Prisoners freed after 3 months of talks

The Washington Post

AMMAN, Jordan—The release of two Americans jailed for illegally crossing into Iraq was arranged during three months of secret negotiations in New York between Rep. Bill Richardson, D-N.M., and Nizar Hamdoon, Iraq's ambassador to the United Nations, Richardson said Monday.

Richardson, who drove here from Baghdad, said he met eight times with Hamdoon before traveling to the Iraqi capital over the weekend to clinch the deal in an hour-long meeting Sunday with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein and his deputy prime minister, Tariq Aziz. He described the atmosphere of the meeting in the presidential palace as cordial and said that after Saddam agreed to free the two men, he "spontaneously" grabbed the Iraqi leader's hand to thank him for his decision.

"Saddam Hussein was tough—he is a very strong individual," Richardson said. "He let me know his views on a number of issues. ... He showed warmth at certain times,

(but) in the end he responded to the humanitarian appeal."

Richardson spoke at a news conference Monday afternoon with William Barloon, 39, and David Daliberti, 41, who were released Sunday after serving 114 days of eight-year sentences following their arrest by Iraqi soldiers near the border with Kuwait on March 13. The two, who worked as aircraft mechanics for defense contractors in Kuwait, arrived here about 1 p.m. Monday after a 600-mile car trip from Baghdad en route to reunification with family and friends in the United States and Kuwait.

"We were treated fairly," Daliberti said. "We weren't tortured or whipped or beaten."

Iraqi officials clearly hope the release of the men will improve their country's standing before the U.N. Security Council, which just days ago voted to maintain punishing economic sanctions imposed on Iraq after its invasion of Kuwait five years ago next month. U.S. officials, however, have insisted that Richardson's mission is a humanitarian matter that has no bearing on the sanctions regime.

"No deal, no promises, no assurances," national-security adviser Anthony Lake said on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America." Lake said Saddam pardoned the two men after deciding that "holding them was a liability, not an asset," the Reuter news agency reported.

But Richardson was more charitable, at least toward Hamdoon, whom he described as "an unsung hero in the successful humanitarian release."

Simon sets date for audit results

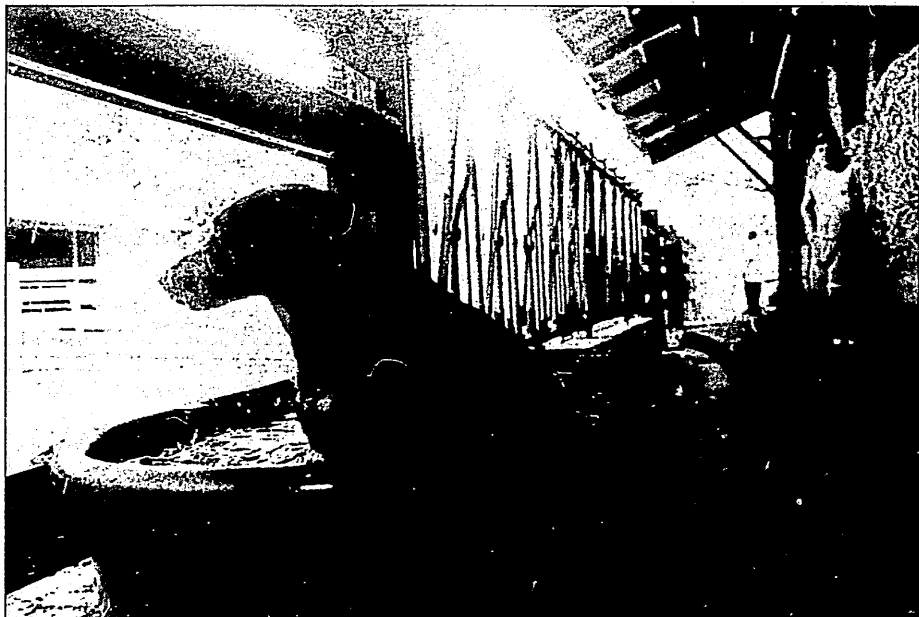

By Alan Schnepf
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Sen. Paul Simon (D-Makanda) announced last week at a Senate Commerce Committee hearing that the results of the first independent audit of broadcast television will be released on September 12.

An extension of the Television Violence Act, authored by Simon, allowed the audit conducted by CBS, Fox, NBC and ABC in collaboration with the UCLA Center for Communication Policy. The Television Violence Act is a three-year anti-trust exemption that began in 1990 which allowed the television industry to regulate itself through joint action between the networks.

Simon's press secretary, David Carle, said the audits will cover most network programming. News magazines, feature movies, documentaries, talk shows, music videos, comedy series and children's programs are all examined to determine if their content glamorizes violence. Some items, such as nightly news broadcasts, are not included in the audit. The programs will be rated for the amount of glamorized violence they contain. Carle said a similar audit will be

Pre-employment policy brings criticism, praise

By Donita Polly
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Anyone applying for security-sensitive jobs at SIUC is now subject to a pre-employment background investigation, even though some SIUC Board of Trustees members argue the policy could create problems.

The trustees approved a resolution authorizing complete criminal background investigations prior to employing individuals to certain security-sensitive campus positions at Thursday's board meeting.

According to the resolution, security-sensitive positions are ones involving the care and supervision of children, the safety of students, employees or the general public, regular access to controlled substances (except state licensed positions), and the control or expenditure of university funds.

Donald Wilson, vice chancellor for financial affairs and board treasurer, said one of the reasons for the investigations is so SIUC can comply with the laws of investigation provided by the Illinois Campus Security Act of 1994.

"These new procedures are simply a wise management practice but are also mandated by the Illinois Campus Security Act," Wilson said.

The Illinois Campus Security Act requires each public institution of higher education to identify security-sensitive positions and make provisions for the completion of criminal background investigations prior to employing individuals in those positions.

Trustee John Brewster said he thinks the language of the resolution could cause problems for SIUC and its relationship with the civil service department.

17-year-old hospitalized after weekend shooting

By Rob Neff
DE Government/Politics Editor

A Sparta man is in stable condition after being shot during a fight in a Carbondale parking lot early Saturday, a hospital official said.

Bonnie Salvetti, nursing supervisor at the Memorial Hospital of Carbondale, said Tommy Martinez, 17, of Sparta, has improved since he was admitted to the hospital for three gunshot wounds police say he received during the fight in the 100 block of East Jackson Street.

"He has been doing well," she said. "He has improved, but he is not clearly out of the woods yet."

Salvetti declined to comment on the nature of the wounds.

Police said Martinez underwent surgery at the hospital following the shooting at about 1:24 a.m. Saturday, for which two suspects have been arrested.

Police said Mark A. Mangan, 17, of Carbondale, and an unidentified 16-year-old male turned themselves into the Carbondale Police Station Sunday after Jackson County warrants were issued for their arrests.

Police said the warrants charged both suspects with aggravated discharge of a firearm and aggravated

MILITARY INVOLVEMENT IN BOSNIA INCREASED—WASHINGTON—President Clinton has authorized use of American-flown transport helicopters, helicopter gunships without U.S. crews and unrestricted NATO airstrikes in support of U.N. troops defending U.N.
 "safe areas" in Bosnia-Herzegovina, U.S. officials said Sunday. The escalating U.S. military involvement in support of French government calls to halt Bosnian Serb advances in the former Yugoslavia envisions a major policy shift.

THAI POLITICIAN FACES DRUG CHARGES IN U.S. — BANGKOK, Thailand—In a precedent setting decision, a Thai criminal court ruled Monday that a former politician who once operated out of a Beverly Hills, Calif., mansion should be extradited to the United States to stand trial on charges of smuggling 45 tons of marijuana into California. Lawyers for Thanong Siripichapong immediately announced that they would appeal the decision, which experts said marked the first time a Thai national has been ordered extradited to stand trial on criminal charges in the United States.

CIA AGENTS' MURDER SUSPECT STILL AT LARGE — WASHINGTON—For now, Mir Aimal Kansi the fugitive who couldn't be caught. More than two years after he allegedly opened fire on unsuspecting CIA employees waiting in their cars at a stoplight outside CIA headquarters, killing two and wounding three, Kansi has become a painful reminder of the limits of the U.S. government's capability to apprehend a suspected international terrorist in today's unsettled world. FBI agents have scoured the remote, dangerous area of Pakistan where they say he is hiding out, sometimes disguising himself in women's clothing. Twice they attempted to set traps for him; twice they came back empty-handed.

AIDS DRUG TO HELP PATIENTS IN LATE STAGES — WASHINGTON—An experimental AIDS drug will become available soon to a limited number of people in the late stages of the disease under a program announced over the weekend by the manufacturer, Merck & Co. said it would make the drug indinavir sulfate available free by lottery to about 1,400 people in the United States. Indinavir sulfate, also known by the brand name Crivivan, is one of a promising new class of drugs designed to attack the AIDS virus at a critical point in its life cycle.

MARINE CORPS LEADER RECOMMENDS CHANGES—
 WASHINGTON—The move by Gen. Charles C. Krulak, known for a kinetic, impatient style, is meant to focus attention on a 29-page document outlining Krulak's vision of where the Corps should be going and how it should get there. The document, issued July 1 when Krulak became commandant of the Marine Corps, is an ambitious attempt to generate solutions to some of the service's most vexing problems. Part philosophical tract, part action plan, the paper blends statements of principle with specific requests for recommendations on retaining first-time enlistees, redressing aviation crew shortages, repairing bases and restructuring forces.

SWEENEY LEADING IN AFL-CIO PRESIDENTIAL RACE—
 LOS ANGELES—Sweeney, president of the Service Employees International Union, or SEIU, heads the nation's fastest-growing union and is leading a historic insurgent campaign to seize control of the AFL-CIO—but he hasn't gotten to where he is with a labor leader's stereotypical bravado. Whatever drama Sweeney, 61, himself lacks, he more than makes up for by injecting excitement into the labor movement. He is the early favorite to win the October balloting for the presidency of the AFL-CIO, the first contested election in the 40-year history of the modern labor federation.

Corrections/Clarifications

In the July 14 story "Trustees set four-year tuition plan," Board of Trustees vice-chairwoman Molly D'Esposito was incorrectly paraphrased as saying a salary increase for faculty, administrative and professional staff was the biggest line item on SIU's budget. Salaries, not the increase, are the biggest line item on the budget.

The headline on page 1 of the July 14 edition "IBHE proposal may eliminate SIU" should have read "IBHE proposal may eliminate SIU seat."

Researcher hopes to 'moo-ve' up protein levels in cattle milk

By William C. Phillips III
Daily Egyptian Reporter

An SIUC professor is researching a variety of corn feed for cows he hopes will produce a higher concentration of protein in milk — producing nutritional benefits for humans. Richard Dado, an assistant professor in animal science food and nutrition, said the variety of corn they plan to feed the cows at the Dairy Center next spring has a high lysine (amino acid) content.

"The purpose of the high lysine is to help the cow make more protein in its own body, and to make more milk which will hopefully be higher in protein and calcium, ultimately making it healthier for humans," Dado said.

If the cows are fed normal corn silage (the entire corn plant chopped up) it would not get enough protein and would have a difficult time maintaining its health, Dado said.

Dado said in animal production, researchers look at which feed should be used to maintain healthy animals.

"We want to know how the health of the animal will be affected," he said.

The quality and quantity of the cow's milk, weight gain and how much feed the cow eats is monitored after the high lysine is incorporated in their diet, Dado said.

"If the cows performance increases it is an indication that the feed is better," he said.

Dado said the cost of food is a critical issue in agriculture and if the feed increases cows performance then the cost of food will decrease.

Dado said high performance from each acre of land or animals that farmers raise is needed in order to lower the cost of food.

"The more milk we get from each cow will lower the price of milk," he said. "It's things like lysine and cyst nematode is what lowers the food cost."

Dado's research is funded by Crow's Hybrid Corn Company.

Church collects school supplies for the needy

By Rebecca Hutchings
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A ton of pencils, paper, pens, crayons, and rulers will soon be piling up at University Baptist Church as part of a school supplies drive they will be holding for needy children in Carbondale.

School supplies may be dropped off between Aug. 6—13 at University Baptist Church, 700 South Oakland, or in case of large donations arrangements may be made for pick up.

Dr. Jeff Scott, pastor of University Baptist and coordinator of the project, said there are many students out there whose parents cannot afford the basic school supplies.

"Our belief is that some students are not equipped for school — even the simple things like pencils, paper and crayons," Scott said. "We want to be sure every child in Carbondale gets a fair start."

Needy children and their parents can pick up supplies on August 16 at University Baptist Church.

John Williams, assistant superintendent of Carbondale Elementary School District 95, said he would distribute notices to children when they register for school to inform them about the school supplies so parents are aware of what is available to them.

"Our district has about 1,500 students and approximately 700 of those students receive free or reduced meals," Williams said. "We have a very large number of children that could be classified as (needy.) Obviously, some students are more needy than others."

Scott said he is hoping for a ton of supplies and believes he can get it.

"I did this a year ago in Akron, OH and we received a tremendous response from the community," Scott said. "We collected nine miles of notebook paper, one mile of pencils and pens, and enough rulers to reach one and a half times higher than the Washington Monument."

Bob Goepfert, assistant to Scott, said he and his wife are going to donate supplies.

"(The project) is simple, but it reaches parents at a time when money may be tight," Goepfert said.

Foulks' cousin waiting for word on multi-million dollar lawsuit

By Carey Jane Atherton
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Lawyers representing Camellia Foulks' cousin are waiting for a reply from Foulks' insurance company before they can pursue a $2.07 million law suit.

Patricia Littleton, co-counsel for Cecelia Sanders McDaniel, said she asked the court to postpone a status hearing scheduled for Monday for 120 days because she is waiting to find out if Foulks' insurance company is liable in the wrongful death lawsuit filed against Foulks, 27.

The 12-count civil lawsuit seeks to recover three types of damages for each of McDaniel's four children who died in the August fire at Foulks' home which killed eight children. Three of Foulks' children also died in the fire.

dren alone while she went to a liquor store and bar. Officials also say the fire was started by one or more of the children playing with matches or a fire.

In four of the 12 counts, McDaniel alleges the deaths of her children were wrongful deaths and seeks $500,000 per child. Another four counts ask for $15,000 for the conscious pain and suffering each child suffered before dying in the fire.

The other four counts ask for $3,000 per child to cover funeral and burial expenses.

G. Patrick Murphy, McDaniel's other attorney, said in March he did not expect her to be able to pay the damages if she loses the suit. He said the only way they can expect to recover damages is if the house is covered by liability insurance.

"We hope there is some kind of homeowner's insurance on the house," Murphy said.

Foulks has been found unfit to stand trial on charges in a Jackson County criminal case with eight counts of involuntary manslaughter, one count of reckless conduct and one count of endangering the life or health of a child. She is presently being treated at the Alton Mental Health Center, where she will remain until she is found fit to stand trial.

Summer's heat inspires fashions from older, cooler eras

By Kristi Dehority
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Charlie's Angels, jellies, Fat Albert and clothes that barely fit or are too big are the current trends this summer. The new looks are a flashback to the childhood days of the twenty-something youth.

Tyler Smith, manager of Funk Junkies, 715 S. University, said the current trends are bringing us back to our childhood.

"There is an age frame that is wanting to express our individuality when we were little," he said. "This is who we are, how we grew up and how we want to look right now."

Flashing back to our youth, the baby tees are in full effect this summer. Baby tees are available in any size, but still take the same effect of a skin-tight extra small.

Emblazoned on the front of the baby tees are hearts, designer labels and even our favorite cult television shows of the younger years: Charlie's Angels, Fat Albert, the Pink Panther and shiny iron-ons are in high demand.

Cotton A-line dresses and short-skirt skirts reminiscent of the 80's Nair commercials, "We wear short, shorts," have also emerged as popular items.

One surprising comeback in the shoe department are the classic "jellies," the clear plastic shoes that females wore during grade school days. Jazzed up with a stacked heel and Mary Jane style, baby one strap shoes have lost their criss-cross effect.

The criss-cross effect was a dust imprint left on your feet after a long day of romping in the dirt with the boys. Tennis shoes have also retained the clunky lug-sole from the past seasons.

The majority of male trends seem to be based on a more relaxed and comfortable style of clothes.

One of the big trends for men this summer, are the reminiscent styles fathers wore throughout the '60s. Print and plaid leisure button-downs from either dad's closet or the local thrift store will do.

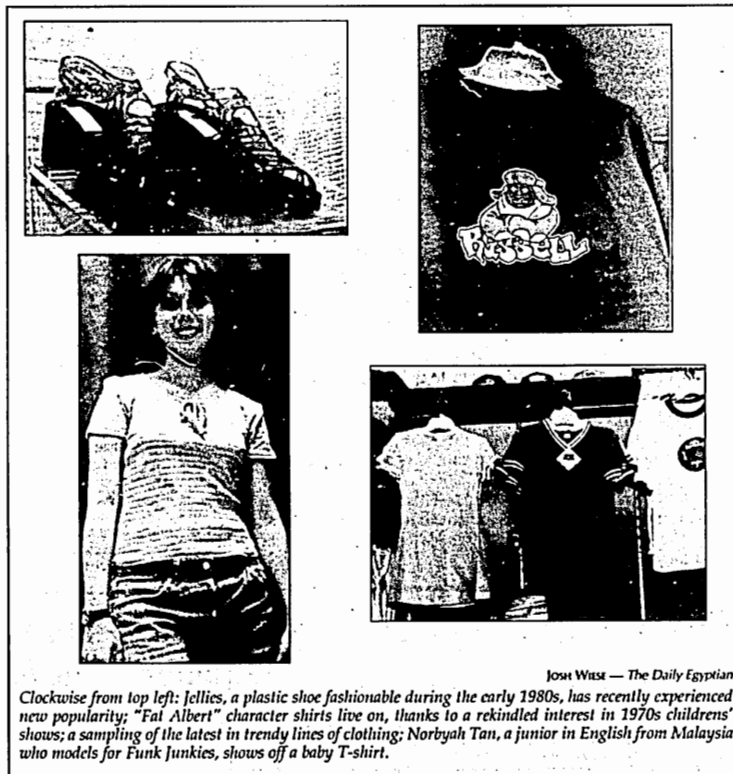

No baby tees for the guys, the over-sized baggy t-shirts are hot items, along with baggy long shorts and corduroys. Guys hated to wear those brown things in grade school, but not anymore. Corduroy is a fast seller. The Beastie Boys label X-Large has been a hot item, along with the Fat Albert T-shirts.

Linen has made a big impact. Shorts, shirts and drawstring pants in natural tones have been big sellers.

Birkenstock's are still around, but sandals for guys have taken a big turn with the mule style—the back cut out with a design on the top of the front toe. Tennis shoes are varied with big brands now coming in suede and in deep colors of blue, green and burgundy.

Sunglasses and baseball caps are also in. Hats with different logos and knockoff sunglasses from the snowboarding influence are also good items.

The summer of 1995 has returned us to our naive grade school days, lets hope next summer will not take us back to the crazy, high-haired days of high school.

JOSE WITSA — The Daily Egyptian

New law shouldn't mute SIU's voice

ONE OF THE ISSUES TED SANDERS, SIU'S NEW chancellor, should take a long, hard look at is the restructuring of the Illinois Board of Higher Education. The restructuring, in essence, eliminates SIU's direct membership on the board, and replaces it with one that speaks for the entire statewide public university system. The State legislature has said this will happen Jan. 1, 1996, and though it seems like a done deal, every lobbying effort needs to and should be made to change what is nothing more than an extremely bad idea.

Currently, SIU Board of Trustee Vice Chair Molly D'Esposito also sits as a member of IBHE. When decisions are made by IBHE which directly affect SIU, such as tuition increase recommendations, the University has a say in the matter. With the restructuring, this will no longer be the case. Instead, our individual voice will be muted among the many other state universities' voices as they are all funneled through one representative.

IBHE ARGUES THE CHANGES STEM FROM A need for less bureaucracy. So with the new legislation, they are splintering the Board of Governors, Board of Regents, creating seven new governing boards. IBHE also argues that the lines of communication between the board and the universities will be strengthened. But the logic in both these statements is lost on us. First, if IBHE is looking for less bureaucracy, why are there seven more university governing boards? And if communication is to be strengthened, it would be much wiser to hear directly from the horse's mouth, so to speak, rather than having every concern funneled through one person.

But this issue begs the question: What can be done about it now? Sen. Ralph Dunn, R—DuQuoin, introduced a bill which would have, among other things, given SIU and the University of Illinois direct representation on IBHE, a plan which was wholly supported by the DE. But, unfortunately, the representation portion of the bill was amended by the Illinois House of Representatives. As discouraging as this is, it is not too late for new legislation to be introduced. And with the lobbying efforts of our new chancellor, along with the voice of all concerned, including the students of SIU, maybe it could be passed this time around. The effort should continue.

IT IS NOT A MATTER OF WHAT'S DONE IS DONE. Encouragement can be taken from the defeat of new power the changes would have given to IBHE. Those authority changes included final approval over tuition and program cuts, but were taken out before the governor signed the bill into law. But even without that authority, IBHE still has a powerful influence over the state legislature and over our own Board of Trustees. They have asked, and we have complied, sometimes kicking and screaming, with program reductions and cuts. They make the recommendations to the State about our budget; what we should or shouldn't get.

This is why we need our voice. This is why Chancellor Sanders needs to be not only aware, but using any pull and power he may have to try and persuade lawmakers to change what they have said must be.

U.S. dollars fail to end political strife

By Jerome Segal
 Special to the Washington Post

Despite tens of billions of dollars spent by the United States over the last two decades in the name of peace in the Middle East, U.S. economic assistance has made a minor contribution to ending the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

We are now providing to Israel and the Palestinians $1.275 billion in economic assistance per year, for a combined population of 7 million, roughly $900 per family. If money can contribute to peace, it should have made a mark here. The reason it has not is that the vast bulk of this money, the $1.2 billion a year for Israel, unlike U.S. aid efforts elsewhere in the world, is completely unprogrammed. The funds are not directed at supporting any specific peace-promoting activity, program or policy. The money is simply an annual cash transfer delivered directly to the Israeli treasury.

In principle, U.S. economic assistance could make a major investment in peace by funding certain promising initiatives, such as: —Provision of financial incentives to settlers in the West Bank and Gaza to encourage them to relocate within Israel proper; —Programs of interaction between Israelis and Palestinians in the arts, music and literature, as well as in science, medicine and the environment; —Major infrastructure projects in Gaza and the West Bank that would provide sorely needed employment; —A Gaza-West Bank rail line to help relieve the isolation of Gaza; —A Palestinian national service corps that would channel the energies of young Palestinians into constructive avenues of service to their society; —A university under Israeli and Palestinian administration, with students and faculty from the entire region, directed at building a peaceful, democratic Middle East; —An Israeli-Palestinian peace corps, bringing young people together to work in both societies and around the world; —An institute for Jewish, Christian and Islamic understanding, based in Jerusalem, to provide training and public education; —Economic relief to offset loss of income associated with the closure of Israel to Palestinians laborers; —The fuller integration of the Arab citizens of Israel into Israeli society.

Very little along these lines has been undertaken. The administration has no legal authority to provide Israel with less than its standard annual check, or to require that the funds be used for any purpose whatsoever. Yet, unprogrammed, it does little good even for the Israelis.

Contrary to the views of some of Israel's neighbors, U.S. aid is not what keeps the Israeli economy afloat. Israel today has a per capita gross domestic product of roughly $14,000 per person; the economy is vibrant and expanding by around $5 billion a year, several times the amount of U.S. assistance.

Essentially, the $1.2 billion provides Israel with the funds to repay interest and principal on old loans to the United States (incurred before the program was converted to a grant basis), and it provides Israeli taxpayers with some relief, allowing the government to tax a bit less or spend a bit more.

Of the $75 million a year we are providing to the Palestinians, much of it has been diverted from long-term investment plans to covering the daily operating expenses of the Palestinian Authority.

Congress should consider a more useful allocation of the $1.275 billion. That which is needed to repay old debts to the U.S. government should be rerouted into the U.S. Treasury (roughly $800 million and declining each year) and the remainder, $400 million plus, should be placed in a fund for Israeli-Palestinian peace. As the old Israeli debt is paid down, this component would increase. The State Department should be empowered to allocate these funds to competing peace-promoting proposals.

Israel has no higher national interest than promoting peace and security. This interest is now entwined with the success of Palestinian moderates in delivering politically and economically. Yet Israel is constrained from fully pursuing that interest.

Consider: Responding to terrorist attacks, the Israeli government has severely limited the Gaza Palestinians' access to jobs in Israel. Unemployment in Gaza is more than 50 percent, a breeding ground for discontent. If Israel seeks full separation, then, in principle, it could provide major investment resources for long-term job creation within Gaza. But politically, this is unthinkable.

A society that has seen its citizens blown to bits in a bus and has seen Palestinians in the street celebrating the deed is not about to provide hundreds of millions for Palestinian job development. But while this is politically unthinkable for Israel, it is just what the United States should be doing with U.S. money, and doing it no less for the Israelis than for the Palestinians.

Because our government has virtually no say over how our aid dollars to Israel are used, and because aid to the Palestinians lurches from crisis to crisis, our aid makes only a minor and diffuse contribution to peacemaking. To do better, our political leaders in Congress and the White House will have to have the political courage to say, "This is America's money and this is what we want it used for."

Brewster said other campuses have had problems with this policy and he does not want to see the same thing happen to SIUC.

"The language of the resolution may create problems because it needs to be limited to the people it will affect," he said.

performed by cable networks in conjunction with Mediascope, a private firm, to examine the cable networks' programming.

Simon said audits of TV shows done by the television industry or private sector would be better solutions than the V-chip, a device installed in television sets to filter out coded programs considered to be inappropriate for young people. "The V-chip can help when parents are able or willing to use it, but labeling violence is no substitute for reducing the amount of violent programs on television," Simon said.

Simon said the audits are "a new cornerstone for ongoing self-regulation by the television industry."

Ken Keller, associate professor and assistant chair of the Radio-Television department, said broadcasters may change as a result of the audits, but the effects of the audits remain to be seen.

Monday afternoon, but declined to comment on the location of the 16-year-old juvenile.

Lt. Bob Goro, of the Carbondale police, said the shooting was motivated by personal feelings.

"This had nothing to do with gangs. It had nothing to do with drugs," he said. "These guys just didn't like each other, and haven't for some time."

agreed with Brewster, saying the language and the policy could be an area of potential problems for SIUC.

Wilson said a committee of legal and personnel officers from SIUC and SIUC worked on the guidelines for the policy.

SIUC President John Guyon said the resolution should be implemented in about a month.

Guyon said the resolution will apply to newly hired employees only, current employees will be exempt.

Rec revelers Hours increase for fall

By Christi C. Harber
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The SIUC Recreation Center is encouraging alternatives to the new Carbondale bar entry age by increasing their hours, according to William McMinn, director of the office of intramural sports.

On previous Friday and Saturday evenings the Rec Center closed at 8 p.m. but beginning fall semester the hours have been extended to midnight.

McMinn said a committee has been created to look at special programs that will offer students the opportunity to do on the weekends.

If enough people use the facilities, the hours will stay, McMinn said.

"The Rec Center has never stayed opened later than 10 p.m.," McMinn said.

"We are doing the new hours on a trial basis."

The Undergraduate Student Government (USG) requested the hours to be extended at the beginning of the summer, McMinn said.

"In a collaborative agreement with USG, Jean Paratore, myself and staff decided it was a good idea to try—with the understanding that if it is unsuccessful we won't continue.

We are also challenging USG to enthrone student participation," McMinn said.

Mat Forest, senior administrative student supervisor for the Rec Center, said he thinks the hours are too long.

"I have worked until 10 p.m. before, and it may be really slow," Forest said.

"You could be here and no one would be using the facility."

Shon Cole, a junior in health education from Chicago, said the extended hours are a good form of alternative entertainment for students since the bar entry age has changed.

"It will be good for those of us who like to 'hoop' and exercise," Cole said.

"It makes me feel good to see the school taking initiative to try and give students something fun to do outside of the dorms."

The hours will not affect the previous scheduled events such as intramural sports or aerobics.

The center will continue to provide special study hours during finals week and the increased hours will create more student work positions, McMinn said.

Indians creed: win this year, win next year

The Hartford Courant

BOSTON—The window is wide open. The Cleveland Indians are the best team in baseball and are favored, even expected, to win their first World Series since 1948.

But as impressive as the Indians are, there is a sense of urgency. Cleveland is an organization built to be successful for a long time, with one of the best minor league systems in baseball.

This team, though, also is built to win now.

It has a blend of veterans (Eddie Murray, Orel Hershiser, Tony Pena, Dennis Martinez) and young stars (Carlos Baerga, Albert Belle, Kenny Lofton).

The younger players are all closing in on five-six years' experience and thus will be eligible for free agency. The Indians tied them up with long-term contracts, so most are signed for the next few years.

Baerga, 26, is signed through 1998 and the Indians have an option for 1999. Belle, 28, is signed through this season, with a team option for next season. Lofton is signed through 1997.

But with other young players improving, such as Manny Ramirez, 23, and Jim Thome, 24, the Indians (48-21) will be hard-pressed to afford all their players.

That's why winning this season or next is so important.

Beginning of Rams camp has St. Louis fans in frenzy

The Los Angeles Times

ST. LOUIS—The St. Louis Rams will play the St. Louis Rams in a scrimmage later this month, and folks here say, that's entertainment.

Fans will pay $10 each—no breaks for kids—to watch Sean Gilbert shove aside Wayne Gandy at Kirkwood High School.

The cost for parking has yet to be determined.

"They can get more than 10,000 people in there, and it will be full," said David Pierce, Maryville University athletic director.

"I had someone already ask for 2,000 tickets; people are nuts for football here."

If you paid—that's paid—Los Angeles area fans 10 bucks each to watch the Rams scrimmage—would they come?

Would anyone come?

"This town is starved for football," said Mike Sigler, Parkway Central High School athletic director.

"Ask me to name five Ram players and I wouldn't have a clue.

But fans here don't care who the players are; it's football."

The fans of St. Louis, who have been without professional football since the Cardinals' departure in 1987, are now hours away from seeing their new heroes step on the field for the first time.

A soccer camp at Maryville University, scheduled before the Rams move from Los Angeles, will force the team to open their training camp today at nearby Parkway Central High School.

"We haven't even had a practice yet and people are excited to have us here," said Ram Coach Rich Brooks.

"The enthusiasm is there; it's up to us to keep it.

"I know this, I'm not going to be a very happy football coach this year if we're not in the playoffs."

Brooks and the Rams, of course, have done no wrong in St. Louis.

The local newspaper has covered the team as if it just won the Super Bowl.

Five TV stations were present for Brooks' remarks Sunday, a repeat performance as he pointed out, after speaking to the same media gathering four days earlier.

"(Quarterback) Jamie Martin may not be able to throw until the end of next week," Brooks announced, and the 10 p.m. news shows got its lead story.

There are "Welcome Ram" signs everywhere.

The Rams are still unpacking, but the fans are ready.

In anticipation of a large traffic jam Monday, a police escort has been arranged to guide the players from their Maryville dorms to Parkway Central.

"Do we order concessions for 1,000, 3,000 or 10,000 fans?" Sigler said.

"The funny thing is, our high school marching band is going to the Rose Bowl parade this year, and the money we make off the Rams is going to send the band to Los Angeles."

Evert swings into Hall of Fame

The Hartford Courant

NEWPORT, R.I.—With George Bush doing the presenting, Chris Evert was inducted into the International Tennis Hall of Fame on Sunday afternoon. The former president had a good feel for his place in this matter. He deferred to Evert, and his humility appeared to be genuine.

Playing off one of his old phrases, Bush said Evert was not a kinder, gentler tennis player. Indeed, dismissing such notions may be her greatest legacy.

"People are always asking me how I'd like to be remembered," Evert said at the conclusion of her acceptance speech.

"If I helped at all, I think it was with the notion of it being OK for a woman to be athletic, to be competitive, to be tough, to be determined. Those attributes have always been acceptable for men, but it's only in the last 20 years or so that it was OK for women to have those qualities, too.

"Also, I'd like to tell little girls all over the world to pursue your dreams. I wasn't blessed with the greatest talent or physical prowess, but look at me now. You can do anything if you put your mind to it."

Evert, 40, won 157 professional singles titles, including 18 Grand Slams. She won seven French Opens, six U.S. Opens, three Wimbledon and two Australian Opens.

"I don't miss the pressure," Evert said. "It's not the best thing and it begins playing tricks with you. But I miss playing great tennis. Because I worked so hard ... there's no moment like it."

During her 18-year career, she was never ranked lower than fourth in the world.

Evert won 125 consecutive matches on clay from August 1973 to May 1979, when she lost to Tracy Austin in the Italian Open semifinals. Evert also reached the semifinals in 52 of the 56 Grand Slams in which she played.

"Chris Evert has no idea what a powerfully positive influence she has had on tennis players all over the world," said Pam Shriver, a Hall of Fame vice president and a longtime friend and rival of Evert's.

Tony Trabert was the master of ceremonies on the stadium court before an audience of nearly 4,000. The event had been sold out for months.

Shriver was the first of three speakers. Bush came second. Evert's acceptance speech last.

"Woody Allen was right. Ninety percent of life is showing up," Bush said. "Pam called me and said she could wedge me into this event, and I jumped at the chance because I love tennis and, like America, I love Chris Evert."

Bush and Evert have been friends more than 10 years. During that time, Evert made numerous visits to the White House, to Camp David and to the Bush summer residence in Kennebunkport, Maine. Evert had lunch with Bush the day before he was inaugurated as the 41st president. Evert was playing tennis with Bush when the Persian Gulf war broke out.

Likewise, Bush has often found his way to Boca Raton, Fla., to support Evert's annual pro-celebrity charity tournament.

"As president, when I play a golf, people gave me long puts," Bush said.

"And when I threw up a lob on the tennis court, they hit a kinder, gentler return."

But Chrissy Evert never understood that.

Bush said his tennis matches with and against Evert were always peppered with a competitive spirit—a spirit generated by Evert.

"I present to you Chris Evert," Bush said, "fierce competitor. Wonderful woman. Loving mother. Class act. Great competitor."

Evert thanked her parents, Jim and Colette, for providing a structured, normal childhood in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

"This is for you because you are why I'm up here right now."

Evert also thanked the fans, who, she said, helped her stretch her career through 1989.

It has been 17 years since her first and last trip to Newport. After toizing the Hall twice in the past three days and seeing exhibits on inductees Austin, Arthur Ashe and Billie Jean King, Evert said she "felt a sense of belonging and I'll treasure that feeling forever."
