Tax plan vote to end SIU waiting game

By Ginny Lee
Staff Writer

As the 11th hour ticks away, SIU’s 1984 state funding level is yet unknown, resting on the fate of Gov. James Thompson’s proposed tax increase.

With five days left until the end of fiscal year 1983, SIU administrators’ eyes are on the Legislature, which will ultimately decide with the Governor’s System funding level if it accepts, rejects, amends or radically changes Thompson’s compromise proposal for a $1.5 million increase. Currently, Thompson was aiming for a $1.8 million increase.

The situation leaves SIU with no absolute guarantee in terms of funding, according to the SIU system financial officer.

“In the process right now, there are no guarantees at all,” Willard W. Wilson said Wednesday. “There’s no guarantee as to what the final outcome will be. Given the ambiguous budget situation, the Board of Trustees had to make an emergency short-term loan to maintain the university. Chancellor Kenneth Shaw warned of the possible need for an additional $800,000 tuition increase to be approved in July on top of the 10-percent tuition increase already in place.

“SIU is now in a more serious situation with the projected worst-case scenario. Shaw said last week, ‘We have no choice but to wait until the Legislature acts.’ If the outcome is unfavorable, SIU is really ‘down to two planning variables’ which can be used at short-term solutions to a budgetary crisis,” Shaw said.

If “the tax increase is watered down, we face the unpleasant situation of trying to balance off cuts in personal services vs. increases in tuition,” he said.

The situation, though, is not completely closed. Various budget scenarios, from bleak to fantastic, have been discussed, paving the way for one of a number of actions to be taken, depending, once again, on the tax increase and what level of funding SIU would receive, even if it was passed.

In March, Thompson, in an effort to get his then-$1.8 million tax increase passed, presented what has been dubbed his “doomsday” budget. That budget would allow $1.2 billion for higher education, which would give the SIU System $153.5 million. That would be a drop of $9.8 million from SIU’s 1983 level and $7.9 million below the Illinois Board of Higher Education’s recommendation.

SIU’s share of the “doomsday” budget would be $93 million, which is $7.2 million below 1982’s appropriations and $12.2 million below the 1983’s recommendation for the University.

Chancellor Shaw has said that this budget could spell “major disaster” for SIU, including the possibility of a $900 tuition increase and a 4.2-percent reduction in personal services.

ISSC says state has no authority to tie aid to draft

By Ginny Lee
Staff Writer

The hope of the Illinois State Senate Committee was that the state Legislature would wait until the issue of tying draft registration to financial aid was resolved once and for all on the federal level.

But the state House Tuesday paved the way for a bill to become law which would require men 18 or older to provide proof of draft registration before receiving state educational aid.

Shuttle destination still up in the air

CAPA CANAVERAL (AP) — Space shuttle Challenger is coming home Friday, but its crew won’t know until the final hours whether it will try to touch down in weather-plagued Florida or aim for a comfortably familiar runway in California.

Told that the landing site decision depended on how the weather looked at dawn, shuttle commander Robert L. Crippen said, “That sounds reasonable to us. We’re looking forward to coming home.”

Lt. Gen. James A. Abrahamson, NASA’s shuttle director, had announced earlier that the shuttle would be kept in orbit an extra day to await a better Saturday forecast at the Cape. But then equipment trouble aboard Challenger and a better weather outlook for Friday caused that decision to be reversed.

NASA wants to land at the 15,000-foot Kennedy Space Center strip to shave eight days from the time it takes to prepare the shuttle for its next flight.

Crippen and his crewmen — Rick Husband, John Fabian, Sally K. Ride and Dr. Norman Thagard — finished their flight duties, stowed gear and cleaned up the cabin for the blessing return to Earth.

Missionaries face challenges, critics

Jillana Anastasoff
Staff Writer

“Faith is the victory that overcomes the world.”

The CMU choir, singing a medley of a hymn that ran out at an evening service of the Christian and Missionary Alliance, an evangelical denomination which has a campus of students, said that.

The CMU, committed to the proliferation of evangelism and world wide “church planting,” boasts more than 1,600 members in 51 countries with a “foreign” membership of nearly 1.5 million. About 300 of the more than 1,000 delegates attending the conference are working in overseas missions.

Roger Elbel, a missionary who has worked in the Middle East, said he believes Islam is the greatest challenge to Christianity. A CMA publication said that Christians are not the only people who believe in “version of Christianity” and urges members to pray against that “blind Muslim” and “hold them back from faith.”

Elbel said he believes God cannot hear those who come to him without Christ, yet those Christians who pray to God sincerely will be heard. “Christians can pray to God and then, into a true relationship with God.”

When Edward and Shirley Maxey landed with the Indian people of Irian Jaya 27 years ago, they were the first Europeans ever seen on the island, which lies north of Australia and is subject to the government of Indonesia.

Maxey said the island people, who are of African origin, “aren’t primitive because they are black, but because they are isolated.”

The Maxeys said they arrived where there and knew their land mass was surrounded by a body of water, nor had they developed the use of metal in their culture.

Maxey has put the indigenous language into written form and has taught the people to read, in hopes of teaching them to read the Bible, which he has translated. The Maxeys also teach the people the Indonesian language so that they may integrate into the larger culture of Indonesia. The Maxeys, who are the only white people in a village of 200, are faced with the self-destruction of the various tribes who are attempting to give them opportunity, not destroy their culture.

In spite of good intentions, missionary work is a pretext to colonialism, which leads to the destruction of so-called Third World countries, according to Haile Abebe, a SIU-C student from Ethiopia. He is known for his Christian leadership.

“As one of our great African leaders said, ‘While we were looking up praying, they were cutting our heads under our feet.’ It is understood that the missionaries paved the way for the colonialists, and continue to do so today, in many cases,” he said.

Abebe, who was raised as a Christian, recalled being drawn to a mission Sunday school as a youth, by his wealth in comparison with the Ethiopian people in his village, and afterward finding that village “which had nothing.”

“I present the arrogance these people come with,” he said.

The Maxeys said they have the full support of that government.

“They told us that with the problem of tourism, they didn’t want a bunch of monkeys running around the island. We promised Maxey, ‘We don’t insist that they wear clothes, but, give them clothes. You don’t have to wear clothes to be a Christian.’

Maxey said the island people, who are of African origin, aren’t primitive because they are black, but because they are isolated.”

KRACKOW, Poland (AP) — Pope John Paul II met with Lech Walesa in the seceded eastern city of Gdansk Thursday, then flew to Rome to end a historic homestead visit. Walesa inspired millions of his countrymen in Poland's time of trial. The visit was the latest in a series of visits by high-ranking officials of the Catholic Church to Poland during the past two weeks. This is my prayer," the pontiff said at Krakow airport before departing.

BUT, in an emotional farewell to the housemates, John Paul said nothing of his meeting with Walesa, leader of the banned Solidarity union.

The encounter had been delayed until the final hours of the eight-day papal tour, and then was held secretly at a mountain hotel near journalists and the Polish people.

After returning to his home in the northern seaport of Gdansk, Walesa would say only that he was happy with the audience with the pontiff had been "a very important moment in my life." The disconsolate labor leader scheduled a news conference for Friday. But he was prepared to exchange the pope's words in support of his independent labor movement and workers' rights — and against the martial law decreed by Communist authorities — with St. John Paul II in Rome.

"The pope's words are a de facto endorsement of Solidarity and Solidarity supporters, sending tens of thousands of demonstrators marching through city streets. It will also once again focused world attention on Poland's labor unrest.

In Chicago Thursday, speaking to a Polish-American group, President Reagan said the papal visit had been "a ray of hope for the Polish people."

The pontiff called on the Warsaw leadership to lift martial law, forbid political prisoners and reinstate Solidarity, in exchange for an end to U.S. economic sanctions against Poland. The Poliburo of the Polish Communist Party is to meet Saturday to assess the impact of the papal visit but Polish leaders show little sign of veering from their support of the independent labor movement and workers' rights discipline to pull the country out of its deep-economic depression.

There will be no dialogue with former leaders of Solidarity government spokesman Jerzy Urban told reporters after the pope met in Krakow with Poland's military ruler, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, late Wednesday.

Seeing the pope off at Balice Airport here, President Henryk Jablonski told the government and John Paul agreed on many things, including "the need to achieve reconciliation." In Poland.

Clearly, the pontiff thanked Polish authorities for arranging his visit — a political gamble for the Communist leadership — and spoke of the need for "mutual trust" among Poles.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defying President Reagan twice in talks aimed at producing a compromise income tax increase, lawmakers and government employees began salary negotiations Thursday in the legislative session.

The mounting uncertainty was more keenly felt by hundreds of state employees who stand to lose their jobs if there is no tax increase by the start of the new fiscal year in July.

Congress rebuffs Reagan budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, in a decision bound to change the way Congress-does business, struck down the legislation the "legislative' badly used by lawmakers to rein in regulatory agencies and avoid the executive budget's control of billions in taxpayer dollars.

At least temporarily, the decision signals a momentous shift of clout from the Congress to the presidency. And Congress is sure to scramble to reassess its check of executive rulemaking and decisions which suddenly are not subject to reversal on Capitol Hill.

Secret Kennedy tapes released

BOSTON (AP) — John F. Kennedy's secretly recorded White House tapes show a wisecracking president who could snap out of his relaxed demeanor and bark that the governor of Mississippi should "get out of there" during race rioting.

Further, Glimpses of the Kennedy presidency emerged in more than 11 hours of tape-recorded conversations and telephone calls released Thursday by the John F. Kennedy Library. More than 26 hours of transcripts remain to be transcribed.

Donald Alsop got a permanent, nationwide injunction on implementation of ISSC awards "tremendously, but it may be challenged, just as the federal law was.

"It's a possibility that a law-suit would occur and what effect that would have on processing, I don't know," he said. But it happened on the federal level and the same could happen on the state level.

Joe Camille, director of SIU-C's Office of Student Work and Financial Assistance, shares the same fear.

"I'm disappointed," he said about the Legislature's action. "I was hopeful that the state of Illinois would be waited so that they would have a clear indication as to the legality of the federal law before they did anything."

The American Civil Liberties Union, which successfully challenged the federal law, indicated Wednesday that if the governor signs the bill into law, it will undoubtedly be challenged.

Until the governor acts on the bill, though, Camille said that his office will take a "wait and see attitude."

The law would affect about 3,000 male students at SIU-C, he said.

Camille said that none of the details about implementation of the law have been worked out, yet, but that the burden of proof would probably fall on the ISSC.

The ISSC sent a letter to all Illinois higher education institutions Wednesday, informing them of the Legislature's action and allowing them to contact the governor soon if they have any question about the bill.

Camille said that after the bill becomes law, the ISSC will have to contact all students who have already been told that they will receive an award for the 1983-84 school year.

The ISSC does not know how many applicants are male or female. Camille said, because that fact has not been relevant in determining eligibility and therefore is not addressed on the application.

In global village, parochialism isn't restricted to Americans

Charles Victor Staff Writer

IF THERE IS ONE drum I am fed up with hearing, it is the one that bears the message that Americans are more parochial than people from any or more or less parochial than anyone from any other country.

Most Malaysians, like Americans, are victims of the Ethiopia-Somalia conflict; never heard of the Falklands until the war last year, or care two hoots about the American elections staged in Turkey. Most Africans, like Americans, do not know of the problems faced by the U.S. in Chile, would never have heard of the French except for the war, or know what kind of government they have in Australia. Neither have the Germans heard of Brundt or the French that the capital of Mali is Bamako.

THAT'S THE SAD truth — that most people in the world, and not just Americans, do not know about the people who are supposed to be important of news, and very particular about their own interests.

I read in SIU-C, most foreign students eat only their own kind of food, play their own kinds of games and wear their own clothes with their own time with their own kind.

Foreign students here are perhaps more knowledgeable about the workers in different countries than their American counterparts. But this fact is mesmerizing. First, the average foreign students in the United States are much more advanced, educated and interested in the international issues, and in my opinion, they are not really typical of the rest of their country.

One of the major problems for the SIU-C is that foreign students are proud. We have the persistence and care for the administration's staff and the hard work of fund-raising volunteers to thank.

Check out the campus Greeks

Thank you for the recent excellent article on the Greeks. It was fascinating and very well supported.

SIU. This letter is to further orientate the students to the Greek system.

This year, thanks to the Student Orientation chairmen, Steve Buns and Michael Dessau, officially named Greek Row. In the beginning, the SIU Greek system has added three new fraternities and one new sorority. Last winter, SIU's Greek system has seen increased coverage of events in the last two years and is still growing.

The SIU-C Council may be a minority in numbers, but we are a Priority 1 Recognized Student Organization. We are up there with the Undergraduate Student Government and the Black Affairs Council and we have the power and the responsibility as RSG's in different ways. This year SPC co-sponsored the First Annual Greek Variety Show.

SIU-C Greeks are involved in other organizations too. Five sorority women are on the Student Government Board, have leaders in some of the top professional organizations on this campus.

SIU-C Greeks are proud. We offer an alternative way of living in college. We are at least different as well as growing. We are all independent.

Our house, in the middle of the street...

Andrew Herrmann Staff Writer

Max, our neighbor's dog, lives across the street in the house that I rarely visit. After a few hours of training, he can now sit and stay in a three-foot radius around the litter box. We have become well acquainted, and Max now goes to the yard toUPP the body of a cardboard box and returns home with two full dildos. He even has a bone-shaped chew toy for me to give him.

Max and I have become inseparable companions, often spending hours together on the porch, basking in the warm afternoon sun. His unconditional love and loyalty have taught me valuable lessons about life and friendship. He is truly a special dog, and I look forward to many more years spent together. I believe that Max's presence in my life serves as a reminder of the simple joys and pleasures that can be found in everyday moments. Whether it's a sunny afternoon by the pool or a quiet night at home, Max is always there, his wagging tail and cheerful demeanor filling me with warmth and happiness.

so why don't I move out? I live in a small apartment, but I feel it is just right for me. I don't need a large house or a yard, and I prefer to live in a quiet neighborhood. I enjoy spending time with Max and the other dogs on the street. I believe that the simplicity of my life and the companionship of my furry friends are what make it so special.
Religious Studies

Issue is faculty calibre, not quantity...

I was deeply distressed to hear that the University had decided to terminate the undergraduate major in religious studies. What with the Department of Religious Studies, assigning its several faculty members to units cognate with their own specialties. As I understand it, the reason for this decision to do have with the inability to create within a small department the necessary critical mass, the suggestion that the members of the department can pursue their work almost as effectively elsewhere in the University, and the conviction that the University can still support study and research in religion without in administrative deal with the maintenance of a curricular unit set aside for that purpose. If this is a fair summary of the grounds for your action, I think it would be comparatively easy to respond to it, but it is possible that some of them is open to serious question and certainly does not constitute a case for the decision that has been made.

Giles Gunn, Professor of Religions and American Studies and Chair, American Studies, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

...and program offers much for its size

Funding cuts to the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences cut right to the heart of the University. A recent editorial brought to my attention the fact that the Religious Studies Department is being considered for elimination, for example. While the College offers only a small in-staff and in number of majors, it fulfills a very important function for the college. This department teaches valuable survey courses that are useful to students in the College of Liberal Arts but to the entire University.

Through courses such as "Types of Eastern Religions" which I took as a freshman, a GSC requirement, students may be initially exposed to the difference, as well as similarities between the value systems of India, China, Africa, and the Moslem countries.

Tufts is a turmoil-struck world, courses which make inter-cultural understanding should be forward, not dropped from the curriculum.

It is not only a matter of what is good for the students, it is a duty of the institution. Tufts University differs in theory from a vocational-technical school in that it offers a breadth of experiences to the student through course offerings. While a liberal education may now be labelled "traditional," it is certainly not yet an obsolete concept.

While I support SIU-C's emphasis on progressive educational revolution, I feel that college students are in danger of being cheated of their "birthright," if they are pushed into narrow vocational-type schools, which leave them little opportunity to explore and question "why things are the way they are in the world," in the myriad ways of things this question can be asked.

It has been said that Europeans live to work, while the Americans live to work. That may be, but a job is something a person can do for the rest of his or her life, while college is a limited, four-year experience. An exposure to comparative religions, for example, is one of the reasons I will be SIU graduate when he watches a movie like "Gandhi" or reads about a religious struggle somewhere in the world in the evening news. Truly, the Religious Studies Department has more to offer this University than its relatively small size would suggest.

U.S. overlooking reality of El Salvador

By Keith Leobke
Case Coordinator
Amnesty International

THREE YEARS ago Friday the Salvador Army began its conquest of the National University. Fifty students were killed. This occurred in the midst of the general strike and the occupation of the university, but one was crucial. Three months before, almost to the day, Catholic Archbishop Oscar Romero was assassinated.

Romero had clearly aligned himself on the side of the poor in El Salvador and had criticized the murderous repression of the government and its security forces. Romero was aware of the dangers in speaking out against government repression but could not contain himself in the midst of so much needless slaughter.

THE DAY before he was murdered, while celebrating mass, the archbishop said: "I am sure that El Salvador and I are in order contrary to the word of God."

This cut to the heart of El Salvador's ruling families and their control of the military.

It is difficult for most Americans to understand the Salvadoran socio-political realities. The Salvadorans go to bed hungry, and the deaths of 50 students on the University campus, seem isolated and unclear. An incident in May, 1980 speaks more directly to the realities of life in El Salvador.

On May 14, two months after Romero's death and one month before the general strike, the National Guard attacked a Salvadoran village and killed 15 villagers. According to testimony entered into the Congressional Record, "a minimum of 50 unidentified bodies were the prey of vultures and dogs."

A SIMILAR incident in March, 1981 was witnessed by a priest from Breckenridge, Colorado, Father Fort Wayne. Only 29 died in this later incident. The priest, Earl Gallagher, told the story as he stood on the Honduran shore and safety.

For every name we read in the newspaper, for every Romero, for every student of the Smith's, for every death, the occupation of the National University, hundreds of nameless peasants have died. Men, women and children. Not occasionally, but every month.

The Reagan administration celebrates the present government urges us to reconnoiter the Department of Defense, but we cannot. The present administration's "white papers" and other State Department reports.

EVEN NOW the administration focuses on the fact that an American adviser "bucked the desire of the drug terrorists." Clearly the Reagan administration does not forget that it is the American governments in Latin America, that Salvadorans do not forget that it is the American governments in Latin America.

We would be aware that the civil war in El Salvador is the result of Cuban intervention. The similar to seven out of 10 Salvadoran children go hungry. The 300 are the lowest calorie intake in Latin America; 50 percent of Salvadorans own no land and work for 16 hours a day — these facts do not find their way into the present administration's "white papers" and other State Department reports.

These reports are tailored to hide the fact that the administration's action in Central America might be the Catholic Church and the people of El Salvador. Given the fact that El Salvador is a Catholic country, and that the Catholic Church has lent support to the military government regardless of whether they are Polish or Salvadoran, it seems that the present administration is backing rather formidably odd.

Archbishop Romero said, "If they kill me, I will remain in the Salvadoran people. I am not risking or saying this out of pride, but rather as humbly as I can.

Simon talk proved his excellence

Congressman Paul Simon from Illinois' 22nd Congressional District recently delivered a public lecture on the campus of Auburn University in a packed audience.

Congressman Simon's reputation, work, and integrity are matters of national public knowledge; however, meeting him personally and gaining experience that surpassed even the very high expectations we had was a thrill.

Congressman Paul Simon has put considerable thought into the many important issues that face our nation today. He is well informed, has balanced views on world events, and is committed to the improvement of life in the United States. He enlightens and enlightening presentations are applications by everyone who heard him: the general public, the Auburn University faculty student body, and the members of the Alabama press.

The most outstanding quality of the Honorable Paul Simon besides his intellectual, political, and diplomatic stature — is his humanity. He has a genuine interest in people all people. He was able to establish genuine rapport with everyone who met him, from the most prominent of our students to the most humble of our students.

Southern Illinois should be proud to have such a person as its representative in Congress and we should be proud to have Paul Simon.

Synergy's recruiting efforts pay off; another class added

By William Jason Yang
Staff Writer

Responding to a successful recruitment drive for its initial summer training program, Synergy is adding another training class to the program.

Synergy, located at 905 S. Illinois Ave., is a community-based, non-profit social service agency which offers crisis intervention, emergency and counseling services.

Cindy Hoffman, training coordinator, said the initial recruitment drive received a very good response. "Our afternoon session, which began on Tuesday, is filled," Hoffman said. "But some people who are very interested in volunteer work couldn't make that class at that time. So, we're extending our recruitment efforts and offering the evening session."

The program consists of beginners and advanced classes. The beginning class teaches general crisis intervention and communications skills to volunteers with little or no experience. The advanced class teaches volunteers how to deal with specific problems such as drugs or suicides, according to David Beal, the agency's public information officer.

Beal said participants will be involved in activities such as role playing and learning how to receive on-shift calls.

Synergy almost closed down this spring after facing a serious financial crisis. Many of the outside agencies that funded Synergy, including SIU-C, sharply reduced or eliminated their funding to Synergy.

When Synergy started in 1970, the University awarded the agency a $30,000 contract to provide crisis intervention services. In 1981, SIU-C reduced its funding to $10,000. The University planned to completely cut off funding this summer, but later agreed to give Synergy $1,000. According to the financial crisis, volunteers launched a successful fundraising effort and the University awarded Synergy $1,000. The agency also made severe cuts in paid staff positions and now relies almost exclusively on volunteers.

The agency has organized training programs every semester since its formation.

“...We have an established national church in Ethiopia, which is older than any of these missionary denominations. How can they come teach us about religion?”

Abebe said he has observed “two kinds of missionaries.” There are some, like those in El Salvador, who are very progressive.” said. “They see the daily social, economic and political oppression of people as important as the development of spirituality. They live their convictions in times when the bulldozers are flying, right there with the people, risking their lives. There is no separation. They are true revolutionaries, like Christ.

Then there are others, the majority, who paternalistically pity the poor man in his nakedness and want him to ‘see the light’ so that he can think if there is any missionary work to be done. It should be here in the United States,” he said. “Once they learn to teach Christians the message of Christ here, then they can think about going to other countries. Charity begins at home.”

The Rev. Ron Carlson, who manages communications for the CMA conference, said those people in the United States who are not Christians, by choice, not by lack of information. He said the purpose of missionary work is to spread the Gospel to where it has not been heard before. He also stressed that the CMA is not colonialist in nature, as it emphasizes indigenous church development and national church autonomy.

Those perennial purveyors of smooth harmonies and West Coast sound, the Beach Boys, are embarking on their longest tour in 30 years. Included in that tour is a two-show stopover at the Du Quoin State Fair. They are slated to perform at 6:30 and 9 p.m. on Tuesday, August 30. Tickets are priced at $13, $11 and $8.

The group of individuals scheduled to appear at Du Quoin is the same bunch that gathered in a West Coast studio in 1961, only to emerge with a cascade of hits creating the "California sound" that rose to prominence in the early '60s. The Beach Boys are comprised of brothers Brian, Carl and Dennis Wilson, cousin Mike Love and old-time friends Al Jardine and Bruce Johnston.

Throughout their career, the group has continued to draw new fans as well as keep the interest of the ones they have. It was only last year that the Beach Boys put on their largest show ever, playing to more than 500,000 fans at the foot of the Washington Monument on the Fourth of July. The concert was aired live on radio stations across the nation as well as filmed for broadcast on Home Box Office.

Among their hits are "Shut Down," "Surfin' USA," "Surfin' Girl," "Fun, Fun," "I Get Around," "Heal My Heart," and the biggest Beach Boy hit ever, "Good Vibrations." A release by Capitol Records of a medley of Beach Boys hits is planned for the future.

Robert Harris, SIU-C director of security, checks out reports in the security radio room. Officer Bruce Lorentznan is in back.

Staff Writer

Robert Harris worries about backpacks, bicycles, stereo and doors to dorm rooms left open. But he doesn’t worry too much about Halloween or SIU-C’s party school image.

Harris is the new director of security for the University. He succeeded Virgil F. Trummer, who left the job in May reportedly because of differences in opinion with Clarence Dougherty, vice president of campus services, over how to run the department.

Trummer had been the director of security since 1974. Harris, who was Trummer’s assistant director, has been with the security force since 1986.

Harris worries about backpacks, bicycles and stereo because they’re items that are frequently stolen. And unlocked dorm rooms are an open invitation to thieves.

Theft is the biggest problem on campus, he said. “People will steal anything that is not nailed down.” The security department combats theft by educating people about how to secure their belongings, he says, and by setting up informational talks. But things still get stolen, Harris said.

Stolen backpacks are very common, he said, especially in the Library. This is one of the hardest kinds of theft to stop because almost everybody has a backpack, he said, and when you see someone carrying books you don’t know whose they might be.

“Dorms are another problem,” he said. Harris admits that leave their dorm rooms open, they walk off for just a minute and in that time their stereo disappears.

Parking is also a big problem for security but the problem is everywhere. “Everyone has it,” he said.

Halloween and SIU-C’s reputation as a party school don’t worry Harris too much. He said that when he first started at SIUC it was a party school but that it has changed a lot and that the parties aren’t as big anymore.

“People still party but not like they used to. We’ve really got a nice place. I’ve never seen a prettier campus.”

The Technology Department in SIU's College of Engineering and Technology received a gift of $4,400 from the Consolidation Coal Co. on Thursday.

The company, which is based in Pittsburgh, Pa., operates several coal mines in Southern Illinois and has been giving the department monetary gifts for the past few years.

Keith Costor, assistant professor in the Technology Department, said that the $4,400 will be used to award three scholarships to undergraduate juniors majoring in industrial technology and specializing in mining technology.

The remaining $2,000 will be used for symposiums, field trips and other activities in the Mining Technology Program. Last year the company gave the department $3,600.

As director of security, Harris has about 45 officers and a budget of over $1 million at his disposal. "I enjoy it. It's a pretty good job," he said.

He's in a position to make big decisions and any changes that may be necessary. But he said he's satisfied with the state of the department and plans no big changes. He commented that SIU-C had one of the best security departments he'd ever seen.

He did say however, that he would like to reinstate the practice of sending officers to specialty schools because by maximizing the sharing of information between the officers the department in general is improved.

The security police have the same authority as a sheriff in counties where the University has an interest. They can write tickets for traffic violations and arrest people, he said. But, he said that he doesn't encourage his officers to go looking for people who speed or run red lights.

Harris described the relationship between security police and the Carbondale Police Department as "getting better all the time."

"We'll back them up and they'll back us up. We try to reciprocate," he said.

Reagan urges Medicare bill freeze

CHICAGO (AP) — President Reagan told America's doctors Thursday that they should take the "painful but necessary medicine" of a one-year freeze on charges to the government for treating elderly Medicare patients.

In a speech before a meeting of the American Medical Association, the president outlined his proposals for controlling rising health care costs and said that "physicians, too, must share the burden of slowing these costs.

Doctors bills paid by the government for treating elderly patients under the Medicare health insurance program increased 29 percent last year while inflation was dropping sharply elsewhere in the economy, Reagan said, and a further increase of 19 percent is expected this year.

"As the patient in the movies once says, 'Give it to me straight, Doc.'” Reagan said. "Well, we believe the straight answer is that a one-year freeze is painful but necessary medicine."

On his way to the AMA appearance, Reagan stopped to speak to about 300 members of the Polish-American community here as Pope John Paul II flew back to the Vatican after an eight-day tour of his native Poland, including meetings with the country's communist rulers and Solidarity leader Lech Walesa.

The pope's visit, Reagan said, was "truly a ray of hope for the Polish people" and "vividly showed that no one can crush the spirit of the Polish people."

Speaking in the Polish National Alliance Hall in far northwest Chicago, the president said the pope's visit "has helped to inspire millions of Poles to continue their struggle to regain the human rights taken from them by the Polish authorities."

Despite Reagan's traditional resistance to government price controls, he told the AMA audience, "It's high time we put health care costs under the knife and cut away the waste and inefficiency. The growth in medical costs is malignant and must be removed if we are to achieve continued health of the American people."

The president reviewed his plan to have the federal government set rates for Medicare hospital bills and to require elderly patients to pay more of their short-term hospitalization costs while the government pays for long-term stays.

The clamor of clanging weights, groans, laughter and conversation bounced off the concrete walls of the Recreation Center weight room.

For many of the women attending the introductory weight training class Monday night, the carefully worded instructions of leader Terry Schneider meshed into background noise.

However, most women jotted down notes as an attempt to understand Schneider's instructions by watching her body movement.

Schneider began the session in the Recreation Center golf room, where there were fewer distractions. There she provided general information for beginning weight training and also answered questions.

The class, sponsored by the Recreation Center, will meet from 7 to 8 p.m. Mondays and Wednesdays for one month. Schneider said that the students will end the session with an understanding of the weight room and their personal goals.

Twenty-eight women were enrolled in the class and because there were fewer distractions, there were fewer problems and also answered questions.

Men's athletics to fill positions

By Joe Paschen
Staff Writer

There will be some new faces in the Men's Athletics department soon. Hurry and do not take it, still is not sure.

From now, assistant athletics director and acting sports information director, said two sports information assistants and a director of promotion and marketing are to be hired.

Ticket manager Neena Kinney is schedule to return after 35 years service. "We are actively seeking someone to fill that position," said Huff. "What we're looking for is a woman with versatility and expertise in promotion and marketing.

Huff said he hopes to have that position before August. The problem is finding someone with the qualifications the athletics department is looking for.

The SIU-C Employment Office is handling applications for the position which civil service has entitled publicity-promotion specialist. According to an employee, the department received four applications by the noon deadline Thursday. However, several other persons were listed on the office's register when ads for the job appeared and they are listed as candidates.

Once all applications are received, the employment office will recommend three names to the athletic department. Those candidates will be interviewed by Huff, Athletics Director Lew Hartung, and Business Manager Reggie Shand.

Shand says the person hired will have plenty to do right away. "I want someone to not only sell tickets, but to promote them as well. That person will also have to be able to go out to neighboring communities and speak to groups while marketing those tickets," she said.

The employment office expects to choose the top three applicants for the publicity-promotion position by the second or third week of July. The sports information personnel are also expected to be named by early July, Huff said.

Huff said he will combine the role of sports information director with his job and hire a full-time assistant, who will handle many of the responsibilities an SID would.

"We have a few people in mind for the assistant SID right now," said Huff. "And we will be hiring another full-time assistant to help out."

Huff leaves later this month for the annual convention of Sports Information Directors of America in San Diego and may come up with further candidates for his assistant positions while he's there.

Don Koperv, who was last year's SID, left for a publicity position with the U.S. Olympic Committee last spring. He had been assisted by intern Wes Seeley, who Huff said may be back.

"She has applied for the full-time job as my top assistant and is a very strong candidate," said Huff. "She's a very hard worker and that's the kind of person we need."

Streaking Sox win fifth straight

CHICAGO (AP) — Rookie Ron Kittle drove in three runs with a two-run home run and a sacrifice fly, and Greg Luzinski hit a solo homer Thursday to lead the Chicago White Sox to a 3-2 win over the Minnesota Twins 3-2 for their fifth straight victory.

It marked the longest winning streak of the season for the Sox as they rolled to their ninth triumph in the last 11 games.

The last one was a 6-4 triumph over the Twins on April 16. The Sox have won six of the last seven meetings.

Carroll Voss started for the Twins, allowing six runs on eight hits in six innings. The entire staff of relievers allowed five runs over the last three innings.

Voss, who left with a sore arm, had pitched only two innings since the past's start against St. Louis.

The Sox got to him immediately, scoring three runs in the first inning. The three runs was the most Voss had allowed in 22 career starts.

Luzinski's homer, his fourth of the season, came in the second inning.

Kittle then padded the lead in the third inning with a two-run home run, his fourth of the year.

The Twins scored twice in the fifth inning, but the Sox's offense was too much for them.

Cruz tickled about joining Chisox

CHICAGO (AP) — Major league stolen base co-leader Julio Cruz is a pretty fast fellow, but the Seattle Mariners were one step ahead when he bought a house in the Pacific Northwest last week.

The day after the purchase, the Mariners’ second baseman was traded to the Chicago White Sox for his teammate Tony Bernazard.

No matter, shrugged Cruz. He’ll live in the house of his own.

Cruz, a free agent after the 1983 season and fed up with losing teams, says keeping him in Seattle would have required “$1 million or $2 million, tax free.” Management knew it and — still smarting from the loss of pitcher Floyd Bannister to free agency and the Sox last year — felt it needed a change. The Mariners were trading away good players and not doing much to win,” the 28-year-old New York City native said in a locker room interview before a game against his former teammates.

Cruz, with a .229 average through Wednesday, is mum about what will take to sign him after the season, but he’s loquacious about being on a contender.

“The second baseman will be better and we hope the left fielder will be better,” Bernazard said.

As soon as we get our hitting and pitching together, there’s no telling how far we can go,” Cruz enthuses.

Cruz hopes to win over skeptics Bernazard fans with a “razzle-dazzle-old-field” style some call “acrobatic” and others dismiss as “hot dog.”

“If it’s a guy who shows up the opposition, I just play with flair,” said the 5-foot-9, 160-pounder, who limbers up for games by leaping with his feet together from dugout floor to field surface, a four-foot feat.

“All I’ve been told,” Cruz said, “is to play defense and I’ve been given the green light to steal.”

Trade has Bernazard bitter; says Sox lost better player

CHICAGO (AP) — Tony Bernazard remains perplexed about why he was shipped to the Seattle Mariners, but he’s sure of one thing — if it was because he did so well last year, it was for the wrong reason.

Cruz swapped Bernazard to Seattle June 15 for his Mariners counterpart, major league base-striker co-leader Julio Cruz.

“I want to call home base,” Bernazard said, “but they got me out of there.”

The trade is pointless now and may prove foolish later, Bernazard says.

“Cruz (a free agent after this season) doesn’t stay with the Sox, they’ll get burned — they aren’t gonna have a second baseman, but Seattle’s getting a good player where we gonna play in-day, in-day out.”
