Trustees offer no solution to strike

By Melissa Malovich

Striking workers who quoted the Board of Trustees would offer a solution Tuesday in their six-day old walkout can stop because of the Board of Trustees. The board adjourned its regular meeting just a brief comment by a board officer about the strike.

Board Chairman Harris Rowe told an audience of faculty and students that the board was формing to discuss the outstanding difference between the university and the police. "The board was grateful to the University community who have been so understanding," he said.

Rowe also said the board was grateful to other members of the University community who have been so understanding during the previous attempt to discuss the same strike.

Rowe also said that students who have been so understanding during the previous meeting that the board would continue to work with the police and the university on the strike issue.

Rowe said he would like to meet with the police again to see if there is any way to resolve the issue.

"It's gratifying that the strike has been conducted in such a reasonable manner," Rowe said.

Students take strike sides as effects begin to show

Food service, garbage removal, cleanliness of buildings and hallways, police protection — services normally taken for granted — are among the first to be impacted by the strike. Teachers, custodians, janitors and University police officers were unhappy.

Teachers have been asking for wages equal to those at SIU-Edwardsville.

Schwenker said he opposed the strike. "I don't think they have a right to strike. I think they're asking for more than they should be asking for. I think they should be asking for the same as the faculty," he said.

Student police still have jobs despite rumors of dismissal

Mention of the Saluki Patrol, SIU's student police force which is honoring striking police picket lines, has not been a popular topic in the town of Carbondale. Both faculty and students have felt that to bring this situation into the open is not good for the causes they are trying to support.

The student police force is currently patrolling the streets in three-wheel vehicles which were donated by the campus parking department. This patrol is being conducted in an effort to maintain the peace and order that is necessary for the continued functioning of the university.

Dunning hints Brandt should resign if he can't handle strikes

By George Sloan

The student vice president Tuesday urged the SIU President Brandt to consider "reinquiring his responsibilities" because, as the vice president said, Brandt has shown lack of concern in the strike of campus custodial workers.

Sam Dunning, the vice president, said in a meeting that the administration had failed to meet its responsibilities as a public administrator. Those responsibilities, he said, were to solve problems and resolve conflicts.

"If the chief administrator of the University is not willing to become personally involved in a dispute that threatens the operation of SIU, then he should seriously consider relinquishing his responsibilities to someone who would assume them," Dunning said.

Dunning said Brandt's action during the strike is "a prime example of irresponsible administration, and shows that SIU students are being neglected and that SIU is the student's university," Dunning said.

"I believe that Brands is proving himself to be a failure as the president of the student," Dunning said.

Dunning also criticized the strikers. "I feel the strikers are not administering, are forgetting their main reason of employment," he said.

"To me, their main reason of employment" is serving the students.

Seiling hints police strike appraisal. Dunning said, "The threat impose on the students is extremely serious and all students should be made to induce the policeman to back work.

Dunning said he was opposed to getting an injunction against the picketers, because he feels that a court would decide the matter; any federal court, however, officials get together and begin to work it out, I believe a court is the political process and that the final result that when what we need is a compromise, not a stalemate," Dunning said.

Hospital asks to refinance debts by selling revenue bonds

The Memorial Hospital governing board has called the Illinois State Bond Council to issue revenue bonds totaling $1.5 million to refinance the Carbondale and Herrin hospitals.

Maroney, administrator of the Memorial Hospital of Carbondale, said Tuesday that the request was based on the city's home rule powers.

The Southern Illinois Hospital Service, which operates both the Carbondale and Herrin hospitals, would be eligible for the municipal bond, he said.

"Under this concept," Maroney explained, "the city would issue a revenue bond for non-profit corporations, which is normally done in the bond market.

Maroney said that refinancing the bonds would mean that the hospital would save $1.5 million by 1978 because of the tax-exempt interest.

"This," said Maroney, "is a significant amount of money that would be passed on to patients in hospital charges.

Maroney said that although the savings won't result in lower rates for patients, "the hospital will" say that they would be held on charges of "endangering airline transportation."

Oct. 12: Should we call it '1492' Day?

By Michael Grassman

Much has been discovered about Christopher Columbus since the explorer sailed his famous discovery 485 years ago.

Like another October holiday, Columbus Day is in a sense an embarrassment. The Catholic Church is wearing a mask created by well-meaning school teachers attempting to mold a hero out of myth.

Our grade school teachers taught us that Columbus was a noble man who discovered America in 1492. Most of us didn't really care; it was all history and we were asleep from school each Oct. 12 that concerned us.

Had we taken the time to investigate Mr. C's life beyond the stories he told in school, we would have found that the good guy our instructors put on a pedestal was not the first to discover the Northern American continent. We would have saved our valuable time.

It is almost universally accepted that either the Vikings or an even earlier Asiatic Indian tribe discovered this continent and not Columbus. What is not universally accepted, perhaps because it is not universally known, is that of all the navies the rich history books depict him as being.

In addition, an illegitimate son by a peasant orphan girl who Columbus had made his mistress, upon his return to the New World the glorified explorer arrested all Indians over the age of 14 to mine for jewels, gold and other precious metals. Many Indians died because of the long hours they were forced to work. Not only Indians were victimized by Columbus.

Coloestas living in Santo Domingo under Chris' dictatorial rule sent a letter to Queen Isabella in Spain, charging Columbus with unjust, cruel and a shedder of Spanish blood.'" Span, the mother country from which the first explorations advanced, turned its back on him after he bickered with the Spanish Crown over titles and profits.

One of the most exciting and probably true stories of South American history describes Columbus as a "crystal with no intellect."

If these qualifications do not eliminate a man from having a holiday named for him, then we might as well have a Hitler Day: after all, if it wasn't for Hitler the world would have experienced the population explosion much sooner. If we can come up with a basis for honor for our grade school teachers and textbooks lead us to believe that guilt does erase great crimes?"

If we aren't just right we should celebrate the day our continent was discovered—not the man who history books say discovered this land mass. Halloween offers both tricks-n-treats, but Columbus Day offers only a trick.

C’dale’s liquor license policy unfair

The Carbondale Liquor Control Commission’s recent denial of a Class II liquor license for Dairy King is in my opinion inconsistent and unfair liquor license application.

The commission, composed of the members of the City Council, did not agree that the Dairy King liquor license application because it was concerned about alcohol liquor license grants for businesses in the South Illinois Avenue area where Dairy King is located.

Hans Fischer, city councilman, said he would not support Dairy King's application because he felt it was "not appropriate to issue additional licenses in that area."

Apparently Fischer and his fellow councilmen thought it was inappropriate to approve the liquor licenses of 17 other businesses in the same area the year. But, granted liquor licenses in June were: Silverball, the Goldmine, Truck-It-On (new location), Dairy King, Fat Cats, Wally’s Pizza, Body’s, Emperor’s Palace, Merlin’s, Jim’s Pizza, El Greco, Quatro’s Pizza, Buffalo Bob’s, Das Fasas, Pizza King and Gas ‘n Go. The Club was later given a license.

Most of the licenses granted this summer were renewals or upgrades of existing licenses. But since the city has to reapprove liquor licenses every year, city should have started its campaign against additional licenses in this area when it was more effective.

Keeping one small business like Dairy King from having a liquor license is not going to improve the South Illinois Avenue area at all. The criteria outlined by the commission for liquor license application do not apply to all "the strip's" honky-tonks and beer parlors.

It is ridiculous that the City Council can deny Dairy King a permit to sell beer which is what the Class B license authorizes after it has granted liquor licenses in virtually all the other youth-oriented diners and taverns in the same business area. If the council wanted to start showing its "concern" about the downtown area, it should have started a long time ago by prohibiting a few of the 17 other South Illinois Avenue area businesses from selling liquor.

In addition, young children and teenagers patronize Dairy King it should not be allowed to sell beer and wine. However, this argument is not valid when one considers the fact that children and teenagers are allowed to eat in the "strip's" other restaurants like Palais’ Pizza, Body’s, Quatro’s and other establishments that sell liquor.

The City Council ignored Dairy King’s economic problem of not being able to compete with other downtown restaurants and bars because it's not allowed to sell beer and wine. In short, the City Council has refused to consider both sides of the issue.

In a related matter last April, the City Council denied a request for a Class A liquor license to the other "strip’s" other businesses which permits the sale of all alcoholic beverages to a proposed new business, called Bogart’s, which would have been located near the First National Bank. Inadequate parking facilities for the proposed bar and restaurant business were the reasons given by the City Council for the license denial.

This seems pretty inconsistent because most of the bars now on Illinois Avenue do not have very good parking facilities either. Why single out Bogart’s for a denial? Why not deny other licenses too?

It’s what the real issue is. Perhaps Fischer is right in saying that there should be no more liquor licenses granted to the South Illinois Avenue area. But if the Liquor Control Commission pursues such a policy, they should at least apply it fairly and evenly among all the downtown businesses.

This was the day we would celebrate the myth. Like Christopher Columbus, the City Council didn’t seem to care.

In the case of Dairy King, this was not done.

Laker defies big airlines and offers no-frills flights

Mr. Chet Coonrod’s letter of Oct. 7, titled “Moral Issue of Strike to Teachers’ Duties to Students,” was not a good example of oppression coming from a school system that is known as a "democratic" society as the U.S.

The problem with Mr. Coonrod’s argument lies in his old-fashioned assumptions that education is an end in itself and that the members of educational institutions are employees of the state and are not supposed to get involved with the political and social affairs of the nation.

Mr. Coonrod does not realize that not only are the type and the content of what one learns in school heavily influenced by the demands of the economy in the society, but also what one does in an educational institution bears a lot of effect on the rest of society. One can easily see this by looking at the fact that the first atomic bomb which was exploded over Hiroshima was developed at Harvard, and that most of the electronic weapons used to kill thousands of people in Vietnam and other places are continuously being designed and developed in the "purely educational" institutions that Mr. Coonrod is so proud of.

It is this false assumption that leads Mr. Coonrod to conclude that "an educator’s first obligation is to educate the children’s janitors’ problems are their own."

Let me ask Mr. Coonrod if he is so strongly in favor of the separation of academic institutions from political and economic problems, why doesn’t he raise his voice against the SIU Foundation’s involvement in political and military affairs of the South African people.

"Teachers’ specialties’ negotiation of their obligations cannot be considered political problems as their own."

Laker defies big airlines and offers no-frills flights

Last week, President Carter overturned the Civil Aeronautics Board and allowed Freddie Laker of Laker Airlines to offer what many people have always dreamed of: a chance to fly to Europe without second-mortgaging one’s house.

Before Laker came on the scene, a person who wished to fly from New York to London had to shell out $1,312 for a roundtrip first-class ticket. However, those who are willing to wait up to six hours before being able to buy a ticket can now fly from New York to London and back on Laker Airlines for only $236. This is a no-frills flight, which means there aren’t any meals, movies or beverages.

Spurred on by Laker’s success, several other airlines are now announcing plans for economy flights. These airlines have now begun to offer flights to London similar to Laker’s, a no-frills flight for which passengers buy their tickets on a first-come, first-serve basis hours before take-off. Another new flight for which passengers buy their tickets on a first-come, first-serve basis hours before take-off.

Thanks to Freddie Laker and President Carter, the average man has been given a break. But Laker’s business is not all good news, say some people. Aeronautics Board failed to grasp a basic concept of capitalism. Freddie Laker has removed the element that is essential for the capitalist marketplace to regulate the economy: competition.

Museum given historic clock

A 100-year-old tower clock which survived the Murphysboro fire of 1925 has been acquired by the Panier Hall Museum.

"The brass tower clock has managed to survive throughout this area's worst tornado in 1925," said Darrell Harrison, acting director of the museum. The clock was originally part of a tower built onto the Murphysboro jailhouse between 1872 and 1876, according to Harrison.

"The 1925 tornado. took the toll of about 500 people's lives and came close to leveling the town of Murphysboro," he said.

The Seth Thomas Company tower clock was found on top of a pile of rubble that was once Murphysboro's jailhouse. By Clarence Hart, dragger the clock home and kept it until he died. Willard Hart, his son, decided to sell the clock at an auction where Tom Purcell, associate director of the Institutional Research Department, bought it.

Purcell kept it in his private collection for about two years and then offered it to Panier Hall Museum in September. The museum plans to meet in and exhibit the clock. Exact dates for exhibition have not yet been scheduled.

Circus attracts audience’s eyes

"Audience, for the first time in 23 years of circus history Ringling Bros. & Barnum and Bailey Circus proudly presents Ursula Bottcher and the most awesome assemble of ferocious polar bears in the universe," wails Harold Rank, the ringmaster dressed as a clown as he gathers the attention of a large crowd assembled at the Arena to see the opening show of "The Greatest Show on Earth" Tuesday afternoon.

Exotic animals and lavish costumes captured the audience's eyes as the 106th edition of the circus celebrated 200 years of circus in America.

Prince Paul was there. He is one of the "little people" clowns and has been with Ringling Bros. & Barnum and Bailey for 25 years.

The flying Gaonas were the highlight of the show performing feats on the trapeze which defy the earth-bound tendency of man.

Balancing acts, a basketball game on unicycles, elephants, tigers, Lipizzan stallions, clowns, dancing girls, bareback riders and gymnasts prove that the circus is truly entertaining for people of all ages.

Master of Ceremonies Harold Rank has the task of pointing out to spectators which of the three rings spectators should be watching.

Billed as the daring director of beastly bruisers, Ursula Bottcher shares a passionate moment with one of the polar bears she has trained.

Balanced on wires hanging from the Arena’s rafters, this woman balances rings. She is part of the Lazlos, a group which performs aerial feats.

Circus mystique thrills crowd

The magic of Ringling Bros. & Barnum and Bailey Circus cast its personal spell on the hearts and minds of a near capacity crowd of all ages in the opening show Tuesday afternoon at the Arena.

"The Greatest Show on Earth" has widened the test of time and is now in its 106th year. The show runs smoothly, impressing balancing acts, exotic animal acts, flying trapeze artists, clowns, lovely dancers and vendors selling goodie, in a fast paced three ring spectacle which causes the audience to cheer at the ringmaster's commands.

In spite of some problems with the public address system, the show began promptly at 3:30 p.m. with the feature animal act of the afternoon, the Ursula Botcher and her Arctic Ice Bears.

Polar bears are not often used in circus acts because when their moods change their facial expressions don't. Standing over nine feet tall, these massive bears became very large balls of passive white fur at the talented hands of Botcher. Although the five-foot blonde trainer has raised her performing partners from cubs, she has no delusions about their relationship.

"If I gave them a chance, they would eat me. But you can't blame the bears, that's their mentality. In spite of the constant danger, I really like them," she says.

The razzle and dazzle of six thousand yards of taffeta show costumes, half a million ostrich feathers in trims and thousands and thousands of yards of cotton, satin and canvas combine to create a marvelous asset to this performance of a parade of color as the circus crew moves the bears from their cage.

Laurel Street artists that decorate horses take over all three rings as the Mary Street bears are trained. Running, twirling and turning, the Savoy Troupe piloted three high on the back of a white horse.

These masters of bareback bravo, performed next as the crowd of thousand yards of cotton.

According to Axel Gautier, head elephant trainer for the circus, the old saying, "elephants never forget," is true.

"Once they are taught a trick they will always retain it. Many elephants perform for better than 20 years and are capable of recalling feats of elephant dexterity that perhaps they haven't used for some time. Just a little brushing up and they are back at it," the Swedish-born trainer says.

Perhaps the most bizarre and mystique act in the circus is that of flying trapeze artist. These men and women and children walk, talk and work with an air of confidence and danger that can be felt by the entire audience.

A gasp was heard throughout the crowd as Tito Genesius performed a triple somersault high overhead and landed securely in the hands of his partner, signifying the last act of the show.

There is never a dull moment in a three ring circus. Circus people live for applause and the Ringling Bros. & Barnum and Bailey Circus people truly deserve every bit for blasting out three hours of fantasy and fun.

A Review

trapeze, performed best as the crew and performers began herding elephants, camels and horses into the arena for the parade of animal antics and tricks.

The animals, which were joined by the entire circus in a gala salute to Misha, the smallest man in the world, as he julied, who is 36 inches tall, exchanged vows at every show of this year's "Greatest Show on Earth," celebrating the marriage of the man Guinea's Book of World Records says is the smallest on Earth.

After intermission, Charly Baumann, an animal trainer from Germany, steps into a cage in the center, ring with 15 sleek, lethal Siberian and Royal Bengal tigers, takes command and orders the cats through feat after feat.

The cats seemed fierier than the great white polar bears but Baumann said little attention to the roar and flashing teeth of the tigers as he commanded six of them to roll over on the floor of the cage at one time.

Perhaps the most awesome animal in the circus is the elephant and there are plenty of these mammoths in the latest edition of Ringling Bros. & Barnum and Bailey Circus.

Student vacations get organized as SGAC plan holiday cruises

By Dave Erickson

An office of student government is dedicated to getting students out of town for awhile, at least.

"The SGAC (Student Government Activities Council) Travel and Recreation Committee was organized with the idea that students have to have a break from their studies to have a well-balanced lifestyle," chairperson Julie Mary said.

The committee sponsors several long-cost trips each semester-usually breaks from school. The first trip coming up is a weekend in Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 26-28. The beginning of Thanksgiving break. Includes the in the $15 package includes six nights in the Meadowbrook Condominiums, lift ticket for six days, and a shuttle service to the ski area.

The condominiums feature wood burning fireplaces, complete kitchen facilities so you can heat up your own eggnog and hot chocolate, and a clubhouse with a heated pool, game room, and a party room. A whirlpool and sauna room are also available to ease the aches and pains that flattenners have trouble avoiding when they hit the slopes.

For an additional $90, the committee is offering round-trip transportation from Carbondale to Colorado via C.G. student bus. Students are offered a chance to spend Thanksgiving day in New Orleans where the committee is planning a Mardi Grass weekend package Feb. 26. For this a student will be provided with round-trip transportation via Amtrak and private bus service to the Fat Tuesday Mardi gras parade where he or she will be staying for the next three nights in the company of three other students. For the less formal, a double occupancy package is offered for $25 more. Entertainment is provided free of charge by thousands of bands running the streets of the French Quarter.

Deposits for the trips are varying. The deadline for the Nashville trip deposit is Nov. 1. The ski trip deposit is due Nov. 11 and the Mardi Gras trip deposit is Dec. 1. These are all payable at the Student Activities Center.

SGAC will be offering a Ski Trip to New England Christmas Break. The final Frontier Ski Trip to New England Christmas Break. Includes all meals, lodging and transportation. For information please contact the SGAC office.

Esther Asner and her little brother Ed grew up in Kansas City, Kan., where their parents were drapers in a scrap paper. When Esther left home to study sociology at University of Wisconsin, Ed was still in grammar school. Asner played football in high school and after graduation attended the University of Chicago, but the only career that interested him was acting. He dropped out in his second year and drove a cab in Chicago, while working at the Chicago Playwrights Theater with other budding stars such as Mike Nichols, Elaine May and Shelley Berman.

Asner also worked in a General Motors assembly plant before going to New York where he landed his first major role in the off-Broadway production of "Three Penny Opera."

Those acting experiences in New York eventually led to the part of Lou Grant. He won Emmy awards for his dramatic performances in the television movies "Roots" and "Rich Man, Poor Man." His new show, "Lou Grant," is the first comedic drama made from a TV soap

In the Chicago Tribune review, TV-radio critic Gary Webb wrote of "Lou Grant:"

"As for Asner, his characterizations are so good you never know he had many punchlines to fall back on, but in this delightful spoof, he brings us a flesh-and-blood human being of warmth, decency and common frailty."

"If your biggest complaint about TV is that it so frequently insults your intelligence, you owe yourself an hour with "Lou Grant."

"It is not the second episode," said Mrs. Edelman. "But I like the first show very much. I think the show is good and will get better in time as the characters develop."

After leaving college, Mrs. Edelman did social work in Kansas City and served in Alaska during World War II. She met her husband Milton at a cousin’s wedding in Denver. They moved to Illinois where Edelman founded his doctorate work at the University of Illinois.

The Edelmans have lived in Carbondale for 22 years, leaving only for sabbaticals in Italy, Israel and England. They have been married for 27 years. Ed Asner has been to Carbondale quite a few times. Once, Asner and his wife Nancy stumbled through Carbondale dragging a trailer packed with their worldly possessions, as they moved from New York to Los Angeles.

They had all these belongings," said Mrs. Edelman, "and it wasn’t much. They really had to struggle for a while."

Former cab driver Asner now lives in an unpretentious house in Bel Air, a wealthy suburb of Los Angeles. He has three children, including twins. He last saw his sister Esther at her son’s wedding in Philadelphia last May.

Mrs. Edelman is a board member for the Humane Society of Southern Illinois. The society works to prevent cruelty to animals.

Their next fund-raising project is a sale of handmade goods, antiques and items for health. The sale will be held at Xaviera Church on Oct. 13. The church is located at 402 N. State St. in Carbondale.

"We would be very grateful to the woman who once discovered ‘Lou Grant,’” Esther Asner Edelman.

Black students comment on apartheid

By Aja Baylons
Student Writer

Blacks in Zimbabwe, known also as Rhodesia, are treated like animals that are overworked but underfed, say two graduate students from that African nation.

"The whites in Zimbabwe could care less what happens to any black as long as the white can enrich their pockets and fatten their bellies with more obtained from the poor and sweat of the blacks," said Bonet Mukudzi, a graduate student in forestry.

Mukudzi and Steva are the only students in SIU from Zimbabwe where a struggle is going on, to turn over the system of government from 250,000 whites to the 8 million blacks.

"It is not so much that we want to get rid of the whites entirely, as publicly has put it to the outside world, but our main aim is to maintain human dignity and to demand our rights as human beings and not as blacks or colored people," said Mukudzi.

According to the students, the whites are doing everything to deprove the blacks in Zimbabwe of education. They said the education system is divided into two main

Education in this system blacks are not allowed to teach in non-African schools but whites can teach in both non-African and African schools.

The students said the black school receives a token amount of money earmarked for educational development, compared to the amount given to white schools. They added that there are few schools for blacks. The majority of schools, are foundations which are built locally since the government does not use funds to construct such buildings, they said.

The university system, according to the students, is not open to blacks because the whites have made the cost of education too expensive.

Mukudzi said there are no job opportunities for blacks in Zim-

"I have worked in the country as a teacher. I'd taught in the elementary and the high schools under several headmasters who didn't have a fourth of my qualifications and I'd received less than a fifth of their salaries," Mukudzi said.

He added that blacks are forced to live in areas worse than the ghettos in America.

"A lot of people think these blacks are poor and ignorant and they would not cooperate to fight Smith regime but that is not true. The black in Zimbabwe is not asking himself,
'Why am I poor in a land that is rich?' and the little boy who is not in school in Zimbabwe is now asking his parents, 'Why am I not in school?,'" said Mukudzi.

"These are the questions we are trying to answer, we are not thinking in terms of reincarnation as Smith and his people think we are, but we only want to build our needs," he said.

He said blacks are being blacked in Zimbabwe because the white man is using the ethnic differences between the blacks to turn them to fight against one another. He added that the whites do not allow the blacks to be instructed in English. They are instructed in their individual native languages and the people from one ethnic group are barred from moving into another group in order to discourage unity. In this way the blacks are unable to communicate with one another and they don't understand their individual motives when one another, he said.

"It is one thing to read the books written by whites about Zimbabwe, but it is another issue to experience the situation as it is. People on the outside world feel the blacks in Zimbabwe are exaggerating the stories but that is not true. I was born in Zimbabwe and I have experienced these situations. I have worked and lived there and I know exactly what it is to be black in Zimbabwe," said Mukudzi.

Concerning agreements of foreign countries in Zimbabwe, the students say they are not only worried about the companies paying for the labor of black. They said that their main concern is for the whites to stop improvising the blacks and to give them what their labors are worth.

Mukudzi said many whites in SIU were offended by his speech during the summer protest against SIU foundation having stakes in the companies that trade with South Africa.

House to test vote on fuel tax; bill would improve waterways

WASHINGTON (AP) — The stage was set in the House of Representatives on Tuesday for a test vote on whether to kill a diesel fuel tax which has been proposed to ease the $60 million annual taxpayer bill for improving and maintaining waterways. Rep. William M. Ketchum, R-Calif., told the House Wednesday that if the railroad and trucking company operations is part of legislation to authorize $432 million for a new lock and dam on the Mississippi River at Alton, Ill.,

Ketchum, who opposed the tax, said the issues should be considered separately, not linked together in an effort to broaden support. Such linkage could set a precedent, he added, for enacting controversial public works projects under the guise that the users of the projects would pay for them.

The Senate has approved the new lock and dam and a provision directing the administration to develop a system of barge taxes which would recover half the cost of new construction and all of the annual waterway operating costs in 10 years.

The House bill mandates a tax of six cents a gallon on diesel fuel used to move barges and requires the administration to commence a three-year study of similar taxes on all forms of transportation. Such a tax would recover about $50 million.

The administration favors the Senate approach and will lobby members of a House-Senate conference committee to adopt a compromise leading to implementing the higher set of taxes.

Last week the House rejected a move designed to allow a floor vote on higher taxes. As it is now there will be no other votes except on the motion on the Ketchum-Mikva motion to reject the tax outright.

Railroads and trucking companies have pushed for decades for a barge tax, saying their competitor enjoyed an immense economic advantage because the government built and maintained the waterways at no expense to the barge companies.

Congressional allies of the barge operators contend it makes no sense to tax only the most efficient and least expensive ways of moving bulk cargoes. The House bill taxes on fuel and grain. A tax, especially the one envisioned by the Senate, would place many barge companies at a competitive disadvantage, forcing them out of business, they said.

The legislation provides for a new, larger lock and dam to replace the present complex, which is said to be capable of handling only a fraction of the modern barge operations. The railroad oppose construction of the new Alton lock and dam, saying it would enable an expansion of barge commerce at the expense of rail revenue and jobs.

The administration opposes the project. Its spokesmen say railroads cannot give up barge traffic to other conditions and that railroads can easily be expanded to handle increased transportation demands. Also, expanding the waterway potential with the Alton project would undermine the administration policy of rehabilitation nation wide and to learn the location of.

New library duplicator makes improved copies on bond paper

By Steve Knoop
Staff Writer

A new duplicating machine capable of making high quality copies on untreated bond paper has been placed in the Undergraduate Library on the first floor of Morris Library.

The machine, operated under a contract between Venda Copy, Inc., of Alka Green Village, can make copies in either 11-inch, 11-inch, or 14-inch paper lengths.

Copies on the new machine cost 10 cents each. compared to the five-cent per copy cost of the library's other copying machines.

David Matthews, director of Library Services, said the machine was installed for students who desire high quality long-lasting copies on untreated paper. He said the library is keeping the cheaper copying machines for those who want to duplicate notes or articles for short-term use.

Les Benson, the Venda-Copy representative who maintains the library's copying machines, said the new machine is more complicated than the others and therefore more expensive.

He hopes the students will be gentle with it. Benson said, "It won't take the abuse that the others will. Students who have difficulty in operating the duplicating machines can consult a book at the library circulation desk explaining their use.

Twice a day, all copying machines in the library are checked by a staff member and a coded report on the quality of each machine's prints is distributed to each floor of the library.

Students can use this list to find which machines are a operation and learn the location of the nearest machine in working order, Matthews said.

Malfunctioning machines should be reported to one of the information desks at the library for a refund.

Former SIU-C administrator retiring from SIU-E position

By Rick Gibble
Staff Writer

Ralph W. Ruffner, former administrator on the SIU-Carbondale campus, will retire as senior vice-president for planning and review at SIU-Edwardsville effective Sept. 1, 1978, Kenneth A. Shaw, SIU-E president, has announced.

Shaw said Ruffner will be a part-time consultant to the University after retirement.

"Dr. Ruffner will be greatly missed when he retires," Shaw said, "but I respect his wishes, and I am extremely pleased he will still be with us in a part-time basis. He can continue to serve as long as he wishes.

Ruffner served three months as acting president prior to the arrival of Shaw last Jan. 17.

Ruffner served as vice-president for area and student services for both SIU campuses from 1964 to 1968. He was vice-president for international and area services for both campuses from 1968 to 1972. He was also systems vice-president for both campuses from 1972 to 1973.

Ruffner, 63, said "My decision to retire is based on both personal and professional reasons. On the one hand, I have a number of personal interests which I want to pursue before total retirement sets in. "And, on the other hand, I feel that I have made my contribution to SIU and SIU-E now is in the most capable hands under the leadership of President Shaw."
Trustees promote instructors

Two Law School instructors who last spring had been denied promotion by the SIU administration were promoted by the Board of Trustees Tuesday.

Donald Garner, who was in the legal counsel office for about three years before returning to the law school, was appointed as an assistant professor. He has been at the law school about four years.

The Board also approved the appointment of James Peters II as a visiting professor in the Rehabilitation Institute during the current academic year.

Earlier this year, the two were denied promotion by President Warren Brandt, despite the recommendation of the Law School faculty.

But after meeting with representatives from the State Bar Association last month, Brandt agreed to promote the two.

"It will all depend on his decision to deny promotion for two other Law School teachers," Richard Meyer and Andrew Ostrom, both associate professors, said. Also, St. Louis, who graduated from the SLU law school was named associate legal counsel for SLU.

Student volunteers give time, love to Anna hospital patients

By Richard Ker, News Editor

In the parking lot of the Anna State Hospital, a group of about 20 people were up to a sign a poster. Behind them, the huge domed end of the administration building, built in the 1910's, were lighted. Similar buildings were patterned through the hospital grounds.

The dome lights were dead, except for the lights over the rock band and in the glass windows of chairs and at tables scattered around the area. About 30 people danced, more than 60 watching.

A man near the stage ran his hand over his head, said "That's what they call, hair cut, hair cut." Touching his glasses, he said, "Hair cut, hair cut, "finally, he asked "Are you done now?"

The State Hospital at Anna holds the annual student Shriners Outreach. Usually the volunteers from the Newman Center, a Catholic student organization, load bags or card games and count some of the 900 patients, according to William Atkinson, coordinator of the project.

About 15 patients, most of them students meet in front of the Newman Center on Thursdays at 6:30 p.m. for the 20 mile drive to Anna. About half of them work regularly with the program.

FBI director hearing delayed

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — FBI Director designate Frank J. Figliuzzi was on Tuesday morning's orders not to return before returning to Washington for confirmation hearings.

FBI officials confirmed Wednesday that Figliuzzi is expected to return to Washington for confirmation hearings. House Republicans' Tuesday, were postponed Monday evening after confirming that there will be no hearing on Monday.

Senate Judiciary Committee hearings, scheduled to begin Tuesday, were postponed, probably by the end of the year.

Johnson, a federal judge in Alabama since 1985, is President Carter's choice to succeed FBI Director Clarence Kelley, who plans to retire Jan. 1.

Dr. J.J. Kirchner said Johnson developed a small hernia in his groin. The doctor said the problem was not necessarily related to Johnson's recent surgery to correct an abdominal aneurysm of the aorta, the body's main artery.

Stolen car found by police in city

An automobile that had been reported stolen by a St. Louis man was located by Carbondale police behind the WICL radio station. Victor Berle informed police Sunday night that his car had been removed from the downtown area.

The car was discovered Tuesday behind the 200 block of W. Main Street, police said. They have no suspects.

Warrant sought for arrest of male shooting suspect

Carbondale police said that they would seek a warrant for the arrest of a man suspected of shooting a Carbondale woman.

The woman, identified as Lisa Williams, 31, E. Willow, was shot in the leg Monday during an argument over the suspect.

Police said the argument took place in her car while it was parked in the 100 block of N. Barnes Street.
Pinball wizards think of game as addicting, gambling, revenge

George Miles
Staff Writer

In his 1978 rock opera "Tommy," composer and lyricist Pete Townshend of The Who, made a dead, dumb, and blind school for his pinball wizard of the world. It was led by the pinball wizard, and his power was "... the power of pinball..." (in a line from the song).

It was the idea of pinball wizardry that inspired the film "The Big Lebowski." The pinball wizard was a silent figure, emerging from the mist and vanishing into the fog. His power was "... the power of pinball..."

Pete Townshend was speaking out of frustration for the "High Hand" machine in the Student Center bowling and billiards room, which had subjected him to the greatest frustration known to pinball wizards—she drew, in which the ball goes out of play, "forcing free, if any, points."

"Three times over no less," said a frustrated Francis.

Tacked to a partition dividing the room machines in the Student Center was a note, "I am now playing pinball."

The flippers and bumpers are dead.

Francis meant that the bumpers don't put bite, or rapid movement, on the ball, it is made its way around the machine. The flippers, he said, were hurting because the rubber coating had worn down. This makes it more difficult to score points, and the ball doesn't go out of play.

But Francis, as did the other eight players present Thursday, kept playing in the machine and issuing death wishes to their respective machines.

Some persons say the game is relaxing, a chance to relax, for a long time after a hard day of classes. Others play as if Vincent Lombardi taught them, "You must be tough..."

Instructor announces candidacy for county sheriff election

By Sam Lewrey

Charging that Jackson County Sheriff Don White has failed to provide "adequate police protection," S11 law enforcement instructors William Childers said he will run for the Republican nomination for sheriff.

Childers, 31 said "many police procedures are standard in other parts of the nation have never been implemented here in Jackson County."

The primary will be held next spring, with the election coming in November.

Chelders, who received both his B.S. and M.S. degrees in administration of justice from SIU, said in a press conference at the Student Center that he "will propose a series of measures with the approval of the Republican commitment for sheriff."

"In the next two years we can cut crime down by 50 percent," he said.

"In addition to this," he said, "I will supplement the overall work force of the Sheriff's Office, allowing faster response to citizens' calls, and will facilitate the implementation of a variety of specialized programs, almost trimming the needs of a diverse population."

Childers did not propose a special budget request, but did say, "It is important that the people of Jackson County be assured that they are involved in selecting the best possible man to act as the county's sheriff.

Childers has been active in the Democratic party and has held various public office positions. He will be serving his second term as a member of the Illinois State Senate, where he represents the 33rd District.

He currently teaches basic and advanced criminal investigations at the Center for the Study of Crime and Criminal Justice, where he has taught for two years.

His political experience includes working with the Williamson County Democratic Committee and the City of Carbondale Police Department and the Greater St. Louis Police Academy.

Career library a helpful resource

The Career Library in Woody Hall is a little known, but helpful resource for career-seeking students. It helps to promote employment publications.

According to Woods, coordinator of the library, "Students just need to learn about their educational options. Initial contacts and meetings are being planned with the department and the public.

The library was created to provide information about the job opportunities and career opportunities. The library contains books, pamphlets, placement bulletin, audio-visual tapes, career fair, and a vertical file. Since the library's main purpose, according to Woods, is to create career awareness, these materials contain information on job search strategies, job vacancies, careers, and university curricular.

Some of the most popular literature "Weeds," is the occupational dictionary, meets the need in finding out more about career opportunities.

In addition to general career information, the library offers specific materials for students in Technical Careers (ICT), description, and information about special programs and school curriculum.

The library is open every weekday from 8:00 A.M. to 4:30 P.M. Information is available by phone, mail, and personal visits. The library is located in Woody Hall B236, contains books, pamphlets, placement manuals, appointment forms, placement bulletin, audio-visual tapes, and a vertical file.
Bears win ‘controversial’ game

(CHICAGO) — "Crybabies" was how coach Mike Ditka and the elated Chicago Bears seemed to reply to "cheap shot" charges hurled by the Los Angeles Rams. Ditka was jubilant after the Bears' first four-down loss in a "controversy game in the closing minute of overtime against the Rams. The Bears' 40-24 triumph and as lame duck coach was proof that they didn't make the most of our early scoring opportunities," Ditka said.

Although Irasas Robertson intercepted a pass and recovered a fumble for the Bears first four-down scoring opportunities three into held goals by Bullet Schmidt and one touchdown by Lawrence McCulson. The Bears' four scores came on three touchdown bombs by Bob Avellini and a field goal by Bob Thomas which put the Bears ahead at 24-16. Guard Dennis Durzy took exception to what the Rams thought was a late hit and he bided off and chipped away. The Bears scored.

Unbeaten Big 10 powers to tangle

(CHICAGO) — Ba Schembichler of Michigan State is not among those who are undefeated and unbeaten Big Ten. Schembichler said Chicago football writers have been asking him about Iowa. "There are only about five undefeated teams in the country and Wisconsin is one of them, I don't know when they played," he said.

The Badgers and Wolverines have both lost one game each. Wisconsin defeated Ohio State and 16th ranked Badgers lost to Minnesota Saturday. The fact that Wisconsin plays a nine-game conference schedule is seen as a plus for the Badgers by Schembichler.

"If all the contests lose one game then Wisconsin would win the conference," said Ba. "They're definitely in the race and you can't say otherwise."

Schembichler doesn't consider the Volunteers as a major threat. Michigan State has played for its last two games as a defense unit at Tennessee. The fact that Wisconsin plays a nine-game conference schedule is seen as a plus for the Badgers by Schembichler.

"If all the contests lose one game then Wisconsin would win the conference," said Ba. "They're definitely in the race and you can't say otherwise."

Ever hear of a flying Saluki? It's a pretty safe bet that most people in the world of collegiate aviation have. The SIU flying team, the Flying Salukis, established itself as "one of the teams to beat" after winning the 1977 national collegiate championship in Silsbee, Okla., in May.

The Salukis have been in the nationals the past 16 years. The team has always placed high, but this is the first time they have captured first place.

The meet produced a number of firsts for SIU. When it was over, SIU had 'bowed away with all the trophies. It was the first time in the history of the National Intercollegiate Airmail that any school has won all five trophies.

The Salukis won the Groover Loving Award for outstanding achievement. This trophy is worth about $5,000 and will be placed in the Smithsonian Institution next year. The names of the winners are engraved on the trophy.

The SIU team won the American Airlines Safety Award for a project involving the prevention of mid-air collisions.

Top Flight Events, Top Ground Events, and Grand National Champion trophies also were won by SIU.

Six of the top 25 pilots of the meet, chosen on the basis of total individual points, were flying Salukis.

SIU competed against such schools as the Air Force Academy, Parks Aeronautical College, and the University of Michigan. Twenty-five schools were represented at the meet.

Last November, 250 schools competed in regional meets to qualify for the Nationals.

At the regional meet, held in St. Louis, the Flying Salukis defeated Oregon State University. According to Tom Young, coach of the team, Illinois is always a top contender.

"We've been fortunate enough to be ahead of 1 1 For 1 many years," Young said. "It makes us feel pretty good."

Crying doesn't come easily to Miss Wheelchair Illinois

Marked Grobaneski

Events do not come easily to Cheryl Toomey's Hazel Green eyes after a life as Miss Wheelchair Illinois in July, Toomey did not fall the traditional tears of joy. Nor did she give in to the internal conflict held in Columbus, Ohio in September, when she was told she didn't even place in the non-free-form competition. Instead, she accepted it just as she accepted, at that time, earning the fact that she would never walk again.

"I was too young at the time. It took two years to realize I would never walk again. Then I cried," says Toomey, a junior in speech pathology.

When Toomey awoke one early morning in February of 1973 she felt pain in her legs. "I climbed out of bed, got dressed, and then collapsed on the floor," says Toomey, who was then rushed to a hospital in Chicago's Southwest Job. -- a young Hardwick she worked as a newspaper girl delivering papers shortly after sunrise every morning.

Toomey learned later that day she would never again deliver another newspaper.

"I have a rare virus for which there is no known cure," Toomey's doctors told her. With Cheryl, you'll never walk again.

Travelling to the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., the doctors there confirmed the diagnosis of paralytic polio from the waist down.

"The people around me at the time either more or less, ignored my handicap. They would carry me to classes, meals and parties rather than let me walk outside."

Cards still confident despite divisional setback to Dallas

By Jim Minnies
Sports Editor

St. Louis loss to Dallas Sunday in a National Football League (NFL) game might have put the Cards three games behind the Cowboys, but the Cardinal players don’t think the chance of a playoff spot is gone yet.

John Zook, Cardinal defensive end, said, “It’ll come back next time. I’ll be tough, but we’ll find out what kind of team we have. We should get back into it.”

Jim Hart, St. Louis quarterback, and an ex-Saluki, said, “It was an important game, but they are all important games. We’re down, but we’ll bounce back.”

Charlie Waters, a defensive back for the Cowboys said he has seen Dallas bounce back from poor performances in three different seasons to make the playoffs.

“I know St. Louis will come back because we done this thing before,” Waters said. “One week we were 1-2, another time we were 1-2, and another season we made the playoffs.”

Waters, who blocked a punt to set up a first goal and intercepted a pass by Hart with 1:09 left in the game to spoil the Cardinals’ last chance for victory, said the key defensively for Dallas was putting pressure on Hart.

“We put good pressure on Hart and that’s what hurt them before,” he said. “We were coming with a blitz most of the game. We were putting heat on him by throwing quickly to hurt the team.”

Waters said Hart, who passed for nine completions in 11 attempts for 139 yards with two interceptions, and a neck injury sustained just before half before him the second half. Dallas defensive and Harvey Martin hurt Hart’s confidence.

The Cowboys came out to win the conference race, I, he said. “This is a very, very happy feeling.”

Cardinals’ defensive guards Tom Young and Centralia’s Dobler were even more critical of the officiating.

“It was the worst officiating I’ve seen in 12 years I’ve been in this league,” Young said. “You can count on everyone one or two errors, but you can’t have six or eight bad calls.”

Dobler said, “I didn’t understand it—they let us get the tough calls every year and I’m beginning to wonder.”

The calls the Cardinals were disputing came on passing calls. Two pass interference calls were whistled against Carden Quarterback Roger Starchak this time last away with no receivers nearby, but was not called for intentionally grounding the ball.

Dallas also had reference’s calls influence its play. A 50-yard Dallas touchdown call was called back because of a holding call and a pass interference call against Dallas defensive back Bob Barnes set up an Iron Bakken field goal.

Terrier coach says CCHS has slim hopes for loop title

By Dennis Gray
Student Writer

Cardinal Community High School, a favorite to win the South Central Conference title at the start of the season, may have been eliminated from the conference race after losing to Marion High School 8-0 Friday night at Marion.

Although CCHS is 1-2 in conference play after its loss to Marion, Terriers coach Martin said his team’s chances of winning the conference are slim and none. “Our chances are not very good. We would have to win our last four conference games just for a tie,” O’Boyle said.

But if this chain of events did occur, Centralia would still become a South Central Conference champion by virtue of its win over the Terriers earlier in the season. Centralia, currently the conference leader, is unbeaten in conference games remaining to be played.

“Centralia will most likely win the conference. I also think that it is virtually impossible that Centralia will lose to anyone in the conference,” O’Boyle said.

The Terriers’ dilemma began on a rainy Friday night in Marion.

“It is impossible to run a very offense in this type of weather, so I told my players that the game was just out there waiting for them,” Marion head coach North said.

Coach North was right. The only score in the game was in the second quarter Marion’s quarterback Thad Tucker threw a 15-yard pass to receiver Randy Handrock, who ran the final 15 yards for touchdow as two Terriers defenders slipped and fell while attempting to make the tackle.

“This was an important game for us, but the bad weather conditions and the muddy field hampered our offense, because of all the speed we possess. It’s just one of those things that was extremely dry in the conference race if Benton and West Franklin can share Marion.”

Hurt, rubbing his left shoulder and neck, said, “We put some heat on it at halftime and it helped a little bit, but I could put very much on the ball in the second half. I didn’t throw it well.”

Several Cardinal players felt the officiating in the game played a big part in the game.

Zook said, “It’s frustrating for two great football teams to get together for 60 minutes and have the outcome of the game determined by an official’s call.”

“It’s especially tough when the calls are against you,” he said. “This is a very, very happy feeling.”

Cardinals’ offensive guards Tom Young and Centralia’s Dobler were even more critical of the officiating.

“It was the worst officiating I’ve seen in 12 years I’ve been in this league,” Young said. “You can count on everyone one or two errors, but you can’t have six or eight bad calls.”

Dobler said, “I didn’t understand it—they let us get the tough calls every year and I’m beginning to wonder.”

Tennis courts in sad state of repair

Congo's Corner

By Steve Ceccara
Staff Writer

Marc Colombo

Barbara Love, a senior in accounting, leaps high to return a volley at the University tennis courts. Love, like thousands of other students, has been playing on the courts despite several large cracks. (see column below.)

When the University tennis courts were built in 1969, they were rated by World Tennis Magazine as one of the top 10 college tennis facilities in the country. But that was 17 years ago.

"It depresses me that such an excellent facility has deteriorated so quickly," said Dick LeFevre, coach of the men's tennis team. The University tennis courts, which are located near the arena, are slow but not so slow as to crumble. Numerous large cracks in the courts, which cause balls to take awkward bounces, are dangerous to the students and will eventually cause the courts to become totally useless.

"Two tennis court construction consultants said we would lose the courts within two years if something isn't done," LeFevre said.

More than 20,000 people used the courts last year. In addition to the men's and women's tennis teams, gym classes, intramural tournaments and open recreation also make use of the courts.

The courts were built at an estimated cost of $72,000 and an additional $43,000 was spent for putting up the lights. One can only guess on how much it would cost to replace the courts if the necessary repairs are not made in the near future.

LeFevre received estimates from the tennis court construction consultants on how much must be spent to bring the courts back to top playing shape. According to LeFevre, it will cost $230 to tore down the courts to find out if there is water trapped underneath causing the cracks.

The next step includes cleaning the cracks, filling them and putting on a sealer, which would cost an estimated $15,000 to $15,000. Taking care of the cracks and putting down a sealer would just be a temporary solution. This treatment should hold for approximately a year when hopefully state funds can be acquired to put a new layer of asphalt over the courts. This process would bring the courts back to excellent condition, but would cost an estimated $77,000.

The problem has been getting the repairs underway for that has been so many groups on campus use the facility. Physical education classes, athletics, the intramural and recreation department and the surrounding community all use the courts. However, none of the groups can individually afford much of a budget to go to repairs. The job of dividing cost of repairs among the groups has yet to be started.

There are many feelings about the tennis court situation which differ depending on who you talk to. "The courts are a benefit to everybody on campus," said Judy Auld, women's tennis coach. "Our top administration should realize that. They seem to be pushing other things that don't concern everybody." Jack Ruwe, coordinator of intramural sports, sees the problem as being a very serious one. "We need a kind of facility that must be kept up periodically," she said. "If this University going without tennis courts. Maybe they have to become useless before something is done.

Warren Mohar, an engineering major, whose tennis class this semester had to play on courts seven through 12, has been frustrated by the situation. "I'm not an experienced tennis player, but I've been up to lots of courts but bit the crack and does or bounces out in another direction," Mohar said. The Athletics Director, Charlotte West said, "If we ever get a properly lined courts were Sue Briggs and Debbie Deichten."
