Union construction workers picketed outside the parking garage beside the Student Center Wednesday as a way to inform the pub-lic about non-local workers being employed to renovate it, a union official says

Larry Burnett, business manager for Labor Local Chapter 227, said the union is picketing because the Kovilic Construction Company, out of Franklin Park near Chicago, is doing the renovations.

Burnett alleges that the company did not hire minority workers, and may not be paying the prevailing wage, which is the payment set by Illinois law.

Burnett said the union workers will find out this week if the Kovilic Company is meeting the wage laws. He said the union laborers have always done all the construction work at SIUC since he started with the union 27 years ago.

"We did the coal plant and are currently working on the new engineering building," he said.

Burnett said a construction company out of Peoria, which is contracted to build the new engineering building, asked Labor Local Chapter 227 to do the engineering job. 'In the past when an out of town company came down they always asked us first to do the job and this company (Kovilic) did not, they hired non-union work-ers instead," he said.

Burnett said the union workers are going to picket from 6:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. in three hour shifts until SIUC gets a restraining order to remove the picketers.

"We have to keep the jobs and money in our area," he said. "This con-tractor out of Chicago is going to take our money to support someone up there.' Burnett said he has notified SIUC of the picket and had not been able to notify Kovilic Construction.

OFFICIALS: BOSNIAN REUNIFICATION HOPELESS — MOSTAR, Bosnia-Herzegovina — The threats against Jozo Músa began about the time his opposition candidacy became known in this divided city. Traitor, the phone calls and letters branded him. Loudmouth. We representing a Muslim-Croat coalition in a part of Bosnia-Herzegovina where the lines of ethnic division run as deep as the Neretva River that splits this city into eastern (Muslim) and western (Croatian) sectors. Local elections here Sunday are seen as a dry run for Bosnia's crucial nationwide elections, scheduled for Sept. 14. The voting will test the strength of the notoriously weak governing Muslim-Croat Tederation and will provide the first sign of whether democracy and political tolerance can exist in postwar Bosnia. The signs are not encouraging. The potential for violence and the certainty of ethnic-based voting bode ill for attempts to bring Bosnia's enemies back together.

BOMB KILLS 23 AT AIR FORCE COMPOUND — WASHINGTON — A powerful truck bomb exploded outside a highrise apartinent building housing U.S. Air Force personnel in Saudi Arabia on Tuesday night, killing 23 Americans and injuring more than 300 others, U.S. officials said. A visibly angry President Clinton vowed to track down and punish the bombers. He dispatched a team of FBI bomb specialists to the scene to assist Saudi investigators. The bombing was the second against U.S. interests in Saudi Arabia in less than a year. A Pentagon statement said the bomb, contained in a fuel truck exploded outside the Khobar Towers, a U.S. housing compound on a Saudi air base near Dhahran, in eastern Saudi Arabia. Saudi; French and British personnel are also stationed at the King Abdulaziz Air Base. The blast, so powerful it was heard in the neighboring emirate of

The "80s, they suspect, were a time of testing, not a return to tradition. "The shakeout is over," said one of the researchers, Kenneth M. Johnson of Loyola University in Chicago. But don't picture a pastoral revival with family bomesteads, red barns and the Back 40 to plow. FORMER CIA CHIEF BACKS DOLE FOR PRESIDENT — WASHINGTON — One day after launching an attack on President Clinton's "dreamy" policies in Europe, Bob Dole Wednesday picked up the endorsement of Clinton's former CIA director, R. James Woolsey, Woolsey, who quit the CIA in 1994 amid criticism from Congress for his timid steps in handling the case of confessed spy Aldrich J. Ames, met Wednesday with the presumptive Republican presidential nomince at his campaign headquarters here and endorsed Dole as the best man to deal with a world that is "still a very dangerous place." Speaking to reporters about his endorsement, Woolsey singled out the United State's lack of an anti-ballistic missile system, saying that the threat of attack is "much broader" than the Clinton administration says it is. On the campaign trail, Dole has said the country needs an anti-missile system to protect from accidental launches and outlaw states. The Clinton administration has dismissed such a system as unneeded, unworkable and too costly.

On its latest release "Down on the Upside," the formula is the active ingredient once again.

Recent fatalities spotlight imperative for new solutions to drunken driving problems

THERE WAS CONCERN THAT THE STREET Machine Nationals would produce a number of drunken drivers leaving the event after it closed at 5 p.m. However. two fatal accidents not related to the event occurred in Jackson County several hours later. In one accident, a Murphysboro man was killed when the bike he was riding was struck by a drunken driver. The other accident resulted in the death of an SIUC student while his two passengers were injured. The driver who struck him, also a SIUC student, was injured and charged with Driving Under the Influence, and may face license revocation, fines and jail time.

It is time to look for creative solutions to keep people from getting behind the wheel and killing others. People who intend to drink need to plan ahead and have another way home, instead of driving drunk.

One trip down the 3trip and it is clear where many spend their evenings in Carbondale. Bars are big business in Carbondale, and all of them vying for our entertainment dollars. If not there, students find themselves at house parties. The problem is that if someone drives to a bar, restaurant or party and drinks, that person may get back into a car and drive home

Even though DUI arrests in Jackson County, like the rest of the nation, are down because of tougher laws, other solutions need to be sought. In 1986, there were 784 DUI arrests in Jackson County. By 1994, there were 441. In Illinois, there were 845 alcohol related traffic fatalities in 1986, by 1994 there were 656. While the numbers indicate a declining problem, it is hard to justify complacency in further reducing the numbers right here in Carbondale. People are still dying in accidents that can be avoided.

LOOKING AT WHY SOME DRIVE DRUNK CAN offer solutions. One reason people drive drunk is they fear what they believe is more horrible than arrest or death: their car being towed. However, a car can be parked in any Carbondale municipal lot and left there overnight without being towed. If the driver picks up the car after 7 a.m., that person may have to pay a $3 parking ticket for an expired parking meter, but the car would not be towed. Thus, leaving the car in a municipal lot leaves the driver free to call a cab or another sober driver to get home.

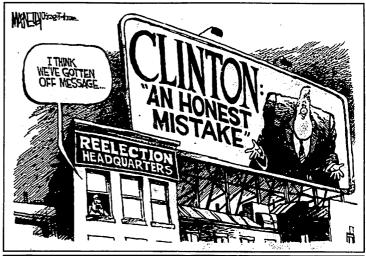

CAB SERVICES IN CARBONDALE NEED TO begin driving near the bars picking up fares and keeping the roads safe instead of waiting for people to call. This provides the option of a cab ride instead of expecting a drunk to think of calling for one or a busy bartender to suggest it.

People throwing parties need to provide parking as well, and take the responsibility of not allowing someone to drive while drunk. That cars are sometimes towed for blocking the streets is further motivation to find alternative parking

Because not every lot is a municipal lot, Carbondale could set up a pay lot where someone drives in, takes a ticket and leaves the car overnight. The person can pick up the car the next day and pay a small fee for leaving it while not driving drunk.

The threat of getting a car towed is not the only reason people drive drunk. If alternatives are found, such as places where people can leave a car without the fear of towing, this could deter more people from driving drunk, ULTIMATELY, IT IS THE DRIVER'S CHOICE and responsibility whether or not to drive drunk. Drivers should plan ahead for the evening, not waiting until reason is drowning in alcohol to decide how to get home.

All the presidents' women: Eleanor mentors Hillary

By Robert Reno wsday

If it had come down to us through the word processor of Bob Woodward, we can but shudder at how the rich fabric of recorded history would be mangled into a pointless twaddle of unrelieved anecdotal tediam.

Civilization as it has been known would be described by "reliable" sources who had an interest in or were silly enough to babble to Woodward. William Casey's supposed deathbed mum-blings, an incoherent Richard Nixon boozing and praying his way through the final days of his presidency. George Stephanopolous' malicious recollections of Alice Rivim with chick-en salad on her chin, the contest among the younger Clinton advis-ers to see who could be quoted most using the 'F' word in their self-promoting gut-spillings to Woodward, these are the nuggets of research that have crowned his previous writing. The anecdotes that always fly out in advance of a Woodward book and into the headlines are a brilliant marketing tool that made a great commercial success of his increasingly leaden attempts at instant history.

Anyway, imagine the sigh of relief that went up at the White House when it was revealed that Clinton's talks with Eleanor Roosevelt were to be the chief

If seeking guidance from the spirit of Roosevelt is the most aberrational act Clinton's relentless tormentors have driven her to, then she has survived better that most of us would.

Anyway, Hillary and Eleanor would at first seem unlikely characters to be communing across the ages. Various biographers recall that Roosevelt's dinner plates didn't match, that she served food of appalling plainness, preferably boiled, and that her clothes were striking for her indifference to them. Iphigene Sulzherger, in her memoirs, even accused Roosevelt of being a messy housekeeper. This simply doesn't suggest Clinton's style. Both are remarkable for the savagery of the criticism they attracted for breaking the mold of first lady as simpering, unquestioning con-cubine. The distant and more saintly image of Roosevelt that survives today is of a guileless, rather innocent, even gullible woman.

The unworldly Eleanor and the worldly Hillary don't seem a match. Yet nobody ever accused Roosevelt of having a puritanical aversion to commercial vulgarities. If she'd had a law degree, there's no telling what she would have gotten herself into. She took money for her radio program and even hired her son Elliott as the announcer who, after the commercials for a brand of scep would say, "And remember, Mother uses it." We talked for about 30 minutes on enrollment, and I gave the reporter information on on-campus undergraduate enrollment, off-campus enrollment, military enrollment, graduate school enrollment and the total-school enrollment," he said. The reporter used the on-campus urxlereraduate enrollment, which is projected at 15,388 for the fall and compared it to the total-campus enrollment in 1991."

Shepherd said projections for the total campus enrollment for fall 1996 is 22,133. He said compared to the 1991 total enrollment figure of 24,869, STUC is not in a bad position for this fall.

"All I can say is, what can you do," he said. "I am going to send the reporter a fax of the figures we discussed that shows the difference between total enrollment and on-campus undergraduate enrollment. It's just a good thing high schools don't get the 'Chronicle of Higher Education.'"

Shepherd said if parents saw the incorrect figures in the "Chronicle of Higher Education" article, parents ht worry about the state of SIUC.

Snake bites preventable

By Colleen Heraty Daily Egyptian Reporter

Although they tunnel beneath dirt and sand, slither through mucky swamps, climb in the crowns of trees and crawl on the land, snakes are not something to be afraid of, Ron Brandon, an SIUC zoology professor says.

"When people see snakes they semetimes become seared, transferring their fear to the snake, and that makes the situation more dangerous than it really is," Prandon said. "To turn around and walk away is the hardest thing for people to do," he

Brandon, who spends a great deal of time outside the classroom to study reptiles in the field, said there are about 25 different species of snake around the Shawnee National Forest, three of which can be poirattlesnakes, cotton sonous: mouths, and copperheads.

Laurence Klauber, author of "Rattlesnakes: Their Habits, Life Histories, and Influence on Mankind," writes in his book that this time of year, snakes emerging from winter hibernation are hungry nd hunting for food. Klauber's book was written for people who have been concerned about the possible or actual pres-ence of snakes around their homes.

Snakes cannot move fast enoug to overtake people who want to get out of their way," he said. "The only danger is if the person falls or trips on the snake while trying to get out of the way."

He also writes that beginning in spring, male snakes are out courti females, looking to mate, and males are battling competing males for the opportunity.

"During these times of stress, they are more likely to act in an aggressive manner when they are disturbed," be says.

Brandon said snakes are gentle animals, shy, and not otherwise aggressive. Most snakes will only bite humans if they are bothered by them in some way. This is particularly true of non-poisonous snakes, he said.

"Water snakes, otherwise known as water moccasins or cotton mouths, sometimes will bite humans because they think there is

Brandon said most times, if venomous snakes do bite, they will not waste their venom on humans, because it is an inefficient use of a raluable mechanism they need for to run into a poisonous snake.

Putting a constriction band around the area bitten is an old the-snake bites only about two or three times a year. He said an anti-venom used to treat a bite from a venomous snake.

Snakes in Southern Illinois are very reclusive and do not like to be around people, according to Curt Carter, program coordinator for Environmental Adventure Programs at Touch of Name.

"The biggest danger is having lit-tle or no knowledge about them," he said. "Snakes are interesting creatures who fill an important niche in our edosystem.

Ward said the percussion void was created when one of the original members went to New York.

"Dan Grurbe: used to play with us, and if he comes back, I'd like to see both him and Matt play," he said. "A lot of Latin bands use more than one percussionist, and, in my opinion, you can never have too much."

Dan Schingel, another founding member of the band, said it would have been "ridfculous" if Linsin would not have been able to play with the Jungle Dogs. "You really rely on all the members of the band, and just because he's not 21 shouldn't mean that he can't make music." he said, "It was a good thing that the new law was present."

Ward also offered a solution to the problem of underage people wanting to come in and just listen to a band without drinking alcohol. "At the bar Mississippi Nights in St. Louis it is sectioned off, so that of rocket fuel. Thick with frustration and rage, the song's unique sound is created by a mandolin and mandola, played by Cornell and Shepherd. The reiteration of the same tones, created by all the instruments, gives off a sound that drives this head-banger's neck breaker.

Along with the lyrical pains and emotional lows dealt with by Cornell on most of the CD to the relieving sounds of "Zero Chance" and "Dusty." Similar in sound to Alice in Chain's "Jar of Flies" EP, the dreamy, rounded music of these two songs fit like a final puzzle piece into Cornell's soothing vocals and vice-versa.

Through the majority of his adolescent musical training, Travis enjoyed the music of blues and soul greats such as James Brown, Muddy Waters and Ray Charles. Travis' own approach to music is broad-based, and ranges anywhere from the soul and blues he began with to the classical sounds he absorbed from his experience of playing with Wolfgang and Straus' Electric Orchestra and Folk Chorus in San Francisco.

Through all the spectrums of the music rainbow, from blues to bluegrass, Barton, Blake and Sweeney covered until the formation of their current group, music had a strange way of revolving back to its beginning for the three.

"It's funny, my style now is more like it was 15 years ago," Barton said. "I went through all that stuff, and came back better at doing folk. I guess I'm kind of

'Damn Yankees' strikes out

By Lisa Pangburn Daily Egyptian Reporter

Even though opening night jisters are sometimes acceptable, Friday's production of "Damn Yankees" at McLeod Theater was a disappointing performance of a musical that had owner noscibilities.

had great possibilities. "the plot focussed on a middle-aged baseball famatic who gets a chance to be a 22-year-old slugger for his favorite team, the Washington Senators. However, in return, he must sell his soul to the devil. Mr. Applegate (Paul Kassel), and leave his wife and his old life behind for the chance of a lifetime.

Kassel played a very convincing devil, and it is amazing be did so well, considering the cast he had to work with. Kassel constantly carried the show with his flamboyant facial expressions and the delivery of his witty one-liners despite the production's many shortcomings.

Play Review

The locker room scene of a losing team trying to get their hopes up and singing the most famous song out of this musical, "You Gotta Have Heart," was a disaster. The song is a happy little tune about not losing faith in your team, but it was ruined by forgotten words, an out-of-tune coach and nine clumsy baseball players in an out-of-sync throor.

Another serious problem was the costuming. Some outfits did not seem like they really suited their characters. In particular, most of Lola's (Janelle Morey) costumes just did not work.

Lola is the supposedly seductive tramp that belongs to Mr. Applegate and is used to get the minds of the homesick men off of their wives. There was only one time that Lola appeared the least bit seductive, and that was when she took off her neon green and orange dress. A black or even an ever-so-popular red dress, traditional to the time setting, would have worked, but a floral print of neon colors was completely inappropriate.

David Shamburger, playing the role of the transformed 22-year-old slugger, helped carry the show with a voice that projected the anger and pain created by the firstration of loving baseball and being a star player, but not being able to be with his wife.

Shamburger had a very smooth and coaxing voice when he spoke, and the audience did not have to strain to hear him. Shamburger's acting assisted the audience's understanding of his character, Joe Hardy, by making the crowd feel his pression for the game of bachall, but also for the love of his wife.

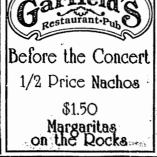

With the exception of two performers, the production was messy and disappointing. Perhaps more rehearsals and better casting could have saved "Damn Yankees."
