$14 million projects budget gets city nod

A $14.06 million Capital Improvements Program budget was approved informally by the Carbondale City Council Tuesday.

Of the available $674,000 in federal revenue-sharing funds, $228,000 has been allocated to the Capital Improvements Program. Last month, nine special service agencies applied for a total of $313,047 in revenue-sharing funds.

But the council has only about $20,000 to give to the nine agencies.

Last year, the council gave $201,000 to the Women's Center, Attache Community Services Board, Youth Services Bureau and Carbondale Senior Citizens.

Special projects totaling $6.47 million were approved, including over $4.5 million for the proposed River Center, $1.4 million for the Pleasant Hill road overpass south of town. Both projects are part of the city's railroad relocation project.

Another $3.45 million in projects has been budgeted for the proposed River Center. This $1.5 million for the new Carbondale Public Library building and $1.5 million for the proposed downtown parking garage, part of the hotel-convention center project.

Other amounts budgeted were $1.2 million for street improvements; $1.3 million for water system improvement; $1.1 million for wastewater treatment; $417,000 for storm sewers; $110,000 for sanitation sewers; $51,462 for sidewalks; $22,796 for traffic signals; and $90,175 for open space and beautification.

Federal aid of $8.3 million, primarily backing the city's railroad relocation project, was included as a funding source for the city's budget. The budget includes forecasts of city projects for the next five years.

City OKs project timetable

Demolition should begin Sept. 7 on the site of the proposed downtown Carbondale convention center, according to a timetable informally endorsed by the City Council Monday.

Removal of the buildings scheduled for the site would be complete by Aug. 26, seven of the 25 offers the city sent out have been accepted and are in the process of being processed.

Demolition should be done by Nov. 24, and the site should be surveyed and cleared. Final design drawings for the convention center are expected to be completed and approved by May 21. The project should be finished in December 1984.

"We're living in a dream world with some of these plans," said Council member Helen Westberg. "If anyone wants to be in a dream world, that's where we are."

City Manager Carroll Fry told the council that the timetable was being used as a "court" for constructive dedication. If the city cannot prove the property is needed soon, then it will be allowed to take the land while questions concerning compensation are being reviewed in court, he said.

The timetable depends on smoothly-run acquisition procedures.

The condemnation suits will be filed as quickly as possible, Don Mooy, city community development director, said.

Democrats not awed by Winchester

By Mike Anton

Republican State Rep. Robert Winchester received more votes in the 118th District than any other House member south of Springfield, but that doesn't impress three Democrats vying for their party's nomination in the upcoming primary.

One reason, all three say, is that the 1980 passage of the Cutback Amendment restricted the 25th District to a smaller 118th District and eliminated cumulative voting.

In November, instead of voters splitting three votes any way they choose between four candidates running for three seats, Winchester will have to run one-on-one against a Democrat for a single seat.

The Democrat challenging James Merchant, Ralph Colbert and Vernon Merchant is James Winchester won't be able to utilize the old cumulative voting system to garner three votes from Republicans while Democrats split their support.

"Abandonment of cum'sitive voting means that this year's a whole new ball game," said

Winchester, who has served in the House since 1964, is opposed in the March 16 Republican primary. He was his party's almost universal choice to run for Congress this year but chose instead to make his fifth run for the state House.

Colbert and Merchant tend to agree on the main issues facing the state. Both say high taxes and a need for jobs are the large problems facing the district. Be a sense a Republican抗衡吃 a Senate seat, Winchester come November — from the federal level with the Reagan administration's economic policies and New Federalism, and on the state level from dissatisfaction with Gov. James R. Thompson, and a feeling that Winchester is one of "Thompson's boys" in Southern Illinois.

"We think he has lost interest in Southern Illinois and has higher political ambitions," said Merchant, a retired farmer from Bunkerama and former high school board member.

"And as far as I'm concerned he has forgotten the area. His benches... when you talk about the governor's men in the area, your talking about a Republican State Rep. C.L. McCormick and Winchester." Both men pointed to the closing of the A.L. Bowen Developmental Center near Harrisburg as evidence of Thompson's apathy toward Southern Illinois. Merchant called the closing "callous" and "unfair" to the area.

Although Winchester was unavailable for comment on the Bowen closing, he did claim responsibility, during his 1980 House race, for keeping the center open then despite recommendations that it be

Shaw says SIU still stands for access

By Mike Anthony
Staff Writer

"THE PURPOSE of an institution of higher education is to "vise access to opportunity for as many people as possible," said Delaila Morris, former president of SIU-C.

But all students in the U.S. still stand for access for as many people as possible.

Last year, the Board of Trustees increased tuition by 13 percent in June, the board voted to raise fees by $286 a semester. Beginning next fall, SIU-C students will pay $400 per year in fees. Thursday, the board is scheduled to vote on tution increases that would require full-time undergraduate and graduate students to pay by .910 per year. Law students would be affected, too. Graduate students will pay $3,281 per year.

Despite rising tuition and fees (and the proposed budget) in student financial aid, the SIU System is scheduled to increase access and still stand for access, says Chancellor Kenneth Shaw.

"We are committed to it," Shaw said.

"I think if you compare the opportunities available to young people at the time Delaila Morris made that statement to now, you'd find that access has been appreciably increased over the years."

SHAW SAID he believes that higher education opportunities provided to students today "have gone far beyond the dreams of most people who 30 years ago were looking at the question of access."

Even if the Reagan administration's proposed cutbacks in financial aid are approved, he said, "We still have a situation in this country where the majority of people, as a result of the system of higher education in this country, both public and private, have access to higher education. That can't be said of very many countries in the world."

Shaw said there is only one thing worse than having tuition increases of the magnitude that are proposed — 13 percent for undergraduate and graduate students, 25 percent for dental students, 16 percent for medical students and 10 percent for students — and that is to have a program of diminishing quality.

"Then you reach a point where you're really asking yourself, if you're sacrificing the quality to keep tuition down — who's really the benefactor? The student isn't, because he is getting watered-down experience, and secondly, the society that we claim benefits from all this is not getting its benefit," he said.

Similar tuition increases are occurring in other schools, Shaw said, and for the same reasons.

Last year, tuition increases in the United States averaged 17 percent. Shaw noted, while the虽说, for the SIU System it increased by 13 percent.

"IT'S TOO EARLY to tell what the average will be this year, but I would suspect that because many states are facing the same economic difficulties

John Belushi funeral held; Cocaine suspected in death

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass. (AP) — With Dan Akroyd riding to the grave on a motorcycle and James Taylor mournfully singing “That Lonesome Road,” comedian John Belushi was buried Tuesday in a gentle snowfall on an island off Cape Cod.

Meanwhile in Los Angeles, where Belushi died last Friday, reports surfaced that his death may have been caused by a cocaine overdose.

“We can hear the call of his solitary warning: ‘Wise up!’” the Rev. Bill Snyder of Boston’s Holy Trinity Church told the 200 friends and relatives who gathered at a church service Saturday morning for a 45-minute requiem service and brief eulogy.

The phrase, “Wise up!” was a trademark of the 33-year-old Belushi, whose manic comedy made him a star of TV’s “Saturday Night Live” and such films as “Animal House.”

Among the mourners who gathered on the overcast, chilly morning at the Congregational church were Belushi’s wife, Judith, his parents, comedian Bill Murray and actor Lorne Michaels, who worked with Belushi on the hit NBC late-night comedy show.

Lee Salter, Belushi’s New York publicist, said Belushi died Monday of an “overnight drug overdose,” but did not identify the drugs involved.

The Los Angeles Times reported Tuesday that a source in the coroner’s office said Belushi died of complications from a cocaine overdose. ABC News also reported that sources said a drug overdose killed him, and that the drug was “probably cocaine.”

The Los Angeles coroner’s office declined to comment on the reports, saying only that the autopsy and other tests have been inconclusive. Belushi’s nude body was found Friday on a bed in a 3,000-square-foot bungalow he had rented at the Chateau Marmont Hotel in Los Angeles. He was in California to film a comedy, “Noble Rot.”

ABC also said Belushi, a heavy smoker, was believed to have been suffering from a respiratory disease.

Guatemalan elections protested

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Opposition candidates called for a demonstration Tuesday to protest what they called widespread fraud in Guatemala’s presidential election, but the military-dominated government warned the demonstration would be “repressed.”

The three civilian candidates, who trailed in Sunday’s election, scheduled the rally for 5 p.m. CST in front of the National Palace.

Former Irish prime minister elected

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Charles J. Haughey regained control of the government Tuesday, defeating incumbent Prime Minister Garret FitzGerald in a parliamentary battle after inconclusive nationwide elections.

With the support of five non-aligned lawmakers, including four socialists, the 56-year-old Haughey was elected prime minister by a vote of 86-79 in the Dail, the lower house of Parliament.

FitzGerald’s seven-month-old coalition government fell in January in the face of Ireland’s worst economic crisis since the state was founded in 1921.

‘No support’ for convicted senator

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top Democrat sought to persuade the Senate on Tuesday to censure rather than expel Harrison A. Williams Jr., but Republican Leader Howard Baker said there was “almost no support” among the majority GOP to suffer the punishment.

“The odds don’t look good,” said Sen. Daniel Inouye, the Hawaii Democrat who has been Williams’ chief defender in the Senate.

As he walked to the Senate chamber for the fourth day of debate on the expulsion resolution, Inouye said he didn’t know if Williams had been able to sway any senators with his defense.

"One or two may die"

Bowen closing upsets staff, patients

By Miriam Adolphson
Staff Writer

Things move slower in the world of the retarded child. A task that may take several days of trial and error for a normal child to learn may take a lifetime of struggling for the mentally handicapped.

Facing the kids at A.L. Bowen Center in Harrisburg, some of whom are unable to brush their hair or turn their heads to speak, is a move from their known world to a new, strange place at the Anna Mental Health Center.

What the move means to the residents of the center is a big concern of the center's staff.

"Some may die," says James Clark, a mental health technician at the center.

"Non-ambulatory patients, those who can't walk, will be most affected by the move. It's quite possible many will dignify. I'm sure they'll have some repercussions. One or two may die," Clark said.

Clark, a Harrisburg resident, is undecided yet about whether he'll move to Anna.

"It's an over-two-hour ride each day and I'm a single parent. I can't see driving to Anna 100 miles each day," he said. Like many of the staff, Clark admits he doesn't know what's going on.

"The kids know just as much as we do from what we see on television and in the papers," he said.

"There have been statements about jobs being available for us, but no one's offered me one. Everything we hear is mostly through rumors." Clark said.

"One of the things I think is the worst is that one of the kids first saw it on TV that the Bowen Center was closing," Clark said. "That's how I first heard about it, and that made it pretty upsetting for all of us.

Boena Price, a mental health technician at the center since 1974, works directly with the kids and she says many of them are upset.

"If they ask, I'm going, I say I don't know," she said.

"By upsetting the routine of the non-ambulatory kids, they may die," Price said. "These kids get accustomed to your voice, your face and mannerisms. If the techs aren't going with them, they'll be very upset.

"Some of the deaf kids' parents are especially against the move because their kids have improved since they were brought here to Bowen and the move may upset them," she said.

Not all the staff is pessimistic about the move. Ted Warren, also a mental health technician, says he sees the reasoning behind moving to Anna.

"There is a need for consolidation. In my own assumption, if and when the transition is made, we're going to find a setting that is beneficial in the long run," Warren said.

"If we as a staff take an open mind, we can benefit from this move, and so can the kids," he said.

"Maybe I'm an optimist, but if we take all the things we do at the Bowen Center with us, we can see a better atmosphere at Anna."

Martha Scroggins, responsible for 116 kids in the Developmental Learning Division, is disappointed at Gov. James Thompsoon's decision, but says she hopes to iron out any problems as a member of the transition team.

The team consists of five Bowen Center staff members and the Anna center's administrators.

"So far, we've had a meeting to discuss our needs and the people we would need to move to Anna," Scroggins said. "We also took a trip to Anna to check out their facilities."
Show that you care; go to a board meeting

TUITION INCREASES for next semester seem to be a foregone conclusion.

The Board of Trustees is scheduled to vote Thursday at its meeting in the SIC Edwardsburg campus on tuition hikes ranging from 15 percent for undergraduates to 37 percent for law students.

The Undergraduate Student Organization and the Graduate Student Council, together with most of the SICU students, are understandably distressed about the disastrous impact that tuition hikes combined with cuts in financial aid will have on students.

But what may be even more distressing is that the tuition hikes are likely to be passed in a room void of students.

UNATTENDED BOARD meetings give board members the impression — perhaps an accurate one — that the fate of students and the university is in their hands. The board can't be expected to listen if students don't make the effort to attend meetings. If students believe that they do care and that students must not be expected to carry the burden of student fees, then they should attend board meetings.

Granted, it is probably too late to stop hikes for next semester. The program was probably restricted due to space, time or financial limitations. Based on past attendance figures for the Recreation Center, only two classes were offered in January and February, and both were for seniors. That seems to be the philosophy when administrators begin calculating for money: let the students pay.

Students, however, have the right to speak. About last month when about 150 students filled the Student Center Ballrooms for the board meeting. The movement stayed alive in public hearings and petitions. Students can't afford to lose that momentum.

Letters

Recreation fees are well-spent

On March 1, there was a letter to the editor from a student who was dissatisfied with the Office of Intramural-Recrational Sports. I felt the individual deserves, at best, a qualified compliment.

The student wanted to participate in an aerobic exercise class, but by the time she reported to the class, both sessions were closed. The program was probably restricted due to space, time, and financial limitations. Based on past attendance figures for the Recreation Center, only two classes were offered in January and February, and both were for seniors. That seems to be the philosophy when administrators begin calculating for money: let the students pay.

As for myself, I have received my money's worth from the Recreation Center fee. I use the building daily, swim in the Campus Lake, participate in intramural sports, run on the jogging trails, print tennis and racquetball, etc.

Personally, I think the Recreation Center fee is one of the best, if not the best, fees on this campus. I am certain I could get a number of students to agree with me.

In conclusion, the fee money is being spent in a variety of ways. All students should take the hint from the student who wrote the letter, and participate in the open Recreation Center classes that are held on Mondays and Saturdays. — Mary Wirtz, Graduate Student, Business Administration.

ONCE MORE we're being handed the same old anti-Equal Rights Amendment chestnuts, this time in the form of a March 3 letter to the editor. Nowacki says that the ERA will eliminate women's exemption from the draft, draft the homosexual, and give new rights to homosexuals. I have got news for you. Are you aware that women are not exempt from the draft? If Congress deems it necessary, it has the power to draft the women. Granted, it has happened yet, but it almost did at the end of World War II.

Freedom and equality carry responsibilities. As women, we cannot expect this society to give us the rights we demand without the attendant responsibilities, however abhorrent they may be. Just as adults give more freedom and wider choices, it also demands more from us. I can't imagine what rights the ERA will take away from women. Granting amnesty in illegal Illinois and many other states, so men are not required to support their ex-wives anyway. As for the equal financial support obligation, that is intended to benefit ex-husbands who have custody of the children. It is just as difficult emotionally and financially for fathers to raise children alone as it is for mothers. I know, my father did it for years.

THE BELIEF that the ERA will grant new rights to homosexuals is absurd, to say the least. The ERA states that there will be no discrimination on the basis of sex, not sexual preference, as anyone who had actually read the amendment would know. So what's so frightening about homosexuals anyway? Are you afraid that a homosexual might be "allowed" to teach your "children"? homosexuals are not a pedriatric. The gay people I know have no more sexual problems with their children than I do.

Finally, there's the old chestnut that the ERA will destroy motherhood. This one is especially effective because it seizes us right in the middle of our "Mom, Flag, Apple Pie, and Dream" fantasies. Unfortunately, most of us live in the real world of skyrocketing divorce rates, severe inflation and displaced homemakers. I too believe that it is best that children have a mother or father home with them, at least through the pre-school years. It is very upsetting that I have to put my two sons in a pre-school all day, but that's just the way it goes. I have no other choice if I want to go to work and help the family. I don't think that is best that children have a mother or father home with them, at least through the pre-school years. I am appalled, however, that data, which I believe, show the real world to be the opposite of what people wish to believe.

I am not advocating against the ERA. I am not against women's rights. On the contrary, I believe that men and women should have equitable rights and responsibilities. I am just saying that it would be better if we could have a Courageous States Rights amendment or a Courageous States Rights amendment that would protect the rights of homosexuals and sexists. These are issues that the people of our country need to address.

Easy student loans produce wealth

I would be the last one to defend a design student's native opinions on student loan programs but would have to extend the same lack of charity to finance majors. Jay Cook's letter of March 1). Education economics is a subset of human capital development economics which, in turn, is a subset of economics. It is barely prac­ticed in the United States and in foreign lands.

Roseann Nowacki wrote March 1 that it is absurd to say my father did it for years. As for the unequal financial support obligation, that is intended to benefit ex-husbands who have custody of the children. It is just as difficult emotionally and financially for fathers to raise children alone as it is for mothers. I know, my father did it for years.

To Moss, the 59-year-old retired merchant from El dorado, the issues facing the state should mirror those of each representative's constituency. A former Saline County board member who is currently on a leave of absence from his job as an inspector with the Egyptian Health Department, Moss said he would "use common sense" in finding solutions to the state's tight economic situation.

"I really don't have any issues," Moss said. "Because if you step and think about it, I hire you to paint my house red and I come back and you've painted it black, then you haven't done your job. I don't know what the issues will be. I feel that I shouldn't talk about them until the people tell me what those issues are and what they want.

Merchant and Colbert are more specific. Both say that property taxes are too high, that revenues from property taxes are too high, that an increased income tax would act as counter to local government greater control over their revenues.

Development of Southern Illinois' economy to provide more jobs to an area with one of the highest unemployment rates in the state, both say, is dependent on aggressive selling of the area's resources, a marketing technique that Colbert said Winchester hasn't made full use of.

"We can get more industry here," Colbert said. "We have every natural resource in the book and if it's sold right, and aggressively, we can both attract industry and help industry that is here to expand.

Merchant said Winchester "use stabilization in industry that is here to expand."

"An income tax is more fair than trying to finance education with property taxes," Colbert said. "We're destroying the American dreams of young families who are trying to own a home.

Colbert said the equalization factor, now applied by the state, should be figured at the county level to ensure fair assessments. He said that move would be congruent with his philosophy of handing over to local government greater control over their revenues.

Just being a Democrat in November will help defeat Winchester. Colbert and Merchant said. Both believe that the Republican victories of 1980 which have brought the Reagan economic program and the New Federalism - which Colbert said "will turn over to the states responsibility for a number of federal programs will fail unless the federal government provides enough funding, and that by November, the Republican backlash will be felt across the nation and in the race for the 11th House seat, they say.

"It's a long time between now and November and Reagan's policies will help." Merchant said, pointing out that Winchester supported Reagan. "And just because it's going to blow up in all of our faces doesn't mean the people are going to forget that."

F-Senate OKs report on academic priorities

The Faculty Senate Tuesday passed a resolution that approved, in principle, the Academic Priorities Task Force report.

The report was passed by a standing committee of faculty members to advise the vice president for academic affairs on the ranking of academic programs in times of University duress.

Before the resolution on the task force report passed by the senate, three exceptions to the program ranking procedure were added.

The exceptions were that any administrative decisions to rank programs must go before the senate and Graduate Council for

In response to violent outbreaks involving Iranian student groups, the Graduate Student Council will discuss a proposed resolution advocating the recognition of all SIU-C students' democratic rights at a 7 p.m. meeting Wednesday in the Mississippi Room of the Student Center.

According to the resolution, the political content of conflicts between pro- and anti-Khomeini groups closed the main issue, which was the violation of students' rights to freedom of speech and assembly.

The resolution calls for separating political content from the issue of students' civil rights violations at SIU-C. It also suggests disciplinary action against those who have physically attacked others or violated other students' rights and adoption of policies to stop further violations of those rights.

A fight between the Muslim Student Society and the Muslim Student Association on Sept. 4, 1981, and recent attacks on Iranian students in the Student Center cafeteria are two incidents cited by the resolution involving violations of students' rights.

In other business, the GSC will take nominations for GSC president and vice president. The elections will be held on March 24. Elections for graduate council members will be held on April 14.

Jobless rate jumps to 11.1 percent in Jackson County

The unemployment rate for Jackson County rose almost two full percentage points from 8.3 percent in December to 11.1 percent in January.

State unemployment in January was 10.1 percent, announced the Illinois Department of Labor's Bureau of Employment Security in Murphysboro. There were 558,000 unemployed statewide and 3,190 jobless in Jackson County.

The national jobless rate for January was 8.4 percent, the Bureau of Employment Security announced.

1981 figures are being revised in wake of the 1980 national census, labor market economist David H. Koch said.

YOUNG CIRCLE
Exhibit shows glass as an art form

By Laurie Landgraf
Entertainment Editor

Glass has clearly come a long way since the invention of the windowpane, as was demonstrated by an exhibit that went on display Monday in the Allyn Building's Vergean Gallery.

More than 40 pieces of hand-blown and cast glass make up the exhibit, which was put together by students in Art 414 and 314.

"A point of fascination is that the use normally associated with the material is one of utility," said Bill Boysen, who teaches the classes and has about 18 years of work with the medium to his credit.

Glassblowing, 'as first experimented with by the Romans at the time of Christ, Boysen said. And as early as 3,000 B.C., craftsmen were working with glass, casting it into molds made of sand.

But exhibition of studio art glass is a relatively recent movement, which began about 15 to 20 years ago, Boysen said.

The classes attract a wide variety of students in disciplines ranging from photography to University studies.

Bruce Booker, a junior in pre-law, likes the possibilities for creativity that glass offers. "You can work with transparency, translucency and color to create solid forms, vessels, sculptures. It's the most physical of the arts,'" Boysen said.

Beginning students' efforts are concentrated mostly on creating stained-glass windows. A cardboard "cartoon" is drawn to outline the desired pattern, then students trace the design onto the glass, cutting it with a glasscutter and assembling it, using strips of pliable lead as "mortar" to hold it together.

Intermediate students advance to glassblowing in the "hot shop" in the Industrial Arts Wing of Fillman Hall, Boysen said. Glass is heated in a furnace to between 1,600 and 2,000 degrees. The molten glass is picked up onto the end of a pipe, similar to the way one would dip into honey, then rolled across a steel table, which causes a "skin" to form on the outside of the glass.

At this point, the ¼-inch wide opening at the end of the pipe is closed off, and the column of air already inside the tube causes the glass bubble to expand.

Criticisms of Trustees ‘are bad rap’: Shaw

By Mike Anthony Staff Writer

Who is the Board of Trustees and what are their duties? According to Carbondale Fire Chief Charles McCallahan, no one.

But Chancellor Kenneth Shaw says McCallahan’s criticisms are a ‘bad rap.

Spokesman for SIU-C, McCallahan has criticized the board for approving a $33,000 payment to former SIU Chancellor Joe Gottfried, a $1,000 payment to Chancellor Brown to incorporate a $12,000-a-year housing allowance into his salary. Also, McCallahan circulated petitions last June opposing the board’s decision to pay George McLaughan, former vice president of University relations, $50,000 for a one-year paid leave.

At last month’s board meeting in Carbondale, Board Chairman William Norwood refused a request by Debbie Brown, Graduate Student Council president, to allow McCallahan to address the board.

Shaw views the board and its actions negatively than McCallahan does.

Board members are ap- proved by the Board, he says, be responsible for the institutions and for promoting broad policy. I think they do a very good job,” he said.

Shaw said he doesn’t think McCallahan’s criticisms of the board are valid, but rather, they are based on his own opinions. Those opinions are not real criticisms of the Board of Trustees, they are criticisms of the administration at Carbondale, the administration at Edwardsville and the chan- celler.”

McCallahan’s criticisms of the board “should be seen for what they are and I think the criticism is a bad rap,” Shaw said, “and if you can infer it’s the board’s responsibility — that what you’re really saying is that the board should be managing the institutions and not making broad policy.

I think that if you read between the lines of what you could infer that Mr. McCallahan is saying he wants to run the institutions,” Shaw said.

‘SU’s Board is one of the best, certainly the best in the state,’ Shaw.

Shaw says the board is “one of the best you’ll find, certainly the best in the state” and at times board opinion will differ from that of the chancellor and the two presidents, Shaw said.

“Whether we agree with Mr. McCallahan or not, the credit, if you think we’re doing the right things, or the blame on the day-to-day things Mr. McCallahan and the chancellor and the presidents,” Shaw said.

Since 1979, SIUC and SU have been under a common board and one that Shaw said he thinks has evolved into “a very effective, board that has stayed out of the day-to-day operations of the institutions. That is a very important governance question.” Historically boards are responsible for hiring chief executives, setting broad policy, evaluating chief executives and replacing them if necessary.

Once boards begin to make day-to-day decisions for the operation of an institution, he said, “the progress for an institution is really going to be halted. It’s true anywhere and we don’t have that problem.”

SIU’s board “is one of the best” you’ll find, certainly the best in the state and at times board opinion will differ from that of the chancellor and the two presidents, Shaw said.

“We would be severely handicapped,” Shaw said. “There are limits to what we could do to encourage students to stay.”

In the academic year 1980-81, graduate and professional students between $1.6 to $2.3 billion under the GSL program “would have been replaced for that money,” he said.

“Given the fiscal situation that universities find themselves in for fiscal 1983,” Shaw said, “it’s not logical to assume that this University could find new ways of subsidizing students by increasing the number of fellowships or giving everybody a tuition waiver, it simply is not economically feasible to do that.”

The University will continue to try to raise funds in the private sector, but there are limits on such funding, Shaw said.

He recalled that Gov. James Thompson last year signed into law a bill that allows private universities to sell bonds, under state approval, to develop funds for the private sector.

The system can attempt to develop a program for public school students but currently “the program is limited to the private sector, and I’m not sure we could loan money under that program,” he said.

It should not be assumed, Shaw said, that enrollment will decrease because of tuition increases and the loss of guaranteed student loans.

If the system can predict the number of students of need, “we cannot predict what their behavior will be,” Shaw said. Students will look at the alternatives, whether borrowing from relative, getting a part-time job, working more, staying out for a little less, then going on school or school.

There are a large number of candidates for each available spot in the professional programs, he pointed out.

In the Board’s actions and the Board’s actions, there are certain students who simply could not attend, he said, “but this doesn’t mean we don’t have an enrollment problem.”

The chancellor conceded that the Board’s actions are not complimentary but there are probably 15 percent this year — “it’s a possibility that students will be priced out of the higher education market.”

“We have to remember the times we’re facing and keep in mind the main reason for the meandering we find ourselves in. The predicament is the larger one. It’s not only in this state, but in the country,” Shaw said.

It’s no longer a matter of the University System of Illinois Board of Directors and the governor that institutions solve their own problems. “There’s more funding, Shaw said, because “it’s an economic imperative, than we were ever able to do.”

“Harder times are coming,” the chancellor warned.

Democrats and Republicans alike agree the state faces an acute financial problem, he said.

The disagreement is over how to live with it, he said, and that controversy is “far less intense than what will occur as the next budget cuts occur.”

Even worse, Shaw said. “We’re looking at a situation where we could have maybe no more than last year’s budget or even less than last year’s budget totally.”

“...one thing worse than tuition hikes of the magnitude that are program of diminishing quality,” Shaw from Page 1

that we are, they’re having the same problems,” he said.

When you ask the general statement, you ignore the particular harshness of the problem, Shaw said, “and there’s bound to be those. But I think in general, that we will see our enrollment unassisted by these proposed increases.

“Students will, one way or another, find a way to come back to SIUC or SU next year. Now, you can be specific kinds of cases, obviously. But there are always. But I think the increases are manageable in light of other aspects of the economy.”

Shaw said the effect on students from Southern Illinois, despite a high cost of living in the region, “will be about the same” as the increase for students from other parts of the state.

What would the system do to encourage or increase graduate and professional student enrollment if graduate and professional students are no longer eligible for Guaranteed Student Loans?

“We would be severely handicapped,” Shaw said. “There are limits to what we could do to encourage students to stay.”

In the academic year 1980-81, graduate and professional students received $1.6 to $2.3 billion under the GSL program “would have been replaced for that money,” he said.

Shaw says housing allowance move wise, saves state money

By Mike Anthony Staff Writer

Last September, in a move that brought about much criticism, the Board of Trustees voted to incorporate a $12,000-a-year housing allowance into Chancellor Kenneth Shaw’s salary, he said.

Despite the uproar, which he says surprised him then and still surprises him, Shaw pointed out it was a wise decision and a better deal for the state than building a house for the chancellor.

The Legislature had cut the $12,000 housing allowance, Mr. SIU appropriations bill, a move that prompted the board to incorporate the allowance into Shaw’s salary.

Carbondale Fire Chief Charles McCallahan, one of the board’s more outspoken critics, called the decision another instance of the board disregarding the concerns of the people.

At the time of the board’s decision, Shaw said he preferred the allowance to save the expense of building a house.

Last week, Shaw said, “In the short and long run, it would be better for the chancellor if the University built him a house. Would it be better for everybody else?”

I’d say no, because it’s going to cost them more money. It’s going to cost them a lot more money than it’s cost them under the present situation,” he said.

Board Member Harris Rowe told the board that when the housing allowance was first discussed after Shaw was appointed chancellor in 1979 that the allowance was $5,000 operations of the institution.

“If you asked me if I would benefit, the answer is yes,” he said. “but would the institution and the state of Illinois benefit? No — it would cost them more money. It would be ridiculous.”

Advertisers are split over new ‘TAO’ format

By Joe Walter
Staff Writer

Over the last month has passed since Bill Glassman, vice president of Community Service Broadcasting Inc., oversaw the format "fine tuning" at FM radio station WTAO in Murphyboro.

At the time, Glassman asked residents of Jackson County to give the station a listen for 30 days. But listeners were not the only ones taking WTAO for a test run. Many businesses also adopted a "wait and see" attitude to give the station's management a chance to get the bugs worked out of its new, more mainstream "album rock" format.

Some businesses contacted have dropped, or have considered dropping, advertising on the station. But not all are satisfied or are just trying times.

Fotios Karayiannis, manager of Pinch Penny Liquors, said his establishment has a long-term advertising contract with WTAO. The station's management should run its business as it sees fit, Karayiannis said. "If they make a mistake, they lose. If not, they make good."

"T.J. McFly's" manager, Frank Cyrenas, said, he is satisfied with WTAO. "I'm happy with them," he said, adding that he thought WTAO was similar in format to Chicago FM station WXRT.

Old Town Liquors is considering other advertising options, according to Doug Diggles, manager. "We're talking about the situation and alternatives like different media or different styles of advertising," he said.

Tammy Erlinger, manager of the Great Escape, said she dropped advertising on WTAO because she thought newspaper ads were more economical. "They weren't doing us any good," she said. "We get as much coverage in the D.E. as we don't need radio time.

One business - Hangar 9 - did discontinue advertising on WTAO because of the format. Owner and manager Rich Simpson said Hangar 9 does not advertise on WTAO because the station's format does not reflect the variety of musical acts offered by the club.

"We offer music like reggae and rhythm and blues," Simpson said. "And when they don't offer artists like Stevie Wonder and Earth Wind and Fire it doesn't pay to advertise."

Simpson said he felt other media might be a better advertising bargain, adding that he has started a mailing list for Hangar patrons.

Jim Glassman, general manager of WTAO and, like his brother, a vice president of Community Service Broadcasting Inc., said he is very pleased with the results of the changes.

Glassman said feedback from listeners is generally positive, though he said, "many people feel they are hearing too much repetition." But, he said, the music is becoming less repetitious in the next few months.

Glassman said the station is also now affiliated with the ABC rock network which he says offers better news and features than did WTAO's former network, The Source. Glassman added that since he found that some college students "prefer music that is unfamiliar," WTAO will offer the King Biscuit Flour Hour, which features unique rock acts, on Sunday nights.

Although Glassman said WTAO has attracted "an amazing number of new accounts," he would not comment further on the station's financial status.

Oklahoman gets 99 years in jail for indecent exposure

DURANT, Okla. (AP) - A district court judge, saying he had seen no evidence to support the charge, on Friday released a man convicted of indecent exposure to a child.

Jackson Monroe Martin, 44, was arrested Sept. 22 in Durant after a woman claimed he exposed himself on her front lawn.

A jury found Martin guilty and on Friday he was sentenced because "they just wanted to have a good time out on the streets," Bryan County Assistant District Judge John J. Phillips said at the sentencing.

Butt on Monday Phillips overruled defense, saying that under Oklahoma law, the jury sentence is to be affirmed. Martin said he moved after the state Court of Criminal Appeals dismissed the case and not the trial court.

"My first reaction to the 99 years seemed like 20 for a shock," the judge said.

Martin has 11 prior felony convictions. Assistant District Attorney Larry Grant said the state tried to secure a sentence after two prior felony convictions.

Before Martin was sentenced, he made a lengthy plea for a lighter jail term.

"Last of what those streakers get away with, judge," Martin said. "They don't care nothing and do it in public. I was not a Peeping Tom, looking into people's homes on April 18, 1988, testimony revealed.

The car pinned Parson against her boyfriend's auto, nearly severing her leg, and then dragged her about 35 feet, said her attorney, Don Carr. Parson's leg was later amputated just above the hip.

After a three-week trial, a Cook County Circuit Court jury deliberated almost seven hours before returning a verdict in favor of Miss Parson. The city of Chicago, a Cicero woman who was driving the car and the woman's husband, who was her passenger, were named as defendants in the suit.

$1.25 million won in pothole suit

CHICAGO (AP) - A 19-year-old woman was awarded $1.25 million in damages in injury suit after she was struck by a car that was out of control after hitting a pothole in a South Side street.

William Parson, 19, suffered a serious leg injury in an accident that occurred as she was talking to her boyfriend in front of her home on April 18, 1988, testimony revealed.

Mondale blasts Reagan's policies

WASHINGTON (AP) - Former Vice President Walter F. Mondale on Tuesday urged Congress to repeal key tax breaks in President Reagan's domestic program, what he called "the greatest economic mistake in American history."

In an interview with the National Press Club, Mondale said the budget the president brings to Congress is "the most misleading budget ever presented by a president."

"Right now, the Anna center is not comparable to ours because that center has just been built into this building two weeks ago and we just moved into it just now in the process of remodeling," Scroggins said.

“Our living setup here is optimal. It would be really difficult to move in that one point,” she said.

“Just moving kids from one wing to another really affects them," Scroggins said. “A week ago we moved some kids from one building to another and that was a real problem for us, for them. Some kids were so confused, they couldn’t remember which doors to go through,” she said.

“I don’t want people realize how close we are to these kids. Recipients who’ve been here since they were six have known us as their family all their lives," said Scroggins.

He predicted the deficits would be far higher than those projected by the president. The president should with­draw the nuclear freeze initiative and urge all those who have an opportunity to support it to do so.

The former vice president. responding to the early campaign performance of the challenger, said Mondale was "the true peace candidate" and "the nuclear freeze candidate." He said Mondale "has the strongest peace record of any of the candidates." Mondale, he said, "made a lengthy plea for a lighter jail term."

Economist predicts increase in future jobs for graduates

Ready Readfield
Staff Writer

- Never trust a skinny cook
- Good enough isn’t good enough
- A law of probability states that whatever the fan will not disperse even in the wind
- The race is not always to the swift nor the battle to the strong. But that’s the way to bet.
- Auditors reject any expense account with the bottom line divisible by five or ten.
- The immutable law of the North Woods: the economy changes only for the lead dog. These are economist Elliott Browar’s “Gems of Wisdom” for job-hunters.

During his lecture, entitled “Occupational Outlook for College Graduates in the ’80s,” Browar discussed the employment situation for college graduates in this decade. He also spoke briefly about the American labor force and offered tips for job-hunters.

The lecture by Browar, regional commissioner for the Bureau of Labor Statistics, was sponsored by the SIU-C chapter of Alpha Kappa Psi Professional Business Fraternity as a part of their “Career Seminar.”

The seminar, which began Monday, will end Wednesday evening with a “Business Trends in the ’80s” at 7 p.m. in Student Center Ballroom A. It will be followed by a panel discussion on “Energy and the Economy” at 8 p.m. in Ballroom B.

Browar began his lecture by defining an economist as “someone who makes his Derby for her money.”

“Republicans refer to our current economic condition as a recession, while Democrats refer to it as a depression,” he said.

Browar stressed that his outlooks for college graduates were projections, not forecasts. He said he expects the economy to create 25.5 million new jobs in the next five years, of which 10.6 million will be in the clerical field. However, there were 97.6 million in 1978, and the most recent figure released shows that there are 95.6 million workers currently in that force. The projected figure for 1980 is 119.5 million workers in the labor force.

However, 7 million jobs this decade will result from the replacement of workers who depart from the labor force. Browar said. That is, replacement will create twice as many jobs as economic growth will.

In addition, 1980’s white collar jobs will expand more than will blue collar jobs, Browar said. Browar noted that there are over 600,000 employers in the American labor force, “So, of course, these are loose figures,” he said.

Browar noted a distinct trend in the economy, moving away from goods production and toward services.

“Employment in the services category will grow faster than any other category, particularly in the area of health care, data processing and engineering,” he said. “Now 73 percent of the labor force is in the service category,” he said.

Browar also noted a decline in the number of farm workers, a trend which he said will continue.

There are more college graduates in the labor force now than ever before,” said Browar. He said that 17.7 million workers between the ages of 25 and 64 have four more years of college to their credit, and the percentage of college graduates increased from 19 to 23 percent from 1959 to 1978.

The number of college graduates entering the labor force between 1975 and 1990 is projected at 19.5 million, Browar said. One college graduate in four will enter nontraditional jobs such as clerical work.

“One of every five jobs will be in the clerical field in 1990,” Browar said. “There is an oversupply of graduates, and this force comes into lower level jobs.” However, he noted that there should be an increase in managerial and administrative positions. “The baby boom is about to have its impact on management,” he said.

Not only will services such as health care experience the greatest rate of growth in the labor force, but jobs in areas of wholesale trade, particularly in durable goods, are projected to increase, Browar said. Jobs in areas of manufacturing will experience a slower growth rate, however it is up from in recent years, Browar said. The growth of jobs in the federal government is extremely slow, mainly due to reductions of jobs in the schools, he said.

Financing, banking and real estate are all areas of business which should experience a steady increase in the labor force. Browar said. Also, construction jobs should increase during the first half of the 1980s, but then drop during the latter half, he said.

Browar said jobs in the coal mining industry should also increase steadily, while high in sales, particularly of durable goods, are also expected to be more and more plentiful.

College graduates going into businesses such as manufacturing, banking and insurance would all do well to have experience with computers, said Browar. Accountants with data processing experience will also be more in demand than those without, he said. “The next professional shortage in the United States may be accountants.”

The percentage of women in the labor force, which is currently 39 percent, is expected to rise to 45 percent in 1986, Browar said. “Employers are now most interested in graduates able to assume responsibilities.”

Hey bartender! I'll have a soda

By Thomas Russell
Student Writer

Where in Carbondale can a student get drinks and snacks and listen to live bluegrass music — all for free — without paying the price for it the next morning? It's available at "Time Out," an alternative to happy hour to be offered from 4 to 6 p.m. on Thursdays in the first-floor TV lounge of the Recreation Center.

The drinks sound familiar, but they're all non-alcoholic. Mexican Summer, Lime Rickeys, Bitterstings, Lime Rickeys, Carbondale Tacos and Gimjoes are mixed and served by bartenders wearing T-shirts that declare: "Don't be afraid to ask for soda, for juice, for water. Alcohol is not everyone's cup of tea.

The happy hours are sponsored by the Wellness Center, Intramural-Recreational Sports and the Wesley Foundation. "We're not against drinking," said Nancy Logan, alcohol educator and counselor at the Wellness Center. "Our purpose is to promote responsible drinking by educating people about alcohol — literally showing people they don't have to drink to have a good time."

"Time Outs," on Feb. 11 and 25 aptly demonstrated the point. As hundreds of drinks were served to a crowd of curious people, "Jigger of Fun" pamphlets were also available, giving simple, step-by-step instructions for preparing the drinks. Live bluegrass music was accompanied by the smell of popcorn and sizzling sausage balls.

"Whatever the reason for coming, people seemed to be enjoying themselves," said Greg Firko, graduate assistant in recreational sports. Developing "Time Out" was a team effort by Kathy Rankin, acting director of Intramural-Recreational Sports, Logan and Steve Loback, director of the Wesley Foundation.

They solicited local merchants, including several liquor stores, to donate cups, napkins, stirrers and other items for the bar. Easy listening music was provided by members of the Folk Music Union. The "Time Out" organizers said they plan to experiment with different snack menus and may possibly add jazz fusion to the musical fare.

But the fate of future "Time Outs" programs depends on the availability of supplies, Rankin said. She said the program was started with no intention of changing for the drinks and that's the way the organizers want to keep it — for this semester, at least.

Additional "Time Outs" will be March 25 and April 8 and 22, if things go as planned, Lori said. Thursdays were chosen because they're "good days to start thinking about relaxing, socializing and planning ahead for the weekend," Rankin said.

And as the weekend approaches, it's a lot easier to relax when your head isn't pounding from an alcoholic happy hour the day before.

‘Head shops’ shouldn’t expect regulation from city, says Fry

By Rod Farlow
Staff Writer

The Supreme Court decided last week that communities could regulate “head shops,” but a city official and the owner of The Fetish don’t think Carbondale will do so.

“I think there would have to be a substantial agitation of citizens’ groups to make regulation of head shops a priority in Carbondale,” City Manager Carroll Fry said. “It’s just not one of our priorities. This decision will probably affect urban and suburban areas more than it will places like Carbondale.”

The Court didn’t say communities had the right to ban “head shops,” but it did declare constitutional the ordinance of a Chicago suburb which requires them to do so.

The ordinance adopted by Hoffman Estates in 1978 requires shop owners to acquire a special $150 license to run their shops, and to make all records, including the names of addresses of customers, available for police inspection.

Suzanne Dondzick, who has owned The Fetish, 212 S. Illinois Ave., for 13 years, agrees with Fry.

“This isn’t a pawn in that system,” she said. “I’m not talking about regulation as an immediate threat. Dondzick knows it’s a possibility.

“Things in America are changing,” she said. “America’s live and let live attitude is changing, with movements like the moral majority gaining force.

“So far, regulation of paraphernalia isn’t among the priorities of Carbondale’s council. But, ironically, one of the city’s top priorities, the railroad relocation project, could mean the end of Dondzick’s business.

The land The Fetish is located on is needed by the city for the project. Dondzick doesn’t like the prospect of relocating her business, and thinks the future of her business is gloomy.

“Just have to learn to do something else. I’ve been learning how to make pizzas,” she said, laughing. “I might go into the pizza business.”

Proposed legislation places right to abortion in jeopardy

By Jennifer Phillips
Student Writer

Sandy Landis, coordinator of Sexuality Programming at the Walters Center, said two bills into Congress, if passed, would take away women's right to have a legal abortion. Ultimately, abortions will be outlawed, she said, and they will have to appeal a woman's right to control over her reproductive system.

Two bills are the Hatch Amendment and the Helms statute — are striving to reverse a U.S. Supreme Court decision that legalized abortion.

The Hatch amendment is a three-step process. First, the amendment will have to pass Congress and become law. It must pass the House and Senate by a two-thirds vote. Then it must be ratified by 38 states to become effective. But to complete the process, Congress must pass a statute stating life begins at conception. Then abortion will be illegal.

"Then abortion will be virtually outlawed," she said. The local process from actually outlawing abortion to the elimination of legal abortion services would take a long time, she said.

If the amendment passes, she said, "it's going to be chaotic." But Landis is not sure whether the amendment will get that far. The anti-choice movement is divided between the Hatch amendment and the Helms statute, she said. Same feel the Hatch amendment is a compromise between anti- and pro-choice. As long as the two are in the movement, the pro-choice movement will benefit from the indecisiveness, she said.

Thursday is last day for student campaign petitions

Thursday is the last day to pick up and have signed petitions to run for office in the April 13 USO and student trustee elections. Petitions for student senator, president, vice president, student trustee and the recognition of a political party are available at the USO office in the Student Center.

A mandatory pre-election meeting for candidates will be held at 7 p.m. March 22 in the Student Center Ballroom A to discuss campaign guidelines.

No leprechauns and snakes in the ‘real’ St. Patrick’s life

By Diane Jensen
Student Writer

With apologies to the Irish—there are really two St. Patrick’s, the real Patrick and the Patrick of myth. “It is the Patrick of myth that we have taken down into modern times,” says Carroll Riley, chairman of the Department of Anthropology.

Riley spoke recently at a seminar entitled “St. Patrick: The Man, the Myth, and the Celebrations of Lent.”

The real St. Patrick is described not as being a kind, humble, devout man who spread Christianity in Ireland, Riley said. Knowledge of St. Patrick has been gained mostly through two documents written by St. Patrick around A.D. 450, along with some archeological evidence and church history, he said.

Later works about St. Patrick, written in the seventh and eighth centuries, described him as being an “arrogant, extremely powerful man who wrought animals back to life...and drowned villages.” Riley said. It is these later sources which started the myth of St. Patrick.

One of the best-known myths about St. Patrick is that he drove the snakes out of Ireland. There is no evidence to support this myth, Riley said. Also, “as far as we know, Patrick never had anything to do with shamrocks,” Riley said, although later works on St. Patrick claimed he used shamrocks to explain the Trinity.

Leprechauns, too, “do not have anything to do with St. Patrick,” according to Riley, but instead date back to an earlier period in history. Although St. Patrick did much to promote Christianity in Ireland, Riley said he does not know why St. Patrick has received the amount of attention given him. One reason, he said, may be that St. Patrick did most of his work near the archdiocese which is the governing archdiocese of Ireland.

St. Patrick, who was born in England in A.D. 432, was kidnapped at age 16 to serve as a slave in Ireland, is “not a bona fide saint.” Riley said. St. Patrick is instead a “traditional saint” — one of several saints who are recognized by the church as being important, but who have not been canonized, he said.

Riley is a former resident of Carbondale, Ill., who has a Ph.D. from the University of Chicago and a master’s from UCLA.

The seminar was sponsored by the University Honors Program.

Gymnasts to close dual season against Sycamores, Cardinals

By JoAnn Marczewski

By Staff Writer

The men’s gymnastics team will end its regular season with a double dual meet against Ball State and Indiana State at 7:30 p.m. Friday at Terre Haute, Ind.

A home meet against Ball State, originally scheduled for Saturday, was cancelled. The meet Friday will be the makeup of a meet postponed in January due to bad weather.

"The worst we will do is split," said Coach Bill Meade. "I’m thinking positively, we can pick up two victories against Indiana State.

Indiana State scored its season high of 269.10 against Northern Illinois, and will be the tougher of the Salukis’ two opponents, Meade said. The Sycamores have a few individuals capable of scoring well, he added, including Jon Levy in the all-around, parallel bars and rings. Brazilian native Carlos Silvestre has reached 9.45 in the floor exercise, and Bob Williams a 9.75 on the vault for Indiana State.

Ball State should be no trouble, Meade continued, although Carl Leland may give Saluki John Levy some competition on the high bar. Leland has averaged 9.32 on that event. Besides being an opportunity to improve the team’s 4-4 record, the double dual will keep four of the gymnasts in their “quest to qualify for nationals,” Meade said. Tom Slomski on the rings and John Levy on the high bar have “pretty well cemented bids with the high scores they have produced,” the Saluki coach said. Two top home scores and three best away scores, used to determine NCAA qualifiers, average 9.56 for Slomski and 9.62 for Levy.

"Slomski has done a great job," Meade praised. "He’s doing a championship routine and it would be nice to see him get All-American status. It’s the same with John. He’s of national caliber. Both are doing routines at the level I think is necessary for national competition.”

The meet will provide an opportunity for two possible qualifiers, Herb Voss on the pommel horse and Lawrence Williamson on the floor exercise, to receive another high away score.

The team has been becoming more consistent, according to Meade. The gymnasts are also “more confident, which is a big factor,” he said.

After Friday’s meet, the team will continue to work out and will compete in the Mid-East Invitational at either Northern Illinois or Illinois-Chicago March 18-19. Meade said the exact location has yet to be decided by the invitationals’ organizers.

After the Invitational, practice will continue for Salukis who have qualified for the NCAA meet on April 1-3 at Lincoln, Neb.

Okawville 'just misses' in cage loss to Benton

By Bob Morand
Staff Writer

A trip to the boy's Class A high school basketball tour-ament in Champaign this past weekend rested on the shoulders of Okawville's Todd Schwanhaus.

The 5-4 guard stepped to the line to shoot two free throws with no time left on the clock and the Benton Rangers out in front, 69-68.

Schwanhaus missed both free throws, and the Benton supporters among the 8,000 fans at the State Farm Center went berserk. The Rangers had secured a spot in the Class A semifinals with a 51-48 victory over the Salukis in the first quarterfinal game Friday afternoon.

Benton Coach Rich Herrin said the game reminded him of the Benton-Okawville super-sectional matchup two years ago, when his team bowed to the Rockets 58-51 in a 10-minute overtime.

"Yeah, it looked like the game two years ago," a quietly elated Herrin said. "But just like last time — somebody has to go to win." Benton, who knocked Okawville twice during regular season play, got 23 of its points from standout 6-5 center Marky Melton, while Rob Williams added 14.

Kelley's counterpart, 6-5 Paul Jansen of the Rockets, led all scorers with 26 points in the game. Jansen dedicates four minutes to Okawville in the first quarterfinal game Friday afternoon.

A busy Herzog builds Cards into another 'Gas House Gang'

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals are looking at the look of the old "Gas House Gang" — speed and defense given priority over home run punch — as one of the reasons is perfect harmony between the general manager and manager.

They see eye-to-eye on all matters and work around the clock, often formulating their best strategy after midnight.

"I talk in my sleep," said Whitey Herzog, the two men in baseball's big leagues who hold down both the front office and field directing posts.

The other is Billy Martin of the Oakland A's, whom Herzog doesn't consider comparable. "Billy does nothing but say yes or no on trades," said the Cardinal boss. "Me? I come to the office an hour earlier to get all my front-office details out of the way and I don't let any of this stuff intrude on the job."

"I am lucky to have a good man in Joe McDonald, who handles a lot of the de-al's," said McDonald, former general manager of the New York Mets, now executive assistant. "The 1982 Cardinals wear the Herzog label. The man who guided the Kansas City Royals to three straight divisional titles in 1975-78 has fashioned the club in his last big-city piece-by-piece.

"He failed the 1980 winter meetings, his first year at the Cardinal helm. Whitey traded 13 players for 19. The changes brought fruit in the steak-split 1981 season when the Cards carved the best overall percentage (96-

4) in the National League's Eastern Division, yet failed to make the playoffs.

The Cincinnati Reds had a similar experience in the Western Division, finishing with the best won-lost record in the National League.

"I told John McNamara (Reds manager) that we shared a record. We both got first and second in the same season," Herzog said.

Herzog continued revamping the club over the winter, his biggest deals being the acquisition of the Smith boys (Dizze from San Diego and Lonnie from Philadelphia, both 212 career home runs) from the Cardinals for Greg Renegar, 17 for Okawville, while Schwanhaus finished with 11.

The game was nip-and-tuck all the way, with occasional bursts of offensive by both teams. But in the third quarter, when the lead changed hands seven times, one team began using a fullcourt press, trying to turn turnovers from the opposition.

The Rocket press, however, didn't phase the Rangers, as they staged a comeback and outscored Okawville 16-5 in the first four-and-a-half minutes of the final stanza and took the lead 64-62 with 2:28 remaining.

After each team turned the ball over, Renegar fouled Benton guard Tim Wills, who put the Rangers ahead 67-64 with one minute left. But Jansen got the Rockets back to within one after he made two free throws. Greg Renegar added 17 for Okawville, while Schwanhaus finished with 11.

SIUC students should benefit from proposed increases in ticket prices as the cost of the Saluki Athletic Pass, currently $26 for both, will go up West's athletics director said that the ticket prices will be changed. West, who added that money woes "get worse every year."

"Hartog, men's athletics director, is proposing the ticket increases," said Fred Huff, assistant men's athletics director. Huff said Hartog hopes to increase the ticket prices to $1.50 for men's games and $1 for women's games.

Both Hartog and Huff stressed that the proposed increase is only a fee increase for the people who wish to buy season tickets to men's and women's basketball games.

"I think this proposal would provide more motivation and support for our teams," Huff said.

"I hope it's successful," Huff added.

Huff felt the athletics directors want to achieve an "attendance-improved" for men's and women's events.

Proposed ticket hike to 'tax' users
