Paper: Dukakis focus of FBI probe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The FBI is investigating the role of Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and senior members of his administration in the selection of a prison site. The Washington Times reported Thursday.

Investigators are trying to determine whether criminal laws were violated in the transaction for the property, the newspaper said, quoting unidentified law enforcement sources.

The focus of the probe is whether Dukakis, the prospective Democratic presidential nominee, or other officials gave inside information to owners of the site in central Massachusetts and whether the owners acted improperly when they bought the land and later offered it for sale, the Times said.

However, the FBI issued a two-sentence statement, which said an "inquiry" was being conducted into the situation, but that the governor was not the target of an investigation.

"The FBI's Boston field office is conducting an inquiry to ascertain whether federal statutes have been violated regarding the placement of a state prison at New Braintree, Mass., and, or the procurement of land for that prison."

"Governor Michael Dukakis is not the subject of an FBI investigation," the statement said.

Blood in short supply; goal of 700 pints set

By Susan Curtis
Staff Writer

The Red Cross needs to collect more than 700 pints of blood in next week's drive because the whole Midwest is experiencing a desperate shortage. Vivian Ugent, blood drive coordinator, said.

Ugent gave several reasons for the blood shortage.

University students are the major group of donors and when enrollment goes down for summer session, so does the blood supply. Ugent said. High school students also are less likely to donate when school is not in session, she said.

Many people are on vacation during the summer, Ugent said, but "the need for blood never takes a vacation."

This summer the supply is lower than usual for all types of blood, Ugent said, and there are shortages all over the country.

Also, more accidents occur in the summer, she said.

This region sends blood to 140 hospitals within a 250-mile radius, Ugent said.

It is a crisis situation, she said. Operations are being postponed and the blood supply for liver transplants is depleted.

The shortage doesn't have to happen, she said, because giving blood doesn't cost anything and people can make a difference by donating.

"You can't get any diseases from giving blood," Ugent said. "The only things you can get are a good feeling and good food."

During the summer more donors are deferred from giving blood because of low iron, Ugent said. People drink more iced tea and other liquids and the iron is diluted, she said.

Eating foods high in iron and taking vitamins with iron can help, she said.

Everyone who gave blood at the University's April drive is eligible to give again, she said.

The blood drive on campus is scheduled for 10:30 to 4:30 Wednesday and Thursday in Ballroom D of the Student Center. It is sponsored by the SIU Annuitants Association.

Appointments can be made from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. today and Monday through Thursday at tables in the lower hall of the Student Center, or by calling 529-2151.

The appointment tables are sponsored by the Undergraduate Student Government, which also is giving $100 to the Registered Student Organization which brings in the most donors.

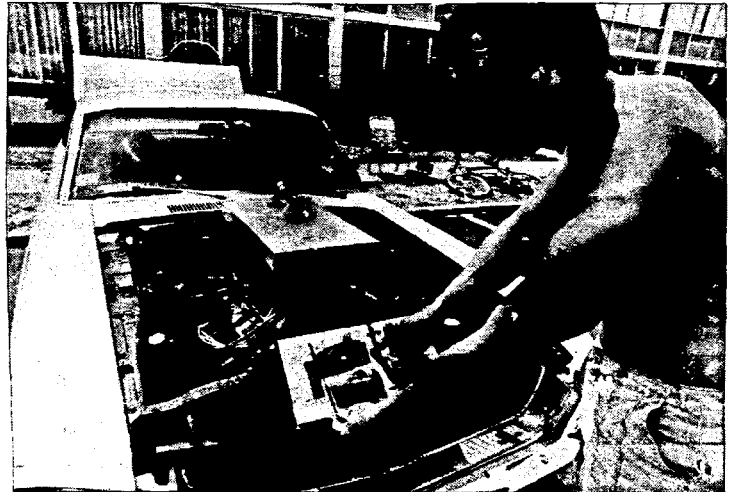

Sign-up sheets for the organizations will be available at the blood drive.

Meanwhile, emergency drives have been scheduled because the shortage is so severe, Ugent said.

The Marion Army Reserve will hold a drive from 8:30 to 12:30 a.m. Saturday at the Wilson Army Reserve Center on New Route 13.

There will also be two drives on Tuesday, from 1 to 7 p.m. at the Murphysboro Walmart on Route 13 and 1:30 to 6:30 p.m. at the St. Francis Xavier Church, 303 S. Poplar St., in Carbondale.

A $20 shopping spree will be given away at the Murphysboro blood drive, and a beach towel and beach umbrella will be given away at the Carbondale drive.

Police preparing for large crowd at DuQuoin car show

By John Waiblay
Staff Writer

The Street Machine Nationals in DuQuoin promise to be one of the summer's hottest events, promoters say.

However, law enforcement officials from around the state will be on duty to ensure the expected 80,000-plus crowd keeps its cool throughout the weekend.

"Anytime you have a large group of people congregated for such an event, you will usually have something happen," Maj. Lonnie D. Inlow, of the Illinois State Police said.

Illinois State Police officers met Thursday at John A.

speeding arrest, illegal transportation," said Inlow, but he said that most people show a respect for the law and that it is generally a normal event.

"We hope everything goes well," Inlow said.

In 1987, of an estimated crowd of 65,000, there were only 209 traffic arrest and 230 warning citations issued by state police.

After the fairground events end in the early evening some of the crowd filters into Carbondale, largely because many of them are staying in hotels here.

Administrators want pressure on legislators

By Susan Curtis
Staff Writer

Although talks of a tax increase have come to a halt, Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit said University administrators "still want to keep the pressure on any way we can."

Gov. James R. Thompson said he stopped negotiations on the tax increase Wednesday because House Speaker Michael Madigan, who opposes the increase, has shown no sign of shifting his position.

Pettit said none of the state university system heads has talked to Madigan, but they have discussed the issue with the other legislative leaders and Thompson.

Letters to Madigan and local legislators are probably the best way to get to their attention, Pettit said.

Vice Chancellor James

Brown said there is not a lot of time to drag out negotiations on the issue. A decision on the tax increase must be made by the end of the month, he said.

The General Assembly is scheduled to adjourn on June 30.

Thompson said he won't hold another negotiating session until there is the possibility of progress.

Presently, the only legislative leader supporting the governor's tax proposal is Senate President Philip Rock Lee Daniels, House GOP Leader, said the majority of his caucus seems to want a spending cut rather than a tax increase.

It is a frustrating situation because education administrators can't have a direct role in the negotiations, Brown said.

Canada retaliates against diplomatic bans in Russia

By United Press International

The Canadian government expelled a Soviet military attack from Canada Thursday and declared a former Soviet representative persona non grata, escalating a diplomatic conflict with Moscow involving charges of espionage. Canadian External Affairs Minister Joe Clark said in a statement the latest expulsions were in retaliation for the Soviet expulsion of two Canadian diplomats and banning of three other Canadians. He said the Soviet actions were "totally without justification."

Austrian president greets pope with praise

VIENNA (UPI) — Austrian President Kurt Waldheim, under attack for alleged complicity in Nazi war crimes, welcomed Pope John Paul II to Austria Thursday with praise for the pontiff's efforts to end "intolerance, intransigence and hate among nations, religions and classes." Waldheim greeted the Roman Catholic leader in a brief ceremony in the rain at Schwechat Airport that opened John Paul's second visit in less than five years to predominantly Catholic Austria. The pope is the only Western leader to exchange official visits with Austria since Waldheim's election June 8, 1986.

Jerusalem outage not caused by Palestinians

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israeli soldiers clashed with Palestinians in scattered unrest in occupied territories Thursday and a severed cable caused a power outage that blacked out much of the country. The outage, which occurred at midday, was not caused by Palestinian sabotage, an electric company spokesman said. Palestinian activists have called for attacks on Israeli industry and agriculture.

South Africa begins talks to withdraw troops

CAIRO (UPI) — South Africa begins negotiations Friday with Angola and Cuba in a new round of talks on the withdrawal of nearly 50,000 Cuban troops from Angola and its linkage to independence for neighboring Namibia. The new round, also involving the United States as mediator, was described by a diplomatic source as a "very important moment in long and difficult negotiations."

Senator warns new bill may doom legislation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new trade bill, designed to avert a second veto by President Reagan, was introduced in the Senate Thursday, but Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, warned that last-minute changes would doom the legislation. "Our hope is that this new trade bill ... will now move easily to enactment. It is ready for the president's signature," Bentsen said.

Representative threatens House telephones

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Telephone outages plagued House offices Thursday for the third straight day, prompting one lawmaker to threaten to have the "whole blooming" $16 million system replaced if it can't be repaired during the Fourth of July recess. Rep. Walter Jones, D-N.C., said Alexander Graham Bell was probably proud of his invention but "if he'd been a member of the House the last two weeks with the new telephone system ... he'd be embarrassed."

Lack of evidence frees columnist of charges

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Attorney's Office announced Thursday there was insufficient evidence to charge columnist Carl Rowan with assault in the shooting of one of several nighttime intruders at his home. However, the U.S. Attorney's Office said it intended to file charges of unlawful entry against Benjamin Smith, 18, who was shot by Rowan, and Laura Bachman, 19, both of whom were arrested at the residence.

Derailed train starts fire, spews toxic cloud

CROFTON, Ky. (UPI) — The crew of a train that derailed and sparked a fire in a phosphorus tank car — spewing a huge toxic cloud that forced about 15,000 people to flee their homes — was apparently unaware of a "slow order" on the track, authorities said Thursday. "It appears the engineer was going 35 miles per hour under a 10 mile per hour slow order," CSX spokesman Lloyd Lewis, said. CSX spokesman Tim Hensley told a news conference the slow order had been issued for the section of the track about the length of a city block Wednesday because of extreme heat.

Street Machines cruise into DuQuoin

By Carrie Ferguson
Entertainment Editor

Automobile lovers from 42 states, including Alaska and Hawaii, are at the DuQuoin State Fairgrounds today through Sunday for the 12th Annual "picnic for auto enthusiasts."

The Street Machine Nationals, in its third year at DuQuoin, will attract an estimated 80,000 people, organizers said.

"Customizing automobiles is an expression of the personality of the owner," Susan S. Davis, Special Events vice-president, said. "It's a great way for them (the participants) to show off their hard work and investment."

The number of entrants were expanded from 3,000 to 3,500 this year, Davis said. "We figured we could comfortably expand the number of vehicles by consulting the State Police

No vacancy: Motel rooms full for weekend

By Robert Baxter
Staff Writer

All Carbondale motel rooms are reserved and a record number of visitors is expected at the Street Machine Nationals in DuQuoin, but rooms may become available.

"All the hotel and motel rooms have been booked up for weeks," Donna Reynolds, Sales Manager for the Carbondale Convention and Tourism Bureau said.

"But visitors to Carbondale should try anyway because many people don't show up for their reservations or pay the deposit required on a room by many of the hotels in the area," she said.

Another option is the many State parks and campgrounds located in the Southern Illinois area.

"We have 830 rooms in the Carbondale area and also campgrounds which are getting more calls this year," Reynolds said. "The campgrounds in the area are very helpful in accommodating visitors as is the rest of Southern Illinois, which seems to go all out in making visitors feel welcome."

Carbondale is not the only place where finding a room for the night will be a tough thing to do.

"We're up here at the Du Quoin State Fairgrounds today calling about 30 different cities in the area who have hotel or motel facilities," Reynolds said. "This covers a 60-mile area in Southern Illinois and many of these calls we have made have told us they are booked," she said.

Jim Prowell, executive director of the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce, said that the expected record crowd means good news for local businesses.

"The average overnight guest will spend $111 dollars in the time they are here," he said.

Reynolds agreed. "I'd say the impact on the entire Southern Illinois area is a good one," she said. "Everybody profits from it."

Big Muddy Monster: Is it JoJo gone bad?

SASQUATCH, YETI, and the Big Muddy Monster. Are these creatures real? You bet they are. So are the Easter Bunny and Santa Claus. As long as people believe in their hearts that they exist, they will be real.

But maybe belief isn't in people's hearts, as much as it is in their pocketbooks. Since becoming available last week, more than 300 Big Muddy Monster T-shirts ($6.99 plus tax) have been snapped up by souvenir seekers.

Murphysboro Mayor David McDowell believes in the Big Muddy Monster, going as far as dedicating days of commerce to the hairy, stench-ridden beast. He even had the Murphysboro police apprehend the monster. But on what charge? All it did was drink from a dog's dish.

"WE HAVE THE MONSTER in custody," McDowell says. "He'll be free to roam the streets of Murphysboro, to greet people and shake hands."

Is this what happened to JoJo the koala bear after WSIU-TV canceled the "JoJo and Joyce Club"? JoJo is a friendly, inoffensive bear. Perfect for the hand-shaking, street-roaming type of creature the City of Murphysboro wants. Besides, JoJo needs the work.

But there is an obvious difference between JoJo and the monster that Bob Reinman and others saw on the northern outskirts of Murphysboro two weeks ago.

Mayor McDowell knows this. He said he personally has hunted the monster and seen its tracks. "In no way did the city council or the Chamber of Commerce perpetrate the (monster sightings), but we are going to take advantage of it," McDowell said.

IT, WHATEVER IT is, is still out there, lurking in the woods and creeping into town at night to drink from dog's water dishes.

Three people have described the monster as being at least ten feet tall and covered with hair. If it wore shoes, it would need about size 15, EEEE width. As far as personal grooming goes, it wears sewage cologne, has red eyes (maybe bloodshot?) and yellow teeth (doesn't use tartar-control toothpaste). It also emits a high-pitched scream (has a promising career as a lead singer in a heavy metal band).

As long as the monster is trendy, Murphysboro businesses are smart to capitalize on the trend. Southern Illinois has a reputation for a being a crazy, happening area. The monster enhances this reputation.

Let's just hope the monster tourism trade doesn't turn sour and give people upstate a reason to ridicule Southern Illinois. It'll be fun while it lasts.

What Carl Rowan should have said

As much as I admire him, I have to say with much regret that Carl Rowan blew it.

If he is being subjected to the jeers and smickers of the pro-gun people, it's his own fault.

By now, most of you know what I'm talking about. Rowan, a prominent Washington columnist, recently wounded a young man who was part of a group of suburban youths who invaded Rowan's property to use his pool and Jacuzzi for a late-night splash party.

Rowan also is a fervent advocate of strict handgun controls and has written that anyone owning an unregistered gun ought to be jailed.

Unfortunately, Rowan's gun appears to have been unregistered, although he says that he got it from his son, a former FBI agent, and that it's probably registered with a federal agency.

This has caused the pro-gun people to say tee-hee and ha-ha and otherwise make fun of Rowan. And, I said, it's his own fault. He deserves it.

I'm not saying Rowan was wrong for plinking that young man in the wrist. If by the age of 18 a suburban youth has not learned that it's impolite to climb a fence and frolic in somebody else's backyard, a bullet in the wrist should enlighten him.

But Rowan's explanation, which he wrote shortly after the incident, was his big mistake.

Rowan described hearing the intruders, phoning the police, getting his gun, opening a door to let the cops in through a gate. And there stood this tall young man smoking a joint. When Rowan told him to "freeze," just as we are taught to do by TV, he says the young man came toward him.

This, Rowan concluded, meant that he and his family were in mortal danger, so he fired a warning shot that happened to catch the goof.

And that, Rowan says, justified the shooting. While he still believes in strict gun laws, he said that if society permits the widespread use of guns and drugs, he will be ready to defend his home and family.

I believe everything Carl said, but from a strictly professional point of view, I think he could have come up with a more effective story.

If it had happened to me, I would have dropped the danger-to-family-and-home stuff. Instead, I would have written something like this.

"Last night I shot a young man who invaded my property. Why did I do it? Why didn't I just wait for the police to arrest him? I'll tell you why."

"There I was, sleeping in my own bed when this noise wakes me up. Right then I get mad. I'm no kid and I need my rest."

"I look out and what do I see? A bunch of punks in my pool and Jacuzzi. I work hard for a living. And do you know what that pool and Jacuzzi cost? Don't ask."

"So I call the cops, but while I'm waiting for them to arrive, I think: How do I know what they're doing in my pool and Jacuzzi? Maybe they're making wee-wee."

"It figures that anybody rude enough to climb over an 8-foot fence and jump in somebody else's Jacuzzi is capable of making wee-wee in it."

"So I stood there in my pajamas, getting madder and madder. I have never made wee-wee in somebody else's pool or Jacuzzi. Nor did any of my ancestors. And I raised my children to never do it. So why should these people be making wee-wee in my pool and Jacuzzi. Or, by their very presence, create the assumption that they did?"

"In this gracious living — standing in my own bedroom, peering out my window at a group of pampered youths who have nothing better to do in the middle of the night than make wee-wee in my Jacuzzi? Is this to be my realization of the American dream?"

"So I grabbed the gun my son gave me when I was receiving death threats from loyal readers, opened a door, and there he stood — your typical, self-indulgent, me-first goofball. He was dripping water. My hard-earned water. And he was puffing a marijuana cigarette."

"I ordered him to 'freeze.' Instead, he mumbled and came toward me. And I knew what he was going to do. He was going to invade my home and make wee-wee on my expensive living room carpet."

"That was more than I could take, so I plinked him in the hand. Actually, I was aiming for a more intimate, private part of his anatomy, but I'm a poor shot."

"That's the whole story. But I don't present it to justify my behavior."

"To the contrary, it's further evidence that we need strict gun laws so a trigger-happy guy like me doesn't have a pistol around the house."

"So that's it with me and guns. And if s'ybody climbs the fence to use my pool and Jacuzzi, there won't be any shooting."

"Now I've got to go to a kennel and pick out a pit bull. I'm sure they will have one that can swim."

Opinions from elsewhere

The Indianapolis News

"Beauty pageants mean more progress. We should have more of these so we don't fall behind the West." So says a 20-year-old Moscow fellow seen observing elimination trials for the first Miss Moscow contest.

"We are having a reawakening in our culture and this is part of it," says pageant director Mikhail Zlotnikov. "This is glasnost; this is perestroika."

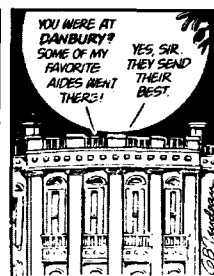

And from Soviet beauty Oxana Fondera: "I want to be so big they will know me all the way to California."

Welcome to bourgeois decadence, Soviet-style. Or, as The Washington Post's David Remnick puts it: "There she is, Miss Moscow, there she is, your ideal. There she is, standing on air she is, fairest of fair she is, hero of socialist labor she is, Miss Moscow."

Miss Leningrad, Miss Riga, Miss Vilnius and Miss Odessa have already been chosen. The final Miss Moscow contest will be held this month. If all goes well, organizers say a Miss U.S.S.R. contest will follow...

Hmmm. First the Soviet Union discovers Pepsi, then McDonald's, and now beauty pageants. Can hula hoops be far behind?

Crowds at car show won't be a problem for Carbondale

By Robert Baxter
Staff Writer

Although the Street Machine Nationals may have a record-breaking turnout this year, Carbondale will feel little effects of the crowd, Jim Prowell, executive director of Carbondale Chamber of Commerce, said.

"The motels and hotels in the area have been booked for quite some time now — 50 miles in any direction," Prowell said. "But there might still be some rooms available where people don't show up or cancel their reservations."

Jeff Doherty, assistant city manager, said he believes large crowds watching the street machines pass through town this weekend will not pose any major problems for the city.

"The more people we have, the more litter we'll have to contend with," Doherty said. "But the first two years the Street Machine Nationals moved to DuQuoin, we haven't found a need to have extra city workers on because there's little debris left over."

Doherty said Carbondale is far enough from DuQuoin that the city doesn't feel the brunt of the action, as it does when the Halloween celebration draws large crowds on the strip.

"It's nothing like the Halloween celebration because the crowds aren't as large or concentrated in a certain area," he said.

Local businesses haven't anticipated major problems, either.

Scott Dyer, manager of Ponderosa, 1232 E. Main, said business may actually decrease some because of the event.

"Towns people tend to stay in because of the sometimes rowdy crowds and all the traffic going through town," Dyer said. "We don't bring in extra help because it's just isn't needed."

Jay Horney, bar manager at Jeremiah's, 201 N. Washington, said people tend eat fast-food over nice sit-down meals.

"I've talked with other restaurant people about where (visitors) eat and it's mostly fast-food places like Wendy's," Horney said. "Our business is pretty much the same as any other weekend."

Even 24-hour restaurants like Denny's experience little change in the amount of customers during this event, Rex Rhine, manager at Denny's, 1915 W. Sycamore, said.

"There is a moderate increase before people leave in the early morning to go (to DuQuoin) and late at night when they return," he said. "So we do bring in a couple of extra employees during these times, but that's it."

Bridgette Brandon, Manager at Burger King, 901 W. Main, said there's a noticeable difference in business there.

"Business was up last year during this time, but we still try to schedule the same number of people we normally would in case there isn't a change in business," she said.

Jeff Hammonds, manager of Clark Self-Service station, 1012 W. Main, said he notices a change in business as well.

"We're quite a bit busier, but most of our business is self-service so its not that bad," he said. "The guys who are normally scheduled can handle it without additional help."

PK'S, 308 S. Illinois Ave., like other nightclubs on the strip, experience an increase in business.

"Our business definitely increases, but not to the point where we need extra people working," Debbie Vanausdoll, employee at PK'S, said.

Liquor stores aren't concerned with additional crowds this weekend.

"We don't expect any increase in business," Pat Brady, Manager of Westroad Liquors, Mardale Shopping Center, said. "When we first opened we thought business would increase during this event, but as it turned out it wasn't much different than normal."

"As far away as we are from the action and any large crowds, I don't expect any rowdiness like what may have happened when the event was held in Springfield," he said. "Everything there is much more centralized."

The owners of the property 60 miles west of Boston could make as much as $7 million in profit if plans for the sale proceed, the newspaper said.

"The FBI has initiated a preliminary inquiry in an effort to determine if there was a violation ... in connection with the selection of the New Braintree prison site," agency spokesman John Clorberty in Boston told the Times. He reportedly would not comment further.

The Times said sources close to the investigation revealed Dukakis is part of the probe because of his involvement in the site-selection process for the medium-security prison. No specific allegations have been raised and no one has been charged with wrongdoing, the newspaper noted.

The Times said FBI agents started interviewing residents of New Braintree in March 1987. Dukakis has denied any wrongdoing in the matter, and gubernatorial spokesman

James Dorsey called any allegations "ludicrous and the work of snobs in New Braintree who don't want a prison in their back yard."

Dukakis asked the Legislature in June 1986 to approve construction of a $22 million, 500-bed prison in New Braintree, a community of about 800 people. The proposal included about $10 million to acquire the property and $12 million to renovate buildings on the site, the Times said.

Judge upholds convict's sentence

AUBURN, N.Y. (UPI) — A judge Thursday upheld the life sentence of a police killer who claims he already served his jail time and should be set free because he "died" during open-heart surgery and was then brought back to life.

During that surgery in 1986, Jerry Rosenberg's heart stopped and he had to be revived with electric shocks. Although admitting he survived, Rosenberg said he technically died and therefore has served his sentence.

State Supreme Court Judge Peter Corning decided not to dismiss Rosenberg's life sentence for killing two police officers in 1963.

Corning said the Court of Appeals, New York's highest court, has defined death "as the irreversible cessation of heart and respiratory systems." He said Rosenberg offered no evidence that proved he had suffered "irreversible" death.

But Rosenberg, who represented himself at the hearing in the Cayuga County Courthouse in Auburn, argued he had died based on reports by doctors and a definition of ventricular fibrillation, which he said doctors claimed he suffered while undergoing open heart surgery.

He referred to a noted medical encyclopedia that defined ventricular fibrillation as "producing sudden death."

Rosenberg said by that definition, he was in fact dead during the operation and doctors were required to use electric shock to bring him back to life, and he has therefore served his life sentence. He claimed under California and New Jersey law he would be set free.

"The only issue here is whether it's brain dead or whether it (the definition of death) goes with the heart," Rosenberg said. "You've got to be a moron to think it's of the brain, it's of the heart."

Rosenberg, 49, of Brooklyn, is serving time at the Auburn Correctional Facility, but for the last two months he has been treated at University Hospital in Syracuse for an irregular heart beat

Police spokesman, said there will be six or eight additional officers assigned during the weekend, even though "we have not had any problems the last few years."

someone will squeal their tires, but generally motorists have been very good.

SIU-C Security will be, "beefing up patrol," according to Lt. Andrew Smith, shift commander.

U.S. to aid Australian farmers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan told Australian Prime Minister Robert Hawke Thursday that the United States will protect Australian farmers against measures taken to counter unfair subsidies for agriculture.

Hawke addressed a joint meeting of Congress before visiting Reagan and said Australia is a strong ally of the United States, an implicit reference to neighboring New Zealand, which restricts port calls by U.S. Navy ships possibly armed with nuclear weapons.

Judge: North trial soon or not at all

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal judge, frustrated by the snail's pace of the Iran-Contra case, pressed the Reagan administration Thursday to clear away secrecy obstacles to the trial of Oliver North or "there's not going to be any trial."

U.S. District Court Judge Gerhard Gesell, at the end of a pretrial hearing, said he had hoped to set trial date on Friday for North, the fired White House aide, and central figure in the covert arms-and-aid conspiracy case. But remaining issues over defense access to classified documents blocked movement.

"I want this case to move, focusing on a trial — and if we can't get a trial going soon, there's not going to be a trial," Gesell warned.

At issue is the work of a governmental interagency group that is responsible for reviewing the secret documents before they are handed over to defense lawyers. During Thursday's hearing, the prosecution said the group still is reviewing about 150,000 documents. The defense contends those documents — most from the CIA and Justice Department — might be relevant to its case.

Independent prosecutor Lawrence Walsh already has submitted 80,000 core documents but characterizes the remaining documents as marginal.

Under the Classified Information Procedures Act of 1980, which governs the use of classified documents in criminal cases, the attorney general makes the final decision on which secret documents can be used in open court.

Gesell indicated he fears both sides will go through the arduous process of reviewing the secret documents only to have the Justice Department decide they are too sensitive to be revealed publicly at trial.

"It is perhaps clear now ... that the highest authorities in the government have to make a decision whether this case is going to go or whether it isn't," Gesell said.

"I'm just wondering whether we don't need a clear decision from the administration itself whether they want to try this case or whether they don't want to try this case," the judge said.

Gesell suggested that Walsh and a representative of Attorney General Edwin Meese could confer and confront the classified documents issue.

Ed Meese subpoenaed in Wedtech

NEW YORK (UPI) — Attorney General Edwin Meese and a former aide have been subpoenaed to appear as defense witnesses in the Wedtech bribery racketeering trial of Rep. Mario Biaggi and six others, it was learned Thursday.

"My understanding is that, yes, a subpoena was received by Mr. Meese's office for the Biaggi trial," said James Rocap, an attorney for Meese in Washington.

The wife of James Jenkins, former chief deputy to Meese when he served as counselor to the president, confirmed by telephone at her home in Carmichael, Calif., that a subpoena was served on her husband "last (Wednesday) night."

Dominic Amorosa, attorney for Biaggi's son, Richard, who is a co-defendant in the case, said Monday in a letter to Judge Constance Baker Motley. "The testimony of these witnesses will establish that it was they and others, and not Richard Biaggi and his father, who corruptly acted on behalf of Wedtech."

The chief prosecutor in the case, Howard Wilson, an assistant U.S. attorney, citing a gag order, refused to comment on the subpoenas.

Soviets entertain profs

Twenty emeritus professors visited the Soviet Union, "exploring at the most beginning levels," a tentative idea of educational exchange between the Soviet Union and SIU-C, Arnold J. Auerbach, Emeritus College director, said.

The professors toured Moscow, Leningrad, and three autonomous areas, including Georgia, Armenia and Azerbaijan, which are located in the Caucasus region between the Caspian and Black Seas. They returned June 4 from the trip, which was sponsored by the Emeritus College.

"The people were very receptive and warm. There seems to be a moving away from the Iron-Curtain mentality," William Mathias, associate professor in the Department of Educational Administration and Higher Education, said.

SIU-C is the 12th largest university for foreign students, but there are none from Russia, Auerbach said.

"We went to Russia to at least invite the students to come to SIU-C to study, and now it is up to the universities to decide whether they want to pursue an exchange or not," he said.

The professors visited Moscow State University, Leningrad University and Armenia State University, where each administrative official received a copy of Land Between The Rivers as a gift from Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit. The book shows many beautiful aspects of the University and region, and they seemed very interested, Auerbach said.

Leningrad State University is considering exchanging students and professors with the California university system, while the city of Erevan, where the University of Armenia is located, is the sister city of Cambridge, Mass., he said.

We met delegations from Harvard and other various universities who were on educational visits there also, he said.

Differences in the educational system between the Soviet Union and the United States, however, is quite evident, Mathias said. A screening process is used to get into the universities because education is free in the Soviet Union.

The competition is very stiff, Mathias said.

There is no emphasis on social life or athletics, added Auerbach.

Heat wave ignites short tempers

By United Press International

Tempers flared in West Virginia over air conditioning breakdowns and residents of a posh suburb of Boise, Idaho, were told Thursday their water may be turned off if they don't stop using so much of it on their lawns.

It was Day 5 of a heat wave that sent temperatures soaring again to record levels across much of the United States, compounding the Farm Belt drought that is killing crops in the fields and stalling barge traffic on the nation's inland waterways.

In St. Louis, a 99-year-old woman living without air conditioning died of hypothermia. Health Commissioner Dian Sharma said Mirtha Thompson's body was found Wednesday.

Her death prompted Sharma to declare a heat alert Thursday to activate the opening of 21 cooling shelters across the city.

While temperatures in Missouri were slightly cooler than the 100-degree readings Wednesday, the heat triggered a walkout of 1,800 workers at the Chrysler automobile assembly plant in Fenton — the third straight day such a walkout occurred.

In Chicago, U.S. Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng held an emergency meeting on the drought with 10 Farm Belt governors. One of them, Illinois Gov. James R. Thompson, proposed diverting water from Lake Michigan into the Mississippi River to raise water levels and get barge traffic moving again.

A cold front from Canada brought relief to parts of the upper Midwest and the Northeast Thursday. But it did little for the rest of the nation.

By early afternoon, records were again being set or tied across a wide area. Nashville, Tenn., hit 100 degrees to tie a 1944 record, and a 99-degree reading in Paducah, Ky., broke a 1952 record.

Livestock will suffer in heat wave

CHICAGO (UPI) — Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng told Farm Belt governors at an emergency meeting Thursday that livestock will suffer the most immediate and severe effects of the drought ravaging their states.

North Dakota Gov. George Sinner, who called the emergency meeting, said 70 percent of the small grain crop has been destroyed in his state. And Illinois Gov. James R. Thompson called for diversion of water from Lake Michigan to the Mississippi River to get drought-stalled barge traffic moving again.

Lyng said the drought will have long-term "global" impact — affecting food reserves, trade and prices around the world. But he said the governors at Thursday's session will concentrate on the immediate effects of the drought.

The governors broke into three working groups for seminars on the effects of drought on livestock, the impact on farm income.

"We must avoid the elimination of another whole tier of farmers," Sinner said.

Water transfer sought

CHICAGO (UPI) — Gov. James R. Thompson called Friday for diversion of millions of gallons of water from Lake Michigan to get crucial barge traffic moving again on the drought-withered Mississippi River.

"The nation's commerce must be kept moving and it's not moving on the Mississippi River," Thompson told an emergency meeting of Farm Belt governors convened in Chicago to discuss the drought crisis.

He asked fellow governors in the Great Lakes region to support the "rare but imperative necessary diversion" of water from Lake Michigan through the Chicago River and the Illinois Waterway system to the Illinois and Mississippi Rivers.

"The Mississippi River is 10 to 20 feet below its normal level all along its length, and the lower Mississippi is at its lowest level since the beginning of record-keeping in 1872," Thompson told the 10 governors attending the session.

"The loss of barge transportation will have a severe impact on the Midwestern economy, especially agricultural interests," he said.

Thompson said the diversion must be controlled to prevent flooding and should not be needed for more than 100 days.

"But even a diversion for up to 6 months would lower the water level on Lake Michigan by only 1 inch and come at a time when Lake Michigan and Lake Huron are 2 inches above the longterm average for the month," he said.

Thompson said increasing the level of the Mississippi will require diverting water from Lake Michigan at a rate of up to 9,000 cubic feet per second.

He urged the Army Corps of Engineers to petition the Supreme Court to authorize the diversion.

An unidentified patient is transferred from the ambulance on the left, which had mechanical problems, to the one on the right. The ambulance was returning the patient from a visit to a doctor's office

Economic report revised

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House increased its estimate of economic growth for the rest of the year Thursday but a government report revised downward the nation's economic output for the first quarter.

The Commerce Department lowered its first-quarter estimate of annual growth in the gross national product Thursday by 0.3 percentage point to 3.6 percent.

The seasonally adjusted annual $34.6 billion increase in the GNP, the total output of goods and services, is the lowest jump since the second quarter of 1987, the department's Bureau of Economic Analysis said.

Researchers expect moderating economic growth for the rest of 1988.

Nonetheless, Beryl Sprinkel, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, announced the administration raised its target for economic growth from the fourth quarter of 1987 to the fourth quarter of 1988 from 2.4 percent to 3 percent.

"It turns out our rosy forecast wasn't rosy enough," Sprinkel said.

"The stronger-than-expected recent performance of the economy has not altered the administration's view of the economy's long-term growth prospects," Sprinkel said. "We do expect slower growth for the remainder of the year."

Minorities will fill 'junk' jobs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The American economy will have 20 million new workers by the year 2000 but most of them will be minorities or immigrants filling "junk jobs for chump change," the Institute for Educational Leadership said Thursday.

The institute said an extensive demographic analysis found the jobs available in the next 12 years often will be low-level, low-paying service jobs. About 85 percent of the estimated 20 million new workers will be women, minorities or immigrants, the study said.

"There is a great need to generate more middle-income service jobs, especially small business starts for minorities in the United States," Harold Hodgkinson, a senior fellow at the institute who wrote the study, said.

"Our economy all too often is producing junk jobs for chump change."

The study showed 3.5 million people worked full-time in 1986 but were eligible for poverty benefits, said Hodgkinson, who added much is needed, through education and public policy, to avoid trapping individuals in these dead end jobs.

The institute released data on the 50 states and a comprehensive comparison on 11 key states representative of the nation's population — New York, Florida, Connecticut, Michigan, Texas, California, Indiana, Arizona, Delaware, Kentucky and Ohio.

Early next year, officials said, the institute will release studies on Arkansas, Illinois, Pennsylvania Minnesota and Wyoming.

The study said Florida's economy, while diversified, is creating seven new jobs waiting tables for every job as a systems analyst.

Soviet troops sent to quell ethnic strikes

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet troops have been sent to Nagorno Karabakh, where four months of ethnic Armenian strikes and demonstrations have crippled the economy and threatened a new outbreak of violence, Pravda said Thursday.

The Communist Party newspaper said the situation had continued to deteriorate in the region, where workers have ignored party orders to end the strikes and protest and return to work.

Nagorno Karabakh is an enclave of 165,000 people ruled by the Moslem Soviet republic of Azerbaijan, which borders Turkey. But 80 percent of the region's population are ethnic Christian Armenians who have been rival of the Moslem Azeris for centuries.

Pravda said the strikes had "paralyzed" a numbers of towns in Nagorno Karabakh and "soldiers have been called in." No further details were available.

Armenian nationalists have been staging strikes and massive street demonstrations since February, demanding the Soviet government hand over control of the region to Armenia to end alleged discrimination against Armenians by Azeris.

Sympathy demonstrations have been held in Yerevan, the Armenian capital, while anti-Armenian protests have been staged in Baku, the capital of Azerbaijan.

Last February the anti-Armenian backlash led to ethnic riots in the Azeri town of Sumgait that left 26 Armenians and six Azeris dead. There are fears that further violence could erupt any day.

Last week the Armenian Supreme Soviet, or parliament, passed a resolution demanding the return of Nagorno Karabakh to Armenian control and asked the central government in Moscow to act.

The Azeri parliament in turn ruled that it would not give up the region, leaving a deadlock that only the Supreme Soviet of the USSR can resolve at its next sitting later this year.

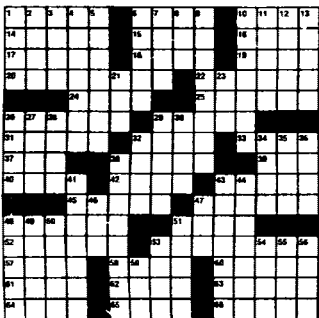

In the meantime, Pravda said the situation in Nagorno Karabakh's capital of Stepanakert had reached crisis stage and troops were deployed to keep order.

"The Armenian population of Nagorno Karabakh continues to demonstrate and organize meetings as if under hypnosis," Pravda said.

Illness that may cause heart attacks identified — In surprising findings that could alter treatments for millions of patients, scientists reported Thursday they have identified an illness that may be the primary cause of heart attacks in people under 65.

A study indicates 2 percent of the population has the newly found syndrome, which may be more responsible for early heart attacks than high blood pressure, said Dr. Roger Williams, professor of internal medicine and director of the Cardiovascular Genetics Research Clinic at the University of Utah.

Williams found 69 of his 131 subjects — brothers and sisters under age 60 with mild hypertension — had abnormal levels of various types of blood fats, called lipids, that have been linked to heart attacks in previous studies.

"To our surprise, that pointed out they probably have an inherited metabolic abnormality that leads to abnormal blood lipids and high blood pressure. We have called this newly discovered illness familial dyslipidemic hypertension or FDH," Williams said in an interview.

"Lipid abnormalities are a much stronger predictor of early heart attack than blood pressure elevations, and may account for most heart attacks previously blamed on high blood pressure" alone, Williams concluded from his eight-month study, reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

This year as many as 1.5 million people in the United States will suffer a heart attack — the leading killer of Americans — and about 540,000 of them will die, according to the American Heart Association. Some 675,000 will be "early" heart attacks occurring in the under-65 age group.

An estimated 30 percent of Americans suffer from hypertension. Of those, 75 percent have mild high blood pressure, defined as 160 over 110 or lower.

Researcher finds gene that may block spread of cancer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A cancer researcher said Thursday she believes she has found a "candidate" gene that may help keep cancer in the breast from spreading to other parts of the body.

Speaking at a science writers' seminar at the National Institutes of Health, Patricia Steeg said the finding could be helpful in deciding more precisely which breast cancer patients are at risk that their cancer will spread and recur elsewhere in the body, and should thus get aggressive chemotherapy after surgery, and which women were likely to remain disease-free without the follow-up.

Steeg, who is a senior investigator at the National Cancer Institute's pathology laboratory, said she and a team of researchers discovered a new gene, "NM23," that is present in normal cells and in breast tumor cells that do not spread, but that is absent in malignant cells capable of spreading to lymph nodes.

The researchers do not yet know what proteins the gene is

"The gene may be useful for diagnosis of highly metastatic cancer."

—Patricia Steeg

responsible for producing, but Steeg said preliminary work is under way to find them and understand how the gene may block the spread to other parts of the body.

"The NM23 gene may be useful for diagnosis of highly metastatic cancer," Steeg said, with preliminary evidence showing it might be used to point out aggressive breast cancer and colon cancer.

Steeg noted that doctors know that if they detect cancer cells in more than three lymph nodes of a breast cancer patient, it is likely to recur and should be treated aggressively.

The problem comes with patients who have signs of cancer in three or fewer lymph nodes. About 30 percent of these women will have recurrent cancer. "The problem today is we can't pick out those cases," Steeg said.

Beware of self-help health care methods, says Koop

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Surgeon General C. Everett Koop warned Thursday that "self-help" or "do-it-yourself" health care may lead to less tolerance of persons involved in unhealthful, high-risk activities that lead to AIDS and other fatal diseases.

Koop told a subcommittee of the Joint Economic Committee an estimated 15 million Americans are involved in a new "self-help movement" that promotes health, disease prevention and counseling. The underlying idea is that Americans affect their own health by how they eat, live, work and play.

But he said the movement is making Americans impatient with persons "who are perceived as deviating from the community's standard of normative behavior," such as cigarette smokers, alcoholics, drug addicts, promiscuous and pregnant teenagers and dangerous drivers and spouses or child beaters.

Using efforts to curb cigarette smoking as an example, Koop said evidence of the health risks of tobacco has led non-smokers to ask for new and stronger state and local laws to reduce cigarette smoking in the workplace and in all public governmental and commercial buildings. Also, he said health and life insurance companies now have a separate, and higher, premium for smokers.

"New laws, higher premiums, and segregation at the work site are examples of public retribution directed against smokers," said Koop.

"It's possible that a public reaction of retribution toward people with AIDS may come about in the 1990s, when the annual costs of AIDS-related research and patient care are expected to reach and then exceed $5 billion," he added.

Aide supplied data by defense officials

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Investigators have evidence that former assistant Navy Secretary Melvyn Paisley lured senior Defense Department officials into smuggling him classified data, law enforcement sources said Thursday.

Paisley then photocopied it and slipped it to his consulting clients, the sources said.

The sources said investigators identified one key supplier of the restricted data as James Gaines, a former aide to Paisley whose office was searched by the FBI last week as the defense procurement scandal broke open.

The Los Angeles Times, which first revealed details on the Paisley-Gaines connection, quoted an unnamed law enforcement official as saying, "Gaines was giving stuff up by the bucket."

Sources familiar with the burgeoning FBI-Naval investigative Service inquiry into alleged fraud and bribery have described Paisley as a central figure. Law enforcement officials have said his twin offices in Washington and McLean, Va., were bugged and wiretapped for nearly a year.

At the White House Thursday, President Reagan clenched his fist when asked about the continuing revelations that have raised the specter of massive corruption in the Pentagon's trillion-dollar defense expenditures of recent years.

"I have not only ordered a continued investigation, but ... they're going to give me a full report," Reagan said.

Reagan indicated it would be an interim report, disclosing "where we are now. ... How much do we know?"

The Times reported that

Paisley was paid "staggering fees" by his biggest client, the McDonnell Douglas Corp., for confidential information that could have affected its bids on major defense contracts. It said he relied on a flow of classified or proprietary information from high-level Pentagon officials, and that he and his wife would quickly photocopy the documents.

After setting up his consulting practice on April 1, 1987, Paisley obtained confidential data affecting McDonnell's possible overseas sales of the FA-18 and the General Dynamics Corp.'s competing F-16, according to federal sources and an FBI warrant made public last week.

Officials in the Navy's Office of Technology Transfer and Security Assistance, who requested anonymity, told United Press International that Gaines and another civilian political appointee "incessantly" supplied Paisley with confidential information on bids and pending programs.

One source said that in 1987 he knew Gaines was supplying Paisley, but he did not report it to superiors because he feared for his job. The source said that, before leaving the government, Paisley had put his own appointees in charge of the operation.

A Justice Department official said that a number of Defense Department procurement employees implicated in the scandal "have indicated a willingness to cooperate" in return for some kind of deal limiting their exposure to prosecution. But there were conflicting reports as to whether Gaines is among them.

Fed scandal means little to investors

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Pentagon corruption scandal has had little impact on defense contractors' stock because they already were depressed and investors are not convinced the investigation will lead to judgments against the contractors, analysts said Thursday.

"I find it difficult to see any correlation at all to the stock prices and the breaking of the story on the FBI investigation," said Paul Nisbet, senior aerospace analyst for Prudential-Bache Securities Inc.

One reason is that the investor has become "very callous" because few corruption charges against military contractors in the past have resulted in judgments against the companies or their executives, Nisbet said.

Canine cop sniffs for fruit

ATLANTA (UPI) — Sam the Beagle, a canine cop who searches luggage at the Hartsfield International Airport, doesn't know cocaine from Quaaludes but is a master ferreter of forbidden fruits, meats and vegetables.

Sam, a mutt with a mission who was rescued from a New York humane society, works for the U.S. Department of Agriculture at the nation's busiest airport and gets paid in doggie treats for his precision piece work.

"He (sniffs out) a lot of fruit," said Larry McMillen, an officer with the department's plant protection and quarantine division. "I guess he averages six (discoveries) a day."

The USDA has a constantly updated a list of foods that are not allowed into the United States from foreign countries, depending on which diseases are prevalent there.

"If they have an outbreak of hoof-and-mouth disease in the Netherlands, then dairy and beef products from the Netherlands are restricted," said Rebecca Kunimoto, assistant officer in charge of the USDA's Hartsfield office.

Cities back bill to regulate incinerators

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. James Florio, D-N.J., introduced legislation Thursday to regulate emissions and ash from municipal garbage incinerators, saying the Environmental Protection Agency is not moving quickly enough to resolve public health concerns about such facilities.

The bill, which has Republican support, was immediately endorsed by the National League of Cities, companies that handle municipal garbage collection and disposal and some — but not all — environmental groups.

Florio said Congress had to act on the issue because EPA officials were moving too slowly for many cities now trying to come to grips with mounting garbage problems.

He said that, despite increasing public fears about the hazards posed by incinerators, the EPA did not plan to issue regulations setting safeguards for such facilities until 1992.

"The legitimate public concerns have not been addressed by the EPA," said Florio.

He said quick government action also was essential because landfill capacity for garbage was rapidly dwindling and cities were increasingly looking to incinerators to solve their waste problems.

Police arrest 600 pound suspect

SANFORD, Fla. (UPI) — Police have had their share of trouble bringing in drug dealers and pimps, but a suspected cocaine trafficker presented a new challenge Thursday: cramming his 600-pound, 6-foot-2-inch body into a paddy wagon.

Miami native James Edward Roath, 31, whose shirt size is XXXXXL and whose 70-inch girth exceeds his height, was ultimately jailed Thursday on two counts of trafficking cocaine in Seminole County, north of Orlando.

But to present the rotund Roath before county Judge Alan Dickey, agents of the drug-prostitution task force had to work several minutes to cram their man into the police van, said Sgt. Jim Cash.

Once the push-pull exercise was accomplished, he was taken to a cell block where jailers at the crowded facility then had to scrounge up extra mattresses to cushion Roath's enormous frame, which a jail nurse estimated at a smidgen over 600 pounds. He barely fit through the jail doorways.

Assistant jail chief Bob Fischer said he had trouble finding a jail uniform to fit the suspect.

When Roath went before Dickey on an initial court appearance, he had to remain standing because he couldn't squeeze into courtroom chairs.

The judge ordered Roath jailed without bond in a regular cell and was to be fed the same food as other prisoners. The only concession to his size was the extra mattresses, jail chief Duane Rutledge said.

Moodies afloat after 21 years

By Richard Nunez
Staff Writer

"Sur La Mer" is another in a line of thoughtful records by a band that has been performing for more than 20 years.

The Moody Blues' 13th studio album is hypnotic music, textured and layered with the exquisite guitar playing of Justin Hayward and the swirling keyboards of Patrick Moraz.

Twenty-one years ago, the Moody Blues recorded the classic "Nights in White Satin," a captivating love song of the late '60s. During those 21 years, the band has not compromised its vision of creating honest and personally challenging music.

Like many great artists, the members of the Moody Blues seem to be searching for some sort of artistic truth within their lives.

"Well, truth is my addiction, stranger still than fiction; wider than the sky," Hayward sings on "No More Lies." And in "Deep," he sings, "Every time I lift my eyes to the sky, something in my heart asks why; I want to know the truth."

Those lyrics are a testament to the band's unflinching vision. The band's music, though it has changed over the years, remains honest and thought-provoking, and rarely has strayed into the realms of the absurd — drummer Graeme Edge's philosophic ponderings notwithstanding.

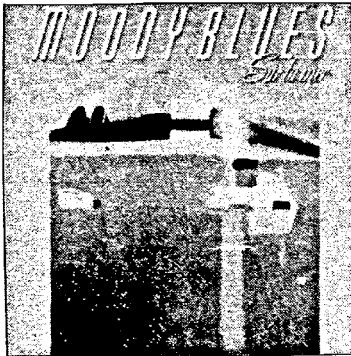

Hayward, who seems to have become the unclashed leader of the band, (he has written and co-written all but two of the songs on the album), has written the album's most outstanding tracks.

"I Know You're Out There Somewhere," a sequel to the band's 1966 hit "Your Wildest Dreams," already is receiving considerable air play and is destined to be a Top-40 hit. The song is a smoother, less pop-oriented, song than its nostalgic predecessor.

Although "I Know You're Out There Somewhere" is the first single from "Sur La Mer," it is not the best track on the album.

"Deep" is an eerie, brooding song whose drum beat is punctuated with heavy sighs. The song, musically and lyrically, seethes with sensuality and ends with an abandoned guitar solo by Hayward.

"Deep" is musically reminiscent of "The Other Side of Life," the title track of the band's last album. "Breaking Point" also is an eerie song. The song was intended to be part of a movie soundtrack, but the band members decided the movie was not good enough and they pulled it from the project.

"Breaking Point" begins slow, with paranoid, dreamlike lyrics, but midway through it takes off at a gallop. Short bursts of keyboard music drop in unexpectedly, while Hayward's guitar playing races along, dipping and diving throughout the lyrics.

"Vintage Wine," a song that harkens back to the exuberance of the 1960s, is one of the strongest tracks on the album.

"I remember the taste of the vintage wine from '63 through to '69, and I'm proud of the things we believed in then, if I had the chance I'd go around again," Hayward sings.

"Vintage Wine" is a song that capitalizes the history of the Moody Blues, with references to the band's optimistic music of the late '60s to the more politically biting era when they recorded "I'm Just a Singer (In a Rock and Roll Band)." Although the song assesses the band's past, it also is optimistic of the future.

"And I look to the future with open arms, and the songs that flow from my old guitar," Hayward sings.

It is a confident line by a band destined to continue making great music.

Rock-n-Bowl at Student Center

By Richard Scheffer
Staff Writer

A "Rock-n-Bowl Summer Bash" will be held from 7 to 10:30 tonight at the Student Center bowling and billiards room. It is open to the public.

"The purpose is to promote the bowling and billiards and make students aware of what is available to them," Marie Straube, acting manager of the bowling and billiards room, said.

There will be free bowling and billiards, and bowling prizes will be awarded. Prizes will include beach toys such as rafts and beachballs, Straube said.

A door prize will be given away, and anyone who comes wearing beach attire will be given a coupon for two free games of bowling and one free hour of billiards, she said.

The Saloonatics, a local band, will play on the lanes from 7 to 10:30. The band plays a variety of rock 'n' roll from the '60s, '70s and '80s.

Around the middle of the evening, there will be a hot dog eating contest. The person who eats the most hot dogs will win a prize, Straube said.

Otherwise, hot dogs will be sold for 25 cents. Popcorn will be free.

TV station gets prime time lesson

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Communications Commission fined a Kansas City, Mo., television station $2,000 Thursday for broadcasting a sexually explicit film, the first-ever such penalty against a TV station.

The commission determined by a 2-to-1 vote that KZKC-TV Channel 62 violated federal indecency laws when it broadcast a movie entitled "Private Lessons" during prime time on May 26, 1987.

The film, about a 15-year-old boy who is seduced by his father's housekeeper, contains "nudity and scenes depicting sexual matters which were dealt with in a pandering and titillating manner," the FCC said.

Under a complex federal standard that prohibits broadcast of "obscene" material, but allows broadcast of less-offensive "indecent" material at certain hours of the day, the station could have showed the film without penalty after midnight, when children were less likely to be watching.

But because it was shown at 8 p.m. when an estimated 84,000 children in the Kansas City metropolitan area were watching television, the station violated the law, the commission ruled.

DeNoon gets Coach of Year, says team got him the award

By Brad Bushue
Staff Writer

Women's track coach Don DeNoon said he didn't win the Gateway Conference's Coach of the Year award without help.

The Saluki women's success in the outdoor championship — winning the meet by 35 points, the largest margin in the history of the competition, and taking more single-event victories, seven and a tie for first in another, than any other team that year — is what DeNoon cites as the main reason for getting the award.

"We stress accomplishment, whether it be in track and field or school," DeNoon said.

Since DeNoon came to SIU-C in 1983, the team has escalated in Gateway Conference standings yearly, sealing three back-to-back victories in the 1986, 1987 and 1988 outdoor championships and two successive wins in the 1987 and 1988 indoor finals.

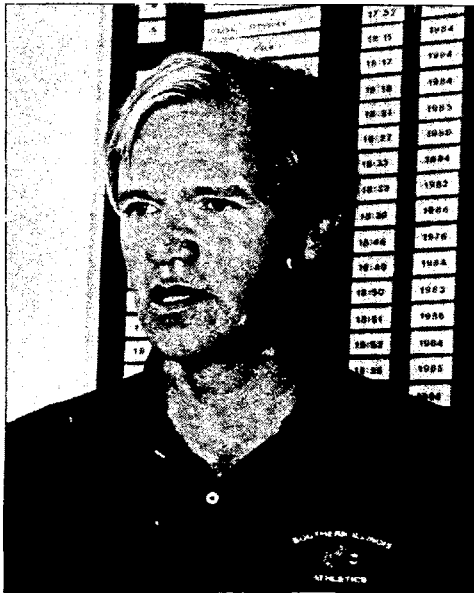

DeNoon, 45, is no stranger to track and field success, he said.

After discovering his talents in track and field and baseball in high school, the West Virginia native joined the U.S. Air Force in California where he went out for the track team "to avoid KP duty," he said. The team needed race walkers to gather points in the event and DeNoon volunteered.

From 1962 to 1968, the Cal State-Long Beach graduate won eight national titles, became a world record holder and was an alternate on the 1964 and 68 Olympic race walking teams, DeNoon said.

DENOON STARTED coaching in 1964 when he was training on a high school field and was asked to work with the California school's track team. In 1968, he started coaching track and field clubs for the California Amateur Athletic Union, which is now called The Athletic Congress, he said.

In a period when girl's track and field was a rare option in American High schools, DeNoon coached the Blue Angels. The girl's program became one of the largest and most successful in the nation between 1973 and 1977, DeNoon said.

Don DeNoon, women's track coach, received the Gateway Conference Coach of the Year award.

He tried his hand in international coaching when he led the U.S. women's track team against the Soviet Union in 1976.

In 1978, he began his college coaching career at Drake University for the next five years where he led the women's track and cross country teams to some of their most successful seasons.

DeNoon came to SIU-C after a dispute over trainers and women's sports at Drake and replaced Claudia Blackman, who resigned after 11 years a women's coach to return to full time teaching at SIU-C.

Recruitment is very important to an athletics program, DeNoon said, and the addition of the new outdoor track has made a great incentive for prospective Salukis. His goal for the coming years is to seek out and sign the top five athletes in the country to the women's team, he said.

SINCE HIS arrival at SIU-C, DeNoon has seen an increase of $3000 in scholarship for recruitment purposes, but he still cannot compete with schools who put all their money into cross country recruitment, he said.

Though all of his recruitments are "exciting when they come in, they don't always pan out," DeNoon said. Sometimes, he said, walkons, like cross former cross country runner Vivian Sinou, improve their talents and receive scholarships later. She shortened her cross country time by about four minutes to set a new school record.

DeNoon runs his team with a "survival of the fittest" orientation. Last season's team started with 44 athletes and ended with 23, he said. "I'm not a tough coach," he said. "It's a tough program."

Martin out, Piniella in for Yankees

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Yankees spun their managerial merry-go-round again Thursday when they fired Manager Billy Martin for the fifth time and brought back Lou Piniella to the dugout.

Piniella previously managed the Yankees for two seasons and began the year in the front office. He was in uniform

Thursday night for the start of a four-game series with the Cleveland Indians.

The team said in a statement the "mutual" decision was made by team owner George Steinbrenner and Bob Quinn. Quinn replaced Piniella as general manager after Piniella resigned Memorial Day to do other front-office work.

Martin's dismissal follows a three-game sweep by Detroit that allowed the Tigers to overtake the Yankees for first place in the American League East. The Yankees lost two of those games in extra innings and one after leading 6-1 with two outs in the ninth.

Wilander, Edberg to go to Wimbledon's 3rd round

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Sweden's Mats Wilander, winner of this year's first two Grand Slam events, and compatriot Stefan Edberg advanced Thursday to the third round of the $4.3 million Wimbledon championship.

Second-seeded Wilander, champion of the Australian and French Opens, defeated Canadian Glenn Michibata, 6-2, 7-6 (7-2), 6-4. Third-seeded Edberg struggled against American Richey Reneberg, 6-3, 7-6 (8-6), 5-7, 6-2.

Fifth-seeded American Jimmy Connors, at 35 the oldest man in the tournament, downed 18-year-old Australian Jason Stoltenberg, 7-6 (7-1), 6-3, 6-3. Two lower seeds lost Thursday. American Jim Grabb, ranked 63rd in the world, upset 11th-seeded Anders Jarryd of Sweden, 3-6, 7-6 (7-5), 6-3, 6-0, and Petr Korda of Czechoslovakia defeated 13th-seeded Emilio Sanchez of Spain, 7-6 (7-4), 6-3, 3-6, 0-6, 6-1.

In women's action Thursday, second-seeded Martina Navratilova, champion the past six years, ousted fellow American Eily Hakami, 6-2, 6-1. Navratilova is seeking a record ninth title.

Navratilova's third-seeded doubles partner Pam Shriver coasted to a 6-3, 6-4 victory over Svetlana Parkhomenko, but fourth-seeded Chris Evert, a three-time winner, had to battle to overcome West Germany's Carole Singer, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3.

Fifth-seeded Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina and sixth-seeded Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia each won in straight sets.

Sabatini, the only player this season to defeat top-ranked Steffi Graf of West Germany, eliminated Radka Zrubakova of Czechoslovakia, 6-4, 6-3, and Sukova downed compatriot Jana Novotna, 6-2, 6-2.

Wilander and Edberg had contrasting passages through to the last 32.

Ready to admit his baseline game is not really suited to Wimbledon's slick grass, Wilander is improving with every game on the surface. Prepared to volley more, he was never really under pressure in his 2 hour 15-minute match against Michibata, although he had to recover a break in the second set.

Wilander realizes completing the second half of the Grand Slam — Wimbledon and the U.S. Open — remained a tough obstacle.

"It would be nice to win all of them," he said, admitting he had now begun to think about the target.

Edberg played his typical in-and-out game against Reneberg, and allowed his concentration to drift when he should have been putting pressure on the American after winning the second-set tie-breaker. It cost him the third set, but the Swede then got his act together to win in style.

The first set took 56 minutes, the time it took for the veteran campaigner to size his opponent up. After that it was strictly no contest as Connors exploited the Australian's weak backhand and unleashed a barrage of two-fisted backhand winners.

McEnroe calls loss a 'disgusting effort'

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — His comeback in tatters and his new-found maturity crumbling, John McEnroe derided his second-round loss Thursday to Australia's Wally Masur as "a disgusting effort" but nevertheless declared he still can regain the highest echelon of men's tennis.

The eighth-seeded McEnroe was tormented by numerous double faults and sloppy volleys in his 7-5, 7-6 (7-5), 6-3 defeat by Masur, who is ranked 64th in the world.

"If that's the best I've got to give, I'll quit tomorrow. It was a disgusting effort," said the 29-year-old American. "I don't feel like I played well at all and I just couldn't come up with anything."

McEnroe, a three-time Wimbledon champion in the early 1980s, is attempting a tennis comeback after a seven-month layoff and was playing on the grass courts of Wimbledon for the first time since 1985.

"I'm lowering myself to other people's levels. I'm not pushing myself to play the best I can play," McEnroe complained. "I wouldn't have won the women's tournament the way I played today."

McEnroe lost more than the match Thursday. He also shattered the veneer of his new mature image and on-court gentility, twice loudly questioning line calls and throwing his racket to the ground several times — once drawing an umpire's warning for racket abuse.

He complained he is held to a stricter standard of behavior because of his past temper tantrums.

"People are clapping when I don't argue calls. The whole thing is so out of whack right now it's infuriating," he said. "It's a situation where everything I do here is looked at so carefully."

Masur, 25, who lost to McEnroe in three quick sets the last time they played at Wimbledon in 1984, said it was obvious "he wasn't the player (now) of three to four years ago."

"His concentration was sporadic throughout. It definitely wasn't vintage John McEnroe out there," Masur said. "I thought I was very solid. I didn't do anything spectacular, but I was very solid and that was good enough to win."

Despite the disheartening loss, McEnroe said he doesn't think it will be too difficult to again reach the pinnacle of the tennis world, which he ruled in the first half of the 1980s.

Evert has to struggle to get 3rd-round berth

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Chris Evert's air of tranquil confidence suffered a setback Thursday as she had to fight for a berth in the third round at Wimbledon.

Nevertheless, the fourth seed said the thought of a loss barely crossed her mind as she came back to defeat West German Christine Singer, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3.

"I suppose the possibility of losing crossed my mind for a moment," said the 33-year-old American. "But I did have a winning attitude out there. I dominated for most of the third set."

The power of positive thinking will be needed in massive doses if Evert is to continue her charge toward a fourth title in this, her 17th edition of Wimbledon.

Eventually, she could have to contend with 31-year-old Martina Navratilova, seeking a record ninth Wimbledon singles crown, and teenager Steffi Graf, No. 1 in the world who is hoping to complete three-fourths of a Grand Slam after victories at the Australian and French Opens.

Evert rates her own chances as fair, given the quirks of the grass and the hand of fate.

"The odds would be against anyone but Steffi and Martina to win this tournament," Evert said. "But an upset could be possible. One of them could lose. But in order to win the tournament, anyone else would have to beat both of them."

Evert said she can't really see Graf losing.

"I would say I'm almost 100 percent sure that Steffi will get to the finals," Evert said. "I can't say that about Martina. She's in my hair of the draw and I have a shot at her."

Evert said she's fully fit after curing the heel inflammation which cut short her chances in Rome and Paris this spring.

"I'm healthy here, and I'm a lot happier because of it," she said. "I may have the odd match where I don't play my best, but I feel good."

AD candidate says he is ideal choice

Ralph Barkey speaks at a question-and-answer session at the Student Center Auditorium Thursday.

By Richard Goldstein
Staff Writer

Athletics director candidate Ralph Barkey said Thursday his experience would make him an ideal choice.

In a question-and-answer session at the Student Center Auditorium, Barkey said his "depth of experience" as an athletics director at Sonoma (California) State University where he ran the program without any staff would be a plus at SIU-C.

"When I think what I could do... to have that kind of staff (at the University), it's mind boggling," Barkey said.

When asked if the celebrity status of athletics director candidate Jim Hart might be an advantage for raising money, Barkey responded, "Within a year I might be a big celebrity myself."

"I've been at four different institutions. I am a very proven college fund raiser. Within a 20-mile radius (of the University) there is an enormous potential" for raising money, he said.

Barkey said that if he were to be named athletics director he would be against the football program moving back into division 1A. The program was changed to 1AA in 1978.

Barkey pointed out that the football team would have to draw 20,000 people a game and expand its stadium before the move would be allowed by the NCAA. The program also would have to be accepted by a division 1A conference, he said.

Barkey said he isn't interested in an athletics director position at a larger university like the University of Illinois because of the influence exerted by high-powered alumni on the athletes at those universities.

SIU-C, he said, is "the ideal level of division 1."

Barkey said he is interested in the academic progress of his athletes. "As a head coach (of basketball) for 10 years, I failed to graduate only four students."

Barkey has been the athletics director at Sonoma State University since 1981. He also has been assistant athletics director at California State University at Fullerton and the University of California at Irvine. He was head basketball coach at the University of California at Santa Barbara from 1966 to 1978.

Also applying for the job are former professional football player Jim Hart, interim athletics director Charlotte West and athletics director for Central Missouri State University Jerry Hughes.

Track, cross country camp needs more participation

By Brad Bushue
Staff Writer

A track and field and cross country camp for junior and senior high school girls is having difficulty getting participants for the program. The camp's sponsor, Saluki women's track and field coach Don DeNoon, said only 15 girls have registered for the six-day camp which will begin June 26.

"It averages out to about one coach per camper at this stage," DeNoon said, joking.

DeNoon said the camp has a low number of applicants because he was unable to go out and "sell" the camp to the high school athletes since he spends so much time working with his.

Guest coaches are Western Illinois head coach David

Miller; Sandra DeNoon, a 1982 member of the U.S. Olympic Sports Festival Team and wife of SIU-C coach DeNoon; All-American John Smith, an SIU-C alumnus and top 20 national record holder in the shot put; Connie Price, a discus and shot put thrower who was the 1967 U.S. National Champion and the third place winner in the Pan Am games; Vivian Sinou, a former Saluki runner who recently placed second in the 1500- and 3000-meter races in the Greek Noble Campships; and retired SIU-C distance runner Andy Pettigrew.

The camp, DeNoon said, will cover "the whole gamut of track and field for female athletes as it pertains to the high school environment."

Female athletes in Southern Illinois do not have the opportunity to study under professional coaches with sound backgrounds in most high school settings, and this will allow them to "build on what they learned this summer," DeNoon said.

DeNoon also said he wishes to present an entertaining as well as educational camp environment by teaching underwater running exercises at Campus Lake and feature movies will be shown each night.

Camp rates are $200 for campers who will live in Thompson Point during the week and $135 for commuting campers. The deadline for registration is June 26 at 1 p.m. at Lentz Hall.

100 to play basketball in girl's training camp

By Beth Clavin
Staff Writer

The first session of the girls' basketball camp will be June 26 through 31.

The camp will include approximately 100 girls from 6th through 12th grade. Julie Beck, codirector of the camp, said. She said it will be the biggest camp they've had in a few years.

"Hopefully, this is an indication that women's basketball is really taking off," she said.

The camp will focus on the fundamentals of basketball, such as passing, shooting, and man-to-man defense, she said.

The camp offers activities such as a 3-on-3 tournament; a hot shot contest, in which daily points are added up to declare a winner; and lectures and films about the topics discussed, Beck said.

League games, in which the girls are divided up and scrimmage each other, are also held each night from 7 to 9, she said. "They're very exciting," Beck said. "Sometimes we have to calm down the coaches."

This year's staff consists of former players Cozette Wallace and Mary Alice Jenkins; SIU graduate and Jerseyville High School coach Denise Kelley; and players DeAnna Sanders, Sid Mitchell, Dec Kibelkis, Cathy Campworth, and Dana Fitzpatrick.

SIU-C's head girls' basketball coach Cindy Scott is coordinator of the camp.

A second session of the camp will be July 30 through Aug. 3.

Miami uses expansion draft

MIAMI (UPI) — Saying the college draft is the best way to build a franchise, the Miami Heat used Thursday's expansion draft to pick up six draft choices and obtain 10 players who comprise the first NBA team in Florida.

The Heat had the first pick in the expansion draft and immediately made a move, obtaining the No. 1 draft pick of the Dallas Mavericks for passing over center Bill Wennington and instead selecting Arvid Kramer. Kramer, a center picked by the Mavericks in 1980, has not played in the NBA in eight seasons and played last year in West Germany.

Miami and Charlotte participated in the draft.

The Heat also picked up five second round picks — one each from the Milwaukee Bucks, Los Angeles Lakers, Boston Celtics, Seattle SuperSonics and Cleveland Cavaliers. Miami now owns two first-round choices in Tuesday's college draft, the ninth and 20th selections, and three second-round picks.

Miami obtained a second-round pick in the 1989 draft when it traded forward Fred

6 drafts picked to aid in building basketball franchise

Roberts, selected from Boston, to Milwaukee. Miami also traded guard Darnell Valentine to Cleveland for a second-round pick in 1990 or 1992 after picking Valentine from the Los Angeles Clippers.

Players picked by the Heat, in order of selection, are: Kramer; forward Billy Thompson of the Los Angeles Lakers; Roberts; center Scott Hastings from Atlanta; guard Jon Sundvold from San Antonio; guard Kevin Williams from Seattle; forward Hansi Gnad from Philadelphia; Valentine; guard Dwayne "Pearl" Washington from New Jersey; guard Andre Turner from Houston; guard Connor Henry from Sacramento; and forward John Stroeder from Milwaukee.

"In our study of thinking and pondering how to build this team, the (college) draft was the surest way," said Heat managing partner Lewis Schaffel. "With the new rules, with the new age of the NBA going into the '90s, I think we're very well positioned."

Schaffel was referring to a recent collective bargaining agreement with NBA players that will reduce the college draft to two rounds after this year.

Most of the players selected were under 26. The exceptions are Kramer, Williams, Hastings, Sundvold and Stroeder, who was the last player selected in the draft. Henry and Turner are free agents, but they have reached an agreement with the Heat to report to summer camp.

Part owner Billy Cunningham and personnel director Stu Inman said they expect Hastings, 28, and Sundvold, 26, to provide leadership on what will be a young, inexperienced team. Both players were picked for their basketball skills as well as for what Heat officials called their outstanding character.

Cunningham also said it was possible Miami could make more deals before Tuesday's college draft.

Senate approves plan to purchase White Sox

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — The Senate Thursday approved a proposal allowing the state to buy the Chicago White Sox and sell stock to the public.

The plan moved to the House for consideration on a 38-18 tally and its sponsor, Sen. Greg Zito, D-Melrose Park, said he was hopeful the lower chamber would endorse the plan as well.

"I strongly believe this is a viable and the only alternative to the $150 million tax spending plan to keep the White Sox in Illinois," Zito said. "It does not use one dime of taxpayer money. It does not call for the state of Illinois to own a baseball team."

Under the plan, the state Commerce and Community Affairs Department could buy the team for $60 million and sell stock to the public during the next 10 years at a cost of no more than $10 per share.

An individual could buy no more than 5 percent of the team and a 100 percent vote of stockholders would be required to allow the team to move out of Illinois.

Contrary to Zito's statement, the proposal does use state funds — $60 million in Build Illinois funds to buy the team if up-front money is needed and if stock sales do not meet the anticipated goal. But Zito said he expects stock sales to go well and he has no intention of seeking a state appropriation for the funds.

Sen. Richard Newhouse, Chicago Mayor Eugene Sawyer's point man on the White Sox, said he favored the plan.

"It is a matter of city pride," Newhouse said. "Citizens ought to have a chance to own a piece of the ballclub that represents their city."

The owners of the White Sox have said the team is not for sale. But if the team was for sale, they would demand Florida prices.
