Top students say honors mean less than knowledge

By Tom Travin
News Editor

Academic excellence is something that some people strive for in college. Recognition is something that those with excellent grades don't always strive for, but instead must learn to deal with.

Wesley Maulding and Denise Carver are two of those who have achieved academic excellence, but they didn't expect to receive the recognition that accompanies it.

"I've never been a person that competed with other people — I've just competed real strong with myself," said Maulding, a senior in computer science, who was named to receive one of two SIU Foundation Academic Excellence Awards.

"I've just tried to do the best that I could. I never really thought I would get the award — it's not something that I strove for, it's just something that happened to cross paths with my own goals."

The recipient of the other award expressed similar feelings. "It's really an honor, but I didn't expect to receive it," said Carver, a senior in elementary education. "If I'm going to do something, though, I always try to do my best, and that's just what I did."

The Academic Excellence Awards go to the male and female students in the graduating class who have amassed the highest grade-point averages during their college careers.

Maulding finished his undergraduate work with a 3.98 grade-point average. Carver maintained a 4.0 grade-point average during three years of undergraduate work at SIU-C, and will graduate early, thanks to scoring high on proficiency tests as a freshman.

Future plans of the two scholars differ and include different career goals. Maulding will study computer science at Northwestern University on a scholarship, then will jump into a job market that has already offered him a number of positions in his field.

"I'm in a position now that I can name any state or any city and I've either gone or had a job offer there," he said. "I've had a lot of offers, but I'd rather go on and finish my master's and doctorate work. I really love school, and this is the first chance I've had to really concentrate fully on my school work."

Maulding plans to do his graduate work in the field of home computers, which he sees as the field of the future. "With the technology growing in leaps and bounds, the home computer field is taking off. When you bring a computer into a home, you've got the human factor to deal with — how to make a computer simple enough for the average person to work. That's what I want to get into — how to make computers fit into the household, and how to make them readily usable for the average person," he said.

Maulding said that he worked two jobs as an undergraduate, and combined with his school work, this left him with little time for socializing or leisure. He said he is looking forward to living in Chicago while attending Northwestern, where he can "spend some time looking around museums and the Art Institute."

Carver's plans include getting married, which she will do May 29. Her fiancée is William O'Dell of Flora, a plumber's apprentice. She hopes to continue in elementary education, and is looking for a job in Flora, where the couple plans to settle.

"The future in education doesn't look very bright, but I'm trying to remain hopeful," she said. "It's hard to tell at this point just what's going to happen. The school system in Flora hasn't made its assignments for the fall yet, because its budget isn't finalized, so I'm just waiting and hoping."

She said she had always wanted to be a teacher. "From the first day of kindergarten, I always thought seriously about teaching. I

Public relations jobs necessary, Somit says

By Doug Hettinger
Staff Writer

New positions in university relations are crucial if the University's fund raising efforts are to succeed, President Albert Somit told the Faculty Senate Tuesday in response to questions about adding administrators when faculty posts are being cut from the budget.

Somit also said he was "very much worried" that the governor may ask the University to return some of its appropriation at mid-year. He said a reserve fund of "probably 2 percent" to provide a cushion of about $1 million against a mid-year recession is being considered.

The president spoke and answered questions at a special senate meeting called to address faculty concerns about cutbacks in the budget and faculty positions.

Herbert Donow, senate president, said after the meeting that Somit's answers to a list of questions about how the administration is dealing with the cutbacks were "less than satisfactory."

Somit said positions of executive director of university relations and assistant to the vice president of university relations will be filled from money already allocated to the division.

The president said that after transfers of personnel and reorganization of university relations, the division will be smaller than it was several years ago.

Somit said the executive director will develop a public relations program that is necessary to "get a good fund raising program going." He said the fund raising effort the University needs cannot be accomplished without the two positions. The job of Stanley McAnally, recently appointed vice president of university relations, will be fund raising, with an eventual goal of $5 million a year, Somit said.

"We should have done this five years or 10 years ago," Somit said. "We need to get it going now."

Somit said a good fund raiser would be worth 10 times his salary but it will take a couple of years to get a fund raising program going.

"Five years from now we will have a million or two coming in," he said.

Somit said he was urging vice presidents and deans to take into consideration the long-term effects of any cuts in faculty they decide upon and not to do anything they will regret next year.

When asked if he was exploring alternatives to across-the-board cuts in faculty positions, Somit said, "We have not done all we can do in squeezing out duplicate administrative positions or duplicate courses."

Somit pointed out University policy requires that most personnel be given a year's notice before being cut. He said cuts have to be made where the notice isn't required.

When asked if cutbacks in administrative positions were being considered, Somit said it is possible that some might be "dispensed with." He said the senate was correct in asking whether administrative functions should not be priority ranked as academic programs will be.

Addressing faculty concerns about "excessive administrators," he said two associate vice president positions "have gone by the boards" along with some lesser posts. He said release time for administrative duties by faculty will be looked at closely and "we will cut into that as much as we can."

Murder victim's backpack found

By Anita Jackson
Staff Writer

The backpack of student Susan Schumake, who was raped and strangled on the "Ho Chi Minh Trail" last August, has been found and processed for evidence, according to Tom McNamara, police spokesperson.

Miss Schumake's backpack was discovered in a "wooded area on campus," McNamara said. He also said he did not know if anything was missing from the backpack. He said the person who found the backpack reported it to SIU police. However, he declined to identify who the person was or when the backpack was found.

Miss Schumake, 21, was a senior in radio and television. Her body was discovered by SIU police at about 11:50 p.m. last Aug. 18. She was last seen alive leaving WIDB radio station at about 5:30 p.m. the previous evening. Autopsy reports revealed she was killed about 6 p.m. that night. The backpack she had been carrying when she left WIDB was not found with her body.

Using evidence related to the case, police have continuously followed leads and have developed a profile of the type of person who would commit a crime like this, McNamara said. A person who commits a sex offense usually follows the same pattern every time, so police are concentrating their investigation on past sex crime offenders, he said.

"The leads are continuously being followed through as they

Britain controls main channel in Falklands, claims 'tight grip'

By The Associated Press

Britain was reported in control of the waterway separating the main Falkland Islands on Tuesday after one of its warships fired on an Argentine vessel in the channel.

Argentina had no immediate comment, but threatened to attack any British ship or plane heading to the South Atlantic archipelago.

The agency quoted informed British government sources as saying that British frigates and destroyers are now making regular patrols along the waterway to prevent Argentine supplies from being ferried by land or sea to the garrisons.

The British Defense Ministry said: "This morning one of our ships in the darkness detected the presence of a vessel within the Total Exclusion Zone. They fired on it. We have no absolute evidence the vessel was hit or sunk. All I can say is we have reports of a large explosion."

"The incident and its location show how tight our grip is on the Falkland Islands."

Reports by British correspondents with the armada identified the frigate as the Alacrité. In dispatches submitted to British censorship, the correspondents said the frigate spotted an Argentine supply ship on radar and opened fire with 4½-inch automatic guns from a distance of eight miles.

There was no confirmation from the Argentines, who reported no new military action around the Falklands.

But the junta in Buenos Aires said that because the British had imposed a 200-mile total war zone around the islands April 30 and extended it to within 12 miles of the Argentine coast on Friday, Argentina was retaliating with its own broadened war zone.

It said that any British ship or aircraft headed toward the Falkland Islands from anywhere in the South Atlantic will be considered hostile. The three-man junta issued a communique describing the move as "self-defense" in view of Britain's "persistent aggressive attitude."

Reagan arms plan pushed by Haig

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., declaring that chances of ratifying the SALT II treaty are "dead," called Tuesday for national support of President Reagan's new plan for deep cuts in Soviet and U.S. nuclear arsenals.

In testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Haig contended that a unilateral nuclear freeze would undermine Reagan's proposal by eliminating any Soviet incentive to agree to a reduction in nuclear arms.

He said a strong commitment to a military modernization program would be the United States' most important bargaining tool in negotiations with the Soviets. Congress can "make or break" the new Strategic Arms Reduction Talks, likely to get underway in Geneva in late June or early July, with its action on that program, he added.

While the administration welcomes the widening national focus on nuclear policy, Haig said, "we hope ... that this debate will not culminate in fresh battle lines between divided factions."

He said the administration is seeking "a new national consensus in support of the president's proposal for a fair, realistic and truly beneficial strategic arms agreement."

The committee is considering various proposals designed to curb the arms race.

In his speech Sunday in Eureka, Reagan proposed a two-phase program in which the United States and the Soviet Union would first reduce their arsenals of nuclear warheads by one-third, and then agree on lower, equal ceilings on all strategic forces.

Pope's Britain visit may be canceled

LONDON (AP) — Pope John Paul II's scheduled visit to Britain will be called off in the middle of next week if hostilities over the Falkland Islands have not ceased by then. Cardinal Basil Hume said Tuesday after returning from Rome.

Hume, Roman Catholic primate of England and Wales, had said in Italy earlier that the British visit, the first by any pope, might be postponed if the British-Argentine crisis deteriorates.

Hume spoke with reporters at Rome's Leonardo da Vinci airport before returning to London after a two-day visit to the Vatican.

Hinkley kin wanted him committed

WASHINGTON (AP) — After John W. Hinkley Jr. left home "to exorcise devils from my body," his brother and sister tried unsuccessfully to persuade their father to have him committed to an institution.

Nothing was done, the brother testified Tuesday, and three weeks later, on March 30, 1981, Hinkley sprang from a crowd of reporters and onlookers in Washington and shot President Reagan and three other men.

In a clear, confident voice, Scott Hinkley told the jury his father was afraid to have John committed because "the emotional trauma that may be associated with putting him in an institution may do more harm than good."

3 Thais held in Chicago heroin bust

CHICAGO (AP) — A fourth Thai national was being sought Tuesday in connection with a heroin seizure that federal authorities described as the largest in Chicago history.

Last week, federal agents seized 21 pounds of almost pure, white heroin in five separate packages in three different locations.

Arrested at the time were three Thai nationals who were being held on $1 million bond pending a hearing Friday before a U.S. magistrate.

Proposed boxing club gets tentative city OK

By Christopher Kade
Staff Writer

Concerned that black youths on the northeast side of Carbondale should be given an outlet for excess energy, the City Council Monday tentatively endorsed a proposal that the city help finance a boxing club.

City Manager Carroll Fry said it would be better for the city to help fund the proposed Attucks Boxing Club "than pay for police overtime on the Levee" — a reference to the northeast side.

"It would be better to give these kids an opportunity to take out their energies, frustrations and just plain devilry in a boxing ring," Fry said.

The council directed the city to continue discussions with organizers La Donn McIntyre, Al Ross and Karriem Shari'ati. But, it offered no promises of financial support for the club, which would be part of the Attucks Community Service Board's Coordinated Youth Program at the Eurma Hayes Center. McIntyre heads the Coordinated Youth Program, Shari'ati is the USO minority affairs commissioner and Ross is a concerned city resident.

Mayor Hans Fischer agreed with Fry that the city would not be able to provide the club's entire starting budget of $9,173, "but having grown up in an urban area myself, I realize the value of such a program."

McIntyre said he has received pledges from several local businesses for help in purchasing equipment, and a verbal commitment from the Carbondale Police Officers' Association to assist the program.

McIntyre said the program, which began operations May 6, "is designed to teach and develop boxing skills and techniques to boys and girls through a structured Silver Mittens and Golden Gloves program."

The club, aimed at attracting youth between the ages of eight and 21, would compete throughout the state under U.S. Amateur Boxing Federation and Illinois Boxing Commission rules, he said. He said that members will be taught the "straight-up Joe Louis boxing style" and that The Bar has offered facilities for matches.

Short-range goals of the club include providing for "management of idle time" and assisting "boys and girls through a team concept to become more viable contributing members of the community and society." Long-range goals, McIntyre said, include the establishing educational scholarships and the "development of a parental-community support system" for youths.

Fry said that while the program is "keyed to black youths," he saw "no reason why it could not eventually be opened" to white youths in the community.

Mavericks said to be attempt at consistency

By Lyndall Caldwell
Staff Writer

When the Maverick Party was first organized in 1980, the organizers hoped "to be able to recruit good people" so that programs started by the founders would be continued after they left, Todd Rogers, Undergraduate Student Organization president, said.

It was an attempt to solve what Tom Busch, assistant to President Somit, says is one of the biggest problems that faces student government — a lack of consistency from administration to administration.

Busch, who ran for student president in the late 1960s, said that the transience of students was an even bigger problem that student apathy.

"By the time a year is up and a student government has learned to deal with the system, the administration is often a lame duck. It takes some longer than others to learn to utilize their positions to accomplish goals," Busch said.

ROGERS SAID, "We realized that if we were to maintain and expand the credibility of USO, we had to make sure that leaders would be elected to carry out ideals and projects that we had initiated."

Rogers added that even if a student government is "relatively successful" one year, "there is no guarantee that it won't be a joke the next year. That's why, when we originally started the Maverick party, we hoped it would be able to continue for years to come. "By training and nurturing new leaders, teaching them the ropes," Rogers said, "we hoped to make student government increasingly more valuable to the students we represent."

Rogers said that if student leaders are informed about relevant issues affecting students through work in a party, it is easier for them to negotiation. "Students have become more sophisticated. In some ways, confrontation was an effective approach, but people aren't shocked by it any more." Busch said. "Students have become more politically astute in that they have learned how to use the system — if that means putting on a three-piece suit and testifying before the Illinois Board of Higher Education."

"Twenty years ago, the University was run by benevolent dictators," Busch said. "Today, the president makes a decision after it has been 'committed' to death. One of the things that has strengthened USO and GSC is that they have learned how to use the committee process. And they have learned how to make their appointments accountable to their constituency body," he said.

"Students should keep in mind that to effect change, one has to go to the institution where power rests," Busch said.

help solve problems. "That is why we believed that continuity is so important in establishing a credible organization that truly represents students. That is why we wanted to make the Maverick Party and its ideals and objectives long-lasting," Rogers said.

HAVING A LESS transient membership is only one change that has taken place in recent student government administrations. Busch said that today's tactics of student government have changed from a policy of confrontation to JERRY COOK, USO president-elect, also says that student government and the administration have found more of a common ground. He says he sees himself not as an adversary of the administration, but as an advocate of student concerns.

But while student government led by the Maverick Party has learned to use the system better, it does not mean that the issues it has pursued are much

Commencement with flair

Graduating seniors who think they will snooze through commencement ceremonies Saturday afternoon are in for a surprise — pleasant, we think. They will hear an address by Paul Schlipp, professor emeritus of philosophy, that, in Schlipp's words, is "certainly going to contain some thunder, and lightning too."

The 85-year-old Schlipp is one of the most distinguished members of the SIU-C community.

After receiving degrees from Garrett Theological Seminary, Northwestern University and Stanford University, he taught at Northwestern for many years before coming to SIU-C in 1965.

Schlipp has made a great contribution to the University as a teacher of philosophy, and he has described his teaching work as making him feel like he's "in heaven." He estimates he has taught 80,000 students.

It is his work as editor of The Library of Living Philosophers, however, that has gained for Schlipp an international reputation. The 14-volume study of such philosophers as Bertrand Russell, John Dewey, Albert Einstein and others has been called "the greatest single work in philosophy in the 20th century."

His work has earned him a place in the International Who's Who, the only scholar at SIU-C other than former faculty member Buckminster Fuller to be so honored.

Schlipp will receive an honorary degree at the morning commencement ceremonies Saturday, making him the first faculty member in recent memory to receive an honorary degree and give a commencement address at spring ceremonies.

Schlipp has described himself as a radical and says that radicals, like philosophers, "go to the roots" of problems. His radical views have hurt him in the past, causing him to lose positions at a California university and a Washington university.

Graduates can expect a different kind of commencement address from this philosopher-radical. He has said it will be "very different, in many ways," and that graduates will be challenged.

The address will touch on the current world situation, and tell graduates what their mission could be in this world that lives under a daily threat of annihilation.

"They used to say 'Give them hell, Harry,' to Truman," Schlipp said. "I may not be giving them hell, but trying to save them from a living hell."

Whether he can save them or not, Schlipp is sure to make many people sit up and take notice. And that's what radicals are supposed to do.

Time for unusual politics

IN A NATIONALLY televised address on April 28, President Reagan stated that he wanted the American people to let their representatives know that they think this is no time for politics as usual. I wonder if Sen. Percy will get the message that this is no time for politics as usual when he receives the 455 letters that we at SIU-C sent to him as part of the National Letter Writing Day? How about Sen. Dixon when he receives our 182 letters or Rep. Simon when he receives our 142 letters? Moreover, will Reagan get the message that this is not time for politics as usual when he receives our 486 letters?

I am in need of the higher level of education that these letters attempt to protect because I cannot understand the logic behind some of the proposed federal budget cuts. For example, at the SIU-C level, why will there be 394 fewer grants offered through the College Work Study Program in 1983 than there were in 1981, when the job experience provided through this program may give students an advantage in highly competitive job markets?

Perhaps this problem I have in understanding the reasoning for these cuts is caused by the fever I have. The fever I refer to is not spring fever, but peace fever. I have experienced this fever since at least the Vietnam War era, when approximately 46,000 Americans lost their lives in action, 300,000 were wounded and 2,546 were classified as missing in action. While this may sound like some of the anti-war talk of the 1960s, it is true that the issue of peace is just as relevant today as it was 20 years ago.

THE PURPOSE of the letter writing day was to increase your awareness of the proposed budget cutbacks in educational assistance. However, I hope that it has also caused you to catch peace fever, a peace that can be achieved through higher levels of education.

I would like to thank the members of the Graduate Student Council and the Undergraduate Student Organization for allowing me to help organize the National Letter Writing Day. Special thanks to the letter writing day volunteers and to all who wrote letters on this day for the sake of preserving educational opportunities. Indeed, this is no time for politics as usual. Peace among all nations; let's go for it. Carl Kosierowski, Coordinator, National Letter Writing Day.

Rural electric co-ops face unique distribution difficulties

IT WAS PLEASING to see that members of the Egyptian Electric cooperative, who were protesting co-op rates and board policies were exercising their rights as part-owners of the co-op by planning to attend their annual meeting and running candidates for the board of directors. That is the beauty of the co-op system. When something you don't like is happening, you can take direct action to change it. The system is far more responsive than most public utility systems.

I only wish the protesters would de-emphasize their anger and concentrate on correcting the problems they find. I think the protesters need advice because news reports suggest that many of them may not understand the conditions under which a rural electric cooperative operates.

SIU-C graduate student Richard Kravitz, for instance, was quoted by the Daily Egyptian as saying: "I just don't understand it. It's supposed to be a co-op for the benefit of the members. The rates should be lower than companies like Central Illinois Public Service, but they're not."

Kravitz is correct in his assumption that the co-op exists to benefit its members. But his apparent assumption that benefits can be measured only by electric rates is naive.

THE NATIONWIDE rural electric cooperative system was founded to bring electricity to rural areas such as Southern Illinois, areas ignored by public utility companies because they said they could not make a profit. Electric cooperatives, as a general rule, serve sparsely populated rural areas, where there are few customers to help pay the tremendous costs of installing and maintaining power lines.

Not all co-op rates are higher than public utility rates, but it is small wonder when they are. Most public utilities, which tend to serve cities where houses are lined up in neat and close rows, have the benefit of spreading their costs over more customers per mile of line. Public utilities also get a greater share of the big users such as business and manufacturing.

These differences in service areas make a big difference in the cost of providing electricity to customers. The Egyptian Electric Cooperative and many of its sister co-ops in the area are distribution co-ops. They distribute electricity, they do not generate it. Thus, distribution costs, which are higher in rural areas, are the major determinant of customers' rates.

CO-OPS GENERALLY buy their power from the same generation stations as public utilities. In fact, co-ops and public utilities frequently are joint owners of electric generating plants. Co-ops get no special considerations or special rates in the prices they pay for the electricity they distribute.

Some of the protesters also seem to be oversimplifying rate hikes when they compare utility bills of three years ago to utility bills of today. Changes in total power bills often reflect more than rates hikes. Does your current bill reflect the same level of electricity use as three years ago? Or, is your current heating system less efficient? Is your current home less well insulated than your 1979 home? Are there additional appliances at your current address? Such questions play a big role in determining total power bills. Protesters should talk about the sizes of their bills relative to total electric use.

My home is served by a public utility. I formerly lived on a farm served by the Southern Illinois Electric Cooperative. I'll take a co-op any day. —Gordon Billingsley, Public Information Specialist, School of Agriculture.

Model United Nations is helpful

It was heartening to read the May 3 letter on SIU-C's Model United Nations, signed by Steven Kappel and 47 others. It is a sign of the probable return of this significant project to the campus in March 1983.

As an adviser to SIU-C's Model United Nations, 1969 to 1975 and 1981, I can attest to its value for the students who participated and for SIU-C as a whole. It brings American and international students together in a worthwhile effort to understand world problems and the potential value of the United Nations. It encourages students to place themselves in the position of other nations. It develops skills in discussion and compromise in committees and in plenary sessions. Area junior colleges and colleges, as well as local high schools, may be invited to send delegates.

Interest faded somewhat in the United Nations and in world affairs after 1975, both at SIU-C and in the nation, partly as a reaction to America's frustrating involvement in Vietnam. Recent events are stimulating a new concern over international problems — events such as the famine in Cambodia, Iran's seizure of American hostages for 444 days, the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and the current struggle over the Falkland Islands between Britain and Argentina. The United Nations mobilized world public opinion to condemn the Iranian, Soviet and Argentine aggressions, and is currently serving as the major hope for mediation between Britain and Argentina. At a time when there is a growing mass movement around the world against nuclear war, the United Nations will hold its second special session on disarmament this June.

There is strong reason to believe that the United States will again become deeply involved in world affairs within the next few years, and that nations will find it more and more necessary to use the instruments of the United Nations and other peaceful means to solve disputes and work on the common problems of mankind. War among the major powers is likely to be eliminated in this generation because of the nuclear threat. It is particularly important for students who are interested and concerned to prepare themselves for coming opportunities and responsibilities. The Model United Nations is one significant way to be involved.

It is interesting to note that a couple of years ago, at one meeting of the U.N. Security Council, SIU-C graduates occupied three of the 15 chairs — Donald McHenry, ambassador for the United States, and representatives from Jamaica and Zambia. Individuals do count, and the concerned public determines the direction and limits of policy action.

Students should watch for announcements of steering committee meetings for the Model U.N. next fall. — Frank L. Klingberg, Emeritus Professor, Political Science.

The Board of Trustees is scheduled to vote on fee increases for eight School of Technical Careers flight-training courses by amounts ranging from $132.50 to $458.50 Thursday at SIU-E.

According to information provided by the board's staff, the proposed increases are necessary to meet increased costs of operation, maintenance and operation of the 21 training aircraft.

At the board's last meeting in April, Ron Kelly, director of SIU-C's Air Institute and Service, said the increases are needed to avoid a deficit of nearly $60,000 for fiscal 1982.

If approved by the board, the increases are projected to provide a surplus of about $15,000 for fiscal 1983. About 130 students would be affected by the hikes, which would take effect in July. Total fees for flight-training courses would increase to $8,132 from $6,731.

According to the board's staff, if the proposed levels of funding are passed, the fees charged by SIU-C will be comparable or less than those at other universities.

The board also is scheduled to consider project and budget approval for resurfacing, striping and other improvements to nine existing SIU-C parking lots at a cost of about $247,100. If approved, the request must be submitted to the Illinois Board of Higher Education for approval.

Funding for the project will not involve state appropriations, but will come from traffic and parking revenue through the Parking Facilities account, according to the board's staff.

The nine lots involved are: Lots 3 and 7, north of Pulliam Hall; Lot 6, north of Morris Library; Lot 19, east of the Personnel Office; Lot 21, at University Courts; Lot 43, southeast of University Laundry; Lot 53, southwest of the Service Shop; and Lots 77 and 90, on Forest Street.

In addition, the board is scheduled to consider project and budget approval for resurfacing, striping and other major repairs to five segments of the main campus drives at a cost of about $275,000. Funding will come from traffic and parking revenue.

According to the board's staff, the campus Traffic and Parking Committee has determined that SIU-C's five main traffic arteries should be repaired because of serious deterioration due to age, weather and heavy usage.

The road areas are: Small Group Housing Drive, the Oakland Avenue extension, Lincoln Drive south and southeast of Neckers, Lincoln Drive southwest of the Agriculture Building and Lincoln Drive southeast of the Baptist Student Center.

The board also is scheduled to consider project approval and selection of an architect for roof replacement at University Park and Thompson Point residence halls at a total cost of $357,000.

If approved, roofs would be replaced on Allen, Boomer and Wright halls in University Park, at a cost of $168,000, and on Brown, Felts, Kellogg, Warren, Smith, Abbot and Baldwin halls in Thompson Point, at a cost of $189,000.

Hearing set on city's quick-take right

Another round of hearings have been scheduled for May 18 in the legal battle by property owners to block the city's attempt to obtain land for the proposed downtown convention center.

At a hearing Monday at the Jackson County Courthouse, Circuit Judge Richard E. Richman said he questions the legality of the city's ordinance which authorizes using eminent domain proceedings to obtain the property.

At the May 18 hearing, Richman will hear arguments from the city's attorney, James Zimmer and William Broom, the lawyer for several of the landowners concerning whether the city has the authority to use its quick-take ordinance in exercising eminent domain.

Broom has argued that the ordinance is an improper use of the city's home rule authority and should be declared unconstitutional.

Zimmer, however, has contended the city has the "inherent right" to take the land for a public purpose. Broom countered that the convention center is not a public purpose.

Richman said he will strictly construe eminent domain laws because the 20 lawsuits filed by landowners concern "basic property rights" of people.

Create your own kind of summer.

Try Triton's "5-8-5" plan.

Don't let summer get away from you this year. You've probably got dozens of things you want to do...earn some money, take a trip, spend time with your friends—even hit the books a bit to ease the load at school next fall.

How will you fit it all in before September?

Triton can help you out with "5-8-5"—a summer plan that lets you earn some college credit and still have time for work, play or both.

Lighten your load.

Are you dreading next fall when you have to take that impossible course along with all your other classes?

By taking one or two of your more difficult courses at Triton this summer, you can put all your study time where you need it most so you're sure to have an easier load next fall.

Triton courses are equivalent in content and quality to any that you'd take during the school year.

Cut your costs.

You can take classes at Triton at a very low cost. Tuition rates for in-district residents are much less than you would pay at state universities and a lot lower than private college tuition. And since you'll be living at home, you won't have to worry about dorm or apartment expenses.

Going to Triton this summer could be the best inflation fighter you've found yet.

Pack work and school together.

Triton's summer classes can fit into any work schedule. If you choose a 5-week class, you'll still have almost two full months for a job. The first 5-week session could be especially good for you since many employers wait to hire summer help until the peak vacation period—July and August. By then, you'll be done with summer school and ready for work.

Even if you decide to take classes during all three sessions, you'll still be able to work. We've scheduled a lot of popular courses during evening hours, so you can leave the daytime open for your job.

Pick up some extra credits.

Graduation day seems years away and you're in a hurry. The courses you take at Triton this summer can bring that degree a lot closer.

The credits you earn here are fully transferable to four-year schools. We have a staff of advisors who can answer your questions about which Triton courses best fulfill your school's requirements.

With our "5-8-5" plan, you can rack up lots of credits by taking classes during all three sessions.

Higher ed funding hike passes hurdle

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — Higher education would get more money than now budgeted by Gov. James R. Thompson for next year under legislation approved Tuesday by an Illinois Senate committee.

But a Democratic-controlled appropriations committee plan to restore the $18 million cut proposed by Thompson has a long way to go before final legislative approval.

The committee recommended that the money be provided by eliminating a Thompson-proposed 5 percent hike in the state's contribution to the five major public pension systems.

Under the committee plan, approved unanimously, faculty and staff at the state's public colleges and universities would receive 4 percent salary increases in January — at a cost to the state of about $12 million.

The higher education budget proposed by the Republican governor would not allow any salary hikes. "It's just bare maintenance," committee chairman Sen. Kenneth Buzbee, D-Carbondale, said. "It is saying to (higher ed employees), 'We want to maintain faith with you, we believe you are worth an increase.'"

Buzbee emphasized that wiping out the proposed pensions contribution hike would not mean less money for retiring state employees.

The committee also endorsed boosting the Thompson spending plan by $1.2 million for student awards from the Illinois State Scholarship Commission and $5.3 million to public community college students.

Although the Senate committee's plan would restore higher education funding to current levels, the Illinois Board of Higher Education had asked for an additional $118 million over the $1.2 billion figure Thompson proposed in March.

The board's higher budget would allow for a 7 percent salary increase in July, the beginning of the new fiscal year, and a 2 percent wage hike in January.

Buzbee said keeping the state's contribution to the public pension systems at the current level also would free up enough money to restore most of the governor's proposed $35 million cut in state support to elementary and secondary education.

At Tuesday's meeting, the committee added the money to the individual college and university appropriations. It still must change a number of pension bills to provide the money.

Buzbee said that although he "expects opposition from a lot of folks" on the committee plan to keep the state's pension contributions at the current level, he is confident the recommendations will be accepted by the full Senate.

different than those of past administrations.

Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs for the past nine years, said, "Access is a very appropriate theme for student government. I have always found it to be concerned with access, equity, and keeping the cost of education as low as possible."

"Strong student government is a very positive aspect for the University," Swinburne said.

"We have always had good student government here."

SWINBURNE SAID it also helps strengthen the student voice when USO and the Graduate Student Council can arrive at a consensus on issues it faces.

And according to Debbie Brown, GSC president, lately there has "definitely been more cooperation between USO and GSC. The USO has stopped its internal quibbling and that has allowed them to address issues of the two constituency groups.

"I think they have almost always had the impression that they are not as powerful as they really are," Swinburne said. "They do have influence on the administration and the Board of Trustees."

Maulding summed up the quality of instruction at SIU-C. "Southern has a very bad reputation in some of the departments. are developed," he said.

Police also continue to follow leads in their investigation of the murder of SIU professor Sjon Raveed. McNamara said police are trying to locate a suspect in the case who has left the state.

According to police, the investigation is focused in Salem, where Raveed operated a travel agency.

Along with teaching, Raveed, a 35-year-old marketing professor, had numerous business and personal associations around the world. He owned solar companies in Albuquerque, N.M., and Rome. He was also involved in fur exporting from South and Central America and served as a part-time consultant to several national and international businesses and corporations.

Raveed was severely beaten in an Amsterdam hotel room during winter break. McNamara said police suspect a link between that incident and his murder.

Raveed's body was found by his property manager, Brad Kleindl, March 9 in the basement apartment of his home at 412 W. Oak. An autopsy revealed that he had received multiple stab wounds and had been dead several days.

Special Pops gaming for equal chance

By Sandy McCormack
Student Writer

Mary Miller, an SIUC computer science major, dove off a diving board at the Student Recreation Center natatorium recently for the first time. This may not sound like a big achievement, but Mary has cerebral palsy.

Recreation for Special Populations, known as "Special Pops" in the Office of Intramural-Recreation Sports, offers a wide variety of sports programs for students like Mary with physical, visual, hearing or other impairments.

"I think we have the most diverse program in the nation," said Richard DeAngelis, assistant coordinator.

DeAngelis has been coordinator for five years and has worked with the physically disabled for over 15 years.

In 1976, a women's intramurals informal program for the handicapped was linked with a men's wheelchair athletics program to create Special Pops. Wheelchair football and wheelchair bowling were added to the wheelchair basketball and track and field programs.

Programs were introduced that would coincide with the able-bodied world, according to DeAngelis.

By 1980, programs included: wheelchair baseball, soccer, hockey, track and field, archery, weight training, swimming, rappelling, camping, caving, canoeing, riflery, goal ball for the blind, wheelchair bocci and wheelchair races and rallies.

DeAngelis said expansions were made possible by the addition of space in the SRC as well as by the addition of equipment.

Students also became available to run the programs and work with participants.

Academic credit can be obtained by working with Special Populations, according to DeAngelis.

Vicki Lang, student outdoor coordinator for Special Pops, said her work with the participants "allows me to be more creative because we adapt the programs to the particular needs and abilities of the participants."

She said she enjoyed working with the hearing impaired children because she liked finding alternate ways to communicate with them, such as incorporating mime.

However, she said she found the negative attitudes of able-bodied people frustrating.

"It makes me more ambitious to carry out these programs," she said.

Able-bodied participation is encouraged, according to DeAngelis, because it gives the able-bodied an understanding of Special Populations.

"I would like to see more programs designed for both," he said.

He would also like to see an integration of formal programs for the disabled with formal programs for the able-bodied. Many formal activities, according to DeAngelis, do not provide for participation by Special Populations.

Michael Nolan, a student program supervisor, started as a volunteer and now works with Special Pops in charge of building, repairing and maintaining wheelchairs and equipment.

"I know that I'm able-bodied but take it for granted," Nolan said. "I am really thankful I am able to do everything I want to do."

Nolan also works with participants in the weight training and swimming programs. He said they wanted to be physically fit like able-bodied people.

Bon Kirk, a rehabilitation major who is visually impaired, said "Mike gives me flexibility and helped me establish a good routine."

Kirk plays on the Special Pops goal ball team for the visually impaired. Goal ball is much like soccer, except the ball emits a sound so the players know its whereabouts.

"It's an interesting game," said Kirk. "It gives me an opportunity to get back into athletics."

The SRC is specially equipped to accommodate students with visual or physical impairment. Modifications include an elevator that is accessible by using a key, special equipment and machines in the weight room, and a lift on the swimming pool deck for students needing assistance getting into and out of the water.

DeAngelis said that Dean Harvey Welch; Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs; and William Bleyer, director of the SRC, have all been very supportive of Special Pops.

"Mr. Bleyer has been a very strong advocate for making sure the handicapped individual is not left out," DeAngelis said. "We are past the day and age when we can deny the acceptance of a person in a wheelchair," he said.

Illinois Senate to consider property tax multiplier freeze

The Illinois Senate Revenue Committee has approved and sent to the full Senate legislation to freeze the real estate tax multiplier and taxes paid by homeowners.

Senate Bill 1265, sponsored by Sen. Kenneth Buzbee, D-Carbondale, would freeze the multiplier at its 1981 level and prohibit large property tax increases. The multiplier is an equalization factor issued annually by the Department of Revenue to the state's 102 counties so that property assessments are similar throughout Illinois.

"The concept of the multiplier has destroyed any effective use of tax rate limitations to control local government," Buzbee said.

The multiplier has increased dramatically in each Illinois county in five of the last six years. As a result, taxpayers realize dramatic increases in their tax bills even though actual tax rates remain stable, Buzbee added.

Buzbee said the bill puts a ceiling on the multiplier.

Public broadcasting adapts to cuts

By Joe Walter
Staff Writer

Public television in Southern Illinois does not intend "sit around and wait to die," in the face of federal and state government funding cuts, according to Jim Moore, director of the SIU Broadcasting Service.

The Broadcasting Service, which controls WSIU-TV, WSIU-FM and WUSI-TV, will enact new measures to adapt to the new fiscal environment brought about by Reaganomics, Moore said.

Most of the cuts will affect WSIU-TV's sister station, WUSI-TV in Olney, he said. This year, WUSI-TV is working with $317,000 in Community Service Grants from the federally funded Corporation for Public Broadcasting. Next year, WUSI-TV will work with a CSG of $190,000, a cut of $127,000.

But that, Moore said, is only one of several state and federal governmental grants that is being cut. "The Illinois Public Television Grant," he said, "is a direct grant from the governor's office which is disbursed by the comptroller amounting to $90,000. According to the newspapers, the governor is planning to eliminate it."

However, one measure was already taken to make operation at WUSI-TV more

Philosophy junior is first recipient of Schilpp award

Patrick D. Canevello Jr. has received the first Paul Arthur Schilpp Scholarship, a new award honoring superior academic achievement by philosophy students at SIU-C.

Canevello, of Mundelein, a junior, received the award, which carries a $150 cash gift, at a reception at the home of Professor Schilpp, who donated $3,000 to the SIU Foundation to establish an annual scholarship.

Canevello was selected by a panel of philosophy faculty members.

Schilpp was distinguished research professor of philosophy at SIU-C from 1965 until his retirement last year. He is founder of the Library of Living Philosophers and received the Bertrand Russell Society Award in 1980 for his contributions to philosophy.

Professor Schilpp will receive an honorary degree from SIU-C and will give a commencement address at graduation ceremonies Saturday at the Arena.

efficient. Last July, WUSI-TV acquired a UHF transmitter, which is still undergoing installation that should be completed within a few months. The transmitter came from a public television station in Jacksonville that could not use it because "the transmission tower collapsed during an ice storm," Moore said.

The main benefit of the new transmitter is efficiency, Moore said. "It has a much more modern design and will use about one-third less power than the old transmitter." But he said that the new transmitter will compensate for only a portion of the cuts.

To counteract most of the cuts, Moore said, the Broadcasting Service is negotiating with Eastern Illinois Community College to help with the operation of WUSI-TV. That would include letting EICC students obtain broadcasting experience by running the equipment. "But," he said, "that is in the preliminary stage."

Another way to cut costs, Moore said, will be in the way WSIU-TV's signal will be sent to WUSI-TV to be rebroadcast. WSIU-TV's signal travels to a microwaving station in Flora, which is leased by WSIU-TV from a cable television company at the cost of $4,000 a year plus the traveling costs of WSIU-TV personnel. The signal is then fortified and sent to Olney.

Instead, Moore said, the VHF signal sent by WSIU-TV will travel to Olney directly and be picked up directly by WSIU-TV on its antenna and be rebroadcast as a UHF signal. The savings of using this system will be between $8,000 and $10,000 a year, he said.

But cutting costs is not the only way of dealing with funding losses, Moore said. Money can also be raised.

Local businesses can pay for the cost of the television programs broadcast over WSIU-TV and have their names mentioned, Moore said that a local brokerage firm underwrites the cost for "Wall Street Week." WSIU-TV broadcasts televised school courses which are taken for credit by students.

Pro-lifer seeks amendment, knocks 'inadequate' Hatch Bill

By Jennifer Phillips
Student Writer

The Hatch human life amendment, is an inadequate amendment because it "does not give legal personhood to the unborn," according to Wayne Helmer, president of the Carbondale chapter of the Christian Action Council.

The bill, which would allow each state to decide whether to prohibit abortion, is scheduled for discussion on the Senate floor early this summer. Sponsored by Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, it is the first pro-life amendment to get this far in the legislative process.

Helmer, a professor in thermal and environmental engineering at SIU-C, feels abortion is "one of the most significant social issues in America." For that reason, he says, "we have got to get a good amendment through the first time."

Sherry Yassin, member of the National Right to Life and teacher's aide at the Carbondale Special Education Cooperative, says that while the amendment isn't ideal, the pro-life movement should "take what it can get."

Helmer said the Supreme Court was wrong when it ruled abortions legal.

So, while pro-choice movements nationwide recently celebrated the ninth anniversary of that decision, pro-life movements such as CAC and the National Right to Life have continued to battle against it.

"The law is a teacher," Helmer said. "It teaches us if something is acceptable or not." Legalized abortion teaches people they can arbitrarily kill people, Helmer said.

He said that as far as he knows, none of the several human life bills proposed in Congress provide exceptions which would allow abortions in cases in which the health of the mother is jeopardized, the baby will have genetic defects or for pregnancies resulting from rape or incest.

Although CAC has not taken an official stance on these exceptions, Helmer has.

There can't be a broad interpretation of the law or people will take advantage of it, he said.

For example, excluding women whose lives are endangered by pregnancy from an anti-abortion law could be broadly interpreted to exclude a lot of women because every pregnancy involves some risk, he said.

And Yassin does not agree that abortion is a solution for those with physical or emotional handicaps.

"People say it is for the benefit of the baby, who won't have to grow up handicapped. But I work with handicapped people, and abortion is just an easy way out," she said. "People are trying to get rid of a problem they don't want to deal with."

Except when the "true physical health of the mother" is in jeopardy, Helmer and Yassin do not think there should be exceptions in the human life bills.

Helmer said CAC's main functions are to politically advocate and educate people about problems related to pregnancy and abortion and to counsel pregnant women who need financial and emotional help in carrying a child to term.

CAC also presents information on abortion to congressmen and assists them in developing anti-abortion legislation, Helmer said.

Although CAC is not allowed to endorse candidates for public office, the group compares them and presents their voting records on social issues to the public, Helmer said.

CAC also utilizes the media and churches and sends newsletters to people, telling them which congressmen to write in support of the human life legislation, he said.

Yassin also writes to congressmen and encourages other people to do the same, she said. "I am also willing to debate the issue any time. I think people would rather hear both sides at once, and I am always willing to give my view."

It has been said that the pro-lifers are pushing their religious beliefs on society, but Helmer stressed that the pro-life movement is not strictly a religious one.

The problem is, he said, that "there are complaints that religious people don't get involved enough in social issues. Then, when we do, people say we are trying to push our beliefs on society."

Yassin says there are two types of people concerned with the abortion issue. One is the pro-life group, comprised mainly of religious people who cherish human life and feel people must work out problems the best as can. The other group, she said, is concerned with what is best for society.

Outlawed abortion will not happen overnight, he said. "It is part of an elaborate legislative process." The main question to be asked, he said, is, "Is this human life that is being killed?"

"Everyone knows life begins at conception," Helmer said, "but they (pro-choice supporters) rationalize their way out of it."

"Society doesn't condone killing a child after it is born. There is no logic behind being able to kill a child before it is born and not after."

'Poor man's' trip offers chance to join N.Y. anti-nuclear rally

By John Schrag
Staff Writer

If you are concerned about the prospects of nuclear war and have a sleeping bag, a tent and $42 you can take a "poor man's" vacation to New York City and join an expected 300,000 to 500,000 protesters during the second week of June.

Southern Illinoisans for a Nuclear Freeze, a campus- and community-based coalition, is chartering a bus to New York to participate in the five-day demonstration. To be held at the United Nations building, the demonstration's purpose is to protest nuclear proliferation and support nuclear disarmament and human services.

Joe Proffitt, director of the SIU-C Environmental Center, said the demonstration, which will be from June 10 to June 14, is not as much an anti-nuclear protest as it is an effort to promote the redirection of worldwide priorities toward meeting human needs. The event coincides with the first week of the United Nations Conference on Nuclear Disarmament.

Proffitt said a bus will be leaving SIU-C at noon on Thursday, June 10, and returning to Carbondale in time for the first day of summer classes on Monday, June 14.

He said that interested persons must pay in advance for the $42 round-trip bus ride. Seats will be allocated on a first-come, first-serve basis. He said there is room for 40 people on the bus and participants should be able to camp overnight in nearby parks and fields.

"We consider this sort of a poor man's holiday," he said.

Proffitt said people who are interested in joining the group can contact him at the Student Environmental Center, or get in touch with representatives of the Coalition for Change, Women's Environmental Group, Illinois Public Interest Research Group or the Coalition of Progressive Social Scientists.

Proffitt said the protest is not aimed strictly against the United States, but rather against all five countries that develop nuclear weapons. The United States, England, France, China and the Soviet Union are the five countries known to be producing nuclear weapons.

A highlight of the week's activities will be a rally on Saturday, June 12, during which anti-nuclear supporters such as Father Daniel Berrigan, Jane Fonda and Robert Redford are expected to speak and various musicians will perform in front of the U.N. building.

DE appoints new summer, fall editors

By Miriam Adolphson
Staff Writer

They're moving up the ladder, from Daily Egyptian reporters to editors-in-chief. You may not see their bylines, but they will do more work for the paper as editors than they ever did as writers.

Christopher Kade, 24, senior in journalism, will be the student editor-in-chief for summer 1982. Vicki Olgeaty, 20, also a senior in journalism will be editor for fall 1982.

This will be Kade's fourth semester with the Daily Egyptian, having worked as a copy editor in spring 1981, editorial page editor fall 1981 and reporter covering city government this semester.

The only applicant for the position, Kade says he was nevertheless pleased to get the job.

"I'm looking forward to running the show even though it's only for eight weeks," Kade said. "I'd like to help the new staff members enjoy what they're doing and get better at it at the same time."

Kade says he hopes to graduate this summer, but says it is not unlikely he'll be here in the fall.

Olgeaty says she, too, is looking forward to her new position this fall.

"The whole staff is going to be new this summer and fall, so I'll be doing a lot to help people adjust and learn," she said.

Olgeaty, the first female editor-in-chief since fall 1980, doesn't think being female will change how she does the job.

"Everybody has their own perspective. But I do hope to balance minority coverage and I'm particularly concerned with localizing events," she said.

Olgeaty plans to graduate in May 1983 and hopes to get a job on a medium-size newspaper.

Olgeaty has been with the Daily Egyptian for three semesters as a general assignment reporter and as associate editorial page editor this spring.

Programs offer improved math, reading

Programs designed to improve skills in reading or math will be offered this summer by the Carbondale New School.

The program is open to students of all ages. Participants do not have to be regularly enrolled in the New School.

Instructional procedures in both cases will be based on diagnostic assessment of individual strengths and weaknesses, according to Tony Ianno of the school's staff.

Math lessons will provide students with practical applications using manipulative aids and environmental education. Reading lessons will focus on using language strategies to improve comprehension, Ianno said.

Costs of the programs vary. Registration information is available from the school at 457-4765.

Women to get 'taste' of engineering

By Dean Kirk
Student Writer

Southern Illinois high school junior and senior girls who are considering majoring in engineering won't have to wait until they enter college to find out what it's like.

Thanks to SIU-C's College of Engineering and Technology's Women's Introduction to Engineering program, they'll get a short-course this summer.

"The one-week program will give participants a picture of engineering as a profession and, at the same time, expose them to diverse intellectual challenges at the college level," said Echol E. Cook, the college's assistant dean and program director.

The subject matter includes mathematics, engineering problems, lectures on engineering, engineering experience, individual and library research and general orientation.

These courses are taught by two to three faculty members from the college's departments of electrical sciences and systems engineering, engineering mechanics and materials, and thermal and environmental engineering. Katherine Pederson, a faculty member in mathematics, teaches the mathematics part of the program.

Ten to 15 participants plan on attending this year's program, scheduled for July 11 to 17.

Cook said he and Kenneth E. Tempelmeyer, the dean of the college, originated the program, which is a branch of the Junior Engineering Technical Society program.

Last year was the first time the program was held, and seven women participated.

Cook said only three other universities in the country — Tri-State University in Angola, Ind., the New Jersey Institute of Technology and the Milwaukee

School of Engineering — have introductory programs similar to SIU-C's

About 30 percent of the program's costs are paid by students. 65 percent by participating companies and the remainder by the college. The fee for participants is $60.

This year's program will cost $3,000, twice as much as last year's.

None of last year's participants are among the women currently enrolled in the college, Cook said.

'Solar Turkey' clinic to be held

A "Solar Turkey" prevention night will be held at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the Shawnee Solar Energy Center, 808 S. Forest Ave.

"Solar Turkeys" are the result of insufficient attention given to the special needs of solar design and construction, according to energy specialists at the Shawnee Solar Project.

The center, in attempting to prevent bad projects from being built, will offer free solar design assistance during the session. Residents who are thinking of "going solar" can have their plans reviewed without charge. Participants are asked to bring drawings, plans and questions to the meeting.

J-Board denies Sting Party hearing on election charges

By Lyndall Caldwell
Staff Writer

The Campus Judicial Board for Governance has decided not to hear cases charging that election violations were committed by Dave Williams, election commissioner, Todd Rogers, Undergraduate Student Organization president, and Jerry Cook, USO president-elect, and decided that the election was not bound by state and federal election guidelines.

John Stewart, chief jurist, said, "There is definitely a problem with the post-election complaints that the Board has heard for the past few years." According to Stewart, the complaints have been concerned not with actual violations, "but things that candidates believe to be against

USO laws."

Stewart recommended that in the future, candidates be issued copies of the USO Constitution and bylaws.

The complaints were filed by Sting Party members Don Burk, former Sting Party vice presidential write-in candidate, and Sen. Lamont Brantley.

Burk complained about the polling process, fingerprints on the ballots and voter solicitation in violation of state and federal election law limits.

He also charged that Williams was negligent in informing the Sting Party that its presidential candidate was ineligible to run for office and thus eliminated the party's chance to get a new executive ticket on the ballot.

Brantley, too, complained of fingerprints on ballots and electioneering that violated state and federal election law limits.

Brantley also charged Jerry Cook, USO president-elect, with "blatant interference with the will of certain voters." Brantley said Cook told people to spell the last name of Glenn Stolar wrong so that the ballots would not count. Stolar was the Sting Party presidential write-in candidate.

Staff Council ballots due by Friday

Administrative and professional staff members will decide on representatives to the AP Staff Council in six administrative areas. Ballots must be returned to James E. Scales, career counseling, in Woody Hall B-204 no later than Friday.

Candidates from academic affairs are: John Holmes, radio and television; Roland Keim, admissions and records; Charles Klasek, international education; Atlas Laster Jr., general academic programs; and Phillip Lindberg, continuing education.

Others are Dan H. Martin, College of Business Administration; Rita Moss, School of Law; Chris Pretkel, academic affairs; Mary Jane Sullivan, continuing education; and Harriet Wilson, admissions and records.

Bill Potter is running unopposed in the financial area.

Candidates in student affairs include: Thomas Allen, Office of Student Development; Ralph Arnold, career counseling; Harley Bradshaw and Jean Paratore, both of student affairs; and Will Travelstead, student life.

School of Medicine candidates are: Lynn Webb, patient and clinical services; and John Williams, School of Medicine.

University relations candidates are: Charles Daugherty, communication services; and James O'Dell III, external affairs.

Neil Dillard is running unopposed in general area.

Seniors Moran, Schulz reach final stretch of track careers

By Ken Perkins
Staff Writer

Leaving anything worthwhile behind is never easy. That's probably why senior athletes get a little impatient when they realize the bulk of their collegiate careers is all of a sudden behind them.

It's that intense anticipation of knowing the end is near that they can do without.

It isn't strange or new and no one can take it personally because it happens to thousands of athletes around the country. It was that way for many Saluki trackmen in the past, greats like Ivory Crockett, Bob Roggy and David Lee — who lived up to Saluki tradition and made marks in a sport in which an athlete has to be world class or close to it to be recognized.

But track and field has flourished because of the Roggys, Lees and other world-class athletes, who all remember how it was when they were collegians. And they wouldn't trade the experience for a new pair of Adidas spikes.

They were the ones who put in the day-to-day workouts and gave 150 percent to a sport that calls for high production for the sake of minimal rewards.

But the hard work is what makes an athlete great, and what makes Saluki seniors Karsten Schulz and Bill Moran even greater. Neither would mind being world-class competitors, or even the subject of a cover story in Track and Field News.

But the two are satisfied with their careers, and will always be proud of their accomplishments. It's been a good four years for the pair who ran in from different states with similar goals to a town they had trouble finding on the map.

Bill Moran

Moran blew in from Riverdale with a winning background in track and big expectations of having similar success in Carbondale. His high school career at Thornton Township has the makings of a Hollywood script. He was a member of the fourth-best team in the state, which won the two-mile relay in the record time of 7:35.

Thornton's superb cross-country team, led by Moran, was ranked first in the state. By the time he came to Carbondale, he was spoiled and knew one way or the other he had to be part of a winner.

Moran has been consistent in the way he's lacked individual honors but yet done yeoman's work in team performances.

His four consecutive appearances at the NCAA Division I Cross-Country Championships have been marvelous, his contributions to four Illinois collegiate track titles and to seven Missouri Valley Conference championships, superb.

But all that doesn't seem to matter now. Moran realizes his collegiate career is coming to an end.

"It's weird," said Moran, who may be running his final meet as a Saluki Saturday at the MVC championships. "It went so fast. Seems like I just got here. I wish I could stick around for a while."

Moran had his days, and though it doesn't compensate for instant gratification, he's clinging to those memories

"I remember," he said, "when the cross-country team finished 11th in the nation. Now that was something to remember."

It's true that it was never dull for Moran, or for Schulz, who made it a ritual to get people up on their feet when he competed in the 1,500 run. When Schulz ran, people listened, and clapped, and showed their appreciation for a runner who never gave up, a runner who cursed himself when he didn't give over 100 percent, a runner who will leave Carbondale as the second-fastest 1,500 competitor in SIU-C history.

"It will be difficult to replace such a competitor, such a fine person," said Coach Lew Hartzog, who saw Schulz grow from a slim, timid freshman to a strong, confident leader.

"He is invaluable to this team," said Hartzog. "As a person, I don't think he could have given any more."

And that was Schulz's trademark. Giving all he had even when he didn't have it or when the time wasn't right.

He gave it his all to qualify for the NCAA nationals in cross country four times, indoor track three times and outdoor track in two events last year.

Now tired and absorbed, Schulz is closing out his four years as an SIU-C trackman.

There are other seniors on the team, such as Randy Geary and Chris Scott, but neither has been through four rugged years wearing the same maroon and white.

Neither Moran or Schulz became superstars, but that's alright, they said. They know that when former athletes start swapping old stories, they won't be at a loss for words.

Rend Lake Festival run set

A 10,000-meter run is scheduled as part of the Rend Lake Water Festival on Saturday, May 22. Registration deadline is this Saturday.

The 6.2 mile run, sponsored by Taylor Motor Co. in Benton, will begin at 9 a.m. in Benton Community Park. A "fun run" will take place in addition to the main race.

Awards will be presented to division winners in various age categories for men and women. A traveling trophy will be presented to the winners of a new team competition.

Entry forms can be obtained by sending a self-addressed envelope to John Metzger, race director, Taylor Motor Co., Route 37 North, Benton. A form will be returned by mail. Advance registration is $4. Fun runners are not required to register.

record of 50, and Coach Stephenson plans to toss him against the Salukis Friday. Brown is out with a shoulder injury, but may be used in relief. Stephenson said the Shockers have "outstanding relief pitching" and a staff ERA slightly over two.

"We have better pitching and defense than in the past. We don't live-and-die by the long ball. I believe this club can win the national championship," he said.

The Shockers were 7-1 against Creighton — 4-0 in Valley play — and haven't met the Salukis or Sycamores this season.

CREIGHTON

The Bluejays are in the midst of their best season ever. They were 32-20 before Tuesday's action at Oral Roberts and finished 4-4 in the Valley. Last year they set an all-time Creighton win record when they were 37-30.

Second-year Coach David Underwood couldn't be reached Tuesday. Sports Information Director Ron Paradis said the Jays' strength lies in their hitting.

"The only team who hits better than us in the Valley is Wichita. Our team batting average is .323. We set a school record of .316 last year," he said.

Center fielder Dave Schrage leads the team with a .421 average. He is followed by second baseman Doug Palmer, .369; third baseman Donald Montgomery, .359 and outfielder-first baseman Mike Finley, .357.

Creighton has problems on the mound, according to Paradis. He said the Jays' pitchers "have not been overly impressive."

Tom Traen, 6-3, has the team's best ERA of 4.01. He's followed by fellow starters Brian Coolignon, 6-2, 4.11 ERA, and Mark Henkels, 4-1, 4.57 ERA.

"We obviously are able to hit the ball well," said Paradis. He added that Creighton split four games with No. 6 Nebraska.

Creighton went 1-9 in Hawaii to open the season and is 31-11 since then. The Bluejays have not met either SIU-C or Indiana State this year.

INDIANA STATE

Saluki Coach Jones has called the Sycamores "the best hitting team in the East" several times this season.

"Indiana State has good pitching, swings the bats well and has good power," said Jones Tuesday.

The Sycamores proved they could get good pitching when they needed it this past weekend.

Illinois State visited Terre Haute for a four-game set which closed both teams' Valley schedule. Both were 4-4 and a game behind the first-place Salukis at 7-5. One of the teams had to sweep the four games to win the Eastern Division and the right to host the tournament. Coach Bob Warn's Sycamores did just that, allowing the Redbirds just four runs in 28 innings.

Warn, in his seventh year as coach, had a 201-124-3 career record at ISU entering this season. The Sycamores won the MVC and went to the NCAA West Regional in 1979. Warn was named the Valley's coach-of-the-year that season.

The Salukis and Sycamores split a four-game Valley series in Terre Haute two weeks ago. The Sycamores took three-of-four games in a non-conference series in Carbondale in April. The Sycamore pitchers tossed three complete game victories at SIU-C in that series.

Roadrunner wins Herrin Biathlon

Craig Mergins, president of the Roadrunners Club, won the Herrin Biathlon with a time of 1 hour, 25 minutes, 5 seconds over the weekend.

In the biathlon, the 27 participants rode bicycles 15 miles, then ran for 6.2 miles.

Scott March of the Roadrunners finished fourth with a time of 1:25.52.

SIU-C students Pearl Cabrera and Sue Cahill took the top two spots in the women's division in 1:34.43 and 1:43.5, respectively.

triple jump, but may compensate in the 400-intermediate hurdles by "super duo" Sam Nyosu and Brent Barth, as well as in the distance events with Mike Keane, Bill Moran, Tom Ross, Tom Breen and Karsten Schulz.

Schulz will get a chance to meet Drake's Chris Mares, a longtime adversary in the 1500-meter run. The pair faced each other last year at the Drake Relays where Mares nosed out Schulz in a controversial finish. But Schulz returned the favor at this year's Drake Relays by being on the winning end.

Elgin native Adams will have to live up to his pre-meet prediction of running a 46-second 400-meter dash, because West Texas State's Earl Wilson leads the field with a blazing 45.8.

Defending his 400 title will be a job within itself for the sophomore, who has been clocked at 46.1, but hasn't had a tough competitor in that event since Indiana's Sunder Nix nipped him at the tape in Carbondale.

Franks and Marvin Hinton will have equal competition in the 100- and 200-meter dashes.

than not have come up with a win thanks to good relief pitching, defense or smart base running.

THE SALUKIS AREN'T known for their power, but instead play a scrappy brand of baseball which involves hitting behind the runner, stealing whenever they can, and sacrificing runners around the diamond. The formula works well when mixed with top-notch pitching and defense, and has netted the Salukis a 30-18 record.

Ichy Jones is another big plus in SIU-C's corner. Every player I've talked to has cited him as the main reason they chose to attend SIU-C. The "man" has forgotten more about baseball than most coaches could learn in a lifetime. With Jones at the helm and Assistant Coach Jerry Green in charge of the pitchers, the Salukis know they have quality leadership.

Sorry, Coach Stephenson, but I'll have to disagree with you. It may come as a shock, but SIU-C will again reign as the Valley champ.

Baseball crown, regional bid are targets of 4 Valley teams

By Steve Metsch
Sports Editor

Saluki baseball Coach Itchy Jones won't predict the winner of the Missouri Valley Conference tournament this weekend, because he thinks "anyone can win it."

"Wichita State will probably be favored to win the tournament, but they won't be a shoe-in," said Jones. "What a team did yesterday doesn't mean a thing today. Everybody starts at 0-0."

The top two teams from the Valley's Eastern and Western divisions will play in the double-elimination tournament in Terre Haute, Ind. Indiana State and second-place SIU-C represent the East. Wichita State, the West's champ, and Creighton are the other two teams. The Valley champ receives an automatic bid to one of the NCAA regional tournaments.

The Salukis open against Wichita State Friday. The Shockers went 8-0 in the Valley and 62-11 overall. SIU-C was 7-5 in the Valley and 30-18 overall.

Junior right-hander Ken Klump, 5-4, will start against the Shockers, whom Jones said are "comparable to last year's team."

The Salukis defeated the Shockers two games to one for the MVC championship last year in Wichita, Kan., with Klump winning the title-clincher, 3-0. The old playoff system pitted the two division winners against each other.

Jones said the Salukis may be a bit more pumped up than usual because of the importance of each game.

"They know if they lose two games, the season will be over," he said. "We have very competitive kids who know what they have to do."

One thing SIU-C will have to do, according to Jones, is generate a bit more offense.

"Our pitchers will give up a few more runs since they'll be facing better teams. We'll have to get more offense and good pitching, and play sound defense."

Jones wasn't sure who would start game two Saturday, saying it depended on whether SIU-C faced Creighton or Indiana State.

Third baseman Mike Robertson has recovered from a groin pull and is ready to play, said Jones. Freshman hurler Tom Johnson has "some tenderness in his right elbow," and may not make the trip.

Jones said he doubts Indiana State will have any home-field advantage since the spring semester has ended. He noted that the Sycamores had a slim crowd when the Salukis last played there two weeks ago. He said the tournament will "just be team against team," and added that "you never know what will happen."

The following is a preview of the Salukis' three opponents in the tourney:

WICHITA STATE

Coach Gene Stephenson has a good memory. He can't forget last year, when the Salukis came back from a 23-4 pasting in game one to twice beat the favored Shockers and win the Valley championship.

'We have a score to settle with the Salukis.'

—Wichita coach

"Last year is going to be a factor," he said. "We have a score to settle with the Salukis and look forward to playing them. We are happy to be facing them in the first round."

Awesome is the best word to describe the Shockers.

They won the Western Division easily and are ranked No. 3 in the nation by the All-American Baseball News. They also took two-of-three games from No. 1 Arizona State in Wichita over the weekend.

The Shockers are led by first-team All-America first baseman Phil Stephenson, who has hit 21 homers, knocked in 105 runs and is batting a Valley-leading .422.

Coach Stephenson, Phil's brother, calls the first baseman "the best base runner in college baseball," and rightly so. Stephenson is 82-2 in stolen-base attempts, hasn't been caught in his last 60 tries, and owns the national career and single-season stolen base records. WSU has stolen more than 290 bases as a team.

Stephenson bats third in the lineup, and is followed by two more heavy hitters — Russ Morman and Charlie O'Brien. Morman has 20 homers and 106 RBI, and O'Brien has 19 homers and over 90 RBI.

The Shockers don't only rely on power. Their pitching staff has also racked up some impressive statistics. Don Heinkel is 14-3, Erik Sonberg 13-3, Bryan Oelkers 13-2, and Stan Brown 11-0.

Heinkel is one win away from the national collegiate career

Saluki games on radio

WCIL radio, 1020 AM, has announced it will broadcast all of the Salukis' Valley tournament games from Sycamore Field in Terre Haute, Ind. this weekend.

The Salukis will open the tourney against Wichita State at 11 a.m. Friday. Should they beat the Shockers, they will advance to the winners' bracket and play the Indiana State-Creighton winner at 3 p.m. Saturday.

If SIU-C wins that game, it will next play at 3 p.m. Sunday. The Salukis will play Monday at 1 p.m. only if their first loss occurs Sunday. If they are 3-0 after Sunday's play, they will be the Valley champ.

The Salukis would fall into the losers' bracket if the Shockers beat them Friday. They would then play the loser of the Indiana State-Creighton game at 11 a.m. Saturday.

If SIU-C again loses Saturday, they would be eliminated from the tournament. Should they win, they would next play Sunday at 11 a.m.

If SIU-C wins Sunday morning, it will again play at 3 p.m. Sunday. If SIU-C wins Sunday's afternoon contest, it would then play Monday at 1 p.m. for the Valley title.

Hartzog's men gearing up for 8th MVC title

By Ken Perkins
Staff Writer

Nobody's perfect. And that's why the men's track and field team will lose a Missouri Valley Conference track championship one of these days.

But don't tell that to Coach Lew Hartzog. He won't listen.

"Losing this meet has never even entered my mind," said Hartzog, whose Salukis will travel to Wichita, Kan., to defend their MVC title Friday and Saturday.

"Never have we went into a meet with a bad attitude, and that is the only thing that can beat us. All we have to do is our best, which is what we've been doing all year. We're ready to go."

SIU-C has won each MVC meet every year since the championships' inception in 1975. Since then, no MVC team has come close to beating the Salukis, indoor or outdoor, and the only excitement left is wondering just when that day will come.

"That's something that you just don't think about," said Hartzog. "For all I'm concerned, we can win it every year from now on."

The young Salukis may do just that. Coming off a thrashing of state rival Illinois last week, the tracksters' nearest competition may be from Wichita State, according to Hartzog.

"I would have to feel that Wichita State will be the team to beat at the meet," said Hartzog. "They are at home and pretty strong in certain areas."

The area that concerns Hartzog is the field events. WSU will be strong in both the shot put and discus with Phil Counce, as well as in the javelin. WSU also sports a 7-4 high jumper, and will be tough in the long jump, hurdles and distance events.

Hartzog's ammunition will be in the form of John Smith, David Featherston, Tom Smith and John Marks in the weight events, John Sayre and Andy Geiger in the pole vault, Terry Taylor and Kevin Baker in the long jump, Gavin Harshberger in the triple jump and Stephen Wray in the high jump.

Parry Duncan is the favorite in the 110-meter high hurdles and will join Randy Geary, Tony Adams and Mike Franks in the 1600-meter relay, where the toughest competition may come from Indiana State, which has clocked in at 3:07. The Salukis, at 3:04, lead the field.

SIU-C will come up short in both the 800-meter run and

Saluki nine are ready for Wichita's challenge

Instead of reviewing the Saluki sports' highlights of the past school year, I'd rather take a closer look at the future of one of SIU-C's teams in this, my last column as sports editor of the Daily Egyptian.

I'd like to examine that hitless wonder, the Saluki baseball team as it prepares for play in the Missouri Valley Conference tournament at Terre Haute, Ind. this weekend.

Besides having to play in one of the country's most boring cities, the Salukis will face a tough battle in their attempt to defend their Valley championship.

SIU-C doesn't get an easy start, having to open the tourney Friday against the 62-11 Wichita State Shockers, a team which could probably sweep a three-game set from the Chicago Cubs.

Shockers, like elephants, never forget. They can't help but recall last year's Valley playoffs, when the Salukis traveled to Wichita, Kan. and won two-of-three games for the Valley title.

This season, Wichita Coach Gene Stephenson vows to get revenge and settle the score with SIU-C.

Sound pretty scary? Don't worry. The Shockers' bark is a lot worse than their bite.

LAST YEAR, AFTER WSU won the first playoff game, 23-4, or of the Shockers was quoted in the Wichita papers as wondering why the Salukis didn't just catch the next flight to Carbondale. The Salukis caught that flight two days later, with the Valley trophy tightly in their grasp.

If SIU-C beats Wichita Friday, they will have the fun time facing either Indiana State or Creighton, two teams which enjoying the stuffing out of the ball and often do.

The Salukis, on the other hand, have spent most of the season giving clinics on how not to hit the baseball. Their pitching and defense have been outstanding, but until recently their offense has been anemic at best.

How then, you may ask, can the Salukis possibly have a chance to win the Valley?

It's simple. The Salukis have heart.

They believe in themselves and their ability to play well under pressure. And they have Coach Itchy Jones in their dugout.

They've been in many close games this season, and more often
