Housing rates will probably go up next year

By Andrew Strang
Staff Writer

On-campus housing rates for Brush Towers, Thompson Point and University Park will probably increase next year by $100 per semester.

In addition, proposed rate increases at Southern Hills, Evergreen Terrace, Small Group Housing, Elizabeth Street Apartments and University Courts range from 11.2 percent to 16.5 percent.

Housing Director Sam Rinella, who will explain the proposed price hikes to the Student Senate at its Wednesday meeting, said Tuesday the increases are needed to meet rising costs due to inflation and to pay for equipment and several special projects relating to University Housing.

Housing will receive $1,191,000 from the proposed rate increase, according to a report prepared by the University Housing staff. Based on proposed expenditures, Housing would have a $1,191,000 deficit at the end of fiscal year 1983 if the increase is not approved, Rinella said.

Rinella said the increase will probably be approved by the Board of Trustees, which must approve any Housing rate changes.

The report projected that inflation would drive up the cost of utilities by 19.9 percent, food and maintenance by 10 percent, salaries by 9.5 percent and administrative costs by 8 percent.

In addition to covering costs due to inflation, the increase would also provide Housing with $596,000 for special projects and $202,700 for equipment, the report said.

The special projects costs include $160,000 to replace the roofs of eight Thompson Point dormitories, $70,000 to carpet several dorm hallways and $35,000 to improve outdoor lighting at most Housing areas, according to the report.

Another $3,000 will be spent to replace the sundeck seating on the tops of the towers, and $1,000 will be spent to build a redwood fence around a Thompson Point head resident assistant's apartment, the report said.

According to the report, University Housing rates will be affected by the increases in the following manner:

—University Park, Thompson Point and Brush Towers rates will increase 11.65 percent, from $1,962 per academic year to $2,224.

—Evergreen Terrace will increase 11.2 percent to 11.3 percent, increasing the rates from a monthly range of $221 to $241 to a range of $246 to $266.

—Southern Hills rate increases will range from 11.5 percent, increasing the monthly rent from a range of $175 to $200 to a range of $195 to $222.

—Elizabeth Street Apartments will increase 15.5 percent, from $900 to $227.

—University Courts will increase 15.91 percent, from $220 to $255 per month.

—Small Group Housing building rates will increase 16.5 percent, from $30,030 per year to $35,000.

Revised city energy proposal calls for three-year plan

By John Schrag,
Staff Writer

Conflicts often end in compromises, and such was the case with the two energy plans considered by Carbondale.

The city administration's revised energy plan—expected to be adopted at next week's City Council meeting—is more comprehensive than the original administration plan, but less ambitious than the proposal made by the Shawnee Solar Project.

The revised administration proposal, endorsed by the City Council at its informal meeting Monday, calls for a three-year, $671,422 energy plan featuring an energy education program, home energy audits and a low-interest loan fund to help low-income residents make conservation improvements. Shawnee Solar proposed a more comprehensive five-year $2.65 million program, funded by a temporary 3 percent utilities tax.

The administration's original three-year, $378,000 proposal did not include a loan program and was a source of controversy in the local energy debate, which has been ongoing for nearly six months. Critics claimed that low-interest loans are needed for low-income residents who want to take energy conservation measures.

The new plan calls for $150,000 to be set aside during each of the next two fiscal years for a loan program available to low-income residents unable to secure a loan through private lending institutions.

City Manager Carroll Fry said the city's Loan and Grant Review Board could determine who would qualify for the loans. He also proposed a $50,000 yearly budget for an energy improvement grant program for families where the head of the household is disabled or over 65 years old.

The money for the loan and grant program, if adopted, would come from the Community Development Block Grants fund. Fry said such a diversion of money should be acceptable to the Department of Housing and Urban

Board to consider shortened workweek

By David Murphy
Staff Writer

The Board of Trustees will consider a resolution to allow the SIU system to establish a 37½-hour workweek next year at its meeting in Edwardsville Thursday.

The resolution would authorize the presidents of SIU-C and SIU-E to establish a standard workweek of not less than 37½ hours on or after July 1, 1982. Such a plan would be subject to the approval of Chancellor Kenneth Shaw.

The shortened workweek was a major point of contention in contract negotiations between the University and the Civil Service Bargaining Organization earlier this year, causing a three week breakdown in negotiations.

University officials said switching to the shorter workweek this year would cost the University an unaffordable $200,000. Chief CSBO negotiator H. Lee Hester called that figure a "fantasy."

The contract, which was signed Oct. 23, left the issue "in limbo," according to Hester.

"According to the contract, any changes made in policies while the contract is in effect will become effective immediately," Hester said.

The contract expires June 30, 1982.

Reasons given for adopting the resolution include improved employee moral, and reducing inequities in compensation between University employees and those of the State Department of Personnel, who already have the shorter workweek.

Also, in the face of predicted limited growth in revenue in coming years, the shorter workweek would provide an increase in the University's ability to offer non-cash benefits to employees.

All public universities in Illinois except SIU and the University of Illinois have adopted a 37½-hour workweek.

City may overrule state law

Bikes may be 'streets only'

By John Schrag
Staff Writer

What's good for Illinois isn't necessarily good for Carbondale.

So concluded the Carbondale City Council after a public hearing on the city's proposed bikeway network Monday night. At issue is a recently-passed state law allowing bicycle travel on sidewalks, which conflicts with the city's present bike ordinance.

The state law, which goes into effect Jan. 1, also conflicts with the goals of the proposed expansion of the city's bikeway network, according to the city and the residents who spoke at the hearing.

The Council, which will vote on the subject next Monday, was unanimous in their agreement that bikes should be prohibited from Carbondale sidewalks.

James Rayfield, city planning director, said a staff committee which studied sidewalk biking concluded that permitting bike riding on Carbondale sidewalks poses a "very big problem."

Some of those problems were outlined by speakers who addressed the Council.

Kevin Budd, former president of the SIU-C Cycle Club, said there already is a "dangerous" situation in Carbondale, and allowing sidewalk biking would increase the problem.

"We have a lot of people who ride bikes here, and a lot of those people leave what I call a pedestrian mentality," he said. "They think that the shortest distance between two points is a straight line, and ride over sidewalks and up the wrong way of a one-way street to get there."

Budd said many local cyclists "break traffic laws as a matter of routine," and that stricter enforcement of bicycle laws might change the views of many car drivers who think cyclists should stay on sidewalks.

He said allowing bikes on sidewalks also "detracts from the credibility of cycling as an alternative form of transportation by lowering bicycles to the same level as toys."

Lynn Irons, also a member of the cycle club, giving other examples of the hazards of sidewalk biking, said that properly maintained bicycles are virtually silent and that pedestrians on sidewalks are often unaware of cyclists coming up from behind. He said this problem is worse for elderly and handicapped persons, who can't react or move quickly.

Reagan pledges to 'stand fast,' says economy faces hard times

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said Tuesday the Republic faces "hard times for the next few months" but vowed to stand fast on his economic program and veto any bill that exceeds his budget.

Reagan, assailed by Senate Democrats as a president promoting the "Hoover nonsense that prosperity is just around the corner," said recovery would come by spring or summer. And he shrugged off those critics as politicians trying to blame him for the mess they created.

The president, in his fifth nationally broadcast news conference, conceded it is unlikely that he can meet his goal of balancing the budget by 1984, however.

But he said he was determined to keep the government headed toward the elimination of deficit spending, saying it "must stiffen its spine and not throw in the towel."

On that score, he complained that "federal spending is still rising far too rapidly" despite the $35 billion in budget cuts approved earlier in the year by Congress. And he promised to veto any bill that exceeds his spending targets and "abuses the limited resources of the taxpayers."

On the foreign policy front, Reagan repeated an earlier comment that stirred an uproar in Europe, saying he still believes it is possible that there might be a battlefield exchange of nuclear weapons without triggering global war.

And he insisted that despite reports of disarray and discord among his top foreign and defense advisers. "There is no bickering or backstabbing going on.... We are a very happy group."

Reagan said he would delay until January the $3 billion in tax increases and $2 billion in benefit cuts that he had sought this year, but he will ask Congress to make them effective in late 1982. Reagan added he still wanted Congress to pass this year the 12-percent cuts in non-defense spending that he proposed in September.

Noting that his economic program has been in effect for 40 days, Reagan said, "You can't cure 40 years of problems in that short time." But he contended he had set the foundation for recovery in 1982.

Though some of Reagan's advisers have urged him to raise taxes to make up at least some of the deficit, the president said he will not decide that issue until January.

The president also signaled there may be some changes ahead in the Medicaid program, contending that levying a charge on those who use the program may discourage "overuse."

Health and Human Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker, under orders from Budget Director David Stockman to cut $9 billion from his 1983 budget, has suggested cuts of $2.9 billion in Medicare and $600 million in Medicaid to the White House.

Reagan said they are options that he will consider, but he pledged to make sure they would not "hurt people we don't want to hurt."

Senator's expulsion debate set

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate leaders said Tuesday they plan to have the Senate begin debating on Dec. 3 whether to make Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr. the first senator expelled since the Civil War.

Williams, a New Jersey Democrat who has been in the Senate for nearly 23 years, said he planned to fight the expulsion recommendation, which arose from his involvement in the government's Abcam investigation.

Columbia countdown moving 'easily'

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — With their second-chance countdown moving easily to a Thursday launch target, astronauts Joe Engle and Richard Truly arrived Tuesday and said, firmly and hopefully, "this is the real thing."

Countdown began at 7 a.m. CST Tuesday, and on launch pad 39A, work was going so well that spokesman Hugh Harris said: "They're making it look easy." Crews powered up Columbia's electrical system fuel cells and prepared to roll back the main servicing structure.

The undercurrent to the rosy progress and optimistic forecast was the knowledge that everything was glass-smooth, too, until the final minutes of last Wednesday's countdown.

It's almost criminal how people go for my Pilot Finesline. Why? It's fine point writes through carbons. And Pilot charges only 79¢ for it. People get their hands on it and forget it's not pen. I got no pen. And no respect.

People go nuts over my Pilot Razor Point too. It writes with an extra fine line. Its metal collar helps keep the point from going south. For only 89¢ they should buy their own pen—and show some respect for my property.

Council to hold public hearing on proposed amusement tax

By Bob Bonduant
Staff Writer

The Carbondale City Council has decided that a proposed amusement tax is too controversial to approve without public input.

The Council at its meeting Monday agreed to hold a hearing Dec. 7 to receive input from residents on the taxation method to be taken to retire bonds on a 464-space downtown parking garage proposed for the east side of South Illinois Avenue, between Elm and Walnut streets.

One of the authors of a report on the non-property taxation alternatives, Frank Moreno, outlined its findings to the City Council.

The report, called "comprehensive" by Mayor Hans Fischer, outlines the amount of revenue which could be raised by taxing receipts from lodging, eating and drinking establishments and other amusements. A 1 percent tax would yield $312,820 annually, the report said.

However, Moreno told the Council that an error had been made in the calculation of possible revenue from lodging sources and that the city could expect only $251,613.

The report said a tax rate of between 1 and 2 percent would be enough to finance the debts from the bond sale. However, the City Council decided to consider all possible alternatives before imposing a property tax.

The report said that an annual debt service of approximately $590,000 was expected on bonds sold for the parking garage.

To meet the debt, the report anticipates an income of $250,000 from parking garage revenue, with the remainder coming from some form of taxation.

Fischer and City Manager Carroll Fry discussed who would be paying the amusement tax.

"I know where the greatest burden is going to be placed here, and it seems to me it's going to be placed on non-property owners," Fischer said.

Fry said that the lion's share of the income from the tax should come from people "who come in from out of town to events, or crowds of people coming down here for some reason."

Civil Service to receive raises

In their Nov. 25 paychecks, SIUC civil service employees will begin receiving the raises for which the Civil Service Bargaining Organization negotiated.

According to Warren Buffum, vice president for financial affairs, the checks will cover the pay period ending Nov. 15 and will include raises retroactive to July 1, when the old contract expired.

Dues-paying CSBO members on Sept. 29 ratified the new contract which distributes raises to employees on the basis of years of service. The agreement was signed by the University and CSBO officials Oct. 22.

Woman wins civil suit against tire company

A Creal Springs woman whose husband was killed when a tire rim exploded and ripped a hole in his chest was awarded $500,000 in a $2 million civil suit for the 1974 death of her husband.

A Williamson County jury Monday evening gave $500,000 to Kathy Robertson Hearn and her daughter, Demita Jo, in the 1976 negligence suit against General Tire and Rubber Co., based in Akron, Ohio.

Hearn's attorney, Gordon Lambert, said that Thomas Robertson was killed while replacing lug bolts in a loose wheel of a roof bolting machine at Peabody Coal Co.'s Eagle Mine near Shawneetown.

General Tire's attorney, J. C. Mitchell of Marion, said that Robertson was negligent for using a torch to cut the lug bolts and for not deflating the tire at the outset.

The jury found for Hearn on the negligence count, but reduced the original amount from $750,000 to $500,000 because of a degree of contributory negligence by her husband.

Woman charged with manslaughter

A Carbondale woman was charged Tuesday with voluntary manslaughter in Jackson County Circuit Court in connection with a fatal shooting that occurred in Carbondale early Monday morning.

Sherry A. Garrett, 39, of 422 N. Marion St., is scheduled for a preliminary hearing on Dec. 3 at 2:30 p.m. in connection with the shooting of Helen Pugh, 38, of the same address.

Carbondale police were called to Miss Garrett's trailer at 3:07 a.m. Monday and found Miss Pugh shot to death. Police had been called to the trailer by a witness whose identity is not being released.

Jackson County Coroner Don Ragsdale said Miss Pugh had been shot four times with a small-caliber revolver. Miss Garrett was picked up for questioning by police shortly after the shooting.

Miss Garrett was still being held Tuesday afternoon in Jackson County Jail.

Opinion & Commentary

The MSU plan is dead, but the commitment is not

The plan for a Municipal Solar Utility has died— not with a bang, but with a whimper.

The decision has not been formalized— the City Council will vote on the MSU plan vs. the city administration's proposal next Monday— but it was apparent from Monday night's informal council meeting that the council members are nearly unanimous in their support of the city's less comprehensive energy plan.

Their inclination to reject the MSU plan carries with it a sharp touch of irony. Shortly after discussing the MSU plan— which would have been funded through a 3 percent utilities tax— the council members discussed, without any hint of disapproval, a 2 or 3 percent amusement tax to help pay for the bonds which will finance the downtown convention center parking garage.

The point is that the city administration has proposed the 3 percent amusement tax— a tax on motel accommodations, restaurants, movies, etc. This is the same city administration that rejected the MSU plan specifically because it would have involved levying a 3 percent tax.

Now, the city administration's position appears to be that a utilities tax would have hurt the poor, whereas an amusement tax will not. It is also their position that those who will be affected by the amusement tax will be the ones who will directly benefit from the construction of a downtown parking garage. Both positions are deserving of comment.

Perhaps a utilities tax would have hurt the poor and perhaps an amusement tax will not, although the implication seems to be that the poor in Carbondale do not seek amusement as frequently as do those in a higher financial bracket. That may be true, if somewhat hard to verify. What is regrettable about this line of thinking is that it should not be a question of which tax would hurt more, but rather which would help more. It is hard to imagine what benefit the poor in Carbondale will receive from the building of a downtown parking garage, but a good case could be made that they would benefit from a comprehensive energy plan.

Which brings us to the city's second contention: that those who pay the tax will be the ones who will benefit from a parking garage. What is the basis of this belief? Are not the students in this town one of the main groups that make use of restaurants and theaters? And do not the poor make use of them at least occasionally? And what benefit will these people receive from a convention center parking garage? The answer is, of course, little or none.

That issue aside, the city deserves credit for the energy plan that they have proposed— a plan which has undergone some changes that will make it a far better one than originally set forth.

In recognition of the fact that the poor and disabled will need assistance if they are to make use of CIPS audits and implement the necessary energy-saving measures, the city has proposed setting up a 2-year, $300,000 loan program for those who cannot receive funding from banks, and a 2-year, $100,000 grant program for low-income residents over 65 and disabled people on fixed incomes.

With these additions, the city's proposal comes much closer to being a program that will benefit those who need energy-saving improvements the most. Unfortunately, there is no provision that will benefit student renters, whose homes are often the worst in Carbondale in terms of energy wastage. Until the city addresses this aspect of the problem, its accomplishments will be far from complete.

Complete or not, however, the city is moving forward, not backward on the issue of cutting energy costs in Carbondale. The administration deserves praise for coming this far, and the MSU planners deserve praise for helping the people of Carbondale understand that energy conservation is an issue of paramount and immediate importance.

Letters

The icing was left off the cake

I am writing in regards to the recent election of SIU-C's first black Homecoming king and queen. I am a devout reader of the Daily Egyptian and a proud, fee-paying SIU-C undergraduate. But it seems that every now and then my pride in this institution is shaken.

In the three years I have attended this institution, the halftime activities at the Homecoming football game have always been quite a festive and gala occasion. This event always included the king and queen riding around the stadium's track in an open convertible, waving to their loyal subjects.

I am just one of the many individuals that are wondering what happened this year. Not only did the pair not ride around the track during halftime, but they were introduced on the opposite side of the stadium from the students. I for one could not see who they were.

One of my big motivations for attending the Homecoming game was to observe the halftime entertainment. The Marching Salukis, Saluki Pom Poms and Twirlers did a good job but, as far as I'm concerned, the icing was left off the cake because the royal couple didn't reign over the halftime activities as they should have.

I read in the Daily Egyptian earlier about how the couple was treated in regards to publicity. I also read the response as to why this happened. I feel that this whole situation could have been avoided if the usual standard royal couple treatment procedures were adhered to and not drastically altered because of the racial identity of the royal pair.—Joe N. Teachers are far from the only
'Who's killing English?' suspects

Colman McCarthy

With clues strewn like leaves on autumn's forested floor, everyone has a prime suspect on who's murdering English. A few months ago, it was Alexander Haig, a man who grabs language by the tongue and holds it arm-distance from clarity. Yogi Berra is a perennial suspect. But like Casey Stengel before him, he is too cheerful a metaphysician to let his syntactic lapses gloom our day.

Of all people, now it's English teachers who stand accused of killing English. In College English, an academic journal, two Chicago researchers report a six-year experiment that found some 10 high school and college teachers were suckers for murky prose.

The teachers were asked to grade student essays that were identical except for language style. Verbosity was rewarded, not exactness. Higher grades went to papers laced with complex sentences and prolix language. These papers, the teachers said, were "better organized, more mature and better supported."

A number of newspaper people—a group that a critic of impartial mind might place on the Who's Killing English suspect list, somewhere between Haig and Yogi—have pounced like overweight cats on the cornered English teachers.

A Chicago Tribune writer calls on them to "repent." A Boston Globe editorialist, sighing that "English teachers don't practice what they preach," preaches like a Calvinist that predestination is involved: "Ours is a culture that is drawn to be overstated, the pretentious, the self-important... Why should English teachers—or students, for that matter—be any different?"

On most occasions like this I would join my colleagues. Yes indeed, stop killing our sacred language, you feather English teachers. I would be Calvinistic, too, being a former editorial writer.

But I can't bring myself to do it. I know too many English teachers of hard-working natures and rare exuberance. I have been to too many classrooms helping English teachers get across the old point that "writing is rewriting what you've already written." I owe too many of my own English teachers—from my grade school, high school and college days—large debts for old favors.

Instead of blaming English teachers with easy opinions, I would rather praise them with what are possibly informed judgments. My latest information comes from a meeting I had last week with a group of teachers at a writing workshop at George Mason University in Fairfax, Va.

As individuals, each had the usual laments: the struggle of trying to teach students who don't know the rules of grammar, or students who do know but can't write by ear, or students who won't accept Paul Engle's idea that "a work of art is first of all work."

Those tensions aside, this group of about 100 teachers reflected one of American education's most promising trends: Teachers who can write are teaching teachers who would like to write, with both groups passing it on to their students.

Movement is occurring on two fronts. Since the mid-1970s, several thousand high school and college teachers have gone to about a hundred campuses for composition courses modeled after the Bay Area Writing Project. This is the program, begun in 1974 at the University of California at Berkeley, that has spread around the country with the help of grants from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

The other movement involves writing across the curriculum programs. This means that teachers of mathematics, or the sciences, or history, also teach their students the art of writing. About 200 colleges have such programs, all developed in the last five years. A mathematics professor at George Mason told me of an experiment she conducted in her statistics class. She had 20 students keep a journal. Twenty-five students did not. The journal writers scored 10 percent higher in their overall grades for the course.

From the evidence, English teachers, and other teachers as well, are doing more than we realize to cultivate in the young a love for the language and a respect for articulation. They could do more, for sure. But so could we: pay teachers the higher salaries they deserve, work at home with our own children to nurture their writing skills, and give the English teachers more encouragement and less carping.—(c) 1981, The Washington Post Company

Time to re-examine Kerouac's influence

By Mike Anthony
Staff Writer

October 1969—a time of turmoil in the United States. College campuses were aflame with anti-war demonstrations and cries of "peace" and "hell no, we won't go."

It was also a time of death. October 21, 1968 marks the 12th anniversary of author Jack Kerouac's death. Kerouac died at the age of 47 in St. Petersburg, Fla., bitter and emotionally drained.

It's high time to clear up some misconceptions about the man and re-examine his works and contributions to American prose.

Kerouac published 19 novels in about a 20-year span, a remarkable accomplishment for any artist, and he would be writing until a couple of hours before his death.

In the late 1950s and early 1960s, Kerouac was the principal spokesman for the alienated, the isolated, the down-trodden and the disillusioned—the "Beat Generation," as Kerouac himself named it.

According to Kerouac, "Beat" meant beatific—trying to be in a state of beatitude like St. Francis, trying to love all life, being utterly sincere, kind and cultivating joy of heart.

But for most Americans in the late 1950s and early 1960s, it was too subtle a definition. They never got past the television image of Maynard G. Krebs, the bong-playing, mindless stereotype of a "beatnik" in "The Many Loves of Dobie Gillis."

However, Kerouac had the term "beatnik" and once claimed that "I'm king of the 'Beats' but I'm not a 'beatnik,'" but for many the distinction was too hard to make.

Who was this guy, anyway?

Kerouac was a novelist and poet in the tradition of Henry David Thoreau, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Mark Twain, Walt Whitman and Thomas Wolfe.

Kerouac captured in print the innocence and essence of American life. His portrayal of American life was a monumental contribution to American literature. He went out and lived life to the fullest by searching for new frontiers, a uniquely American experience.

His books are a joyous yea-saying and celebration of life itself. For example, look at Kerouac's most popular novel, "On the Road."

The hero of the book, Dean Moriarty (in real life, Neal Cassady, Kerouac's best friend), is always racing back and forth across the country in an attempt to catch up to or outrun "life."

Kerouac captures the vastness of the United States like no other author before him, while questioning the values of life in the United States in the 1950s.

It is the celebration of life in his books that makes Kerouac and Cassady legends. They were always ready to say yes to any new experience and not be afraid of exploring their limitations.

As Kerouac said in "On the Road," "The only people for me are the mad ones, the ones who are mad to live, mad to talk, mad to be saved, desirous of everything at the same time, the ones who never yawn or say a commonplace thing, but burn, burn, burn like fabulous yellow roman candles exploding like spiders across the stars and in the middle you see the blue centerlight pop and everybody goes 'Awww!'"

It was Kerouac's attitude and writing style that he called "spontaneous prose" that came under heavy fire from the critics and Kerouac never was able to achieve the literary success and financial security that many of his peers did.

Kerouac was lambasted on a television talk show when Truman Capote claimed that what Kerouac did wasn't writing, "it's typing."

In 1968, Time magazine called Kerouac a "cut-rate Thomas Wolfe." "On the Road" was called "uncouth" by the Omaha Morning Herald and "the romantic novel's last whimper" by the Louisville Courier-Journal.

What was spontaneous prose? To Kerouac, it was writing spontaneously and letting himself go, just as a jazz musician might when he is improvising a solo and following the direction of his immediate emotions.

Today, however, Kerouac is remembered less for his "spontaneous prose" than for his picture of "beat life" and the literary scene of the group of underground writers which included Allen Ginsberg, William Burroughs and Gary Snyder in the 1950s.

It was these writers, along with other underground writers, who formed a counterculture of social protest and political activism that by the late 1960s turned into a movement directly influenced by Kerouac and his writings, despite Kerouac himself disavowing such actions.

When he died in 1969, Kerouac was bitter, emotionally exhausted and ready for death. Even though he is dead, his works and what they represent live on.

As he wrote in "Visions of Cody," "Adios, you who watched the sun go down, at the rail, by my side, smiling—Adios, King."

Letters

Freedom is the basic premise of America

This letter is in response to the three anti-Tom Wood and Reaganomics letters in the Thursday, Nov. 6 Daily Egyptian. I am going to focus on Douglas Woods' letter in particular to address what I consider to be of major import.

Doug, as a political scientist (a scientist of politics), you start where all scientists must start: A basic premise. A paradigm. You stated your basic premise at the end of your letter when you said that you were "someone who cares about the little guy." For this honesty, I commend you. You care about yourself (you are one of us little guys, aren't you?).

I would like to go one step further and applaud your choice of paradigms, for it is good. All of us care about ourselves, and it is an honorable care to have. I propose even, that as a political state, this United States of America, alone among nations, is founded on the very same premise: The inalienable right of the individual to Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness.

As a political scientist I know that you can appreciate the significance of this premise in this world, but I would also like to point out that it is on this very point that I detect some inconsistency in your letter.

The government of these United States (of which Reagan is the most visible leader) does not exist to "care for the little guy." It exists as a guarantee that the little guy can care for himself. This guarantee is called Freedom. When a government is established to guarantee "care to the little guy," this guarantee is called Equality. The only way to guarantee equality is to take from the "big guys" and give to the "little guys." I propose that when someone other than yourself (whether an individual or a government) has control of your care and your creation, then you are called a slave. Freedom is more important than Equality.

Capital (that stuff of capitalism; which is the only economic system capable of working in a free society) is what we use to care for ourselves when we are free, and what we attempt to pass around when we are equal. The real capital of this world—and this is the real beauty and meaning of freedom—is within each of us. The real capital is our ability and potential as creative human beings to utilize the resources which abound around us (and in a system guaranteeing equality these resources are mistakenly taken as the capital of capitalism) to care for ourselves and all the other little guys.

Freedom is the only, and essential, prerequisite each of us needs to develop in our own ways and our own time the abilities and skills we will need to care for ourselves. This to me is the basic premise. This to me is the topic of import that we must keep our eyes on, that we must cultivate and impart to all of each other. Thus, to me, is the only way that any of us, little or big, will be able to help anyone else. —John Patrick Jilham, Carbondale.

Classical show was a delight

Letters to the editor so often condemn and so seldom praise our University or its policies, but I hope I can begin a reversal of this trend. I should like to praise WSU and Mr. Tom Pearson specifically, for the broadcasting of the Oct. 30 Heritage Concert.

Expecting the usual format of the program, I and many other listeners were treated instead to a "classical competition" of sorts. In place of telling the name and life dates of the composer, the name of the composition and the circumstances of its composition, Mr. Pearson let his audience guess as to what it was listening to. The elegance of this format was certainly enhanced by the prize of a new album for anyone who could call the station to tell the name of the composer, the name of the work or, my personal favorite, the instrument for which the unknown work originally had been composed.

One can only hope that future broadcasts will bring as much delight. In anticipation of this, I offer, for free and public use, some tentative program titles: The "Wagner, Vivaldi, and Verdi Volley" should prove exciting; the "Puccini and Prokofiev Playoffs" and "Mozart, Mendelssohn and Mahler Melee" should draw large listening audiences. Finally, at the end of the season, the audience could expect the Rose Bowl of music, the "Rimsky-Korsakoff, Ravel and Rachmaninoff Rivalry."

But I am being selfish. I do not think that Mr. Pearson's listener-participation style should be contained to the Heritage Concerts alone. News programs could use his same format. For example, the broadcaster could tell of a world event, and the listener could try to guess in what country the event happened. Perhaps the broadcaster could give the words of some world leader; the listener could telephone in his surmise. The prizes to the first correct caller need not be limited to an album, but this is such a small detail.

Think of the potential in sports broadcasting. The audience could listen to a description of a game, then try to posit which team won! Also, while the vital statistics of a player are being given, the listener would have the added enjoyment of trying to speculate which of the many players the commentator is describing. The possibilities are limitless.

For those listeners who are tired of turning on their radios to be informed, I can but suggest that they stop supporting public radio and listen to a commercial station. However, for those who like this challenge and excitement of being involved, I suggest they stay tuned to WSU.

Again, I should like to thank Mr. Pearson for his cleverness in bringing all the distinction and sophistication of a football game to an afternoon of Grieg and Beethoven. —Randall Calhoun, Graduate Assistant, English.

One more straw will be more than enough

Having read Ms. Bobbi Bennett's letter in the Oct. 13 Daily Egyptian, I want to reply that I am not in the mood for word games or hair-splitting debates. The Women's Center receives funds from the City of Carbondale and the United Way. The Women's Center is well known in the Carbondale community for its defense of and encouragement of abortion on demand.

Those of us of all religions, and of none, who believe that abortion is even more immoral than, say, segregation, etc., have a moral problem. Many of us would oppose public funds or United Way funds going to an organization that supported and advocated segregation whatever else good that organization might do. We have the same moral problem with an organization supporting and advocating abortion on demand. To be more specific as to the Catholic community—under the present laws of the Catholic Church, I am the head of the Catholic community in Carbondale. I tell Ms. Bennett as clearly as I can that I will do everything in my power to have public and United Way funding cut off from the Women's Center if I continue to read letters from the Women's Center misrepresenting the teaching of the Catholic Church.

The Daily Egyptian left out this statement in my letter: "Indeed these women from the Carbondale Women's Center are either hopelessly stupid about the history of abortion or they are intellectually dishonest or perhaps totally anti-Catholic in their attitude. I suspect some of each."

I do not believe that a public letter would have gone out from the Women's Center attacking, say, Jesse Jackson so as to make him look both silly and heartless. (I pick Jesse Jackson because he is black and against abortion on demand.) The black community would complain. I do not believe the Women's Center would make the Episcopal Church or the Methodist Church look silly with false statements. But the Catholic Church seems to be fair game. I, as Roman Catholic pastor of Carbondale say: enough! One more straw will be more than enough. I will no longer tolerate in silence anti-Catholic diatribes coming out of the Women's Center—not when the Women's Center receives funding from the City of Carbondale and the United Way. —Father James A. Geniale, Pastor, St. Francis Xavier Church.

I would like to comment on the photograph taken by Rich Saal of Governor Thompson that was printed in the Daily Egyptian on Oct. 28. Such a smear on the governor of our state should not pass without rebuttal. Of the many photos taken of the governor during his trip at SIU, the DE printed the one with the governor scratching the top of his head. Such action is an insult to the governor and reflects the biases of your publication

Newspapers—even the DE—have an obligation to report the news, whether it be by words or photos, as objectively as possible. To do otherwise is inexcusable. —Gordon Wayman, Internal Vice President, SIU College Republicans.

Shryock sold out for Crimson

By Barbara Schenk
Student Writer

Along with such cities as Chicago, Detroit, New York, and Philadelphia, Carbondale is on the itinerary of King Crimson, scheduled to perform Wednesday for a full house at Shryock Auditorium.

In fact, SIU-C is the only college appearance scheduled for the band's entire U.S. tour.

According to Chris Stewart, SPC Concerts chairman, this may be an important precedent for select performers to follow in the future.

"This has to mean something for a group like King Crimson to choose to perform at SIU, out of all the universities in the United States," Stewart said.

In place of a back-up band, two short animated films will be presented by SPC.

"To see King Crimson in this hall," Stewart said, "will probably be one of the best Crimson concerts in the state. Visually, there is no bad seat in Shryock, the acoustics are very good, and because of the size of the auditorium, it will make the concert more personal to the audience."

The newly-formed group consists of four well-known performers in the music field. Robert Fripp is a guitarist and founder of the original King Crimson. When the group broke up in 1975, he started Frippertronics to embody his own concept of music. He has also played with other artists such as Brian Eno, David Bowie and Peter Gabriel.

Tony Levine is the studio bass player. He has played with Yoko Ono's band and with John Lennon.

Adrian Belew, guitarist, performed with Talking Heads on their last tour. And Bill Bruford, the drummer, performed with Yes.

"I knew if the band couldn't sell the show," Stewart said, "the band members could. Putting together four members like that is pretty intense."

Group members plan to work six months together during the year and six months apart, doing individual performances or working with other artists. The current fall tour and a tour in the spring will comprise their six months together. Next fall and spring they plan to tour again.

The band will play songs from its latest album, "Discipline," released about three weeks ago, as well as old favorites, in an effort to appeal to a younger crowd as well as to keep old fans involved.

The King Crimson name is being used primarily as a selling tool. Band members originally wanted to call the group "Discipline" but decided the name wouldn't have the same impact. Some of the music is similar to that of the old King Crimson, but much has changed.

Terry Moore, a SPC committee member, said "Everyone who knew they had wanted a ticket knew they had to camp out. It's gotten to the point on this campus that just about any show that anyone does, you have a few fanatics who camp out to get the best seat. But for this show everyone was camping out. That shows there is a lot of excitement about King Crimson."

Toaster, beer can, coat hanger help 'Bolsheviks' make music

By Cynthia Rector
Student Writer

"Unconventional" describes the electronic music composition recital given last week by students Brett Hamilton and Steve Fargen, also known as The Bolsheviks from Madrid. A glance at the stage before the show was an indication: baby grand piano, beer can, coat hanger, electric toaster and electric guitar were props used during the two-hour extravaganza.

The stars of the show dressed in tuxedos during the opening songs. But to keep the atmosphere somewhat casual, they kept their toes warm in bedroom slippers. The third star was quieter and in the spotlight less. Referred to as El Conejo Cojo, he was dressed in Army clothes and wore pantsyose over his head—glasses and all—for the entire show.

The performers wrote most of their own material and put together their own tapes. Taped music was featured in the first half of the presentation, with occasional live participation by Hamilton and Fargen on keyboards and bass guitar. The tapes were diverse, lively and rich in mood suggestion, including one featuring a gurgling water pipe to accompany the bizarre film work.

Grouping the taped pieces at the beginning of the show made this part of the presentation a bit redundant—not due to the sound as much as the visuals. The real visual playfulness came later.

"Irritated Sleep," an original piano solo played by Hamilton, offered keyboards which sent chills through the spine, and simplistic movements and words in "Simple Song" made it irresistible. Hamilton and Fargen dressed in ski coats and threw items clanging off the side of the stage to complement the words: "We are simple. You are simple. Life is simple, too."

"Disneyland Stew" featured Hamilton seated cross-legged at the front of the stage. "I'm going to use a less than conventional pick," he said casually to the audience, "an adjustable wrench." Laughing. Behind Hamilton's head, Christmas tree lights blinked as he literally banged his guitar with the wrench.

It might not have worked were Hamilton not such a mellow, quietly comical character. He was a perfect sidekick for Fargen: tall, thin, dark and driven. Fargen exploded on "Hunger," singing David Byrne-style, pleading and raw. His rubber-band body bounced up and down, flattened on the floor, crawled and jumped back up.

"Great Names in Fun Foods" reached progressive heights. The duo dressed in chef's attire, and Fargen's comical side surfaced. The first line was repeated several times; Fargen counted on his fingers for the audience. Just when listeners were sure the needle on the record had become stuck, Fargen sang, "Now sing redundant," and began changing the wording slightly on each line.

Finally, "No federal funding because of Reagan" was sung once in a matter-of-fact way and then in a totally obnoxious way that the audience loved. More creative phrases followed, ending in an Indian dance with maracas.

In the duo's last electronic jam, "Hair Care," almost every possible familiar, often nauseating hair jingle was brought forth in echoing, exaggerated fashion. Styles, shapes, colors—every way hair is tortured and nurtured for beauty's sake—was covered in the musical parody of American preoccupation with the top of the head.

The song ended with the two chanting, robot-like, "Lather, rinse and repeat," as they went for the shampoo and lathered up. They then rinsed and prepared to answer questions concerning the recital.

Although unconventional, the show offered something for anyone with a love of music and a taste for the bizarre.

Planning for region needs unified efforts, designer says

By Steve Moore
Staff Writer

Stanley Mendelsohn

People are continuing to migrate from cities to rural areas, but a corresponding shift in the focus of regional planning has not kept pace, according to Stanley Mendelsohn, visiting assistant professor of design. "We have to become regionally conscious," Mendelsohn said, "but regional planning at this time is fragmented." Mendelsohn recently attended a conference in Washington, D.C. designed to help planners unify their efforts.

"Design Imperatives for Shaping America," was a colloquy sponsored by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development that brought together 32 of the nation's planning experts. Those attending included scientists, transportation analysts, urban designers, federal officials from HUD and the U.S. Forest and National Parks Service, and a host of editors, publishers and other media representatives.

Mendelsohn was invited because of his work in developing the Countrytown Design Program at SIU-C. Mendelsohn described Countrytown as "the rural equivalent of urban planning," helping local planners develop the region.

The meeting focused on the constellation theory of urban design of Phillip Lewis Jr., director of the Environmental Awareness Center at the University of Wisconsin. According to Lewis' theory, population centers have developed naturally in radial areas several hundred miles in diameter as a result of available resources. Development of transportation, recreation, industry and population movement should follow this uninhibited flow based on what best suits the land and people who live there. Mendelsohn said that satellite photographs of these population centers resemble constellations, thus the name of Lewis' theory. He said that Southern Illinois lies between two such constellations. One is to the west and includes St. Louis, Kansas City, Topeka, Oklahoma City, Little Rock and Memphis. The second includes Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Evansville, Nashville and Knoxville.

Under present planning concepts the tendency is to link Southern Illinois with the Chicago area, Mendelsohn said, and as a result the area has suffered.

"There hasn't been sufficient cohesion in our regional planning efforts," he said, "so we need to make people aware of the commercial and recreational potential of this region."

Mendelsohn suggested the building of a waterway system between the Mississippi and Ohio rivers as a project that would incorporate Lewis' theory with its emphasis on developing regional areas.

"This would create a horizontal recreational connection with possible uses for commerce," he said.

In addition to his work in the Countrytown program, Mendelsohn has also been developing an Environmental Awareness Center for SIU. The EAC provides help to local city planners in developing environmentally sound projects.

So far, Mendelsohn said, planners from Carbondale's Towne Central project, and planners from Christopher and Albion have been among their clients.

Dance group's 'Autumn Concert' distinguished by its diversity

By Pam Petrow
Staff Writer

Dancing is, of course, a form of expression. And when the Southern Illinois Repertory Dance Company presented its fall dance concert in Ballroom D, it was creative expression.

Many of the seven acts performed in the "Autumn Concert of Modern Dance" were choreographed by both the dancers themselves and SIUC faculty.

The first and longest dance, "The Journey," was choreographed by Linda Kostalik, director of the company. The half-hour piece portrayed some of the fantasies and emotions felt by women living during the Victorian age.

The costumes, long white skirts and loose, matching camisole tops, were beautiful. Hair was a symbol of freedom in the dance. Patty Ganyard, an undergraduate member of the dance company, was excellent in her portrayal of "Woman Brushing Hair and Reflections of Woman Brushing Hair."

True, the subtleties of the acts were basic, but then there was no need for them to be anything else. Ganyard's movements were free and flowing when she let her hair down. When she put her hair up to go out into the world, her manner and movements became rigid and proper. The dance symbolized the way in which women of that time period were expected to act in contrast to the way they wanted to act.

Another well-danced section of "The Journey" was performed by Winifred Haun, an undergraduate in psychology. Haun used a chair in her dance, dancing on, around and with it to express the frustration and hopelessness that many Victorian women may have felt.

Gina Sharbaugh, a graduate member of the dance company, gave a notable performance in her section of "The Journey," entitled "Woman in Search." Her movements expressed the eagerness and yearning of a person searching for something but not knowing what it is.

"Attractions I," directed by George Pinney of the Department of Theater, was a short, story-type piece involving three dancers. Basically, girl met boy, girl fell in love with boy (with the help of a moonlight nymph), but boy was a fraud and girl finally realized that boy was a fraud.

The third dance, "A Remark You Made," choreographed and danced by Haun, portrayed a woman reflecting on the possible meanings of a remark somebody made to her.

As she considered several different meanings, her movements changed to express the emotions created by those meanings.

"Valentines," choreographed by Sallie Idoine, an assistant professor in the Department of Physical Education, had a lot of potential. But the music and the dancers' movements did not seem to coordinate.

The tempo picked up again with "Street Moves." The music was fast-paced, modern jazz, and the dancers wore bright-colored leotards. This dance, something like the dancing-on-cars and in-the-streets scene of "Fame," was a favorite of the audience.

The crowd applauded as each dancer showed his or her dancing abilities.

The most thought-provoking piece was "An Unbroken Thread Beyond Description: The Spiritual Life of a Martial Artist," choreographed by Bill Inglebright, an undergraduate member of the company, and Elliot Freeman, a graduate assistant in the School of Art.

The dimly lighted stage and twangy electric guitar music created an almost eerie feeling.

The music and dancing were able to create senses of tension, fear and power by their tempos and intensities.

An attraction of the concert was its diversity. All of the acts were different and each had its own meaning. Together, they demonstrated that a lot of ingenuity went into the making of the concert.

Long-distance runner banking on leaving others breathless

By Jennifer Polk
Staff Writer

Long distance runners are known to be lonely, but whoever heard of the funniness of a long distance runner?

Dave "Kaz" Kazanjian knows at least one side of that story—the funny side.

Kazanjian—he said more people know him as "Kaz" than anything else—came to SIUC to be a distance runner for the cross country team. Now the 21-year-old business major does most of his running on stage as a stand-up comedian.

A native of Methuen, Mass., Kazanjian has been a distance runner since junior high school. He was a Massachusetts state champion, a cross country All American and competed in the Junior Olympics four times. As a high school senior, he was in contact with 42 schools, but chose SIUC because he liked the campus.

He was recruited by track and cross country coach Lew Hartzog and came to SIUC on a scholarship, but a series of back and leg injuries have prevented him from ever competing with the team. Because of the injuries, his scholarship was not renewed. He trained with the team early this season, but pulled a hamstring muscle.

"Dave had a lot of potential when he came out of high school," Hartzog said. "We really thought he'd be one of our better distance runners. He's bright and energetic, but things just haven't worked out well for him."

Kazanjian has been "pretty disappointed" in the way things have turned out. But the free time that injuries have provided made it possible for him to become a comedian.

He entered the Ramada Inn Talent Show earlier this semester. Though he'd always been interested in acting and theater, running never gave him a chance to pursue it.

"This is the first time in my life that running hasn't been the highest thing on my list," he said.

He was one of five finalists of the 12 acts in the initial show on Sept. 21 and was invited back to perform Sept. 28. His first paid performance was Oct. 16, his second will be at the Second Annual Anniversary Party of the Ramada Inn's Oasis Dine & Disco Wednesday night.

Being a comedian anywhere is a challenge, but in Southern Illinois there are special problems, especially for a fast-talking native of northern Massachusetts. Midwesterners simply don't pick up on the New England accent.

"I think a lot of people have trouble understanding me because of my accent and because I sometimes talk too fast," he said. "And I need to work on my timing, too."

"Comedy is a different kind of challenge than running," he said. "When you run you challenge yourself, but when you're a comedian you have to count on the audience. I think lots of people want to fight a comedian. They might be laughing on the inside but don't want to show it."

Being a student and being a comedian has its challenges. "It's tough to study," he said. "I'll read a few pages and I'll be thinking of jokes."

Kazanjian said he writes "85 to 90 percent" of his material, using things that happen on campus, song and dance parodies, one-liners, personal experience and "a little exaggeration."

The dance routine in Kazanjian's act—a parody of different dance styles—forced him to make a big decision following the semi-finals of the talent show.

"I had to decide if I wanted to pursue my act seriously or if I wanted to let my hamstring rest," he said. "I want to keep running and the dance routine doesn't help my hamstring."

Kazanjian said Lee Thompson, the lounge manager at Ramada Inn, helped him a great deal after the talent show.

Thompson said that Kazanjian is "one of the most intense young men" he's ever known.

"He impressed me because he's such a hard worker," Thompson said. "I've never seen anyone work so hard at what he does. He's funny and the audience likes him. I think he's got a chance to make it, but I also think he's got a lot more hard work in front of him."

Kazanjian isn't sure what he'll do after the show at the Ramada Inn. He'd like to take his act to other places in Carbondale, but he'd also like to continue running during his senior year.

"I guess I'll take this as far as it goes," he said.

AAUP chapter's Moore award goes to retired math professor

Wilbur C. McDaniel, professor emeritus in the Mathematics Department, will be honored Thursday as winner of the Willis Moore Award. The award is given each year to an outstanding faculty member by the SIU-C chapter of the American Association of University Professors.

As winner of the award, McDaniel will also be the key speaker for the AAUP banquet, which begins at 6 p.m. in President Albert Somit's home with a reception.

The award is named for a former president of the AAUP chapter, Willis Moore, a staunch defender of academic freedom, who was chairman of the Philosophy Department and who served as a member of the SIU Board of Trustees after his retirement from the faculty.

Honorary chairman of the award dinner is James W. Neckers, former chairman of the Chemistry Department, winner of the award last year.

The dinner will mark the sixth annual award.

McDaniel was chosen for his contributions to the University and to the AAUP chapter, said Dick Thomas, chapter president.

McDaniel has been president of the AAUP chapter for three terms, unprecedented in this chapter, according to Thomas. During his more than 30 years at SIU-C, McDaniel has been winner of the Distinguished Teacher Award and has served as chairman of the Mathematics Department.

British look for a good debate

Great Britain's national touring debate team will participate in a public debate at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in McLeod Theater in the Communications Building.

British debaters Mark Bishop, a lawyer and an award-winning public speaker in 1981, and Clark McGinn, a philosophy student at the University of Glasgow, will debate Raymond D. Beal and David C. Buckley, faculty members in SIU-C's Department of Speech Communication.

The debate resolution will be: That modern man is the loser by his rejection of religious faith.

Buckley, director of SIU-C's forensics program, said the debate will be conducted in an "informal, relaxed style that is common to British debate, including the utilization of a good deal of humor."

Bishop and McGinn are visiting several colleges and universities during their current debate tour. It is the first trip to the United States for both of them.

The debate, which is free and open to the public, will be taped and shown at a later date on WSIU-TV in Carbondale and WUSI-TV in Olney.

The debate is co-sponsored by the National Debate Association, the College of Communications and Fire Arts and the Department of Speech Communication.

Thompson beset by bills he can't veto

By Sharon Cohen
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — There are roof repairs to be done and a growing child to feed. And like most Americans, inflation is hounding the governor of Illinois, who says he took out bank loans on his townhouse to pay day-to-day bills.

Gov. James R. Thompson's debt has jumped from $107,000 to $198,000 in the five years since he was elected because he was forced to repeatedly remortgage his Near North Side townhouse, said David Gilbert, the governor's press secretary.

The governor is indebted to the Amalgamated Trust & Savings Bank, whose chairman is Eugene Heytow, a friend and former Thompson appointee to an advisory board.

But Thompson said in a telephone interview Tuesday that the borrowing arrangement "is not unusual" and decisions to remortgage are made when you discover "you need the money to pay the bills."

In fact, the governor said, he was prompted to seek a new loan when his wife told him, "We've got a stack of bills."

Thompson, formerly a U.S. attorney and a lawyer in a prestigious Chicago law firm, earns $58,000 a year. Gilbert said the governor's mortgage payments of $2,008 are more than 75 percent of his $2,653 monthly take-home pay.

That leaves Thompson with monthly spending money of $645 from his paycheck and about $330 in law textbook royalties to support his wife, their 3-year-old daughter and three dogs.

Thompson is not pleading poverty.

After all, he has a Wisconsin summer home valued at $66,000 and an antique collection estimated at $70,000.

Music student advances in Met auditions

Julie Greene, graduate student in music, has advanced to regional competition in tryouts for an audition on New York's Metropolitan Opera stage.

Greene, a mezzo soprano, will compete with winners of 11 other districts at Orchestra Hall in Chicago Nov. 16. She became eligible when she won the 12th annual district audition of the Metropolitan Opera National Council's Audition Program in competition at SIU-Edwardsville in October.

The winner of the regional competition will travel to New York and audition on the Met stage for the opera's general manager and his artistic staff. Winners from 16 regions will compete.

Greene first entered Met tryouts in 1975 when she was a student at Northeast Louisiana State University and has won district competitions for five years. Four times she has advanced to Gulf Coast and Midwest regional competition. This year she was sponsored by David Williams of the School of Music faculty.

Julie Greene

Green received bachelor's and master's degrees in voice performance from Northeast Louisiana University. She will receive a master's degree in opera music theater from SIU-C in May.

She won first place on Saturday over 68 entries from Missouri, Iowa and Illinois in the National Association of Teachers of Singing regional auditions, advanced women's division, at the University of Illinois.

Before her regional tryouts, she will present a graduate recital at Shryock Auditorium at 8 p.m. Saturday.

Reprimanded pupil puts LSD in teacher's coffee

CHICAGO (AP) — A pupil angry at being reprimanded for throwing paper airplanes in class slipped LSD into the coffee cup of his 61-year-old teacher and the woman began hallucinating, police said.

Antoinette Indovina, a teacher at Notre Dame School on the South Side, was reported in good condition Tuesday at a local hospital. The 13-year-old student was being held in the juvenile detention center.

Police detective Thomas Sherry said Mrs. Indovina sent the youth to the principal's office Monday for throwing paper airplanes in class.

Later the youth returned to class, and while the teacher was facing the blackboard, he dropped a tablet of "Orange Sunshine" — LSD, a hallucinogenic drug — into the coffee cup on her desk, Sherry said.

After drinking the coffee, Mrs. Indovina felt no effects until lunchtime 1½ hours later, when she began hallucinating, he said.

The teacher was taken to the hospital by ambulance.

The youth spiked the teacher's coffee in full view of his classmates, said police, who were summoned by a priest at the Roman Catholic school.

Sherry said the youth told investigators he obtained the drug from a street dealer on the South Side.

Flying aces reunite in Paris

PARIS (AP) — World War I flying aces from both the Allied and German sides have reunited in Paris for a Veteran's Day ceremony Wednesday under the Arc de Triomphe.

Their eyes have dimmed, their stride has slowed and their hair has thinned. But their memories remain strong as they recall flying into battle in the days when the life expectancy for a pilot on the Western Front was as little as 21 days in 1917.

Only 40 of the world's surviving 85 aces were well enough to accept President Francois Mitterrand's invitation to attend celebrations marking the 63rd anniversary of the armistice that ended "the war to end all wars" on the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month.

The reunion is undoubtedly the last one of its size for the men who earned the title ace by shooting down at least five enemy planes.

"Don't ask me about the dreams. The nightmares went on for years," recalled 86-year-old Raymond Brooks of Summit, N.J., one of nine American aces who made the trip to Paris. They flew in the infant days of the airplane, in frail Camels and Spads and Fokkers that carried fuel for two hours or less of flying time.

"Those planes were nothing but fabric and a bit of metal," said New Yorker Kenneth Porter, 86, recalling the days when planes had no armor and many pilots sat on the lids of cast-iron pans for protection against the bullets that pierced the underbelly of their craft.

Mike Besal and Chris Robertson, co-authors of the Shawnee Solar plan, said that although they favored the adoption of a more comprehensive program, the revised administration plan is a "step in the right direction."

Besal said that the plan gives the city "a real chance of fulfilling its energy goals."

"The administration's plan incorporates all the proposals we suggested," he said. "It's just financed differently and implemented at a rate slower than we suggested."

Robertson also commended the proposed plan but said it fails to "address energy problems in the local rental housing sector."

Robertson and Besal, who will now present their plan to other Midwestern cities, said they "wish the city luck," and were "glad to have had a part in shaping Carbondale's energy future."

If the proposed plan is adopted, the city's audit program would be administered in conjunction with an audit program being done by the Central Illinois Public Service Co. For the next two

unionizing students

The Graduate Student Council will consider a resolution Wednesday to form a committee to study advantages and disadvantages of unionizing graduate and professional students.

The council will meet at 7 p.m. in the Mississippi Room of the Student Center.

GSC President Debbie Brown said that a similar resolution favoring study of collective bargaining was passed last year, but no council members volunteered to serve on the committee.

In other business, the GSC will nominate candidates to replace Wendy Broadbooks, who recently resigned as a GSC representative to the Graduate Council. The new representative will be elected at the GSC meeting Dec. 2, Brown said.

The GSC will also vote to consider resolutions on a Student Center fee increase. Brown said the exact amount of the increase which the council will support or oppose will be proposed at the meeting.

years, CIPS will be offering energy audits to its Carbondale customers for a $15 charge. The administration proposes to hire two city energy auditors next May, and add a third in 1983. Fry said the CIPS audits will "free up" the city energy auditors to go to homes and businesses not eligible for the CIPS audits.

He said the city should encourage participation in the audit program, and may want to consider paying the $15 audit cost for certain low-income homeowners.

Another proposal suggested by Fry is to use retired SIUC personnel as energy audit inspectors, trained and certified by professional energy auditors.

The remainder of the administration's plan would be funded primarily through general city funds. The plan budgets $62,000 during the next three years for a community energy education program carried out through the city's energy office.

Tuesday's Puzzle Solved

A computer user's forum will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. Thursday in the Morris Library Auditorium.

Art Gloster, director of Computing Affairs, and John Baker, special assistant to the president for budgeting and planning, will answer questions about the use of computers at SIU-C.

Gloster said he will discuss his department's concern that there may not be enough resources available to meet the growing demand for use of computers.

This will be the second computer forum held at SIU-C. The first one, held in May, was attended by over 100 persons, Dennis Leitner, associate dean of the Graduate School, said.

Hospital benefit broadcast slated

A "radiothon" to raise money for St. Jude's Children's Hospital will be broadcast from 6 a.m. to midnight Wednesday over WCIL radio.

The radiothon is sponsored by Pi Sigma Epsilon to solicit phone-in pledges from listeners to help St. Jude's, the largest children's research hospital in the country.

The hospital, founded by actor Danny Thomas, provides free care and lodging to children patients and is supported by donations. Listeners can pledge by calling 529-HELP.

Students at Denkmann School got tired of the school board saying there was no money in the budget to blacktop the playground. So they raised it themselves.

Kids from kindergarten to sixth grade went door-to-door selling sun catchers and memo boards, and raised $5,000 for the project — twice the amount needed to put a hard surface on the playground.

Parents said every time it rained, the area was turned into a muddy mess.

"This problem has existed for more than 20 years, and each year it has become increasingly worse," said Wanda Pursell, whose daughter attends Denkmann.

The school board said repeatedly it didn't have the $2,500 needed to blacktop the grounds. The board two years ago installed storm drains that helped drainage problems. "But the ground would still be muddy," said Principal Herb Niemann.

Blacktopping crews were at the school this week and expected to have the job completed by Wednesday.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — In about 10 years, crops will be developed that will supply their own nutrients, making costly, energy-consuming fertilizer unnecessary, a biologist said Tuesday.

Frederick Ausubel, a professor at Harvard University, said genetic engineering of plants will yield crops that supply their own nitrogen. Many crops, such as wheat, corn and rice, now cannot do so, and the nitrogen necessary for healthy growth must be supplied in fertilizer.

Ausubel calls the genetic manipulation of plants the "greener revolution," a reference to the so-called green revolution of the 1960s, which marked the first large-scale use of fertilizers.

Ausubel estimates the demand for fertilizer, which requires great amounts of energy in the manufacturing process, will quadruple by the year 2000. And it will cost up to $300 billion just to build the factories to make the fertilizer, he said.

The new generation of plants also will resist weed killers, Ausubel said, so farmers will be able to spray their fields without fear that prime crops will be destroyed with the weeds.

The interest in tinkering with the genes of plants is a result of the success of genetic engineering in medicine, Ausubel said.

"Plants are not more difficult to work on," he said. "It's just that nobody's ever worked on plants before."

Scientists at the University of Wisconsin announced recently that they had inserted a gene that stores proteins in beans into a sunflower. They called their creation a "sunbean."

It exists only in a test tube, Ausubel said, and has not been grown.

Speaking to reporters at a meeting of the Council for the Advancement of Science Writing, Ausubel said scientists have learned how to take a single cell from the leaf of a plant and use it to grow an entirely new plant in the laboratory.

These test-tube plants can be tested very quickly for resistance to disease and to herbicides, and will speed the development of useful new strains, he said.

Dinner awaits nutrition whiz

For those students who can't afford to take their man or woman out to a nice restaurant, here is their chance.

The Student Wellness Resource Center is sponsoring a nutrition quiz, and the person who correctly answers the most questions will win a dinner for two at Stan Hoye's, the Carbondale Holiday Inn restaurant.

The 20-question quiz is in today's Daily Egyptian, (page 8). Students can turn in their answers at the Student Center information desk, the Recreation Center equipment desk or the Student Wellness Resource Center self-care room, located in the Health Service.

Chris Ellis, graduate assistant at the Student Wellness Resource Center, said the questions will be hard enough that students should have some difficulty in answering them. However, in case of a tie, a drawing will be held, she said.

The quiz is designed to make students more aware of nutrition and the types of foods that are eaten, Ellis said.

Small high school's grid team draws large following at games

NEWMAN (AP)—There's such a following for the undefeated Newman High School Redskins that when they play an away game practically no one is left in town but the police.

Newman, one of the unbeaten teams in the Illinois High School Association football playoffs Wednesday, is the smallest school in the state to field a football team. Almost one-third of its enrollment is on the squad.

Fame has come rapidly for the Redskins, and being the smallest school in the state was bothersome; especially when the Redskins had a game which was carried on television by stations in Danville and Champaign.

"They all said we were the smallest school playing football, and a lot of people said they were tired of hearing about it," said Coach Terry Reed.

"But now everyone seems to enjoy the publicity. They all live and breathe football. On the night of an away game, you may not find a person in town."

"When we play Arcola Wednesday," Reed said, "about 75 percent of the town will be with us. Practically no one will be left in town but the police."

The town of about 1,100 is 25 miles southeast of Champaign-Urbana, and the school enrollment is 69, of which about 33 are boys. This fall 23 players to get 20 minutes of basketball in over lunch hour. He also sold ice cream and programs at the Purdue games.

Now he's head coach of an MVC team, and he's selling again. He has to sell his players into believing in themselves and their abilities. He has to sell a new Saluki basketball program.

This season's outcome should indicate whether Allen Van Winkle is a successful salesman.

came out for the team.

"A couple of kids quit but I can usually dress 21 players, barring injuries," said Reed, who is in his first year at Newman. The Redskins will take an 8-0 record against Arcola, 9-0, in Wednesday's first-round of the Class 1A playoffs.

Freeport-Aquin is ranked No. 1 by The Associated Press in Class 1A with Arcola No. 2. Newman is No. 10.

But that doesn't bother Newman fans who wear T-shirts reading "Quality, Not Quantity" nor Reed, who did not play football when he attended high school at Sidell, Jamaica or at Eastern Illinois University.

Newman shut out its first five opponents and has allowed only 12 points. The Redskins have recorded the school's best record this season.

The team's quarterback is Aaron Underwood, a 6-foot, 165-pound senior, who has run for 737 yards and completed 66 of 130 passes for 1,195 yards and 13 touchdowns.

Mike Luth, 5-5 and 140 pounds, has caught 32 passes for 707 yards and 6 touchdowns. Tony Gazzoli, 5-8, 155, has 23 receptions for 397 yards and 5 touchdowns.

Terry Hatcher is the top running back. Hatcher, 5-8, 145, has 725 yards in 124 carries.

Leading the offensive line are center Rusty Craig and guard Glen Nichols.

These six seniors, as expected, also play defense. Craig, Underwood and Hatcher are linebackers; Luth and Gazzoli the defensive backs; and Nichols a defensive end.

After five straight shutouts, Broadlands ABL scored on Newman in the first quarter to tie the season's sixth game at 6-6.

"But that helped us," said Reed. "We took the kickoff, went downfield in 12 plays and scored to go ahead."

vagabond baseball career to communicate with Fernando Valenzuela and he nursed the young Mexican southpaw through a brilliant start.

The Dodgers, sparked by Valenzuela, led the National League West when a strike halted baseball for seven weeks in mid-summer.

The plan appeared to rob the Dodgers of incentive in the second-half and they were flat when they opened the divisional playoffs with two consecutive losses in Houston. Then, only one loss from elimination, the team came home and won three straight games to wipe out the Astros.

Basketball Coach Allen Van Winkle: "As far as I'm concerned last year means nothing."

Van Winkle admits basketball rebuilding process to take time

By Jim Cagle
Staff Writer

New Saluki basketball Coach Allen Van Winkle has a bit of salesman in him.

He has acquired ownership of a down-trodden Saluki basketball program—a used car that was beaten about some by the previous owner. He has replaced some missing parts, cleaned and polished the old ones, and got the machine running again. Now it's his job to sell it.

He'll give you his pitch, always accentuating the positive. He'll tell you all the good things, the team's hard work and dedication, its positive attitude, its experience.

There's only one problem. Van Winkle is honest.

He can't deny that the Saluki machine is not completely rebuilt. He says it will be, but he knows it won't happen over night.

Van Winkle, 34, was hired as Saluki coach March 30. He brings with him a winning tradition, an 88-14 three-year record at Jackson Community College in Michigan. He has 11 years of coaching to his credit, as an assistant at Southwestern Louisiana, his alma mater, and West Texas State.

He replaced Joe Gottfried, who was forced to resign after the Salukis last regular season game.

In Gottfried's final season, the Salukis were 7-20, and 0-16 in the Missouri Valley Conference. They took on the image of the lovable losers, the Cubs of the MVC. Van Winkle hopes that image will fade.

"I really make very few comments about last year," Van Winkle said. "I can't make comparisons because I wasn't here last year."

"As far as I'm concerned last year means nothing," he said. "We're building a whole new program from scratch."

Scratch is right. The Salukis are going to have to scratch, claw and scrap for anything they get this year.

"This season's success will not be measured necessarily in means of wins and losses," Van Winkle said. "This season can be better evaluated on what the program becomes from now on. As far as how many games we'll win, your guess is as good as mine."

What the Salukis are right now is the nucleus of last year's squad, plus three guards—junior college transfers that either played for or against Van Winkle's Jackson Community College team—under the guidance of three new coaches.

"You're not always going to have the best talent in the country," Van Winkle said. "But as long as a team is unselfish and can play together, you can adjust to the talent you have and be a winner. There are so many talented players in college basketball, that through the ups and downs of a season any team can fall at any time."

According to Van Winkle, what he and his assistants, Stafford

Stevenson from Evansville and former Saluki Assistant Coach Herman Williams from Auburn, bring to the team cannot be described as "X and O" things.

"My teams are known for their discipline and aggressiveness," Van Winkle said. "The only thing I can promise is that people on my team will put in a helluva lot of hard work. If they don't, they won't play."

Van Winkle is a scrapper, a fighter. He believes that's the key to success. He doesn't enjoy losing one bit. He expects his team to be the same way.

"I always take my work home with me," said the coach, who enjoys spending time with his family and squeezing in a few rounds of golf when he's not coaching. "It takes me around three days to get over a loss. I've never been a good loser."

And he hasn't been faced with too many losses recently. At Jackson, his teams ranked in the junior college top 10 all three years he coached. All the teams he's been associated with have been successful. All the memories have been good ones.

Van Winkle hails from Lafayette, Ind., the home of the Purdue Boilermakers. Basketball was a big part of his life as he grew up.

As a youth, he and his grade school buddies would shovel snow off the driveway in order

Two netters to compete in prestigious tourney

By Bob Morand
Staff Writer

Two players and their coach will travel west to Kansas this weekend to compete in the Overland Park Tennis Tournament.

Coach Dick LeFevre and tennis players Lito Ampon and David Desilets will be on the court with the top two players from Oklahoma State, last year's Big Eight champion, Oklahoma, Missouri, Kansas, Kansas State, SIU-Edwardsville and a few other schools tentatively scheduled to play.

According to LeFevre, Ampon and Desilets will see a lot of tough competition that "they need to have." Since NCAA competition does not begin until after Jan. 1, such a tournament is what the players need to keep their game sharp—win or lose, he said.

"There will be some players there that they can beat, and some they can't. But it all depends on who they draw in the opening rounds," LeFevre said.

"You can be in a tournament with the top 20 players in the Midwest, and the average reader of the sports section only sees who won, not how each player advanced in the tournament," LeFevre added.

Some of the tournament's tough competition includes Mark Johnson of Oklahoma State, and Ken Flach and Doug Burke of SIU-Edwardsville. Johnson is the incumbent Big Eight singles champion. Flach is the defending NCAA Division II singles champion.

But, according to LeFevre, in a tournament like this everybody wins. The players will be housed and fed by hometown families, he said, adding that this is not only beneficial to the players, but to the game of tennis as a whole.

"It builds support for your program. People get to know the players and then come to the tournaments to follow them," LeFevre said. "This helps build an interest in tennis as a whole."

AP awards Lasorda

NEW YORK (AP)—Tommy Lasorda, the good-humor man who managed the Cinderella Los Angeles Dodgers to their first world championship in 16 years, was named National League Manager of the Year by The Associated Press Tuesday.

Lasorda, the spirited leader of the huggiest team in baseball, was an easy winner in nationwide balloting by sports writers and broadcasters who watched him rally the Dodgers from the edge of elimination three times during postseason play.

He received 215 votes, outdistancing Whitey Herzog of the St. Louis Cardinals, who finished second with 163 votes. Joan McNamara of the Cincinnati Reds was third, with 81 votes.

A consummate company man who continuously sings the praises of "Dodger Blue," Lasorda has been part of the organization as player, scout, coach and manager for 32 years.

He faced his most difficult challenge in 1981 with an aging team that some baseball people thought had passed its peak. But he coaxed the Dodgers to their first world championship since 1955, and he did it in two languages.

Lasorda started the season boldly, turning over the Opening Day pitching assignment to a rookie left-hander who couldn't speak English. But the manager had picked up enough Spanish in his SIDELINED—Saluki tailback Walter Poole wore a baseball cap instead of a football helmet, as he watched last Saturday's game from the sidelines. Coach Hoy Dempsey said Tuesday that the senior, who rushed for 1,092 yards before injuring his knee on Nov. 1 at Indiana State, will miss the season's final game Saturday at New Mexico State.

Nance out for at least two weeks

By Jim Cagle
Staff Writer

Injured SIU-C basketball player Charles Nance will return to practice no sooner than Tuesday, according to Coach Allen Van Winkle.

Nance, a 6-4 junior forward from Hopkinsville, Ky., was elbowed in the abdomen and bruised a kidney in the Nov. 3 practice. He was hospitalized Wednesday, Nov. 4 and released Monday.

"He will see the doctor Friday and again Monday," Van Winkle said. "We'll know by Monday whether or not he can return to practice full tilt.

"He is allowed to walk now, and we have him walking two or three miles a day to try and keep him in shape," he said.

"It's certain that he'll miss a solid two weeks of practice at a very crucial time in the team's development. It's a shame because he was practicing very well before the problems arose."

Aside from Nance, the Salukis leading rebounder last season, the rest of the Salukis are healthy. In fact, some of them are playing with much less weight than they did a year ago.

Prior to the first official practice, Van Winkle had his team on a 20-day conditioning program, which included one to four miles of roadwork per day. As a result, Johnny Fayne, a 6-4 guard, is from 15 to 20 pounds lighter than he was a year ago. Karl Morris, a 6-7 center-forward, has lost between 10 to 12 pounds.

"I think everyone benefited from the conditioning program," Van Winkle said. "We've had a few nagging injuries that always occur in early practice, but nothing to speak of besides Charles. Both Johnny and Karl are moving much better and aren't getting tired near as fast."
