Group seeks halt to chancellor search

By Jaquell Koczczak
Staff Writer

The Faculty Organization for Collective Bargaining, an Edwardsville-based teachers' group, will file a petition Friday asking for the right to intervene in a lawsuit against the SIU Board of Trustees by the Madison County State's Attorney, a Chicago lawyer representing the FOCB said Monday.

The lawyer, Wayne Schwartzman, said if the petition is accepted by Madison County Circuit Court Judge Lola Maddox, the FOCB will seek a court ruling to halt the chancellor search, and it will request that the decision to centralize SIU's governance system be declared "null and void."

Schwartzman said he would work in conjunction with State's Attorney Nicholas Byron who originally filed the suit last June, to prove the board held closed meetings which were in violation of the Illinois Open Meetings Act.

He said the FOCB, part of the 60,000-member Illinois Education Association, would request that the court take more severe action against the board because Byron's proposed remedy to the violations amounted to only "a slap on the wrist" for the board.

Byron is asking for a court ruling ordering the board to keep a complete and accurate record of all future board meetings. He suggested the board make a tape recording or take complete minutes at all meetings, a record which would be available to the state's attorney upon request.

"This sort of remedy neglects the past activities of the board," Schwartzman said. "All it would amount to is the court telling the board, 'You were bad boys ... You made big mistakes at your meetings ... now, don't do it again."

Schwartzman said, "The FOCB does not think the board should be allowed to get away with it."

He said that if the court decides that the board meetings were in violation of Illinois law, all decisions made at those meetings, including those which established a centralized governance system headed by a

Energy independence pledged

By James Gerstenzang
Associated Press Writer
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — President Carter, declaring "there can be no retreat," pledged on Monday to make an unparalleled peacetime investment of $140 billion over the next 10 years to free the nation from its dependence on foreign oil.

In his second energy address in two days, Carter said the massive investment must be made "so that never again will our nation's independence be hostage to foreign oil."

The president also vowed that the nation would cut its oil imports even more than he promised during last month's energy summit in Tokyo. He said the United States will import 300,000 barrels of oil a day less this year than the ceiling of 8.5 million he promised in Tokyo.

Carter's newest energy proposals were unveiled in a speech to the National Association of Counties. It was his second nationally-broadcast address in 13 hours and offered details to the broad outline of energy policy he suggested in his speech Sunday night.

Carter promised Sunday night to take his energy proposals to the people. After leaving Kansas City, he was scheduled to address the Communications Workers of America in Detroit.

The president, who worked on the Kansas City speech even as he flew to the nation's heartland from Washington, declared: "I am drawing our line of defense here and now ... Overall, we are going to make the unparalleled peacetime commitment, an investment of $140 billion for American energy security so that never again will our nation's independence be hostage to foreign oil."

He said all of the $140 billion would come from the proposed windfall profits tax resulting from the lifting of federal controls on domestic oil prices. Although the tax has not yet been enacted, administration officials, asking that they not be named, said "there is virtual unanimity" that Congress will approve it.

Carter also announced that he would offer "new incentives for the production of heavy oil, oil shale and hard-to-get-at natural gas — all of which this country has in great abundance."

Stuart Eizenstat, the president's chief domestic policy adviser and the key architect of his energy proposals, said this would involve removing price controls from heavy oil, which is considered in abundance in California, and lifting controls from natural gas taken from pockets twice as deep as conventional gas fields.

Eizenstat told reporters that some heavy oil is sold at $6 a barrel and that removing price controls could almost triple that price, making it more profitable for energy companies to drill for it.

Other Carter energy proposals included:

—Creation of an Energy Security Corporation "outside the federal bureaucracy" to develop alternative energy sources. Administration officials said later the corporation would get $88 million over the next decade to produce 2.5 million barrels a day in alternative fuels.

—An energy mobilization board to cut red tape blocking increased energy production and projects.

—A program to require utilities to switch from oil to coal and a plan for the companies to make low-cost loans to their customers to finance conservation improvements.

—Improvement of mass transportation.

Group tries again to cut state taxes

SPRINGFIELD. (AP) — Efforts will continue for passage of legislation to eliminate the 5 percent sales tax on purchases of food and medicine, despite Gov. James R. Thompson's veto of such a measure, the head of a statewide citizens group said Monday.

Patrick Quinn, head of the Coalition for Political Honesty, said his group would shift lobbying efforts and press lawmakers this fall to override Thompson's veto of a bill to abolish by 1984 the 4 percent state and 1 percent local sales tax on food and medicine.

"This was Illinois' Proposition 13 tax relief," said Quinn, referring to the tax-slashing constitutional amendment approved a year ago by California voters.

"Thompson has taken away the only tax relief Illinois citizens could have gotten this year."

Lawmakers return to the Capitol in October to consider overriding the governor's vetoes of measures approved this past spring.

Quinn said in a telephone interview from Chicago that volunteers from his organization would continue to collect grocery store receipts from shoppers. But the receipts will not go to the governor, as the group had planned.

"We're going to save them up and dump them on legislators' desks in the fall," he said.

Thompson vetoed the legislation on Friday, calling it a "crude, cruel political hoax" that the state treasury couldn't afford.

He said the measure would cost $1.6 billion over four years. Without some new money coming in from other areas to replace the loss of sales tax revenues, the governor said, Illinois' treasury could not afford the cut.

But Quinn said Thompson's position was inconsistent with his re-election pledge of last year.

"The irony of ironies is that it was Thompson who based his re-election last year on his Thompson Proposition tax-lid referendum," said Quinn.

Thompson campaigned to put the advisory question on the ballot. It asked voters if they wanted lids clamped on taxes and government spending.

Quinn said the bill vetoed by Thompson was better than California's Proposition 13.

Drinking areas considered

If Gov. James Thompson signs a bill boosting the Illinois drinking age to 21, the University will offer, to students 21 and over, on-campus housing with "designated areas where the possession and consumption of alcohol will be permitted," a University official said Monday.

Tom Busch, assistant to Vice President for Student Affairs Bruce Swinburne, said that if the bill becomes law, alcohol would be prohibited in undergraduate residence halls except in individual living areas designated by the University as being for students 21 and over and where drinking would be allowed.

Busch said the designated areas would be as isolated as possible from living quarters of students under 21.

He said the designated areas have not yet been chosen. Busch said also the revised drinking policies, to be presented to the Board of Trustees next fall, will be implemented beginning Jan. 1, and that "there will be an adjustment period."

Sam Rinella, director of University Housing, says University drinking regulations at Evergreen Terrace, Southern Hills or other housing for faculty or married students will not be altered in any way other than what the drinking-age law mandates.

Africans set for summit

By Michael Goldsmith
Associated Press Writer

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — African foreign ministers, in 10 days of closed-door debate, have underlined the sharpening clash between African friends of the Soviets and nations oriented to the West.

The ministers, preparing for Tuesday's start of the African summit, failed to resolve any of the continent's most divisive problems.

They did agree on issues not in dispute among African countries, such as the need for economic development, and non-recognition of the "internal settlement" in Zimbabwe, Rhodesia. But on other matters, the decision-making was either sidetracked or passed on to the summit of Organization of African Unity.

The evasion of problems is usual. "We tend to seek African solutions for African problems," an OAU spokesman said. "That is why we look for conciliation rather than sharply defined decisions."

In practice, however, the conflicts refuse to go away.

The Rhodesian war has disclosed as many differences among the African countries as within the black population of Rhodesia itself.

There are three main power blocs:

—The countries that receive much of their weaponry, technical aid and ideological inspiration from the Soviet bloc. They include Libya, Algeria, Ethiopia, Madagascar, Angola and Mozambique.

—The countries that remained tied to their former colonial masters in Western Europe. They include Morocco, Kenya, Senegal, Ivory Coast and most of the other former French colonies.

—A group of so-called neutrals, led by Nigeria, Tanzania and Zambia.

Suspect's bite to be evidence

PINCKNEYVILLE, (AP) — Perry County State's Attorney Lloyd Middleton says he'll use the casting from teeth of a man charged with murder in the prosecution of his case.

The trial of Paul S. Queen, 50, of DuQuoin, began Monday before Judge William Starnes in Pinckneyville. Middleton said he'll introduce the cast to show the teeth marks found on the body of the victim match.

Queen is charged with the murder of Lyda Belle King, 65, Jan. 2, 1979 in her apartment above a Du Quoin card shop.

Middleton said a St. Louis doctor is of the opinion that the teeth shown in the cast matched the marks on the dead body.

In testimony Monday, Olive Hepp, a clerk in the card shop, told of finding the body of Ms. King when she attempted to deliver a telephone message.

Lee to buy Southern Illinoian

By Jennell Olson
Staff Writer

The Southern Illinoian, a Carbondale-based afternoon paper with a circulation of about 30,000, is scheduled to change hands Oct. 2 when Lee Enterprises Inc. purchases Lindsay-Schaub Newspapers Inc., newly appointed Southern Illinoian Editor Peter Seikowe said Monday.

When the transaction is complete, Lee Enterprises will have also acquired the The Decatur Herald and Review, The Edwardsville Intelligencer, The Midland (Mich.) Daily News, and the Huron (Mich.) Daily Tribune, all Lindsay-Schaub papers.

Seikowe said the Southern Illinoian's coverage of Springfield politics may be affected by the sale, which was first announced in January.

Lindsay-Schaub has always had a staff of reporters covering state government for the chain. However, Lee Enterprises, based in Davenport, Iowa, is a strong believer in autonomous newspapers and strives to keep each paper independent of the others, Seikowe said.

Because of this difference, the coverage of state government might suffer as a result of the change in ownership, he said.

"There has been little in-depth coverage that has matched that of Lindsay-Schaub. For example, nobody has been watching the governor quite as closely as it (Lindsay-Schaub) has," Seikowe said.

He said that Lindsay-Schaub's system of using home-office writers to cover state government for the entire chain will be discontinued when Lee Enterprises takes over in October. However, he added that he prefers a centralized system of state government reporting because it results in more complete coverage.

He added that there are no immediate plans for staff or managerial changes. Lee Enterprises publishes 16 newspapers with a combined circulation of more than 480,000, operates five VHF television stations and four radio stations.

Somoza fires officials, may quit Tuesday

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Frantic officials and business associates of the dying Somoza regime were hurriedly packing their bags, jamming airline counters and going into hiding Monday as government sources reported President Anastasio Somoza might resign as early as Tuesday.

In an unexplained move apparently linked with preparations for his government's collapse, Somoza fired more than 100 top officers of his national guard.

On Managua's streets, many Nicaraguans seemed eager for the impending victory by Sandinista guerrillas and the end of the 42-year-old Somoza family dynasty.

"Long live the revolution!" shouted a one-legged man, waving his crutch as he waited with hundreds of other people on a line to buy food at a government distribution center.

A high-level government source said this is Somoza's final week in power.

Madigan: EPA should relax rules

CHAMPAIGN (AP)—The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency should relax its "excessive" standards to allow industry to burn more domestic coal instead of imported oil, according to Rep. Edward Madigan, R-Ill.

"They say the air quality must not be diminished, but they don't make allowances for reducing the quality of the air without endangering people or wildlife," said Madigan. "Coal burning could be brought about without destroying air quality."

Madigan spoke at the dedication of Cole Hospital in Champaign Sunday, as President Carter prepared for a nationwide address on the energy crisis.

Madigan said Carter should overrule the EPA and allow the extensive use of coal.

"If Carter declines to do this, he has missed his last chance to be a leader of the free world," Madigan said.

Louella Dirksen dies of cancer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Louella Carver Dirksen, widow of Sen. Everett Dirksen, R-Ill., died of cancer Monday in Sibley Memorial Hospital.

She was 80. Her daughter, Joy Dirksen Baker, wife of Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker, was with her when she died.

A spokesman for Baker said funeral services would be held for Mrs. Dirksen in Washington on Wednesday.

Estrogen linked to uterine cancer

NEW YORK (AP) — The latest study to link estrogen to post-menopausal cancer of the uterus includes a ray of hope for women who need the hormone to control "change-of-life" discomforts.

The study released Monday says women who take estrogen for only a year or two do not greatly increase their risk of cancer.

Garavalia picked to lead development

By University News Service
J.C. Garavalia has been named director of development at SIU.

Garavalia's appointment was approved at the Board of Trustees meeting Thursday in Springfield. It is effective immediately.

A Herrin native, Garavalia, 48, was assistant director of development and head of annual giving in the SIU Foundation-based development office.

The position calls for directing and coordinating all private fund raising, including gifts of donation and property for the University.

George R. Mace, vice president of university relations, has been acting director of development since May of 1977.

The last permanent director of development was Curtis R. Simic, who left in September of 1974 to accept a similar position with the Yale New Haven Medical Center.

Garavalia received a bachelor of science degree in business administration from SIU in 1966. He joined the SIU staff as assistant director of personnel in 1968. Prior to that he was executive director of the Herrin Chamber of Commerce and senior engineering administrator at the McDonnell-Douglas Corp. in St. Louis.

Centralia cops file suit

SALEM (AP)—Two Centralia policemen have filed suit against the police chief, two other officers, an assistant city manager and the city.

In the suit filed Monday in Marion County Circuit Court in Salem, officers Cletus Feig and Roland Miller charge their civil rights were violated by actions of the defendants: Chief Kermit Justice, investigators Jerry Edmonson and Richard Simer, assistant city manager Jeff Broughton and the city.

Feig and Miller contend that Justice found out they were cooperating with the FBI probe of alleged irregularities in the police department. The suit alleges that Justice had officers Edmonson and Simer take pictures of Feig and Miller while they were talking with FBI officers in Salem.

Miller also alleges, in one charge of the 18-count lawsuit, that he was denied a promotion in June when Broughton told a special police review board that he (Miller) had another suit pending against the city. That separate suit carries a similar failure to promote charge.

The Feig-Miller suit seeks a total of $115,000 in damages.

The FBI investigation resulted in a grand jury being called in Alton to study the alleged irregularities. The grand jury is still meeting to examine police and city records to determine if said irregularities exist.

The investigation came after complaints from a law enforcement development agency that Centralia police interfered with drug investigations and dealt in payoffs.

Sewage control everyone's responsibility

In a way, it just doesn't seem fair. When the residents of the Union Hills subdivision in Carbondale moved into homes there, they had good reason to expect that their sewage would be taken care of properly, in a way that wouldn't bother other Carbondale residents.

But recent action by the Carbondale City Council may force those residents to install a sewage control system more adequate than the one currently used.

The question now seems to be: "Who is to blame, the residents of Union Hills, or the man they bought their houses from?"

That man is Egon Kamarasy, an assistant professor of political science at SIU. He and his wife Edith are the developers of the Union Hills subdivision.

For about 10 years, the Environmental Protection Agency has been trying to force the Kamarasys to install a pollution control system in Union Hills. The EPA says the present system is inadequate because it results in Union Hills sewage winding up in Cedar Lake, Carbondale's principal water supply. Think about that: the next time you take a drink of water.

The present sewage maintenance system consists of Lake Lilac Lagoon, a body of water that is the recipient of Union Hills sewage. But the City Council, with EPA reports to back it up, says Union Hills sewage has been finding its way into Cedar Lake.

At last week's City Council meeting, the council decided to give City Attorney John Wornick informal consent to initiate legal proceedings against Kamarasy. They also approved Wornick's plan to send letters to every Union Hills resident advising them that they too may face legal action if sand filters are not installed on their homes to prevent further pollution of Cedar Lake.

According to Wornick, Kamarasy is the culprit. At the City Council meeting, Wornick said "Kamarasy has tried to delay and confuse the matter repeatedly."

And the evidence produced thus far seems to confirm this accusation.

In 1976, the Illinois Pollution Control Board ordered Kamarasy to shut down Lake Lilac Lagoon and to pay a $500 fine. Kamarasy paid the fine but did not shut down the lagoon operation.

In April, 1978, the Kamarasys were found guilty of contempt for failure to obey another court order. This one issued in August 1977, to stop polluting Cedar Lake.

Yet another court order was issued in August, 1978. This one told Kamarasy to begin construction on sewage improvements by Nov. 15, 1978. And Wornick says Kamarasy still refuses to comply with the court's orders. According to Wornick, Kamarasy is "playing games with the court, with the EPA and with the ICC, as he has done for the past 10 years."

Although Kamarasy hasn't installed sand filters on the Union Hills homes, he says Union Hills sewage is no longer dumped into Cedar Lake.

While it is reassuring to hear this, it would be more reassuring to hear that Kamarasy has complied with the EPA orders and the court orders to install sand filters or some other such guarantee that Cedar Lake will never again be home to Union Hills' waste products.

And it may seem unfair that Union Hills residents should pay for Kamarasy's wrongs. But this action by the City Council should make it clear that environmental protection is everyone's responsibility; it means making sure that what you do doesn't unfairly affect others.

If Union Hills homeowners had considered this when they moved into Union Hills, they might not have moved in. They might have taken their business elsewhere. And if they had done this, there would be no threat of Union Hills sewage flowing into Cedar Lake.

Psycho Ronnie Rains was king of the roller derby

Olivia Newton-John indeed. Miss Newton-John appeared on the cover of a recent issue of People magazine, wearing roller skates. Inside, the magazine was filled with other persons on skates—Cher, Dick Cavett, Robin Williams, John F. Kennedy Jr., Andy Warhol, Erik Estrada, and Lord help us all, the Village People.

As usual, I'm about five years too late. People magazine informs us that "all America is on wheels," and judging from the lithe and beautiful men and women skating down America's most elegant boulevards, roller skating is, indeed, a fad among the well-turned-out and fashionable.

When I became attracted to roller skating—this was around 1973-1974—it was not because of Cher or Andy Warhol. They had not bought their first skate keys then. No, the decade was sinking into terminal dreariness, and I had just about given up on heroes, when I discovered Psycho Ronnie Rains.

I first came across Psycho Ronnie Rains in a motel room. I was watching television, killing time, and the set was turned to some fuzzy double-digit channel. There appeared on the screen something that looked like the old Roller Derby, had the Commissioner of the Roller Derby been Hermann Goering. It was the sickest, bloodiest, dirtiest, most violent thing I had ever seen. Roller skaters, both men and women, kicked the life out of each other with little pretense at trying to skate around the banked track. It was absolutely appalling. It was called the Roller Games, and I fell in love with it.

Week after week, whether I was at home or on the road, I would find a double-digit channel that was featuring the Roller Games, and cancel all other activities while the contest was on. The Robert Redford of the Roller Games was Psycho Ronnie Rains, a man who combined handsome physical features with the charm of Charles Manson. He would lie on top of the railing surrounding the track and kick people—men, women—in the face with his skates. He would grab the microphones from the track announcers and eat the cord. He would try to fly and, failing, come up bleeding and smiling. At one point the other teams in the league—Psycho Ronnie's team was the Los Angeles Thunderbirds—became so concerned with Ronnie's behavior that they hired a man named Jess Adams to compile the infamous "Adams Report" to determine Ronnie's very sanity.

Roller skating became my life. Most people, when they are taken with such fantasies, merely pine away until it passes. But in my business, under the pretense of gathering the news, I have the dangerous opportunity to act on any strange impulse that flits across my mind. So it was that I packed my bag, and set out one day to track Psycho Ronnie Rains down. By the time I found him my pulse was racing.

We shook hands. Psycho Ronnie was picking at his nails. I asked him about a rumor I had heard, that the Roller Games were going to be cleaned up because they were too violent for family television.

"Yeah," said Rains, still picking at his nails. "It's going to be all good skaters and stuff. All new rules and stuff. It's going to be a sport. Let me put it this way. It's not going to be no bullcrap. It's not going to be no people hitting other people with briefcases like before. It's not going to be no commotion and fighting."

I asked if this would mean the end of such classic Roller Games theatrical touches as the Adams Report.

Psycho Ronnie looked insulted. "The Adams Report was on the up-and-up," he said. "It was all for real. The owners wanted me barred. They said I was psycho, when I was just eccentric."

Wanting to change the subject, I asked Psycho Ronnie what he did to pass the time on the road.

"I read the Bible," he said. "I believe in the Bible. I go to church in whatever town we're in. Some things in the Bible, I don't understand. So now I have enrolled in a Bible study course to teach me. I have a short-wave radio that I can pick up on Australia and Japan now, but mostly I read the Bible. I can't find any other books that really interest me."

I asked Psycho Ronnie how Bible-reading fit in with his violent on-skates image.

"I believe that the Good Man upstairs knows what my job is," Psycho Ronnie said. "He knows that I have to make a living. And the Bible has given me more patience with my fellow men skaters."

As I was leaving the motel, Psycho Ronnie stopped me and said:

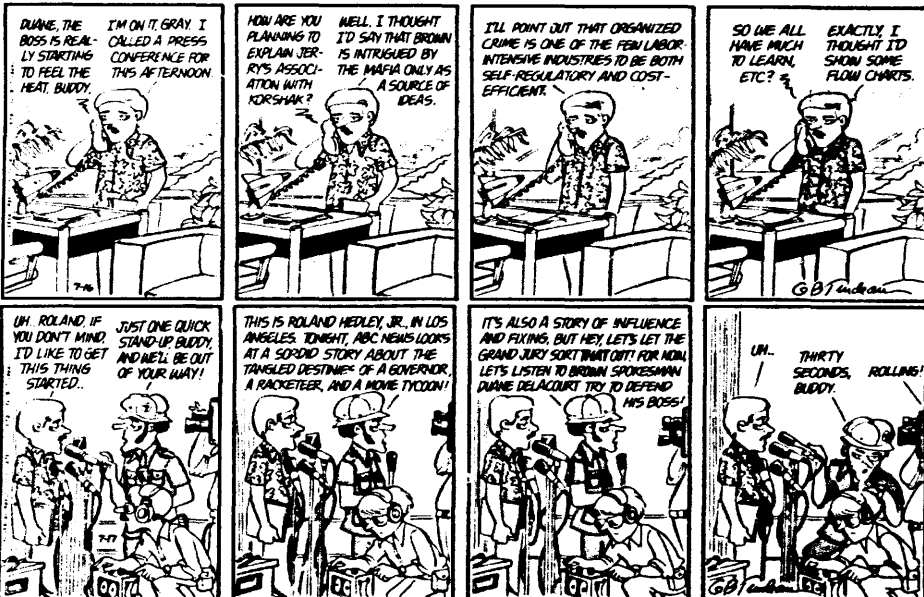

"One thing I would like to say. I think that one of my best things is that I like old people, and cripples, and people with poins. When I see a crippled kid, I leap off the track and I go over to that kid. I thank the Lord that I've got two good legs to skate on."

I wish there were a dramatic ending to this story, but there isn't. With all the new interest in roller skating, I figured that the time was right for Psycho Ronnie to become a legitimate, mainstream American hero. For three days I called around the country, trying to find him. To no avail. The Roller Games, it seems, are dead and gone, and no one has any idea of what happened to Psycho Ronnie Rains.

Which is a shame, in a way. It's not that I think Psycho Ronnie was such a wonderful guy. It's just that I'd love to see him jam the stainless-steel wheels of his skates down the Village People's throats.—Copyright 1979 Field Enterprises, Inc. Field Newspaper Syndicate.

While he was a student at SIU, Randy von Liski's interest in political campaigns kept him so busy that he never got around to getting his degree.

However, his interest has paid off for him. After serving almost three years as a scheduler for Gov. James Thompson, von Liski was named as Thompson's director of operations a month ago.

In that position, von Liski will oversee the internal functioning of the governor's office. Included are areas such as mail in and out of the office, running the Governor's Information Agency, the budget for the governor's office and some personnel matters.

He was back on campus last week to speak to a group of elementary and secondary school teachers attending a Robert A. Taft Institute on Government at SIU. John Jackson, a professor in political science and one of those overseeing the seminar, was one of von Liski's teachers at SIU.

Von Liski's experience as a campaign worker began in 1968, when he went to work as a "Youth for Nixon." In 1972, von Liski left the Nixon camp because he said he became "very liberal. I was committed against the war in Vietnam and Nixon."

Of course, 1972 didn't turn out to be a good year for the campaigns of Nixon's opponents. Von Liski first went to work for the brief campaign of Rep. Paul McCloskey, R-Cal., for the Republican presidential nomination. He looked for another job after McCloskey garnered only about 20 percent of the vote in the New Hampshire primary.

The campaign of Sen. George McGovern was von Liski's next interest, and he actively participated in the California and New York primary election campaigns, both of which McGovern won. Von Liski described the McGovern campaign effort with regard to volunteers as fairly disorganized.

"The people running the campaign were very young, and actually had more money than they knew what to do with," von Liski said. "And I think it showed."

Von Liski told stories about McGovern campaign workers from cities such as San Diego and San Francisco actually hijacking volunteers destined for Los Angeles, his base of operations.

From the McGovern campaign, von Liski went on to SIU to major in political science. He continued his political activity, however, running for student body president in 1973.

"I learned some valuable political lessons. You have to organize early, you have to have a base of support, and you need volunteers and the media. Somehow, I managed to come in second out of a field of 12 candidates," he said.

After his own unsuccessful campaign, he went to work for the Daily Egyptian as a reporter covering politics. In February 1974, he interviewed George Burditt, a Republican who was trying to unseat U.S. Sen. Adlai Stevenson. A week after the interview, von Liski said he got a letter from Burditt asking him to serve on his campaign staff.

"The Burditt campaign was a low-budget statewide effort that forced all paid members of the campaign to become generalists," von Liski said. This was unlike the Thompson campaigns, in which staff people were very specialized, that von Liski worked in following the Burditt campaign and a brief stint in Washington.

He said he intends to go back to school and obtain his degree someday, but for the present he is satisfied working in the governor's office.

Panel examines teen-age pregnancy

By Karen Gulló
Staff Writer
and Debra Drees

A panel of health educators, counselors, doctors, teachers and clergy from Southern Illinois told hearing officers from the Illinois Commission on the Status of Women of a need to provide more sex education services in the community and school at a hearing on teen-age pregnancy.

Representatives from child and family services and county health clinics Thursday stressed the fact that there are few health services which provide information about birth control and pregnancy to youths in rural areas.

"There is a general lack of organized sex education for youths in rural areas," said Ron Sipko, a family planning counselor at the Jackson County Mental Health Center.

"Programs in sexual decision-making for couples should be provided in rural communities, where the only medical facility available is the family doctor."

Toby Saken, project director for the Jackson County

Adolescent Health Clinic, said "there are barriers against youths" who need sex counseling and information.

"Even when resources do exist, teens don't use them because they are afraid their parents will find out," Saken said.

The panel said the lack of sex education in schools and sex referral services within the community may account for the high rate of teen-age pregnancies and high school dropouts in Southern Illinois.

According to birth rate statistics for the 30 southern-most Illinois counties provided by Women's Services at SIU, 21 percent of all births in 1977 occurred to girls younger than 19. Statistics from the Marion regional office of the state Department of Children and Family Services reveal that 170 unmarried women in Southern Illinois between the ages of 13 and 20 gave birth in 1978.

One of the primary concerns of the panel was that so many pregnant teens do not go for prenatal care until very late in their pregnancy.

"Many teen-agers delay medical care for a pregnancy because they are denying their condition. They are afraid and guilty," Dr. Roger Klam, a Carbondale gynecologist said.

Campus Briefs

Mobilization of Volunteer Effort (MOVE), in cooperation with the Office of International Education, will hold the first meeting of the International Friendship Program Thursday from 4 to 5:30 p.m. at the Wesley Community House.

Women interested in volunteering for the Rape Education Committee and the Rape Action Crisis Go-out Committee may call the Women's Center at 529-2324 to register for training.

The Jackson County Unit of the American Cancer Society has exceeded its crusade goal of $31,700 for 1979, according to Alice Hardy, ACS crusade chairwoman for Jackson County. Current receipts of $32,370 for the current fiscal year ending Aug. 1 are reported by the crusade committee.

The Jackson County Unit of the American Cancer Society exceeded its financial crusade goal of $31,700, according to Alice Hardy, American Cancer Society crusade chairwomen for Jackson County. A compilation of reports from volunteer crusade workers and community chairmen shows current receipts of $32,370 for the current fiscal year ending Aug. 1, exceeding the county's challenge goal by $670, Hardy said.

Unmarked vehicles stop speeders

By Deborah Singer
Associated Press Writer
SPRINGFIELD (AP) — That highway road-mower with the Illinois decal on the side just might have a state trooper inside monitoring your speed, state law enforcement officials said recently.

It's all part of a plan announced by the state Department of Law Enforcement to begin this weekend using "unconventional methods" to trap speeders.

The department said in a statement it was going to "pull out the stops" in efforts to crack down on motorists breaking the 55 m.p.h. speed limit.

"The bottom line for all drivers, professional and private, is facing the possibility that any vehicle they see moving or stopped along the highway could be occupied by a trooper with radar," said Dan K. Webb, state law enforcement director.

However, the department said tickets will be issued only by uniformed troopers in marked cars.

Gov. James R. Thompson said using "covert enforcement" and "unconventional methods" to catch speeders was fine with him.

"If that's what it takes in Illinois to get the speed down, that's what we'll do," the governor said.

Webb said he has authorized state police to monitor speeds from a variety of unmarked cars, trucks and other vehicles. He said the assortment may even include vehicles used for state road maintenance.

Thompson explained that people using citizen's band radios and radar detectors have hindered police efforts to trap speeders. When people with CB's in their cars or trucks spot a marked police car they tend to radio ahead and tell other folks to cut down their speed, he said.

Catholics to try waiting period wedding policy

PEORIA (AP)—The Catholic Church in central Illinois, concerned about rising divorce rates, has adopted new marriage guidelines requiring couples to go through a four-month-long assessment to be certain they really want to wed.

Bishop Edward O'Rourke of the Peoria Diocese recently said the new guidelines would mean more paperwork for priests and a little more work for the couples, but they are not designed as an obstacle in the way of marriage.

"Obviously, we've had a policy for marriage preparation for several centuries said O'Rourke. "But we're making the service more extensive, more professional, hopefully, more effective."

The policy, to take effect Nov. 1, basically requires that couples go through an initial interview with their priest. They meet again with him for a pre-nuptial inquiry and a questionnaire covering all aspects of the marital relationship.

The priest then looks over the questionnaire and meets with the couple again. If he finds reasons or radical differences between the couple which indicate some problems, he may suggest a delay, O'Rourke said.

The four-month-long counseling sessions may involve as many as seven meetings.

Waller steps at Shryock

By Jordan Gold
Staff Writer

Harry Waller, a Chicago-folkie who sings about cats and cockroaches among other things, entertained a crowd of about 1,500 as part of the Sunset Concert Series last Thursday night. Waller combined zany humor with expert showmanship to provide one of the best Sunset shows yet.

He walked onstage chewing a piece of gum and didn't spit it out until half-way through the first song. He doesn't worry about being polished.

Highlights of the first set included "The Cat-Hater's Anthem," "Cockroaches on Parade," and a song about the trials of travelling on the road called "Riding in a Big Jet Plane." It's about a tour that covers 42 cities in 38 days. "I go to Texas, bags go to Maine," he sang.

"Cat-Hater's Anthem" is a song directed at the most hostile, belligerent, minority group around - people who own cats. Waller talks about cats' better habits: "In the alley they lick dead rats, they have kittens on your pants..."

"Cockroaches on Parade" is a song that inspired a 32-page book of the same name and will soon result in a film. "My brother's an animator," Waller explained. The song itself concerns that wonderful pest that uses your lunchmeat for a foot mat and laughs around your bath.

Waller ended the first set with this song, but promised to have all new songs for the second set. He even said he'd write ten new ones during the intermission.

A sing-along version of Claude King's "Wolverton Mountain" highlighted the second set. Waller had the audience, which previously had been passive, singing the song even better than Claude himself.

Originally from Philadelphia, Waller moved to Chicago six years ago. He did a song that he wrote just before he left Pennsylvania about a woman that he wronged. Called "Lose Another Friend," Waller sang that his sarcasm got him in trouble: "There it's plain to see, from my tomfoolery I've lost another friend."

He already has a master tape of about twelve songs for an album. All he needs is a recording contract. What Harry Waller should do, however, is send a tape of one of his live performances to a record company. They couldn't refuse.

'Dr. Bombay' home for checkup

By John Carter
Entertainment Editor

The Doctor was in last weekend, and he was in good health.

Back from engagements in Highwood (The Alley) and Chicago (Ryan's Pub on Western Avenue), Dr. Bombay entertained full-houses Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights at Silverball with a high-energy horn section and some of the best solo work (from all the band members) that the 'strip' has encountered in the recent past.

Calling themselves the "only true punks of rhythm and blues," Dr. Bombay is a conglomeration of musicians who came together about six months ago after a number of Carbondale bands broke up leaving a number of musicians unemployed. Out of seven bands and one radio-television major came Dr. Bombay.

Out of The Doctor comes very much energy. Led by "Loose Billy Loose" Desmond, the charismatic conductor and lead singer, the band works well from all angles. The original "Doctor," Carlos Penny, plays the congas and is seemingly the dominant force in a loose, but tight-fitting rhythm section. He is joined by Vytes Lauritis, who steps easily along the bass lines and Brian Reynolds who provides most appropriate drum work.

"Fast Jack" O'Boyle does most lead guitar work. He is a versatile guitarist whose economical leads blend well with a band that is largely horn-oriented. Ron Sorin plays the harmonica, but after the first set, which is geared to blues harp, he plays horn lines.

Speaking of horn lines, that section of the band is the soul, if not the heart of Dr. Bombay. Kevin Cox plays tenor saxophone and flute, and Kevin Kruss works with both the tenor and alto saxophones. Mike Ridgeway adds his trumpet.

The result is robust riffs and exciting solos. During an interview, one member of the band said they were just "scrapping" along until the horns were added; now there's plenty of work.

The band is looking for more, too. It is trying to get an audio tape together and a video tape as well. With those they hope to make connections with old contacts now in North Carolina, Atlanta and California, hopefully earning bookings in a warmer climate by winter. Penny commented that he would rather starve in warm weather than cold, and the band was quick to agree.

Dr. Bombay's next performance will be July 26 on the steps of Shryock Auditorium, followed by shows August 4 and 5 at Hangar 9, August 8, 10 and 11 the band will be at Ryan's Pub in Chicago before a weekend in Springfield and a month's worth of bookings in Minnesota.

Carbondale NAACP seeks series

By Lula Fragd

Benjamin Hooks, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, will host a fall television mini-series, which will explore the positive contributions to American society by blacks, a spokesman for the Carbondale NAACP chapter says.

The chapter's first Annual

Social, which was held Sunday at the Bleu Flambe Lounge, was the first activity in a series of fund-raising efforts the chapter is sponsoring in order to purchase or rent the mini-series for showing at SIU at the earliest possible date, according to Felix Giboney, president of the NAACP-Carbondale Youth and College Chapter.

Admission was free, but Giboney said the chapter received pledges from Omega Psi Phi and Iota Phi Theta and tentative pledges from other SIU fraternities and sororities which will go toward acquiring the series.

During the six half-hour segments titled "Go Tell It," Hooks will discuss topics ranging "from social and political issues within the inner city," said Giboney, "to the contributions of black artists

Harry Caray is No. 1 Sox fan

By the Associated Press
 No sooner has the visiting team finished batting in the top of the seventh inning, when Chicago White Sox fans send the chant of "Harry, Harry, Harry," reverberating through Comiskey Park.

It doesn't cease until broadcaster Harry Caray grabs the public address microphone and shouts "Awright, lemme hear ya, everybody."

Organist Nancy Faust strikes the tune "Take Me Out To The Ball Game," and Caray starts singing and urges the crowd to sing along. They need little urging either to sing or cheer.

Once it's over, Nancy runs off a chorus of "Hail, Hail, The Gang's All Here" and the shouts of "Harry, Harry, Harry," continue until the next White Sox player goes to bat.

The fans love every bit of it but some purists have accused Caray of being a cheerleader. His act "bush" and himself a "house man." Caray's reply to detractors, some of whom are visiting announcers, is "sour grapes" and "eat your heart out."

Caray flourishes with the adulation and enjoys every minute of it as does White Sox President Bill Veeck, not one to look askance at any means of putting fans in the ball park.

"Last year Harry and Nancy were the only performers we had," said Veeck. "He somehow manages to capture his own theme that 'it's fun to go out to the ball park' because it's fun for him. I don't know what he'd do. I guess I've worked 7,000 games."

"I love it," said Caray who takes special pride in his 35 years of broadcasting baseball. "I've never missed a game or an inning that I'm supposed to do. I guess I've worked 7,000 games."

"Good health has something to do with it, naturally, but I think much of my stamina comes from love of what I do. And, it pays well."

To those who would call Caray a "house man," Veeck insists the opposite is true. In fact, Caray was fired by the late John Allyn because of his criticism of players and the organization over the air.

"Sure, there are things I wish he wouldn't say," said Veeck, "but I'd be the last to contest them. The fans identify with him because he is a fan. They know he's not going to give them a lot of pabulum. He's not a house man."

"He's glib and happy-go-lucky," Veeck said. "He knows every player who comes along and he also knows the game, which is something I can't say about a lot of guys in that business."

Allyn fired Caray at the end of the 1976 season when the American League was in the process of moving the franchise to Seattle. But Veeck came on the scene and gained control of the club and kept it in Chicago. When Veeck took over, his first response to expected questions was "I have a manager, Chuck Tanner. No, we don't have an announcer."

One of the things that endears Caray to Veeck is Caray's drawing power.

"He draws more people than any player on our club or the opposition," said Veeck. Despite being intentionally ignored when Veeck first purchased the club, Caray insists, "I always wanted to work for a guy like Veeck who is interested in the fans like I am."

Violent fans are a disgrace

Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde are alive and well and living in the soul of the American sports fan. Fans who once came out for the pleasure of the contest have turned into violent destroyers who let their warped emotions take over their actions. These so called fans and their own brand of "team loyalty" are disgusting and a disgrace to athletics.

On July 12th the White Sox were scheduled for a double-header with the Tigers. In between games, the White Sox and WLUP-FM, a local Chicago radio station, sponsored an anti-disco campaign that included blowing up a crate full of disco records in center field. What followed was an extremely sad event in sporting history.

A large portion of the 49,000 people at the game stormed the field. Thousands of people, mostly teen-agers, began throwing record albums and tearing up the outfield grass in a near-riot fashion. The on-field rush came as a complete surprise to everyone from the players to the police. The Sox, who were on the field warming up for the second game, fled to the dugout and armed themselves with bats, in case the situation became totally out of control.

What has happened to America's favorite pastime? When players are forced to protect themselves from their own home town fans, something drastic must be done to curb the violent fan. Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn has ordered that any further promotion must clear his office before being allowed. This is a small step in the right direction.

This is not the first incident of fan violence at one of America's ballparks. A few years ago in Cleveland, thousands of fans feeling good on 10-cent beers, stormed the field after Jeff Burroughs of the Texas Rangers. Instantly, all hell broke loose.

The baseball fan, however, is far from the leader in violence. Both hockey and football fans are far more advanced in riot and disturbance techniques. The hockey fans in Pittsburgh, Boston and Chicago taunt players, throw objects and even fist-fight with opposing teams. The fans at the Chicago Stadium are especially creative with the objects they throw, sometimes from the third and fourth mezzanines. The list includes an octopus, a live chicken, ball-bearings, coins and eggs.

Players could be seriously injured or even killed by fans who "support their teams" by throwing objects with reckless abandon. In a football game in Minnesota, a referee was struck by a flying bottle that could have ended his life. Something must be done by owners and the various commissioners.

Perhaps the fans should be shut out from the games altogether allowing only television coverage. If the fans were allowed at the stadiums, maybe the players should be shielded behind wire fences or safety glass. These ideas may sound absurd, but something must be done to protect the players and the serious fan and patron of the sport. It is a shame that so few can ruin something for so many.

All-Star starters announced

By The Associated Press

Flamethrowing Nolan Ryan of the California Angels will start for the American League against crafty Steve Carlton of the Philadelphia Phillies for the National League in Tuesday night's 50th All-Star Game.

Managers Bob Lemon of the AL and Tom Lasorda of the NL announced the starters as well as other lineup changes forced by injuries before both teams worked out Monday in the Seattle Kingdom.

Lemon said he would shift Boston's Carl Yastrzemski, elected as an outfielder in the fan ballot, to first base, replacing injured Rod Carew of California, who has been sidelined for six weeks with a thumb injury. For outfielder, Lemon named California's Don Baylor, who leads the majors with 85 runs batted in. Baylor had finished 14th in the fan voting but was named to the team as a reserve.

Lasorda said he would use Philadelphia's Bob Boone as his starting catcher. Ted Simmons of St. Louis, the elected starter, will miss the game because of a broken wrist and Cincinnati's Johnny Bench, a reserve, pulled out because of recurring back spasms.

Ryan has pitched four no-hitters in his career and came within two outs of a record fifth in his last start last Friday night against the New York Yankees. He finished with his third one-hitter of the season and seventh of his career instead.

Carlton has pitched two one-hitters this season, the last one July 3 against the New York Mets, and has a record-tying five in his career.

Lemon inserted Baylor in the No. 3 slot in his batting order and followed him with three Boston sluggers, Jim Rice, the right fielder, center fielder Fred Lynn and Yastrzemski.
