Absence of chief attorney, Guyon stalls order

The Daily Egyptian and WSU-TV requested and received a continuance from a Jackson County judge Wednesday in response to the Carbondale Police Department's subpoena for any still photos and videotapes made by the two news organizations during their Halloween-weekend coverage of activities on the Strip.

Lee Starkweather, associate legal counsel with SIUC's University

Legal Counsel, requested the continuance after Shari Rhode, chief legal attorney for SIUC's University Legal Counsel and the attorney handling the case, was unable to attend the hearing after going out of town for a funeral.

Starkweather also told Judge David W. Watt Jr. that she had been unable to sit down with SIUC President John Guyon to discuss the matter. Guyon has been out of town attending a conference.

Watt told Starkweather that he did not understand Guyon's involvement with the subpoenas issued to the two university-affiliated media outlets.

"Dr. Guyon has not been asked to give anything," Watt said.

Starkweather said that since the two people subpoenaed, Lloyd Goodman, Daily Egyptian managing editor, and Michael Murrie, SIUC "Night Report" faculty sponsor, were employees of SIUC, Guyon would be involved with what was happening.

Watt said he still did not understand Guyon's role in the hearing. "You're not telling me Dr. Guyon controls the news content, does he?" Watt asked.

Starkweather said she would prefer not to get into a discussion about Guyon's role in the hearing, but would rather have the judge decide on the continuance.

University Legal Counsel would not comment later on what the office's strategy would be for the case. Starkweather said she was waiting for some direction on how to handle the case, which she said would come from Guyon.

Guyon could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

Starkweather also said she would not comment on Watt's question

Crews continue work to fix electrical line

Recreation Center still without power

By Stephanie Moletti
Senior Reporter

Power crews are continuing their efforts to repair an electrical feeder line which cut off power to the Student Recreation Center, Wright and Boomer residence halls and Trueblood and Grinnell cafeterias Monday afternoon.

Brad Dillard, manager of central control, said normal power has been restored to all areas except Grinnell, the Student Recreation Center and Boomer Hall.

A long section of cable must be replaced to bring Boomer back on line permanently, however, and that work should take at least two or three days to complete, Dillard said. Boomer has been utilizing the services of a temporary generator brought in from St. Louis since about 1:40 p.m. yesterday.

Dillard also noted a neighborhood electrical outage on the east side of campus was planned for yesterday between 6:30 and 7 p.m. and was to last between one and three hours, while workers attempted to restore power to Grinnell and the Recreation Center.

Residents of the affected halls have been forced to change their daily routines and scramble to find alternatives to a range of inconveniences caused by the power outages.

Randell Beamon, a freshman in business administration from Chicago and a resident at Boomer, said he has suffered because of the lack of electricity in his dorm.

"We couldn't shower because it was dark — we went to other buildings to use the bathroom," Beamon said. "You had to go other places to iron your clothes and all the food in our refrigerator spoiled."

Beamon said he and his roommate also were without a telephone, because they have a cordless which runs on batteries and the batteries could not recharge.

"It was hard to study properly for tests," he said, "it was just totally messed up and a total inconvenience."

All east-campus meal services moved to Grinnell dining hall when Trueblood dining hall lost power Monday.

Trustee defends tuition hike

By Chad Anderson
Staff Reporter

SIUC student trustee Mark Kochan defended his vote for tuition increases that affected the School of Law, School of Medicine, and undergraduate tuition during a meeting Graduate and Professional Student Council in the Student Center Wednesday night.

Patriek Smith, GPSC president, said he thought Kochan's vote for the increases was disliked by students because they were not part of the decision in the voting process.

"I think it found a lot of opposition because students felt it didn't make sense," he said. "It looks like he was just ignoring them, but then again, tuition increases are never very popular."

Kochan said that not all his decisions are going to be agreed with.

"There are going to be times when you have to make decisions that won't be agreed with," he said. "There are times when you have to do what you think is right."

Jason Matthews, GPSC vice-president, said Kochan did the wrong thing by voting for the increases, and that Kochan should have asked for the increases to be separated for individual votes.

"He didn't do the right thing by voting for both of them at the same time," Matthews said. "He said he would have asked for the increases to be separated, but he didn't think he had their (the Board of Trustees') support. 'Maybe he should have asked for them to be separated. At least he would have been on the record for asking them to be separated.'"

Matthews also criticized Kochan for voting with his conscience, and not by the way his constituents wanted.

"I think he's dead wrong about this. It makes a lot of sense about (voting with his conscience) snap decisions, but we had two months of debate and discussion," Matthews said. "He voted with his conscience, and that is unacceptable."

Matthews also said he read the Princeton Review that evaluates SIUC's School of Law.

"The Princeton Review said it was a good school, but it was slipping. One of the reasons listed was students were tired of the tuition increases," he said.

Kochan said he had talked to many students before he voted and they agreed with him.

"I did talk to several students, and I think many of them realized that the cost of education (for the School of Law) is reasonable," he said.

GPSC also voted against a resolution to fund the newly established SIU NAACP chapter. It was defeated by a vote of 3-to-27 with five abstentions.

Democrats lose edge with Jackson voters

Jackson County has long been known as a Democratic stronghold — until last night.

When county vote totals were reported, Gov. Jim Edgar had defeated Democratic challenger Dawn Clark Netesco two to one. The county trend continued with all state constitutional offices going to the GOP except for treasurer candidate Nancy Drev Sheehan.

David Derge, an SIUC political science professor, said the Republicans had a better organized and coordinated campaign

Three ways to beat the high cost of college.

1. The Montgomery GI Bill
2. Student loan repayment
3. Part-time income

The Army Reserve Alternate Training Program is a smart way to pay for college.

First, if you qualify, the Montgomery GI Bill can provide you with up to $6,240 for current college expenses or approved tech training.

Second, if you have—or obtain—a qualified student loan not in default, you may get it paid off at the rate of 15% per year or $500, whichever is greater, up to a maximum of $10,000. Selected military skills can double that maximum.

Third, you can earn part-time money in college, and here's how it works. One summer you take Basic Training, and the next summer you receive skill training at an Army school. You'll earn over $1,500 for Basic and even more for skill training. Then you'll attend monthly meetings at an Army Reserve unit near your college, usually one week a month plus two weeks a year. You'll be paid over $100 a week to start. It's worth thinking about. Give us a call.

MUSEUM RECEIVES GRANT FOR NEW GALLERY — LONDON—The British Museum has announced the largest corporate donation in its history, about $1.5 million from the Chase Manhattan Bank, for a new gallery to display the thousands of Native American objects collected by 17th- and 18th-century British adventurers and explorers. In addition to documenting Native American life, the collection reflects Britain's relationship with early America generally. Many of the artifacts were collected by Capt. James Cook, who sailed the Pacific Coast during the American Revolution and died in a 1789 fracas with Polynesians in Hawaii. The collection, which has 20,000 items, has been displayed piecemeal over the years but has never had its own home. Museum officials said they hope to open the new gallery in 1997.

ECONOMIC OUTLOOK CHANGES IN PHILIPPINES — MANILA, Philippines—For years, the Philippines was known as the sick man of Southeast Asia, an economic deadbeat among the prospering states of the world's fastest-growing region. Investors tended to write it off as a place of coups, chaos and, last year, power cuts of up to 10 hours a day. No longer. Now economic analysts are calling this island nation of nearly 66 million people the new "tiger cub" of Asian economies. With gross national product growing this year by 5 percent, capital flowing in and power lines humming, the Philippines has become a land of opportunity for trade and investment, with bright prospects for sustained economic growth. There is a new feeling of optimism about the Philippines born of political stability, expanding economic reforms and rising competitiveness among the dynamos of East Asia.

CALIFORNIANS STREAM INTO NEARBY STATES — DENVER—Once welcomed as a cure-all for Colorado's wheezing economy, migrating Californians nowadays are widely viewed as an invading horde. Many "natives" believe Californians are polluting the Rocky Mountain way of life with big money and ambitions and lack of respect for the state's natural beauty. The influx has been happening elsewhere in the West since the 1980s — with tens of thousands of Californians streaming into Washington, Oregon, Nevada and Arizona. About 160,000 have abandoned the Golden State in the last five years for Colorado — a significant addition to a state population of 3.6 million. New professionals have boosted housing prices while fueling an expansion in ancillary businesses like dry-cleaners and groceries. Demand for everything is up, creating jobs, but also creating longer waits that hurt the quality of life.

SCIENTISTS SUGGEST SEARCH FOR LUNAR ICE — PASADENA, Calif.—An old idea backed by new data suggests it may be very worthwhile to visit the moon in a serious search of ice, scientists say. If found, lunar ice deposits would be enormously important for scientists studying the history of this part of the solar system. Also, extracting water and other chemicals from the moon's ice would make it far easier to maintain bases and explore the moon, the researchers said. Planetary scientists would love to find ice because of what it might reveal, not only about the history of this part of the solar system, but also about the chemistry of comets. Finding large ice deposits also could be a key to making lunar exploration much simpler and cheaper than anticipated. If the ultrapotential sunlight that strikes the moon was harnessed to generate electricity, water ice could be broken down into hydrogen and oxygen for human use as well as rocket fuel.

WHITE STUDENTS MINORITY IN LOS ANGELES — LOS ANGELES—On many local campuses today, it is the white students who stick out, who get razzed because of their funny names and hair, who have assumptions made about their personalities or lifestyles. As the demographic tables turn, white students are just beginning to experience a small taste of what traditional minority groups have undergone for years in white society. White students realize that their stories might sound petty compared with the discrimination directed for years against blacks, Asians, Latinos and other minorities. Still, these children live each day amid issues of race and prejudice that even adults find difficult to discuss.

Poll shows concern for violence in schools

By John Kmita
Staff Reporter

One SIUC professor is disappointed at the results of the 26th annual Gallup Poll of Public Attitudes Toward Public Schools because they show that Americans believe violence has become the number one concern public schools face.

Douglas Bedient, an SIUC professor and president of Phi Delta Kappa, the 135,000-member international teachers organization that commissions the annual poll, said he had hoped the results would be similar to last year.

While only one year ago the survey results showed the top concern for public schools to be adequate funding, now most Americans rate violence, gangs and lack of discipline as the top concerns of public schools.

Professor disappointed by recent Gallup results

"As it turned out, adequate financing was second-rated in the poll, while the public concern with violence and gangs and lack of discipline in the schools was at the top of the poll this year," Bedient said.

"We'd like to think that the public had a longer commitment to adequate funding," he said.

Bedient, a professor in curriculum and instruction at SIUC, questioned whether the public has become overly concerned with violence in schools.

"Some experts think that the media have created the perception of violence," he said.

Many communities are experiencing a decrease in the crime rate, Bedient said.

However, studies on violence in schools also have produced mixed results.

"Some say the incidence of violence is up, but there's some evidence that would say that's not the case," Bedient said.

While some studies have shown that students feel school is a safe haven, still the majority of Americans surveyed felt violence is a major issue, and although that disappointed Bedient said he was encouraged by responses to other questions on the survey.

Respondents answered "yes" when asked if students can do more and learn more.

"I think that's optimistic, that people are hopeful and are expecting greater educational outcomes," he said.

"That's certainly compatible with many of the things that those of us in education strive for and seek." Bedient said Americans want "too much bang for their buck. No other society in the world emphasizes repeated opportunities for education."

In China, for example, only one-third of the primary students advance to secondary schools and only one-third of the secondary school graduates move on to higher education, he said.

"Our society emphasizes education, and the costs of that are going to be considerably more for a society that's interested in educating everyone as opposed to one that's very selective in its choices," Bedient said.

SIUC professor wins Emmy for film series

By Katie Morrissey
Staff Writer

Judith McCray, an assistant professor in SIUC's radio and television department, was awarded an Emmy for a series of short films done at WTTW in Chicago.

McCray, joined the SIUC faculty early this year after working at WTTW for seven years as a producer.

McCray said she enjoys grappling with tough issues and bringing them into public focus.

Her five short films, a series designed to prevent violence and shatter stereotypes, were based on issues related to violence.

"I came into TV by way of journalism, so it is important to me to keep my work focused on the informative side," she said.

McCray said she had not planned to give a showing of her films but would consider running a showing of them in the future.

The works focused on date rape, domestic violence, children and violence, and the fact that violent situations erupt more often between people who know each other than between strangers. McCray also focused on guns in the home.

The films ran on Channel 11 in Chicago between March and May of this year.

They were judged against six other contestants in the Chicago-Midwest region. Stations in Chicago, Minneapolis-St. Paul and Milwaukee competed for the annual award.

WTTW distributed the works to schools, community groups and public libraries in Chicago.

McCray said she has remained interested in the same issues since coming to work at SIUC.

"Now I'm producing a documentary intended for national release. It's based on Mississippi in the 1960's," she said.

The documentary is called 'Mississippi America'. It will be completed and aired some time next year.

Kinkaid development project questioned by student group

By Aaron Butler
Staff Reporter

The SIUC Student Environmental Center (SEC) is requesting further investigation into the impact of a planned housing and resort development on the shores of Kinkaid Lake, known to many students as the "Spillway."

Holly Harris, the SEC representative who's leading the investigation of the Kinkaid Lake development project, said any development may drastically affect the ecosystem around the lake, and that an environmental impact study should be done on the region.

The Illinois Department of Conservation (IDOC) has jurisdiction over much of the land around the lake, maintaining it and working to preserve the animal and plant life in the area.

However, according to Bob Chapman, district manager of the Reed's Creek Conservancy District, the land surrounding Kinkaid Lake can be purchased by the conservancy district and leased out to private developers, who could then build and sell homes on the land to private citizens.

Chapman says this is exactly what the district plans to do, in an agreement with Taylor investments from Minneapolis, a project which currently provides for 400 single-family homes, a lodge, rental units, and a golf course.

The conservancy district is a legislatively created special-purpose district, initially brought into being to process and maintain the water supply coming from the lake. In a 1981 consolidation of holdings with the Illinois Department of Transportation, which built the lake, the conservancy district was given the option to buy areas around the lake and develop them for public use.

Now, with new legislation granting special districts more power, the conservancy district is planning to buy much of the north shore of the lake, then in turn leasing it to Taylor investments for $530 per acre, the price the district will pay for the land.

Don Vonnahme, director of IDOC's water resources division, said the planned project sounds like "sweetheart deal for Taylor (Investments)."

"In the long run, the economic development resulting from the project may make this deal well worth it for the conservancy district as well," he said.

Although the parties involved may benefit, Harris says the land is public property, and the district should not lease it off for private development without first closely studying the impact such development would have on the environment in the area.

"There are federal and state endangered species of birds and animals in this region," she said. "This is public land; we as citizens should have a say in what happens on it."

According to a U.S. Forest Service environmental assessment of land on the west side of Kinkaid Lake, the area is a nesting ground for the bald eagle, and potential habitat for the Indiana bat, both on the federal endangered-species list.

State endangered species found in the area include the bobcat and the red-shouldered hawk, as well as several species of plants and animals considered by the state to be threatened.

Fulbright scholar analyzes Britain's civil service system

By Benjamin Golshahr
Staff Reporter

Paul Regan, a Fulbright Scholar from the United Kingdom, spoke about the deterioration of Britain's civil service in SIUC's Museum Auditorium yesterday.

Regan, a former British civil service employee of seven years, began by expressing that his speech reflected his opinions.

"The views I express are very much my own," he said. "I am not here as a government official."

Regan said within the last 15 years, the British civil service's reputation to "serve all governments without fear or favor," has been tainted by the British television show, "Yes Minister," which he believes has molded an adverse public opinion of the civil service, and political movements, which began under former Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

Regan said between 1854, when the government led a commission to improve the civil service, and 1979, the British civil service did not change much.

In 1854 a government commission examined the civil service and took steps to safeguard against political corruption and guarantee that the civil service exist independently from Parliament.

He stressed that "neutrality" of the civil service from any existing political persuasions is what the rest of the world respected most of the government agency.

"When they (new civil servants) come on to the job they leave their personal political persuasions behind," he said.

Regan said during that time Britain was a world power and no one wanted to change the way policies were made.

"There was no question raised as to whether the civil service was doing a good job," he said. "Because of this the civil service endured and, for a number of years, remained unscathed."

Regan said that after 1979, the public view of the civil service began to shift. Some people believed that the civil service set their own agendas and that the

DE fights subpoena, asks for fair hearing

THE DAILY EGYPTIAN AND WSIU, AFTER being subpoenaed for all photographs taken of Halloween weekend, published and unpublished, wants to fight the Jackson County State's Attorney's order because several statutes and privileges would be compromised if the newspaper complied.

State's Attorney Mike Wepsiec had a subpoena hand-delivered to Daily Egyptian managing editor Lloyd Goodman and employees of other local media, on Nov. 2, commanding them to surrender reprints of all photographs taken on the evenings of Oct. 28, 29 and early morning Oct. 30. The reason for the order is to assist the state's attorney's office and Carbondale Police Department in a joint investigation of property damage over Halloween weekend. The photographs would then be used in identifying and prosecuting those involved in any illegal activities.

Local television stations KFVS, WSIL, WPSD, WSIU have all been issued subpoenas for material in addition to the Daily Egyptian and Southern Illinois newspapers. Only the DE and WSIU have elected to fight the order.

THE DAILY EGYPTIAN'S BASIS FOR WANTING to fight the order consists of the fact that both the First Amendment qualified privilege and Illinois Reporter Privilege Statute include provisions for protecting media rights in these situations. And, the above Constitutional and statutory privileges state that before materials can be legally demanded, the three following conditions must be present: An exhaustion of alternative sources of information, some overwhelming purpose will be served and the material sought is highly relevant. We believe those conditions have not been met.

The newspaper also believes that its reporters and photographers have a right to collect information without becoming an investigative arm of law enforcement. The DE also has a safety concern for staff members in the future if these photos are just surrendered without a full hearing of all the issues. Besides all the statutes and privileges, how could DE staff members effectively do their jobs reporting the news if there is a possible safety concern due to surrendering these photos or those taken in the future.

IF THE DE PHOTOS ARE TAKEN FOR THE above stated purposes, the paper is being used to do the Carbondale Police Department's job. By using DE materials to prosecute students and others alike, the newspaper would be forced into the role of being something it isn't. This student newspaper fills many roles, including informing the campus and community, serving as a journalism laboratory and giving students practical newspaper experience. Playing police department is not one of them.

Besides the dates of the photographs and footage, the police department has not stated specifically what it wants. One of the newspaper's main contentions is that the police department is attempting to gather a "grab bag" of photos in hope of pulling out something with which to prosecute.

THE DE BELIEVES THE PHOTOS SHOULD NOT be surrendered. Failing that, we urge students, University officials and legal counsel to support the DE's position that a full hearing of all issues involved should occur before any ruling is made about whether these photographs should be surrendered.

Letters to the Editor

Police issue more than tickets

On Saturday October 22, 1994, I received a ticket in front of a friend's house for public consumption of alcohol from a Carbondale Police Officer.

It is not that I feel that the ticket was unjust or ill-deserved, however, it was the attitude of the officer who issued the ticket, whom I feel acted in a completely unprofessional manner.

I did not realize I was breaking a law by drinking a beer in front of my friend's house, after all, I am 21. Apparently I was standing on the sidewalk otherwise known as the sacred line of demarcation separating public and private turf. When the officer informed me as such, I was completely passive and willing to accept the consequences. As the officer was issuing my ticket he proceeded to inform me that I was personally responsible for the "irresponsibility of the students and disrespect for the city of Carbondale..." He went on to accuse me of being one of those, "rude and inconsiderate people who attends this school from far away who thinks they can come in and take over the city, ruining it's image of being a peaceful town."

He also informed me that if I was his child and he found out that I was standing in front of my friend's house drinking a beer on a Saturday night instead of studying in the library, I would be dragged back home so fast I would not even know what hit me.

The above information is just a sample of the sermon the officer gave me. This, I felt, was completely unprofessional and unnecessary. I have lived in Carbondale for three and a half years, and I am a law-abiding citizen who respects the town in which I live. I have never been involved in any activities which would insult the city of Carbondale. Consequently, I feel the officers of the Carbondale Police Department need to have some respect for the students who reside in this town. Instead of taking a patronizing approach toward the students who live here, and holding a personal prejudice toward such, I feel that this community needs to develop a mutual respect among its citizens. As a registered voter and resident of Carbondale who is pursuing a higher education, I do not appreciate being treated like a pre-pubescent social deviant.

The overly defensive approach of the police officers toward students and vice-versa will not lessen until an understanding is reached. The blinding tension and constant "we'll show you" attitude does absolutely nothing to raise the image of Carbondale that is so important to so many of us.

DE article missing information

I found the article on incinerators very disappointing. In fact, the entire way the Egyptian has dealt with the plans for a incinerator at Carb Orchard disappointing, although I am grateful that Aaron wrote anything at all about the incinerator, and I hope that he continues to write about it and other environmental issues. The article left a lot of information out. For some reason it also had more information given by people who are pro incinerator. The article did not mention that when P.C.B.'s are heated they become dioxins which are much more harmful than P.C.B.'s. Dioxins can cause infertility, deformities in infants, weakening of the immune system, and has been linked to cancer. The studies which say incineration is safe do not study ingestion of food that has dioxin in it only inhalation; since ingestion is much more dangerous. The article made no mention of the EPA's new assessment of dioxin which says that no amount of dioxin is safe. Ironically, the article did not even mention that many incinerators do not even follow regulations; while on another page in the paper Aaron wrote about a man who had been fired for blowing the whistle on a toxic waste incinerator.

I was also disappointed that the conference on incinerators held by Regional Association of Concerned Environmentalists (RACE) was not reported on by the Egyptian. No one from the D.E. wrote that it was happening and no one showed up for it. If someone had perhaps more people would have learned that burying P.C.B.'s along with metals does not work.

The metals do not get destroyed; and they tend to cause more of the dioxins and P.C.B.'s to escape. Perhaps if someone had reported on the conference instead of just the one the Corps of Engineers had it would have gotten mentioned that they are not even sure of what chemicals are where or in what amount. Anyone who is interested in more information can contact the Student Environmental Action Coalition (SEAC) in the Interfaith Center at 913 So. Illinois or call them at 618-549-7387. CONTINUANCE, from page 1 about Guyon's control over news content in the Daily Egyptian or broadcast on WSIU-TV.

According to the guidelines for Daily Egyptian Policy and Review Board, established in 1974 and accepted by the University, the newspaper is not under the direct control of the university.

Under the "General Aims" section of the guidelines, the newspaper's policy and review board exists "to provide a means of over-all supervision of the newspaper that will at once remove it from direct control of college or university administration, or the student governing body, or the trustees, and at the same time maintain the necessary administrative controls to meet the legal responsibilities that ultimately vest in the trustees."

Walter Jaehning, director of SIUC's School of Journalism and fiscal officer of the Daily Egyptian, maintains the School of Journalism and the Daily Egyptian will continue to fight the subpoena.

"The students who work at the Daily Egyptian are hired to produce news, not evidence for legal proceedings," he said.

Jaehning repeated the Daily Egyptian's contention that the subpoena, requesting reprints of all photographs, is not specific enough, because it asks for everything Daily Egyptian photographers shot during Oct. 28 and 29 and early on Oct. 30, and does not request specific help or specific instructions.

"If they needed that information, they should have had someone there to get it for them," he said.

Daily Egyptian staffers could also be put in danger, Jaehning said, if the school were to voluntarily elect to provide photos or be forced to adhere to the subpoena.

"This puts the DE staffers in danger in the future," he said. "If they are in a mob situation and the mob believes they are there to make reports to be used in court against them, they might turn on the staff."

Jaehning said he will follow the guidelines for the Daily Egyptian policy and review board.

"Until I am told otherwise, those guidelines are still in effect," he said.

He also said that to the best of his knowledge, Guyon had not talked to any of the parties involved in the case.

"There are certain things Illinois law specifies that we are supposed to do," Jaehning said. "We will comply with the law as long as all are complying with the law."

Barry Cleveland, publisher of The Carmi Times and professional member of the DE policy and review board, sent Guyon a letter Tuesday asking the president to stand behind the newspaper.

"As a graduate of SIUC, a professional journalist for more than 20 years and a longtime member of the DE's policy and review board, I urge you in the strongest of terms to resist, on behalf of the newspaper, the temptation to join the other organizations and submit to the subpoena," he wrote.

Of six newspapers and television stations subpoenaed, the Daily Egyptian and WSIU-TV are the only ones which have not complied.

Cleveland also questioned why the Carbondale Police Department would want the photos.

"If government at this level is allowed to infringe on that freedom (of the press) in the case of this — an incident which, while admittedly serious, did not involve the loss of life — where is the stopping point?"

"I urge you once again to defend the Daily Egyptian in this matter," Cleveland's letter closed.

A new date for the hearing has not yet been set.

this year, and voters were unhappy with the leadership of the nation.

"There was a very volatile electorate," Derge said. "Clearly this was a referendum against Clinton."

Barbara Brown, an SIUC political science lecturer, said the Republicans had good, experienced candidates with the resources to get the message out.

Brown, a Democratic state central committee woman, said people cast their vote based on the candidates' qualifications and not as an anti-Clinton referendum.

Derge said now that Republicans have gained control of the Illinois General Assembly, the party's biggest challenge would be to produce a budget.

"It is going to be tough for the Republicans because they will have only two years to show the voters they can make a difference," he said.

Brown said that the political scene is changing in Jackson County, an area that has typically voted Democratic the past 20 years.

"The pattern has generally been that Democrats have been better organized with better candidates, but now they will have more challenges from the Republican party," she said.

Michael Starr, SIUC director of radio and television, said the GOP gains were a reflection of peoples' dissatisfaction with government.

"People voted for change in '92 and didn't get it," Starr, a presidential appointee in Gerald Ford's administration, said.

John Jackson, dean of the College of Liberal Arts and political science professor, said Illinois has a "Republican machine" that is able to keep the state's top officeholders in power.

"Republicans can get their constituents to the polls better than the Democrats," he said.

Jackson said the commonly referred to Chicago Democratic machine is no longer the force it once was in Illinois politics.

"The Democratic voter base in the central city of Chicago is shrinking, and more Republican areas like DuPage county are growing," he said.

Students assess help in '93 flood

By Charlotte Rivers
Campus Life Editor

Four SIUC graduate students are directly involved in assessing the effectiveness of outreach mental health services provided to Illinois victims of the flood of 1993.

Hussein Soliman, School of Social Work assistant professor and director of the evaluation for Project Recovery, said the students were selected because of their familiarity with research.

He said evaluations will be achieved through the use of questionnaire to various agencies, administrators and community members involved in Project Recovery.

The students are Sandra Ploch, Amanda Raymond, Susan Lingle and Sugandhi Rasquinha, all graduate students at the School of Social Work.

"There was not enough time to train students in research," he said. "They were chosen for their experience."

Soliman said the project is one way to help social workers understand the dynamics of the community and social service agencies.

"The project helps to enhance the community's ability to deal with the flood," he said.

Joanne Chezem, evaluation project coordinator, said the students are doing a good job.

"They're wonderful, really incredible. They're very mature," she said. "They were chosen for their experience with research and also for their ability to work independently."

Each student has been assigned a specific task to design the research instrument, the questionnaire, to collect data, and when it is received, to evaluate the success of the project. The project was a part of the Department of Mental Health and Developmental Disabilities, and provided mental health services to residents of 39 Illinois counties affected by the flooding of the Mississippi River in 1993.

Ploch, a second-year graduate student from Marion, had a unique experience because she also worked as an outreach counselor in Alexander County, which includes Cairo, last summer.

"As a social worker, outreach seemed very natural," she said. "I found there continues to be a lot of unmet needs (in Alexander County)."

Ploch said she worked with about 20 families in that area per week to get updates on their situations, help find resources, grants and other funding for them and — when necessary — refer them to traditional counseling.

Raymond, a first year graduate student from Hultey, said she plans to evaluate services provided through the project from the perspective of the administrators.

"I'll be looking at the core team's attitudes and the development of the administrative portion," she said.

Evaluation of the effectiveness of the training given to outreach workers, who include mental health professionals, church groups and Red Cross volunteers, is the responsibility of Rasquinha, a first-year graduate student from India.

"I'll be looking at the reactions received and the effect of community education through Project Recovery," she said.

The flood victims' perceptions of the services they received will be measured by Lingle, a first-year graduate student from Benton.

Martin Tracy, director of the School of Social Work, said the evaluation project, which will begin collecting data late this year or early next year, has been beneficial to many.

"It's a good illustration of the collaboration between the School of Social Work and state agencies," he said. "The mission of the school is to advance the role of the community."

Topsy-turvy: SIUC psychology study explores weightlessness

By Diane Dove
Staff Reporter

How weightlessness may affect the ability of astronauts to concentrate while in space is the subject of a study by researchers in SIUC's psychology department.

Kristen Murray, a doctoral student in psychology, is beginning a study that will examine possible effects of simulated weightlessness on short-term memory and other cognitive abilities.

"Basically, I'm trying to look at attention-related issues and short-term memory," she said.

"It's more of a human factor, man-machine kind of thing.

"If we find that their processing is slower than normal, it would affect the way they can make decisions."

Murray said the study, funded by NASA's Graduate Student Researchers Program, will affect the training of astronauts and the design of future space equipment.

The study, which she is conducting with behavioral and social science department chairman Dennis Molfese, is an expansion of Murray's master's thesis work and will be part of her doctoral dissertation, she said.

Murray said she thinks the study will replicate the findings of that previous study, which tested brain-wave responses using the "Oddball Paradigm" — so named because of its use of infrequently heard speech sounds.

The study exposed people to sounds under controlled conditions while the subjects sat upright, Murray said.

Later the subjects listened to the same sounds while lying on a bed which tilted them in a minus-six-degree position known as the head-down tilt, she said.

Research collaborator Molfese said the purpose of the head-down tilt is to simulate the effect of weightlessness that occurs in space.

"Basically, we want to see if cognitive processes change when there is a change in the distribution of fluids in the body," he said.

The subjects' brainwave responses to "oddball" sounds were significantly different when they were seated upright, Murray explained.

"What you see is an increased amplitude for the oddball sound but it's less with the head-down tilt," she said.

"What that suggested is that there is some sort of difficulty in paying attention."

Murray's study, expected to begin next spring, will examine brainwaves of 24 subjects exposed to the Oddball Paradigm, along with simple short-term memory and arithmetic tests.

Molfese said the study also would incorporate computer work.

"One of the aspects of this is to have (subjects) interact with a computer while they're in the head-down-tilt position," he said.

The study, which will probably recruit students from the psychology department, will compare the respective effects the head-down-tilt and upright positions have on brain-wave responses, she said.

Group offers SIUC students opportunity for scholarship

By David Vingren
Staff Reporter

SIUC students whose education or current employment is affected by micrographics are eligible for a $750 scholarship award.

The Bill Potter Scholarship will be awarded to the student who can best answer the question, in short essay form "What role does micrographics play in the superhighway of information and how will it impact your future?"

Many students qualify for the award, since most fields of study and jobs are affected by a rapidly changing micrographics industry, according to Pam Anderson, associate records manager in SIUC's office of micrographics.

"Just about every job has some form of micrographics in it, like in the library, administration records, (or) the clinical center," Anderson said. Micrographics refers to projecting filmed or photographed images into computers.

Anderson said a student's financial need and major will not affect the office's decision on who wins the award.

The money awarded will be applied toward the spring '95 semester.

Students applying for the scholarship must submit the essay, no longer than two typewritten pages, by Dec. 19.

The winner will be announced Jan. 9, 1995.

Anderson said she expects 20 to 30 students to apply.

Money for the scholarship was donated by the St. Louis Chapter of the Association for Information and Image Management.

AIIM is an organization serving as a resource on all new technology and education taking shape with the field of information and image management, according to Sandra Bursey, director of records management in the office of micrographics.

AIIM donated the money in honor of Bill Potter, former SIUC director of micrographics, who passed away in 1984.

Nirvana 'unplugged' needs juice

By Aleksandra Macys
Senior Reporter

Concert Review

Although many of the more popular songs off the new acoustic Nirvana album have been played on the radio and heard by many people, the rest of the album is — for many reasons — not worth listening to.

"MTV Unplugged in New York" is available in stores and offers a different, mellow version of old and new songs from Kurt Cobain, Krist Novoselic and Dave Grohl, debuting their jump on the unplugged bandwagon.

The 14 songs on the album drone on, and by the end of the album Cobain's trademark, screeching, off-key, nerve-grating voice began to sound like my friend's dog, Ike, who howls endlessly into the night.

Not all of the songs on the album are bad, some having great guitar and other instrumental work such as a cello playing during some songs by Lori Goldston, but it was mostly Cobain's voice that ruined them.

Cobain played and sang the song "Pennyroyal Tea" solo, during which he should have just played the song and left the singing out completely. He started the song off in a different key, which sounded good — I only wish he would have stuck to that key throughout this and all the other songs.

In the songs "Plateau" and "Lake of Fire," Cobain attempts to imitate a Neil Young sound, but does not quite do it. He does do a decent job singing in parts, but during the chorus of these and other songs, I expected him to start coughing from the strain he was putting on his vocal chords. He sounded like a young man going through a voice change during puberty.

Although the album was recorded as it was played by the band, giving it a raw edge, a little sound-board mixing would have definitely helped.

Two of the songs on the album, "Jesus Doesn't Want Me For a Sunbeam," originally written by a Scottish band called the Vaselines, and "Where Did You Sleep Last Night," originally done by blues legend Leadbelly, sound like Irish Folk songs, especially since Novoselic played the accordion during them. The songs are two of the more decent ones on the album.

Some songs such as "Oh Me" and "Something In The Way" were melodic sounding, but made me want to cry because they were so depressing.

It is no wonder that radio stations have only been playing certain songs over and over and not playing other songs at all.

The other songs simply are not worth listening to unless you really, really, like acoustic music and Nirvana.

Melvins' album mixes styles

By Dave Katzman
Staff Reporter

Music Review

The so-called fathers of grunge, the Melvins, effectively separate themselves from that tired genre with the release of "Stoner Witch."

"Stoner Witch," the second major-label release by the Melvins, contains some of the band's most commercially-acceptable songs, along with some of the strangest.

Hot on the heels of the experimental "Prick," the band is not trying to get on the cover of "Rolling Stone" or in the MTV Buzz Bin, but is just playing a combination of the styles they've touched upon in the last 10 years.

The band has been blamed for beginning the grunge thing because of its association with Kurt Cobain. When Cobain was a mere lad in Aberdeen, Wash., he had to find ways to kill time in the boring logging town. Before he discovered solace in heroin, he hung out in a garage and listened to the Melvins practice.

Years later, "Nevermind" came out and Nirvana wound up performing on "Saturday Night Live," with Cobain comfortably attired in a homemade Melvins T-shirt. Cobain subsequently mentioned in several interviews how he was influenced by the group.

As a result, some geniuses in the record industry figured they could make a buck off signing the Melvins and marketing them as the originator of grunge, now fondly embedded in many flannel-clad hearts. Securing artistic freedom and the chance to put more money into their recording efforts, the Melvins signed to Atlantic Records and placed Cobain behind the mixing board for the debut, "Houdini."

Stoner Witch by the Melvins

A listen to "Stoner Witch" will add to the confusion over where to stock the Melvins in the record store. This disc has more moods than the average schizophrenic, steering itself away from being cubbyholed into one musical style or another.

"Queen" may be an MTV-friendly track.

The tune is driven by a straight-ahead-rock 'n' roll guitar riff, sans the samples and effects which sometimes scare away the average music fan.

"Sweet Willy Rollbar" and "Revolve" follow in the heavy vein, leading into "Goose Freight Train." "Goose" sounds like bass-driven lounge music, punctuated by finger snapping and tambourines.

"At The Stake" is in traditional Melvins style. Mark Deutrom's slow and heavy bass line is akin to listening to an early Black Sabbath 45 at 33-rpm speed. The accompanying monotone wail and clucks produced by various parts of King Buzzo's guitar give the tune a psychedelic feel.

The Melvins have always had a tendency to experiment with sounds.

In addition to the bizarre creativity of the band, innovative recording techniques were utilized in the creation of "Stoner Witch."

"Shevil" has vocalist Buzzo singing through an eight-foot corrugated exhaust pipe, while the guitar is blunted into a dull AM-radio sound.

"Magic Pig Detective" and "Lividty" are reminiscent of early Pink Floyd soundscapes. "Magic Pig Detective" sounds like New Age music heard through the haze of nitrous oxide. Whines and squeals echo in each ear, a fraction of a second off of each other over a relatively calm background. "Lividty" takes a simple bass line and drags it on much longer than it should, numbing the brain with monotony.

Those who place "Stoner Witch" under their tongue are due for a ride through a twisted world of feedback, bass and psychedelics. It is a pleasant escape from the world of: boring, sound-alike, MTV-pimped music and is recommended for all who need a little change.

politicians, since they were only elected for relatively short terms, had no choice but to comply, he said.

"There was a suspicion that the civil service was able to control the government's agenda through time extension and all sorts of little tricks," he said. "Many Ph.D.s have been written about it, but one can agree for sure."

Regan said former British Prime Minister, Margaret Thatcher, took measures to restrict the power of the civil service.

"She (Thatcher) wanted to surround herself with 'true believers' — you were either with her or against her," he said. "She saw the civil service as a product of the sixties and as part of the problem." He said she cut-up the civil service into separate agencies, appointed several chief ministers (the executive member's of the civil service), and cut the number of civil service employees dramatically.

"In 1979 we lost roughly a third of the civil service," he said. "There was certainly some fat in the system, but a third — that was quite something."

He said with the added pressure of being fired and the decentralization of the civil service into separate agencies, political corruption began to infiltrate the service.

"More and more civil servants were asked to do things that were clearly political, and there were reprisals to those who did not obey" he said. "Young civil servants saw that it was often a lot better for your career to comply."

Regan said the future outlook for the British civil service is gloomy.

"The Department of Health has announced cutting 25 percent of it's employee's within two years," he said. "The Treasury will cut a third of it's positions within three years. This does nothing to enhance employee moral."

He concluded by stating what he would say to anyone who asked him whether he still thought the British civil service's reputation is still as great as it was in years past.

"My answer would be a resounding 'No,' he said.

Grinnell's emergency generator failed late Tuesday afternoon, so east-campus students ate dinner at Trueblood Tuesday night. East-campus meals were served there throughout Wednesday, according to University News Service.

Corey Morgan, a freshman in computer science from Champaign who's also a resident at Boomer, said he didn't eat dinner Tuesday night because he wasn't sure where it was being served.

Morgan said housing officials have done a "decent job" of informing residents what is happening, but many still must call around for more information.

He agreed the power outage has caused difficulties in many ways.

"You can't type papers on your computer and a lot of the professors won't accept the power as an excuse, so you have to go to Faner Hall or Lentz Hall," he said. Both halls, though, are packed with students in the same predicament.

Ineffective alarm clocks, not being able to see in the bathrooms and no lights in stairwells also have caused problems.

"The emergency safety light have run out of power (in the stairwells)," Morgan said. "You can't see in the halls either. I expect people to grow tired of it."

Morgan said he was disappointed Tuesday when he saw work crews, who were supposed to work through the night to try to restore power, stop at about 4 p.m. However, the installation of the generator has restored full power to Boomer Hall temporarily.

Sarah Rothfield, an undecided sophomore from DesPlaines and a resident at Boomer, said most of the residents on the second floor on the even side of Boomer are working through the problem together.

"We got together and bought an oil lamp and we've all been studying in the same room,"

Rothfield said. "We're very upset about it, because this happened last year and I've heard it happened the year before."

Rothfield said she has had to take showers by flashlight due to the power outage.

Boomer resident Mike McQuinley, an undecided sophomore from Sheridan, said most of the updates he has received about the power cutoff have been by word of mouth.

"People are sticking their heads out the windows asking the workers how things are going," McQuinley said. "(Information) is spreading by word of mouth; as long as you're talking to people you pretty much know what's happening. I haven't had an RA talk to me though."

He said he feels Boomer got the worst of the power outage, because Wright Hall had power restored early Wednesday morning and Boomer was still without.

Horseback lessons for disabled

By Anika Robertson
Staff Reporter

Individuals with disabilities have the opportunity to receive horseback riding lessons at Le Cheval De Boskydelle in Carbondale.

SIUC's Disability Support Services has a six-week program which provides individuals with disabilities a chance to ride horses with trained instruction.

Kathleen Plesko, director of the service, said one of the best features of the program is that it is not limited to students and any individual with a disability can participate. There is no charge and transportation to the program is also included.

"We outreach into the community," she said.

Horseback riding lessons began last semester with grant funding. The program runs once every semester. New programs in the department will be implemented with grants from the U.S. Department of Education, Plesko said.

They received a grant last year for $129,000 and one this year for $92,000 for the Individual Recreation Program. IRP supports a variety of recreational experiences including the horseback riding program.

Plesko said the program needs more participants and requires a certain number of volunteers to help each rider.

"Assistance (for the riders) is available if it is needed," she said.

Rich Swanson, a graduate assistant for Disability Support Services from River Forest, said IRP will expand to two more states.

"Starting next year, the program will be implemented at SEMO and Murray State (University) in Kentucky," he said.

Joyce Fornes, a participant in the horseback riding program who is visually impaired, said she is grateful for the service.

"It shows another person with a disability that there is more to life than academics and family. Recreation and physical fitness is important," said the SIUC graduate. Fornes said riding horses is great exercise, is therapeutic and builds self-esteem.

Suzanne Goriell, a wheelchair user, is a participant who said she is happy she has the chance to ride horses again.

"I liked to ride horses as a child. Every participant has something to gain inside," the resident of Carbondale said.

Goriell said she has benefited personally from the program because she is now able to participate in an activity that she previously thought was unattainable.

Marjorie Malkin has been a horseback riding instructor for more than 20 years and currently teaches the participants at Le Cheval de Boskydelle.

"We make sure riders have specialized safety equipment such as helmets, safety stirrups and wrist and back braces."

Mark O'Donoghue, stable owner, also has extensive experience instructing individuals with disabilities.

The participants use the English or hunt-seat method/saddle for horseback riding. Breeds of the horses range from quarter-horses to Morgans. Recreation and therapeutic students and staff from the SIUC Recreation Center serve as assistants in this program.

For more information on the horseback riding program, call Disability Support Services at 453-5738.

Mexican president criticizes passage of Prop 187

The Washington Post

MEXICO CITY—Mexicans reacted angrily to Tuesday's overwhelming vote by Californians approving Proposition 187, saying the measure to deny public services to illegal immigrants smacks of racism.

"We're not a bunch of delinquents," said Agustin Garcia, a bicycle taco vendor. "The Mexicans are going to go to the United States whether Americans like it or not. We're smart people. We know how to get past any barrier you put up against us."

Bilateral relations between the United States and Mexico, since the Jan. 1 implementation of the North American Free Trade Agreement, seemed certain to be affected by the vote. President Carlos Salinas de Gortari, the chief architect of NAFTA, lashed out at the referendum results late Tuesday, saying,

"The voices of intolerance have returned."

A presidential statement Wednesday suggested the vote was aimed at "restricting the access to public health, education and social-security services to Mexican migrants in the state of California."

1994 Fall Semester Final Exam Schedule

The examination schedule attempts to avoid examination conflicts by providing separate examination periods for Tuesday-Thursday lecture classes. Other information about final examinations is listed below:

1. The class final exam period is scheduled based on the meeting time and days configuration listed on the first line of the class entry in the Schedule of Classes book (which should be the same as the first printed line for the section on the registered student's schedule print-out). For example, a class section is listed in the Schedule book on two lines in the manner:

09:00 - 10:50 W TH

The listed starting time for the first line of the entry is "8:00". The meeting days of that first line are "T R", and therefore are in the category "Only T or R". The Exam Date and Period is by the attached Fall '94 Final Examination Schedule to be Friday, December 16 at 7:50 a.m. - 9:50 a.m.

2. Classes should plan to hold their final examination in their regularly scheduled class rooms. The space scheduling section of the Office of Admissions and Records will forward to departments information relative to the location for examinations for those classes that cannot hold their examinations in their regularly scheduled rooms because of a space conflict. This will be done sufficiently in advance of the final examination days to provide adequate notice for all.

Classes that meet less than the entire semester should hold their exams during the last regular class session prior to final examinations.

Please note that University policy indicates that exams are not to be given prior to exam week, or at times other than those scheduled.

3. Students who find they have more than three examinations on one day may petition, and students who have two examinations scheduled at one time should petition their academic dean for approval to take an examination during the make-up examination period on the last day. Provision for such a make-up examination period does not mean that students may decide to miss the scheduled examination time and expect to make it up during this make-up period. This period is to be used only for students whose petitions have been approved by their dean.

2. One credit hour courses ordinarily will have their examination, during the last regularly scheduled class period prior to the formal final examination week.

4. Students who must miss a final examination may not take an examination before the time scheduled for the class examination. Information relative to the proper grade to be given students who miss a final examination and are not involved in a situation covered in the preceding paragraph will be found in the mimeographed memorandum forwarded to members of the instructional staff at the time they receive the final grade listing for the recording of grades.

5. Individualized Learning Program classes will be administered at the SIUC Student Center throughout final exam week. Students wishing to sit for an exam must contact the Division of Continuing Education at Washington Square "C" (536-7751) at least three days in advance in order to reserve a time-slot and receive a room assignment.

3. Other classes (not those for 1 credit)

GOP control of House will put new face on country's approach to labor, business issues

WASHINGTON—For the first time since the dawning of the modern regulatory age 25 years ago, Republican control of Congress gives business a chance to set the legislative and regulatory agenda.

A look at issues outside the broad areas of taxes, trade and health care reveals a simple truth: The Democratic agenda for business is in serious trouble.

"You can forget about labor-law reform," said Robert McGlotten, legislative director of the AFL-CIO. Republicans have "got the cards." Organized labor is also giving up on other labor-backed legislation, such as a ban on striker replacements and reform of the Occupational Safety and Health Act, which they had been unable to get with the Democrats in control of Congress and the White House.

But labor's losses are business's gains, according to Jeff McGuinness of the Labor Policy Association, which represents 250 of the nation's largest corporations. The Republican victory, he said, is "a very important opportunity, and I hope business takes advantage."

He listed a series of legislative items in the employment-law area where business wants change. At the top is an overhaul of the Fair Labor Standards Act, the 1930s law that sets minimum wages, determines who gets paid for what hours worked and whether an employer can dock the pay of a salaried worker who takes time off during the day.

Business groups will also push for legislation designed to blunt the financial impact of federal employment-discrimination laws through the creation of "alternative disputes resolution" procedures that keep disputes out of the courts.

Deregulation is also high on the lists of business groups.

"In general, the (Senate) Commerce Committee will be less regulatory, less willing to add new fees and taxes, and will be seeking ways to make government more efficient," said Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., who is in line to become that panel's chairman.

Other legislative items on the business agenda include limits on product liability and curbs on malpractice suits. Recent Democratic efforts to reduce smoking and impose more rules on the tobacco industry will fall by the wayside.

"I'm tempted to go into the committee room and light up a stogie at the first meeting," said one Republican staffer on the House Energy and Commerce Committee.

Business leaders said they will also gain a majority of lawmakers interested in keeping a watchful eye on the Clinton administration's regulatory activities. One administration official, who did not want to be named, said the Republican control would have a "chilling effect" on executive-branch regulatory efforts.

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration, for example, has recently proposed bans on smoking in the workplace and is about to set "ergonomic standards" for workplace injuries.

"We trust that the new Congress will have some oversight and budget role with respect to OSHA and the Department of Labor and will rein in any excesses," said Peter Eide, who handles labor issues for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

House patronage employees nervously await clean sweep of GOP's new broom WASHINGTON—Donnald K. Anderson, a dapper man with a handlebar moustache, has worked in the House of Representatives for 35 years, first as a 17-year-old page, then up through the ranks to become Clerk of the House.

"I'm one of those people who actually lived out my fantasy," Anderson said Wednesday. Next year his fantasy comes to an end. As the House's chief bookkeeper, his is one of the plum patronage jobs in Washington.

But the Democrats' loss of House control after four decades, means the Republicans now will name Anderson's successor and put at risk the 300 people who work for him.

"They're scared. They have mortgages. They have house payments. They have children," he said, his eyes reddening. "I'm worried about my employees. Many want to stay, and they are good, loyal men and women with institutional knowledge."

The Republicans, new masters of the House, are now entitled to fill patronage jobs like Anderson's.

While Anderson has been a House fixture, there are more than 3,000 other Senate and House personnel—mostly professional staff—who, as of now, face the prospect of joblessness. If the Clinton government's batlecrey is "downsizing" government, Congressional Democrats Wednesday became the cannon fodder.

Congress is the closest thing that the United States has to a state within a state.

Its rules and regulations are its own. It has its own police, its own borders and its own payroll. If Congress needs more money, it votes it to itself. If Congress needs more autonomy, it writes a new law.

But when the voters radically change its composition as they did on Tuesday, Congress gets itself into a state. Winners exult. Losers panic. Everybody is bewildered. Democrat Donald F. Goldberg, deputy staff director for the House Government Operations Committee, Wednesday stopped remodeling the office, canceled appointments with the White House and wondered what to do next.

"There are a lot of people walking around here in mourning," Goldberg said. Why bother with appointments? he asked.

"Why waste their time? ... Why waste my time? I don't have that kind of importance anymore."

When the Republicans officially become the majority in January, they can write their own rules, and the House is braced for an earthquake.

For forty years Democrats controlled everything — from the distribution of members' paychecks to the size and wealth of standing committees to the rules of debate.

Now the GOP has it all and Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., the House speaker in waiting, has promised a massive housecleaning. Democrats will bear the brunt.

"It could go as high as a 40 percent cut in committee staffs, and that will all be on the Democratic side," said a top Republican who has been working on reorganizing the House.

In the U.S. Senate, Bob Dole holds out small promise of cooperation to Clinton

WASHINGTON—Above all else, Robert J. Dole, R-Kan.; the once and future Senate majority leader, is a legislator who has trouble walking away from a reasonable deal. Wednesday morning, he was on the phone with President Clinton, offering the traditional promise to "work with you where we can."

But Dole is also a once and future presidential aspirant, and his willingness to enter into a limited partnership of sorts with the administration could stir up resentment among more conservative Republicans, including Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, a likely rival for the GOP presidential nomination in 1996.

Wednesday, Dole warned that voters easily could turn against the resurrected Republicans if they spend the next two years blocking or dismembering the remainder of Clinton's legislative agenda.

"If we say we got the message and we don't produce, we'll get kicked out for a long time again," Dole said at a Capitol Hill news conference.

"We know we have the responsibility. ... We're prepared to go to work."

Dole and his aides stressed there was ample room for compromise between the new Republican Congress and the Democratic administration over welfare, deficit reduction, trade, lobbying, restrictions and a number of other important issues.

As he prepares to reclaim the majority leader's post he lost after the Republicans were swept from power in 1986; Dole is gambling that he can somehow hold the moderate and conservative wings of his party together while trying to position himself for a final bid for the presidency.

His task will be complicated by Gramm and other conservatives in the Senate and House, who have promoted an agenda of tax cuts, increased defense spending, deficit reduction and other programs.

Dole was chairman of the Finance Committee during the early period of the Reagan administration, and he and other moderate Republicans spent years trying to dig the government out of a deficit crisis spawned by President Reagan's tax and budget policies and a troubled economy.

Dole pushed through huge tax increases in 1982 to try to offset the deficit.

'94 U.S. Olympic Congress meets to increase athletics

The Washington Post

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—More than 900 representatives of sports organizations are expected to attend the 1994 U.S. Olympic Congress set to officially open here Thursday.

The Congress, which started in 1991, focuses on the Olympic movement and the needs of U.S. Olympic Committee member organizations. "By exchanging ideas, sharing insights and tapping new resources, the Congress is devoted to developing a stronger, more-productive future for U.S. athletes," John Krimsky Jr., USOC interim executive director, said.

The three-day convention at the Opryland Hotel includes workshops on sports marketing, sports commissions, sponsorships and sports facility and equipment partnerships. About 120 exhibitors representing convention centers, sporting-goods companies and other retail outlets also are present.

For the first time, the USOC held an all-day pre-Congress event that concentrated on getting more youth involved in sports.

Wednesday, Tom Crawford, director of coaching and educational programs for the USOC, said studies show that children become less active in sports at 12 to 14 years old. He also said 3-6 p.m. are the critical hours in which children become more sedentary.

"We have done a poor job of responding to that adolescent population," Crawford said. "When they hit adolescence, we want to have opportunities for them to fill non-school hours with healthy activities. Our challenge is to make sure that program offerings actually increase significantly at that time rather than decrease."

Some speakers emphasized the need for community-based groups to become more involved in providing activities for young people who might not be able to make the sports teams in their schools.

Leroy Walker, USOC president, said in an interview that the committee is concerned about future sports leaders.

talent.

"With the quality of women's teams we have had and the lack of people who come out, I just don't know what to do," she said.

Davis said the promotions department has tried to bring more fans into the games, and will continue to do so in the future.

In an attempt to draw more fans to the women's games, many promotions, including Valentine Night and SIU Student Night, have been scheduled for this year.

"We have racked our brains trying to think of something to get people to attend the women's games," he said.

"We will just keep trying different things until we get it right."

I knew I wanted to come here."

"Don (DeNoon, women's cross country and track coach) accepted me and has really been great to me," she said. "He has been the best coach I've had."

Although track was her main sport, DeNoon wanted Horner to run cross country.

"The only reason I ran cross country was because Don (DeNoon) said it would be good for me," she said. "I hated it and complained my entire freshman year, but I stuck it out even though I finished last on the team."

DeNoon said Horner was unprepared for that first year of cross country.

"She was a fish out of water because she had never ran that distance before," he said. "She was trained as a sprinter and was not prepared to run that long of a distance."

Horner rebounded as a sophomore having a strong year and coming on to finish 12th in the MVC Championship to help SIUC win the conference title.

After a decent junior year, Horner exploded this season, winning Missouri Valley Conference Runner-of-the-Week four times and the conference championship.

"I credit most of my success to my off-season work," she said. "This was the first year I trained almost everyday during the off-months and Don (DeNoon) told me if I put the work in I could perform at a higher level."

DeNoon said Horner's four years have really been a boast to the program.

"Any time an SIUC athlete rises to the level of prestige Jennie has the entire athletic program is helped," he said. "It also helps other athletes when they see the strength and focus she had to realize they can also do it too."

As good as Horner is in cross country, she said her strength is still in track. She runs the indoor mile, the outdoor 1,500 meters, half-mile, the 4 x 800 relay and distance medley relay.

"Even though I have had a lot of success in cross country this year, I think I'm better in track," she said. "My ultimate goal is to make nationals and make the All-America team."

Homer on right track as top SIUC runner

By Doug Durso
Senior Reporter

Fighting adversity is nothing new for Jennie Homer, who came back from a devastating knee injury in high school and a virtual unknown as a freshman at SIUC, to become the top runner in the Missouri Valley Conference and have a chance to qualify for the National Championships.

Homer won the MVC Championship on Oct. 29, setting a collegiate course record on the 5k SIUC course in 17:28.3, while becoming the first Saluki to win the title since Vivian Sinou.

farm in Armington, had to fight through a serious injury and a lack of confidence in high school.

In her freshman year in at Olympia high school, Homer showed a lot of potential by going to state in the half-mile.

But as a sophomore she tore her anterior cruciate ligament during a snow mobile accident, which wiped out her sophomore year and led to a sub-par junior year before she qualified for state her senior year.

"I know that I will have to run my best time and I will be going up against great competition, but I have confidence in myself to do it."

collegiate level.

"I had no confidence in myself after the injury and I didn't really get a lot of encouragement besides my family and friends, so I was really discouraged."

Jim Sunday, Homer's track coach at Olympia High School, said he did not expect her to do this well.

"To be honest I thought she would never really recover from that knee injury she suffered," he said. "I'm happy SIUC took a chance on her. I'm pleasantly pleased at how well she has done."

Homer said the reason she came to SIUC was because her brother Chad had attended the University.

"I came down to visit Chad when he went to school here and everybody was extremely nice to me," she said. "I loved the campus and the people, so

Women's basketball attendance under par

By Bill Kugelberg
Associate Student Editor

While the SIUC basketball programs continue to improve their records on the court, home attendance figures continue to be a problem off the court for the two teams — which are trying to figure out how to draw more people to the games.

While SIUC's men's and women's basketball teams stand at the bottom half of the Missouri Valley Conference when it comes to attendance, a common trend is that the women draw startling fewer fans than the men.

The exception to this is at Southwest Missouri State, where the women drew an average of 8,191 fans to their games while the men drew an average of 7,588 people to each contest.

In comparison, SIUC's men's team drew an average of 4,996 people to each game last season, while the women only drew 605 fans to each contest.

Tom Davis, SIUC publicity promotion specialist, said his department tries to draw more fans to games through contests and giveaways.

"We have a corporate sponsor for each game and we allow them to do what they want," Davis said. "They hand out coupons and do giveaways."

However, Davis said the men are a popular team in the area and do a good job bringing in fans on their own.

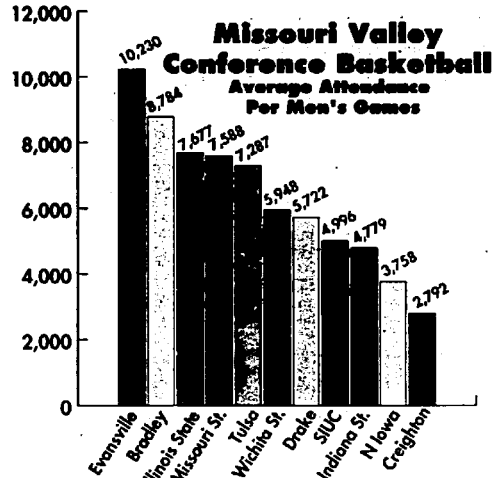

"We do our fair share to bring people in," he said. "But they (men's team) definitely do bring in people because they are a good team."

Since the women bring in such a substantially low number of fans, Davis said the promotion specialists do more things to help bring in fans to those games.

"We are probably more active on the women's side as far as taking a night and making it an event," he said. "They need more of a push to get people out to their games."

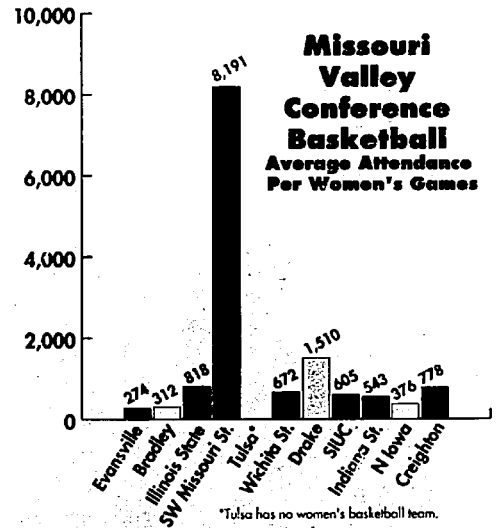

However, Charlotte West, SIUC's associate athletic director, said poor attendance at women's games is not because of a lack of

Pre-season matches slated for Saluki women's hoops

By Chris Clark
Staff Reporter

The SIUC women's basketball team will begin the pre-season portion of its schedule Sunday, as the Salukis take on the AAU Lady Hawks at the Arena.

Saluki women's head coach Cindy Scott said this is a good chance for her squad to get some virtual game time.

"It gives us an opportunity to play against someone other than ourselves," she said. "It's also a chance for everyone to get to play in as close to a game situation as possible."

"I'm looking forward to running our offense and defense against a team that doesn't know what we're going to do."

Scott said this game also gives her a good look at her options for the regular season.

"I'll get a chance to look at every different combination of lineups I have," she said. "The chemistry of the team is very good. They (team) get along well, and are very supportive of one another. Now they'll get a chance to show that in a game situation."

Although Rockey Ransom has been out of action due to knee surgery she had last season, Scott said the team hasn't missed a beat.

"It's tough, but it hasn't been a factor, because we haven't had her," she said. "She's seen as an assistant and a cheerleader, right now. If we do get her back, it'll be a big bonus."

In last season's preseason opener, SIUC's first since 1989, the Salukis narrowly escaped with a 51-49 win after poor shooting from both the field and the free throw line.

Despite the two-point victory last year, Scott said winning preseason contests are not a major concern.

"It's totally unimportant," she said. "It doesn't count on our record, and it's (the pre-season) intended to give us a chance to see different things from the team."

Scott has scheduled two preseason match-ups, AAU Sunday and the Finnish National Team, Nov. 20.

These games Scott said will provide her veterans with some much needed competition as well as calming the nerves of her newcomers.

By Doug Durso
Senior Reporter

One of the many new faces Saluki hoops fans will get to root for this season is a player who reached the Regional Final in the NCAA Tournament two years ago.

Aminu Timberlake, a 6-9 junior forward for SIUC, transferred from Kentucky in 1992 and is expected to make an immediate impact for the Salukis this year.

"I'm just waiting to explode," Timberlake said. "I have a big hunger to get out there and play. It's hard when you have to sit and watch your teammates, so I'm looking forward to the competition."

As a freshman at Kentucky, Timberlake averages eight minutes a game and saw action in 14 contests a sophomore.

Even though Timberlake had to sit out a year he was able to practice with the Salukis and knows what kind of talent the team has.

"We will be out running with the athletes we have on our team and when we start, we'll be hard to stop," he said. "However, we do have the ability to play a halfcourt slow down game too."

Timberlake, who is majoring in advanced technical studies, said he can help the team

43 Carr, forward

By Doug Durso
Senior Reporter

Driving force for this year's SIUC's men's basketball team is a multi-dimensional forward, who has big expectations for the team and himself.

Junior forward Chris Carr, who started every game last year, was an instrumental player for the Salukis in 1993. He helped lead the Dawgs to a berth in the NCAA tournament and will be counted on to lead SIUC into the 1994-95 season.

Coming off a successful season last year, the Salukis are looking for even greater results this year as the team returns three starters plus several key newcomers.

"We had a lot of talent last year, but I think we have more this year and we're going to be an exciting team," Carr said.

He said this year the team is looking to improve after the squad's first round loss in the NCAA championships a year ago.

"Our goal is to get to the sweet-16 and I think we have the talent to do that," he said.

Carr is coming off a strong sophomore campaign where he averaged 14.1 points and 6.6 rebounds a game. He was also named to the MVC All-Tournament team.

The 6-6, 200 pound forward will be part of a frontcourt, which includes senior Marcus Timmons and Kentucky transfer Aminu Timberlake.

"I am very excited about what we can do," Carr said. "Our frontcourt is going to be very good, maybe one of the best in the nation."

Now a junior, Carr said he feels comfortable with the team and system of SIUC basketball.

"This has been a very good two years for me," he said. "I started fitting in well last season and I know the system."

Since Carr has been in the program for a couple of years, he wants to help the younger players adjust to college level basketball.

"I've been around for a while and I've been through it myself, so I would like to pass on my experiences to the younger players," he said. "I would like to be seen as a leader one that the players can come up to for help."

A native of Pilot Knob, Mo., Carr has a two-year total of nine points and five rebounds a game while shooting .535 from the field and .736 from the free throw line.

Carr said he plans to continue his basketball career after his SIUC playing days are over.

"I want to play basketball in the NBA," Carr said. "I think I have the talent and I want an opportunity to prove that I can play."

13 Lusk, guard

By Grant Deady
Sports Editor

Paul Lusk is not out to win a popularity contest among opposing teams fans — just the respect of their players and coaches.

Last season as a junior, Lusk quietly led the SIUC basketball team in scoring with a 15.2 point average and earned second team All-MVC honors.

But with Saluki standouts Marcus

Timmons and Chris Carr slam-dunking their way into the hearts of fans across the country, Lusk's steady performance often goes unnoticed.

"The people who know the game, know what I'm capable of so that (lack of respect) doesn't really bother me," Lusk said. "But personally, I just want to try and have another good season and improve in every part of my game."

Much of the Saluki success this year will depend upon the play of Lusk, a two-time all-state product of Wesclin High School in New Baden and 10th-highest scorer in Illinois prep history.

"There is going to be a lot of responsibility on me, but I'm looking forward to it," Lusk said.

"I'm looking to help the point guard any way I can and I'm going to be called on to play some point."

"I just think I can bring a lot of leadership and a lot of experience to whoever on our team."

Expectations are high for SIUC as the Valley's preseason No. 1 ranked team, but Lusk insists that his teammates and fans should not set their sites on another NCAA Tournament berth just yet.

"People don't realize how difficult that is (returning to NCAA Tournament) and we have a lot of new faces this year, Lusk said.

"I don't think we need to focus on the NCAA Tournament, we just have to worry about getting better."

"We can't be so focused on the NCAA Tournament, or we'll get our butts beat too early in the season."

21 Hawkins, point guard

By Doug Durso
Senior Reporter

After leading Pinckneyville to the Illinois Class A State Championship last year, Shane Hawkins, a 6-2 guard, is expected to be a key contributor for SIUC basketball as a freshman.

"I've fit in well here early and the coaches are not putting a lot of pressure on me," he said. "I'll be ready to play when they need me."

Success has always come to Hawkins, who was named to the all-state honorable mention team as a freshman, third-team all-state in his sophomore year and earned first-team as a junior and senior. He was also named the Class A Tournament Most Valuable Player.

Hawkins said he has noticed a substantial difference in the level of play from the high school to collegiate level.

"Players are a lot quicker, bigger and stronger than on the high school level," he said. "The intensity level when you're on the court is a lot higher."

"You can never rest when you're on the court in college, and you have to play hard on defense all of the time."

One of the reasons Hawkins came to SIUC was to be close to his friends and family in Pinckneyville.

In his 124 games in high school Hawkins averaged 19.6 and his 2,429 points put him 22nd on the all-time Illinois scoring list.

"We have a lot of talent that can really score like Timmons, Carr and Lusk, so I want to get the ball to them," Hawkins said.

Veterans, rookies make bench

Frontcourt Reserves

When a player comes to SIUC as one of the most prolific scorers in Illinois high school history, expectations are bound to be high.

Burzynski

Saluki junior forward Scott Burzynski, a native of nearby Valier, said the pressures of being a Southern Illinois product almost got the best of him when he arrived at SIUC and became a reserve player for the first time in his life.

"My freshman year was rough. I felt like I let people down," he said. "I got to the point where I was worried that people were thinking bad of me."

Burzynski put the critics aside as a sophomore, though, and emerged as one of SIUC's most consistent performers off the bench.

The 6-8 forward from Sesser-Valier High School reached double figures on two occasions last season, including a 13 point showing against MVC rival Southwest Missouri State.

This season, Burzynski's role will undoubtedly increase again - a chore he no longer shy's away from.

"I thought I was a little hard on myself at first," Burzynski said. "Being from Southern Illinois, I take a lot of pride in that. I'm just going to go out there and try to play hard."

Saluki veteran swingman Ian Stewart is ready to put his critics to rest.

Stewart

After three years of playing limited rolls for SIUC, the possibility for Stewart, a 6-8 senior, to make an impact in the MVC has finally come of age.

"It's been a personal vendetta somewhat to me to say I don't want to leave here and have people say 'man, he could have been better,'" Stewart said. "I want to leave here with people saying he did as good as he could have."

Stewart appeared in 30 games for SIUC last year after making just 16 showings as a sophomore.

A native of Laporte, Ind., Stewart scored a career high 12 points against Tampa last season and poured in nine second half points to key a win over Southwest Missouri State.

Regardless of who he is guarding, or whether he starts or comes off the bench, Stewart said he never changes his style.

"I just play. I just play as hard as I can play against everybody," he said. "Hustle, heart and desire can do a lot."

Reggie Nelson has emerged from one of the basketball world's biggest shadows to make a name for himself.

Nelson

Nelson, a 6-7 freshman forward from Memphis, Tenn., played his prep basketball at Treadwell High School, the alma mater of Orlando Magic All-Star Anfernee Hardaway and Phoenix Sun reserve Elliott Perry.

"I know there has been great talent out of my high school, but I'm going to make a name for myself," Nelson said. "Believe me - I have to do that."

An All-City, All-District selection in his senior season at Treadwell, Nelson averaged better than 24 points a game and shot over 60 percent from the floor.

Being in the spotlight at SIUC as one of the Salukis blue-chip recruits is a role Nelson said he understands and enjoys.

"It's a role you gotta play because there's a lot of people looking up to you," he said. "You can't do anything wrong or everybody will know about it. You just gotta do the right thing."

While the SIUC basketball team is going with an athletic, but small frontcourt, a red-shirt freshman will provide the Salukis with a big body in the paint.

Wells

Shane Wells, a 7-0, 260 pound freshman from Olney, said he can provide some size for the Salukis off the bench.

"I'll be a big body in the lane, that can rebound and I have a few strong offensive moves," he said. "I just want to help the team out anyway I can."

Wells said red-shirting a year was the best thing for him coming right from high school.

"Sitting out a year gave me a chance to get stronger, learn the basics and the detailed plays of the team," he said. "It also gave me a chance to adjust to college life socially and academically."

Wells is coming off a shoulder injury, which sidelined him for preseason drills, but said he will be able to contribute early in the season.

Wells said choosing SIUC as his school was not a hard choice to make.

"It came down to knowing everything was right here," he said. "I like coach Herrin the players and the good academic courses at SIUC was a big selling point."

After his high school career, in which he led Olney to its first winning season in nine years, Wells went with other prep players on an exhibition tour of the United States, Spain and France.

James Watts, a 6-8 freshman from the basketball-rich city of Memphis is going to do whatever it takes to help the Salukis succeed.

Watts

"I don't mind whatever role the team needs me to play. I'll do whatever it takes to help the team win," he said.

Averaging 12 points, eight rebounds and five blocked shots a game at Carver High School, Watts was named to the first team All-District and All-Regional in Memphis, Tenn.

Watts said scoring is not the only important part of his basketball skills.

"I can really help with rebounding, blocking shots, and provide some quickness up front," he said.

Even though he has only had a few practices, Watts said playing against college competition is a lot different from high school.

"One of the first things I noticed is that defense is played with a lot more intensity," he said. "You have to run the court on both offense and defense. The team is looking good and will get even better once we get into regular competition."

One of SIUC's big recruiting bases for college basketball in Southern Illinois is Sesser-Valier High School as the Salukis welcomed a third player to come from the school this season.

Veach

Jamie Veach, a 6-7 junior transfer from Rend Lake College, joins Scott Burzynski and Brian Laur as Sesser-Valier graduates playing for SIUC.

"To have a program that is not too big and have three of us playing at the major collegiate level is amazing," he said.

After high school, Veach went to Rend Lake College where he averaged 9.1 points and 3.7 rebounds a game his freshman year. He said going to a junior college before coming here gave him a great opportunity to learn the game.

"Junior college was like a stepping stone for me," Veach said. "I wasn't fully developed coming out of high school, junior college helped me build some skills needed for Division-I college basketball."

Veach said he can offer the Salukis some inside muscle.

"I'm not really big, and don't have great quickness, but I can give us some rebounding and play solid defense," he said.

A Rend Lake College transfer comes to SIUC to help the basketball team reach new heights and learn how to be a coach.

Laur

Brian Laur, a 6-0, junior guard from Sesser, said he would like to coach after SIUC.

"Eventually I plan to become a coach and this is a great place to learn the game," he said. "Coach Herrin is a great coach. I can learn a lot from him."

As a senior at Sesser-Valier Laur averaged 15.1 points helping the team go 27-3 and earning a Black Diamond Conference title, and he received All-Southern Illinois honors in basketball and football.

Laur understands what his role will be and is looking forward to playing at the top collegiate level.

"I know my I will fill a backup role, but I will be ready when I'm called to step in," he said. "My natural position is shooting guard, but I've been playing mostly at the point, but I'm confident enough to play either position."

Laur said one of the best characteristics of the team is the work ethic of the players.

"I'm real impressed with the veteran players," he said. "They work very hard every practice and set an example for the younger players."

Grant Deady and Doug Durso wrote these profiles.

Backcourt Reserves

After sitting out last season, 6-2 guard John Dadzie is primed for a shot at the Saluki starting lineup.

Dadzie

A transfer from Milligan (Tenn) College, Dadzie is a basketball journeyman who was born in Germany, raised in England and moved to Zimbabwe all before the age of 14.

Dadzie was sidelined during preseason practice with a dislocated thumb after being penciled in as a starter at the point, but upon his return should challenge freshman Shane Hawkins and juco transfer Jaratio Tucker for the starting position.

"I can't wait to step out there," Dadzie said.

"I've got the strength of God with me because that's all that I believe in and he's my strength."

But Dadzie, who played for the Zimbabwe national team before coming to the United States, said he'll show no mercy on opponents when he gets his shot.

"If anybody's not ready to play on a given night, it's going to show because I'm gonna be all over him," he said.

Northern Oklahoma Junior College transfer Jaratio Tucker is one of several fresh faces that may find their way into the starting lineup for the Dawgs this season.

Tucker

Tucker, a 6-4 junior from Pine Bluff, Ark., averaged 16.9 points per game last year at Northern Oklahoma JC and was named big-conference player of the year.

"The only difference between juco and Division I is juco is more up-tempo, run-and-gun, you don't really have that set offense type of game," Tucker said.

Offense will not be the main task for Tucker right off the bat at SIUC, but guarding the opposing team's point guard will.

Tucker has been praised by Herrin as being one of the team's quickest and most effective defenders.

"It's not going to be a problem for me," Tucker said. "I guarded guys in juco that I know for a fact were quick. I used to ask myself, 'why are they (opposing guards) at the juco level, they should be Division I?'"

"As far as having pressure on me, I think I can handle it."

Timmons under pressure as MVC pick

By Grant Deady
Sports Editor

When it comes to pressure Saluki senior forward Marcus Timmons is no stranger. Coming out of Scott County Central High School in Haywood City, Mo., Timmons was named Mr. Basketball for the state of Missouri after leading his team to a Class I-A state title and a 130-3 record during his four years as a prep star.

After three years of paying his dues for the Dawgs, the pressure is back on Timmons as the 6'8" swingman was named the Missouri Valley Conference preseason player of the year.

However, SIUC head coach Rich Herrin said he doesn't expect the preseason honors to distract Timmons.

"Marcus Timmons has been a star since his freshman year in high school," Herrin said. "If he gets six points, about five rebounds, five assists, a couple steals, couple blocked shots, somebody will say 'he didn't have a very good ballgame tonight coach, he only got six points.'"

"That's not right. Marcus Timmons is a complete player and a very, very consistent player, but I doubt he'll lead us in scoring."

"But he's a fine player and he deserves the honor and we'll just have to see what happens later on."

Timmons led the MVC in rebounding as a junior with 9.8 boards per game, while averaging 14.7 points an outing.

But have the fans of Saluki basketball seen the best of Marcus Timmons yet?

"I think my first two years I was shell-shocked, or just trying to learn the system," Timmons said. "Last year I just came out and I think this year, if I want to go to the next level (NBA), I just gotta come out and bust my butt every time."

This year's Saluki team will lack a veteran point guard for the first time since Timmons arrived in 1991, which may mean the two-time All-MVC Tournament selection will have to take on even more responsibility.

"I want to be the coach on the floor," Timmons said. "I want to get everybody organized."

Herrin shoots for 800th win

By Grant Deady
Sports Editor

When Okawville High School hired Rich Herrin as its head basketball coach in 1956, the Rockets helped launch the career of an eventual legend in the game.

Heading into his 39th year as a head coach, Herrin is just 20 wins shy of 800 career victories, posting an overall record of 780-323.

Herrin spent four years at Okawville and 25 seasons at Benton High School before taking over the reigns at SIUC in the spring of 1985.

After nine seasons of overseeing a Saluki basketball program that has won 20 or more games the past three years, Herrin said he has no plans of slowing down anytime soon.

"I don't know how I can do anything else. I'm 61 years old and I love to coach," he said.

"I've got more energy than most guys my age. You're only as old as you feel and how you act."

"I've had opportunities to go, but I've never applied for another job. I've got three or four years left on my contract and I'll probably finish at Southern Illinois University."

However, times have not always been good for Herrin at SIUC.

In his first three years here, Herrin compiled a 32-53 record, including an 8-20 opening season.

He guided Benton to 23 winning campaigns in 25 years as coach of the Rangers, which made the early years at SIUC difficult for him to handle.

Herrin recalled a game against Chicago State in 1985, when he considered giving up.

"We were down by 18 in the first half and I knew we would get beat by 35 or 40 the next two games at Arkansas and Nebraska. I said to myself, 'I don't believe I'm gonna put up with this nonsense,'" he said.

"I said, 'When I get up tomorrow, I'm gonna get out of this situation. I don't have to put up with this in my life, it's not worth it.'"

The Salukis mounted a second half comeback, though, and ended up winning the game at the buzzer 58-56, and restored Herrin's desire to remain with the team.

"I could live with losing by eight or 10, but not by 35 or 40," Herrin said.

"Then (after Chicago State game) things began to work and we started to upset some people."

These days, SIUC appears along side college teams such as Duke, Michigan and North Carolina as one of just 20 schools in the nation that have qualified for post season play in six consecutive seasons.

As the Salukis prepare for another run at the Missouri Valley Conference title and a shot at advancing in the NCAA Tournament, Herrin said his ability to adapt the SIUC system to meet the team's talent has been the key to success.

"Some guys are just gym rats and they want to practice and do anything you ask and, then you got guys that don't always want to do that — but that doesn't mean they're not good players," he said.

"You gotta take whatever personality you get, and I like players that can deliver in the ballgame."

tradition continues

Sumrall brings experience, talent to team

By Sean Walker
Staff Reporter

After starting as a freshman at Southwest Missouri State, transferring after one season to play for John A. Logan, and coming to SIUC last year, Angenette Sumrall brings volumes of talent and experience to the Saluki women's basketball team.

Sumrall, who was a pre-season all-MVC selection this year, said being picked is great, but now she really has to work hard to live up to the expectation.

"It feels great to be picked, but now I have to stand up to it," she said. "I have to practice hard to keep my momentum up throughout the rest of the season."

"I'm going to have to really work hard to live up to the pick."

Sumrall is in her final season of basketball on the collegiate level, and said she can't afford to let down this year.

"I have been practicing a lot harder this year, and I am more intense than I have ever been," she said.

"This is my senior year, and I am not going to let up at all."

Sumrall said being a senior is not the only reason she can't let up.

"We have a really good team, and everybody has been working hard," she said.

"The talent on the team is so overwhelming that if you slack off at all, your position may not be open."

"It is always a challenge to make sure your spot is safe on the team."

As a first team All-Missouri Valley Conference honoree last year, Sumrall had a team-high 10 double-doubles, which included one in each of her last four games of the season.

Before coming to SIUC, she was selected as an Honorable Mention All American at John A. Logan, and started every game of the year as a freshman at SMSU. As a freshman for the Lady Bears, Sumrall averaged 5 points per game and 4.5 rebounds to help SMSU to the Final Four in the NCAA tournament.

With all of her prior experiences, Sumrall seems like the prime candidate as the court leader, but she can't do it alone.

"I don't think there can be just one leader," she said. "I think the role is dispersed throughout the team."

"Anyone could be a leader depending on the situation on the court. I couldn't pinpoint just one person."

Scott encourages fan turnout

Women's head coach sets goal of drawing 2,500 people a game

By Chris Clark
Staff Reporter

SIUC women's basketball head coach Cindy Scott has won just about every award a coach can receive and achieved almost every goal she has set for herself and the program.

In her 17 seasons at SIUC, Scott has won the Converse District Coach of the Year twice (1987, 1990) and the Gateway Conference Coach of the Year honors twice (1986, 1987). She is the president of the Women's Basketball Coaches Association, a member of the USA Basketball staff selection committee and coached the South team to a gold medal at the 1985 Olympic Festival.

With all those accomplishments, there is still one goal that has eluded her for many years.

"I think what's been the greatest source of disappointment in my career is the inability to draw what I consider a good number of fans. I would love to average 2,500 people a game," she said. "That's been my goal for the last five years. We just haven't gotten it done. I think we've done everything we can do, and we just have to keep working at it and working at it."

Part of the solution, Scott said, is trying to sell the program to anyone who will listen.

"I'm speaking everywhere I can, and I'm going everywhere just trying to get people more educated about it (women's basketball program). People just don't know how good we are until they come out and see us," Scott said.

"When they come out and see us, they'll think, 'Oh man, this is good. They can play.'"

Of all the successes that she has had over the past 17 years, Scott said the most meaningful rewards from her job do not come on the court.

"Personally, my induction to the (Saluki) Hall of Fame was the most significant thing that's happened to me," she said. "But in terms of looking at what I've accomplished professionally, it's some of the kids that we've brought into the program who have graduated and gone on to do some really good things with their lives."

"I think I coach because I'd like to think I make a difference in kids lives. I feel good when they write me a note five years after they graduate saying, 'Gee, thanks. What you said and what you did made a difference.'"

Scott has made a difference in the success of the SIUC women's basketball program as well. She has a career record of 327-164, including eight 20-win seasons and hasn't had a losing season since 1981.

If she had gone down her chosen career path, however, Scott might just be overseeing the activity of a different court.

"I went to school at Memphis State with the intent of going to law school," she said. "If I weren't a coach, I'd hope I was a judge by now."

Scott also played basketball at Memphis State and holds the school record for career assists.

Sports, Scott said, were a major reason for her not going to law school.

"I love basketball," she said. "When I graduated, I wasn't ready to quit (basketball). I just couldn't give it up."

Scott's love of basketball, however, almost ended with a one-point loss to Southwest Missouri State in the 1993 Missouri Valley Conference Championship game.

"It was incredibly hard loss for us. I had four seniors on that team that I loved dearly. I felt that team was my best ever, and that was a heartbreak loss," she said.

With that loss now behind her, Scott said she looks forward to this season.

"I find my enthusiasm for coaching renewed this year, more so than last year," she said. "I love this team this year, and I'm really having fun coaching again this season."

1986 was another banner year for Scott and the Salukis, as they set a school record winning 23 consecutive games.

"Then in 1986 and 1987, we went two years undefeated in the conference," she said. "No team since then has ever gone undefeated in our conference, not even the year that Southwest (Missouri State) went to the Final Four. I think it's a credit to the kids in our program at that time. Those kids were just focused and determined and confident."

Other than her goal of averaging 2,500 fans per game, Scott said there are two remaining goals for her to accomplish.

"I would like to establish us (SIUC) as a top 25-team year in and year out, so when you see a national poll, you'll see Southern Illinois in it," she said. "I'd also like to get to a Final Four. I've never taken a team that far."

"But averaging 2,500 people is like my biggest thing, though. If I could ever average 2,500 people, I think I would be satisfied and be ready to retire from coaching."

Women bring home experience

11 Gilmore, point guard

By Sean Walker
Staff Reporter

Nikki Gilmore, a preseason All-MVC pick from St. Louis, Mo., is the Salukis starting point guard this season, but she said preseason fame doesn't matter to her.

"It is an honor to be picked, I guess," she said. "I really don't care about the individual honors."

"All I want to do is help the team get to the final tournament."

Gilmore said she can play well this season and win another All-MVC award, but it wouldn't matter unless the team won the championship.

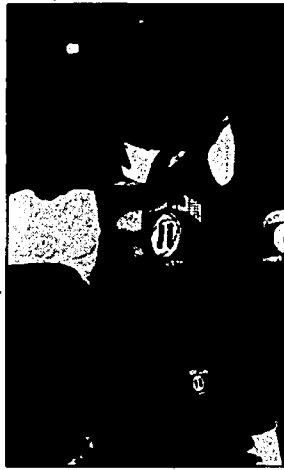

As SIUC's starting point guard, Gilmore is expected to be a leader, and she said she is ready for the challenge.

"I think the point guard has to step-up and be a leader on the court," she said. "It is my job, but I'm not the only one who will lead on the court."

"Everyone gets down from time to time, and another player will pick her up, and keep the team going."

Gilmore was named First Team All-Missouri Valley Conference as a sophomore, and started 26 of 27 games last year. She had 400 points last season to average 14.8 per game, and played 928 minutes to lead the team.

Gilmore said the team is looking good in the preseason, and the Saluki's talent goes deep.

"Our freshmen are looking great, and everyone on the team is playing well," Gilmore said. "We are very deep off the bench, and everyone will contribute this year."

"We have a legitimate chance to make a run for the title this year."

32 Geistler, center

By Sean Walker
Staff Reporter

Kelly Geistler, SIUC's starting center, is one of three Salukis who started every game last season. Geistler only averaged 17.4 minutes per contest, 5.1 points and 3.8 rebounds per game last year, but said she plans to improve on those figures a lot this season.

"I would like to score in double figures if not every game, at least a few," she said. "My biggest goal is to just do better than last year, and get more minutes in each game, which will give me time to get more points and rebounds."

Geistler said she took last summer off, so she wouldn't get burned out on basketball, but she did continue to lift weights to get ready for the season.

"I took a break this summer, because I needed to," she said. "I had been going year-round since I was in eighth grade, so I worked and stayed with my parents this summer. I didn't play until August, and now I'm fired up to play."

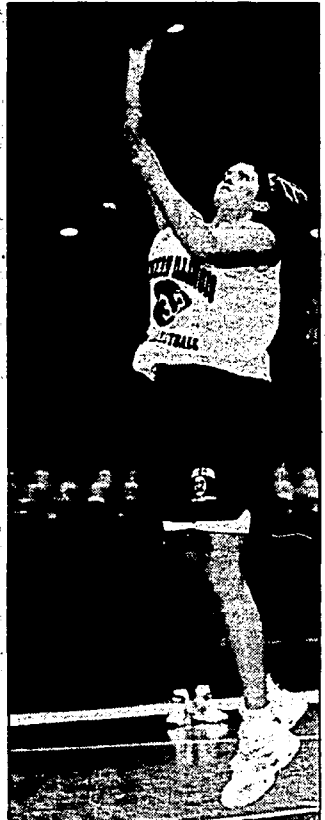

Geistler, a native of Maple Grove, Minn., led her Osseo High School team to a third place finish in this state tournament in 1991.

The 6-3 senior was prep all-state and named Minnesota's No. 1 post player by "Fullcourt Press."

Geistler said this season's team is more fun than the Saluki team she was on in the past and the work ethic has made an overall improvement.

"I am very excited about this team," she said. "We are all working hard, not because we are told to, but because we want to."

"It has been more of a team effort this year."

50 Jefferson, forward

By Sean Walker
Staff Reporter

Christel Jefferson, a part-time starting junior from Kennett, Mo., started the last 11 games of the season for the Salukis after Rocky Ransom went down with a season-ending right knee injury.

During the last 11 games as a small forward stater, Jefferson averaged 8.2 points and 6.3 rebounds per game. Jefferson was No. 2 for SIUC in blocks and No. 3 in rebounds and steals.

With head coach Cindy Scott's new strategy of full-court ball pressure, Scott said Jefferson will contribute greatly to the new style.

"Christel's strength lies in her aggressiveness on defense," Scott said. "She plays with reckless abandon on defense and will be an asset to the full-court press."

Scott said Jefferson's strength lies in her defensive skills, but would like to see better offensive outings out of her this season.

"She'll stick you on the defensive end," Scott said, "but we need her to be more offensive-minded."

Among Jefferson's accomplishments, she played for the North Team in the '94 Olympic Sports Festival in St. Louis over the summer.

"I'm excited about playing with Chris and Marcus," he said. "We are all athletic and play good defense. We will also have a good back court with Paul(Lusk), John (Dadzie), Shane (Hawkins) and Jaratio (Tucker)."

Saluki head coach, Rich Herrin said Hawkins is a good addition to the team.

"Shane is extremely smart and intelligent, with great court awareness," he said. "He will be called on to distribute the ball, but he can also shoot. He'll be a good one."

34 Ransom, forward

By Sean Walker
Staff Reporter

Racquel Ransom, SIUC's senior forward, started 15 games last year before suffering a right knee injury at Southwest Missouri State University Jan. 27 last season, which knocked her out for the remainder of the season. Before the injury, Ransom led the league in rebounds and points.

The injury continues to haunt Ransom as this season nears though, but Rocky said she is working hard to make it back as soon as possible.

"I thought I was ready to play, but I refractured the knee in practice, and I'm out for about three more weeks," she said. "I am doing rehab daily and trying to get to 80 percent. When I get to 80 percent, I can begin jogging and shooting on my own until I am strong enough to practice with the team."

Head athletic trainer Sally Perkins said Ransom saw the team doctor last week, and Ransom began riding the bicycle to prepare her for jogging and individual shooting this week. Perkins said Ransom could be practicing with the team in as soon as three weeks, barring no further complications.

Ransom said she is staying occupied with her classes and rehabilitation, but hopes she can play and help the team during the season.

Ransom, whose nickname is Rocky, was No. 1 in the MVC in scoring six straight weeks last season. She was also in the league's top-six in rebounds and in the top nine in field goal percentage seven straight weeks. And before getting hurt, she made 24 of her last 29 free throws to crack the Valley's top-10 list.

A product of East St. Louis Lincoln High School, Ransom was a two-time all-state selection and honorable mention prep All-American.

with his NCAA Tournament experience if the Salukis get there, but its important to stay focused early in the season.

"Everything starts with that first game," he said. "We have to come out with enthusiasm and a never say die attitude instead of being lackadaisical. If we concentrate from day one and take care of business, we'll have a great year."

Timberlake joins a veteran front-line including junior Chris Carr and preseason MVC player of the year Marcus Timmons.

Backup players make most of court time

Frontcourt Reserves

LaQuanda Chavours, a 5'10" junior letter-winner from Racine, Wis., is one of SIUC's small forwards, who averaged 1.9 points and 1.6 rebounds in only 14.7 minutes per game last season.

Chavours

SIUC head coach Cindy Scott said Chavours has a lot of talent and drive that can be seen in the way Chavours practices.

"LaQuanda provides us with great depth at small forward," Scott said. "She impresses you with the effort she always gives in practice."

Scott said Chavours is a great defensive player, but looks to use her shooting abilities more this season.

"Chavours has been shooting well for the perimeter lately," Scott said. "We are looking to get more points from her this year. We will need her points during the season."

The new full-court press scheme Scott is putting into place works to Chavours' advantage.

"Defense is LaQuanda's strong suit," Scott said. "She should be a major part of our defensive system, because pressing is her forte."

As a freshman, Heather Slater averaged only 2.2 minutes a game while playing in 15 games. As a sophomore, her numbers improved in every category, as she averaged 12 minutes per game playing in 27 games as a back-up forward.

Slater

Now a junior, Slater feels that upward trend will continue.

"I think my numbers will increase because I've been working hard over the summer," she said.

SIUC women's basketball head coach Cindy Scott has also seen Slater's progress, and has said she will be the Salukis' most improved player. Even with that praise from her coach, Slater said she does not feel much added pressure to perform.

"There is a little bit of pressure, because people want to see more from me," she said.

With two years under her belt, Slater said she has one simple goal.

"I want to win. I've never been on a team that's won anything," she said. "I want to win the conference championship and go to the (NCAA) tournament."

Sophomore center Tiffany Spencer played in 25 games for the Salukis as a back-up center last season, but averaged less than seven minutes per halfgame.

Spencer said she thinks those numbers will change this season.

"I've practiced harder and played better," she said. "I think I'll see more playing time this season."

In high school, Spencer was a three-year letter-winner at Eureka High (Mo.), and holds school records in blocks and rebounds.

Spencer said there is one part of her game she has had to work harder on than any other.

"Playing defense," she said. "I had to learn that there's more to defense than just standing there."

Branda Anderson traveled a long way to become a Saluki.

Anderson, who is from Eagle River, Alaska, said she came to SIUC after making a visit to the campus.

"I liked the atmosphere of the campus and I got along really well with the team," she said.

At Chugiak High School, Anderson was a two-sport athlete as a member of the track team, where she finished fifth in State competition, throwing the shot put 35'-5", a school record.

On the basketball court, Anderson was a three-year starter and team captain in 1994. In the 1993 State tournament, she averaged 21.6 points per game while leading her team to a fifth place finish. She was also named to see FRONTCOURT, page 8

Backcourt Reserves

In her third year as a Saluki, Tracy Holscher is ready to play.

After back surgery prior to last season, and a rash of nagging injuries during her freshman campaign, Holscher is ready to hit the court.

"I want to get out there and run," she said. "I want to get in there and help the team. I hope to bring in some outside shooting and help on the perimeter."

Holscher helped the team at the end of last season when instead of red-shirting after her back surgery, she played eight games as a backup guard.

In those eight games, Holscher averaged 6.1 minutes per game with a season high of 18 minutes against Drake.

"We needed a backup point guard after Kasia (McClendon) went down, so I agreed to play," she said.

With two years experience and her injuries behind her, Holscher is looking forward to the start of the season.

"I want to be cut loose," she said.

Kasia McClendon, a sophomore guard from Gary, Ind., had a tough season last year battling illness and injury, but said this year things will be different.

Last season, McClendon played in 11-of-27 games, and averaged 4.4 points per outing. She was an all-conference player and the team MVP at West Side High School leading them to three undefeated regular season teams.

Hustle and hard work are two things McClendon said she uses to keep SIUC together during practices.

"I do everything hard, so people will see me hustling and join in," she said. "I want to keep the team up, so I really try hard in practice."

McClendon said the Salukis have a great opportunity to take the Missouri Valley Conference.

"We have a good chance to win the conference championship," she said.

Newcomer Beth Hasheider knows what it's like to be a winner.

Last season she was a member of the Illinois Class A State champion Okawville Lady Rockets. She was named to the first team IBCA All-State team, team MVP, Southern Illinois Player of the Year and First Team All-Tourney at the state championships in 1994 as well.

Hasheider played the last nine games of her career on a torn anterior cruciate ligament (ACL) and will enter this season trying to come back from the surgery to repair it.

"(ACL) didn't swell up on me like it does on most people, so it didn't bother me a whole lot," she said.

During her career as a Lady Rocket, Hasheider averaged 12 points, 2.3 rebounds, 7.4 assists and 3.6 steals a game and is looking to repeat that performance as a Saluki.

"I'm still trying to come back from the knee surgery, but I'm hoping that I can bring some depth to the point guard position off the bench," she said.

Freshman guard Carrie Hassell spent most of her high school career putting the ball through the net, and hopes to continue that trend at SIUC.

At Maplewood High School (Tenn.), she scored more points than any other boys or girls basketball player in school history. She scored 2,599 points in 115 games as a four-year starter.

Hassell said she can be a major contributor to the success of this year's Saluki squad.

"I can help the team by developing the outside game. We really have some good post players," she said.

Dawgs primed for Valley title run

By Doug Durso
Senior Reporter

A season of expectations is about to begin for the SIUC men's basketball team as the Salukis have been selected as the favorite to win the competitive Missouri Valley Conference.

The Salukis return three starters from last year including the preseason MVC player-of-the-year Marcus Timmons.

SIUC will have to get through one of the most competitive MVC races in recent years. Saluki head coach Rich Herrin said being No. 1 does not mean much.

"I showed Molinari (head coach of Bradley) the magazine done by Vitale and I told him that's all that counts," he said. "Dick (Vitale) knows everything and he picked them (Bradley) so there you go."

"All this does is give us something to talk about and write about, but the picks don't make any difference."

Herrin said the winner of this conference will lose some games.

"They (conference winner) can lose anywhere from four to five games, they really can," he said. "It's going to be that balanced."

SIUC also plays a very tough non-conference schedule starting with the opener against Seton Hall in Hawaii.

"We're looking forward to playing Seton Hall and it would be a great victory for us to upset a Big East team," Herrin said.

"I think what's important for our league schools is how we do against non-league schools. I think that is our key to success."

Bradley returns four starters from a team that went 23-8 and advanced to the quarterfinals of the National Invitational Tournament.

Braves head coach, Jim Molinari will count on 6-6 forward Deon Jackson, who average 14.3 points and 5.1 rebounds per game and was selected to the Preseason All-Conference First Team.

Molinari said he thinks this year's conference is one of the toughest he has see.

"There are so many good teams in this league that it is really tough to predict which team is going to win this conference," he said. Bradley's only senior 6-8, David Winslow said the Braves are ready to step up.

"We have a lot of good players on this team and we all worked hard in the off-season, so we can win the conference and go to the NCAA's."

One team that knows what its like to compete in the N. C. A. A. Tournament and have success is Tulsa, which went to the Sweet 16 before losing to eventual champion, Arkansas.

The Golden Hurricane did lose the last year's Missouri Valley Conference Player-of-the-Year Gary Collier and defensive specialist Lou Dawkins, but Tulsa returns MVC 1993 newcomer-of-the-year Shea Seals, and point guard Alvin Williamson, who averaged 15.3 points in the NCAA Tournament.

Seals said the while the team will miss players like Collier, this will still be a good team.

"Collier was a great player for us, but we still have a lot of talent to take us along way," he said.

Tulsa head coach Orlando "Tubby" Smith said that the team wants to build on last years success.

"The kids are very excited about last year's performance, and are working even harder because they want to get back there," he said.

"We have a chance to be a top-25 team for years to come."

The newest member to the MVC is Evansville, which is coming off a 21-11 campaign and a NIT appearance.

Aces head coach, Jim Crews said he is excited to be in the conference but his team is already familiar with a lot of the Valley teams.

"We already play Illinois State, Indiana State and Southern Illinois so it already feels like we were in the conference before," he said.

Evansville will count on its two premiere senior forwards Reed Jackson and Andy Elkins. Elkins is a preseason first-team selection, who averaged 21.5 points and 8.3 rebounds per game.

Jackson, who averaged 13.5 points a game, is a native of the Southern Illinois area. He said joining the MVC and being able to play at SIUC will be special.

"I really enjoy coming to SIUC to play in front of some of my family, and next to Evansville its my favorite place to play," Jackson said.

Once again Southwest Missouri State is led by Johnny Murdock, who has been a first-team all-MVC selection the last two years. Averaging 18.7 points a game Murdock said the key to the Bears season is defense.

"Everything we do on the court is started by our defense," he said. "We are going to have a strong team and an aggressive defense."

The Bears have eight of their nine letter men back, so head coach Mark Bersen like his team's chances this year.

"We have a lot of players who got a lot of experience over the last couple of seasons, and we are looking to play strong defense and get after people."

The theme to Illinois State's season this year will be youth, as the Redbirds welcome eight first year players. The team lost its top four scorers of a squad that went 16-11 overall.

ISU head coach Kevin Stallings knows that in a conference with this much talent inexperience hurts, but he is counting on the talent of the players.

"We're real excited about the talent our players and I feel that with the athletic ability the news kids have we will be a factor," he said.

For Wichita State, seven of their eight lettermen are coming back, unfortunately they come back from a team that was 9-18. Head coach Scott Thompson said the program is going in the right direction.

"We are going to be a good team and our program is heading the right way," he said.

Both Northern Iowa and Drake are looking to replace key players, but both teams feel they can compete with everybody in the conference.

"Don't call this a rebuilding year for Northern Iowa," Panther head coach Eldon Miller said. "We have the talent to play with anyone."

Drake's head coach Rudy Washington said, "I really like the team we have here and I think we'll surprise some people."

The two new coaches in the MVC belong to Creighton and Indiana State, as Dana Altman, who was the Big eight coach of the year at Kansas State in 1993, takes over the reigns of the Bluejays and Sherman Dillard takes over the helm at Indiana State.

"This is a great challenge for me and we have a lot of work to do, but this is going to be an exciting time for us," Altman said.

Preseason poll ranks Salukis fourth; Creighton looking to win crown in MVC

By Sean Walker
Staff Reporter

The SIUC women's basketball program is set to begin its 1994-95 season, and the preseason Missouri Valley Conference poll has the Salukis finishing fourth in the league.

With two first-team all-MVC picks starting for the Salukis, head coach Cindy Scott said the top four spots in the poll were very close.

"The number of votes between second, third and fourth place in the poll showed that it was a toss up to pick the top four slots with six points separating second and fourth place," Scott said. "In my opinion, the poll is an insignificant thing."

"Anything can happen during the season."

SIUC senior forward Angenette Sumrall and junior guard Nikki Gilmore were selected by the MVC coaches, sports information directors and media as first-team all-MVC players.

Sumrall played on the Southwest Missouri State Final Four team in 1991 before ending up at SIUC after one season with John A. Logan. As a Saluki, Sumrall averaged 13.4 points per game and was No. 2 in the Valley in rebounds last season.

Gilmore averaged 14.8 points per game, 5.6 assists and 1.6 steals as a first-year starter last season.

Scott said senior forward Racquel Ransom is still sidelined with a knee injury, but the rest of the team is ready to begin.

"Rockey is still out, but the rest of the team is healthy," she said. "We have a very quick team, and we've added a few new things this season to take advantage of that."

"We are very excited and ready to get the season going."

The preseason poll puts a lot of pressure on teams to succeed, but it also marks teams for failure." Scott said one team that is not to be counted out is Wichita State, who was ranked fifth in the poll.

"Wichita State has the talent to be a strong contender this year," she said. "They got upset in the quarter finals by Indiana State last year, and they will be good again this year."

Drake's head coach Lisa Bluder agrees with Bluder said it will be Kinne's job to step-up and take control of the team.

"I am looking to Kristi and Julie Rittgers, our senior guard, to lead this team," she said.

Even though Drake has a valid chance to make the final tournament, Bluder said Creighton could run away with the championship.

"Everybody is looking to Creighton, and I think that is a good choice for first place," she said. "They have the best defensive player in the league in Becky Flynn and Jenny Olson, who is six-foot four-inches tall and had one of the top field goal percentages in the nation last year."

"All of their positions are covered."

Bluder went on to say that the Lady Jays know how to win after getting to the second round of the NCAA tournament last year, and they do not look to step down at all.

Creighton was the unanimous pick for first place in the preseason poll this year collecting 26 of the 37 first place votes. The Lady Jay's head coach Connie Yori said she thought they would be number one, but not by a landslide.

"It surprised me that we received so many votes for number one," she said. "It doesn't shock me that we were chosen as the No. 1 team, but I thought the votes would be more spread out."

Flynn, the 1994 MVC Defensive Player of the Year, returns for the Lady Jays, and Yori said she expects a lot out of her because she brings a ton of talent to the team.

Southwest Missouri State, who was picked to finish second in the poll, added Junior LaTanya Davis to the all-MVC first-team. The Lady Bears were bitten by the graduation bug last year, and lost two starting guards, but, according to Yori, will be in the hunt for the title.

Wichita State, who some coaches say is underrated this season has senior forward Ann Hollingsworth, who was also selected to the all-MVC team.

Bradley, Illinois State, Indiana State, Northern Iowa and Evansville round out the bottom five selections in the preseason poll.

Scott, and said the Golden Hurricane will be in the hunt for the title at the end of the season.

"The Cinderella team in the conference could be Wichita State," she said. "They have four of five starters returning, and they finished fourth in the conference last year, so I don't see them letting down."

"They are a force to be reckoned with this year."

Drake was ranked third in the preseason poll, and Bluder said it was a place that she did not expect to be in.

"We were picked higher than I expected in the preseason," she said. "We are returning five starters, but so are a lot of other teams."

Bulldog senior forward Kristi Kinne was a first-team all-MVC selection this year, and the All-Tournament team, as well as receiving an All-State Honorable Mention.

Anderson said her biggest adjustment to college basketball was defense.

"Defense in college is more physically and mentally demanding," she said. "Playing defense is more physical than it was in high school."

Freshman forward/center Theia Hudson has set a big goal for herself to achieve in her first year as a Saluki.

Hudson said she wants to become the best freshman SIUC has ever had.

If she puts up the types of numbers she did at Bloom Township High School, she might just reach that goal.

Hudson was a 1000 point scorer and as a senior, she was an Illinois Basketball Coaches Association Honorable Mention All-State selection. She also averaged 19.1 points and 10.8 rebounds per game while shooting .657 from the field.

Coach Scott recognizes Hudson's talent, and expects good things from her in the future.

"Theia has a lot to learn about the college game and will need some time to adjust, but she has a world of potential," Scott said.

"She is cut from the same mold as Tiffany Spencer. She knows how to use her body and muscle to the basket."
