Adlai: Thompson 'weak' on ERA

Adlai Stevenson III, gubernatorial candidate at S.I. Airport.

By Bob Delaney
Staff Writer

Gubernatorial candidate Adlai Stevenson III Thursday criticized Gov. James R. Thompson for not delivering on the ERA in Illinois, saying that Thompson showed his "weakness and indecision" in his inability to get action out of the Legislature.

During an afternoon press conference at Southern Illinois Airport, Stevenson also said that ERA had not passed in Illinois because "roadblocks had been thrown up by the speaker of the house — Mr. (George) Ryan."

Stevenson said the ratification process should be started over and that "mistakes would not be made the second time around."

"The next time around I don't expect fear," he said. "It will be more of a rational appeal."

Stevenson also called for a cooperative effort among government, industries and universities that would return lost business to Illinois and involve the state in the international marketplace.

He said that Illinois not only was losing business to markets in the South and West, but was "sinking faster than any of the Great Lake states."

Included in his plans for 'The next time around (for ERA), it will be more of a rational appeal' improving the economy, which he said have not been finalized yet, are development of Illinois' coal industry, modernization of the state's banking system by switching from the present currency exchange system to an electronic one, and creation of a trading company that would "barter on world markets."

While Stevenson said it is only an outline of his strategy for revitalizing the economy in Illinois, he promised to spell out the entire plan by Labor Day.

In order to make Illinois into the "coal center of the world," Stevenson called for building coal conversion facilities, planning demonstrations that would help market coal and developing feasible methods for utilities to burn coal cleanly.

Stevenson also said that universities should be preparing students for a modern market where unskilled labor was no longer needed.

While saying he would not join Thompson in "throwing mud," Stevenson did criticize the governor for not having an economic plan of his own.

Illinois "should be one of the richest states in the country, but its record in the past five years has been the worst," he said, and added later that Thompson "cannot avoid responsibility for the government."

Stevenson said the state is "stagnant." "We're not moving," he said. "Nothing's happening."

House OKs fiscal 1983 SIU budget

By Steve Metcalf
Staff Writer

A $18.7 million 1983 budget for the SIU system was passed by the Illinois House Thursday and sent to Gov. Thompson. The budget is $2.4 million over Thompson's proposed budget and includes a 4 percent salary increase for faculty and staff effective Jan. 1, 1983.

The House passed the operating appropriations bill 129-18 with 20 members voting present. The Senate approved the budget earlier this month.

The budget is about $10 million less than the Illinois Board of Higher Education's proposal. About $109 million is planned for SIU-C.

It's now up to Thompson to either approve, veto or reduce the budget.

"He could veto it and send it back to the House, but I don't think he'll do that," said John Baker, President Albert Somit's special assistant for budgeting and planning.

Thompson's option to an absolute veto is the authority to make several "line item reduction vetoes," said Baker. This allows Thompson to reduce or veto any budget item he opposes. The budget would then be sent back to the General Assembly, which could override Thompson's line-item vetoes. SIU Chancellor Kenneth Shaw was unavailable for comment Thursday, but said earlier this week that indications are that the governor won't find much wrong with the fiscal 1983 budget with the salary increase, because it won't cost the state any additional money.

Shaw said this was accomplished when the Senate appropriated money from the State University Retirement Fund for the salary hike.

The state, which previously contributed 70 percent of the gross payout for retirees, would pay 62½ percent, with the difference going toward the salary hike. Additional funding would come from state retirement system investments, Baker said.

Shaw also said Monday that SIU would scale down its proposed 12.5 percent salary hike to 9.5 percent for fiscal 1984, should the 4 percent increase be approved by the Legislature and governor. He called Thompson "the big variable," and added that "it's too early to tell what he will do."

Baker said that although he didn't have a copy of the House-approved budget, he doubted the House made any major amendments to the Senate's version.

"To my understanding, it hasn't been changed since it left the Senate. The only way it could be amended would be on the floor, and that is highly unusual," Baker said.

Baker said that it's doubtful Thompson would approve or veto the budget before July 1, the start of fiscal year 1983, but added that the university will not be forced to close its doors.

The Board of Trustees, at its meeting earlier this month, passed a resolution calling for SIU to limit its spending to equal or less than the fiscal 1982 budget, which will enable it to stay open.

Chicago to be site of 1992 world's fair

CHICAGO (AP) — Elated officials began laying plans Thursday to spend $700 million for a 1992 world's fair in Chicago after the Bureau of International Expositions voted to provisionally give the city the date for the fair.

"We start today," said Mayor Jane Byrne. "There's a lot of work to be done."

The General Assembly of the 35-nation BIE also voted in Paris to award provisional date reservations for world fairs to Paris for 1989 and Seville, Spain, for 1992.

A final decision on awarding "registered dates" to any of the cities will be made at the next General Assembly meeting, probably in November and December. Chicago and Seville cannot both get the award for the 1992 fair.

A spokesman for the Chicago World's Fair 1992 Corp., which is handling the Chicago effort, said his group has been discussing with Spanish officials "the possibility of a concurrent celebration" which would place the main fair in Chicago.

"I'm not sure Spain wants a world fair," said the spokesman, Tim Schulte. "I think they want some kind of celebration."

Chicago and Seville both want to celebrate the 500th anniversary of Christopher Columbus' discovery of America in 1492. Paris wants to mark the 200th anniversary of the 1789 French Revolution.

Chicago and Paris had been competing for two years for an award under a BIE rule requiring world's fairs be spaced at least a decade apart.

Five of Hinckley jurors call for change in insanity law

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five of the 12 jurors in the John W. Hinckley Jr. trial called Thursday for changes in criminal law that would allow defendants like President Reagan's assailant to be found insane but still be punished for their crimes.

"They should be made to be made to pay for their crimes," said juror Nathalia Brown, 30.

Hinckley, she said, "should have been guilty by reason of insanity."

Another juror, Maryland Copelin, 50, said, "If a person is guilty of a crime and is mentally ill, they should be treated for that illness ... then get punished for the crime."

In a highly unusual appearance, the five jurors testified before the Senate Judiciary subcommittee on criminal law. The panel is considering changes in the federal law on insanity pleas under which Hinckley was found not guilty by reason of insanity.

Also testifying were Lawrence Coffey, the jury foreman, Woodrow Johnson and Glynis Lassiter. All the jurors live in Washington.

The five jurors expressed frustration with the only two choices given them during 3½ days of intensive deliberations: either guilty or not guilty by reason of insanity.

Because the choice spelled out by U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker and the law was so narrow, Mrs. Copelin said, "We couldn't do any better than we did."

Even if Reagan had died in the March 30, 1981, attack, the verdict would still have been not guilty, the jurors said.

Miss Brown said when the deliberations began, she believed Hinckley should be found guilty because "he knew what was going on" during the shooting attack on Reagan and three other men outside a Washington hotel.

But in the end, Miss Brown said she violated her own conscience and went along with the unanimous acquittal verdict.

Hinckley is undergoing examination at a federal mental hospital in Washington and will be eligible for a hearing to determine if he is eligible for release in a little under two months. However, his lawyers and parents have said they will make no effort to have him freed until it is certain he is no danger to himself or anyone else.

News Roundup

Israel continues assault on Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israel's jets and gunboats launched fierce attacks on guerrilla-held west Beirut Thursday and its tanks battled to the northern reaches of the airport. A seaborne evacuation of Americans and others was under way.

Israeli warplanes downed two Syrian MiGs in fierce combat on the Beirut-Damascus highway 15 miles east of the capital, and the Tel Aviv command accused the Syrians of re-introducing surface-to-air missiles into the Lebanese war zone.

About 1,000 Americans, Britons and other Europeans began leaving the war-ravaged country by ship as dozens of Israeli tanks and armored personnel carriers rumbled from south of the closed airport into new positions above the main runway, their guns trained on Palestinian refugee camps.

Reagan vetoes funds for housing

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan on Thursday vetoed as "more red-ink spending" an emergency bill that included $3 billion to help lower- and middle-income Americans buy new homes. The House tried to override the president, but fell 17 votes short of the necessary two-thirds margin.

The Democratic-run House then set hurriedly to work on a new money bill eliminating the mortgage assistance plan. The bill is needed to provide funds to keep several key government programs from grinding to a halt.

Nixon declared immune from lawsuit

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a case dating back to the stormy White House years of Richard M. Nixon, the Supreme Court ruled Thursday that presidents cannot be forced to pay individual damages for violating the rights of Americans.

The court, in a 5-4 decision, said for the first time ever that current and former presidents enjoy "absolute immunity" from lawsuits seeking monetary damages for misconduct in office.

The case stemmed from Nixon's alleged illegal firing of civilian Air Force worker A. Ernest Fitzgerald, who disclosed to Congress in 1968 that the C-3A military transport plane could cost $2 billion over official estimates.

Democrats begin to look to 1984

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Former Vice President Walter F. Mondale, declaring Thursday that "a lot of people are hurting," led a phalanx of would-be presidents to a Democratic Party conference stressing opposition to President Reagan's economic policies.

In a campaign-style morning that included a session with black politicians, a visit to an automotive parts factory and a meeting with unemployed autoworkers, Mondale flayed Reagan's economic program and declared, "You can tell just by looking at their eyes that a lot of people are hurting."

Expressing a renewed commitment to the Equal Rights Amendment, now doomed to expire without ratification on June 30, Sen. Paul Tsongas told a women's caucus that the proposal would be reintroduced in the House and Senate on July 14. "It's time for a little hardball on this issue," said Tsongas, D-Mass.

The rhetorical jabs were warm-ups for Friday's opening of a three-day party conference mid-way between presidential elections.

Mondale will be joined by a handful of other prominent Democrats eyeing the White House — Sens. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, Alan Cranston of California, Gary Hart of Colorado, John Glenn of Ohio and Ernest Hollings of South Carolina — as well as about 900 party delegates.

For each of the would-be presidents, the three-day conference was an opportunity to try and impress party leaders and the rank and file in private meetings and to address the conference before television cameras — steps they all hope will lead to their nomination for president.

Kennedy, for example, scheduled two sessions in four days with Democrats from Iowa, the state that will select the first delegates to the 1984 party convention, as well as a private meeting with New Hampshire Gov. Hugh Gallen, whose state will hold the first presidential primary in two years.

"We Democrats have no illusions about the dimensions of these (economic) challenges," read the draft of one of a series of statements the conference is expected to adopt on Sunday.

"But we reject the notion that America's economy has entered a twilight of decline."

ERA supporters forming own party in the 59th District

By Bob Delaney
Staff Writer

Supporters of the Equal Rights Amendment are laying plans for a third party in the 59th Legislative District, where a recent Harris Poll showed a majority of residents favor the proposed amendment.

Citizens for Equality, a committee searching for possible candidates, hopes to narrow its list at a meeting next week and to announce its candidates by June 30. Members of the group say incumbent legislators do not favor the ERA and have lost touch with the district, which contains Franklin, Williamson, Saline, Gallatin, White, Hardin, Pope, Massac, Johnson, Pulaski, Alexander and Union counties.

The committee also will soon decide on party structure, campaign strategy and financing, according to Bradley Skelcher, Marion, co-chairperson of the committee.

Other members of the committee include Brenda Latham, Eldorado, co-chairperson; Clara Beth Reinhardt, Cambria; John Bogert, Cairo; Marilyn Eaton, Thompsonville; Bill Mitchell, Benton; David Morgan, Johnston City; Barbara Wingo, Rosiclaire; and Carol Peel, Carmi.

Presently, plans are to run a candidate only for the Senate seat from the district, but Skelcher said it would be decided soon whether candidates also will be selected to run for the House.

A third party candidate for the Senate seat would oppose incumbent Sen. Gene Johns, D-Marion, and Rep. C.L. McCormick, R-Vienna, both ERA opponents.

According to the Harris survey, 52 percent who responded to the poll from the 59th District favored the ERA.

John Martin, McCormick's campaign manager, said however that "we can't find any support for ERA in the district" and that a third party effort based on ERA would get only 20 percent of the vote.

McCormick said he saw nothing wrong with anyone running on an independent ticket but he didn't consider the people of the district to be "one issue people."

Skelcher said ERA was the issue and that it was "worth forming a third party for."

He said Johns and McCormick would diminish each other's chances because "they both oppose ERA. We're for it."

France, Russia together in space

MOSCOW (AP) — French astronaut Jean-Loup Chretien became the first Western European to fly in space Thursday when he rode into orbit with a Soviet crew aboard a Soyuz T-6 spacecraft.

Chretien and cosmonauts Vladimir Dzhanibekov and Alexander Ivanchenkov plan to rendezvous Friday with the Salut-7 orbiting space station, where two other Soviet cosmonauts have been living since May 13.

The international launch was the 10th in the "Interkosmos" series, in which the Soviets have been joined by foreign pilots on space voyages. All of the previous missions have involved pilots from other communist nations.

The launch was the second that Soviet authorities have televised live in the 20 years of manned space exploration from the Soviet Union. The first was the Apollo-Soyuz mission in 1975, in which American and Soviet space capsules docked in orbit.

The launch telecast, which occurred in prime-time evening hours in both France and the Soviet Union, included a measure of political rhetoric in addition to the sight of the fiery rocket blasting off into a dark evening sky from the cosmodrome at Baikonur.

The telecast showed Chretien arriving at the launch site, blowing a kiss at the assembled Soviet and French technicians. Just before the launch, viewers saw mission commander Dzhanibekov, inside the spacecraft, deliver a brief speech in which he said he was certain the flight "will serve the future development of the science and technology of our two countries and strengthen the friendship between the Soviet and the French peoples."

The broadcast from inside the capsule broke off at the instant of lift-off and resumed several seconds later, focusing on the Frenchman. Chretien could be seen sitting pressed against his seat, and moving his right hand slightly as if to wave.

Chretien, 43, a test pilot and father of four, trained with the Soviets for 21 months prior to his flight. During his week in space, he and his Soviet colleagues will perform a series of experiments designed by French scientists for the flight.

Senate delivers final blow to ERA

SPRINGFIELD AP — Without debate, the Illinois Senate on Thursday dealt the Equal Rights Amendment another blow, refusing to call the proposed sex discrimination ban out of committee.

"I don't like to see it go out with a whimper like that," said Sen. Dawn Clark Netsch, D-Chicago, a chief ERA strategist.

Earlier in the day, the National Organization for Women admitted that the decade-long struggle to ratify the federal constitutional amendment was lost.

Sen. James Taylor, D-

Chicago, the rights amendment's sponsor, fell one vote shy of the 30 needed to resurrect the ERA from a Senate committee where it has languished for over a year. Twenty-seven senators voted against the effort.

Absent from the roll call was Democratic Senate President Philip Rock of Oak Park, an ERA supporter who is his party's state chairman.

Rock declined to say why he did not vote on Taylor's move. But Taylor told reporters Rock had told him earlier: "Today's not the day."

Even though the vote was on Taylor's effort to pull the anti-sex discrimination proposal from a committee, senators said the vote clearly was on the ERA itself.

"That was the purest vote you can get on it," said Sen. Aldo DeAngelis, a Republican from Chicago Heights, who voted for the move."

"I think everyone recognized that, given the status of the House which defeated the ERA on Tuesday, there was no way ERA was going to get out of both houses. In that sense, this vote was, I suppose, meaningless," said Mrs. Netsch.

Hinckley verdict was travesty of justice

Something is wrong in the justice system. The verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity in the case of John W. Hinckley Jr. raises many questions about the validity of insanity pleas. It also leaves a bad taste in the mouths of many.

On March 30, 1981, millions of Americans saw Hinckley drop into a crouch position, point a handgun at President Reagan and fire six exploding bullets into a crowd. When the confusion cleared, four people lay injured on the ground. There was never any doubt that Hinckley did it.

Though the attack was witnessed by millions of Americans, who watched stunned as the television networks replayed the shooting countless times, the question of his guilt in committing violence never entered into the trial. Hinckley was tried on whether or not he "lacked substantial capacity to appreciate the wrongfulness of the act."

Hinckley, who comes from a well-to-do Colorado oil family, received nothing but the most expensive and top-notch legal assistance. Defense attorney Vincent J. Fuller, who has been called an "up-and-coming courtroom superstar" summed up the outcome when he remarked, "another day, another dollar." Fuller's "another dollar" reportedly was $500,000 that Hinckley's parents invested in their son's defense.

Would Hinckley have received the same treatment if he had been a poor black from Montgomery, Ala., instead of a rich white from Evergreen, Colo.? Most probably not. The Hinckley case reeks of the injustice that allows those who are rich and influential to escape the penalty of the law while such "criminals" as elderly women on welfare are prosecuted and sent to jail for cheating on their benefits.

Equally disturbing was the role of psychiatrists in this travesty. The differing opinions of prosecution and defense "experts" said less about the mental state of Hinckley than about how little science there is in psychiatry.

SIU-C law professor Robert Dreher wisely observed that while the insanity defense creates a worrisome dilemma, it is a safeguard from the power of government that could otherwise jail a person on grounds that the person might be dangerous.

However, Hinckley had demonstrated beyond any reasonable doubt that he was capable — whatever delusions he may have about life as a movie — of long-range, calculated, planning and action to kill people. In short, a criminal. He's also, probably, one of the best actors who never appeared on the legitimate stage or screen.

Illinois and other states have adopted the plea of guilty but mentally ill, which, if adopted universally, would prevent felons like Hinckley from escaping the consequences of their acts on legal technicalities.

Congress should take a lesson from the case of John W. Hinckley Jr., and straighten out laws under which money can buy freedom for those who have broken the law. They should start immediately enacting legislation to prevent a ludicrous situation like this from creating any more travesties of justice.

Convention center not necessary

The Carbondale City Council voted Monday to appeal the court's decision that its tactics in obtaining land for the proposed convention site were unconstitutional. The council's move to appeal a sound decision will undoubtedly delay for many more months the demolition of existing structures and the actual construction of the center. This decision will also prolong the period of time that we must all put up with the great void which already exists along Illinois Avenue.

The City Council is already responsible for allowing the downtown area to become a shambles by permitting so many bars to exist in such a concentrated area, as well as by pursuing the idea of a convention center in the first place. They are now compounding the damage by recklessly chasing after this pipe dream, which even if realized, will leave this community with nothing more than a white elephant.

The city, as a whole, has been improving tremendously in the four years I have lived here, but there is much more that needs to be done. True, the idea for a convention center, as needless as it is, would cause great change and that's exciting and ambitious, but so it depressing the railroad tracks, building overpasses and cracking down on landlords who don't follow the city's housing code ordinances and create headaches for tenants and eyesores for the rest of us.

As a small business owner, an SIU-C student and a Carbondale community member, I feel I speak for many when I express my regrets at the council's decision.

The City Council should recognize its mistake, untangle the mess and concentrate its energies on the projects that will truly benefit the residents of the City of Carbondale. — Mike Nadelksi, Senior, Speech Communication.

The Exclusionary Rule fog: Supreme Court sheds new light

WASHINGTON—One of the maxims of law is to this effect, that often it is more important that the law be settled than that the law be settled perfectly. The Supreme Court followed this rule a couple of weeks ago when it undertook to stabilize a shaky area of the law having to do with searches of automobiles.

James J. Kilpatrick

that neither of the two containers should have been opened without a warrant.

One effect of the decision is to vest more power in police officers than officers have had before. A second effect is to dispel some of the "exclusionary" fog in which trial judges have had to navigate in recent years. The case is important to every person who drives a car, which is to say, the case is important to just about all of us.

These were the facts. In November 1978, a reliable informant tipped off the District of Columbia police that a suspected drug dealer, Albert Ross Jr., was selling heroin from his car on a certain street in Washington. Police promptly located the car, stopped the driver and searched the vehicle. In the trunk they found a "lunch-type" paper bag and zippered red leather pouch. Without obtaining a warrant, police opened the bag; it contained heroin. They opened the pouch; it contained $3,200 in currency.

Before the trial for possession of heroin, the defendant Ross contended that the evidence had been obtained in violation of his Fourth Amendment rights. He moved that it be excluded. The trial court denied the motion. The appeals court at first held that the warrantless search of the paper bag was valid, but the search of the leather pouch was not. Then the court, on rehearing, ruled that neither of the two containers should have been opened without a warrant.

The government appealed to the Supreme Court. On June 1, in a landmark decision by Justice Stevens, the county overruled a string of prior decisions and laid down new rules. Henceforth — or at least until the court changes its mind again — these guidelines will control the admissibility of such evidence:

If the police, having stopped an automobile, have probable cause to believe that a container within the vehicle contains contraband material, the police need not obtain a warrant. They may open the container on the spot. The determination of probable cause must be based upon the kind of objective facts that could justify the issuance of a warrant by a magistrate. The new rule is to apply equally to all containers — to the poor man's paper bag and to the rich man's attache case. The scope of a search must be limited to the object sought; if police are looking for a stolen lawnmower, they cannot open a shoebox on the back seat. Having said all this, the court remanded the Ross case for trial.

Three justices dissented. Justice Marshall, joined in full by Justice Brennan and joined in part by Justice White, spoke with unusual vehemence. The majority opinion, he said, shows contempt for Fourth Amendment values, ignores precedents, is internally inconsistent and produces unjust consequences. The new rules are completely incompatible with Fourth Amendment standards. The majority "utterly disregards the value of a neutral and detached magistrate."

In Justice Marshall's view, no serious obstacle prevented the police from taking the unopened containers before a magistrate. Ross was in custody. The supposed evidence could not have been spirited away. The police needed only to convince a magistrate that a warrant should issue in order to have made certain that the evidence would not be excluded. Yes, Marshall agreed, the new rules would contribute to "efficiency," but efficiency can never be substituted for due process of law. In an acerbic footnote he inquired, "Is not a dictatorship the most 'efficient' form of government?"

For my own part, I believe the dissenters were right and the majority wrong. The Fourth Amendment's protection against unreasonable searches dates from Magna Carta; it is arguably the most precious of all rights embraced in the Bill of Rights. It strikes me as risky to authorize the police, on their own, to determine probable cause in cases such as these. At the same time, the new rules will prevent some of the nitpicking, hair-splitting, legalistic technicalities that have permitted guilty men to go free. That much is net gain. For the rest, we will have to see how the police use the new power they have just acquired.

Bookstore closing necessary to complete annual inventory

By Dean Kirk
Staff Writer

Bad business? Maybe, but according to assistant manager Mona Glenn, the University Book Store will remain closed from June 24 to June 28 for its annual inventory.

Glenn said the store must remain closed during inventory because it's difficult to count merchandise and sell it at the same time. She also said that an inventory must be done once during SIU-C's fiscal year which ends June 30.

Glenn said that during this time the number of units of items, such as books, greeting cards, T-shirts, "anything we would sell," and the amount of money in the store must be counted. The store's 13 full-time staff members and 20 student workers divide into groups of two, one person counting the merchandise, the other person recording the count on a computer printout list.

The amount of business the bookstore expects to lose during the inventory period is "minimal," Glenn said, because "summer semester business is so slow."

Glenn also said the inventory is usually done in June. She said the university's general accounting office, which receives the inventory results, recommends what period during the year the inventory is to be done. The bookstore picks out the actual date, Glenn said, and then okay's it with general accounting. This year's date was chosen because it "it worked out best for everybody," she said.

Glenn also said that during semester breaks the store is left open and the inventory isn't usually done. Different events held during these periods, such as conferences and various kinds of camps, may be good for the store's business, she said.

The inventory takes approximately three or four days to complete, she said.

Newsprint pick-up on the rise, says city paper collector

By Andrew Zinner
Staff Writer

Though 20 percent cooperation doesn't sound like much, Carbondale's designated newspaper collector said he "feels really positive" about his city-mandated recycling effort and expects cooperation to improve in the future.

Hank Dews, owner of Waste Not Paper Recycling of Makanda, said he expected compliance with the city's recycling ordinance would be an improvement. The ordinance requiring all residents of single family dwellings with water and sewer hook-ups to separate unsoiled newsprint from other trash, bundle it up and leave it at curbside for pickup. The ordinance took effect in May.

According to the ordinance, the paper should be tied in bundles of no more than 25 pounds each. The newsprint pickups follow regular garbage pickups, Dews said, and are done the first week of each month. He said it takes two workers four six-hour days to cover the city.

Dews said he is encouraged by the level of cooperation he's received. He said younger people are generally more cooperative than older folks, who are more skeptical about recycling. He said he expects more people to join the recycling crusade in the future. "People are gradually realizing that we're going to have to recycle in the future," Dews said. "Like Buckminster Fuller (famous inventor and proponent of recycling) says, it's not garbage, it's a renewable resource."

Dews said he collected five tons of newsprint during May and about six and one-quarter tons in June. He said he needs to collect twice the latter amount to break even. Paper costs are down now and could rise in the near future, he said.

Dews is enthusiastic about the venture. "It's good in a small town." And though the ordinance specifies that only single-family house dwellers cooperate, Dews said he has had many calls from people living in apartments and senior citizen high-rises.

He said he's far from giving up on the project. "We're gonna stick it out as long as we can keep above sea level," he said. "You have to be able to go through the lean times as well as the good."

A decision to continue or scrap the project will not be made for at least a year, Dews said.

Dews said he can see this project as the beginning of something great for the recycling trade. "If this bit of recycling works, and other things begin to be recycled in the future, the city would virtually be out of garbage," he said.

Accent survives

For a while it seemed as if the first issue of Accent on Southern Illinois would also be the last.

The first issue of the magazine, conceived by a special publications class at SIU-C, appeared last semester. The second issue was almost scrapped because advertising revenue had failed to cover estimated costs.

Easter weekend, however, proved to be a time for hope for the scrappy magazine. That weekend several advertisers changed their positions from "maybe" to "yes" and Accent was back in business.

The June issue of the magazine, which is a regional publication for Southern Illinois, is available from advertisers, Chambers of Commerce, airports, bus and train stations and other public areas.

The June issue features a calendar of fairs and festivals in the area for this year, a visit to the Southern Illinois Oprey in Anna and an interview with television personality "Uncle Briggs."

Problems had faced both issues of the magazine, but the major threat had been poor advertising sales.

"They didn't have faith in us," said Janice Turkowski, senior advertising student and one of the magazine's two executive editors.

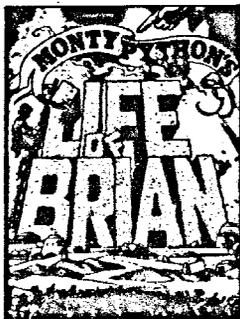

Karen Gullo, A May graduate in journalism, said that the second issue marks an improvement in quality for Accent.

"The publication itself is better than the January issue's formats, layout and writing. The photography is superior. Our stories are stronger and they're focused. People can identify with the magazine," said Gullo.

Now that the second issue is finished, will there be a third?

Turkowski, Gullo, and James Murphy, assistant professor of journalism and originator of the idea, all say "yes." The next issue will probably appear in the fall.

According to Gullo, there is a good reason to work hard to keep Accent going.

Live Stones album is lifeless, but the cash keeps rolling in

By David Murphy
Entertainment Editor

Album courtesy of Plaza Records

After two decades at the creative forefront of rock music, The Rolling Stones have earned their self-given title as "The World's Greatest Rock'n'Roll Band." To that name, however, Mick Jagger, Keith Richards and the boys should add another appellation; "The World's Greatest Rock Salesmen."

Not only have they sold countless millions of albums, the Stones have managed to convince the public every two or three years that they haven't seen real rock'n'roll until they've seen the Stones in concert. Their most recent concert tour, in the summer and fall of 1981, was well enough promoted to gross a phenomenal estimated $50 million.

Hot on the heels of that astoundingly lucrative project, the Stones have released yet another live album, "Still Life," that was produced primarily, it seems, to cash in on the publicity and sales potential generated by their tour.

Making money is the only conceivable reason for releasing such a dead live album. The tunes on this album are well-done and well-recorded, but they're about as exciting as a weekend in a retirement home.

The first three songs, "Under My Thumb," "Let's Spend the Night Together," and "Shattered," are to-the-letter reproductions of the original studio versions, offering little that is new in interpretation or performance of the material. The last two songs on side one are all that save the album from being nothing but a rehash, and a lackluster one at that, of old music. "Twenty Flight Rock" and "Going to a Go Go" are two interesting, previously unrecorded rockers dealing with traditional Stones themes, chasing girls and partying, respectively.

Jagger's vocals on "Twenty Flight Rock" are reminiscent of early Elvis Presley, deep and brimming with suppressed sexuality.

The simple pleasures of a six-pack, a dance floor and a jumping rock rhythm are celebrated in "Going to a Go Go." It's the same kind of return-to-the-roots material that was part of the appeal of the Stones' most recent studio album, "Tattoo You," reminiscent in tone of songs like "Black Limousine" and "Neighbors."

The second side has more studio-sound-alike versions of Stones' hits old and new; "Let Me Go," "Time is on My Side," "Imagination," "Start Me Up," and "Satisfaction."

is remarkably clear for a Stones live effort. For a change, you can understand on every song what Jagger is saying. The discordant guitar work of Keith Richard and Ron Wood meshes nicely without overpowering the drum playing of Charlie Watts or the steady pumping bass of Bill Wyman. The Stones for once have a live album that is as well mixed as their recent studio albums.

The problem with the album is that the songs sound too much like the studio versions. There is none of the raw, unbridled energy that characterized their early live work on "Get Yer Ya-Ya's Out," nor the wound-up, we're-all-on-mehtedrine revisions of old tunes that marked "Love You Live."

The workmanlike performances of old tunes on this album impart no new meaning to their earlier work, which their previous live albums did. It's a disappointingly lackluster product of a tour that was the rock music event of the last year, and the two new songs, though good, are not enough to save this album.

"Still Life" does contain an interesting, off-hand tribute to the Stones' musical roots. The album opens with a 27-second excerpt from Duke Ellington's version of "Take the A Train," and closes with 44 seconds of Jimi Hendrix's rendition of "The Star-Spangled Banner."

This tribute to two black musical geniuses, both among the most influential minds in their musical genres, acknowledges the musical debt the Rolling Stones owe to black artists and the musical tradition of American blacks.

In light of the fact that "Still Life" presents very little that is new and even less that is exciting, their fans might wonder why the Stones even bothered to make this disc. Selling more albums and making more money is the only apparent reason special effects masterpiece, and a few scenes of his spaceship, there is very little done with special effects.

Where the acting in "Poltergeist" is often overdone by the children, the children and E.T. steal the show in this film. The adults are there only as foils for the children and E.T. to work against. This film is above all else a film for children and the child in all of us.

One of the notable qualities in both films that Spielberg seems to have learned from the success of "Raiders of the Lost Ark" is that the action is continuous from beginning to end. In some of Spielberg's earlier hits such as "Jaws" and "Close Encounters," the action, especially in the first half of the movie, often tended to drag.

The only real complaint about either movie is not in the movies themselves, but rather the ratings given to each movie.

Both are rated P.G. and neither deserves that rating. As already mentioned, "E.T." is a movie for children, and there is nothing in it that a child of any age should not see.

If you see any movies this year these two should be first on your list, and I for one am anxiously awaiting to see what Spielberg will come up with next.

Grad students okay proposal for new flat-rate attorney fee

By Bob Olson
Staff Writer

A resolution endorsing a flat-rate, $1.75 fee to fund the Student Attorney was passed Wednesday night by the Graduate Student Council. The fee is now collected on a pro-rated basis.

The student activity fund allocates 20.46 percent of its revenue to the Student Attorney Office.

The flat-rate fee resolution, if put into effect, would have all students—full and part-time—paying $1.75.

One of the problems with the current system, according to Student Attorney Betsy Streeter, is "a landlord can sign up for one hour and receive full benefits."

Comparing the Student Attorney Office with the Student Health Service, which is the only department now receiving a flat-rate fee, Streeter said, "We're actually providing a needed service. It's often a necessity to see a lawyer just as it is for someone to have their tonsils taken out."

Dr. Bruce Swinburne, vice president of student affairs said he could not endorse the flat-rate fee resolution to the Board of Trustees.

"The same argument could be made in every department," Swinburne said. He added that part-time students would be eliminated from SIU-C if the flat-rate fee resolution was enforced.

Streeter said the Student Attorney Office wouldn't close if it didn't receive more money, but would probably have to let a graduate assistant go. Graduate assistants gross $502 per month.

Over 6,800 cases have been handled since the Student Attorney Office opened April, 1977. Graduate student cases are inclined to be domestic such as divorce cases, Streeter said, while undergraduates have such problems as traffic violations.

Lovers of children's literature will convene in Chicago June 27 through July 2 to discuss their favorites at the sixth annual Institute in Children's Literature, sponsored by the SIU-C Department of Curriculum, Instruction and Media.

Humor in the stories children like to hear and read will be discussed in seminars and informal get-togethers by participants and several authors of children's books, said Margaret Matthias, associate professor in the College of Education and a specialist in children's literature.

It's not clear that children understand a lot of the humor in stories written for them, she said.

tending SIU-C next year. Vogel said he isn't hesitant about competing with the young squad. He said that the freshmen should break into the all-around spots, joining All-American Pam Turner, who, Vogel said, is the only one of the three returning members who will "probably be in the starting lineup."

Vogel said his squad will spend the first part of the year in preparation, explaining that he wants his freshmen to adjust to the rigors of practice and college life. He is optimistic that the newcomers will be ready by the time the team begins competition in January. Vogel said that women gymnasts perform best in their first two collegiate years.

In women's gymnastics, more than in any other sport, the kids are in their prime between the ages of nine and 14. When they are 15 or 16, they become stylized. By the time they are in college, their development is on the way downhill," he said.

Vogel, who will begin his 20th season as head coach, had his share of headaches this past season. The team had its first losing dual meet record under his direction, and internal conflicts found their way into the sports pages. He has taken measures against a repeat of last year.

This year, all the incoming freshmen will attend a two-week camp. Vogel said the main point of the camp will be for everyone to get to know each other. Included will be some sports psychology, introductions to college life, dance, a weight training program, and a little gymnastics. The Saluki coach also said returnees Turner, Lori Erickson and Mary Hunck are also invited to the camp.

"I want us all to get along and have fun this year," said Vogel. "I think the new kids will do very well, and that this will be an enjoyable year. It will be a wide-open ball game as far as positions go. If we lose this year, it will be because we were beaten, not because we weren't prepared."

larger market areas of St. Louis and Chicago. He said that he is surprised that the Salukis don't receive better coverage in the Chicago media, considering that many of SIU-C's students are from the area. He said that by focusing in on the Chicago and St. Louis markets, SIU-C will be able to attract more athletes and non-athletes to the University.

He said the main goal of the University is to educate, whether an athlete or non athlete.

"One of my goals is to make the athlete appear more human in the eyes of the public," he said. "They make the same mistakes and have the same feelings as the rest of us."

Phils slam Cards

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Gary Matthews rapped three hits, one a disputed two-run homer, and Ivan DeJesus singled and homered to drive in three runs as the Philadelphia Phillies defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 10-2 Thursday.

Steve Carlton improved his record to 9-7, giving up only three hits, all in the third inning.

Matthews pounded his disputed home run after Pete Rose, who also had three hits, doubled with one out in the third inning. The drive off Bob Forsch, 8-2, appeared to have curved foul by a wide margin down the left-field line but third-base umpire Bill Davidson ruled the ball fair, and the Phillies took a 3-0 lead.

Six gym recruits add needed depth

By Jackie Rodgers
Staff Writer

Herb Vogel's women's gymnastics squad will have a new look next year as four recruits and two walk-ons are expected to move into the top of the lineup.

Thanks to the six recruits, the Salukis will have their greatest depth in years. Vogel said that he can go as many as nine-deep in an event, adding that none of the returnees are assured a position.

The top three recruits, Regina Hey, Jackie Ahr, and Lori Steele, have all compiled all-around scores over 36 points in high school competition. Vogel said Hey has the ability to score 9-plus on the bars, and 9.5 on the beam at the collegiate level. The 5-1, 95-pounder has executed double back somersaults in her floor exercise routine. No member of the 1981-82 SIU-C team utilized that move in competition last year. Hey is from Harrison, Ohio.

Ahr, from Cincinnati, is almost a mirror image of Hey, according to Vogel. She too has completed double backs, as well as double twisting somersaults.

Steele captured the Kentucky

Class I All-Around Championship this year with a score of 36.55. Vogel rates the Louisville, Ky., native ahead of Linda Nelson, a former SIU-C All-American from Kentucky. Nelson still holds the SIU-C scoring record in the balance beam.

The fourth recruit, Margaret Callcott, has the potential to break the 35-plus all-around scoring mark, according to Vogel. Vogel said Callcott's best events are the uneven parallel bars and vault. He said the Knoxville, Tenn., native needs to work on her floor exercise.

Janice Nieto and Maggi Nidiffer will be joining the squad as walk-ons. Nieto is a former District Champion, and placed fifth in all-around at the Illinois High School Association State Meet.

Nidiffer has not been training in gymnastics the past year, and instead devoted her time to diving. She had a 36.20 all-around average a year ago. Vogel said that with coaching, Nidiffer should regain her gymnast's form.

Vogel said that he is awaiting word from two other walk-ons as to whether they will be at-

"I'm a people person," said new SID Don Kopriva. "In this job you have to be."

Sports publicist puts his job before vacation

By Gene Stahlman
Staff Writer

One looks around the office in the Arena. New shelves are only beginning to be filled. Papers, magazines, pamphlets and books lay scattered everywhere. A half-typed paper sits in the typewriter. There is the general feeling that someone is trying to make order out of chaos, which is exactly what new SIU-C Sports Information Director Don Kopriva is trying to do.

By the enthusiastic way in which he talks, and the fact that he is using his vacation time to report two weeks ahead of schedule, it is obvious that Kopriva really loves his work. "I'm a people person," he said. "In this job you have to be."

Kopriva arrived at SIU-C last Thursday from the University of Wisconsin-Parkside, where he had been the SID for 11 years. He said he wanted to get the Carbondale as soon as possible to familiarize himself with the SIU-C men's sports programs.

He has been rearranging the SID office, meeting with the coaches and getting an overall view of SIU-C in both sports and otherwise. Part of Kopriva's philosophy about the job of an SID is that he cannot isolate himself in a cocoon of sports. He said that he must also have an idea of the college and the community surrounding it.

The 33-year-old Elmhurst native said that he was a little surprised to find the office in fairly good shape. There has been no official SID at SIU-C for more than a year, he said. Assistant Athletic Director Fred Huff voluntarily took on the SID duties.

Right now Kopriva has only one student assistant, David Featherston. Kopriva said he would like to get as many as six student assistants for the fall term, if the budget allows.

Kopriva comes to SIU-C with a great deal of experience. In addition to his 11 years at Parkside, he served as the press officer for the U.S. delegation at the World University Games in Mexico City in 1979, supervised press row at the U.S. Olympic track and field trials in 1980 and served as press officer for the U.S. Olympic Committee at the National Sports Festival last summer. Kopriva said working with the U.S. delegation was one of his most memorable experiences.

"I really enjoyed working with the foreign media and was very proud to represent my country," he said.

Kopriva said that another reward of being an SID is the chance to see student athletes grow up and mature during their years at college. He said he has made many friends through his occupation, both with athletes and others involved in college sports, and hopes to make many more at

Kopriva said that the job of an SID has changed quite a bit over the years. He said that when he began, the main function was actually the dissemination of information to the media and others. He said that the job now has taken on more of a promotional role.

He said that an SID should be a journalist first and a sports fan second. Some coaches have a hard time accepting that premise though, he said with a wry smile.

"Sometimes bad news has to be related," he said. "I don't go looking for scandals, but I won't shy away from telling the truth either."

So far, Kopriva has been very impressed by the coaching staff. He said he was particularly impressed with football coach Rey Dempsey. "Rey is definitely the leader type," Kopriva said. He also said he admired Athletic Director Lew Hartzog for some time.

Kopriva said he feels very comfortable in his new atmosphere.

"It may sound corny, but from the people I have met so far, it is true what they say about southern hospitality. I have been made to feel very much at home in such a short time," he said.

One of the things Kopriva hopes to do as SID is improve SIU-C's public relations in the

DeJesus aided opposing runners, Davis charges

CHICAGO (AP) — Shortstop Ivan DeJesus of the Philadelphia Phillies has been accused by his former teammate, Chicago Cubs catcher Jody Davis, of being slow in covering some Latin players in base-stealing situations.

Davis' blast came Wednesday night in Pittsburgh after he twice nailed Omar Moreno, the National League's leading basestealer, as the Cubs downed the Pirates 6-5 in 10 innings to snap a five-game losing streak.

Davis said that last season when DeJesus was with the Cubs, "I never did get Moreno then. Although I made the same kind of throws, I couldn't get him once because DeJesus was covering and taking care of his buddy. If he (Moreno) hadn't been Latin, he would have been out."

Davis also said, "I heard rumors he (DeJesus) gave Latin guys signs on pitches (last year)."

DeJesus, reached in St. Louis where the Phillies are playing the Cardinals, said Davis "is talking a lot of bull."

"Just because he didn't throw him out last year was not my fault. Maybe, he didn't throw it to the right spot."

"It sounds like he's real cocky about throwing out Moreno," DeJesus continued. "I'm glad he threw him out. He was a rookie last year, and this shows me he's improved his arm and his delivery. But that's a real bad statement he made. I can't understand why he would say something like that."

"I respect him because he worked hard last year. I thought he was a pretty good guy when I was there."

Moreno, twice league leader in stolen bases and leading again with 35, was surprised at Davis' remarks.

"Why would he say that?" Moreno asked. "He (DeJesus) is one of the best shortstops in the National League."

Chuck Tanner, Pittsburgh manager, also was surprised.

"I've always seen him cover," Tanner said of DeJesus. "I can't remember anything funny. I'm just looking at Omar running."

Moreno had been nailed stealing 10 times prior to Wednesday but had succeeded on his previous nine attempts. It was the first time he had been caught twice in one game this season.

Reds' 1st choice considering SIU

Baseball Salukis land two outfielders, shortstop

SIU-C baseball Coach Richard "Itchy" Jones has signed three new recruits for next year.

The recruits are outfielder-first baseman Mark Schulte of Marissa, outfielder Jim Limperis from Mount Prospect and shortstop Jay Burch of Newburgh, Ind.

Schulte, a 24th-round draft choice of the St. Louis Cardinals, has won numerous MVP awards in his high school career. Schulte makes the second first baseman Jones has drafted to replace Kurt Reid, who graduated this year. The other, highly-touted Robert Jones of Proviso East, was at SIU-C Wednesday to fill out his admission papers, according to Itchy Jones. Jones, who has been negotiating with the Cincinnati Reds for a professional contract, appears to be leaning toward coming to SIU-C right now, said Coach Jones. The Saluki coach said Jones had turned down the latest offer by the Reds, who drafted him in the first round. Jones said both first basemen were exceptional athletes who are capable of playing numerous positions.

Recruit Jones turns down Reds' offer

"We will play them where ever it will help the team most," he said. "I look for both of them to get a lot of playing time, and hopefully, be starters."

Burch will be used at either shortstop or third base, according to Jones.

Limperis, a .468 hitter last season, is mainly an outfielder, but is also capable of catching and playing first base, said Jones.

"All of our new recruits are very versatile," said Jones. "I look for many of them to move into starting roles because we lost so many good starters this year."

Jones has now signed seven new players for next season, as well as Brian Welch, who was signed to a basketball scholarship by Coach Allen Van Winkle. Welch also earned baseball honors at Carbondale High School.

Jones also received news that junior second baseman Jim Reboulet has turned down the latest contract offer from the Cincinnati Reds. Jones said he hopes to have Reboulet as a Saluki next season.
