City will oppose CIPS rate increase

By Mary Harmon
Staff Writer

Carbondale moved closer to its energy self-sufficiency goal this week with the City Council's approval of a $5,000 funding allocation for a Municipal Solar Utilities research program and its decision to join other CIPS-served cities in forming a coalition to oppose future rate increases.

Following six months' negotiations with the Illinois Institute of Natural Resources, the Shawnee Solar Project has been awarded a $6,920 grant and promised an additional $40,504 to study the possibility of a Municipal Solar Utility in Carbondale.

Though the INR agreed to pay 90 percent of the program's costs, the city was asked to fund the remaining 10 percent in $2,500 parts for the program's two phases.

Chris Robertson, energy planner for Shawnee Solar, asked the council Monday night to funnel $5,000 of its energy division funds into the research. The council approved the fund allocation with a unanimous vote. Councilman Charles Watkins was absent at Monday's meeting.

Describing the MSU as a "solar rural electric co-op," Robertson said the MSU would perform one or more energy related services for the community.

Solar energy systems, such as water, space and swimming pool heating systems, would be sold or leased to citizens through the MSU, Robertson said.

The MSU would also perform the installation financing and maintenance for those services.

The first phase of the research program will study similar utility systems throughout the country, Robertson said. He gave as an example a program in Nashville, Tenn., that leases with ownership options solar collectors to its citizens.

The contract with INR for the first phase of the research, which is scheduled to begin the first part of July, will be signed this week, Robertson said. The state agency has not yet, however, committed the funds for Phase II.

Information gained from the study of the other systems will be used to design a model for Carbondale, which will make up Phase II, Robertson said. That model will be used for the design of other systems in Illinois.

Work on Phase II should begin July 31 and be completed by March 1981, he said.

Terming it a "local phenomenon" and "brand new in the state of the art of conservation," Robertson said the MSU would do much to advance solar effort.

Federal financial incentives, such as tax credits, do little to encourage solar energy use by lower-income residents, Robertson said. The MSU, he said, with its leasing and ownership options, should put solar alternatives more within their reach.

"Who can better serve the energy needs of citizens than the local government?" Robertson said. "The federal program is a disaster."

In another energy issue, the City Council voted to join with

ERA vote likely today; House tension mounts

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Tension mounted in the Illinois House Tuesday as sponsors of the Equal Rights Amendment said they would likely call the amendment for a House vote on Wednesday.

"I'm 85 percent sure that it'll be called tomorrow," said Rep. James C. Taylor, D-Chicago, powerful leader of the 15-member black House caucus.

Taylor said ERA-supporters were counting votes in the House to see whether all 107 legislators needed to pass the amendment would be in attendance Wednesday. ERA sponsors have said they are depending on "yes" votes from 72 Democrats and 35 Republicans.

"We're fine on the Republican side and we're ready to go," said Rep. Giddy Dyer, R-Hinsdale. "And I've told the Democratic leadership that."

"I feel that I have 108 votes for the ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment," Taylor said.

Tuesday was the first legislative session this week, and as the General Assembly hurtled toward a June 30 adjournment deadline, ERA lobbyists combed the Capitol corridors and House sponsors worked feverishly to try to corral votes.

Plaza's liquor license to be suspended 3 days

By Mary Harmon
Staff Writer

After outlining Plaza Lounge's history of liquor-related violations, the Carbondale Liquor Control Commission voted Monday night to suspend the tavern's liquor license for three days.

Represented by Plaza Lounge Inc. President Ralph Parrish, Plaza Lounge pled guilty before the commission to a charge of selling liquor on April 24 to an underage person without asking for proof of age.

The commission, composed of City Council members and Mayor Hans Fischer, considered the tavern's past record—one violation of topless dancing and one for underage liquor sales—and voted to suspend the liquor license from 2 a.m. June 30 to 2 a.m. July 3.

Though Parrish pled guilty to the charge, he rose to his own defense and told the commission, "I know this violation is looked upon as serious. But I swear it is not because we are not trying. We are trying."

Parrish told the commission that the young woman arrested had been asked for and had shown identification on her first visit to Plaza Lounge. The woman had returned to the tavern twice within the following four or five nights, Parrish said, but had not been asked for proof of age upon her subsequent visits.

On her third visit, however, the woman was followed by her older brother, who is a member of the Carbondale Police Department, and was arrested by him.

Parrish told the commission that the woman was "evidently something of a maverick" because she had identification "good enough to fool a bartender."

"You only have to be in my shoes to know how hard we have tried not to have trouble this year," he said. "I keep a sign pinned to the cash register to check ID's and the bartenders do it."

A charge of underage sale of alcohol by Eastgate Liquor Mart was also scheduled to be heard Monday night. The store entered a plea of not guilty, but a representative was unable to attend. The hearing was rescheduled for July 7.

The Liquor Control Commission will consider liquor license renewals next week following the City Council's Monday night informal meeting.

Black unemployment, resentment leading to unrest in Carbondale?

By Andrew Zinner
Staff Writer

Last month, racial riots in Miami resulted in 16 deaths, countless injuries and $100 million in damages. Commentators blamed resentment toward police, rampant unemployment and lack of black influence in government for the violent demonstrations.

Miami is one of many urban areas in America experiencing racial unrest, and fear of similar uprisings in other cities has been widely expressed since the weekend of May 17.

Carbondale is one of those cities, and interviews with members of the black community here have indicated that there are similar, though not identical, problems here. All those interviewed said unemployment is a major problem for blacks in Carbondale.

Councilman Archie Jones

Editors Note: This is the first of two articles outlining problems of the black community in Carbondale.

agreed that there is a severe unemployment problem among blacks in Carbondale. "The big problem right now is attaining jobs for the unskilled. There is no industry here," Jones said. He estimated that 30 to 40 percent of young blacks are out of work here.

Norvell Haynes, a black community activist, said the situation in Carbondale is "more destructive and inflammatory than in Miami because the city government doesn't give a damn about blacks."

He said unemployment leads to restlessness, drugs and crime, and added that "all are evident in Carbondale. A riot could happen here," Haynes emphasized, "because Carbondale fits the pattern of the larger cities. The government is not trying to help blacks here."

Elbert Simon, president of the Carbondale chapter of the NAACP, said finding decent jobs which provide decent incomes "would take care of 90 percent of the problems" in the black community.

According to Simon, who has held the NAACP post since 1974, there are no large hiring facilities except SIU-C. "There has been a lack of commitment on the part of the University in providing jobs for blacks in decision-making and top-level capacities, but the whole blame can't be placed on them," he said.

The latest nationwide unemployment figures show a 13.9 rate for blacks, with 35 percent of minority teens out of work.

Could city feel black unrest?

Unemployment, while being the prominent problem among Carbondale blacks, is not the only area of concern. According to Haynes, there is a feeling of resentment toward elected officials.

"Our problems are ignored and the city rulers show no desire to do anything," he charged. "Blacks have no power here."

Haynes said there are no plans for black improvement here, and added that those plans that did exist were not executed properly to be a success.

He specifically cited the city's use of federal Community Development Block Grants.

"The city is using the funds for capital development, such as the idea for the convention center, and ignoring social programs. They are now indirectly helping white businessmen," he pointed out.

Simon agreed, saying that the city is not making the necessary commitment to alleviate problems of blacks here.

"Social-type programs are gone here," Simon lamented. "Local money is coming in, but none of it is used to support black activities. Capital improvements are emphasized, but they won't make a dent in the unemployment picture."

Jones, who has held the council post for 11 years, said the city is working to get jobs for the unskilled. He said he realizes that many people are dissatisfied with their jobs, but added, "there will always be folks who don't want to work. If someone wants to work real bad, jobs can be found," he maintained.

He said the city is trying to find jobs, and added that racial disturbances are not likely to occur here because "people know when we are trying."

Haynes disagreed. "There is a lack of hope. Black elected officials in Carbondale have engaged in the wholesale delivery of blacks," he charged. "People with no hope leads to rioting. This hopeless feeling is not held only by young blacks, but older ones as well."

NAACP head Simon agreed with Jones, saying a riot would not occur here.

He warned, though, that unemployment and inadequate housing were "deep rooted, and, like a smoldering fire, almost any incident may trigger unrest."

New physics chairman sets departmental goals

By Mike Monson
Staff Writer

Increased emphasis on graduate research and a strengthening of the SIU-C astronomy program are two changes planned for the Department of Physics and Astronomy, the new chairman of the department said Tuesday.

F. Bary Malik, a physics professor at Indiana University for the past 12 years, has been in charge of the department since May 16. He replaced Richard Watson, who was acting chairman for the past four years. Watson, 68, returned to teaching and research.

Malik, 45, earned degrees from Calcutta and Dacca Universities in India and Göttingen University in Germany. He taught at Princeton and Yale universities before going to Indiana.

He said that his first priority will be to improve the quality and quantity of graduate research. The overall development of the graduate studies program will receive increased emphasis as well, he said.

Another change that Malik plans to implement is the hiring of two or more astronomy professors, although he admitted that budget constraints may make this impossible. SIU-C neither employs an astronomy professor nor offers an undergraduate degree in the field.

"If the administration wants to call this a Department of Physics and Astronomy then Southern Illinois University must hire a few astronomers,"

F. Bary Malik

Malik said. "We need to hire at least two persons who are well-versed in astronomy and astrophysics. As of now, we offer only a few low-level astronomy courses and these courses are taught by physics instructors."

Malik said that he decided to come to SIU-C after meeting with Norman Doorenbos, dean of the College of Science, and several other administration officials.

"I've never seen so much commitment from a university's administration before," Malik said.

Theater, office, museum dedicated

By Carol Kowles
Staff Writer

Plans to name three University facilities in honor of former faculty members, were approved by the SIU Board of Trustees at its meeting last Thursday.

The University Theater, located in the Communications Building, will be named in honor of Archibald McLeod, professor emeritus and former chairman of the Theater Department.

The Microbiology Department office in Life Science II will be named in honor of Maurice Ogur, chairman of the department from 1964 to 1979.

"The teaching theater-museum at the School of Medicine's Medical Instruction Facility in Springfield will be named to honor Dr. Emmet Pearson, professor emeritus at the SIU School of Medicine.

McLeod was chairman of the Theater Department for 28 years and was instrumental in designing the theater. During his tenure, McLeod produced and directed more than 60 theatrical productions at SIU-C, including "The Miracle Worker," "The Streets of New York," and "Under the Gaslight."

Ogur, internationally recognized for his research in yeast genetics, was a faculty member from 1961 until his death in 1979. He received the Kaplan Award from SIU's chapter of Sigma Xi research society in 1970 and the University's "Greatest Teacher" award that same year.

Pearson, professor emeritus at SIU-C's School of Medicine, donated many items to the Medical School's museum and helped arrange for donations and loans of many other pieces.

Memorial Hospital fund committee starts five-phase, $1 million drive

By Dave Powers
Staff Writer

A five-part campaign for collecting $1 million to help expand Carbondale Memorial Hospital was revealed Tuesday by the campaign's steering committee.

Money raised through contributions from Carbondale residents and residents of the surrounding area served by the hospital will help offset the $5.7 million tab for the addition of two wings on the west side of the hospital.

The 19-member committee is composed of members of the hospital board of trustees and "influential" community members.

Phase 1 of the program, labeled Family Division, includes soliciting trustees, medical staff and hospital employees and auxiliary members. A $400,000 goal has been set for this division which is already underway and is expected to be completed by the end of June.

The second phase, the Leadership Gifts Division, is expected to get underway in late June, followed in about three-week intervals by the remaining three phases. Contributions of $25,000 and up will be sought in this division.

Phase 3, dubbed the Major Gifts Division, involves gifts of between $10,000 and $25,000. Phase 4 is the Special Gifts Division involving contributions of between $3,000 and $10,000.

The final phase of the fund-raising campaign, the Community Gifts Division, is aimed at contributions of up to $3,000.

Contributions will be sought through personal contact with individuals, industries, financial institutions, businesses, foundations, clubs and various other organizations. Contributions in the form of three-year pledges will be sought.

The fund-raising campaign is already off to a flying start thanks to a $175,000 gift from the Memorial Hospital Ladies Auxiliary and a $150,000 contribution from an anonymous donor.

The steering committee, headed by Eldon Ray, will identify prospective donors while supervising the operation of the fund-raising campaign. Ray is also co-chairman of the overall fund-raising campaign, along with Mrs. Eugene Simonds, both members of the hospital board of trustees.

Other steering committee members, in addition to Ray and Simonds, include David Rendleman, Frank Bleyer, Mrs. Leo Brown, Harold Dycus, David Emerson, John Gilbert, Mr. and Mrs. Stan Hoye, Richard Hunter, Dan Kimmel, acting SIU-C President Hiram Lesar, hospital administrator George Maroney, Clifford Neill, Gary Parrish, Mrs. Henry Schauwecker, Sidney Schoen and Leon Streiger. Dycus and Brown are also members of the hospital board of trustees.

In addition to the $1 million in contributions, $528,000 in surplus hospital operating revenue and $4.2 million raised through the sale of tax-exempt revenue sharing bonds will fund the expansion program. Work is expected to get underway in late October and could be completed within 18 months.

Once completed, the two wings will house expanded intensive care and post-intensive care units, as well as an obstetrics ward, a high-risk nursery, a dietary department, a cafeteria and a dining room.

Storm damages Clinton nuclear plant

CLINTON, Ill. (AP) — Storm damage at the Clinton nuclear plant totaled about $2.25 million, an Illinois Power Co. spokesman said Tuesday, but construction of the facility should not be delayed significantly.

Winds of 85 miles an hour whipped through the construction site Sunday, blowing the booms off two cranes and damaging a third, according to IP spokesman Bruce Paulsen.

Paulsen said damage to the three cranes would be about $1.25 million, and damage to buildings would be about $1 million. Earlier, he said structural damage might be as much as $3 million.

Rather admits to experience with drugs

NEW YORK (AP) — Newsman Dan Rather, who will succeed Walter Cronkite as CBS News' top anchorman, says he has tried heroin, smoked marijuana and "knows a fair amount about LSD."

Rather told a Ladies' Home Journal interviewer that curiosity has led him to try illicit drugs.

"As a reporter — and I don't want to say that that's the only context — I've tried everything," Rather said. "I've never been a social user of any of these things, but my curiosity has carried me into a lot of interesting areas."

City to oppose CIPS hikes

other CIPS cities to form a coalition to oppose further utility rate increases.

Mayor Hans Fischer had told the council last week that the mayors of Quincy and Macomb and possibly Murphysboro had expressed interest in forming a cooperative effort.

Though the matter received the unanimous approval of the council members present, the issue of the city's input into rate opposition strategies concerned the council.

Fischer called the joint venture a "landmark effort," but conceded that the matter of cooperative strategy would be difficult.

"We will be calling on the other cities for guidance and help," he said. "But, input also needs to be provided from citizens from this community and others."

And with a note of optimism, Fischer added, "We may fail, but we are going to try."

City Manager Carroll Fry, however, didn't share Fischer's confidence.

Moral rating meaningless

Editor's note: The following is Rep. Paul Simon's response to a moral rating of zero given him by the Christian Voice. By Rep. Paul Simon 24th District

Various organizations give ratings to members of Congress and members of the state legislature, and frequently the ratings are totally meaningless, taking a few votes out of hundreds or thousands, and judging an entire record on those few votes.

A perfect example of the problem is a rating by "The Christian Voice" on "moral issues".

Their "moral issues" are items like whether a member voted for or against creating a Department of Education, "no" being the morally correct vote according to them. Another example is a constitutional amendment to "prohibit the busing of children to a school other than the one nearest their home." In this case, if you did not vote for this amendment (which would have halted an excellent school program in Carbondale, for example) you are listed as having cast an immoral vote.

My total on their list—out of a possible score of 100—is zero. A Methodist minister in Congress, Rep. Robert Edgar, got eight percent; Rep. John Buchanan of Alabama, a Baptist minister, got only 29 percent; and Rep. Robert Drinan of Massachusetts, a Catholic priest, got a moral rating of zero.

While Rep. Richard Kelly of Florida, the member who has admitted taking $25,000 in the Abscam scandal, got a moral rating of 100 percent.

The people who run the Christian Voice have a right to their opinion on creating a Department of Education, for example. But to say that those who don't agree with them are immoral suggests that they may understand little about both Christianity and politics.

The nearest scriptural base for a "rating" that I can recall is in Matthew 25, the judgment day scene, where Christ lists the questions we will be asked: Did you help the hungry? Did you give water to the thirsty? Did you provide clothes to those needing them? Did you take care of the sick? Did you show concern for those in prison?

Did any of the items which "The Christian Voice" uses as a checklist reflect these concerns which Christ mentioned? Somehow they "improved" on that almost 2,000-year-old list so none of the original concerns were reflected.

I was pleased to receive a statement put out by the national presidents of three Lutheran churches: "It is arrogant to assert that one's position on a political issue is 'Christian' and that all others are 'un-Christian,' 'immoral,' or 'sinful.' There is no 'Christian' position; there are Christians who hold positions... To describe one group's political position as 'The Christian Voice'... is wrongly judgmental. It is also an affront to Jewish and other religious advocates whose religions hold social justice as a social form of love of neighbor."

I respect and understand those who disagree with stands I take. Sometimes I have to struggle within myself before taking a position. But I have little sympathy for those who equate their position with God's position, who in a simplistic and non-scriptural way confuse both theology and politics.

James J. Kilpatrick

The kicking around of John Anderson

WASHINGTON—John Anderson, the wayward congressman, is on the road these days, gathering presidential petitions as he goes. The White House is putting potholes in his path. Politically speaking, not much else is going on. Let us kick the gentleman around.

My brother pundits, Germond & Witcover, pooh-poo the notion that Anderson's candidacy constitutes a threat to the two-party system. After all, they observe, Anderson is not forming a new and permanent third party; he is running as an independent, preaching the gospel of unity and promising the voters only a kind of fusion ticket. He remains, in their view, a Republican in good standing.

I am not so sure of all this. Unless the heavens fall, Ronald Reagan next month will become officially and formally the presidential nominee of the Republican Party. It is hard to understand how a Republican could run against him in November and remain a Republican. It is hard to understand how Anderson could qualify as a card-carrying Republican now. Maybe he is on leave, or taking a sabbatical, or undergoing the pangs of a political change of life.

A party system depends for its very existence upon two imperatives. One is discipline; the other is reward. Granted, in the present disarray of our own two-party system, not much remains of discipline and still less remains of reward. But the principle is sound. Anderson set out to seek the presidency as a Republican; he qualified for federal funds as a Republican. It was not until his primary campaign flopped that he emerged, born again, John Anderson the Independent.

This is all very well, and heaven knows the gentleman has every right to seek the Oval Office by any avenue that might get him there. But it seems to me that, in willfully and deliberately opposing the candidate of his own party, he has left his party as effectively as if he had crossed the aisle of the House and called himself a Democrat. The Republican caucus would be entirely justified if members followed baseball's rule for the recalcitrant player: Throw the bum out.

Questions of party discipline to one side, it may not be amiss to set the record straight on one curious incident in the Anderson record. This is the matter of the "Jesus Amendment." Anderson has grown irritable at its very mention; his staff brushes the matter aside as ancient history of a youthful misjudgment.

These are the facts, for whatever they may be worth. Anderson was elected to the House from the 16th District of Illinois in November, 1960. On June, 1961, he introduced House Joint Resolution 454, proposing an amendment to the Constitution. He was then 39 years old, a graduate of Harvard Law, a former member of the faculty at Northeastern University School of Law.

This was his amendment: "Section 1: This Nation devoutly recognizes the authority and law of Jesus Christ, Saviour and Ruler of nations, through whom are bestowed the blessings of Almighty God. Section 2: This amendment shall not be interpreted so as to result in the establishment of any particular ecclesiastical organization, or in the abridgment of the rights of religious freedom, or freedom of speech and press, or of peaceful assemblage. Section 3: Congress shall have power, in such cases as it may deem proper, to provide a suitable oath or affirmation for citizens whose religious scruples prevent them from giving unqualified allegiance to the Constitution as herein amended."

Well, many of us in the pundit game are embarrassed by things we wrote 15 to 19 years ago. In charity, bygone ordinarily ought to be dismissed as bygone. All the same, the breathtaking impropriety of Anderson's resolution, and his persistence through three Congresses in sponsoring it, merits reflection. The implied cast of mind raises a fair question of Anderson's thinking on fundamental matters. What goes on upstairs?

Develop present energy resources

Imagine this scenario: Revolutionary fervor, similar to what grips Iran, takes root in countries like Saudi Arabia or any one of about a dozen countries of southwest Asia. The Oil Ministers say to the satanic, imperialistic western powers, "No more oil."

What does the United States do now? Rely on strategic oil reserves that have yet to be accumulated? Break out the solar technology that many accuse the oil companies of hiding in the closet? Even if we put a solar collector on every roof in America, we would not be able to make up for the 40 percent of the oil that would be lost in another Arab oil boycott. If the above circumstances happened and DE writers like Dave Powers had their way, our country would have two chances of survival—slim and none.

The days of cheap energy are over, gone and done with. Increased use of coal will be expensive, but so will oil, gas and even solar. If we have a cutoff of oil and we do not develop our domestic supplies of coal, where will all the bleeding heart liberals be when the New Englanders are freezing in their homes?

And what sense does Mr. Powers make about laid-off coal miners actually being heroes because they are helping America wean itself away from its fossil fuel habit? Using that line of reasoning, the out-of-work auto workers in Michigan also should be proud. Try telling that to a miner or an auto worker standing in line to get his unemployment check.

How can a reporter speak about depleting our coal reserves? These are supposed to be educated people. Even though we have the reserves to last hundreds of years, no one is talking about using them that long. If we can't develop alternative energy sources in that length of time, all the solar power in the world can't help us.

The way he throws around numbers is appalling. Even if scrubbed emissions from coal are 300 times more than that of natural gas, the emissions of gas are near zero. Three hundred times near zero is still near zero. Who are these experts that he claims says utility costs may double? They very well may, but with inflation, how much of that rise is directly attributable to a switch to coal?

Mr. Powers, you speak of the good of the nation taking precedent over the interests of a few. By burning coal and making gas from it, acid rain probably will increase. Health problems likely will go up, too. However, the effects on society as a whole will be much more adverse if we do not develop the resources we have for that not-too-distant time when the pumps run dry.

To quote a bumper sticker from the Colorado School of Mines, "Ban Mining: Let the bastards freeze in the dark."—Allen Oertel, Graduate, Geology

Students should be outraged

Where do I sign up for the ALFRED Somit Fan Club? This man is the new messiah of higher education. He's not just another overeducated, pompous administrator with outdated ideas. Being 60, progressive education is right up his alley. I'm sure the students are anxiously anticipating the radical innovations which are in store for them, as opposed to the S.O.S. of past administrations.

Undoubtedly, his experiences back east should give him a much "deeper" understanding of the problems we common midwesterners face.

But then we only go and give him the University House and $63,500 a year. What an insult! We should be ashamed. Better yet, we should be outraged!—Kurt Boyle, Junior, Journalism

Slumping

Not at the plate, but with glass art; student's sculpture goes on display

By Ann Becker
Staff Writer

Over the years glass has become a household staple. It has taken the form of drinking utensils, containers to bake food in and television picture tubes. But more recently, due to a process called "slumping," glass has found its way to the art museums.

Using the "slumping" technique, Linda Elgart, a graduate student in art at SIU-C, has created sculptures from pieces of plate glass for her thesis, currently on display at the North Gallery in the University Museum.

Elgart has used many other art mediums, such as clay, but said she finds working with glass the most satisfying.

"Glass can actually take on any characteristic form, from sharp and transparent to visceral, sensual and soft," she said.

The "slumping" process, she said, involves arranging pieces of cut-plate glass in a kiln and then heating the glass to various degrees to form the sculpture. Sometimes the glass is combined with wood or clay, she added.

"I tend to work with a very simple, geometric format. I think I try to arrange things in a decisive way," Elgart said of her artistic style.

She rarely uses colored glass in her sculptures for the natural color is enough. Heating, she added, already gives the glass a green color due to its iron content.

Elgart said she has always been interested in art. She completed her undergraduate work at Tyler School of Art in her hometown of Philadelphia and hopes to teach glass work upon graduation from SIU-C.

Marketing team finishes third

An SIU-C student marketing team took third place in the fifth annual General Motors Marketing Competition.

The SIU-C team, directed by John Summey, assistant professor of marketing, was awarded a $2,500 check for use in SIU-C educational programs, as well as individual plaques.

Team members were Mark Zweig of Kirkwood, Mo., Phil

Kening of Warrenville, and Nancie Samars of Berwyn.

The marketing team finished behind first-place University of Colorado and runner-up Northwestern University teams.

Teams from 15 universities competed in the contest, held during spring semester, to develop marketing strategies to promote sales of General Motors cars.

'Crime prevention? Not me!' Police find this answer typical

By Lavera McNeese
Student Writer

Police say that apathy has hindered crime prevention efforts in the Carbondale community.

Since the crime prevention program's beginning in 1972, lack of citizen interest and participation has been a problem, a policeman said.

"Citizens are concerned only after being victimized," said Lt. Tom Busch, commander of the Research Planning and Development Division of the Carbondale Police Department. However, Busch said that many crime victims would never be in that position if they had utilized precautionary measures offered by the crime prevention program.

He described one incident indicative of the public's apathy. Last year only 18 people from the Lewis Park Apartments showed up for a program describing security techniques. There are about 1,000 residents.

Last fall there was an increased burglary problem at the complex, Busch said, and the police had received many complaints. The department presented the special program for the residents.

The small group that was present consisted mostly of managerial personnel, he said.

Bob Ledbetter, a police citizens service officer, said, crime prevention is a two-fold effort between the police and the people. The police responsibility is to educate and provide information to the public. It is left to the public to use that information and to determine what kind of security is best for them.

The police cannot check for locked doors each day, he said, but through billboards, newspapers, brochures and lectures, they do offer information on crime prevention.

Ledbetter defined crime prevention as "the anticipation, recognition and appraisal of a crime risk situation and the initiation of some positive action to remove or reduce it."

He said that the recent name change—from the Carbondale Police Crime Prevention Bureau to the Police Citizens Service Bureau—better reflects their function. Their function is not just to prevent crime, but to reduce it, mainly by alleviating opportunity for crime to occur.

With an elimination of opportunity—one of the three components of the "crime triangle"—the crime rate can be decreased, Ledbetter said. The other elements of the triangle are desire and victim.

The recommended dead-bolt locks on doors, burglar alarms and outside lighting are a few devices used to discourage potential criminals and remove the opportunity for a crime to occur, he said.

Joyce Schemonia, a statistical clerk at the SIU security office, said that of the 64 cases, 40 were listed under class two offenses—directed against property. Those cases primarily in lured theft, burglaries from automobiles and criminal damage to vehicles and state property, she said.

During 1979, there were 11 reported cases listed under class one—offenses against the person and 13 under class three—offenses suggesting personal disorganization, said Schemonia.

Crime statistics for Southern Hills also showed an increase in crimes committed during the past four years.

In 1979, a total of 51 reported criminal cases were reported, compared to 31 in 1975, Schemonia said.

Records for last year indicate seven class one cases, 28 class two cases and 16 class three cases reported at Southern Hills.

Lt. Marvin Braswell, a training and public relations officer at the SIU security office, cited the relaxed attitudes of the people as a possible cause for the rate increase at Evergreen Terrace and Southern Hills.

Generally, the residents are apathetic, complacent and feel very secure, he said. As a result, they are more careless.

"Many of the residents are from the Chicago area and think they're getting away from crime now by living in a small town," he said, "but chances are just as great."

Luke Skywalker and Darth Vader battle with lightsabers in "The Empire Strikes Back."

'Empire' episode a quality sequel; allows more character development

By Edward R. Berry
Student Writer

The anticipation builds for possibly the biggest money-making film ever. The impatient crowd huddles together, pushing and shoving each other as they await the opening of the theater doors.

This was the May 21 scene at a Chicago theater when, exactly three years after George Lucas gave science fiction fans "Star Wars," the movie "Empire Strikes Back" was released for public viewing.

"Empire" which is creator George Lucas' fourth chapter in a nine-part series, has one main differentiation from "Star Wars"—the growth of the characters is more fully developed throughout the film.

It is apparent that Lucas intended such growth to occur, but it was director Irvin Kershner ("Film-Flam Man" and "Eyes of Laura Mars") and writer Lawrence Kasden who gave the chapter its final touch.

A Film Review

The personalities of the characters have changed since "Star Wars." C-3PO (Anthony Daniels) turns out to be a persistent nuisance to all and Artoo Detoo (Kenny Baker) shows a sense of humor, even while faced with danger.

Luke Skywalker (Mark Hamill) grows stronger in his quest to be a Jedi-master, while Han Solo (Harrison Ford) and Princess Leia (Carrie Fisher) develop a strange but meaningful relationship.

George Lucas once said that no one character could influence the outcome of his story. The limited presence of Ben "Obi-Wan" Kenobi (Sir Alec Guinness), certainly doesn't influence the story's outcome. Yoda, a hobbit-like creature, is introduced and supplies the needed leadership once exhibited by Kenobi.

Zen-master Yoda was created by the Muppets' Frank Oz and this character not only helps the continuing saga to persist, but also supplies the movie's greatest entertainment.

The real success for both chapters, however, lies in the fact that they provide a totally new genre for filmmaking.

Lucas' method of creating the original ideas for the story and

Court's 'genetic' ruling draws fire

WASHINGTON (AP)—New forms of life created in a scientist's laboratory by "genetic engineering" can be patented, the Supreme Court ruled Monday.

Although the decision concerned only interpretation of federal patent law, it immediately drew condemnation as "a fundamental assault on the sanctity of life itself" from the Washington-based People's Business Commission.

By a 5-4 vote, the court ruled that test-tube life may be included in the federal law allowing patents for someone who "invents or discovers any new or useful process, machine, manufacture or composition of matter."

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger's majority opinion said a living organism can fit the law's definition of "manufacture" or "composition of matter"—thus upholding a ruling by the U.S. Court of Customs and Patent Appeals. "Congress is free to amend the applicable patent law so as to exclude from patent protection organisms produced by genetic engineering," Burger said. "Or it may choose to craft a statute specifically designed for such living things."

"But until Congress takes such action, this court must construe the language of the law as it is. The language of that section fairly embraces living things."

Specifically, the court said the government must approve a patent request made in 1972 by General Electric employee Ananda Chakrabarty for a lab-developed bacterium believed to eat crude oil more quickly and efficiently than natural bacteria.

Chakrabarty, now a professor at the University of Illinois, said he was happy to learn about the court's "positive verdict." He said it would "encourage more industries to go into biological research."

A GE spokesman in Schenectady, N.Y., said the firm was "gratified" by the decision.

But the People's Business Commission denounced the ruling as a dark "turning point in human history."

The PBC, a non-profit education foundation that seeks to raise public awareness about economic and technological issues, had filed a brief in the case.

"Today's decision lays the legal groundwork for corporations to own the process of life in the centuries to come," said PBC director Jeremy Rifkin, author of a book on genetic engineering called "Who Should Play God?" "This decision marks the beginning of the genetic age and gives corporations the green light to begin engineering the gene pool."

'Empire' sequel high quality, offers more character depth gathering special effects experts enable him to make his dream a reality.

Ben Burt, the sound designer and supervising sound effects editor, proves that films can be told by sound effects. It was this expertise which won him an Academy Award for his design of the robot voices in "Star Wars."

One of Burt's biggest sound achievements came when he combined the hum of an old projector at the University of Southern California (Burt's and Lucas' alma mater) and the sputtering of a picture tube, thus producing the light-saber sounds used by the asthmatic Darth Vader and the young star-warrior Skywalker.

Every segment of this film—from the costuming to the building of the world's largest stage (1.25 million square feet), is done to utter perfection.

Each stage compliments the great visual experiences one perceives, including the ice planet called Hoth, Lando's Billy Dee Williams' cloud city (shot out of the nose of a Lear jet /a astro-vision) and the Roger Jean-like settings on the fetid planet of Dago-Bah.

Whether or not Lucas will be able to produce a continuing chapter every three years, depends on the inflation rate of filmmaking, which has continued to skyrocket.

Since "Star Wars" production costs have risen 25 percent each year, bringing the total costs for "Empire" to $22.5 million ($4 million over the budget).

Lucas stands to make (after taxes) a profit of $60 to $125 million for "Empire" although he claims that most of his profit will be used for furthering the quality of sound and visual effects.

Lucas is quoted as saying that the reason for the "Star Wars" story was to offer a better understanding of the world in which we live. Lucas accomplishes this through the use of a fairy tale, just like the Bible teaches moral beliefs through the use of parables.

The "Star Wars" story can be called the "All-American film" where a simple hometown boy grows up and is driven by pure ambition and the preservation of "good over evil." Eventually, it is this drive which enables Skywalker to conquer universal chaos.

Three-week parking ban set

Parking on Douglas Drive in front of the Law School will be banned for about three weeks beginning Thursday, Jack Moore, Physical Plant project engineer, announced Tuesday. Moore said the street will be closed to parking—but not to one-way traffic—because of street widening and other site development as part of the Law School building project.

The parking ban applies to the south side of Douglas Drive in front of Buildings 113 and 114.

Rec Center gets rid of towel fee

By Minetta Wallingford
Student Writer

In an effort to save money the Recreation Center has eliminated the job of towel room attendant and the $5 towel fee for locker renters on a trial basis.

Mike Dunn, Recreation Center coordinator, said the system should eliminate towel theft and cut back on the towel room attendant cost, which was estimated by Dunn to be $36,000 a year.

Dunn said the previous system was being abused. Towels were being stolen and two or three people would share one locker and towel and take advantage of the laundering service, he said.

Dunn estimated that one out of every three lockers is shared. He said that people would take the towels home and use them for things like washing their cars and have the towels laundered at everyone else's expense.

Locker renters used to receive a towel for a $5 fee when they rented their locker, and could exchange it for a clean one at any time. The towel fee is now 10 cents each and towels are being checked out at the equipment desk.

Dunn said the new system will be evaluated by July 24.

"If it's not working, we'll go back to the old policy. At least we will have attempted to save some money," Dunn said. "We're trying to continue to offer services but not at the students' expense."

The policy change was well received by the Recreation Center Advisory Board, Dunn said. He said he had only 15 or 20 complaints about the change from faculty, students and other users of the Recreation Center.

Dunn said the center is trying to save in other areas. By August 15, computer turnstiles are to be installed to check IDs and use cards, Dunn said.

Five men are charged for tipping car, bottle

By Tony Gordon
Staff Writer

Five local men are facing a total of 14 charges after being arrested for allegedly pushing a Volkswagen over on its side Sunday in the 100 block of South Washington Street.

Carbondale police arrested William T. Blake, 19, of McLeansboro, and Tim Easton, 19, Joseph Rains, 18, and Matthew Rains, 20, all of Murphysboro, and charged them with criminal damage to property. Police said the car is owned by an SIU-C student but ownership had not been verified.

The police also charged Blake, Easton, and both Rainses with underage acceptance of alcohol in connection with the incident.

Another member of the group, Lennie Howard, 21, of Jacob, was charged by police with aggravated battery after a fight at the police station that occurred as the group was being brought in. Easton was also charged with aggravated battery, resisting arrest, escape and criminal damage to property when he broke the glass in the police station door during the fight.

Easton was taken by police to the Jackson County jail, and the others posted bond.

Carbondale police also arrested two men for burglary Sunday at Smith's Dodge, 1412 W. Main, Mark A. Babitz, 21, of 805 W. Freeman, Carbondale, and Danny L. Lind, 31, no known address, were arrested by police answering a silent bugler alarm at the auto dealership.

Variety show to star flowers

Award-winning new flower varieties due for release in 1981 will be shown at a Horticulture Open House June 29.

All-America Award winning varieties of celosia and impatiens will be among the hundreds of plants in the Plant and Soil Science Department's official All-America Display Garden, said Robert Holmes, superintendent.

Among other winners on display will be a marigold, an ornamental pepper, a zinnia and a verbena, Holmes said. The show annually attracts throngs of home gardeners and professionals.

All-America Award flowers are tested in 58 selection trials in the United States and Canada each year. Each new winner has surpassed the performance of previously top-rated flowers in side-by-side comparisons.

The Horticulture Research Center, site of the open house, is on Rowden Road between Chataqua Street and Reservoir Road west of the main campus. Because of road repairs and construction the public is advised to enter the open house from Reservoir Road south of the center.

By Colleen Moore
Staff Writer

Timothy J. Lyons, a specialist in cinema history, has been named the new head of the Cinema and Photography Department effective July 16.

Lyons, 35, will replace C. William Horrell, who has been acting chairperson since Peter Bukalski resigned as head of the department last year.

Lyons, who has been a professor in the Radio-TV Department at the University of Houston since 1979, said he has no definite plans for improvements until he meets the faculty and examines the department, but hopes to make the department the best in the nation.

Before teaching at the University of Houston, he was an instructor and professor in Temple University's Department of Radio-TV-Film. He headed the department from 1976 to 1978.

Lyons, who is editor of the Journal of the University Film Association, an international periodical dealing with cinema, will publish the journal at SIU. The journal was formerly published at the University of Houston.

Lyons said the journal, which is issued quarterly, has about 800 members and 400 non-members.

The membership office is already in Carbondale. Charles Harpole, a professor in Cinema and Photography Department, is chairman of the office.

Lyons received his B.A. and M.A. degrees in dramatic art from the University of California at Santa Barbara and was awarded a Ph.D. in speech and dramatic art from the University of Iowa in 1972.

Lyons is married and has twin daughters.

Jackson elected by Democrats

By Andrew Zinner Staff Writer

John Jackson, professor of political science, has been elected to the Illinois Democratic Party rules committee. The committee makes rules for the nominating convention and also approves or amends existing guidelines under which the national party operates.

Jackson, a President Carter backer who served as an alternate delegate in 1976, said the major task for his committee is to negotiate the challenge being presented by Edward Kennedy. The Massachusetts senator remains an active candidate for the Democratic nomination and will demand concessions from the rules committee, Jackson explained.

"Kennedy would like to throw out the current rule binding delegates to their choice for the nomination; he would like to see all delegates go to the convention uncommitted," Jackson pointed out. "I don't think the rule will be overturned, but it will cause debate and fireworks."

Jackson maintained that since 35,000 voters elected him to vote for and support Carter, he has no right to change his allegiance. He said he favors the current rule of having delegates committed to their nominee.

He said another rule likely to spark debate at the committee meeting, which is scheduled for July in Washington, D.C., is one mandating that 50 percent of the national delegation consist of females. "The problem with such a rule is deciding where to draw the line," Jackson said.

The major factor which aided Jackson in being chosen as one of the 150 rules committee members was his background as a political scientist, he reasoned. He has been studying delegate selection and the impact of rules on the party since 1972.

"My research activities have enabled me to make contacts within the national committee. Some of my findings have been used in party reports as well," he explained. He added that being a Carter delegate helped, too.

Jackson is one of eight Illinois delegates to be selected to the committee, and the only one from Southern Illinois. William Daley, son of the late Chicago mayor, and former Lt. Gov. Neil Hartigan are among the eight, as well as three female party activists from Chicago.

According to Jackson, the post will provide him a good opportunity to see the workings of the party from the inside rather than observing as an outsider, as he has done in the past. In order to be considered for the committee, Jackson said he had to file an official letter to party leaders informing them of his desire. He said there about 450 committee appointments for the total of 3,100 delegates across the nation.

"This is a unique opportunity for a political scientist and I hope the added knowledge I receive can be beneficial to my students," Jackson emphasized.

Hartzog, Lee prepared for U.S. Olympic Trials

By Paul Rebs
Staff Writer

Seventeen years of SIU track Coach Lew Hartzog's work will be on display this weekend when the U.S. Olympic Trials get under way in Eugene, Ore.

The trials are being held despite the planned U.S. boycott of next month's Olympics in Moscow.

One present Hartzog athlete, 400-meter intermediate hurdler David Lee will be joined in Eugene by former Salukis Bob Roggy (javelin), Gary Hunter and Tim Johnson (pole vault), Stan Podolski (hammer throw), Andy Roberts (high hurdles), Terry Erickson (400-meter dash) and George Woods (shot put).

The top three finishers in each event will be named to the Olympic team, providing their performances meet Olympic standards.

It is Lee, however, that Hartzog will be watching most closely this weekend. Lee has made the 400-IM Olympic standard several times this year. During the course of the outdoor track season, the University City, Mo., native has been beaten in his specialty only once, losing to Indiana University's Nate Lundy April 5 in a triangular meet with Indiana and Wisconsin at Bloomington, Ind. Lee avenged that loss two weeks ago by defeating Lundy in the preliminary heat of the NCAA championships.

The week before the NCAA meet, Lee ran among top competitors to win at the USATFA meet in Wichita, Kan. The week after the NCAA's he competed in and won yet another major meet, the Athletics Congress Outdoor Championships in Walnut, Calif.

While one might think the mental and physical strain placed on Lee over the last three weeks might wear him down for the climactic Olympic trials, Hartzog says he feels as if all the work has actually done the SIU junior a world of good.

"David needed these last few weeks of intense competition to be able to gain a bit of confidence," Hartzog said. "He wasn't sure going into the USATFA meet whether or not he was good enough to compete with the best hurdlers in the country. But after he won that meet, and then the NCAA's and AAU's (former title of the Athletics Congress meet), he was sure that he could not only run with, but beat the best.

"The best example of the confidence that David has shown so far was at the AAU's," Hartzog continued. "Going into the final turn, he was still behind James King, who had beaten (two-time NCAA champ James) Walker in the semifinals. But David found the strength to overcome the lead and win the race."

When asked whether Lee would have any trouble getting mentally ready for competition again this weekend, Hartzog said there is no such thing as an athlete "peaking", or becoming emotionally high too often.

"Preparation is the main concern of the athlete," he said. "If a competitor has been training correctly before a meet, that preparation should pay off and show in the athlete's performance."

"Anyone who worries about 'peaking' is either unprepared or uninformed."

Hartzog has a feeling that the man who would present the biggest challenge for Lee this weekend may not even show up.

"I would really be surprised if (world record holder Edwin) Moses runs at the meet," said the man who has coached seven NCAA champions at SIU. "He made a statement last week that he wouldn't go for the Olympic team because of the boycott, and probably won't compete again until the 1981 World Games."

Besides Moses, Hartzog believes Walker and 1976 Olympic silver medalist Mike Shine are going to give Lee the most trouble.

"Walker and Shine are the only two great ones he hasn't had the chance to run against yet," he said.

On the merits of his performances over the past season, Lee will be competing on a foreign tour after the Olympic trials. "We haven't decided exactly what meets David will enter yet, but he will have the chance to do a little traveling this summer," said Hartzog.

Lee and Hartzog will leave for Oregon Thursday, and Lee will see his first competition on Friday afternoon.

Olympians upset NBA stars

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Members of the U.S. Olympic basketball team would rather be playing the Soviet Union or Yugoslavia, but they agree it's more profitable to be going against the National Basketball Association All-Stars.

"It is out of my control whether we go to Moscow or not," said Coach Dave Gavitt after his young, college-oriented Olympians beat the NBA stars 97-84 Monday night before 2,611 fans at the Forum. The game was the first of five exhibitions being staged in various sites around the nation.

"We're proud to wear 'USA' on our shirts," Gavitt said. "This is a nice chance to prove we are a good team."

The United States is boycotting the Olympics in Moscow, protesting Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan. There will be no chance to defend the gold medal won in 1976 by the American basketball team at Montreal.

Danny Vranes, who will be a senior at Uta; next fall, said: "Our dream is to be in the pros.

The feeling is different than the Olympic goal. The spirit of the Olympics can't compare to playing with these NBA guys...it means more to us. Our goal is to show we can play in the NBA."

Mark Aguirre of DePaul, whose 15 points for the Olympians were second only to the 18 by LaSalle's Michael Brooks, said: "I like this type of basketball, but I would love to play the Russians anyway, anywhere, anytime...in a playground, in Red Square. I'd even let them call the shots!"

The Olympians built a 46-36 half-time lead, increased it to a 15-point margin and were tied 65-65 and 67-67 before pulling out to win.

San Antonio's George Gervin led the pros with 16 points. Kermit Washington of Portland scored 15 and John Lucas of Golden State added 14.

The next outing will be Wednesday in Phoenix against a different group of All-Stars.

On Friday the game will be in Seattle, on Sunday in New York and on Monday in Indianapolis.

Camp stresses fundamentals

SIU baseball Coach Itchy Jones' summer baseball camp looks like a cross section between a large open-air classroom and a movie lot. Jones is both teacher and director to more than 125 young ballplayers attending the week-long camp.

As teacher, Jones explains his theories behind hitting, stressing fundamentals over and over. As director, Jones shouts cues like "pivot your back foot" and "don't lunge, hit through that ball," all while running a video camera to capture each camper's movements. The Saluki coach even has a director's chair.

"Using the video camera gives every camper a chance to see themselves in action which they may never have done before," Jones said. "The video system has helped many of our players break bad habits and see where improvements can be made."

"Then we play the tapes back for the kids at night on television so our staff can go over each point with every camper, freezing a particular frame or running it in slow motion."

The video system is only one learning tool in Jones' classroom. Set up in various places around Abe Martin Field are hitting tees. Adjustable rubber hoses which hold baseballs at various heights give batters practice hitting pitches in certain areas of the strike zone.

Jones said the tees will not only benefit the campers, but Saluki ballplayers next season. "Hitting off the tee strengthens a hitter's ability to know what kind of ball he can and can not hit near the plate," he said. "It's also another thing to keep players busy."

Besides the video unit and hitting tees, the camp utilizes two electric pitching machines, two batting cages and six coaches from both the collegiate and high school level. A series of games highlights the camp toward the end of the week.

Jones said most of the players are from the immediate area, but many come from as far away as Chicago and Ohio.

"We're starting to get them from more and more places," Jones said. "The camp has a good reputation, and kids are traveling further every year."

Jones said some former Saluki stars participated in his camp before coming to school at SIU. "Three excellent players that come to mind are Kevin Waldrop, Rick Keaton and Bob Schrock," he said. "Keaton pitches for the Brewers in the big leagues and Schrock just signed for a big bonus with the Brewers."

The campers stay at the Baptist Student Center and in rented apartments at Lewis Park. Jones said activities other than baseball are included in the program for the campers to enjoy.

"They can swim down here and use any of the other facilities," he said.

Kingman put on disabled list

Five boxing bouts set for Saturday

A five-bout boxing card is slated for 8 p.m. Saturday at the Southside Gym in Herrin. It will be an opportunity for boxing fans in Southern Illinois to see the area's best young boxers. It was reported in Tuesday's DE that the bouts were on Friday.

CHICAGO (AP) — Dave Kingman, who led the major leagues in home runs last year with 46, Tuesday was placed on the 15-day disabled list by the Chicago Cubs because of a recurring shoulder injury.

Kingman goes onto the disabled list effective June 12 because the last time he played was June 11 in Houston.

He originally injured the shoulder May 17 against San Diego. He had been in and out of the lineup and on the 17th in Houston he twice threw out baserunners and in doing so apparently aggravated the injury in his right shoulder.

Kingman had appeared in 42 games and had a .298 batting average with 10 home runs.
