a desperate astronaut could survive by eating redundant systems and nonessential parts of his rocket and ship.

"We talked about the fact that because weight was such a critical situation in spaceflight, perhaps we could build or construct structures out of material that could be eaten," said DelVecchio, Grumman's chief aerospace physiologist. At the time, he was concerned about life systems for the lunar module—the spacecraft that eventually landed on the moon.

He sent his men to a local supermarket where they bought nutritious but sticky foods—sugars, starches, binding agents, coloring agents, fudge and the like. Though they felt a little ridiculous about it, they planned to create a junky mess that tasted good enough to eat and was strong enough to make it to the moon.

For a couple of months, the scientists tried various combinations of food and pressure until they came up with their edible board.

"The time and pressure we put into getting this stuff hard enough wouldn't reverse," said DelVecchio. "You could suck on it and suck on it all day, and it wouldn't dissolve. You couldn't break it off with your teeth."

For DelVecchio, the failure wasn't a major one. He had spent less than $100 on materials.

Had it worked, he would have recommended use of the edible structural material to the lunar module contractor. He says it's possible the LEM would have had parts astronauts could eat.

Instead, the men from Grumman went on to other things.

Wolf, however, never lost his determination to see the thing through. He left NASA in 1962, and since then has worked for various companies and government agencies, including the Environmental Protection Agency from which he retired.

Now 60, he sees coming soon a day when the space agency will be making long flights—long enough to justify use of instruments and parts that can be eaten, if necessary.

Wolf has asked NASA to approve a study to determine, in part, whether reusable designs, such as edible ship parts, should be explored further. He thinks it would cost about $25,000 a year.

The current director of life sciences for NASA at Houston, Richard Johnson, isn't sure about the idea.

"The practicality of having structural members you are going to consume while you fly might sound attractive, but I don't know how the logistics would work out," said Johnson.

Johnson said flights of the duration currently envisioned probably won't need edible ships. Other research, he said, is much more important.

Soviet dissidents' trials put strain on U.S. ties

By Seth Mydans
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP)—Climaxing an 18-month Kremlin crackdown on dissent, two Jewish dissident leaders have been before Soviet courts in trials that are drawing the United States into a major human rights confrontation with Moscow.

In Paris, the wife of one of the defendants, Anatoly Shcharansky, appealed to the United States to intercede anew to help free her husband, who faces a possible death penalty if convicted of espionage.

In Washington, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said the trials "raise serious questions" about Soviet compliance with the Helsinki human rights accords, but he rejected the idea of postponing this week's nuclear arms negotiations in protest.

Shcharansky's appeal, Monday before a three-judge panel in a tree-shaded central Moscow courthouse, pleaded innocent to the treason charge against him. Leonid Shcharansky said his brother rejected as "absurd" allegations that he spied for the CIA.

In the city of Kaluga, 100 miles south of here, Alexander Ginzburg, accused of anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda, also denied the charges against him. Irina Ginzburg said her husband, who could get up to 10 years at hard labor, told the three judges he might modify his plea if his guilt is proved at the trial.

The prosecution of the 30-year-old Shcharansky, a computer expert who became a key member in the Jewish emigration movement, and the 41-year-old Ginzburg, a longtime human rights activist, follows a long Soviet campaign against dissent.

The Carter administration says the fate of the two men could have an important impact on East-West relations. President Carter has personally championed their cause, and Vance contends they are being tried for "asserting fundamental human rights."

Two other trials also got under way Monday, one involving Lithuanian human rights activist Viktorus Pyatkus and the other a mystery figure accused of espionage and identified by the Tass news agency only as "A. Filatov."

Shcharansky's wife, Naishia, told a news conference in Paris she believes that further statements by Carter and the Congress might enable her husband to "be free and go out from Russia."

Mrs. Shcharansky, a resident of Israel who said she went to Paris to help mobilize world opinion on her husband's behalf, suggested that Congress pass a resolution in the case.

In New York, thousands of American Jews and others gathered at a noon rally to protest the Shcharansky trial. Three hours earlier a bomb exploded near the Manhattan offices of the Soviet travel agency Intourist, causing little damage and no injuries. No one immediately claimed responsibility for the blast.

Western reporters, diplomats, including U.S. Embassy representatives, and the defendants' comrades from the dissident movement were barred from the trials in Moscow and Kaluga. They waited outside for word from the defendants' relatives or court officials on what was happening.

Mrs. Ginzburg said her husband, who has been under medical care for several weeks and underwent surgery during his 18 months in detention, "has gone completely grey" and looks like a man of 60 rather than 41.

Governor hikes troopers' pay

SPRINGFIELD (AP)—Legislation granting state troopers annual salary hikes of from $600 to $5,576—the largest raises in any group of state employees planned for this year—was signed Tuesday by Gov. James R. Thompson. The average salary of a newly hired state trooper is now $12,900 a year. The increases would bring that to $13,800, state officials said.

And the average annual salary of a lieutenant colonel would jump from $28,160 to $31,836.

The raises, which range from 11 percent to 24 percent depending on rank, will cost the state $6.1 million this year, according to Thompson. "We say they are not excessive and are meant "to catch the rest of state police up with the rest of state employees."

Troopers have not received a general pay raise in more than four years. They will not benefit from current negotiations between the governor's office and state employees' collective bargainers.

The governor said the minimum salary for an Illinois trooper or agent will now be seventh highest in the nation and the maximum salary eleventh from the top.

The raises also apply to all other so-called "sworn officers" within the department. They include special agents and investigators. The total number of persons involved is about 1,600.

Thompson said the raises are needed to keep the Illinois Department of Law Enforcement competitive with other states and from losing experienced troopers and agents.

The measure also contains an appropriation to cover operating expenses of the department for the fiscal year which began July 1.

The $71.4 million total compared with an appropriation of $60.6 million for the fiscal year which just ended indicates a 12 percent hike, budget documents show.

The measure also appropriates $12.4 million to cover the operating expenses of Attorney General William J. Scott's office for the next year. That compares with an appropriation of $11.1 million for the fiscal year just ended.

Pennsylvania highway covered by grasslands

LEOLA, Pa. (AP)—When $9 million in funds ran out, before the state could pave a 4.5-mile stretch of highway, it spent $100,000 to cover the roadbed with soil and plant grass. Now the area's Amish farmers—who didn't want the highway anyway—use it for grazing their goats.

In winter, the road between Leasport and Leola—which when constructed some four years ago was envisioned as the middle part of a Route 23 expressway to New Holland—becomes a snowmobile trail.

In spring and fall, when the farmers barn their herds, neighborhood motorcycle buffs churn the dust under the chewed-up grass.

The state Department of Transportation had begun construction in 1974, despite some farmers' complaints that the highway would bring noise and air pollution to the rolling countryside.

It was to be the first of four sections of a 12-mile, two-lane highway expected to cost $60 million. No other section was ever started.

The transportation department cleared the right-of-way, completed grading and drainage, and constructed sewer, bridge—but never did any paving because it didn't have the money.

Instead, it covered the roadbed with eight inches of topsoil, and "then grass seed."

"I presume that sometime there will be a finished road there," said Rebecca Oberholzer, whose house and poultry farm were moved 300 yards six years ago to make way for the highway.

"The road was needed," Mrs. Oberholzer said Tuesday in a telephone interview. "It still is, to relieve a lot of congestion. It would be much easier for us to travel."

John Oberholzer, a poultry farmer who is also a supervisor of Upper Leacock Township in this region about 25 miles south of Harrisburg, the state capital, said, "It's going to cost them a lot more when it comes time to put stones and concrete on."

"We've made an investment, we've made a beginning," said William Pickering, an assistant transportation department engineer who still believes the project will be finished.

Others in the highway department disagree.

"It's going to lay like this for years," said one official who asked not to be identified. "I'm retiring in a month and I don't give a hoot."

Education of minorities urged

By Robert Lee Zimmer
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP)—The Illinois Board of Higher Education made its first move Tuesday to increase minority enrollments in private medical schools in the state.

The board told its staff to prepare minority enrollment goals and to suggest financial incentives that could be offered to private schools which achieve those goals.

James Furman, executive director of the board, said the current state law, which provides payments to private medical schools for enrolling Illinois residents, would have to be amended to accommodate the minority plan.

The six private medical schools now receive $7.7 million a year in state payments in return for enrolling Illinois residents.

The minority enrollment in those schools now is about 3.5 percent of the total number of students, compared with a minority enrollment of about 9 percent at the University of Illinois medical school.

It was the board's report containing those figures that led the decision to try to boost minority enrollments in the private medical schools.

"We don't have any specific figures in mind, but we feel there is room for improvement," Furman said.

Board member Dorsey Day of Chicago said it was a U of I student who brought up the problem.

"A student came to us and said that the private schools were not doing their share," Day said.

The board asked its attorney last month what steps it could take to increase minority enrollments in the private medical schools.

Attorney William Feurer, in a letter to Furman, said establishment of goals for minority enrollment would be permissible.

"Such goals, of course, are neither binding nor mandatory, but are advisory in nature," Feurer said. "Any medical school attempting to implement such goals would have to do so within the rather uncertain parameters of the recent Bakke decision of the U.S. Supreme Court."

Fuerer said existing law would have to be amended to allow the additional payments to those private schools that cooperate.

Herrera feels he can play in Oakland

It looks as though Andre Herrera may have finally found his niche in professional football.

After a year of frustration, the former Sahuqui superstar running back is back in the National Football League (NFL). He was signed a few weeks back by the Oakland Raiders as a free agent and is presently in camp working out with the other free agents and rookies.

Herrera, who owns virtually all of the Sahuqui football rushing records, was drafted in the sixth round of last year's college draft by the Kansas City Chiefs. He played on special teams throughout the first half of the exhibition season. And in a preseason game against the abysmal Los Angeles Rams, Herrera recovered a fumble which set up a Kansas City touchdown and eventual victory.

But that was the extent of his ecstasy in the big time. He suffered a slight leg injury in the game which led to his eventual release by the Chiefs. The injury to his leg was much less severe than the injury Herrera suffered on his pride.

For the Chiefs, according to Herrera, gave him a bad deal. He had three days to wait for another NFL team to contact him after he had been put on waivers. If any other team was interested, Herrera could have signed and given another shot.

But the Chiefs told Herrera not to sign with anyone else for they wanted to pick him up again.

"The people in the front office wanted me back," Herrera said in a telephone interview last week. "They wanted me to come back after Paul Wiggins was fired. They knew that I had the ability."

Herrera and Wiggins didn't get along, he said, because the former Chief coach waived him because of his leg injury.

"I got hit on the back of the leg against the Rams," Herrera recalled, "and the leg swelled. Wiggins and the team trainer waited until I had seen a doctor before they cut me. But the injury wasn't serious."

"It was funny," he added, "because at the time I was waived, Wiggins told me I would play again. The others wanted to see me play, but they said it was all a matter of circumstance—that I just got caught up in a numbers game."

After his bad experience with the Chiefs, Herrera tried out—and made—the roster of the Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League. But he didn't play much because the Argonauts had a running back by the name of Leon McQuay, who used to play for the New York Giants of the NFL.

"I was the No. 2 back," Herrera said, "and the No. 2 back doesn't even suit up. Only one running back could play all of the time because of a Canadian Football League rule."

The rule states that Canadian league teams are only allowed to have 15 American players on their active rosters. So Herrera backed up McQuay all season—in street clothes. It was a painful end to a frustrating season for the m.c. who finished second only to Hersman Trophy winner Tony Dorsett in total rushing yards in 1976 with 1,588.

Anyone else might have called it quits after what Herrera went through in his baptism into the NFL. But Herrera, I went home to Bronx, N.Y., in December to prepare for the coming season. He came back to Carbondale in April to continue training and insisted that he's in the best shape ever.

However, his training was not for the Toronto club. He was once again the property of the Chiefs after his stint in Canada. And the Chiefs were still interested. Herrera's enemy, Paul Wiggins, was long gone. The problem for Kansas City was that Herrera had to clear waivers before he could come back and work out with them or sign a contract.

So Herrera's name went on the waiver lists and Oakland gave him a tryout at a mini-camp four weeks ago. The club liked what it saw and claimed the 6-0, 205-pounder and signed him as a free agent. He reported to the Raiders' camp at Santa Rosa, Calif., Monday.

Needless to say, Herrera is thrilled at getting a shot at playing with the 1975 Super Bowl champions. And he feels he can get a fair shot with the team, which is more than he can say for the Kansas City organization.

"I'll be able to adapt quickly to the Raiders' style of play," Herrera said with a touch of optimism.

"They run the same type of offense as SIU used to when I played. They use the Pro set and the T formation just like we used to and they use the same blocking techniques."

"I'll have to come in and compete with some great ballplayers, but I feel I can make it," he added. "But I know that anything can happen."

At least Herrera is with a class organization. The Chiefs have been rebuilding for some time now, and it's good that Herrera is getting a fresh start with a new team. The Raiders are experts on judging talent and are very deep at every position with outstanding performers—except at running back.

Oakland has Mark van Eeghen and Clarence Davis, but they don't run much with the magical passing arm of Ken "Snake" Stabler and receivers like Dave Casper, Cliff Branch and Fred Biletnikoff.

It will be a tough chore for Herrera, but maybe he'll be a member of the awesome Raiders in the not-too-distant future. He deserves a fair chance.

KRUG DIVES TO STARDOM

Last week it was mentioned in this column that ABC's "Wide World of Sports" would carry the U.S.-Russia track and field meet at Berkeley, Calif. And one of the people to watch was SIU's world class javelin thrower Bob Roggy.

Well, the meet was shown, but the javelin throw wasn't. Anyway, Roggy finished second to a Russian thrower. Roggy threw 272-9 and the Russian won the event with a throw of 265-4.

But the U.S. team beat the Russians, 188-180, but that wasn't the show's main attraction to SIU fans.

Sahuqui diving coach Julian Krug got most of the coverage as he successfully defended his World Acrobatic Diving Championship crown. Krug won the title in the first meet, held last year, and he repeated this year at Fort Lauderdale, Fla. The meet was held in March, but ABC was there to tape it for later showing. Krug outpointed Alan Gagnet, Steve McFarland and Dave Pennington in the competition. He compiled a total of 282.35 points with his acrobatic dives from 3- and 10-meter diving boards.

"Wide World of Sports" centered the entire section of the show around Krug, the defending champ, and conducted two interviews with him during the competition. The announcers mentioned his being from Carbondale and being diving coach at Southern Illinois University several times throughout the broadcast.

It's ironic that while many SIU track fans tuned in to the show to see Roggy try to become a world champion, they instead got to see a world diving champion from the same university repeat as No. 1.

Bears' Antoine attempts comeback

CHICAGO (AP)—Ten months ago, the future of Lionel Antoine as an offensive tackle in the National Football League appears dim.

Today, after almost two months of rehabilitation following knee surgery, the picture has brightened considerably for the 6-6, 263-pound product of Southern Illinois University.

Last Sept. 8 the Chicago Bears announced that Antoine, the team's first round draft choice in 1972, would miss the entire 1977 season because of a knee injury.

"I don't know if he can play football again or not," former Coach Jack Pardee said that day. "His career may be over," said Jim Finks, Bears general manager.

Those words haunted Antoine most of last winter. But when his doctor told him in mid-March that he could run again, Antoine's bitterness turned to determination to return.

"That was the turning point, when I realized, hey, I've got a chance."

Losing at the age of 39, Brock plays the bench

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Less than a year since he inscribed his name in the record book, Lou Brock's career has reached the crisis stage.

The once-irrepressible speedster, who reached his 39th birthday three weeks ago, is no longer the generating force to the offense of the St. Louis Cardinals. And without him the Cardinals are not winning.

"What hurts the most is that we're losing and I can't do anything about it," says Brock, who has been out of the starting lineup during 15 of St. Louis' last 17 games.

"It's a helpless feeling, sitting on the bench. I just want to be out there where I can do us some good and help us get started. I'm just going to have to sit it out, I guess, and stay ready."

Brock, whose 913 stolen bases rank him as baseball's best, began the season with 2,834 lifetime hits and bright hopes for reaching 3,000. But a staggering slump has seriously impeded his progress. He had a .328 batting average on May 3, since then he has managed just 18 hits in 125 at-bats and has plummeted to .206.

Manager Ken Boyer, Brock's said Antoine, "When I called my wife and told her I could run, I felt like crying. I was so happy."

The surgery, performed by Dr. David Bachman, involved scraping away the rough edges that were flaking off the joint lining and the back of the kneecap in Antoine's left knee.

Since the operation, Antoine has been using isokinetic equipment during rehabilitation sessions. An isokinetic machine, which is used instead of a weight program, allows a user to place pressure on the equipment and the machine, in turn, matches that pressure by resisting it with an identical force.

"We're still not out of the woods," said Dick Hoover, who supervises the isokinetic equipment. But Hoover added, "He improves every time he comes back here."

Antoine participated in a series of workouts with Bear veterans without any swelling in the knee providing the Chicago coaching staff with optimism that he can come back.

The troublesome knee is the same one Antoine injured during the first exhibition game his rookie season. He recovered from the injury and went on to play in 38 consecutive games for the Bears before a problem with fluid on the knee made playing very difficult during the 1976 season.

He played in only one exhibition game last season before the Bears announced he would undergo surgery. His morale reached a low point two months later, which Hoover said was understandable.

"That would be anyone's biggest valley," said Hoover. "When a guy's asking you how he'll turn out but you can't tell him, and he's wanting to work out but you can't let him. It's normal then for anyone to be low or beligerent."

But friends and family helped Antoine bounce back. And he said that although he has a wife and five children, if he has to call his quits at age 39 it would leave him with nothing less than when he married ten years ago.

"I've lived my dream. Not completely, but to get to this league, to be a first round choice, to be in my seventh year, I'm happy about all that."

teammate on St. Louis' World Series team in 1964, benched him in mid-June, shifting catcher Ted Simmons for a time to Brock's left field spot. Recently, Boyer has juggled the lineup even more, alternating George Hendrick and Jerry Mumphrey in left.

"They say it's not personal, but it has to be," Brock says of his awkward status. "I've been through this kind of a slump before, but I can't be second-guessing a manager. It's his responsibility, not mine."

He accepts his position with equanimity for the most part, however, and says he will return to play out his two-year contract in 1979 regardless of what happens the rest of this season.

Brock's hit total, now stationary at 2,872, leaves him a tantalizing 128 shy of 3,000 hits.

"It has to be taken in its proper perspective," Brock says. "There's still a short list of players who are in the 2,900 club. Sure I said I wanted 3,000 hits, but it may not be possible now."
