Phoenix plan under review

By Tracy Moss
Administration Writer

The Phoenix Committee circulated Tuesday a rough draft of the final proposal for a new college of communication, and it meets today for input on the plan.

Bill Elliott, chairman of the Phoenix Committee, said the proposal was circulated to faculty, staff and interested guests to address problems for correction.

He said proposals were posted around the Communications Building for students.

The Phoenix Committee meets today in Studio B in the Communications Building to address suggestions and problems from those who have seen the proposal, Elliott said.

He said journalism, radio and television and broadcast faculty met Monday and discussed the proposal.

The reaction from the faculty was very positive except for some concern for details, Elliott said.

"We have already had minor suggestions," he said. "The suggestions have been very helpful."

Elliott said after the meeting tomorrow the last changes will be made on the proposal and a final draft will be written. The final draft will then be submitted to Benjamin Shepherd, vice president for academic affairs and provost.

The proposal calls for a integrated college of communication.

"No three academic units on campus are more closely integrated than the three in the proposal," Elliott said.

The proposal says, "[It] is proposed that undergraduate and graduate programs in the college be integrated in ways that will extend and enhance the students'

Proposed IBHE cuts would affect SIUC research

Gus says no step forward, two steps back.

By Katie Morrison
General Assignment Writer

It was only a few years ago that SIUC's goal was to strive for the highest university research classification, but now administrators are concentrating on holding on to a secondary status level.

The Illinois Board of Higher Education's proposed program cuts for SIUC could have a negative effect on Carnegie Research II Status, the vice president for academic affairs and provost said.

"It could have a significantly negative impact with the possibility of compromising our programs by following BHE point by point," Benjamin Shepherd said. "With some give by BHE and the use of comparable cope criterion, however, we can respond to BHE without compromising status."

Some of the proposed cuts by IBHE include the elimination of 11 PhD programs, all associate degree programs, nine master's programs and five bachelor's programs.

The criteria for maintaining Carnegie II status include:

providing a full range of bachelor's programs, the number of doctorates awarded by the graduate program and the amount of research dollar funded.

When these criteria are filled, the institution is eligible for $12.5 million in federal support for research and development. These criteria are set by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching.

Carnegie status is more than monetary funding.

see RESEARCH, page 12

Research fluctuates

The following totals on SIUC research money do not include financial aid funding. The number of grants increased over three years before dipping again in 1992.

1989	$18.3	688	647
1990	$18.0	835	731
1991	$20.7	889	709
1992	$19.2	858	720

Design faculty at odds over future of SIUC department

By Tracy Moss
Administration Writer

Design faculty in the School of Art and Design are at odds over the future of their department.

Sunand Bhattacharya, assistant professor of product design, said product design faculty want to stay with the art department, which will become part of the College of Liberal Arts or June 30.

Larry Briggs, associate professor of design, said the design department still is drafting a proposal for a new school of design that could become a unit of COLA, the College of Technical Careers or a new college of communication.

"We will create a proposal for a school of design that can be plugged in anywhere," Briggs said.

He said the two faculty members in product design are the only faculty opposed to a new school of design.

"The production people are working predominantly against us," Briggs said. "They have dropped out of negotiations for the proposal of a school of design."

He said the production faculty

Agency asks for welfare money

Department officials say children deserve more attention

By Jeremy Finley
Politics Writer

Because the state's child welfare agency is worried that children are not getting the attention they deserve, it is asking for $73 million to help revamp the department.

Sterling Ryder, director of the Department of Children and Family Services, asked a House appropriations committee Thursday to give the funds in order to meet a court order to hire more caseworkers.

A 1991 reform settlement ordered DCFS to reduce caseloads from 50 or more children per caseworker to 30 children or 25 multichild families by July 1.

Mary Dixon, legislative director of the American Civil Liberties

Union, said the reform settlement was the result a four-year investigation of DCFS by a panel of attorneys and the ACLU that found abuse and negligence in the department.

The ACLU filed a lawsuit against DCFS, causing the department to change their operations, but emphasized a change in caseworkers, she said.

Ed McMorris, DCFS chief of communications, said the department reached an agreement with the ACLU, but because of layoffs of staff— not caseworkers—and budget cuts, the department is having to ask for the appropriation of the money to meet the July deadline.

"The ACLU suggested we needed a complete overhaul of our department, and we agreed this was the case," he said. "But the reform cannot happen overnight. We have had major budget reductions of $20 million last year, and that's made it very difficult."

McMorris said caseworkers across the state are overworked, and the reform is helpful because it gives the workers more of a chance to deal with individual cases. But the funds have to be given so more caseworkers can be hired.

"We are asking the legislature for a approval of funds for the caseworkers," he said. "If we get the funds, we ought to make the deadline."

McMorris said 173 caseworkers are needed to both meet the cuts

Salukis to play for MVC tourney title

By Kevin Bergquist
Sports Editor

The SIUC women's basketball team will play for the school's second NCAA Tournament bid in a week Saturday at Southwest Missouri State.

The Salukis (19-9) reached the title game of the Missouri Valley Conference Tournament with a 71-69 overtime win over No. 2 seed Creighton (20-8) Tuesday night in Omaha, Neb.

Southwest Missouri State defeated Drake, 83-53, to capture the other spot in the finals.

Anita Scott's layup with 1:36 to play in the extra session sealed the win for the Salukis. It was the only basket scored in the overtime session.

Scott led the way for the Salukis with a game-high 21 points. She also added four assists and three steals in 44 minutes of action.

Scott was backed by a pair of double-doubles from Kelly Firth and Angie Rougeau. Firth scored 10 points and collected a career-high 17 rebounds, while Rougeau grabbed 12 rebounds to go with 12 points.

Tiffany Bolden also checked into the double-digit column with 13 points.

SIUC crashed the boards in a big way to stop the Bluejays' 10-game home winning streak.

The Salukis commanded a 47-27 rebounding advantage, with 22 of those coming on the offensive galls. Creighton managed only five offensive caroms.

The Salukis led by 14 points at halftime, but the Bluejays went on a 14-2 run to close the margin. The rest of the game was a nip-and-tuck affair.

For the second time this year on its home floor, Creighton shot a much greater number of free throws than the Salukis. The Bluejays connected on 21 of 28 shots from the line, but SIUC made the best of its opportunities with 12 makes in 14 trips to the charity stripe.

Creighton was led in scoring by Becky Flynn. The newcomer and freshman of the year in the MVC hit for 17 points. Shannon Struby added 11 points for the Jays.

Saturday's championship game at the Hammonds Center in Springfield, Mo., will begin at 7:05 p.m.

The Bears defeated the Salukis on their home floor last year in the title game, 86-69.

Salukis could go anywhere for first round

By Karyn Viverito
Sports Writer

For the first time in 15 years, the Salukis are finally going to make their long-awaited return to the NCAA Tournament, but their future there is not exactly clear.

The Salukis and their fans will await the NCAA pairings show that airs at 5:30 p.m. Sunday on CBS, to see who and where the Dawgs will play in the first round of the tournament.

A guess as to where could be either the Midwest region or the West regional.

That is where Missouri Valley Conference Tournament champs have gone with their automatic bids for the last three seasons.

Last year, Southwest Missouri State was sent to the Midwest region in Dayton, Ohio, for first-round action. In the two previous years, MVC teams have been sent to the West regional, with 1991 champ Creighton going to Salt Lake City, Utah, and 1990 champ Illinois State going to Long Beach, Calif.

Fred Huff, SIUC men's sports information director, said he feels there is no pattern the NCAA follows in deciding where to send teams.

"The teams are given their seedings first and then the NCAA worries about where they are going to send them," he said. "They could send a team from the east to the west and the other way around."

The Salukis could go anywhere from 300 miles away to 2,000 miles away, Huff said.

If the NCAA follows close to the pattern it has followed in the last three years placing MVC teams, the Salukis could find themselves in the Midwest sites of Chicago or Indianapolis, Ind., or in the West sites of Salt Lake City, Utah, or Tucson, Ariz.

Seedings are also somewhat hard to predict until all conference tournaments are concluded and the automatic bids are complete.

For the past three years, MVC teams have found themselves between the No.

Focused Salukis got the job done

By Karyn Viverito
Sports Writer

It was a time of many emotions for the Salukis on Missouri Valley Conference championship night Monday.

As the day they finally had been waiting for all season came, the Salukis knew they had 15 years of hopes and expectations to fulfill, as memories of SIUC in the NAAs date all the way back to 1977.

With game time not until 8:30 p.m., the Salukis had a lot of time to think before the game.

In what might be considered a tense situation, was exactly the opposite, said Saluki forward Mirko Pavlovic.

"It was not too bad really," he said. "We were focused, but very relaxed and actually feeling very confident that we would go in there and play well."

As the player introductions were announced and the Saluki starters stepped on to the floor, their faces looked as if they had been carved out of stone. They were men of total seriousness.

The Dawgs shook hands with the ISU players without a word or a smile, and their was a look of determination in a team that was obviously there to get a job done.

Junior Chris Lowrey said he had to keep concentrated before the game. "I told myself before the game that we were in the championship game against ISU, and that I was going to make my mark on that game," he said.

And make a mark he did, scoring a team-high 14 points. At the half, the Salukis had a 12-point lead over the Redbirds, but it was not enough for forward Ashraf Amaya, who knew how leads can be cut in minutes, especially by the Redbirds.

"Basically what I said is that we had 20 minutes of gutcheck left, and we still had to continue to prove ourselves," Amaya said. "We didn't win the conference title, so we had to prove we were the best team."

"I think we proved that by beating the No. 1-ranked team." The Salukis kept that composure throughout the majority of the second half, but couldn't stay that way for long, as everyone was starting to smile and celebrate with about 1:30 left to play in the game.

With the celebrating going on afterwards, and their goal of going to the NAAs reached, it was time for the Salukis to bask in the spotlight.

Pavlovic said now that he has reached his dream of being in the NAAs, he knows the Salukis are not going to stop there.

"People may think that we will just be satisfied with the first round, but we are going there to win some games," he said. "We'll go in there and try to do it all."

Championship bright spot in tough season for Lusk

By Kevin Bergquist
Sports Editor

Saluki guard Paul Lusk got two much-needed boosts from the Salukis' championship win Monday night.

The sophomore's play off the bench went a long way in keeping the top-seeded Redbirds at bay, and helped Lusk pull out of a recent slump.

But, more importantly, the win gave Lusk a ray of sunshine in an other wise emotionally cloudy season.

In January, Chris Street, Lusk's best friend and ex-teammate at the University of Iowa, was killed in an automobile accident. Lusk said Street, as he has been all season, was on his mind Monday night when SIUC brought home the NCAA bid.

"It dominates me. I miss him, but I feel close to him when things like this happen," Lusk said. "I know he is proud of me, and he knows I am thinking of him."

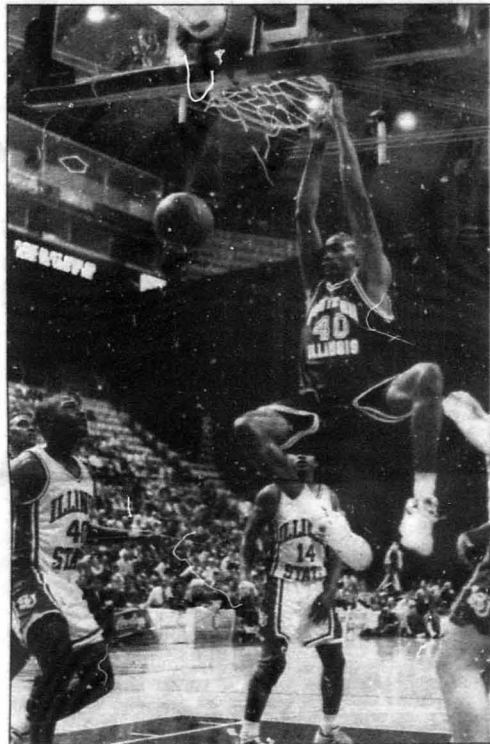

"I've been through a lot of rough times, but this game really helps. It makes me feel good, because I do play a lot for Chris. It's still tough that I lost my best friend, but I am thankful now for everything that has happened."

Along with having to deal with the loss of Street, Lusk saw a late-season slump take a bite out of his numbers and playing time. Points and playing time were abundant Monday, however, and Lusk took advantage, scoring 13 points.

"I had kind of been struggling, but I looked at it as my job," Lusk said. "I need to be ready when called upon, and when I was called upon, I came through."

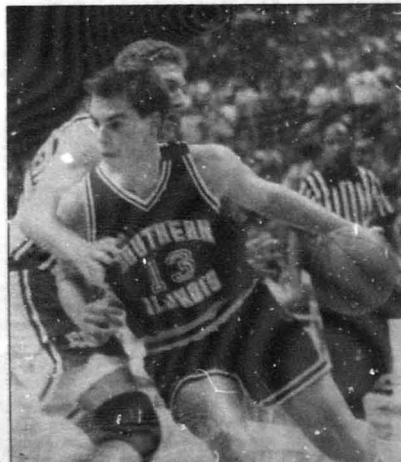

Lusk came through with five field goals in seven attempts in 14 minutes of action. At one point in the second half, Lusk netted five straight points to extend the SIUC lead to 17 points.

"When you are going like that, you just let it fly," Lusk said. "I let it fly and

RECESSION AFFECTS POOR COUNTRIES MOST — Already staggering under the burdens of war, famine and debt, the plight of the world's least-developed countries is worsening due to the global recession, according to a United Nations study. The annual report by the U.N. Conference on Trade and Development released in Geneva Tuesday said, for the world's 47 poorest countries said those countries "have scarcely any prospects for implementing any kind of economic reforms."

UNITED NATIONS APPOINTS ADMINISTRATOR — Melissa Wells, the U.S. ambassador to Zaire, was named Tuesday undersecretary-general of the United Nations department of administration and management. Wells replaces Dick Thornburgh, who left under a cloud of controversy over a report on abuse at the United Nations. Secretary-General Butros Ghali created the post for Thornburgh to carry out last year's pledge to streamline the U.N. bureaucracy.

LEADERS WANT TO ARRANGE AID FOR RUSSIA — President Clinton and French President Francois Mitterand called on the world's major powers to approve large-scale aid for Russia on an emergency basis. The appeal of the leaders as they met Tuesday provides a big, public push toward a Western commitment of aid for embattled Russian President Boris N. Yeltsin.

WISCONSIN TEEN PERFORMS IMPOSSIBLE — An 18-year-old high school student lifted a 3,000 pound car off his head after the vehicle he was inspecting slipped off its jack and pinned him to the ground. Lance Meyer, who weighs 140 pounds, escaped with only 350 stitches and arms that were "a little bit sore." Meyer said the accident occurred Saturday outside his girlfriend's home in Appleton, Wis., while he was inspecting a bolt on the undercarriage of a car.

FBI SAYS BOMB SET BY WELL-KNOWN GROUP — The head of the U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation's New York office said Tuesday he believes a "large, well-known" terrorist group — not amateur terrorists — organized the bombing of New York's World Trade Center. James Fox, FBI assistant director, said the feeling was shared by veteran law enforcement officials investigating the February 26 blast that killed five people and injured more than 1,000 others.

DISPLACED WORKERS TO GET LITTLE RELIEF — The Clinton administration is planning only a small relief package for workers and communities expected to be hit in this year's round of military base-closings, far below what is needed by them to recover, officials and private analysts said. Pentagon officials said Clinton would release about $80 million in grants for workers and localities that had been approved by Congress in the fiscal 1993 budget.

THIS YEAR MAY BRING CHANGE FOR SMOKING — Armed with a new study about the hazards of second-hand smoke, California's anti-smoking legislators believe 1993 could be the turning point in the long history of legislative domination by the tobacco industry. With renewed vigor, they are pushing bills to blunt tobacco advertising, nearly double cigarette taxes, open the industry to lawsuits and ban smoking inside all buildings.

Corrections/Clarifications

The name of Whistler's painting "Woman in White" was incorrectly stated, and there were seven similar paintings of nudes done in two months by Fred Fisher. This was incorrect in the March 9 Daily Egyptian.

When Brad Cole, USG president, made the statement about the benefits of freeing up $1.3 million from the state that are used for athletics, he was not advocating getting rid of athletics. This was not clear in the March 5 Daily Egyptian.

The Dorians was misspelled in the March 5 Daily Egyptian. The event was not intended for the public and should not have been printed in the Southern Exposure calendar.

Faculty Senate to plan changes in education

By Michael T. Kuciak
Administration Writer

The Faculty Senate agreed yesterday to go forward in discussing a proposal to change the general education curriculum by opening discussion up to the public.

In the meantime, members of the Faculty Senate went back and forth on how challenging and flexible the new general education curriculum should be.

Ann Morey, associate professor of English, said the senate should be aware of two very stylized ways to put together a general education program.

"The first is the core curriculum, where all students take the same 12 courses," she said. "The other is the distributed curriculum, where there are not any particular courses, only clarified areas. The two go from extreme control to very little control."

Morey said a modified core might be best.

"For SIUC, a modified core and a restricted menu may be the best way to go," she said.

David Koster, a biochemistry professor, said the biggest problem with working out a new general education curriculum is fighting over how much substitution, or control over different courses, students may have.

"This issue has forced irrational behavior," he said. "It's the one issue we choke on."

Koster said the current general education students receive is too easy, and is like a set a hurdles the school sets low enough for almost everyone to get over.

"Our brightest students consider our general education a rehash of high school," he said. "General statements made by my students say that it is not very challenging. I'm concerned we move in a direction to change this."

Koster said general education should be more like a ladder process.

"If we don't serve our brightest

USG senators gather input on housing increase

By Todd Schlender
General Assignment Writer

A highly-contested increase in student housing fees once again will be put before student government.

With only one week to regroup after last week's Undergraduate Student Government meeting, student representatives have tried to gather the overall opinion of students regarding the increase.

Stacie Baker, Residence Hall Association secretary, said each RHA representative from each residence area brought back a consensus from the students. She said their responses overwhelmingly were in favor of the increase.

"The response from the hall council at Schneider Hall and from others was mostly positive. We had very few negative comments," Baker said.

Baker said the only negative response she knew of came from Warren Hall, where the majority of students do not want the increase.

Brad Cole, student body president, said USG should follow RHA's recommendation and support the fee increase.

A strong opposition was voiced at the March 3 USG meeting by Denise Young, USG representative from Brush Towers.

Young produced a petition carrying 576 names of Brush Towers residents opposed to the increase.

University Housing is requesting an increase of $72 to total $1,584 a semester for single student housing.

Ed Jones, housing director, spoke at two previous meetings but has been unable to convince all of the senators the increase is necessary.

A similar item came before the Graduate and Professional Student Council regarding family housing rates and was defeated soundly.

USG planned to vote on the resolution at the March 3 meeting, but the senators chose to table the

Atrocities in Bosnia mirror other nations

MOST PEOPLE ARE AWARE that there is a war in Bosnia between the Serbs and the Muslims in the name of "ethnic cleansing."

In a battle over ethnic identity, which is further defined by religious differences, the Serbs of Eastern Orthodox are battling the Croats, who are Roman Catholic, and Bosnians, who are Muslims.

What most have only begun to realize is that the atrocities include systematic mass rape against Balkan women by Serbians.

As noted by speakers at a forum Monday that commemorated International Women's Day, rape used as a weapon of war is not unique to Bosnia.

The atrocities committed against Balkan women are symptomatic of a much larger problem that includes all nations during war.

AS MANY AS 30,000 TO 50,000 BOSNIAN Muslim and Croatia women have been raped by Serbian soldiers since the fighting began in 1991, according to the Bosnian Ministry for Interior Affairs.

The rapes are part of a Serbian ethnic cleansing agenda in which soldiers rape and impregnate Muslim and Croatia women so that women will give birth to Serbian children.

The rape of a Muslim women is especially difficult because of their conservative Islamic upbringing, said Suzana Pani, associate dean of the College of Business Administration at Triana University in Albania.

Instead of being helped, in most cases these women are considered pariahs to society. Because abortion is not permitted, many die having home abortions or abandon the children once they are born.

PALESTINIAN WOMEN FACE THE SAME atrocities as those in Bosnia but have not received as much publicity, according to Shala Rasa from the SIUC Department of Cinema and Photography.

Women are victims of war not because of their ethnic identity but because they are women, Rasa said. She said that using women as victims was a strategy to reduce the Palestinian population.

Other examples of mass rapes during wars include the rape of Belgian and French women by German troops during World War I, those against Vietnamese women by American soldiers, and more recently the Iraqi rapes of Kuwaiti women.

The rape in Bosnia must not be classified as an isolated incident for it clearly is not and such a mindset undermines the atrocities and ultimately perpetuates them.

If Bosnia is unique, it may be because this is the first mass rape openly to be used for genocidal purposes. Prior to the atrocities in Bosnia, war rape was used to demoralize women whereas the violence against women in Bosnia has been to not only demoralize women but to also make sure they do not reproduce or that the babies are fathered by the enemy.

WAR RAPE MUST NOT BE VIEWED as an undeniable part of culture as it has been. This view treats war rape as natural, allowing it to become acceptable and efforts to the contrary become fruitless. As feminist Gloria Steinem notes, "What happens to men is called politics, what happens to women is called culture."

"Voices must be raised to help the women in Yugoslavia," Pani said. They must because the violence against women in Bosnia reflects a pattern of war violence throughout history. It only makes sense that Bosnia's progress in preventing violence against women is related to the world's progress to keep women from being used as a war weapon.

Promiscuous people ignore dangers

If you were on a plane ready to take off and the pilot said "Of the 100 of you 18 will die on this flight," would you stay on the plane? Probably not.

Such is the case with condoms and promiscuity. Condoms have an 18 percent failure rate. With AIDS, it seems logical to avoid indiscriminate sex. Promiscuous people are generally aware of the risk.

To put themselves at ease they make some sort of rationalization like "I double up" or "I won't get AIDS." But the fact still exists: Having sex with an HIV positive with a condom has an 18 percent chance of failure. The more one continues indiscriminate sex, the higher the probability to contract AIDS or another VD.

However, there are people who would like you to think otherwise and foster rationalizations — especially those who coordinated the Wheel of Sexuality Night in February. They try to make you feel better about using a condom to promote "safe sex."

People, these four are deceiving you. Like Mario Cuomo and his public school system, liberals like to show you they care. The symbolism of their caring doesn't override the substance of the issue.

The secretary of the HHC says AIDS will wipe out the population.

Others say just use a condom. I say change your behavior. Sure, it isn't easy, but think of your precious life! Don't patronize the purveyors of half truths.

By spending an evening at the Wheel of Sexuality you only become a catalyst of the hypocritical and irresponsible response to a terrible illness.

I urge you to protect your wonderful selves and do what is right, and be proud of your position!

In addition, I also suggest you call those who supported the program and let them know how you feel. Have an excellent semester. — Dan Richardson, senior, public relations

Bouncers hard workers at one of toughest jobs

This is in regard to Liza Roscetti's letter "Bouncers must use brains, not biceps" in the Feb. 22 edition of the Daily Egyptian. Ms. Roscetti, do you have any idea what it is like trying to control a bar of 350 drunk college students? Apparently not.

First of all, you say that we should "relate the fact that the people in these bars are all your age, doing what you are trying to do — getting an education and making a life for yourselves?"

I hardly think an education is on a student's mind as they consume unbelievable amounts of alcohol.

As for getting a life for yourselves — that is what we are doing. We are working to put ourselves through school.

Yes, we do go to school, and I resent your comment about having "biceps bigger than brains."

I do not use steroids and neither do any other bouncers I know. Maybe you should get to know one of us before you lump all of us in the stereotypical "Mr.Ego" category.

Ms. Roscetti, bouncers are there for your safety — or have you lost sight of that? We are there doing a job — not getting an ego boost.

Just for the record, everyone is asked to leave before any physical force is used. When physical is used, the patrons have put that on themselves.

Maybe you should get your facts straight before you write any further letters.

If you did, maybe you'd have a little more sympathy for those of us that are working weekends watching the rest of you have fun. — Daniel Lahey, junior, finance

Gay civil rights make no sense

In regards to Colorado's Amendment 2, it should be noted that Ignacio Rodriguez, a former member of the Colorado Civil Rights Commission, has stated that "The U.S. Constitution guarantees civil rights to all citizens. Amendment 2 in no way compromises that (for homosexuals)."

Also, how could one prove that he/she were a homosexual — by performing some homosexual act in front of civil rights officials?

It just does not make sense to provide civil rights status based on a person's sexual behavior. — Wayne Helmer, professor, mechanical engineering and energy processes students, we will not get them," he said. "There has been a marked decrease in really talented students, and I think it is because of general education. I am not at all convinced the new proposal here is a big step up."

Armando Armander, of the school of medicine, moved to make counseling more available to students.

"Most of the brightest students often have to do a fifth year to get the education they need," he continued.

"Often times they say 'I did not have guidance.' We need more curricular guidance counseling."

Koster said he also was disturbed by cuts the proposal makes in math and science.

"I am disturbed that adolescents coming into the University are demonstrably worst in math and science in the industrial world," he said.

"We need more math and science components as the general education requirement has been cut from the current 15 hours out of 46 to nine out of 41 in the proposal. I don't find that acceptable."

Jervis Underwood, Faculty Senate president, expressed anger about recent criticisms senate member John McKilley made about the general education committee.

"I have observed the work of the committee from afar, and I have never seen a committee work harder," he said.

"Any statement which impugns the integrity of the committee is reprehensible. Comments from McKilley printed in the Daily Egyptian are a misprint. If not, the McKilley should pose the committee an apology."

Underwood referred to the March 9 issue of the Daily Egyptian, which included a letter to the editor from McKilley and quotations from him in a Faculty Senate preview article.

Press conference planned to give update on Pyramids

By Joe Littrell
Police Writer

Carbondale Police have announced plans for an afternoon press conference today to provide an update on the investigation of an arson-spawned fire that killed five SIUC students last year.

The conference, scheduled for 2:30 p.m. today in the Carbondale City Council Chambers, will be attended by investigators and city officials including City Manager Jeff Doherty, Fire Chief Cliff Manis and Police Chief Don Strom.

The Dec. 6 fire raged through The Pyramids apartments, 516 S. Rawlings St.

The fire killed Cheng Teck Wong, 23, of Malaysia; Ronald A. Moy, 23, of Chicago; Kimioko Ajioke, 25, of Japan; Lai Hung Tam, 23, of Hong Kong; and Mazlina Ab Wahid, 28, of Malaysia.

According to Carbondale police officer Kent Burns, the press conference is being held to bring the public up to speed on how the investigation into the fire has developed.

William Hall, vice president for Graduate and Professional Student Council, said he is concerned that nothing new has been released on the investigation.

"We haven't heard a thing," Hall said. "GPSC has been told by authorities that the case may never be solved."

He said the Feb. 5 death of a student at a local nightclub may have steered attention away from the fire.

"It may have reduced the pressure on the city," Hall said.

GPSC has been considering starting an arson task force to mobilize community efforts in assisting the police investigation, he said.

A task force may help bring forward new information from students who are reluctant to talk to police.

"I believe if the community marshals its resources, we can solve it," Hall said.

AIDS treatments compete for national spotlight

By Jonathan Senft
Health Writer

Efforts to educate people on the magnitude of the AIDS problem have received much attention, but perhaps more importantly, many other efforts have focused on treating and finding a cure for the disease.

To date, there is no known cure for AIDS.

On a national level, the race is on for experimental drugs to find a cure. So far, two major drugs have been approved by the FDA to help this cause, AZT (zidovudine) and DDC (zalcitabine).

In 1988, AmFAR, the American Foundation for AIDS Research, began clinical testing of potential treatments for AIDS/HIV, specifically to open up accessibility for patients of promising experimental drugs, such as AZT and DDC.

According to Amfar, in the United States the median survival for people diagnosed after 1987 and receiving AZT, is 770 days. For those not receiving AZT, the median survival is 140 days after diagnosis.

Doug Stukke from Burroughs-Wellcome Co., the manufacturer of AZT, said AZT is a drug that treats infection with the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV), the virus that causes AIDS.

The drug was officially approved by the FDA in 1991.

However, it first was produced in capsule form in 1987.

AZT is now taken intravenously.

"For HIV positive patients, AZT delays the disease's progression, but potential impact on the patients still is unknown," he said. "AZT helps to delay the decline of the immune system."

Current information suggests people who begin to take AZT early in the course of their HIV disease may benefit from therapy for several years. This suggests the earlier a patient is aware of their infection, the better.

The wholesale cost of AZT is $1.20 per 100-mg capsule. The most common dosage is 200 mg three times daily.

The Burroughs-Wellcome wholesale cost is $2,200 to $2,600 annually and is covered by most insurance companies.

Stukke said the drug's impact on survival still is unknown, but is being evaluated through studies.

AZT is not labeled for use in combination with any other anti-viral drug.

Clinical trials are being conducted to test AZT with other antiretroviral drugs, such as DDC. Last month, a student at Harvard University began testing a potential drug, with the mixture of AZT, DDC, and Nevirapine.

Results are expected in late June or July.

On July 2, 1992, DDC became officially licensed by the FDA, specifically for the use in treating HIV, the cause of AIDS.

According to DDC trial data, DDC has shown that it increases

Process for testing AIDS medicines is long, complex

Three new medicines were approved for AIDS last year, and 91 medicines are being tested.

	1988	1989	1990	1991	1992	total
■ Approved medicines	1	7	2	3	3	17
■ Medicines/vaccines in development	19	9	7	26	3	91
■ Companies developing medicines/vaccines	9	0	1	24	2	66

The drug development and approval process takes up to 12 years on average. An experimental drug has to travel from the lab to the medicine chest. Only five in 4,000 compounds screened in preclinical testing make it to human testing. One of these five tested in people is approved.

Years	preclinical testing 3.5	phase I 1	phase II 2	phase III 3	FDA 2.5
Test population	lab and animal studies	20 to 80 healthy volunteers	100 to 300 patient volunteers	1,000 to 3,000 patient volunteers	review process
Purpose	access safety, biological activity	determine safety and dosage	evaluate effectiveness, look for side effects	verify effectiveness, monitor long-term use
Percent of new drugs that pass		70	33	27	20

CD4 cells (immune cells). The drug makes the immune cells somewhat greater and more sustained in patients treated with the combination of AZT and DDC, than those who received AZT alone.

An increase in the immune cells is believed to indicate the body's disease-fighting capability has been enhanced.

As in the case of AZT, there have been no study results that have demonstrated an enhanced survival in humans.

James Mason, head of the Public Health Service said this drug is not a cure for HIV or AIDS.

"DDC constitutes an important addition to the expanding group of anti-viral drugs currently available for treating people with AIDS, including AZT," he said.

In reaction to the introduction of these new drugs for treatment the FDA has made some changes in their drug review policy.

The FDA now approves AIDS treatment drugs on a basis of surrogate endpoint, rather than a clinical endpoint, which means the drugs are approved on a trial basis.

The step is an example of the FDA's work to expedite the development of AIDS drugs, said the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

The change was made following a recommendation to the FDA this past July by the members of the Anti-viral Drug Products Advisory Committee.

Phone scam tricking users

Chicago area company pulls long distance service switch

By Mikael Pyrtel
Business Writer

Local residents should be aware of an alleged telephone scam that started in Illinois and has spread to Michigan, Arkansas, Tennessee, Florida and Louisiana, according to GTE telephone officials and the Illinois attorney general's office.

Cherry Communications, a telemarketing company in Downers Grove, is under investigation by the office of the Illinois attorney general and GTE for "questionable advertising practices and consumer fraud," according to Tony Dyhrkopp of the attorney general's office in Carbondale.

Jim Manis, public affairs manager for GTE in Marion, said consumers should be aware of alleged fraudulent practices being conducted by the company.

According to Manis, Cherry Communications sells the services of small long distance phone companies. They ask residents to change from their current long distance carriers, usually a large company such as Sprint, MCI or AT&T, to one of the company's clients.

"They call up residents claiming to be GTE representatives doing a study, and in return for personal information (such as address, date of birth, types of credit cards used and numbers) they can save 10% percent on long distance phone calls," Manis said. "They are not our agents."

Manis said questions such as dates of birth and credit card types and numbers and types are not important to GTE.

Cherry Communications gathers personal information during phone solicitations, then calls the long distance phone company by which the resident was being serviced, and switches them to a Cherry client without permission, Manis said.

Jordan Abbott, assistant attorney general for Arkansas, said investigations into allegations against Cherry Communications led them to legal action.

"The Arkansas attorney general's office has filed a lawsuit against Cherry Communications for forgery of consumer's names to request changes in long distance services," Abbott said.

According to a subpoena issued by the Arkansas attorney general's office, Cherry Communications also is facing charges of knowingly misrepresenting advertised services, switching consumer's long distance carriers without permission, and misleading consumers that their long distance service would not be changed.

Allegations of fraud continue to proliferate into southern and south eastern parts of the United States, including Louisiana and Florida.

James Elliot, owner of Cherry Communications, and Rich Heiecke, legal staff member for Cherry refused to comment.

GTE officials warn consumers not to divulge personal information to telephone solicitors.

People receiving suspicious calls should call the GTE business office at the 800 number listed in the phone directory.

Childhood obesity indicator of health problems in adults

The Washington Post

For people who are overweight during adolescence, the chances are about 80 to 85 percent that they will be obese as adults, researchers say.

During puberty, the body activates hormones that determine a person's shape, and fat cells, particularly in women, start to increase. It is also the time when the body stores more central or intra-abdominal fat.

If a person gains a lot of weight when they are close to adulthood, they have a much better chance of being obese as an adult, said William Dietz, associate professor of pediatrics at Tufts University School of Medicine.

Childhood obesity also may cause a number of health problems for adults later in life.

Men who were obese as adolescents have a greater risk of death from heart disease, stroke and colorectal cancer, whereas women have an increased risk for arthritis and difficulty walking or climbing stairs later in life.

Government workers, teenagers take more sick days than others

The Washington Post

You awaken. You feel fragile, beat-up sore. You cough piteously. You reach for a thermometer, praying that it will not read something wimpy, like 99.5—or worse, normal.

You lie in bed in a semiconscious state, wondering what will be going on at work that is so all-fired important. Will the world really end if you don't fix its hamburgers or its copying machines? Or take a meeting? Or do lunch?

Looks like you're going to have to call in sick.

Americans make that call more than 2.1 million times a month. And more do it right now than in any other season.

By region, Southerners and Westerners do it the most. In terms of age, teenagers are the most absent.

The industry that takes the most sick days is — your tax dollars at work — the government, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics. More than mining, more than construction. Almost twice as many sick days as retail trade.

And for most everyone, sooner or later, it's a judgment call.

"Certain people always get the other guy's flu," observed Lynn Wrisel, of the American Psychiatric Association. "If there's one flu case in your office, that individual will be the one down next. I don't know if it's poor health, or opportunity. But I've recognized it over the years with lots of different individuals."

"My secretary called in sick the morning after a Georgetown basketball game," said David Dickieson, a lawyer with Silverstein and Mullens. "She said if I really needed her, she could be in by 1. But I'm a nice boss, so I didn't stick it to her."

"The who call in sick are not necessarily sicker than the ones who do go to work," noted Bethesda, Md., psychiatrist Jeffrey Klein. "There are different perceptions of how sick is sick. A lot of it has to do with whether the parents held a child home, or sent him or her to school."

"The worst excuse I ever heard was a manager who called in sick after two weeks' vacation, saying he had been stung by a Portuguese man-of-war, and he'd been at a freshwater lake," said Don Knight, vice president of human resources for Geico.

"The recession has done wonders to cut down on sick days, says Michael Reidy, director of surveys for the Bureau of National Affairs Inc. There is nothing like getting up in the morning to headlines about corporate layoffs to motivate people to drag themselves to work.

And mental health days? Remember those? Apparently few people take mental health days during a recession. Mental health now involves having a paycheck.

Except, maybe, for teenagers, who take twice as many "personal" days as most people. One of their maladies used to be called the "Irish flu." But that name for a hangover is now so politically incorrect that the broader category "other" is frequently cited in the statistics.

Proposal to raise premiums may increase student fees

By Erick J.B. Enriquez
General Assignment Writer

Students will have to pay more for medical insurance if a fee proposal passes to help cover the higher costs.

The Graduate Professional Student Council will have an informational hearing Wednesday evening.

Terence Buck, director of Student Health Services, said he will explain the proposed increase in student health insurance premiums to the council.

Acordia Collegiate Benefits Inc., the insurance carrier of SIUC, is projecting an increase in claims for fiscal year 1993.

In 1990, SIUC students' claims totaled $1.8 million and doubled in 1992 to $3.6 million. This increase led to Acordia's demand for a 24 percent increase in student premiums, from $86 to $106.

"No insurance company can accept that kind of benefit increase without trying to recover the costs," Buck said.

Susan Hall, president of GPSC, said Buck's presentation will help council members understand the reasons for the increase.

The council will vote on the increase on March 24.

Attitudes about drugs, alcohol changing at SIUC

Wellness Center

A subtle change has occurred in our society in regard to alcohol and drug consumption. Recent surveys indicate that Americans are consuming less alcohol, experimenting less with illegal drugs and becoming more aware of potential health risks associated with use and abuse of alcohol and drugs than ever.

SIUC students are an example of the changing attitudes regarding alcohol use. A survey conducted recently indicates that one-third of the student body would prefer that alcohol/drugs were not available at parties and other social events.

Other surveys indicate that drug use on campus nationwide has dropped by 50 percent.

This trend of less use of alcohol and drugs among college students gives us an opportunity to have a healthy relationship with alcohol.

We can choose our own level of risk with alcohol, from high risk to low risk. No alcohol use, of course, will result in no risk of alcohol related consequences. Low-risk or moderate use of alcohol for individuals over the age of 21 who choose to drink is defined as one or two drinks an occasion and not more than three drinks an occasion.

At this time, no long-term health risks have been identified by experts if low risk use of alcohol occurs and there are no other health problems present. Short-term health risks are always possible even with one drink.

A healthy relationship with alcohol is possible if we keep in mind a few ideas:

- Alcohol is a "real" drug.
- Alcohol use impairs judgement even in low amounts (For example even one drink will adversely affect driving ability).
- Alcohol use does not diminish personal responsibility.

In order to have a good relationship we must have some

and help the children of the state.

Dixon said a desperate change was needed for the DCFS.

"Caseworkers were terribly overworked and there were so many kids and no place to put them," Dixon said. "For the lucky kids, nothing happened to them. But many of the kids needed medical care and didn't have it."

"The DCFS were not complying well, but they're doing a little better now," she said.

Dixon said this reform is an important issue for the legislation, especially after Gov. Jim Edgar's emphasis on state funding for children in his budget address.

Edgar said if the money is not given it will violate the court order and invite judges to run the child welfare system.

"Moreover, and perhaps even more importantly, we will be breaking faith with abused and neglected children—the victims of changes in our society that are monumental and catastrophic," he said.

More than 32,000 children are under care of the DCFS, and Edgar has proposed $118 million for the agency to hire 359 caseworkers, investigators and clerical staff in the fiscal year beginning July 1.

experience." The undergraduate program will be based on three foundation courses called "critical thinking and writing skills," "mediated communication" and "visual literacy."

All seniors in the program will be required to complete a senior project demonstrating their learning and competence in their field.

The proposal calls for the combination of the graduate programs in the School for Journalism and the Department of Radio and Television into a single College of Mass Communication graduate program. The department of Cinema and Photography would retain its master's of fine arts degree program.

These three academic departments offer five graduate degrees now, but after this combination three graduate degree programs would be available.

The administrative structure of the college also is addressed in the proposal.

The proposal says, "the college of communication will have a streamlined dean's office and an integrated advising process."

The dean's office will work closely with an executive committee made up of chairs and directors from each unit.

The dean's office will have a new position called the graduate studies director, coordinating the graduate program and overseeing graduate program administrative activities.

The proposal says, "the budget for the dean's office of approximately $280,000 for FY 95 (fiscal year) represents a $250,000 reduction from the FY 93 budget and a $149,000 reduction from FY 94."

The proposal says the college will give special attention to research and development by establishing a research and development committee.

The proposal also calls for an increase in teaching assistants, new faculty and new equipment.

Elliott said the Phoenix Committee will meet with Shepherd March 17 to receive his approval or disapproval of the proposal.

are worried the design department will lose its accreditation if the department moves.

"All the departments are accredited now," Briggs said. "I feel we can get accreditation just about anywhere if we wanted."

The School of Art and Design voted to move to COLA last semester in reaction to the Long-Term Planning Committee's proposal to dismantle the College of Communication and Fine Arts.

Robert Paulson, assistant director of the School of Art and Design, said although the graphic design faculty may separate from art and product design, the School of Art and Design still is moving to the College of Liberal Arts.

"I'm thoroughly convinced that going to COLA is the right move," Paulson said. "If we felt it wasn't in the best interest of faculty and students, we wouldn't have chosen to move to COLA."

Paulson said the product design faculty want to remain aligned with art because they value the experience that a production design student could obtain in the art department.

"Product design shares program and craft similarities with art," Bhattacharya said.

Paulson said the product design faculty have expressed to the Art and Design Curriculum Committee that an alignment with visual communication in the College of Technical Careers would be too technical and product-oriented.

The Art and Design Curriculum Committee is a standing committee that has been involved in the school's move from the College of Communication and Fine Arts to COLA, Paulson said.

He said the committee has been working hard to alter the program in compliance with the accreditation agency.

Paulson said many things could happen at this point. He said the design department could remain as a unit and form a new school or remain with art in COLA or the design faculty could split and move to separate schools.

Paulson said any decision must emphasize an arrangement with sound programs.

"There is a real emphasis on teaching and research in COLA and I think that's important," he said.

Paulson said Benjamin Shepherd, vice president for academic affairs and provost, told faculty he will not force a move.

"Ultimately I think all of the constituencies involved have to be given support with the program being the benefactor," he said. "Personnel is not the top priority."

Relatives try to claim cult kids

Los Angeles Times

WACO, Texas—About 20 relatives from as far away as England and Australia converged at a courthouse here Tuesday seeking custody of 21 children released from the Branch Davidian cult compound since the furious firefight there Feb. 28.

They arrived in State District Court Judge Bill Logue's sweltering courtroom wiping tears from their eyes, clutching pocket-sized Bibles and hoping to take home the children ranging in age from 5 months to 12 years.

But most were disappointed when Logue ordered that all but three of the children remain in protective custody pending studies to determine which relatives would provide the safest home for the youngsters, who were watching 10 days ago as bullets smashed their windows and cut down adults around them.

Meanwhile Tuesday, heavily armed federal agents searched a two-story house in the Los Angeles suburb of La Verne, where David Koresh, the cult's leader, once lived. They said they were looking for documents.

About 17 children still are believed to be inside the Branch Davidian sect's compound outside of Waco, which was engulfed in the 45-minute gunbattle when federal agents attempted to arrest Koresh on firearms violations.

The aborted raid left four federal agents dead and 15 wounded, two of them hurt by fragments from some sort of explosive device, authorities said. At least four cult members were also killed in the gunbattle.

RESEARCH, from page 1

"It adds stature to the University," Victoria Molfese, director of research and development, said.

The situation of just trying to hold on to Carnegie II status is a long way from 1989, when there was a push for Carnegie Status I by former SIUC Chancellor Lawrence Pettit.

"We wanted to establish some momentum and goals for the University," Pettit said. "A higher volume of grant support would bring in more money."

The difference between research I and II is the amount of research money brought in by the institution. Research I is eligible for $33.5 million in state and federal support.

To reach status I, more research grants must be applied for and received by the University.

Pettit, now the president of Indiana University in Pennsylvania, said six to eight years was a reasonable goal to reach status I.

Reaching status I still is possible to attain, said John Haller, vice chancellor for academic affairs professor.

"Three years ago, as part of a strategic plan of the University, they had designated research I as a goal," Haller said. "I think there's a good chance Carbondale could reach status I with growth research in a couple of years."

But for now, reaching status I is not so urgent for SIUC.

"We want to be the best Carnegie II university we can be," John Yopp, dean of the graduate school, said. "It is not so much a goal as it is a characterization of a university."

It is difficult to reach status I because of the size of SIUC.

"It's a nice status, but we don't have the number of faculty," Molfese said. "You have to have faculty and labs. There isn't enough room."

"At SIUC, all of the faculty that researches teaches as well," she said. "U of I has research faculty—we don't. But we are happy about having a strong teaching faculty."

from. The senators said they would need more time to determine the consensus of the students.

A second vote on the WIDB fee increase resolution is also on tonight's agenda.

The original resolution passed at the March 3 meeting was voted. The resolution has been reworded and will be put before the senators for a vote.

USG senators also have received a notice of a proposed student insurance premium fee increase.

The proposal would increase the student premium by $20, from $86 to $106 a semester.

The summer semester fee would change by $12 from $51.60 to $63.60.

USG will not vote on this item until after spring break, although it may be discussed at tonight's meeting.

Petitions are still out for the 1993-1994 student government nominees.

Joseph Hill, USG vice president, said students interested in being nominated for the upcoming student elections still can receive petitions from the USG office on the third floor of the Student Center.

Petitions are due back to the USG office by March 26.

The campaign will begin on April 5 with the elections following on April 21.

SIUC bears with jury decision

By Joe Littrell
Police Writer

A University official said the indictment of six SIUC students in the death of Jose Waight is not expected to have a negative impact on SIUC's image.

Jack Dyer, executive director of University relations, said he does not perceive any negative publicity coming out of the incident, and SIUC is not making any public relations moves.

"This is a Carbondale issue, not a University issue," Dyer said.

Jackson County State's Attorney Chuck Grace announced Monday a grand jury had handed down indictments against six present or former SIUC students — Steven Crawford, 21, senior in construction technology; Charles Hicks, 22, senior in business; Jeffrey Judd, 23, senior in civil engineering; Martin Todd Lewis, 24, senior in political science; and Richard Wojcik, 23, junior in administration of justice.

Edmund Bart, 22, had enrolled for the spring semester as a senior in psychology, but withdrew four days after the confrontation that led to Waight's death.

The indictments charge each man with two counts of involuntary manslaughter, one count of aggravated battery, one count of battery, and one count of reckless conduct.

The six men are scheduled to appear at the Jackson County Courthouse at 1 p.m. today to hear the indictments against them and to have bond set.

Waight, a 24-year-old freshman from South Holland, died of asphyxiation following a confrontation at Checkers nightclub, 706 E. Grand Ave.

Student activist Willie Chatman said he is glad the process had gone forward and hoped it would bring healing to the community.

"It's up to the people now to determine these guys' guilt or innocence," he said.

According to Chatman, he and other concerned students should try not to distract the legal process but to scrutinize the process so that the administration of justice would be handled fairly and equitably.

Chatman is concerned that students still are taking their business to Checkers.

"Students should be respectful enough not to patronize that establishment," he said.

Asylum displays soul at Shryock

By Andy Graham
Entertainment Writer

Despite two lame opening bands, Soul Asylum was able to rain heavy doses of rugged rock-n-roll fury on an auditorium full of screaming fans Monday night at Shryock.

The show opened with an unexpected performance by a mellow Vic Chestnut and his band. Chestnut's songs vaguely echoed the sounds of the Cowboy Junkies and Paul Simon.

Consisting of an acoustic guitar, a three-piece drum kit and a whispering bass, Vic Chestnut should not have opened for Soul Asylum, though other contexts may have suited them better.

The next band, the extremely overrated Goo-Goo Dolls, were nothing but a glam rock flashback from the mid-80's.

The music was mediocre, but its stage show was revolting: three bouncy, barefoot guys from New York in surfer garb.

"We Are The Normal," off of its most recent album "SuperstarCarWash" was the Goo-Goo Dolls' best attempt of the evening.

When Soul Asylum finally took the stage with beer bottles in hand, the evening got better fast.

Soul Asylum played a myriad of songs that represent its 12 years and seven albums. However, a majority of the songs performed were from Soul Asylum's most recent album, "Grave Diggers Union." These songs included

David Pirner and Daniel Murphy of Soul Asylum play Monday.

"99%," "New World" and the overplayed, mediocre "Somebody To Shove."

"Sometime To Return," off of Soul Asylum's "Hang Time" album provided some good listening for fans who know that Soul Asylum's golden age transcended "Grave Diggers Union." "Sometime To Return" was one of the greatest songs of the evening.

"April Fool," a song off "Grave Dancers Union" was the sweetest song of the show. Soul Asylum grew into an abusive metal tornado of noise for this tune.

Singer/guitarist David Pirner sang in a different style on this song that might have just been a product of the soundboard, but it sounded good.

The set ended with guitarists Pirner and Daniel Murphy molesting and manipulating their instruments into warning sirens of seemingly endless feedback and distortion infected death calls.

An encore fired up after a brief intermission. The second set consisted of covers by the Descendents, 10,000 Maniacs and half of an Allman Brothers song.

The Descendents' "Myage" was an unexpected cover for Soul Asylum to do, but it was the right thing to do. Soul Asylum recruited its soundman to play guitar on this melodic punk song. Soul Asylum put on an excellent show Monday night at Shryock. The band gave it all, showing they care about its music. The lighting and sound was brilliant and blaring which only added to the near perfect show.

Doonesbury

by Gary Trudeau

MR. BRENSKI!! GREAT TO CLAP EYES ON YOU, GUY!

SAME BACK ATCHA, BUTT'S-BOY! BEEN TOO LONG!

HERE TO FIGHT THE SIN TAXES?

ON IT! I'VE BOOKED SERIOUS FACE-TIME WITH SENATOR SO-AND- SO THIS VERY MORNING!

YOU'RE A GOOD MAN, O FROSTY ONE!

HEY, WE'RE ALL IN THIS TOGETHER, AREN'T WE? WE'RE TRYING TO SAVE A WAY OF LIFE HERE.

HEY, KILLER!

SPEAKING OF WHICH...

MR. DUM-DUM! BRADY BILL UP AGAIN?

SINGLE SLICES

by Petr Kohlsaat

Actually, the bridal registry is at Black & Decker... it was part of the deal.

Shoe

by Jeff MacNelly

I WAS THINKING ABOUT TAKING THE REST OF THE DAY OFF AND DROWNING A FEW WORMS DOWN BY THE CREEK...

YOU'D RATHER FISH THAN WORK?

NO WAY! FORGET IT... AND SINCE YOU WON'T BE USING YOUR ROD, MAY I?

Calvin and Hobbes

by Bill Watterson

LOOK, HOBBS. THERE'S A QUIZ IN MY NEW ISSUE OF CHEWING MAGAZINE. "DOES YOUR GUM DELIVER? 10 QUESTIONS SHOW WHAT YOU COULD BE MISSING!"

LET'S SEE HOW MY GUM DOES. "I. HOW HARD IS YOUR GUM AT THE BEGINNING? A) ROCK-LIKE OR BRITTLE B) PLEASANTLY FIRM C) SQUISHY OR BENDY"

HMM... MY GUM IS PRETTY HARD AT FIRST. I'LL MARK "A".

GOSH, I'VE GOT NEGATIVE FIVE POINTS ALREADY! I'M NOT GETTING ALL THE PERFORMANCE I'M ENTITLED TO!

I WONDER WHAT PEOPLE KNEW BEFORE THERE WERE MAGAZINE QUIZZES.

Mother Goose and Grimm

Hoyas' Harrington has every reason to smile

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—There, under the basket, as he is bumped and shoved and elbowed and jostled, Othella Harrington breaks into a smile. He smiles when the referee makes a bad call. He smiles when his opponents talk trash. He smiles at his own rookie mistakes.

Harrington even smiles during practice. The truth is, Harrington loves to play basketball. He loves to compete. He loves the grit of the game, and that may be a lifesaver for a celebrated Georgetown freshman whose team has just concluded its worst Big East regular season in years.

"This season never got frustrating because I knew we were doing the things to win, but for some reason it just wasn't happening at the time," Harrington said. "I don't think we'll ever get accustomed to losing at Georgetown."

There is no question that "O," as his teammates call him, has emerged rather well from Georgetown's disappointing season. A 6-foot-10, 236-pound mass of power and promise, Harrington was the top recruit this year and ended the regular season as the Hoyas' leading scorer (17 points a game) and top rebounder (9 rebounds a game).

"I've been impressed that even with the crises we've gone through, he has maintained his poise," Hoyas Coach John Thompson said. "He is definitely a confident person."

This week, in keeping with the preseason hype and expectations,

Harrington was named Big East rookie of the year.

"There is one word to describe him: awesome," said Miami Coach Leonard Hamilton. "He is going to be one of the dominant big men in our league."

Not that the season has been a bed of roses for the high-school all-America from Jackson, Miss. In the past few weeks, Harrington has struggled against collapsing zone defenses and has faltered in his offensive production. At the same time, Georgetown (15-11, 8-10 Big East) has lost eight of its past 11 games. The Hoyas are seeded eighth in the Big East championships and will face Miami in the opening round on Thursday in New York. Hopes of an NCAA tournament bid are slim. In the battle, Harrington, however eager and optimistic, has shown a few signs of wear and tear.

"He is undoubtedly the best freshman in the league but he has slacked off recently," Pittsburgh Coach Paul Evans said. "He started off very well and then he slowed down a little bit in the last two or three weeks."

Still, it would be unfair to expect Harrington, in his first season, to fill the massive shoes of Alonzo Mourning, now a rookie with the Charlotte Hornets. By his own admission, he is still finding his way and his rhythm in the college game.

"I didn't expect as much double-teaming and triple-teaming," Harrington said. "The most surprising thing to me is just how much bigger and stronger these guys are at this level. In high-school, I wasn't faced with guys as tall and as strong as I am. But now, every night, I'm looking at someone my height or even taller." Perhaps fittingly, his mother named him after Othello, the Shakespearean character who, until beset by tragedy, exuded confidence and might in the face of adversity.

"He's been playing with the strongest and most physical guys in the country," said Hamilton. "He's been playing a lot of minutes and that's a tremendous burden on a youngster. The stamina and strength he has to battle inside as a freshman and the numbers he has put up night after night tell you a lot about him."

His greatest skill is rebounding; but he also has a soft touch inside and an acute sense of timing.

Soul of Jays has flown the coop

The Baltimore Sun

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—A baseball season without a defending World Series champion?

Weird idea, huh? Very weird. Vaguely resembles one of those cockamamie propositions the owners have trumped up to get more money out of the TV networks. Wild-card playoffs. Interleague games. No defending champ. "Twilight Zone" stuff.

But it's really happening this season. Just ask Paul Molitor.

"I signed with the defending champs," he was saying Monday in the Toronto Blue Jays' clubhouse at Al Lang Stadium, "but this isn't really the team that won. It's significantly different."

Score another bizarre point for baseball's big-money madness. The Blue Jays won the Series last October, but a different team will defend their title this year.

Should we call them the Red Jays? The Hosers? The Colts? "We're gonna be a little bit different than what people are used to seeing in the Blue Jay uniforms," Manager Cito Gaston said, "but we'll still be called the Blue Jays."

No way. Not with Ed Sprague playing third base, Derek Bell in left field and someone named Eddie Zosky at shortstop. Those aren't the Blue Jays.

Not with Molitor, a lifetime Milwaukee Brewer, at designated hitter. Not with Dave Stewart, the soul of the Oakland A's, in the rotation. Those are certainly not the Blue Jays.

Not without Kelly Gruber and Manuel Lee and Candy Maldonado and Tom Henke and Dave Winfield and Jimmy Key and David Stieb and David Cone, all prominent or longtime Jays who left last winter. It can't be the Jays without them, can it?

"It will be. It will be," Gaston said soothingly. "It's just baseball, especially the way it is with the money today. Players move on. The game moves on. People move on and forget the way things were."

The way things were last year, the Jays had power, defense, a deep rotation and flawless bullpen. Burdened by the club's history of folding when it mattered most, they delivered elegantly.

"I'm not sure people realized how good we were until afterward, when players started leaving," Gaston said. "We had a very nice club with a lot of talent. That's why we won the World Series."

Had the Jays chosen to reassemble the group, their payroll would have exceeded $50 million this year. You just can't sell enough tickets to pay that tab.

But Jays general manager Pat Gillick didn't want the club back intact anyway. He didn't bask in the Series victory so much as start scheming to win another. It's his job, of course. And he was worried about complacency.

"I think he saw from the example of some other clubs that you can't go with the same group and hope to be successful," Molitor said. "You could see he was very concerned about the danger of complacency setting in. He wanted an atmosphere in which players would still be hungry."

Whether he succeeded is one of the issues on which the season will turn. Youngsters such as Sprague and Bell are hungry to prove they're everyday major-leaguers. Molitor is hungry to win a Series. Yet Jays insiders have noted the absence this spring of a purposefulness that existed before winning the Series. One player told a reporter: "They're certainly not working us very hard."

In any case, having established that these Jays won't measure up to last year's—"You can't argue with the opinion," Gaston said—the question becomes, of course, how good will they be?

Baker recovers from Dodger fall to manage San Francisco Giants

Los Angeles Times

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz.—It is difficult to say where it came from, how it developed.

All Dusty Baker really knows as he looks back is that "the innuendoes made me feel as guilty as a guy who got busted. I hit 260 and suddenly people are saying I'm on drugs."

Who those people were isn't clear, but the innuendoes drifted like storm clouds across the reputation of one of the Los Angeles Dodgers' most respected leaders and players, contributing to a bitter departure after eight wonderful seasons in Los Angeles.

"Transitions are always difficult, but what happened to Dusty was a complete injustice," former Dodger Steve Garvey said. "I mean, there was nothing to it, but an innuendo can be as vicious as an accusation because it's more ambiguous."

Baker would weather that difficult time as he weathered others, accepting the advice of his sister Tonya, a missionary in Latin America for 12 years, against "letting his heart harden."

"It can either eat you up, or you can get on with your life," Baker said. "It hurt then. It doesn't anymore."

Johnnie B. Baker Jr. has too much going for him to continue to live in 1983.

Ten years after he left the Dodgers, Baker is embarking on what he and others believe will be a wonderful new chapter as manager of the San Francisco Giants.

Seldom has a selection—Baker, after five years as a Giant coach, is succeeding Roger Craig—been more applauded by players, fans and media representatives.

"Dusty the Right Man to Start Giants' New Era," read one Bay Area headline, referring to the rebirth that began when major league owners vetoed a move to Florida and the Giants remained in San Francisco with new owners, new resources and a new commitment.

"It's like getting a Vitamin B shot," Baker said.

Season-ticket sales are up more than $2 million over last year, so the $43 million-plus investment in Barry Bonds seems to be returning an early dividend.

There is even a belief that some may be paying to see the manager, though it is more likely they simply believe in the manager, whose experience in the job consists of 53 games with the Scottsdale Scorpions of the Arizona Fall League.

Said Larry Baer, the Giants' executive vice president: "I think our selection of Dusty is analogous to John Lucas (the new coach of the San Antonio Spurs). Lucas had never coached, but there were two things everyone knew about him. He related well to people and related well to his peers."

"Dusty is a motivator who has the respect and confidence of the players. He's not that far removed from his own playing career, but he's respected because of his integrity, not because he's a buddy. We're confident he'll be able to keep his distance and be able to discipline, if necessary."

Baer also cited Baker's understanding of what the new owners can and can't do, his ability to deal with the media and fans, his consistent involvement in the community and his respect for the Giants' history and tradition.

"Dusty provides us with the absolute perfect image," Baer said. "I'm sure some people may believe he's not ready to manage on a technical level, that we should have played it safe by recycling someone, but we viewed that as an excuse to hold him back unfairly."

Baker is the sixth minor-league manager currently in the major-
