Bush to trust 'inner circle' 5 aides form transition team

Scripps Howard News Service

WASHINGTON — A man who has considered himself a good friend of George Bush for several decades was asked, off the record, what kind of president he thinks Bush will make.

He mulled the thought over and finally said, "I don't know. I really don't. He's a wonderful friend, a good man. But I honestly don't know what he'll do as president."

A political chameleon known more for loyalty than decisiveness, George Bush, 64, is still an unknown quantity as a leader.

A Yankee by birth and a Texan by choice, Bush has been an oilman, a two-term congressman, ambassador to the United Nations, director of the CIA, envoy to China, head of the Republican National Committee and, for the past eight years, vice president.

In those positions, he is remembered as a leader who made few bold moves, a loyal team player who, in Sam Rayburn's phrase, got along by going along.

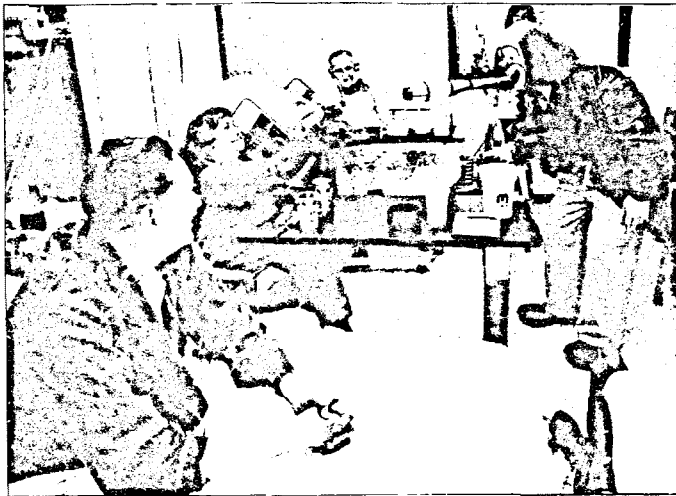

In his presidential campaign, he stuck doggedly to the strategy his aides devised: Don't go into details about what you'll do as president.

First time blood donors boost total toward goal

By Phyllis Coon
Staff Writer

A first-time blood donor quietly slipped into the Student Center Wednesday afternoon.

His temperature, blood pressure and a brief medical history were taken by Red Cross volunteers. He then was escorted to a donor bed.

"The blood drive announcement came across my desk, and I told my secretary that I was going to donate," Jim Hart, athletics director, said.

The total collected as of Wednesday was 1,416 pints.

For the drive, Blood Makes The World Go Round, to reach its goal of 2,500 pints, over 1,000 pints need to be collected on Thursday and Friday. Vivian Ugent, Red Cross blood drive coordinator, said.

Donations will be taken from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the Student Center Ballrooms.

Time schedules and donation locations were reasons Hart gave for not donating before.

"Everything is so handy here," Hart said. "I'm pretty impressed with how the blood drive is operated. I didn't expect the line and all the people."

Hart said he didn't know if his donating would influence others in the Athletics Department to donate.

"I don't have numbers on how many people in the department donate, but it's probably not too many," Hart said. "I hope more people from all around the University would come out and donate."

More than 1,000 pints of blood have been donated during the first four days of the University's fall blood drive, Ugent said.

"The number of people who donate has to build everyday," Ugent said. "People tend to wait until the end of the week to donate. But the turnout has been good."

During the drive 313 people have donated for the first time, Ugent said. On Tuesday there were 100 first-time donors, she said.

"Pepsi donated two liters to first-time donors on Tuesday," Ugent said. "We probably had a high first time turn out because of that."

There also were many return donors.

"I donate because I feel like it's the responsible thing to do," Amy Perry, sophomore in English, said. "No one can cry

Team: Accreditation for journalism conditional

By Wayne Wallace
and Loria Roberson
Staff Writers

A recommendation that the School of Journalism's accreditation be retained on a provisional basis will be made by an accrediting team to the National Accreditation Council.

The accreditation team, which inspected the school Monday through Wednesday, said the journalism program was "suffering from neglect due to a decade of declining University budgets," according to Walter Jaehning, School of Journalism director.

Jaehning said full accreditation may be denied because of major problems in four of the 12 areas of requirement standards.

Student placement and advisement, school budgeting, internships, and public service activities failed to meet the team's requirements.

These four areas were found lacking for several reasons, most of which stem from a lack of funds, Jaehning said.

Linda Seibert, academic adviser, said the report was somewhat critical of the advisement area and internship

Democrats keep control of Legislature

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — Control of the Illinois House and Senate remain in Democratic hands, with no change in the bottom line despite an estimated $4.5 million spent in legislative races and the defeat of two House members.

"We held our own," said William Holland, chief of staff for Senate President Philip Rock, D-Oak Park. "We are always disappointed when we don't gain more seats but you can't go wrong when Democrats are in control."

"In light of the presidential returns, we're very happy with the outcome," echoed Gary LaPaille, chief of staff for House Speaker Michael Madigan, D-Chicago, who said he believes Republicans spent too much in districts they could not win and didn't watch closely enough other districts they could have won.

The result likely will mean Democrats will be in charge when House and Senate district maps are redrawn following the 1990 census, possibly allowing them to continue in power through the next decade. Republicans will have one more shot to grab the Senate reins, but GOP officials admit with only 20 seats up for election two years from now, their odds are not good.

Democrats retained their 31-

28 edge in the Senate, as incumbent lawmakers overcame strong challenges from well-financed opponents. Five key Senate seats, considered targets by both sides, went to the incumbents in contests that proved to be a lot easier than predicted, including two Republican seats in Chicago that Democrats had hoped to regain.

Crowds jeer mercenaries in Maldives coup attempt

MALE, Maldives (UPI) — Furious crowds Wednesday kicked, pummeled and jeered mercenaries and ring leaders who were brought back to the Maldivian capital in handcuffs and chains after a failed coup and escape attempt. Residents in the archipelago of 1,200 low-lying coral islands 380 miles southwest of India's southern tip watched the spectacle on state-run television, which broadcast the public humiliation of the mercenaries.

Ortega to negotiate with Bush administration

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — President Daniel Ortega said he would seek negotiations with the administration of President-elect George Bush to try to normalize relations between Washington and Managua. The relations would involve only "mutual security issues" and could not involve domestic policy issues inside Nicaragua, he said at a press conference Tuesday night. "Nicaragua is ready to begin a serious and formal dialogue with the United States to try to normalize relations," he said.

China earthquake death toll surpasses 1,000

BEIJING (UPI) — The death toll has reached more than 1,000 in the earthquake that rocked remote southwest China but rescue workers have been unable to reach isolated villages and more casualties are expected, reports from the region said Wednesday. Thousands of Chinese soldiers led rescue and recovery efforts in Yunnan Province, where two towns and surrounding counties were ravaged by the Sunday earthquake that measured 7.6 on the Richter scale.

Arzet: Israelis made assassination attempt

TUNIS, Tunisia (UPI) — PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat accused Israeli leaders of recently sending agents to try to kill him, and said "a solution is near" to the 11-month-old Palestinian uprising in the Israeli-occupied territories. Speaking to reporters late Tuesday at his heavily guarded headquarters in the Tunisian capital, Arafat said security at the compound had been beefed up after a recent assassination attempt.

Justice Department civil rights chief resigns

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds, the Justice Department's controversial civil rights chief, resigned Wednesday effective Dec. 9. Reynolds, who led the Reagan administration's assault on affirmative action and busing, previously had said he would stay on at the department until after the presidential election.

Reagan, Bush discuss 'smooth transition'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan and President-elect George Bush arranged a post-election meeting Wednesday to quickly set in motion a "smooth transition" into the nation's next Republican administration. Bush said he would use the transition to assemble the very best possible team "to meet the challenges that lie before us." Bush also announced he has selected James Baker, Reagan's former chief of staff and Treasury secretary, to succeed George Shultz as secretary of state.

Mississippi executive surrenders hostages

COLUMBIA, Miss. (UPI) — A heavily armed former insurance executive seized 10 hostages at his ex-employer's office and held off police for eight hours before surrendering early Wednesday. The man, blaming age discrimination for his firing several years ago, showed up at his former workplace carrying two shotguns, a high-powered rifle, a pistol and two 5-gallon cans of gasoline, authorities said.

Attack by pit bull injures 72-year-old woman

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — A 72-year-old woman was in critical condition Wednesday after being mauled by two pit bull terriers in her front yard as she tried to protect her cat from the dogs. Milwaukee police killed the dogs Tuesday shortly after the attack. The woman suffered bite wounds on the back of the head, both arms and both legs. Doctors at the Milwaukee County Medical Complex performed surgery late Tuesday on her badly mangled right arm.

Musical mystery lets audience choose murderer

By Wayne Wallace
Staff Writer

Broad farce was the bill of fare when "The Mystery of Edwin Drood" roared into Shryock Auditorium Monday night.

A top notch cast and a gallery of splendid show tunes highlighted the national tour production of Charles Dickens' unfinished murder mystery, as the Celebrity Series added another jewel to its crown.

Theater Review

The fun started before the audience realized what was happening. The entire cast entered simultaneously from the back of the theater and balcony, quickly scattering themselves throughout the house.

Each performer coached a different section of the audience into booing, hissing, clapping or cheering whenever his character made stage entrances throughout the evening.

Such was the case with C.M. Yates, who portrayed John Jasper, the most likely suspect in the murder of young Edwin Drood. In the fine tradition of Snidely Whiplash, Yates was greeted with hisses and cat-calls every time he walked on stage.

Rooting for a favorite villain was all a part of the excitement shared between the audience and cast.

The performers took no prisoners as they immediately broke down any existing audience barriers with the no-holds-barred opening number, "There You Are."

The audience gets to solve the mystery of which villain did away with young Edwin Drood during the tour of the Tony Award winning musical-comedy "The Mystery of Edwin Drood" which was performed at Shryock Auditorium Monday night.

Some singers were in the aisles, making fun of individual audience members, while the rest of the cast formed a lively chorus on stage, setting a wild burlesque pace that carried through until the show's final curtain.

Nothing was held sacred. Author-composer Rupert Holmes lampoons everything from the traditional Broadway musical to the mystery genre to Dickens himself.

The tricky plot of this musical within a musical had each of the featured players actually portraying two characters. The outer frame of the play is set in London in 1892 where a troupe of actors in the Music Hall Royale attempt to stage a musical version of "The Mystery of Edwin Drood."

Therefore, each actor played an actor playing a role in a 19th century production of "Drood".

For example, Mike Carruthers performed the part of Mr. Philip Bax, an English thespian who in turn was performing as Bazzard, a sort of village idiot in Dickens' story.

When Bazzard's purpose is fulfilled in Dickens' narrative, the forlorn actor Bax breaks character on stage and asks the music hall chairman for his wages so he can go home.

The chairman feels sorry for the third-rate actor, who is constantly cast in these unappreciated roles, and gives him a chance in the spotlight with "Never the Luck," a rousing tune Bax wrote for just such an occasion.

Carruthers, a cross between Donald O'Connor and Ray Bolger, scored big as the wiry comic dancer who gets to enact every bit player's dream.

By allowing his "characters" to step out of character and address the audience, Holmes pokes fun at the world of theatre.

This type of Monty Python satire prevailed wonderfully throughout the evening as "Drood" constantly parodied itself.

The 19th Century melodrama was shown no mercy as the renacing villains in Dickens' tale mugged and grimaced their way through a five-course meal of the scenery, with hammy actors dropping all sorts of clues as to the identity of the murderer. — Often the characters froze on stage, allowing the narrator to expound on the action at hand.

The narrator took shape in the form of music hall chairman William Cartwright portrayed by Steven LeBlanc.

Lousy puns were the narrator's main comedic contribution to the show. In describing the childhood of the lovely Miss Rosa Bud, he stated, "She was raised in a house of nuns, where there was none of this and none of that."

These lines were delivered so sincerely that the audience couldn't help laughing at them.

There were excellent performances by many of the actors.

Yates, as the drug-addicted Jasper, stands out prominently as truly the most despicable, sinister villain of the piece.

Yates' flair with terror-comedy marked him as a truly unforgettable actor.

There was plenty of voice and plenty of person contained in Princess Puffer (Karliah Hamilton) the lusty mistress of Jasper's favorite opium den.

Hamilton displayed a wonderful gift with song and comedy in the enjoyable "Wages of Sin" number, where she breaks character to proposition a male member of the audience.

Hamilton was an early favorite with the crowd, and was later voted by the audience to be the heroine of the piece. She was paired with the saintly Rev. Crisparkie, who, upon embracing the rotund harlot, proclaiming to the audience, "God bless

National Democrats lacking moderation

GEORGE BUSH'S election points out a basic problem in the Democratic Party's nominating process. Consider the 22nd Congressional District, where Democrat Glenn Poshard won overwhelmingly over Patrick Kelley. Dukakis, according to unofficial counts, received a very small margin of votes over Bush in the same district.

The difference between Dukakis and Poshard is simple. Poshard refused to embrace, or be painted with, every liberal label. Poshard didn't have to embrace all those liberal policies because he didn't run in Democratic primaries controlled by fanatically liberal party members.

DUKAKIS EMBRACED the liberal activists early in the primary season when he told liberal Iowa voters that he was proud to be a liberal and a "card-carrying member of the ACLU."

We are not, as the GOP implied during the campaign, suggesting there is something inherently wrong with all liberal policies. Unfortunately for the Democrats, Dukakis was perceived as adhering to the worst, as well as the best, parts of the liberal philosophy.

POSHARD, THOUGH, did not have to talk like a staunch liberal just to get his party's nomination. When Patrick Kelley tried to attach the entire Democratic party platform to Poshard's campaign, those parts of the platform that were repugnant to mainstream voters failed to stick.

Poshard's greatest attribute is his ability to look like a liberal to those concerned with social issues, and to look conservative on at least some of the issues that have chased "Reagan Democrats" from the liberal fold.

DUKAKIS WAS mired in a lot of single issues that cost him votes he otherwise would have gotten. He was pro-gun control, and while he had the support of most labor groups, members of those groups that are also hunters and gun collectors turned against him. Likewise, pro-life Democrats voted against him because of his stand on abortion.

Poshard managed to distance himself from these liberal stands, even though he said at the Democratic Convention he supported the platform that contained those planks.

A more moderate candidate — a fiscal conservative and social liberal like Poshard — could get the Democrats back into the White House. More solidly liberal candidates will assure the GOP control of the oval office until some national calamity forces them from power.

Shortcuts must be cut short

I would like the students of SIU-C to stop and think a moment before they walk across the grass lawns between our buildings on campus. I know that everyone is aware of the dirt paths being made through our grass and woods. Since SIU-C has one of the most beautiful and well-kept campuses in the state, I think students should take the time to use the existing sidewalks.

While I was walking through Thompson Woods, I noticed that students are constantly creating new paths through the woods. I feel there is already too many paths. Some of the shortcuts probably would not even save ten seconds. I can not believe that students down here are that pressed for time that they have to trample down the grass. If something is not done to stop these new paths, then Thompson Woods will soon look like another parking lot.

If we are not going to preserve the campus, then why not just push all the trees down and make our campus look like every other campus around the state.

I do not know the solution to keeping our campus looking natural, but I do know that students can help by not being so lazy. If you are so pressed for time, then limit your conversations with friends on the way to class.

I feel it would only take a small effort on the part of students to stop abusing our grass and woods on campus. We must take pride in caring for our natural setting. — Brent Flesner, sophomore, political science.

Kristallnacht: a day to remember

NOV. 10, 1988, commemorates the 50th anniversary of Kristallnacht, (The Night of Broken Glass), in which hundreds of Jewish shops, schools, synagogues and homes were vandalized in Germany. This day, Nov. 10, 1938, has been considered as the official beginning of the Holocaust, the systematic destruction of nearly 6,000,000 Jews during Nazi rule in Germany prior to, and during, World War II.

Persecution of the Jews had begun almost as soon as Hitler had assumed power in 1933; the infamous Nuremberg Laws had been enacted and many people had already been transported to concentration camps. However, it was on Kristallnacht that full-scale persecution commenced. Many people, a large proportion of them educated and contributing to German society, were arrested and deported to camps. Many were never seen again.

The Jews of Europe had lived in various parts of Europe for several hundred years, some for nearly two thousand years. A way of life was destroyed by the Nazis, all in the name of superiority.

No one can, or should, forget the Holocaust. Nor should the other minorities persecuted by the Nazis, such as Gypsies and Slavs, be forgotten. The Holocaust was the darkest day in human history. — Jeffrey Ebenstein, graduate, political science, Hillel Council Member.

There must be six ways to leave your DE

Getting straight to the point, many of my co-workers and I think that the colorful coupon fliers put in the DE to boost local fast food sales are completely senseless. This shows where the priorities of our newspaper lie:

1. In the trash.
2. On the lawns.
3. On the hallway floors.
4. Stuck in doorways.

5. In Campus Lake.
6. And, lastly, in a garbage dumpster.

This is an obvious waste aesthetically, economically and environmentally. This type of foolish use of wood pulp is one big reason for the demand on the tropical rain forest — a major contributor to the oxygen needed for our planet — and combats the greenhouse effect. These fliers cannot even be recycled like newspapers can. They have too much dye and ink, which also happens to be poisonous substances.

To make a long story short, and to clean up this whole mess, I plead with the DE to clean up its act. There has got to be a better way. — Elaine AbuSherbain, graduate, education.

Freedom of speech questionable for racists

On the Wednesday morning telecast of "Donahue," I was appalled at the statements made by a white racist who, in previous years, has run for the United States Senate. The problem that was brought up by the show was whether or not supremacist groups such as the Ku Klux Klan have the right to speak to the public, on cable television, about their beliefs. This would enable them to make racist and religious remarks against those they felt were not "superior" to them.

The racist, so he considered himself, stated that the United States government was no better than communist governments like that of the Soviet Union. He also stated that the blacks and Jews were the ones who brought the plague of AIDS to this country, a plague set forth by God, so he said.

The problem that exists is that civil libertarians believe that all people, regardless of their religion or race, should have the right to speak on cable television, which is supported by the First Amendment in the U.S. Constitution.

I agree that all people, regardless of race or religion, have the right to speak, but I agree only so far. To be able to tell people on television that one race or religion is better than another only instills poor morals and hatred in children and those who are borderline in their beliefs. I think hatred only leads to violence between the two which could be life threatening.

The problem still exists, do we give these bigots the right to slander the good people of other races, or do we take their First Amendment rights away? I really believe that if they have the desire to speak about hatred and ideas of rising up against the non-white masses that we should make them purchase their own cable station and give people the choice to pay extra if they care to hear the garbage that they are preaching. Every man is created equal and in the likeness of God, so why do we have so much racism if we are so equal with one another? — Heather K. Grass, senior, speech communication and public relations.

Letters to the editor may be submitted by mail or directly to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 500 words. Letters of fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department.

Letters submitted by mail should include the author's address and telephone number. Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

Telethon set for Emeritus College fund

Emeritus College volunteers will work a bank of telephones to raise funds to increase the Emeritus College Scholarship Endowment Fund which now amounts to $11,000.

Hiram Lesar, chair of the Emeritus College Scholarship Committee, is calling telephone solicitors to increase money given to students.

The call-in is Nov. 15, from 6:30 to 9 p.m., in the basement phone room of the Student Center.

Thirty-five volunteers are needed. A list of emeriti with phone numbers will be available. The committee is looking for about 30 volunteers.

Call the Emeritus College office to get your name on the volunteer calling list.

The solicitation is only one night and it is the biggest way for the students to contribute.

you!" This is one instance where disclosing the murderer's identity won't ruin the play. Every performance is different thanks to audience participation. In the second act, the crowd votes on whodunit.

Monday night's audience was ruthless, electing the pure-hearted Rosa Bud to be the killer. This plot twist added much intrigue to the ending because Rosa (Marie-Laurence Danvers) and Edwin Drood (Kris Montgomery) were once engaged to be married.

Before Rosa could put Edwin's lights out, Danvers and Montgomery shared an excellent love duet in "Perfect Strangers." Danvers also took honors for the best song of the entire performance, the haunting "Moonfall," which she reprised twice.

Montgomery, a master of male impersonation, brought "Drood" to an inspirational conclusion by belting out "Writing on the Wall" for the show's finale.

information. Seibert said the department receives information and keeps a running file in the advisement office for students, but "there is no one actively promoting internships or making contacts for the students."

Jaehrig said the report also listed "insufficient computer facilities" as a contributing factor and labeled the advertising program as having a "narrow focus."

Jyotika Ramaprasad, assistant professor, said she has not had a chance to thoroughly read the report, but felt the criticism of a narrow focus may apply to the advertising sequence focusing more on ad agency careers.

"But I think the program is very good," she said.

Jaehrig said the School of Journalism has a high-climbing ratio of students to faculty and the number of faculty has declined over the past few years. "We've had 75 percent new faculty in the past two years," he said.

This high faculty turnover was also on the accrediting team's list.

Police Blotter

Jason B. Kent, 23, of 506 S. Fourth St. reported someone stole his 1977 Chevrolet pickup truck at 2:50 a.m. Wednesday.

Paul Krugman, 22, of 514 S. Logan St. reported someone entered his vehicle sometime between 6 p.m. Monday and 2:30 a.m. Tuesday and stole an in-dash, stereo cassette player and a cassette case containing 35 tapes, police said. Estimated loss is $450.

Stiles Office Supply Company Manager Mark Sanders reported someone stole a mobile transceiver radio from a delivery van parked outside the warehouse at 601 Industrial Park Rd, police said. The burglary reportedly occurred sometime between 5 p.m. Friday and 8 a.m. Tuesday. Estimated loss is $900.

Board of Trustees meeting canceled due to weather

The Board of Trustees meeting has been canceled because weather in central Illinois prevented members from attending the Carbondale meeting, President John C. Guyon said.

Guyon said the meeting would not be rescheduled. The next meeting will be in December.

any more than I do when I give. I can't get use to it. I don't enjoy it. But it's something I want to do."

"I keep seeing people I know and ask them if they've donated and they keep giving me explanations why they haven't," Perry said. "They need to get out here and give."

When donors arrive at the check-in table, they could receive pamphlets about the suggestions made by the National Accreditation Council.

President John C. Guyon stated that it is too early to tell whether the University can supply the School of Journalism with the funds it needs to step up its program and meet accreditation requirements.

Guyon said that money from next semester's tuition increase may be able to help the school, but that such money could not be given specially to the journalism program.

According to Jaehrig, the team's preliminary report listed "support was forthcoming to replace lost resources." The report did not elaborate, Jaehrig said.

The accreditation team included student and faculty input in their report. The team found most students to be "motivated, enthused, and career-oriented journalists with a deep commitment to the school," Jaehrig said.

The team also found "high morale" among the faculty and noted the teachers' "concern for the students."

Mark Gordon, a spokesman for the Senate GOP, said the re-election of freshmen Republican Sens. Walter Dudyecz in the 7th District and Robert Raica in the 24th District was a victory in itself.

"We knew going into this it was an uphill battle," Gordon said. "Our biggest concern was not losing anybody."

Thirty-nine incumbents in the 59-seat Senate all won re-election, an event which probably has not happened this century, one legislative observer said. The other 20 got a pass and will face re-election in 1990. Nine of the 39 faced no opposition.

The bottom line in the House also will remain with the Democrats holding a 67-51 lock on the lower chamber's 118 seats. But there were a few surprises and upsets there with two House incumbents — one Republican and one Democrat — going down to defeat.

Rep. Sam Panayotovich of Chicago, a Democrat turned Republican in the 35th House District, lost his contest to Democrat Clement Balanoff, Chicago's 10th Ward committeeman and son of a former representative.

"Sometimes people said we shouldn't have gone after Sam because he is a nice guy. But sometimes politics is business and sometimes it transcends friendship," LaPaille said. "We sent a message you do not fool voters by getting elected as a Democrat and then change sides because the person who pulls your strings tells you to."

Student: Hitchhiking requires caution, planning

By Joyce Bergman
Student Writer

Editor's note: This is the last of two stories on hitchhiking.

Not every hitchhiker is a crazed killer as portrayed on television, according to Matt French, senior in English and part-time hitchhiker.

French hitchhiked three times this summer to see his girlfriend. But his girlfriend was not just across town. She was in Chicago, 300 miles from Carbondale.

French's decision to hitchhike to Chicago was spontaneous, but he calculated his every move once the decision was made, he said.

For his first day of hitchhiking from Carbondale to Chicago was on the road by 5:30 a.m. French said he carefully dressed in a button-down oxford shirt, tailored dress shorts and running shoes for comfort.

"IF FIRST impressions have importance anywhere it's with hitchhiking," French said. "You have to put yourself in the mind of the driver. Everyone's seen the movies with the psychotic hitchhikers, so you have to appear non-threatening. That's just common sense."

French started his trip to Chicago hitchhiking on Route 13, near the University Mall in Carbondale. "I felt very refreshed and was excited about the adventure I was going on," French said.

He had difficulty finding a ride for the first hour of his trip. It took two rides to get to Marion, but, French said, "All I thought was, 'Keep going.'"

AN OLDER man, between 60 and 70 years old, was the first person to pick him up, French said. As the two were talking, French discovered that the

"Everyone's seen the movies with the psychotic hitchhikers, so you have to appear non-threatening."

man was an ex-NFL referee. The man told French that when he was young, he used to hitchhike to get to school. He said that was the reason he gave French a ride.

After two more rides, inching closer to Chicago, French was beginning to get the feel of things. "I had not been afraid so far, but I was learning proper hitching etiquette," he said. "You have to play a yes man, and be able to read people to know what they want in a rider. Some people want you to talk, while others would rather you just sit there."

FRENCH LEARNED this lesson from what he calls his most interesting ride. He said he was picked up by a truck driver who also turned out to be an ex-convict. Although French said he did not feel threatened by the man, French admits that he asked the man too many probing questions.

"I was curious about this guy's life, and asked him about jail and things like that. Right away, I knew I bit a nerve. He ignored me and turned up the radio really loud. He seemed pretty happy to see me get out of his truck," French said.

AN OLDER woman who gave French what he calls his "luckiest ride," did not hesitate to pick up hitchhikers. She was traveling from Texas to Michigan and told French that she routinely picked up hitchhikers for company on her long trips. She gave him a two-hour ride and dropped him off at 4 p.m. in the heart of Chicago — right where he wanted to be.

French said he realizes the dangers of hitchhiking. But said he is always careful what he says to drivers, especially after his experience with the truck driver.

He admits that with each ride there was a little bit of tension and he was very aware of anything out of the ordinary.

"MY MIND was constantly at work, thinking ahead," French said.

Of French's three hitchhiking trips, he said he only encountered the police once. French said the police told him that he could only hitch by off-ramps, not alongside the highway.

Jackson County Deputy Sheriff David Jaquot said that technically hitchhiking is illegal, but the prohibition is seldom enforced.

"Those soliciting a ride cannot stand in the roadway. That's the catch," he said.

Jaquot said police officers use their discretion with hitchhikers since some people do not have any other way of getting around. "We usually stop hitchhikers and run an identity check on them, though," Jaquot said.

FRENCH CLAIMED he was only really scared once while hitchhiking. He was walking along the highway and did not even have his thumb out when a big, white car with tinted windows pulled up behind him. French said he hesitated, but looked inside the partially rolled down window.

French described the man as, "...a big fat man, with ghost-white skin, and deep rose colored lips that seemed like they wanted to kiss you." He said every instinct told him not to take the ride, but desperation for a ride pushed him to get in.

After French got in the car, the man closed all the electric windows, French said. Being very leery French said he lied to the man and said he was meeting his friends at a specific time and place.

FRENCH SAID the man actually turned out to be very nice. He was a professor at Loyola and had a master's degree in English, and since French was an English major himself, they discussed William Faulkner's works, French said.

Although all three of his trips did not go smoothly, and sometimes he got very frustrated when he could not get a ride, French said he loved his adventure and plans to continue hitchhiking. "I met so many interesting people. Some really inspired me," he said.

French admits that hitchhiking is not for everyone, but he does have some tips for those who decide to hitchhike. "First of all," he said, "Dress nicely so you make a good first impression. Otherwise you'll find it hard to get a ride."

HE ALSO advises to be congenial and look for clues of what the driver wants in a rider. "Play their game. They're doing you a favor," he said.

A FRED'S EDITORIAL

Last Saturday on the Strip some "scream singers" went on for 12 minutes about how some women (though his words did indicate a female dog) got his private parts hot, to the point where he wanted to put these some Fred up private parts into this woman's private parts. (He made some cat like reference.)

Whereas at Fred's in the same 12 minutes we told you about a sweet home on rocky top, an invalid whose wife Ruby took her love to town and still had the time to ask the musical question, "Did your chewing gum lose its flavor on the bed post overnight?" If you're tired of hearing lyrics as if they came from Hustler magazine, then come to Fred's where the words never offend and music has a humtable melody.

A cry at Bush rallies was "Four more years." And a continuation of President Reagan's policies is what most analysts expect of the next four years. It certainly is what Reagan expects, Bush acknowledges.

For the most part ignoring calls to declare his independence and map out his own program, Bush has made few breaks with Reagan. He has hinted at a more flexible view on the environment and education. In addition, he has given enough clues in interviews, speeches and off-the-cuff remarks to indicate that the Bush presidency will be a time of reacting, not innovating.

Bush will bring together a team of seasoned, talented professionals, some of whom are already in office.

As president, Bush will rely on an inner circle of five familiar names for advice and counsel: his campaign chairman and Secretary of State-designate James Baker;

his chief of staff, Craig Fuller; his pollster, Robert Teeter; his top fund-raiser, Robert Mosbacher; and an old friend, Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady.

The leading Secretary of Defense candidate so far is former Texas Sen. John Tower.

Bush Wednesday named Fuller and Teeter co-directors of his transition. He also named aide Boyden Gray general counsel to the transition and said Gray would also become his legal counselor in the White House.

Washington hasn't seen such a transition in 60 years. Not since 1928, when Herbert Hoover took over from Calvin Coolidge, has a president been elected to succeed a president of the same political party. Some likely members of the Bush Cabinet and appointees to other top posts:

■ Secretary of State — His first Cabinet appointment was James Baker, the brains and political cunning behind Bush. Baker is respected by Democrats and Republicans alike as a steady man of good judgment. He has won high marks as White House chief of staff during Reagan's first terms and Treasury secretary during the second term.

■ White House chief of staff — Craig Fuller will move up to the White House with his boss. The chief of staff is the president's chief adviser, runs the White House and decides who gets the president's ear.

■ Director of the White House Office of Management and Budget — Bush will certainly have in his administration Richard Darman, former White House deputy chief of staff and top Treasury official. Darman is said to want OMB, where he'd be responsible for attacking the deficit.

■ Secretary of Defense — The leading candidate so far is former Texas Sen. John Tower. Former chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee and a member of the Reagan-appointed Iran-Contra investigating team, Tower is known to want the job. But there's some talk of keeping Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci.

■ Attorney General — Bush was the deciding voice in choosing respected former Pennsylvania Gov. Richard wouldn't be surprised if the moderate Thornburgh was Bush's first appointment to the Supreme Court.

■ Secretary of the Treasury — Bush also was mainly responsible for Reagan's selection of Bush's old friend, Nicholas Brady, a Wall Street investment banker, to be Treasury secretary, succeeding Baker. Brady is certain to stay on in that post or another of his choosing.

■ Secretary of Energy — A good bet is New Hampshire Gov. John Sununu, a key aide in the Bush's campaign.

■ Secretary of Agriculture — Clayton Yeutter, currently President Reagan's special trade representative, is said to be the frontrunner.

■ Secretary of Education — Bush was instrumental in bringing the current Education Secretary, Lauro Cavazos, to Washington. Cavazos, a Texas Hispanic, is thought likely to stay.

Current Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos, a Texas Hispanic, is thought likely to stay.

Vergennes family maintains exotic zoo in their back yard

By Kathleen DeBo
Staff Writer

The first thing visitors notice at Shirley Zoller's home near Vergennes is the animals. The Zollers have a lot of animals — and not just dogs and cats, though they have those too.

The first animal to greet visitors is Samatha, a Shih Tzu who looks like a big, brown cotton ball. Samatha is extremely friendly.

Zoller apologized for her dog and scolded, "Samatha, I'm going to put you in a pen if you don't leave."

Samatha would have a lot of company. The Zollers keep about 30 different animals, from emus, swans and turkeys to deer and goats. They keep almost everything except a llama.

"I still want a llama but they're pretty expensive," Shirley said.

One would think the animals might dislike one another, but even the cats and dogs do not fight like cats and dogs, Zoller said.

But her son Danny, corrected her.

"They all get along except the dogs and the emus," he said.

Zoller said, "The emus will chase a dog out but they don't hurt it."

"I've got two little grandkids and a lot of children around. I do most of the feeding myself. I won't keep anything mean," she said.

"Emus are nosy. You have to be careful. They'll pick up anything shiny, like a nail, and swallow it," she said.

Emus are large, ostrich-like birds and rheas are like small emus.

On April Fools Day, one year, a pair of full-grown rheas got loose, Shirley said.

The sheriff's department thought it was a joke, she said.

The Zollers recaptured the female but the male rhea had a broken leg and died, she said.

Most of the animals stay in their pens. Some of the white-tail deer got out once, but they returned and wanted back in the pen, Zoller said.

The Zollers added turkeys about 10 years ago, she said.

"They're Missouri Wild turkeys. I like them the best. They're different; they're pretty. I don't like the white turkey — just a wild turkey. They're more exotic," she said.

The Zollers also sell turkeys.

"Most buy them to start their own, though they could eat them," she said. "Turkeys lay (eggs) the first year. Put them in an incubator and they'll hatch."

Zoller said the eggs should be heated for a few days and then the heat should be decreased. The wild turkeys are kept in pens until they are large enough to be set free, she said.

"They could run off for no reason. Predators like coyotes can get them," she said. "The hens will go off a little ways to make their nests, if you don't catch them and pen them."

The Zollers hatch some turkey eggs in the incubator and let the hens hatch some themselves, Zoller said.

"You always come up short a few. Coons will suck out their eggs," she said.

Zoller said she knows most of the people she sells turkeys to and does not sell large numbers at once.

"We keep around 20. I raise about 50 to 75 a year and start selling them when they're three days old and on up, depending on what stage people want them at," she said.

Zoller said wild turkeys are not any trouble and don't eat a lot.

People come to see the animals and they buy bedding plants at the greenhouse. The Zollers run all summer and fall, she said.

"In the springtime we have an awful lot. People bring their kids. They head to the pens first before they come to the greenhouse," she said.

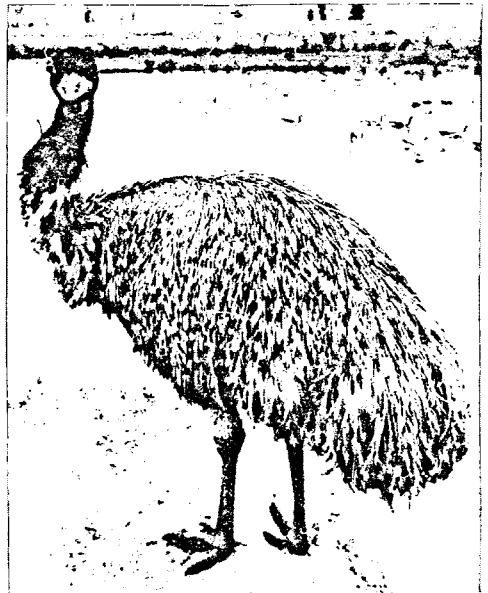

People come to see the baby ducks, geese, deer, goats and rabbits in the spring, Zoller said.

The Zollers keep doves, chipmunks, ground squirrels, ducks and pheasants as well.

The vet tests the turkeys and pheasants for disease and the other birds just stay healthy, Zoller said.

"We haven't had much problem with disease, though you will lose one once in a while for no apparent reason," she said.

The animals do take some time but Shirley said her family is grown and the greenhouse is slow until spring.

An emu poses for a picture at Shirley Zoller's greenhouse just outside of Vergennes. The emu is related to the ostrich and is one of several exotic animals on the Zoller farm.

"In the spring, my family takes care of themselves," Shirley said.

She gets up at 5 a.m. to feed and water the birds and animals.

"If you like it, you find the time," she said.

Zoller said her grandchildren like to watch the incubation and the hatching of the baby chicks.

"They like every bit of it. In fact, Adam wants a pen of his own at his house for a duck, a rabbit and some chickens," she said.

Zoller said they have always had some animals, although it took 20 years to accumulate the number and variety they have now.

"I took an interest in more animals all the time. My husband is also interested in all kinds of animals and he keeps the pens built," she said. "I enjoy showing this stuff off."

U.S. holds largest memorial for Jews killed in Holocaust

United Press International

Exactly 50 years after Kristallnacht — the "night of shattered glass" when brown-shirted German thugs hounded Jews into the streets and torched their synagogues — candles burned Wednesday and bells tolled across America in emotional memorials to the 6 million Jews who perished in the Nazi Holocaust.

"The Nazis understood that we sometimes forget, that the synagogue is the soul of Jewry, the source of our communal strength," Rabbi Alexander Schindler told worshippers who jammed the Union of American Hebrew Congregations chapel in New York City.

"But they did not succeed," Schindler said of the Nazis' methodical plan to exterminate Europe's Jews. "Millions of Jews died but somehow the Jewish people survived."

The memorial included readings of poetry written by Jewish children who later perished in Nazi death camps. Worshippers brought the service a climax by placing a Torah scroll rescued from the Holocaust into an empty ark.

The Manhattan service was one of hundreds of Kristallnacht observances in cities across the United States in the nation's largest-ever commemoration of the victims the Nazi Holocaust.

Hundreds of Nazi storm-troopers working under official orders stormed through Germany that night, destroying 200 synagogues and 7,500 Jewish shops.

"Kristallnacht was the real beginning of the Holocaust," said Ernst Michel, a 65-year-old survivor of five years in Nazi concentration camps who helped organize the nationwide Kristallnacht observances. "It was the night when the German government, aided by local people, launched an attack against the Jews."

"Even in my wildest imagination I couldn't have dreamed of the disaster that was to befall German Jewry," said Michel, who was a 15-year-old schoolboy in the German city of Mannheim on Nov. 9, 1938. "I went to the synagogue saw the brown-shirts tearing out holy scrolls, rolling them down the aisles and setting them afire."

"It must be remembered or people will forget. It shows what discrimination taken to its extreme can lead to. It should never happen again."

Jews in every synagogue in the United States lighted candles that would burn through the night to symbolize Jewish survival.

A lot of people have never seen this."

Danny Zoller said when cars drive by they slow down to look.

The Zollers spend about $100 a month in game bird feed in addition to the grain, which they raise themselves, Zoller said.

Danny said the family goes through about 20 bags of feed a month.

Zoller said the animals all eat basically the same kind of food, though the emus, rheas, ducks and swans occasionally get dog food for protein.

The animals do not have a problem with the weather either, Zoller said. In the winter, many of the animals stay on the ponds. The Zollers also provide shelters and bedding to keep the animals warm, she said.

"Most of them adapt to the cold weather. Plenty of food helps," she said.

Danny said the baby rheas and turkeys can get chilled in the spring, though.

This summer's record heat did not bother the animals either. They got plenty of shade and water, although there was concern over the low water levels in the ponds, Zoller said.

Zoller said she can tell most of the animals apart.

"I try to name everything, although I've gotten so much, I'm running out of names," she said.

The Zollers do eat one of the animals occasionally.

Zoller said they eat geese sometimes, if there are too many, and occasionally mallard or Pekin ducks.

WHAT WE NEED IS A REAL VOICE

I am casting my vote for collective bargaining on November 16 because I believe the current lack of real faculty participation in governance is a major source of dissatisfaction and low faculty morale at SIUC. Participation in a committee that rubber-stamps decisions already made by the administration is not what is meant by the traditional concept of the faculty voice. The vote of the Faculty Senate is no more meaningful.

Not all administrative decisions are good - not all faculty opinions deserve to be ignored. Are we wrong to assume that faculty should have the right to be full and equal partners in university governance? Your faculty colleagues in IEA/NEA believe that the concept of faculty authority should become a reality at SIUC. The positive nature of the platform proposed by SIUC IEA/NEA could bring about true faculty participation in the governance of this institution.

Therefore, I will be voting for SIUC IEA/NEA as my bargaining representative on November 16th.

Women's positions studied

15 women explain reasons why they left University

By Nora Bentley
Staff Writer

In response to an informal study sent to women who left SIU-C for other universities, Kathryn Ward, co-chairperson of the Women's Caucus, said women on campus need to define their own agenda, name their own experiences, and pressure the administration for changes on women's issues.

The study was sent to 15 women who have left SIU-C to gain insight into why they left, to assess their current atmosphere, and to solicit suggestions they have for improving the status of women at SIU-C. Charlotte West, associate director of intercollegiate athletics, said, "I thought it was important to look at why people are leaving," she said.

The study shows that low salaries are among the main reasons women leave the University, but the study also indicates other problems.

Reasons for leaving given by the 15 women include a hostile work environment, greater chances for advancement elsewhere, incidents of sexism and sexual harassment, and lack of respect by male colleagues and students.

The study shows that low salaries are among the main reasons women leave the University, but the study also indicates other problems.

Ward said women, including non-members of the caucus, need to define their own agenda and actions that need to be taken. Women should take action on issues that the president and the University Women's Professional Advancement Committee don't address.

She said women need to name their own experiences instead of letting the administration name them. "We need to speak up about our concerns," Ward said.

The administration has said to be patient, but Ward said patience is another way of saying they are waiting for the assertive women to give up.

Suggestions for improving the status of women at SIU-C by the 15 surveyed include increasing hiring and retention of women and minorities at all levels, starting university-wide educational programs for men on sexism, education about sexual harassment and affirmative action, and more flexibility and risk-taking by administrators.

"I would challenge the administration to find another peer university that is in as bad shape as us."

West said that the women need to dwell on the number of women in key administrative roles. "I would challenge the administration to find another peer university that is in as bad shape as us."

Gospel concert scheduled

By Beth Clavin
Entertainment Editor

Rapture, a local gospel group, will perform a concert entitled "Wrapped in His Love" at 3 p.m. Saturday in the Student Center Ballroom D.

Rapture was formed in November 1986 to perform at a local food drive, but the response was so great that the group continued to perform. James E. Anderson Jr., manager of the group, said.

Anderson, who formed the group with Warren G. Grigsby Jr., said the group is made up of eight men from diverse backgrounds, most of whom started out singing in church.

"Probably 95 percent of our songs are ones we wrote ourselves," he said.

The group also is completing its first album, entitled "Saved," at the Christian Recording Company in Carbondale, Anderson said.

Tickets for the concert are $4 in advance at the Student Center box office or $5 at the door.

Junior Recital to feature 4 musicians

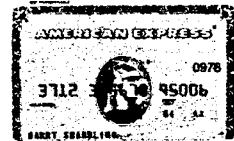

A Joint Junior Recital, featuring the music of Mozart, Handel and Peters, is scheduled for 8 tonight at the Old Baptist Foundation Recital Hall.

The recital will feature Donna M. Lagerstedt, violinist; Anita Hutton, pianist; Nga-Hea Ong, pianist; and Siew Toke Sze Tho, percussionist.

These musicians will be accompanied by Patty Dusenbury on the flute, Christine Norman on the viola and Cathy Paul on the cello.

Admission is free.

Herrin's philosophy begins to show

Men's basketball coach Rich Herrin is entering his fourth year.

By David Gallanetti
Staff Writer

Simply put, basketball is Rich Herrin's life. He would have it no other way.

"I knew my brother (Ron) was going to be a coach, and when I started college I didn't (want to be a coach) because he was," said Herrin, who is entering his fourth season at SIU-C. "I talked with him and decided it wouldn't be too bad. I've been very lucky."

Herrin's "luck" gave him a 616-209 record in 29 years at the high school level. His teams claimed 55 titles, including a state record 21 regional championships.

Herrin's first head coaching position came in 1960 when he was hired by Okaville High School, and went to the state championship quarterfinals in Champaign his first season.

After four years, he was hired by Benton High School and became one of the dominant coaches in Illinois high school basketball.

With the Salukis' record having steadily risen over the years, Herrin's basketball philosophy is beginning to show in the Saluki program.

Despite coaching on the college level, Herrin said simple fundamentals are a big part of his program.

"You have got to have sound fundamentals," Herrin said. "A lot of athletes don't realize their importance, and aren't mentally strong during the drills."

Herrin said the art of basketball coaching requires a lot of teaching, which isn't an easy thing to do.

"I think basketball is the hardest game to teach. I have preached for years that coaches don't make good players. The key is how hard they work on their own. All the coaches do is help aid, motivate and give direction."

"The toughest thing to do is get players to work on their weakest phase of the game. Good shooters like to shoot, but if they lack quickness, then they won't work hard during the quickness drills."

"It takes a lot of motivation. I am a firm believer in long practices with a lot of routine and repetition. If you want to get better you have to work your players."

Most of his thinking comes from other coaches he knows and how he ran his program at Benton, Herrin said. Despite the fact that "I think basketball is the toughest game to teach. I have preached for years that coaches don't make good players. The key is how hard they work on their own."

—Rich Herrin

college and high school feature two talent levels, Herrin said the game is the same.

"I teach the same way I did in high school. You have got to continue working on individual skills, that is no different on any level of basketball. I let the players do more free lancing as long as they know what is going on."

"All of my philosophies have come from other high school and college coaches, plus attending many clinics. Most of my good friends are coaches, and I talk with my mother all the time about basketball."

Among the better known clinics Herrin has attended and spoken at is Chuck Rolinski's at Toluca High School, about 40 miles northeast of Peoria. Rolinski's clinic is frequently a showcase of successful college and high school coaches, who get together to share their trade.

"He is one of the best coaches I have ever come in contact with," said Rolinski, who is entering his 34th year as head coach at Toluca, with over 600 wins. "I know he is a winner and is a very hard worker. He is really brilliant."

Rolinski said he met Herrin in 1972 when the two became involved with forming the Illinois Basketball Coaches Association. Rolinski and Herrin are both past presidents of the group and members of the IBCA Hall of Fame.

Herrin said he feels one of his strong points is getting the most out of the players he has to work with.

"I always felt I got the maximum out of the talent I was given," Herrin said. "I think I am a good teacher and know the game thoroughly."

Conversely, Herrin said his frequent inability to have an open mind with another person's ideas is one of his weaker points.

5 newcomers bolster lineup, basketball team's chances

By David Gallanetti
Staff Writer

They're not the Fantastic Four and they're not the Magnificent Seven, but they'll do.

Transfers Freddie McSwain, Jerry Jones and Darin Parker, along with high school grads Tony Harvey and Selvan Lawrence, have got Coach Rich Merrin's optimism about the new season riding high.

"Tony Harvey is one of the biggest names in the Missouri Valley and he's the one of the most talented," Harvey was selected by Street and Smith's magazine as one of their "100 best men of influence" and ranked one of the top 100 high school seniors in the country.

Despite all the attention, Harvey said he is keeping things in stride.

"All of the attention really isn't that much of a shock," Harvey said. "I knew Tim Richardson was leaving and (David) Busch had been here for a year so he would be just a sophomore. I thought we both had as much of a chance because he didn't start last year. The battle is on."

Harvey has had problems with tendinitis in the past, but the freshman said it was nothing to worry about.

"It is not really a problem until there is a drastic change in the weather," Harvey said. "I try to play as much as I can without a brace to strengthen it."

Harvey arrives from Pascagoula, Miss., after having what has been described as a mediocre senior season statistically because of his team's balanced talent.

Another Saluki facing some preseason pressure is McSwain, who has been blessed with the task of filling departed standout Steve Middleton's shoes.

"I like Steve and I like the way he played," McSwain said. "He hustled a lot, and I am really the same type of player. I don't want to look at it like I'm taking his place."

"I'm used to pressure now, it has been put on me for several years. I don't want to disappoint anyone because I know they have high expectations. I have them myself and I don't want to let myself down."

McSwain comes from Northern Oklahoma College, where he was named all-conference, all-regional and all-state. He was named team MVP last season, averaging 20.3 points and 7.9 rebounds per game.

Forward Jerry Jones, 6-6, transferred from Texas-El Paso to SIU-C mainly because he wanted to be close his home, Country Club Hills, in the Chicago suburbs.

"I'm not real close, but a lot closer than before," Jones said. "I contacted (SIU-C) and talked with (former assistant coach Scott) Howard. I came here and met with the other coaches and really liked it here."

Jones said he chose SIU-C partly because a friend from high school, Geoff Hawkins, was a member of last year's team, and his uncle played football for the Salukis in 1966.

"When I first got here it was a very different situation," Jones said. "It was a lot smaller than UTEP. It was a little like high school when I first came here, but I know now we are going to have a nice team."

The forward will not be eligible for play until Dec. 17 because of his transfer, and Jones said that fact makes it difficult at times.

"It is hard working out when you know you are not going to play. All I can do is work hard and do the best I can for the team now. I have to show the team I am capable of playing."

Parker, a 6-7 center, is the third college transfer for the Salukis. Parker comes from Dodge City Community College where he averaged nine points and seven rebounds as a sophomore.

Parker originally lived in Joliet, but moved to Wichita, Kan., finishing his career at Wichita Heights High School. Parker averaged 14 points and seven rebounds as his team won the Wichita City League Championship.

The Salukis other high school recruit, Lawrence, a 6-4 guard, was a three-year starter at George County High School in Lucedale, Miss. He averaged 20 points and 10 rebounds a game his senior year and was named best offensive player, best rebounder and best free throw shooter.

Scott wants the best from her players

By Robert Baxter
Staff Writer

Women's basketball coach Cindy Scott, starting her 12th season at SIU-C, not only works on athletic skills with her players but also instills in them a workable philosophy — a philosophy they can take with them throughout the rest of their lives.

"I despise mediocrity," Scott said. "I want the players to not only be the best they can be on the court, but also the best in whatever they do. They must reach their full potential both on and off the court."

"If a person is capable of getting A's, then they should get A's. If they are capable of B's, then they should get B's, nothing less."

Scott has effectively imposed this work ethic on her players and given SIU-C fans six 20-game win seasons in the 11 years she has been coaching here.

Scott said her family was a major influence in her early sports interests and as far back as she can remember she was interested in basketball.

"I grew up with basketball," Scott said. "It is something I really love to do. I love all aspects of the sport."

"I am what you call a basketball junkie. I absolutely love to watch men's college basketball on T.V. It's my favorite thing to do."

In the last three seasons Scott's career has reached new heights. She was named Gateway Coach of the Year and District 4 Coach of the Year in 1986, based on SIU-C's 23-game win streak. The district honor is given by the Women's Basketball Coaches Association.

"They give these type of awards to the coach," Scott said. "But the team is really responsible for winning those awards for me."

She also was Gateway Coach of the Year in 1987, setting a precedent for SIU-C women's basketball by compiling a 38-0 record in the Gateway, and a 53-7 overall mark during the two-year period. Scott gave the Salukis their first NCAA Tournament victory and their first national rankings.

"My success is directly related to the type of athletes we have been able to bring into this program," Scott said. "We like for them to not only excel on the basketball floor, but also in the classroom."

Scott's passion for basketball is evident when she describes the hectic life a college basketball player must deal with on a day-to-day basis.

"To be successful at this level," Scott said, "A player must be able to make a strong commitment, to themselves, and to the program. It requires sacrificing a lot of things."

"After practice and classes it doesn't leave a lot of time for anything else. Not just anyone can do it. So many people try to make it through life going only halfway. It's easy for many people to get by that way."

Scott understands the life of a college ballplayer, having been one herself.

She was a starting guard at Memphis State University and set a school record for assists. Her defensive prowess in college also led to her current philosophy on creating a defensive-minded program for the Salukis.

Scott's teams were ranked in the top five in the country in scoring defense (fewest points allowed) in NCAA Division I play from 1982 to 1987.

"This season we need to pressure more on defense than last season," Scott said.

"With our lack of power and strength, we will not be able to dominate anyone this year. This will put pressure on the defensive end, to regain our defensive prowess of years gone by."

Scott originally came to SIU-C from Memphis State where she received her degree in physical education. She came to SIU-C as a graduate assistant on the women's basketball team, acquiring her master's degree in the process.

"I had the pleasure of watching Gene Bartow, in my college days at Memphis State," Scott said. "He was very demanding, and I learned what it takes to be good, great in basketball."

"It takes a lot of time and effort and most of all a year round commitment to furthering your program to be continuously successful."

Women's coach Cindy Scott is entering her 12th season.

"George (Iubelt, Scott's assistant) has had the greatest influence on my coaching style," Scott said. "He has been around SIU for such a long time. He has a remedy and a helping hand for every situation.

"It comes down to his years of experience in basketball (both men's and women's)."

1988-89 basketball coaching staffs

Here is a list of assistant basketball coaches at SIU-C, who will be instrumental in both the men's and women's teams having outstanding seasons.

Women's coaches:

George Iubelt — Has been involved in Saluki basketball since 1959, when he was assistant to men's coach Jack Hartman. Since 1982 has been part-time assistant to women's coach Cindy Scott, where he has given her his years of expertise. Coached high school basketball at Galatia and West Frankfort.

Julie Beck — Highly successful recruiting coordinator for women's team since arriving at SIU-C back in 1982. Has brought many fine recruits into the Saluki program which has helped the University to its first national rankings and two Gateway titles.

Men's coaches:

Ron Smith — Often considered the right-hand man of Rich Herrin, Smith has been working with the Salukis' head coach for nearly 10 years. Smith was Herrin's assistant at Benton High School from 1981-1985, and came to SIU-C with Herrin when he was named head coach.

Bobby McCullum — Given most of the credit for the Salukis' recruiting success last season, McCullum was named SIU-C's top recruiting assistant in 1987 after having spent three years as an assistant at the University of South Alabama.

Rodney Watson — Will be the Salukis academic advisor in addition to his on the court coaching duties. Watson was coach at Coulterville and Madison High School where he accumulated a 73-34 record in three seasons.

Getting team back on track Coach Scott's first priority

By Robert Baxter
Staff Writer

Despite the absence of second-team, all-conference players Bridgett Bonds and Mary Berghuis, the women's basketball team will field a group of returning players eager to improve on a disappointing finish last season.

Both Bonds and Berghuis have since been graduated. They were the mainstay of a team that went 16-11 last season and finished fifth in the Gateway.

In what is termed a rebuilding year by Coach Cindy Scott, a group of 10 returning players, including four seniors, will attempt to provide leadership for an otherwise young and inexperienced group of athletes.

"Our main concern this year will be to be the best we can be," returning senior guard Dana Fitzpatrick said. "We all get along real well and we want to work together. My role will be to set an example for the team, and be a leader for us."

The 5-7 Fitzpatrick is considered a leader for the team, not only by herself, but by all of her coaches too.

"As she goes our team goes," George Iubelt, assistant coach, said. "If she plays like she did her sophomore year, this could be a very good club." "

Fitzpatrick led the team last season with 90 assists. She also had 43 steals including 11 in an overtime loss at Drake. Her only problem came on the offensive side of the court.

Fitzpatrick only shot 38 percent from the field last season and 55 percent from the free-throw line.

"She is the key to our success," Scott said. "We really need her to shoot the ball well this year."

Fitzpatrick averaged 8.1 points and 4.7 rebounds per game.

Senior center Cathy Kampwerth also will be returning for the Salukis. She recently twisted her knee in practice, but the injury appears minor and hasn't affected her plans for this season.

"We're a better team already this year," Kampwerth said. "I like to think I'll be there for the youngsters, to answer any questions. I always looked forward to someone older on the team helping me."

With a powerful 6-4 frame, Kampwerth is looking to become more aggressive this season.

"She has no one to rely on (being the center)," Scott said. "She must become more aggressive to shoulder the heavy responsibility she will carry for us. If she does, I think she could be the best player in the conference."

Kampwerth averaged 8.0 points and 4.7 rebounds per game last season. She ranks third on the all-time "huki list in blocked shots, and recorded a team-high 28 rejections last season. She also shot a 50 percent from the field.

Deanna Sanders, a 5-8 senior guard from Woodlawn, will be looked to for outside scoring. Last season, after transferring to the Salukis from John A. Logan College, Sanders started 17 games for the team, scoring in double figures seven times and shooting 36 percent from three-point range.

"I need to be a team leader for everyone," Sanders said. "I'll try to be strong for everyone and keep everyone up. The disappointment of last season is initiative enough to do that much better this year."

Sanders also had 41 assists and 19

Valley, Gateway races could go down to wire

Conference races are expected to go to the wire in both the men's and women's divisions this season.

In the Missouri Valley, where the men's team (12-16 overall, 6-8 conference) was tied with Creighton for fourth, Wichita State has emerged as a preseason favorite.

"Wichita State is the favorite, no question," said Stan Albeck, coach of the defending champion Bradley Braves. "They'll be the hunted team. If they can handle the pressure, they have the talent to win."

In the Gateway, where the women's team (16-11, 12-6) dropped to fifth after winning titles in 1986 and 1987, the Salukis and four other teams are all considered top candidates.

"Indiana State, Illinois State, Drake and Eastern Illinois all have to be considered," Saluki women's coach Cindy Scott said. "At this point we really can't count anyone out, but these teams are all returning some key people."

MISSOURI VALLEY: Wichita State (20-10, 11-3) is coached by Eddie Fogler, who set a school record 42 victories in his first two seasons. The Shockers return four starters from last season's team, which placed second behind Bradley.

The top gun for Wichita State is Saasha Radunovich, a 6-10 senior forward who averaged 14 points per game and had 7.2 rebounds.

GATEWAY: Defending champion Eastern Illinois (23-4, 14-4) has four starters back, including all-conference point guard Barb Perkas, who averaged 15.6 points per game.

steals last season.

"We will look to Deanna to open up our outside shooting," Scott said. "She will need to improve her field-goal percentage (36 percent), but I'm confident she can, which will help our perimeter game. We will look for more scoring from her this season."

Another of the pure shooters returning to the Saluki lineup this season will be senior guard Tonda Seals.

Seals, the only returning player to average in double digits versus Gateway opponents last season, scored 10.4 points per game. She shot 43 percent from the field and had 47 assists and 27 steals. She also is considered to be a three-point scoring threat.

"Tonda just needs to become more consistent," Scott said. "She is a true outside threat and at times shoots the ball well. So far in practice she has performed very well, and appears to be trying to make this her best year."

Seals said while she is concerned about increasing her defensive skills, her main emphasis is on how well the team will do.

"I want to improve my defense more than anything else," Seals said. "But my main concern is to help the team have a winning season."

Scott's team also has two strong juniors returning to the team in 5-11 forward Deanna Kibelkis and 5-8 guard Eileen Richardson.

"Kibelkis is our best penetrator," Scott said. "She does good things for you when she has the ball, but she needs to learn to cut down on her errors. We're real high on De for the upcoming season."

Scott said Kibelkis, a blue-collar worker who takes it to the hole, will vie strongly for a starting front court position.

Last season, Kibelkis shot 50 percent from the field and 64 percent from the free-throw line against Gateway opponents. She averaged 9.8 minutes of playing time per game.

Richardson, after playing point guard her first two seasons, will be shifted to shooting guard where Scott said she will be able to utilize her natural talents.

"Eileen plays with a lot of intensity and poise," Scott said. "In her new position she should be able make better use of her shooting skills."

Richardson possesses a 25-inch vertical leap, which she utilized by blocking six shots and capturing 22 steals last season. She also is among team leaders from the free-throw line, shooting 73 percent.

Two sophomores will return to the lineup, both capable of stepping into a starting role.

Cyd Mitchell, a 6-1 forward, is the first scholarship athlete for SIU-C out of the Southern Illinois area (Harrisburg). Mitchell played sparingly last season, but Scott expects good things to come from her in the future. "Cyd is one of the most pleasant surprises to come along," Scott said. "She more or less recruited herself and has turned into a major competitor. She has increased her strength considerably and made great strides as a player."

Mitchell had a season-high eight points against Northern Iowa, going four for six from the field and pulling down five rebounds in only eight minutes of play.

Amy Rakers, a 6-2 forward from Belleville, is expected to be a key for the Salukis according to Scott.

"She has as much talent as any player I've ever coached," Scott said. "She needs to work on keeping her game under control. She wants to do it all right away, but is still a young pup. She is an outstanding player and will definitely impact the success we have this season."

"I don't really listen enough to other people's ideas; I could be more flexible on that. In practice, I may not get something done and just forget it."

Herrin said he has traditionally favored a quick tempo.

"I want to move down the floor quickly, but get a good shot. You have to play exciting and let the players have a lot of freedom. Good pressure defense and forcing turnovers are ways of playing exciting. The harder you work on defense, the more chance it will become instant offense."

Herrin said dedication to the job is an important key in making a good coach.

"You can never worry about the number of hours you work. You can't always control your personal time; the job often dictates your life. You have to really love the game."

Taking on the role of coach is just skimming the surface, Herrin said.

"I tell the players I am their best friend. I try to be a very positive person, but yet critical. I may take someone out for 30 seconds just to say 'Hey, you weren't quite doing the job' and then put them back in."

Saluki forward Randy House is entering his seventh year under Herrin.

"He gave me every opportunity, and has probably been harder on me than some of the others because he wants to drive me to success," House said. "He has the open door policy that anyone can come in and talk if they have a problem."

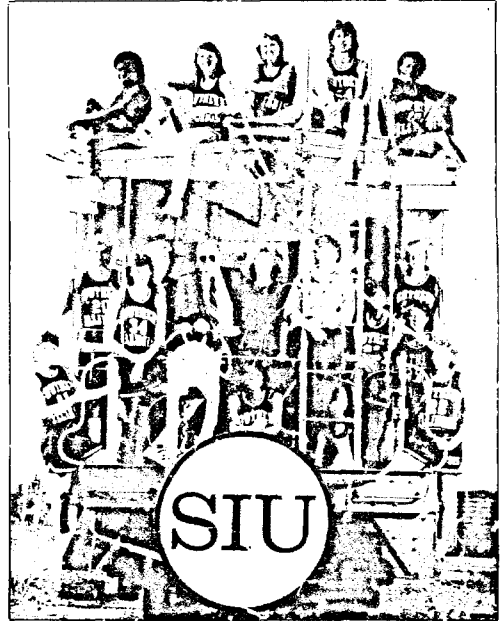

Saluki guard Kai Nurnberger, who played his senior season under Herrin at Benton, said the coaches' emphasis is not all basketball.

"He has always been a believer (in education)," Nurnberger said. "It is not just basketball, although he demands you get better on the court."

As far as setting personal goals, Herrin said he is very happy with his position at SIU-C and is not considering a move to any other university.

"I would like to coach basketball in some capacity for a long, long time," Herrin said. "It will depend on how good my health is, and can go as many hours as any coach can."

University history professor, adviser dies at 52

University News Service

Funeral services were held Sunday for a University history professor at the Temple Beth Jacob Synagogue in Carbondale.

Stanley Zucker died Friday at Memorial Hospital of Carbondale. He was 52. Burial will be in the Forest Hills Cemetery in Madison, Wis.

Zucker, an expert on 19th-century European social history and German intellectual history, was the author of "Ludwig Bamberger: German Liberal Politician and Social Critic," published by the University of Pittsburgh Press in 1975. He also wrote articles in those fields.

Zucker came to the University in 1967 as an instructor and became a full professor in 1985. For the last five years, he directed the history department's graduate studies program. He also served as graduate adviser.

A native of New York City, Zucker earned his undergraduate degree from the City College of New York in 1958. He earned master's and doctoral degrees from the University of Wisconsin.

Survivors include his wife, Barbara, and two sons, Jeffrey Zucker of Chicago and Jonathon Zucker of Carbondale.

Memorial contributions can be made to the American Cancer Society.

Retired University engineering professor dies

Mark E. Klopp, associate professor emeritus at the University, died Saturday in Memorial Hospital of Carbondale. He was 67.

A College of Engineering and Technology faculty member, Klopp retired in 1986 with 30 years of service at the University. He taught applied science drafting and industrial education courses.

Klopp published an educational series on graphical communications problems from 1966 to 1970. He belonged to the American Society for Engineering Education.

Klopp earned bachelor's and master's degrees from Pennsylvania State University. He taught engineering drawing there before coming to the SIU-C.

He served with the U.S. Air Force, seeing active duty in Europe from 1943 to 1945.

Klopp was born Sept. 18, 1921 to Paul and Eva Klopp in Lebanon County, Pa.

Survivors include his wife Doris, two daughters, Nancy Carlson of Bethesda, Md.; and Ann Warner of Kirby, W.Va.; and two grandchildren.

Memorial contributions may be made to the American Cancer Society or to the Hospice of Southern Illinois.

B-1B bombers grounded for inspection

ABILENE, Texas (UPI) — The Air Force grounded its fleet of B-1B nuclear bombers for a safety inspection Wednesday as investigators began an inquiry into the second crash of the military's new intercontinental nuclear weapon.

The Strategic Air Command in Omaha, Neb., said each B-1B will undergo a safety inspection after the crash Tuesday, in which witnesses reported flames shooting from the plane before its four crew members ejected safely.

"This is a normal precaution following any similar incident," the SAC statement said.

It said it will take a day or two for instructions on what items are to be inspected to arrive at B-1B bases around the country. In the meantime, "B-1B flying operations have been suspended," the statement said.

The SAC estimated the inspections would take three hours for each aircraft. As each of the 98 remaining bombers is inspected, it will be returned to flying status, the SAC statement said.

At a news conference Wednesday afternoon, Col. Albert "Don" Jensen, commander of the 28th Bombardment Wing at Dyess, said the crew performed miraculously.

"They performed by the book and as they should," he said.

He said he still has great confidence in the B-1B, which he described as "the best bomber in the world."

Jensen said he expected the four crew members who ejected from the craft to resume flying in the next few days, and he thanked nearby residents who came to the aid of the crew following the crash.

The crew of the four-engine bomber was practicing approach maneuvers when the aircraft went down about 5 miles north of Dyess Air Force Base Tuesday afternoon near the town of Tye, about 10 miles west of Abilene, Air Force officials said.

Witnesses said it appeared the pilot had managed to steer the plane clear of populated areas before the crew ejected and parachuted to safety.

Witnesses also reported seeing flames pouring from an engine on bomber's left side before it went down.

"Eyewitnesses said they did see that," Dyess spokesman Sgt. Patrick Plamondon said. "Officially, the board hasn't verified that or not."

An investigative team headed by Air Force Col. David C. Dill, vice commander of the 28th Bombardment Wing at Ellsworth Air Force Base, S.D., was on the scene Wednesday to begin the official probe into the cause of the accident.

Plamondon said one of the first tasks of investigators was to compile the accounts of people who saw the crash.

The crew members, assigned to the 337th Bombardment Squadron, remained in good condition at the base hospital Wednesday, where they were admitted for observation, said Sgt. Penny Jorgensen.

They were Capt. Michael E. Waters, 29, of New Bern, N.C., the plane's commander; Capt. George M. Gober, 31, of San Diego, the pilot; Capt. Charles M. Zarza, 37, of Hialeah, Fla., offensive systems operator; and first Lt. Anton Eret Jr., 26, of Northglenn, Colo., defensive systems operator.

Tuesday's crash was the second of a B-1B nuclear bomber. The first to crash also was based at Dyess and went down Sept. 28, 1987, near La Junta, Colo., while on a training run, killing three crewmen. The accident occurred after a pelican flew into an engine housing of the plane.

The plane Tuesday crashed into a field north of Interstate 20 and about 2 miles northeast of houses in Tye, which is located at the north end of the base's runway.

Election of Bush welcomed by most foreign countries

Scripps Howard News Service

WASHINGTON — From Moscow to Tokyo and London to Tel Aviv, George Bush's election as next American president was overwhelmingly welcomed. The main reason: continuity in U.S. foreign policy.

Many foreign newspapers, radio and television stations monitored here expect that the Bush administration will be an extension of the Reagan administration.

"It's the Same Act but With a Different Actor," headlined Brazil's conservative daily O Estado de Sao Paulo.

"The American people voted for a continuation of Reaganism," said Mexico's Excelsior daily.

The conservative Melbourne Herald in Australia said "few (U.S.) citizens, it seems, are in a mood for change."

Commentators noted that Bush will face major problems, topped by the U.S. budget and trade deficits.

Many foreign government officials and journalists were wary of Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis on three counts: He was virtually unknown overseas; setting up a Dukakis administration would mean a period of uncertainty; and he took a protectionist stance on trade.

The Soviet foreign ministry said Wednesday that Bush's victory reflects the American public's support for the warming trend in U.S.-Soviet relations

Lecture set on endangered plants

By Loria Roberson
Staff Writer

A University professor will lecture tonight on the status of endangered plants and the efforts of one group to prevent their extinction.

Botanist Robert H. Mohlenbrock, professor of botany and the 1988 Outstanding Scholar Award Recipient, said most people are not aware of plant species becoming extinct before their eyes, but mass destruction of plants eventually will catch up to us if it is continued, he said.

Mohlenbrock is a member of the Species Survival Commission, a division of the International Union for the Conservation of Nature.

"The stated purpose of the IUCN is to develop strategies for coping with preservation of our natural heritage while utilizing efficiently our resources," he said.

Mohlenbrock will discuss some of the commission's projects. One is the publication of a Red Data Book for North American Plants containing accounts of the most endangered species.

The hour lecture titled "Fighting for Life: A Plan for Endangered Plants" is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in the University Museum Auditorium. A reception follows.

Bald Knob Christmas fair scheduled

Barbara Bush interested in family

WASHINGTON (SHNS) — With White House style generally set by first ladies, eyes are on Barbara Bush for the tone she will set for the next four years. Even though Mrs. Bush has been a public figure for eight years, she has kept a low profile. Mrs. Bush's main interests are her children, her 10 grandchildren, gardening and literacy. She is not much interested in news, saying that she prefers novels to newscasts. Uninterested in fashion, known mainly for comfortable suits and her trademark two- and three-strand pearl necklaces, Mrs. Bush is expected to try to keep her life centered on family and friends. She will hire capable people to do such things as put on state dinners (her favorite food is chicken salad) and continue her project of furthering literacy. Mrs. Bush is well-liked in Washington and has not inspired the biting gossip that plagues many of the powerful in the nation's capital.

Government, media plan seminar

By Wayne Wallace
Staff Writer

A seminar designed to foster better relations between local government and the media in Illinois will be held at the Carbondale Holiday Inn from 8:15 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. today. The seminar is the first in a series of four to be held throughout the state until Dec. 9. State Comptroller Roland W. Burris and the Illinois Press Association have invited public officials and newspaper publishers, editors and staff to participate in the sessions. According to Lloyd Haims, local liaison for the comptroller's office, the seminar series was requested by the IPA to help the media better understand the workings of local governments. "The comptroller's office is doing this for the media," Haims said. "There's going to be a time when the public wants to know what's going on in local government and the media has to perform that service," he added.

Bush names Baker to top State Department post

HOUSTON (SHNS)— A subdued George Bush, admittedly tired and awed by the challenges ahead, announced members of his transition team Wednesday and said he will name James Baker secretary of state.

Bush told a news conference he had cleared the Baker appointment with the current secretary of state, George Shultz, and "he enthusiastically endorsed the choice."

Bush said Baker, his campaign chief and longtime friend, has "distinguished himself in every position he has held and in the Reagan administration set a new standard of excellence as...chief of staff."

"He has big shoes to fill," Bush said in tribute to Shultz, "but he'll get the job done."

Bush noted that Baker has served as Treasury secretary and as a member of the National Security Council and said he has "proven skill" as a negotiator.

The vice president looked puzzled when questioned about his mandate, characterizing his victory over Michael Dukakis as a "big win."

Bush won 40 states and 26 electoral votes, compared with 10 states and 112 electoral votes for Dukakis.

"I do feel the vote was convincing enough and the margin great enough and the number of states carried big enough," he said. "It gives a certain confidence to the executive branch of the government I hope will carry over and influence the Congress with whom I have pledged to work."

Bush jokingly thanked Martin Van Buren, the last sitting vice president to be elected president in 1836, "for paving the way. It's been a long time, Marty."

Signaling his continued loyalty to Ronald Reagan, Bush said Reagan is still president and, "I will not be using the transition to try to make or unduly influence decisions that are properly the president's."

All signs are that Bush will carry out most of the programs Reagan began, including a pledge not to raise income taxes.

Bush congratulated Dukakis for a hard fought campaign and, despite the negative tone of the campaign, said, "I never had any doubt that we share a common interest in building a better America."

Congressional leaders say Bush will have to raise taxes

WASHINGTON (SHNS) — Members of Congress think it's only a matter of time before George Bush will have to eat his "read-my-lips" promise not to raise taxes during the next four years.

The battle over taxes and spending will be just one of many Bush will have with the Democratically controlled Congress.

"There's no way Bush can avoid new taxes," says Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J. "Read my lips: George Bush will ask for a tax increase in his four years and it's an open question how Democrats will respond," Bradley contends.

The reason lawmakers from both parties believe Bush will retreat on his no-new-tax promise is the federal deficit, which politicians and the public opinion polls say is the biggest single problem confronting the new president and the next Congress.

Even Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas, the legislative point man for the president-elect, concedes that cutting the $145 billion federal deficit will be "a hard thing to accomplish" without new revenues that Bush vows to veto.

One budget-busting complication: bailing out the nation's ailing savings and loans. The big fix will add to deficit woes even if taxpayer dollars aren't tapped for the $50 billion to $100 billion fresh cash infusion that shaky S&Ls need to return to solvency.

And budget experts are still counting up the cost of Bush's campaign promises — more money for education, the homeless, prisons, health care and the war on drugs.

Bush also has proposed at least $15 billion a year in new tax incentives, which cost the treasury money and thereby increase the deficit.

He would slash the tax on investment profits (capital gains) and create new tax breaks for health care insurance, oil and gas exploration, rural development, private school tuition, first-time home buyers and parents who adopt children.

Since Bush has insisted that he won't endorse any new taxes, won't cut Pentagon spending and won't tamper with Social Security, it's a mystery where the money will come from to finance his new proposals while finding an additional $40 billion in deficit reductions

Most political insiders say Bush must act fast if he is to succeed with a Congress that has just spent two years showing it can set policy in the face of White House objections. In Tuesday's voting, Democrats solidified their grip on both the House and Senate.

Some politicians predict Bush will have trouble taking a positive tack after the negative campaign despite assurances he will do his "level best" to heal the wounds and cooperate with Congress.

Former Texas Gov. John Connolly, a one-time Democrat turned Republican, predicted Bush will have a far more difficult time dealing with Congress than Reagan.

"He (Bush) does not have many friends up there," says Democratic pollster Peter Hart. "Congress has the potentiality to respond in kind for Bush's campaign style."

House Democratic leader Thomas Foley of Washington says Bush's campaign rhetoric appears to make him more inflexible than Reagan in dealing with the lawmakers.

"It could get very embittered — worse than it is now," Foley says. "He violated Ronald Reagan's dictum that a president should never say never. He says never every day."

Foley suggests Bush's only way out is to follow the example set by Earl Long, the late governor of Louisiana. When confronted with an embarrassing about-face from his campaign promises, Long responded: "Tell the people I lied."

For his part, Bush forsores "no radical steps."

He wants "steady control, steady restraint" on the deficit.

But federal law doesn't give him much choice. The Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing act is expected to require that the deficit be cut by at least $40 billion by next Oct. 1 and mandates that the budget be brought into balance three years hence.

Gramm-Rudman's targets, of course, have been changed before and could be changed again, especially now that top Bush aides are talking publicly about putting off the the balanced-budget year to as late as 1995.

Bush wants a "flexible freeze" that lets the overall budget keep pace with inflation.

Quayle praised by Bush, spends first day as VP-elect in new office

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice president-elect Dan Quayle had "nothing specific" to do when he visited his transition office Wednesday.

Quayle, thrown into the national political forum when George Bush picked him to be his running mate, welcomed the president-elect back to Washington Wednesday afternoon at a rally at Andrews Air Force Base and the victorious congratulations from President Reagan.

With Quayle at his side, Bush predicted the young senator who was harshly assailed during the campaign as unqualified for national office, will surprise everyone.

"He's going to be one of the great vice presidents — you watch him closely," Bush said to cheers from the partisan crowd.

Quayle, who came to the Senate in 1980 as part of the Reagan landslide, spoke briefly at the White House, thanking Reagan "for all that you have done for America."

And he told Bush that he is "ready to go to work and to continue to change America and make it even greater."

The 41-year-old Quayle, the heir of an Indiana publishing empire whose surprise selection by Bush generated a brief but intense firestorm of controversy, was kept out of the spotlight during the campaign, relegated to stumping his home state and political backwaters.

But Wednesday, just 73 days from being a heartbeat away from the presidency, he was out in the sunshine.

After a pancake breakfast at his Northern Virginia home, Quayle and his wife traveled by motorcade to visit his vice presidential transition office, a stately three-story brick townhouse across the street from the White House and adjacent to Lafayette Park.

Quayle said he had no specific tasks to perform at the office.

State volleyball tourney big step in recruiting

By Lisa Werna
Staff Writer

Assistant volleyball coach Sonya Locke will be looking for new talent to play for SIU-C when she attends the state's high school volleyball tournament finals this weekend at Springfield's Prairie Capital Convention Center.

Locke said the Salukis are looking for players at all positions.

"We look for kids we don't need to teach. We want the ones that need only some alterations," Locke said. "Sometimes we get a raw one but mostly we look for kids that can contribute right away. I don't necessarily look for starters but (overall) contributors," Locke added.

Locke will spend most of her time watching for players that she hasn't seen play yet.

"Some kids are big-time recruits, and if you are a small school they are not going to be interested," she said. "And if they are good and you're late (in telling them you are interested), then your chances of getting them are slim to none."

The volleyball coaching staff has tried every year to increase in-state recruits, but the Salukis have had more luck with out-of-state recruits, Locke said.

"The success rate is low, not because we haven't been working to get in-state recruits. The majority of recruits I contact have been from Illinois. But most kids want to go out of state for various reasons," Locke said.

Most recruits have the advantage of belonging to volleyball clubs during their high school careers.

"All of the players we look at have played in clubs. Their exposure is limited if they are not in a club," Locke explained.

Although the coaches are not allowed to reveal the names of potential recruits according to NCAA regulations, Locke said she is in contact with some of the Chicago Tribune All-State team players.

On the Tribune's first team were Vikki Simonis of Palatine, Eileen Shannon of Immaculate Conception, Elaine Caraher of Sandburg, Michele Kohler of Richards, Amy Peistrup of Hersey and Sue Wronski of Mother McAuley. Second team players were Kathy Jurgens of Riverside-Brookside, Stacey Kammes of Wheaton St.

Francis, Kim Norris of Downers North, Malanie Koskan of Joliet West, Tina Rogers of Mount Pulaski and Keisha Spencer of East St. Louis.

Some of the players have season highs of more than 330 kills before tournament play and career highs of more than 800 kills.

"We are in contact with them. Our goal is to get them on campus for a visit," Locke said.

The recruiting trend is definitely towards taller players, Locke said.

"I am in contact with some 6-0, 6-1 and 6-2 women. That is a good range but above that, they tend to lose their mobility and speed. My preference is 5-10 and 5-11," Locke continued. "Women 5-foot-8 and 5-foot-9 are not eliminated if they have a good jump." On the current team, five of the 15 players are products of Illinois schools. Seniors Dawn Thompson and Teri Noble played for Riverton, the Class A state champs in 1983. Freshman Stephanie Newman and Kim Schaal are from Mattoon. Sophomore Barb Oswald is from Seneca.

Frank Viola captures American League Cy Young

NEW YORK (UPI) — Frank Viola of the Minnesota Twins, who led the major leagues with 24 victories this season, Wednesday won the American League Cy Young Award.

In voting by the Baseball

Writers' Association of America, the 28-year-old left-hander received 27 of 28 first-place votes and ended the bid by Boston's Roger Clemens to win an unprecedented third straight Cy Young Award.

Viola, 24-7, received a second-place vote on the remaining ballot and finished with 138 points. He earned the award a year after leading the Twins to the World Series title.

"The last two-year period has been more than I ever dreamed of — winning an All-Star game, getting the Cy Young Award, winning the (World Series) MVP and the World Series," Viola said at a sports bar in Orlando, Fla.

"It's just been great." Oakland reliever Dennis Eckersley, who led the majors with 45 saves, finished second. Eckersley received the other first-place vote, 14 second- and five third-place votes.

with that part of the country this time of year. He said that, more than anything, could hinder his performance.

Dennis voiced his concern after winning the MVC championships two weeks ago, saying that he doesn't consider himself to be a real power runner.

"I had a hard time at the flooded Saluki Invitational," Dennis said. "I am not a power runner. I need a dry course to do well. I don't have the leg strength to do well in mud, that's just not my running style."

"As far as the cold, that will not be a factor for me except in warmups. It does take some extra time sometimes to get loose."

The Salukis will have seven runners competing for the Salukis with freshman Jon Dennis leading the way with. His season-best time is 24:19.5. The rest of the team's personal bests: Senior-captain David Beachem's 24:50, junior Paul Burkinshaw's 25:10, freshman Mark Stuart's 25:34.4, senior Paul Glanville's 25:45.2, freshman Vaughan Harry's 25:50 and sophomore Mike Kershaw's 25:59.

Bulls win

BOSTON (UPI) — Michael Jordan scored 52 points, the most in the NBA this season, and set a Boston Garden record with nine steals Wednesday night to help the Chicago Bulls snap a 12 game losing streak in Boston with a 110-104 victory over the Celtics.

Two Salukis picked for all-conference

By Robert Baxter
Staff Writer

Seniors Dana Fitzpatrick and Cathy Kampwerth were honored Wednesday by being picked for the 1989 preseason all-Gateway Conference women's basketball team.

Both players were named as honorable mention all-conference based on their performance from last season and on expectations for the coming season.

Fitzpatrick will be looked to this year for her floor leadership and experience, according to the SIU-C coaching staff. Fitzpatrick has been cited as the top all-around player for the Salukis.

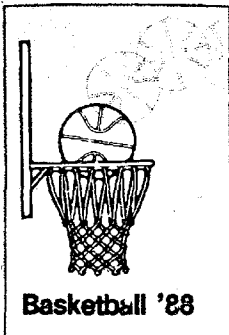

Hopefully Kampwerth will get a chance to show her stuff again this season.

After suffering a seemingly season-ending injury to her knee last week in practice, Kampwerth's doctor suggested surgery.

"She is off of crutches right now," Coach Cindy Scott said. "We had originally scheduled surgery last Wednesday, but the doctor decided to wait one more week."

"At this point if things go well she should be back in about two weeks."

Coach Scott sounded optimistic and said she expects good things when Kampwerth visits the doctor again today for a final diagnosis. First team all-Gateway picks had Julie Fitzpatrick from Drake as a unanimous choice along with Barb Perkes of Eastern Illinois.

Karen Nicholls of Bradley, Pam Tanner of Illinois State and Amy Vanderkolk of Indiana State rounded out the first-team picks.

Also named to honorable mention status were Sheryl Bonsett of Eastern Illinois, Jenni Fitzgerald of Drake, Robin Hasemann of Western Illinois, Kris Huffman of Northern Iowa and Ellen McGrew from Illinois State. McGrew is coming off of a missed season.

something else we have got to deal with. We'd much rather be at home right now."

Although the Salukis are not in a crucial, must-win situation like last week, Rhoades said SIU-C still needs to claim a victory to get back on track.

"This week is a little bit different," Rhoades said. "Last week it was a conference game and we had a chance to go 7-4. The attitude now is we just want to play and have some fun doing it."

"I think with that approach of let's have fun with things, we can work on the things we want to and still have a chance of having a winning season."

In Youngstown, the Salukis will face the 3-6 Penguins, who were billed at the beginning of the year as having one of the stronger I-AA teams in the country. Rhoades said Youngstown may be ready to explode for a big game.

"There is a real possibility of that," Rhoades said. "They certainly have some fine personnel."

Swimming teams see close battle

By John Walblay
Staff Writer

The Saluki men's and women's swimming and diving teams are looking for another close contest when they match up against Nebraska at 7 p.m. Friday in Lincoln.

Last year, the teams split the dual meet with Nebraska, the men's team lost by one point, 57-56, while the women's swimming and diving team upset the favored Nebraska 152-140.

"I wouldn't be surprised to see one that comes down to that last event," Doug Ingram, men's and women's swimming coach, said.

At Western last weekend the Salukis only competed in relay events. This time there are only two relay events, the rest being freestyle and stroke events on an individual level.

The diving teams will be in the 1- and 3-meter board competitions where Ingram expects stern competition from Nebraska.

Ingram said the Nebraska men's team was 10th in the nation last year, while the women's teams usually rank with the top 20 teams throughout the country.

For the women, Ingram said Nebraska is probably going to be strong in the stroke events causing the Salukis to rely on the freestyle events for their wins.

"It could be interesting. It could be frightening," Ingram said "with 12 of 15 girls in their first collegiate dual meet."

"Our response could range from a great effort to having a little difficulty in standing up to them. As long as they learn from the experience I won't be disappointed."

"We're going to have to throw our best lineups together. I think the best races will be in the freestyle events for the women," Ingram said.

The men's teams coming away from the Western Relay with some fast times last weekend are especially confident. Experience with Nebraska might be another reason the team has for the amount of optimism—14 of the swimmers competed against Nebraska last year.

"From a dual meet standpoint, this is the most balanced team I've had."

4 teams look to play for SEC championship

The road to the Sugar Bowl is pitted with potholes. Four teams — No. 9 Auburn, No. 14 LSU, No. 17 Georgia and No. 19 Alabama — are still in contention for the Southeastern Conference championship and the Sugar Bowl's host berth.

If Auburn beats Georgia and Mississippi State upsets LSU this Saturday, and Alabama then knocks off Auburn on Nov. 25, those four would wind up tied for the SEC title with 5-2 league records and leave it to the Sugar Bowl to decide which it wants.

A more likely scenario has Auburn and LSU winning Saturday, with Auburn likely beating Alabama to tie LSU and earn the Sugar Bowl bid — unless LSU pulls off an upset against No. 3 Miami on Nov. 19.

"Basically, it's our choice," said a Sugar Bowl spokesman.

Dec. 4 at Bowling Green. Next it's on to the Seattle Times-Huskie Classic where SIU-C will do battle with the No. 1 team in the nation Cal-Long Beach, and the No. 12 Washington Huskies. The Salukis will then visit Knoxville, Tennessee on Jan. 2, to take on the No. 2 Volunteers.

top spot again this season. They finished with a 14-4 Gateway record last season, only to lose to Illinois State in the conference playoffs. The Sycamores with 49 points were picked fifth by the Gateway coaches.

Last season Indiana State was picked to finish ninth. They tied for first. The other coaches had Southwest Missouri sixth with 36 points, Bradley seventh with 34 points, Western Illinois eighth with 24 points, Wichita State ninth with 18 points and Northern Iowa 10th with 14 points.

This is the sixth preseason Gateway poll to be taken, and only twice has the top team won it all, that being Illinois State in 1985 and Southern Illinois in 1987.

Indiana State could also vie for the Football team looking to snap three-game skid

By David Gallanetti
Staff Writer

The football team will try to snap a three-game losing streak at 1:50 p.m. Saturday at Youngstown, Ohio, as they take on the Penguins.

Coach Rick Rhoades said he senses a feeling of letdown among some supporters, but the season is not yet over.

"I sense a lot of people think it's business as usual and are saying 'Those suckers can't win anything,'" Rhoades said. "We are laying down a good foundation for the future here. Based on that, I don't care if we lose three in a row or if we win another one this season."

The Salukis will be flying to Youngstown by way of St. Louis and Cleveland, Rhoades said. The first-year coach said the long trip, approximately 650 miles by car from Carbondale, may have an effect.

"It probably does (hurt the team) a bit, but we can't allow it to make that big of a difference," Rhoades said.

Rhoades said Youngstown State is not the only thing SIU-C must contend with as injuries, a long trip and a feeling of frustration will all play factors.

"We have to deal with a lot besides Youngstown," Rhoades said. "We have to lock in and not let them be any more of a distraction than they have to be."

Quarterback Fred Gibson will sit out for the third straight week and halfback Garrett Hines will not see action. A decision on Gibson getting arthroscopic surgery before the season's end may come today.

Rhoades said there is an air of frustration among the team members which needs to be dealt with.

"How much trouble that will cause I don't know," Rhoades said. "We are just trying to take one day at a time and hang tough."

Being on the road for the third straight week is causing problems, but Rhoades said that is just another hurdle the Salukis have to jump.

"If you want to make a run at the national championship, ours is not the schedule to have," Rhoades said. "It makes things a little tougher, but it is just

Basketball season around the corner

First signing day nets no recruits for men's squad

By David Gallanetti
Staff Writer

No one put their name on the dotted line for SIU-C Wednesday as the men's basketball team went dry on the first signing day for college teams.

"We didn't sign anyone today, but we might (today) or Friday," Saluki coach Rich Herrin said.

Of the four players who have visited SIU-C, two remain on Herrin's list as possibilities.

Robert Taylor, 6-5 of Hamilton High School in Memphis, Tenn., and Cornell Henderson, a 6-7 forward at Shawnee Community College are still within the Salukis' grasp. The signing period ends Nov. 16.

SIU-C lost Carlyle standout Tom Michael to the University of Illinois and learned that Chuck Barnes, 6-3 of Bentonia High School in Bentonia, Miss., will hold out until the spring signing period in the middle of April.

"We will continue to work on him," Herrin said of the senior who has been tabbed the best chance for the Salukis. "If he was worth signing in the fall than he's worth signing in the spring."

Herrin said the hopes the Salukis can sign someone before next Wednesday, as it would make recruiting easier going into the spring signing period.

"It is a lot tougher if you have to work all winter long," Herrin said. "You have to go back to the drawing board and see where the best opportunities are."

Barry Dunning, who had verbally committed to SIU-C last spring but did not sign for failure to complete a junior college degree, is a mystery according to Herrin.

"I really don't know," Herrin said. "We need to sit down with the staff and talk about that one."

The men's cross country team is headed for the starting blocks for possibly the last time this season as they leave today for Des Moines, Iowa, site of the District 5 Cross Country championships.

Saluki freshman Jon Dennis will attempt to qualify for the NCAA Cross Country championships, a feat which hasn't been accomplished since two-time All-American Chris Bunyan qualified back in 1984. Bunyan's 24:17 is the fastest time ever on SIU-C's cross country course.

"I am aiming for a top three finish individually, which would assure me of a place at the NCAA's," Dennis said. "Obviously I'm not sure about who's running, but I'm ready for it."

The top three individual finishers will go on to the National Championships, along with the seven finishers from each of the first two teams on their way to All-American status.

The task will not be an easy one for the men's team as they will face four teams ranked in the top 20 in the nation.

Iowa State, ranked third in the country, will be one of three representatives of the Big Eight at the race. Nebraska ranked 12th and Colorado ranked 17th will also compete.

Coach Bill Cornell said his one of the team's goals will be to beat a couple of teams they lost to earlier in the season.

"We obviously want to finish as high as we can," Cornell said. "The team has its pride. We'd like to beat Kansas and Indiana State, two teams that have beat us this year."

Scott satisfied with poll ranking by conference

By Robert Baxter
Staff Writer

The Gateway Conference coaches poll released their predictions for the upcoming women's basketball season Wednesday. To no one's surprise it appears to be a toss up at this point with any one of five teams capable of making a run for the title.

Saluki coach Cindy Scott said she agreed with the rankings, which were based on votes tallied by all 10 Gateway coaches and showed SIU-C picked to finish fourth.

"I think it's very fair," Scott said. "It is just the way I would have personally picked them. The poll is true to form."

Votes for the poll were tallied on a nine-point scale, eight points for second system on down from first-place to tenth.

Eastern Illinois, which finished in a three-way tie last season with Illinois State and Indiana State, is picked to finish first this season. The Panthers, who were 14-4 in the Gateway last season, received 74 points.

Illinois State, 22-6 overall, was picked second with 73 points.

The Redbirds also finished with a 14-4 record in the Gateway, but lost to Eastern Illinois in the conference championship game.

The Salukis will open their 18-game Gateway Conference schedule on the road at Illinois State on Jan. 2.

Drake moved up to third with 69 points. The Bulldogs finished fourth last season, slipping in ahead of the Salukis for the final playoff spot.

SIU-C is picked fourth with 59 points. The Salukis will not only have their hands full in the Gateway Conference by trying to improve on last season's fifth-place finish, but also will face a brutal non-conference schedule that includes four top twenty teams all on the road.

The Salukis' first major test will be against No. 7 Western Kentucky on

See SCOTT, Page 18

"If our runners really go after them, there's no telling what might happen."

Cornell could give no specifics on the course itself, but said the team was headed to Iowa early to take a look at it.

"It's an unfamiliar course to us. We'll jog around it the day before to see what it's like."

Cornell said 18 teams are eligible to compete and he expects 16 teams to show.

Another problem facing the Salukis will be the addition of an extra 1.2 miles. Throughout the season the team has run five miles. This weekend they will be faced with a 6.2 mile course.

Freshman Vaughan Harry said he didn't think the extra mileage would be a factor. The only thing he was worried about was the cold weather associated
