Faculty salary allocations survive paring unscathed

JAY SCHWAB
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Illinois higher education funding in FY 2000 will be on the rise, but following the Illinois Board of Higher Education's recent re-allocation process SIUC is unlikely to capitalize on the increase at as favorable a rate as many of its rival schools.

The IBHE submitted its revised recommendations to the General Assembly late last week.

Allan Kames, director of the School of Accountancy and SIUC representative to the Faculty Advisory Committee of the IBHE, said he is disappointed with the results of the re-allocation.

"I don't think we did a very good job," Kames said. "This budget was one of the best ones to come out of Springfield in a long time, and I don't think we can be cheery about what happened."

"There is big disappointment on this campus."

The IBHE's latest recommendation, subject to final approval by the assembly, targets about $220 million for SIUC, with just less than $154 million slated for SIUC.

However, the original IBHE recommendation called for more than $223.5 million in funding for the University.

About 27 percent of the increase SIUC was to receive in FY 2000 was slashed during the re-allocation process — the largest percentage of any state school.

By comparison, only about 20 percent of Eastern Illinois University's added funds were negated by the re-allocation.

In FY 1999, SIUC received about $210 million, with about $147 million of that amount appropriated to

Senate rejects analysis, votes to postpone service center

SARA BEAN
POLITICS EDITOR

The SIUC Faculty Senate is not satisfied with the findings of a recent economic impact analysis by consulting firm Arthur Andersen and believes action on Andersen recommendations should be postponed until the University's Oracle computer system is in place.

The senate passed a resolution Tuesday, urging the SIUC Board of Trustees not to approve any additional Andersen studies or implement any Andersen recommendations from a shared service center study until the Oracle system is operational.

The resolution also admonishes the board to receive recommendations from SIUC President Ted Sanders only after a regional economic impact analysis be performed independently by a qualified University task force.

Andersen recommended, in a study released in December, that the University centralize management of the purchasing and disbursements functions of the three SIUC campuses under one management.

This delay in action would allow the University to realize the cost savings from Oracle, senate Budget Committee Chairman Edwin Hippo said.

The Oracle computer system was designed to streamline administrative task and alleviate the paperwork burden of SIUC financial offices. The system, predicted to be up and running in June, also would make financial, payroll and human resources administrative tasks more efficient.

Andersen consultant Peter Eschenbach, who met with senate members at the meeting to answer questions, said he thought there was some confusion about the studies.

"One thing I think is happening consistently is the confusion of the preferred vendor study and the shared service center study," Eschenbach said.

Prior applicant named as new police chief

REPEAT: First overlooked for the position nearly a decade ago, Quincy chief is now ready to lead department.

DAVID FERRARA
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Though Robert "R.T." Finney first applied for the Carbondale police chief position in 1990, he now admits freely he was not ready then to lead the department.

Don Strom was hired instead, and he led the department for nearly seven years.

But Finney, who said he thought he might have lacked experience during his first application, did not give up. During the seven years Strom was police chief in Carbondale, Finney batted his way through the ranks at the Quincy Police Department and was promoted to lieutenant in 1995 and later to deputy police chief.

Strom resigned from his position in November 1988, and Finney reapplied because he has family in the area and said he enjoys the environment.

"I certainly wasn't qualified for it (the first time), but throughout those nine years I have done a lot of things to improve," he said.

His hard work paid off — literally. Finney, 38, will take the helm of the Carbondale Police Department April 5, and his new salary, $64,000, is nearly $800 more than what Strom earned.

Lt. John Sysma has served as the acting chief since July 1, when Strom announced his bid for state representative. Strom left the

Elton John brings his piano to Carbondale

MATT SMIENOS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Black and silver spacesuits shimmered in the lights of a thousand photography flashes during Elton John's last SIUC appearance on Oct. 3, 1980.

Fans, young and old, are now preparing for the return of the rock legend.

"He has been one of my favorites since I can remember. I grew up listening to Elton John," said Matt Lowrey, a senior in history from Marissa.

According to Lowrey, Elton John has been part of his music collection since his parents introduced him to Elton John's "Benny and the Jets."

Ever since 1969 when Reginald Dwight, better known as Elton John, brought his piano skills to the stage he has been an international star with many fans in England, Africa and the United States.

"His songs remind me of many years during my childhood," said Tim Buelow, a senior in creative writing from Arlington Heights.

Elton John has had a song in the top 40 every year since 1970. Many fans remember his songs such as, "I Guess That's Why They Call It The Blues," "Candle in the Wind," "Can you Feel the Love Tonight?" and his recently revised version of "Candle in the Wind," rewritten in the memory of Princess Diana.

"Elton John defines a genre for male vocalists," Buelow said.

"He writes songs that follow the times and evolve with society. I really love hearing that he is coming out with something new."

According to Buelow, he and several of his friends have been Elton John fans since they were kids. They all collect his albums Buelow said, "without even knowing it."

"His music flares up and fades out at different times. He may not always be the No. 1 star, but he's always there on the fringes waiting for his next hit," Buelow said.

In his last appearance, Elton's performance at SIUC was described as "scorching." The SIUC Arena was filled almost to capacity.

"I remember that show vividly — it was an incredible show, the first and only show I saw while at SIUC," said Nancy Tirado, an '82 SIUC alumna in education. "I've been an Elton John fan my entire life. I love his music, and so does my husband. I wish I could see him again."

The SIUC ticket office, having sold out all of the first-run tickets, has released a second set. With ticket sales continuing, the Arena may see another near-capacity show Wednesday.

Genting tickets is a major effort for some die-hard fans.

According to Tirado, the tickets were as difficult to get for his SIUC show in 1980, illustrating Elton John's immortal stardom in classic rock.

"I have waited in line for hours for Elton John tickets," Lowrey said. "I'm disappointed that I can't go this year. I'd like to see another show."

Mayoral candidate joins petitioning greeks in fight against Select 2000

DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Campus greeks opposing Select 2000 have gained support for their cause from an unlikely source — mayoral candidate John Budzlick.

Budzlick, a Carbondale City Council member, submitted a letter to the DAILY EGYPTIAN Monday detailing the reasons for his opposition. He characterized the Select 2000 program as bureaucratic and poorly implemented.

"It [Select 2000] isn't working," Budzlick said. "Any time you start a program, there has to be input from the people involved."

Gus Bodo

Gus says: Apparently it's time to mobilize the student alcohol vote again.

Unlike some other universities that piloted the Select 2000 program, SIUC greeks never were asked their opinion on the issue.

Select 2000 is a nine-part initiative designed by the National Interfraternity Conference.

Directives include alcohol-free houses, participation in University events and community service.

Greeks recently circulated a petition — signed by 71 percent of greek members — opposing the Select 2000 program and calling for administrative review. Greek leaders also met with SIUC Chancellor Jo Ann Argersinger last Friday to voice their concerns.

Budzlick said increasing communication and opening dialogue with students is the only way to improve current conditions.

"By getting involved with students and working with them, we have fewer problems," Budzlick said. Budzlick said he sees "earned trust and personal contact with the students" as the solution to strained relations between the greeks and University administrators.

He favors scrapping Select 2000 and replacing it with a "student-based effort" to improve the greek system.

Budzlick says the University is overextending its authority by regulating the legal activities of students (and Carbondale residents) who are fraternity or sorority members. He said although substance abuse is a serious issue, he objects to the current system, which singles out greek organizations for scrutiny and regulation.

"The University cannot dictate how a person will live off campus," he said.

"[Select 2000] was a good concept, it was just programmed wrong."

Inter-Greek Council President Tony Blood said support like Budzlick's is instrumental in being heard by the administration.

"I sense that he sees a large percentage of students who are unhappy and is willing to help us out," Blood said. Blood said Budzlick's stance will be self-rewarding.

While student support for Budzlick already would be high, Blood said, this issue probably would increase turnout of both greek and non-greek students. Budzlick said garnering more votes is not his ultimate goal. Rather, this is an issue he believes in and supports.

Budzlick is widely regarded as a student-friendly candidate. His election to the city council two years ago was partially because of a high student turnout, and he has supported student concerns in the past.

Mayor Neil Dillard declined to take a stance on the issue and said the Select 2000 referendum that is on the Undergraduate Student Government ballots in April is the best way to resolve the matter.

MEETING

The SIUC President Ted Sanders will ask the SIUC Board of Trustees to approve the new position of executive vice president at the meeting Thursday even though the search for someone to fill the position will be postponed until the end of the state's legislative session.

Sanders said postponement of the search will allow the University the opportunity to assess its budget after the legislative session. He said the postponement is not the result of any controversy surrounding the position.

"Whether the position is needed or not, I don't think that is a question," Sanders said. "We need to see now we look at the end of the legislative session."

"The search is on hold at this point."

Sanders said his office likely will re-initiate the search in June or July.

The new position, created to oversee the day-to-day operations of the President's office, has drawn the ire of the SIUC Faculty Association and the Faculty Senate, both of which believe the system's administration has grown at an alarming rate in the last few years.

Faculty Association President Kay Carr read an official statement from the association at the Feb. 11 board meeting. The Faculty Senate made subsequent inquiries into the budget and responsibilities of the President's office.

The executive vice president will allow Sanders more time outside the office to work with the legislature in Springfield and the federal government in Washington, D.C.

The board members discussed the new position at the board meeting on Feb. 11, at which time they expressed their support for the idea.

The position, created by collapsing two positions into one, includes the responsibilities of executive assistant to the president, currently occupied by Nelson Ashline, and vice president for University Services and Board treasurer, occupied by Don Wilson.

Ashline is working part-time and plans to retire July 1. Wilson is being re-appointed as vice president for Risk Care and Management and will oversee the insurance company maintained by the University.

Pedestrian bridge aimed at easing traffic along Lincoln

SARA BEAN
POLITICS EDITOR

Traffic congestion and pedestrian safety concerns are serving as the impetus for a $1.5-million construction project of a pedestrian bridge across Lincoln Drive between the Neckers and Engineering buildings that the SIUC Board of Trustees will vote on Thursday.

SIUC President Ted Sanders said the board will likely approve the $1.5-million project at the meeting Thursday in Edwardsville. Following approval, the University will study the feasibility of the project and begin selection of an engineering firm.

The University estimates the feasibility study will cost $75,000 of the total project amount. The funding for the feasibility study already has been identified in the University's budget and will come partially from non-appropriated Traffic and Parking funds and state-appropriated funds from the Academic Affairs budget.

Traffic and Parking funds will equal $25,000, and the Academic Affairs budget will contribute $50,000. Funding for the design and construction will come from a combination of federal and state matching grants, as well as state-appropriated and non-appropriated University funds.

The crosswalk has been a concern of the University, and some research already has been conducted on the site.

A manual traffic count at the crosswalk conducted by the University in May 1998 indicated a 300-pedestrian and 700-vehicle-per-hour average with a peak traffic volume of about 250 pedestrians and 350 vehicles during the 10-minute recess period between classes.

Sanders said the project is important not only for its functional value but also its research value.

"This is important applied research, not just another construction project," Sanders said.

The 500-foot-long structure would be the first of its kind

Salukis dogged by NIT shutout

The SIUC men's basketball team believes it should be playing in the National Invitation Tournament this week, and the DAILY EGYPTIAN agrees with that belief. But this team should be remembered for its accomplishments, not its season-ending disappointment.

In his first year at the helm, coach Bruce Weber turned around an ailing program and guided the Salukis to their best season since 1994-95. In the process, Weber and his team made SIUC fans believers again and packed the SIU Arena, giving a glimpse of the glory days of the mid-1990s.

The Salukis became by the end of the year one of the best teams in a strong Missouri Valley Conference — a league that put three teams into the NCAA Tournament Sunday. Their pressure defense caused even league-leading University of Evansville trouble, and clutch play from senior Monte Jenkins earned him league Defensive Player of the Year and first-team all-conference honors.

Three losses in their last four games ended the Salukis' chances of playing in the NIT. But even that late-season struggle should not have been the deciding factor in SIUC missing the "little dance."

Using even the most in-depth rating systems, SIUC should be getting ready for first-round play Wednesday. The Salukis ranked ahead of a surprising 10 teams that made the NIT in the ratings percentage index (RPI), widely regarded as one of the most valuable sources of data available for college basketball rankings.

But the EGYPTIAN realizes league and school recognition make the biggest difference in the NIT selection. Schools such as Georgetown, Providence and Colorado come from big-name conferences and draw big crowds to home games, while SIUC comes from the less-respected MVC and struggled to draw decent crowds until late in the year. For the NIT, those schools mean money, and money means success.

The Salukis have to put this disappointment behind them and begin gearing up for next season. Sure, a couple of breaks here and there and SIUC would be in the NIT. Yes, an NIT berth would have made a successful season sweeter. But the Salukis know they have a lot to work on between now and October if they want to compete for an MVC title next year.

The EGYPTIAN wants to salute Coach Weber and his staff and players for an exciting run, a run that has not been rivaled in five years. The electricity in the student body and the community in support of the team is a powerful reminder that the school only can benefit from successful athletic programs.

The challenge for next year's Saluki squad is to build on this year's baby steps and take the leap into NCAA Tournament play. The bittersweet taste at the end of this year easily can be replaced with the delicious morsel of victory next season with a little extra effort and another year of experience for Weber's staff and players.

Pick up attempts at local bars are a woeful letdown

There are many "funny" bars in Carbondale. Funny in the sense that their style of entertainment and frolic is lost to me and I can't help but laugh. And even funnier are the styles in which people try to pick each other up.

The last time I was "picked up," in all senses of the word, was when a few friends and I decided to test the waters at Six Bar & Billiards, a place for which words really wouldn't do it justice. And then of course there's Gatsby's, a place where there is so much pumping and humping going on that I suddenly understand the essence of "Wild Kingdom" with utmost clarity. Either that or what it feels like to be a female dog. I actually thought I was going to have to shake a few guys off my leg a couple of times. It's funny. Both places however are not as funny as Coo Coo's, though — where my sister was once asked if she was in town for pheasant season. ("No, coon season actually").

But it's Carbondale right? We expect this and are happy that there are at least two or three bars where tube tops and Z Cavaricci's aren't in style still. So when I went home this past weekend I did not expect to find this same funniness in random local bars. The suburbs should know better, I imagined. But then I went to Sideout's — a place in a nearby town that is half bowling alley, half bar and previously run by one of the areas most diligent mob bosses.

The night I arrived there was a band playing described as "shock rock." And when they finally started playing the only shock I felt was that someone at the bar had decided they were good enough to be let on stage. Not only could they not make it through a complete song (all covers, of course), but they would periodically yell into the audience "Hey Steve!", to which a much enthused crowd would yell back "F---k You!" Humor of which was completely lost to me. The night went something like this ...

10 p.m. — My best friend Andrea picks me up and is already so drunk that she falls into the shrubbery that lines my sidewalk. Once in the car, she still cannot harness her balance enough to stay in it as both myself and another in the back seat have to pull her back in. Needless to say, once we got to Sideout's she was of no help against the onslaught of rabid male locals, losers and lechers.

10:30 p.m. — The first attempt. A nice enough guy. A brother of someone or other that somebody knows. First thing out of his mouth: "Yeah, so I was in the Navy. Did you go to high school here?"

(He graduated in 1984).

Second topic of conversation: "So I studied electronics in the Navy. Now I sell miniature light bulbs for a living. You know all the little lit-up signs on airplanes? I sell the light bulbs for them. You know, aviation stuff."

11:30 p.m. — I am somehow passed on to his brother, who supplies drugs to Andrea and the next three towns. He's decently nice. A little edgy: (Coke maybe?) First thing out of his mouth as he buys me my third screwdriver: "I just crashed my Mustang last week."

Second topic: "I was drunk when I crashed my Mustang last week."

Ends with: "I live on a farm that came with a goat."

Midnight — Fifth screwdriver bought by Andrea. I am once again immersed in a conversation with the first brother. This time the topic is music: "So what kind of music do you listen to? I'm really into the Alternative Beat nowadays."

Fifteen minutes later he's telling me to check out Stone Temple Pilots next time they come to Chicago. "I also saw Pearl Jam a couple of years ago. Man, talk about a stage presence."

12:20 a.m. — Andrea falls off her bar stool.

12:31 a.m. — "Hey Steve!" "F---k You!"

12:35 a.m. — We leave to return to the welcome placidness that is our parents' suburban homes.

12:45 a.m. — We are sidetracked and end up at a bar that is the familiar cross between PK's and a trashy wedding reception.

Mayoral candidate criticizes Select 2000

Dear Editor,
I support the SIUC Greeks' opposition to the Select 2000 program. I believe it was poorly developed and implemented and an example where an imposed bureaucratic "solution" lacks any perception of student attitudes and behavior.

Select 2000 prohibits "annex houses." This means there are restrictions on the off-campus behavior of students who are members of a fraternity or sorority, restrictions that do not apply to non-greeks. If Greeks had endorsed this restriction, that would have been one thing. They did not and do not. The University is overextending its authority, interfering with the legal behavior of city residents and alienating the student body to boot.

More importantly, this program is an example of how NIT to positively affect student behavior. Creditability and engaging students is how to best minimize problems, as evidenced in the last two Halloween "non-riots." I worked with students and community leaders to ensure that Halloween became more peaceful. That was not accomplished by the Presidential-Mayoral Task Force in particular, or other bureaucratic programs, but through earned trust and personal contact with the students. Select 2000, on the other hand, is a prime example of a poorly-focused, bureaucratic public-relations attempt rather than an example of understanding, purposeful engagement, or effective leadership.

Are the goals of Select 2000 admirable? Of course. Substance abuse is a serious problem that colleges and universities have a responsibility to address. But Select 2000 will not work. If we want a more responsible and respectful student body, we must change the way we deal with our citizen-students, both on- and off-campus. Ending Select 2000 and starting over with a student-based effort to discuss Greek issues and means to improvement, would be a move in the right direction resulting in a more enlightened culture, more satisfied students, higher enrollment and a healthier Carbondale.

Institutes dispute wasteful-funding claim

PORK-BARREL:

Watchdog group says government money is misappropriated.

Jay Schwab
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A Washington, D.C.-based organization's claim that federal funding received by the SIU Public Policy Institute and others of its kind exemplifies government waste is misleading, according to local and national institute officials.

The institute, which was founded by former Sen. Paul Simon in 1997, seeks to probe and ultimately develop solutions to weighty policy matters in a non-partisan fashion.

On March 3, Citizens Against Government Waste labeled the institute's receipt of $1 million in this year's federal budget one of the government's most blatant examples of "pork-barrel" spending.

CAGW is a 600,000-member nonprofit group intent upon educating Americans regarding the "waste, mismanagement and inefficiency in the federal governments."

CAGW spokesman Aaron Taylor makes no apologies for the organization's criticism of the funding.

"[CAGW] supports higher education, but many of these institutes are receiving misappropriated funds that unnecessarily indulge the egos of public officials," Taylor said.

Simon could not be reached for comment. However, Associate Director of the Public Policy Institute Mike Lawrence took issue with CAGW's assertions.

"I really doubt that this group is familiar with what we are doing," Lawrence said.

Lawrence pointed out the institute was instrumental in orchestrating statewide campaign finance reform and has been active in addressing a wide variety of other relevant social issues.

For example, former first lady Barbara Bush is scheduled to speak at a literacy conference engineered by the institute at SIUC March 26 and 27.

Taylor said that while institutes such as the ones honoring Simon, former Sen. Bob Dole and former Oregon Sen. Mark Hatfield may be worthwhile endeavors; they should receive funding through normal state budgeting procedures rather than looking to Congress for financial help.

"There has been an increasing [negative] trend in Congress to earmark and divert funds to specific institutions," Taylor said.

The institutes obtained federal funding by being attached to an omnibus $600-billion budget package.

Lawrence said CAGW is seemingly upset that Congress failed to "dot every 'i' and cross every 't'" and disagrees with the CAGW's "pork barrel" description.

"There has been a long history of money being used for research on university campuses," he said.

"The money will be used to help us reach our $10 million endowment goal and will benefit SIU students and faculty for generations."

The institute hopes to generate the majority of its money from private donations, and Matt Baughman was hired recently as a permanent fund-raiser to help reach the $10-million plateau.

CAGW also referenced the institute named in the honor of former Sen. Bob Dole at the University of Kansas in its annual "Pig Book" that notes wasteful government spending.

Burdett Loomis directs the Robert J. Dole Institute for Public Service and Public Policy in Kansas. Loomis said although he expects some negative publicity

Greeks sponsoring dinner to raise money toward scholarship

PROGRESSIVE: Award

to be given to deserving member at the next

Theta Xi Variety Show.

KAREN BLATTER
ACADEMIC AFFAIRS EDITOR

Diners will travel from greek house to greek house tonight for a benefit progressive dinner.

Inter-Greek Council is sponsoring its first progressive dinner at 5 p.m. on Greek Row to raise money for the Betty Lou Mitchell Scholarship.

Tickets for the dinner are $5 each and are available from any chapter or before the dinner at the Delta Zeta house or the Alpha Gamma Rho house. The event is open to anyone who wants to attend.

Liza Hudgens, vice president of Inter-Greek council, said members of the Inter-Greek Council hopes to sell more than 400 tickets.

Hudgens said it is important to have a greek scholarship and honor all the hard work of Betty Lou Mitchell.

"Inter-Greek Council wanted to have more opportunities for people in the greek system to have more scholarships," she said. "It is also a very good way to honor this woman and show her appreciation."

Each house on Greek Row will have a different course to serve. Those participating in the dinner will go from house to house and eat from each course.

The dinner will start at either the Delta Zeta house, which will have soup, or the Alpha Gamma Rho house, which will serve salad.

From there, diners will proceed to have the main course at either the Sigma Sigma Sigma house, Alpha Gamma Delta house or the Sigma Kappa house. The main course is pasta with the choice of red or white sauce.

For dessert, everyone will go to the Alpha Tau Omega house.

Hudgens said the event also provides an opportunity for greek members to get together and experience something different from traditional greek events.

"We talked about different ways to include the entire greek system," she said. "This gave us another event we could all participate in and raise money at the same time."

The Betty Lou Mitchell Scholarship, sponsored by Alpha Gamma Delta and Inter-Greek Council, will be given to a SIUC greek member at the next annual Theta Xi Variety Show. The recipient must demonstrate academic excellence and leadership in the greek community.

Mitchell has been an active member of the local chapter of Alpha Gamma Delta Sorority since 1957. She is also an SIUC alumna and was a professor in English.

She has been an active face in the greek community as a member and as an adviser and has influenced many lives.

Manya Paunovic, a member of Alpha Gamma Delta, said Mitchell has stayed very close to the chapter and continues to dedicate her time to the members of the sorority.

Paunovic said she has had a lot of experience working with Mitchell as an adviser and a sister and greatly admires her.

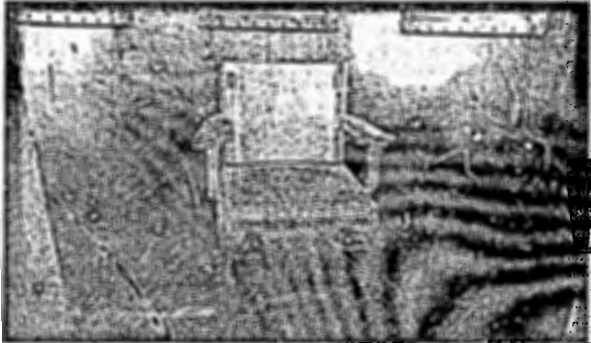

"Her stories give us motivation," she said. "She is really loyal and she is truly what the Alpha Gamma Delta spirit is."

chief position in November after he lost the election, citing personal reasons.

While meeting aspirations of having a candidate to lead the 60-officer, $4.6 million-budgeted department by April, Doherty's search for new a Carbondale police chief ended after a nearly three-month review of national applicants.

"He was head and shoulders above the others. He distinguished himself from the rest of the group," Doherty said.

"He comes from a police department that is very progressive. I think he has a good understanding of what we're doing in Carbondale."

Doherty received a final set of 52 applications Jan. 15 and selected Finney from a group of four finalists — three from Illinois and one from Wisconsin. The finalists were interviewed with a group of 13 city government and community members Friday.

"Just about every area you look at he's very strong in," Doherty said.

Though Doherty would not release the number of internal candidates who applied, he said none were finalists.

A member of the interview board, Carbondale Police Lt. Steve Odum said the department is eager for a new chief.

"We've sort of been unsettled without having someone to lead us overall in a general direction," he said. "I think the department is excited overall about having a new chief."

Doherty hopes Finney will help move the department "forward and keep it at the forefront in what's going on in policing today."

"I think we're fortunate to attract a person of this caliber in Carbondale," he said.

Finney is a West Frankfort native with an associate of arts degree in police administration from Murray State University, a bachelor of arts degree in social justice from the University of Illinois at Springfield and a master of public administration degree from Western Illinois University. Finney said SIUC students are important to his style of community policing.

"Carbondale is not Carbondale without SIUC. Students are going to be very dear to me in regards to how we operate," Finney said.

"Responsibility by the students, and the University is going to be paramount."

He said he also would like to see the department meld with University Police.

"I'm really looking forward to working with them, that really adds to the area," Finney said.

Although he will be without his family for nearly two months beginning in early April, Finney said he and his family are looking forward to becoming Carbondale residents.

Finney said he plans to be in Carbondale a few times before he takes office, and his priorities include preserving what he thinks is a well-maintained department.

"My most immediate goal is to get into the department and review what is there before I make any changes and to continue the community involvement with the department," Finney said.

Doherty has admitted a chief should be able to fill the position for at least two years but said Tuesday he focused his attention on getting Finney settled into the department.

"I'm not concerned at this point about longevity," he said. "I'm more concerned about him getting his feet on the ground to start providing the leadership that has been missing since July 1."

When he started as a patrol officer in Quincy, Finney dreamed of reaching the top rung of a police department ladder. He said he might have to be pushed out of the Carbondale position.

"My ultimate goal was to have my own department," he said. "This is a career goal of mine at this point. I'll be in Carbondale until Carbondale doesn't want me."

Odum said the interview board found few flaws in Finney.

"He's got all the things you would look for in a police chief," Odum said.

"I think we need to leave it up to the results of the student referendum," Dillard said.

He added the input of the students might play a major factor in the final decision made by Argersinger's office.

Blood said the referendum was only a starting point for future negotiations. He said a replacement program based on incentives is a possibility greets have been discussing. He said he would prefer a system tailored specifically to SIUC.

Budslick cited the peaceful Halloweens of the past several years as examples of increased communication between students, the University and the city. He said he hopes the Select 2000 issue can be handled in a similar manner.

in the United States. The composite materials to be used in the construction of the bridge are considered to be the new generation of structure materials.

The new composite building material is made up of fiber and epoxy. The fiber provides stiffness and strength, and the epoxy stabilizes the fiber into either unified or different directions.

The bridge will act as a demonstration laboratory for students. Monitoring devices inside the structure will measure how the bridge reacts to stress from pedestrians and weather.

Max Yen, an SIUC engineering professor and director of the Materials Technology Center, has been a driving force behind the project, Sanders said.

Sanders hopes the bridge will allow for various partnerships, including the Federal Highway Administration, the U.S. Army and Air Force Research Laboratories, the Illinois Department of Transportation and the National Science Foundation.

Grocery tours make it easy to eat right through a class and Schnucks grocery store tours during this month. Peterson will offer a class titled "Tips for Shopping, Cooking and Eating the Low-fat Way" from noon to 1 p.m. Monday at Our Savior Lutheran Church, 700 S. University Ave.

According to Peterson, the class will teach participants about food labels, the food pyramid, planning fast meals, modifying recipes and determining portion sizes.

"It is really the basics of a cooking class," she said. "Every step needed to make healthful food choices will be covered."

York-Camden, a dietitian at Memorial Hospital of Carbondale, will lead participants in aisle-by-aisle tours from 2 to 3 p.m. Tuesday at Schnucks Supermarket, 915 W. Main St.

The grocery store tours will provide area residents the opportunity to learn how to shop for healthy and tasty food. The tours will focus on understanding food labels, spending money wisely and planning low-fat or special diet meals. York-Camden will guide participants through each section of the store and explain the nutritional value, how to cook and how to store certain foods. She said the ability to talk to people and lead them through Schnucks makes her job easier and more effective.

"I couldn't bring the grocery store to my office," she said.

"Everything I need is here."

Both Peterson and York-Camden said healthy meals can be prepared quickly and efficiently.

"A common misconception is that choosing healthy food is time consuming and more expensive," Peterson said. "Neither of those are true."

Peterson said the lifestyles of college students can make it seem difficult to concentrate on healthy eating but it is not hard to eat healthy.

"With the right tools, it is not any more difficult to make healthy choices," she said. "The key is planning and putting healthier food into the refrigerator."

She said having healthy food at home may influence a better lifestyle.

"If a student knew that he had good food waiting for him at home they might pass up the temptation of pulling through the drive-thru," Peterson said.

York-Camden said the goal of the month is to cause people to think about their own nutrition.

"We want the community to become better educated about the benefits of a nutritious diet," she said. "Nutrition leads to better health, which leads to a longer life."

from the pork-barrel spending accusation in the short run, he is hopeful the public will be mindful of the institutes' value.

"I think we're legitimately honoring people who have served their countries over the years," Loomis said.

Loomis expressed regret that the funding came as part of the mammoth spending bill but said the money will be well used.

He said that in addition to the practical benefits of gaining a better understanding of important policy issues, the institutes are a public-relations bright spot for their respective universities.

"Particularly in places in the middle of the country — places that tend to [be overlooked] — these institutes can really help an SIU or a Kansas," Loomis said.

the Carbondale campus.

Karnes said he did not know the reason behind the IBHE's decision.

"I expected the reduction to be more proportional," Karnes said. "The president is the point man [in budget negotiations], and I thought one of his strengths was the connections he has."

"You would think we could do better, but maybe we're not very effective at getting funds from the state."

SIU President Ted Sanders could not be reached for comment Tuesday evening.

Elaine Hyden, vice president for budget and planning services, took a more positive view regarding the IBHE's decision.

"I think when you look at our $10 million base increase, that is a very healthy increase," Hyden said.

Gov. George Ryan's Feb. 17 state budget address proposed a hefty 6.2-percent increase in higher education funding for FY 2000. The Illinois Board of Higher Education originally suggested a 7.5-percent increase.

Ryan's funding decision prompted the IBHE's process of re-allocating the dollar amounts of grants to the state's colleges and universities.

IBHE Director of Communications Don Sevener said the re-allocation process was not acrimonious.

"There is a potential for that, but it wasn't that way this year," Sevener said.

Sevener said university officials appeased by the generous amounts of money slated for higher education did not provide abundant opposition to the IBHE tinkering with the allocation amounts. Sevener added that the IBHE attempted to "preserve the main thrust" of what the schools requested in its final recommendation.

Much of the money targeted for higher education will be used to bolster financial aid opportunities, workforce training programs and technology advances.

In addition, Sevener said the IBHE made faculty salary funding a priority in its decision-making process.

A 3-percent boost for the University's faculty compensation, which was preserved in the re-allocation process, will be supplemented by an additional 1 percent in state funding if SIUC can match that extra 1 percent of compensation funding.

The money is intended to aid in SIUC's attempts to "recruit and retain critical faculty."

The senate appropriation committee now will consider the IBHE's recommendation, but SIU legislative liaison Garrett Deakin said he does not expect final approval from the assembly to come until May.

The board approved recommendations from a preferred vendor study in May 1998. The study advised the University to give priority to prime vendors for purchasing. Since the board's approval last year, the University has applied the preferred vendor practice to much of its purchasing.

The regional economic impact analysis released by Andersen associates Feb. 2 focused primarily on the effects of the shared service center, which Eschenbach maintains will have a limited effect on the community.

"The shared service center will have minimal impact on the regional economy," Eschenbach said. "The reduction of salary [from the shared service center implementation] will be reallocated to academics, and that will give the University added strength by being able to spend more on research and education."

Eschenbach said he has seen no indication that the savings would be spent on "more administration."

The Andersen studies have met much controversy from constituencies and the Carbondale community, many members of which feel the University has not sought out adequate input on the recommendations.

A second senate resolution passed Tuesday empowers the University administration to consult with the faculty senate before employing Arthur Andersen or any other external consultants for any additional studies.

The resolution also calls for timely senate consultation on the current Andersen study recommendations, before Sanders makes any recommendations to the board.

Senate concerns about the University's increased use of external consultants prompted the senate governance committee to draft the resolution. The University has contracted Andersen to perform three separate studies since early 1998.

Sanders said at a press conference Tuesday morning that he had not made any decisions on the Andersen recommendations and did not expect any action to be taken by the board before April.

"I have not reached closure in my own decision about whether to recommend the shared service center or not," Sanders said.

Though the final recommendation to the board is solely the responsibility of the president, Sanders said he welcomes and would seek constituency input.

average opponents have against him.

For Biggs and company to be successful against the Fighting Illini, they must contain heavy hitters D.J. Svihlik (.455 avg., 2 HR, 10 RBI), Luke Simmons (.455, 1 HR, 2 RBI) and Todd McClure (.318, 7 RBI). As a team the Fighting Illini are .345 on the season with seven home runs and 50 RBI.

Not to be denied are the Saluki hitters. SIUC has been consistent at this plate this season, batting .312 as a team. Led by senior Marty Worsley (.500, 2 HR, 16 RBI), Jeff Stanek (.359, 7 RBI) and junior Steve Ruggieri (.327, 6 stolen bases), SIUC seeks to have a successful nine innings against an Illini pitching staff that has a 5.84 ERA.

But even with somewhat steady hitting, Callahan still is finding reasons for improvement.

"Our hitting has been inconsistent," Callahan said. "It's been good at times and not so good at other times. One thing we got away from after the first weekend in Stetson as far as hitting was hitting the ball where it was pitched. We used the whole field really well, and I thought we got away from that a little bit in New Orleans."

Callahan feels their attitudes may have taken away from some of that good hitting.

"I think we have some guys that are sometimes a little bit stubborn or bull headed, and they think they have to pull everything to be successful, and that's not the case," Callahan said. "We definitely have guys that can use the whole field to their advantage, it's just trying to get that through their heads on a consistent basis."

Even with a little stubbornness at the plate, Callahan still is pleased to see his players motivated in the clubhouse.

"I think the atmosphere in the clubhouse was good after Sunday," Callahan said. "Not only was it nice to win three, it was nice to win the last two games like we did."

'Itchy' itching to face Salukis

ROB ALLIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A local baseball hero returns to Abe Martin Field today to try and beat the team that made him a Hall of Fame coach.

Richard "Itchy" Jones will lead the University of Illinois against SIUC today at 2 p.m. for his twice-annual matchup with the school he once thrust into the national spotlight.

SIUC will travel to Champaign March 24 for the rematch.

Like any good coach, Jones isn't hyping up the importance of this game any more than the rest of the games the Illini play this season.

"It's another game on our schedule, and I'm sure (SIUC coach) Danny (Callahan) will tell you the same thing," Jones said.

Jones coached the Salukis from 1970 to 1990, racking up a school record that is among SIUC's most untouchable — 736 victories. He also was one of the few coaches in SIUC history who has led the Salukis to national success. During the Jones' years, SIUC made 10 NCAA Tournament appearances.

"Itchy" also led the Salukis to the College World Series, baseball's equivalent to basketball's Final Four, three times. SIUC was the national runner-up in 1971, and they were third in 1974 and 1977.

Sadly, one of SIUC's great sporting names left after the 1990 season for the larger university just up Interstate 57. Upon leaving, Jones cited better athletic funding and improved baseball facilities, two inevitable advantages a Big Ten school holds over SIUC.

The Herrin native says that while

Richard "Itchy" Jones

• 10 NCAA Tourney Appearances

• 3 College World Series

Inducted: American Baseball Coaches Hall of Fame (Jan. 3, 1999)

he was sad to leave SIUC, he knew it was the right move.

"I don't have any regrets," he said. "I miss Southern Illinois, but the situation at that time in my life was right for the change. I'm still glad I made it."

Last year was a big year for "Itchy." He steered U of I to a 41-21 record — its first Big 10 title in 35 years and its first NCAA tournament berth since 1990. On April 8, he became just the eighth coach in Division I history to win 1,000 games.

Jones was named 1998 Big 10 coach of the year, as well as American Baseball Coaches Association Midwest region coach of the year.

On Jan. 3, he received an even higher honor from the ABCA — he was inducted into its Hall of Fame. For a college baseball coach, no higher honor exists.

Jones said he, never could have made it to the Hall without the people who surrounded him at SIUC for so long.

"There's no doubt my induction to the Hall of Fame had to do with my years at SIUC," Jones said. "In my mind, getting inducted was something that came about from all those years that I had a chance to work with some great players down there."

One of those people was Callahan, whose relationship with Jones dates back to the fall of 1985, when Callahan arrived as a graduate assistant on Jones' staff.

"I would not be where I am, right now if it weren't for Itchy," Callahan said. "I'm very appreciative of the fact that he gave me the opportunity when I came down here in the fall of '85."

"It was a great association the three years I worked with him. It was an honor to work with him. Any time you work with a legend, it's an honor."

Callahan calls the U of I games "good, clean competition" with his legendary mentor.

The pair still talk every week or so.

"We talk some baseball, and we're always very open with each other," Jones said. "We follow each other's programs closely. It's great to see Danny starting to turn (SIU) around now."

Jones looks forward to his trips back to Southern Illinois, even if being on the other side of Abe Martin Field can get a little confusing.

"It's always good to come back to a place where you have a lot of great memories," he said.

"Sometimes I look out at the SIU uniforms, and I have to check my own to make sure I'm wearing the right one."

Jones said he most enjoys being in the company of old baseball people in the SIUC area.

"I enjoyed the people," he said. "It really brings back memories of my friends and the guys who came to all the games when there was great enthusiasm for baseball. At heart I'll always be a Southern Illinoisan."

atically draw the average fan out to the baseball diamond anticipating the first pitch, waiting for the crack of the bat to send the round sphere over the outfield wall.

That's what Joe DiMaggio loved, and that same magical game DiMaggio played more than a half century ago is what brings head coach Dan Callahan and the rest of the Salukis out to Abe Martin Field each and every day.

Baseball will always be around. Players and fans alike will pour into a ballpark waiting for the words "Play Ball" to be echoed for all the world to hear. Spring training will always mean spring and warm weather.

Baseball is heaven, and thankfully for all baseball fans here in Carbondale, we all have the opportunity to watch the game that DiMaggio and crew brought to life so many years ago.

Joltin' Joe has left and gone away

Even though I might not have been around when the Yankee Clipper Joe DiMaggio patrolled center field at Yankee Stadium in the 1930s and '40s, I feel a sense of pride knowing I was alive to even witness Joltin' Joe speak to members of the media in the time I followed the great sport of baseball.

truly can get a sense of how precious and fragile life truly is. It reminds you to cherish the times of going to the ballpark and smelling the sweet smells of hot dogs and freshly cut grass.

Personally, it reminds me of all the times I spent in right field in high school waiting for that next hitter to hit the ball my way.

But that's the joy of baseball — it means something different to each person.

Treasuring DiMaggio's, Caray's and Brickhouse's love for the game, I continue to cherish the sport that holds a special place in my heart every time I hear someone say "Play ball."

Thankfully, for Southern Illinois University students and faculty we all can enjoy the game that featured such greats as Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and Stan Musial right in our very own backyard.

Even though the Saluki men's baseball team may not be the 1939 New York Yankees, and senior Joe Schley may not be No. 5 Joe DiMaggio, they have one thing in common — they love baseball.

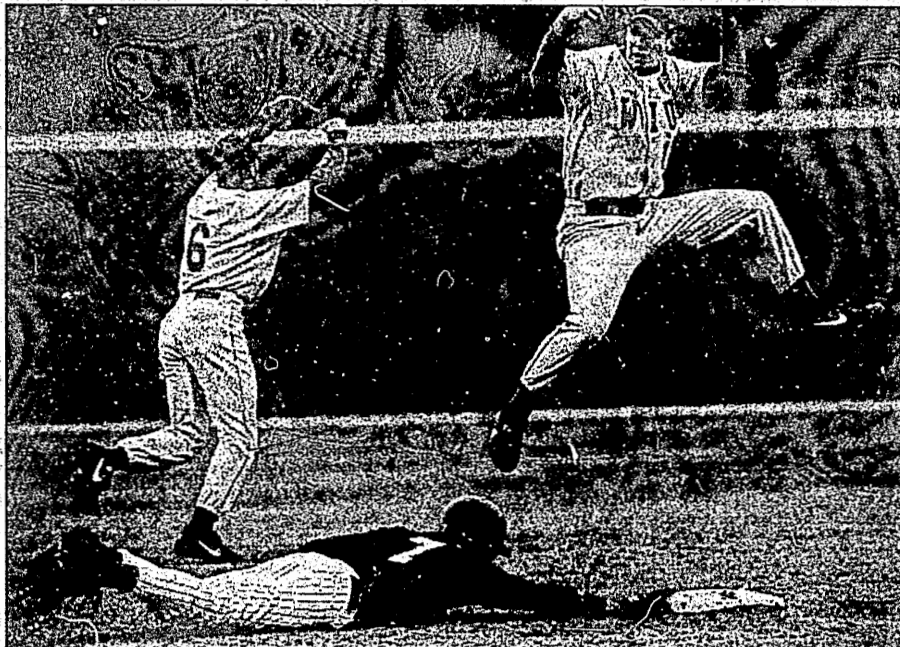

Despite not having a winning record since 1996, when they finished 29-26, the Salukis have started the season 7-3, with the University of Illinois-Champaign coming for an intrastate battle today.

Most baseball fans remember the great rivalries between the Yankees and Boston Red Sox and the heated local contests between the St. Louis Cardinals and Chicago Cubs.

And this rivalry is no different. The Salukis and Fighting Illini have

But people should not mourn the loss of this great American hero. Instead, remember his legacy of the sport he loved so dearly — baseball.

Some rivalries need no explanation. For instance, the Chicago Cubs vs. the Chicago White Sox in baseball and the St. Louis Blues and Detroit Red Wings in hockey.

Somewhere in between these two rivalries fits the University of Illinois-Champaign and SIUC, who will battle today at 2 p.m. at Abe Martin Field for intrastate bragging rights.

Like any good battle there are always key figures, and this matchup is no different. But instead of two top-notch players slugging it out, this war pits the two head coaches — Itchy Jones and Dan Callahan.

Jones, who led the Salukis for 21 seasons (738-345-5) before leaving for Champaign, also has been successful for the Fighting Illini. Last season he led his troops to a 42-21 mark, and this season has started no different. Ranked No. 25 in the country in this week's Collegiate Baseball magazine poll, the Illini (4-1) look to add one more win to their win total.

His opponent Callahan has SIUC starting the season at 7-3 and winners of their last four ballgames. After a weekend sweep of Western Illinois University, Callahan feels there should be no added incentive needed for his players than the thought of playing the Fighting Illini.

"I think you take pride in the game, and pride in your responsibilities as an athlete," Callahan said. "It shouldn't take an opposition's ranking to motivate you at all. Hopefully, our athletes are motivated enough just to play the game."

Last season the Salukis lost the game between the two clubs in extra innings by the score of 7-5 at Abe Martin Field. This season the Salukis will have two opportunities to avenge last year's loss and improve on their overall 24-13 record against the Fighting Illini.

Starting for the Salukis today will be Adam Biggs. The senior is 2-1 on the season and has produced 21 strikeouts in 13.1 innings with the ballclub.

Another impressive stat for Biggs is the .196 batting
