About 85 percent of eligible faculty returned ballots, and 92 percent of those voted in favor of the tentative contract agreement. Acting faculty association President Bary Malik said that out of 400 union members, about 1288 of 314 votes were in support.

288 of 314 votes were in support.

"We are extremely pleased,"
Associate Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs Margaret

good sign for the relationship of the faculty and the administration that the vote was so overwhelmingly in support of the agreement."

The agreement spells an end to the turbulent negotiations that began over a year ago. The sometimes confrontational negotiations brought two visits from federal mediators, an unfair labor practice charge, an informational picket and the threat of a faculty strike.

Mary Lamb, faculty association vice president, said she was very pleased with the turnout of the faculty in the vote.

"This is an enormous faculty engagement at a University that has been characterized by faculty apathy," Lamb said. "It is very positive for the faculty to feel that they have a voice."

Faculty association media coordinator Walter Jaehnig said he was surprised and pleased by the strength of the support. He said that in a recent discussion about the contract among the faculty association members, several expressed problems they had with the contract.

Jachnig said he anticipated a greater negative vote.

Winters said the Board of Trustees delegated the authority of approving the contract to the executive committee. The decision of the executive

Agriculture specialist to retire

40 YEARS: Farmers' best friend and professor in plant and soil science makes exit in December.

SHARRIE GLATZHOFER DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

George Kapusta remembers growing up during a time when pulling and shoveling weeds were the only ways to prevent them from sprouting up among his crops.

When a career choice came, Kapusta, a professor in plant and soil science, chose to pursue agronomy and to specialize in weed control.

Since making that decision, Kapusta has worked with students and farmers, helping to improve global and local agriculture.

"The most important achievement of my career is being able to work with farmers," he said, "and helping them to be successful at producing crops."

Kapusta began his career as an agronomist in North Dakota, about seven years before coming to SIU in 1964. He earned a bachelor's degree in agriculture from North Dakota State University and a master's degree from the University of Minnesota.

Kapusta speaks about 30 times each year to farmers about crop production and improvement. Most of his talks take place in Illinois, but he has also spoken to audiences in Brazil; Argentina, Mexico, Europe and Canada.

After 40 years of research in agriculture production, Kapusta will retire this December.

Kapusta is known in Southern Illinois for his involvement with SIUC's annual Farmers Field Day at the Belleville Research Center. He started the event at SIU in 1966 to showcase agriculture research.

Farmers and others, who are interested, can learn about research on grain sorghum, wheat, corn and soybeans this morning from 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. at the Belleville Research Center located off Illinois Route 161 near

SIUC Chancellor Jo Ann Argersinger stressed the need for enhancing communications within the University and improving the undergraduate experience at her first

House OKs restrictive bill on teens having abortions

In a new Republican bid to crack down on teen abortions, the House Wednesday approved legislation making it a crime for adults to take minors across state lines to get an abortion and evade parental notification requirements.

The bill was approved 276-150 a wide bipartisan margin, but short of the two-thirds majority that would be needed to override an expected veto by President Clinton if the bill also passes the Senate.

Proponents said the measure would shore up the rights of parents to supervise their children and bolster laws passed by more than 20 states to require parental involvement in underage abortions.

MCI-WorldCom merger gets conditional OK

The Justice Department on Wednesday gave conditional approval to WorldCom Inc.'s acquisition of MCI Communications Corp., over the protests of some rivals and unions who fear the combination will stifle competition for Internet traffic and telephone service.

The department's antitrust division approved the deal, originally valued at $37 billion, after long-distance giant MCI agreed to sell its Internet service for $1.75 billion to Cable & Wireless Plc. WorldCom, however, would still retain UUNet Technologies Inc., one of the largest providers of Internet access.

Technology reform lacks specifics

Just about every student knows the frustration of not being able to log onto the Internet or receive e-mail. Blood pressures easily rise when a computer freezes up due to a slow modem or outdated software - even faculty and administrators can relate to these woes. It comes as no surprise then that improving technology has become such a hot topic on campus. Everyone wants it. Unfortunately not much is being done about it. The Undergraduate Student Government and University officials have debated whether to implement a new fee, but no concrete steps have been taken to solve the problem. Improving technology should be a key issue in the coming school year. USG and the administration must come together and investigate the different ways that technology can be improved at SIUC

The issue of technological reform crawled to. the front lines during the USG student elections last semester. All of the parties stressed that technology was to be a key issue, and all agreed that improvements were needed. USG President Kristie Ayres said that USG would not push for University officials' proposed technology fee. On the other side of the coin, Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs and Provost John Jackson said that he would urge the University to adopt the fee. Ayres proclaims that the University has enough money to improve technology without a fee increase. If that is true, then USG and the administration must provide the information as to exactly where this money is and how it can be reallocated.

The biggest problem that currently exists in improving technology is a lack of information. Everybody wants to improve it, but nobody knows how

The administration is using the cliche "let's just add a new fee," and USG has yet to develop any concrete platforms.

The questions that need to be asked are: What improvements actually need to occur? If the money exists as Ayres says it does, where is it hiding? Are other programs going to be hurt if the funds are reallocated? If a fee is implemented, is it going to be a blanket fee or a user fee? All of these are appropriate and relevant questions that need to be addressed.

A technology fee should be the last resort. With that in mind, USG and the administration need to work together to find the money elsewhere. Furthermore, if a fee is introduced then a system should be developed to gauge the out-come of such a fee. The system should ensure that the money is being applied to technology and that students are satisfied with the improve-

It cannot be debated that technology warrants improvement at SIUC. With any issue that has such far-reaching influence as this, careful examination has to be executed. This is a change that will affect everyone, so everyone must be involved.

Northern Ireland: Losing my religion

I was oblivious to most of the news last week with the exception of the French

World Cup victory.

But the death of the three boys in Northern Ireland did catch : ny attention. It made me think of religion and if it was actually helping humanity.

I had been pondering the question of religion off and on for months now, and events like these really make me wonder if organized religion is worth it after all.

The Quinn brothers: Jason, 7, Mark, 9, and Richard, 10, were burned to death in a public housing complex in Ballymoney, Northern Ireland in a sectarian attack.

The boys lived in a 90 percent Protestant housing complex in a 75 percent Protestant town. They were being raised Protestant by a Catholic mother who thought it would make life easier for them.

Police believe that the fire bombers were motivated by the fact that the mother lived with her Protestant boyfriend.

This is just another tragedy in a long line of Catholic-Protestant conflict. Some leaders have called it a turning point in the conflict, but I really do not believe it.

The one question that I have with religious conflicts is, does God choose sides? Who does He favor?

Does He think that Protestants are better than Catholics, and which Protestant sect does He think is the best? If both Protestants and Catholics are classified as Christians, do they not believe in the same God?iv

These questions may have been asked before but have they really been thought through?

Let's take this a step further. I believe in a higher being, and one higher power regardless of religion. So, who does the Highest favor in the Iran and Iraq conflict?

Who gets the advantage from God?

Did God really want the Christians to win the Crusades or Ferdinand and Isabella to drive out the Moors?

We do not know, so why do we keep telling people that one religion or a certain sect of religion is better than others?

When we go into conflict with people of different religious beliefs, we often say things like "God is on our side," or "if you fight for our cause you will go to heaven." May I get some proof

(I would like to stop, but questions keep coming into my mind. So, who was the Higher power with in that Iran-U.S. soccer match? And I hope that everyone knows Tiger Woods broke all of those records because he was a Buddhist.)

It's all nonsense in how politicians, ministers, and people in power use religion to separate people and to try to gain support in times of conflict. Back in the pre-Civil War era in the U.S., Southern ministers used to preach to their congregations that slavery was a right that is fine with God.

Middle Eastern dictators and iconoclastic figures have used religion to gain power and support when they battle the Western orld or even each other.

Didn't Henry VIII create the Church of England because the Catholic church did not approve of his multiple wives and how he dealt with them?

I can feel the fan mail coming already.

I have to say that I am not a perfect human being, but I do treat other people the same way that they treat me, and I try to live my life with as little hypocrisy as possible. But every time I go back to church in my hometown, or any other chruches for that matter, or when I examine religion, all I find is hypocrisy.

I would see people going to church and not taking their beliefs to heart. It seemed that all they were doing was going to maintain some kind of image and not worshipping anything. For six days a week they represented something far different than they did on Sunday morning.

I was raised for half of my life practicing one religion, then I came upon another religion. I am now studying all of the world's religions; and trying to find out what I truly have faith in.

Looking at the events of Northern Ireland and looking back on history though, one has to wonder what good is religion if all it does is cause conflict.

Program helps women 'in real need for healing'

SELF DISCOVERY:

Women's Services offers two-part series on stress reduction.

> ASTARIA L. DILLARD DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Women's Serven is sponsoring "Healing: The Serven way to Self Discovery," a program designed by women to help women deal with

Theresa Sharpe, a counseling and administrative assistant at Women's Services, said these work-shops can be helpful for women because sometimes women have a 'real need for healing."

The first series installment, "Guided Imagery and Stress Reduction" will be today from noon to 1 p.m. at Woody Hal! in room A

The class will focus on guided imagery and techniques of stress reduction.

"The Creative Journaling," in the Healing Process workshop, is the second part in the series and will take place at noon on July 23.

This workshop will focus on dif-ferent diary techniques and various ways to use a journal.

"Keeping a journal is a good way for people to get a greater way for people to get a genter insight on issues that may be trou-bling them," Sharpe said. The last workshop, "Working with Dreams, Moving Towards Self-Understanding," will be at noon on July 30. This session will focus on trying to understand workshop The last Sommers' idea because she is interested in interpreting dreams. Sommers is a doctoral student in educational psychology.

"Carol has a long standing inter-est in dream interpretation," Sharpe

Sharpe, a doctoral student in counseling psychology, said the workshops are very helpful in teaching women different ways they can manage their stress.

"Even in a short time we are still supplying people with information about strategies for helping them to gain insight about themselves,

"The theme for our three part workshop series is healing," Sharpe said. "There will be a different focus for each workshop."

Sharpe said the three series workshop is just the first installment for future plans they have for the

"We plan to offer more workshops in the fall as a continuation to the Brown Bag Series," Sharpe said. Sharpe believes that taking care of yourself and understanding youror yourself and understanding your-self can really be beneficial.

'The workshops are here to be a-efit people by helping them heal pains and hurts from the past or pre-sent," she said.

Sharpe said so far a lot of people have been interested in what is going on for the following weeks, and she hopes it keeps up.

"I think it's great to get women together in a supportive environ-ment," Sharpe said.

committee. The decision of the executive committee should be heard very soon, as early as Thursday, and "looks very Thursday, and "looks very promising" in support of ratification, Winters said.

Election Committee member
John Magney, Election Committee
Chairman Ted Riggar and Jaehnig counted the final votes Wednesday morning. After the final results were tallied, Malik announced the results to a small crowd gathered outside of Rehn Hall.

"It is a great day for the union," Malik said. Malik said he was not surprised by the results because the contract was endorsed by many people throughout the union, including the department heads, negotiating team and former faculty associa-tion President Jim Sullivan.

The new contract has some unique features, Malik said. It gives the faculty the right to assist in shaping department operating papers, which outline procedures within a department.

'This shows that the faculty and the administration can work together to improve the quality of education here," Malik said.

"From here we must start improving the quality of the University."
Malik said the faculty salaries are still very low, and there is a need to improve the quality of education at both the graduate and undergraduate levels.

Even though there were several areas Malik said could have been better, overall, he thought the conwas excellent.

"I think this a very good first contract," Malik said. "This is a major step nationally."

He said that the new contract is strong in that it allows the faculty a mechanism to supervise the reduction of faculty size.

"The relationship between the faculty and the administration has already improved," Malik said. "It helps that many faculty members are also administrators, and they understand what is going on."

Lamb said she will continue to follow the issue of attrition of faculty positions and use mechanisms outside of the contract to control it.

"I will track it and publicize it," Lamb said. "I hope to use the embarrassment factor should it continue this year as it has in the past.

"There is very little power in the contract but I hope to use the press and the Faculty Senate to shine a flashlight on the issue that has been a source of embarrassment to this University for several

Jaehnig said the agreement is the first time in the history of the University that the faculty and the administration have a contract to relate to in the manner in which they deal with each other.

"This is a changing of the rules of the game," Jachnig said. "It will take some time to get used to the differences in the new rules."

Blacksmith James Lawless turns cast iron into artwork

THORRIE RAINEY
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

ames Lawless stands in 105 degree heat with sweat pouring a piece of iron with his blowtorch, showing that all artists don't use paint and a canvas.

Inside the dark garage, Lawless, 53, of Murphysboro, makes candle-holders, plant stands, end tables and mug holders that can be found in many of his friends' homes.

Lawless leads a double life. Before he begins welding in his workshop, he is a supervisor at Lentz Hall.

Lawless attended Manpower Training and Development in Marion where he learned basic blacksmith skills and continued in the field for 14 years.

He said when people look at his work, they think he is an artist.

"When people see my work they ask me where is my studio," Lawless said. "Everyone calls me an artist. I guess in a way I am." Before coming to SIUC two Before coming to SIUC two years ago, Lawless worked on the railroad for 12 years and welded stainless steel liners and nuclear reactors. He also served in the Navy for six years where he welded submarines.

Lawless, who has always had a love for his work, sells plant holders and shepherd hooks to local garden stores.

Merlin Russell, owner of Wilderflowers, 5591 U.S. Highway 51 S. Carbondale, said her customers appreciate the craftsmanship of Lawless' work. "His work is really superb," Russell said. "It's simple and elegant, and the customers really like it"

Not only has his work been recognized locally, but his work was featured in a book.

One day his wife, Sharon, came across an article requesting readers to submit creative works made by hand for possible publication in a book.

Sharon immediately thought of her husband.

"It seemed like a long shot,"
Sharon said. "But I thought that you would never know until you try, so i sent in examples of James' work."
Soon after he was contacted

Soon after he was contacted about being photographed for the book.

Of the 7,000 nominations that were sent in, 94 were selected to be in the book. Lawless is the only blacksmith in the country whose work was featured in the book.

Lawless also made a plant stand for the wife of a former Indiana governor.

Lawless understands why people like his work so much.

"When people spend money on things that I make they know it's something that's going to last for a lifetime," Lawless said.

Although his friends, family and co-workers enjoy looking at his work, Lawless said there is a lot of hard work in his craft.

"It's hot, hard and dirty work and, I get burned a lot, but I love doing it."

Nomen tennis sign three recruits

BOBBY NARANG SPORTS EDITOR

The Salukis women's tennis am will have an international flaor this season after the signing of tree foreign players by coach Judy

Auld signed a promising recruit-ing class to offset the losses of eparted seniors Sanem Berksoy, Ielen Johnson and Molly Card. The io carried the women's tennis pro-ram for the last three years.

Auld signed four freshman: irika Ocha from Durango, Mexico, amela Floro from the Philippines, imona Petrutiu from Romania and Aonica Villarreal from Big Spring,

Auld said Floro was the No. 2 anked player in the Philippines last year and will have to overcome adjustment to U.S. surfaces

Pamela is very talented and has a lot of international experience but her drawback is the majority of her experience, has been on clay courts," Auld said.

Auld said she found out about Petrutiu from one of her ex-player's brother. Auld said Petrutiu defeated the No. 2 ranked girl in the World Amateur International Tennis Amateur International Tennis Federation last year. Petrutiu also qualified for the French Junior Open in 1997.

Simona is one of the players that will lead the program in the right direction," Auld said. "I see her as possibly the best player I recruited."

Auld said Erika Ocha was ranked as high as No. 5 in Mexico last year.

"Erika is one that I have been after since last year, and I'm glad finally joined the program," Auld said.

Auld also signed Mountain Villarreal, the sister of current olayer Maria Saluki tennis player Maria Villarreal. Aukl said the younger Villarreal has plenty of tournament experience on her resume.

The amount of newcomers has Auld excited about the future of the team. Auld said she hopes the team establishes consistency and hope to see the players games improve on a

COLLEGE HOOPS Redbirds' Hill to leave school for pros

Two-time Missouri Valley Conference player of the year Rico-till has left the Illinois State basketxall team to pursue a professional :areer.

In a news conference Tuesday, Ilinois State's head coach Kevin Stallings said that Hill's reason for eaving had nothing to do with aca-lemics despite that fact that Hill was taking classes this summer in order to be eligible next season.

Last season Hill led the league in coring with 18.9 points per game and was fourth in the league with eight rebounds per game.

Hill will be ineligible to play in the NBA until the 1999-2000 sca-son because he did not declare himself eligible for the draft which took place three weeks ago. Hill will most likely end up playing in Europe or in the CBA this season.

Only tough get going at British Open

WASHINGTON POST

SOUTHPORT, England - The wind has been howling, the rain has been spitting out of menacing slate-grey skies and the layered look has been de rigueur all week. And so, as the 127th British Open begins at Royal Birkdale Golf Club on Thursday by the Irish Sea, all the elements are in place for a run of golf the way it was meant to be played on an unforgiving

NBA play just because of their mistake. David Stern made the NBA world-wide by creating the draft lot-tery, All-Star Weekend, exparsion, NBA Properties and made owners and players wealthy.

Stern must not make the mistake other sports have by thinking the game is bigger than the fans. Sure, game is bigger than the fans. Sure, having a stoppage would cause some fans severe withdrawal, but Major League Baseball is still recovering from their last strike four

The owners and players should not indulge their egos by sacrificing the ever-growing NBA popularity for a strike. Fans will become disenchanted, and the NBA will lose millions in the long run.

Payton and Kevin Garnett typifies the current situation. The commercial involves Payton and Garnett giving youngsters front row seats and Donald Trump a back row seat. The irony of the commercial is Payton and Garnett have a combined $200 million contract between them. The reason the regular fans cannot afford a good seat is because of the rising salaries and the owners need to raise ticket prices to offset costs.

The lockout means we will not hear if Jordan will stay with the Bulls or if Pippen will sign with another team. The lockout will hurt young teams, which cannot sign their draft picks and will lose much needed practice time.

Every cloud has a silver and gray lining and the lockout has given for-Saluki, Ashraf Amaya, chance to make the USA Basketball squad. Amaya is among the final 16 elections on the team with the 12member team being announced after the training camp in Monte

NBA owners want to lower players salaries and get rid of the Larry Bird exception, which allows an NBA team to resign their own free agent to a high sum of money of which only a portion counts against the salary cap.

The Boston Celtics caused the problem by giving Bird a $7 million reward at the end of his contract in the early '90s. Various owners have used the exception to ironic thing is, they bid against themselves and raised Garnett's salary by $5 million. The NBA lockout officially began on July 1 with teams being unable to talk to their players or make any off-season trans-actions. The reasoning behind the July lockout was the league doesn't want free

The first casualty of the lockout was the USA basketball team, when the 12 NBA players chosen to play in the world championships refused to play during the

The NBA is the only major sport that hasn't had a work stoppage during the season. The NBA had a three-month lockout in 1995, but that did not conflict with the season and the 1996 lockout lasted all of three hours.

This year both sides are prepared to miss a portion of the season. David Stern is standing pat on the owners' side to lower salaries and the players' association does not want to sacrifice money unless adequate compensation is given.

The owners for the first time have the leverage by still receiving revenue from television rights fees, even during the lockout. The players will feel the damage once the season approaches and might just buckle and succumb to the owners'

The owners have put themselves in this situation by agreeing to the 1996 collective bargaining agreement. The owners wanted to limit rookies salaries and hastily agreed to a rookie salary cap. The cap proved beneficial and ceased untested first-round picks getting $70 million contracts.
