SIU-C budget woes hurt community

By Nora Bentley
Staff Writer

SIU-C community service programs that rely partly or fully on University funding are experiencing a "tightening of the belt" along with the rest of the University.

Irene J. Carlton, director of the Business Research Management Services Institute, said she has felt the effect of the budget tightening since she and her staff now oversee four programs instead of one.

Carlton also is director of the Small Business Development Center, which is an outreach of the College of Business and Administration. The program provides access to business resources for 16 Southern Illinois counties. Community colleges John A. Logan, Rend Lake, Shawnee, and Southeastern Illinois also are part of the network, Carlton said.

Carlton said that her staff is suffering because it is taking on more jobs without adding people.

"I'm afraid our quality will suffer," Carlton said.

Outside funding has helped the program, and some of the work is being directed towards classes in the College of Business and Administration.

"It's providing independent-study students with projects,"

Carlton said. The students work with faculty on the projects.

Even utilizing the classes, the program must still pay for the support, she said.

Carlton said that the University has done well, but that there are no more funds internally.

She said external funds are her only choice at this time.

Carlton said the long-term effect of the staff shortage will be that her staff will "burn out."

"It's hard to keep motivated when it doesn't stop," she said. "We're trying to co-sponsor whenever possible."

The other programs that Carlton oversees include the Business Research Center, the Center for Managerial and Executive Development, and the Small Business Institute.

FCC order increases GTE rates

By Richard Goldstein
Staff Writer

General Telephone North will raise its basic monthly rate by 60 cents in December to comply with a Federal Communication Commission order that telephone users pick up the tab on local service, a GTE official said.

Pat Poppe, communications manager for GTE North, said the 60-cent increase in the telephone line access charge is part of an FCC plan to end the subsidy of local telephone service through long distance rates.

Poppe said local telephone charges have risen steadily since the court ordered 1984 break up of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., which previously propped up local service by charging more for long distance.

The line charge, initiated in 1985 by the FCC, is designed to allow local service to pay for itself, she said.

Casey Jones, a sales representative for AT&T, said, "We've dropped rates as much as 40 percent since disvestiture."

He said the latest decrease for Illinoisans was 5 percent in October 1987.

Jones said lower rates are partly the result of competition spawned from breaking AT&T's monopoly on long distance service and partly from FCC ordered reduction.

But Jones added that AT&T is generally in the forefront for the request for lower rates because of its size.

"We can afford to take a certain amount of loss. If we were allowed to, we could virtually eliminate the competition."

Voter registration deadline causes long lines at City Hall

By Richard Goldstein
Staff Writer

Tuesday was the last day to register for the upcoming presidential election, and Jackson County residents were out in force with more than 160 people registering to vote at an inundated City Clerk's office.

Fifty people lined the narrow hallway leading to the clerk's office in City Hall as potential voters waited an hour-and-a-half to register to vote for the Nov. 8 contest.

"It's pretty disheartening just as you turn the corner (and see the line)," Greg Schandlmeier, a 25-year-old sophomore in physiology, said.

At 3:20 the clerk's office had registered or changed the address for 113 people and 45 more stood waiting in the office and the hallway.

Teresa Cox, a 20-year-old sophomore in social work, said "It's the last day so we figured we better come in and do it (register)."

One reason City Hall was so crowded is because state law requires that deputy registrars, who can register people to vote outside of city

Spies find lab secrets — report

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Suspected spies from countries interested in America's atomic secrets, probably including Soviet KGB agents, have visited sensitive areas of U.S. nuclear weapons laboratories because of lax security, congressional investigators said Tuesday.

The investigators said Soviet and Chinese officials, among others, gained access to laboratory areas where "Star Wars" and other sensitive weapons research was being conducted because the Energy Department failed to carry out required background checks or screening before permitting entry.

Some of those entering weapons laboratories, who in some cases stayed for several days, were determined months later to be connected to foreign intelligence agencies, investigators with the General Accounting Office, the auditing arm of Congress, told the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee.

"The Energy Department does not follow its own procedures for obtaining (background) checks and identifying visits that involve sensitive subjects," the report said.

"As a result, suspected foreign agents and individuals associated with (foreign) facilities believed to be involved in nuclear weapons activities have obtained access to the laboratories without prior (government) knowledge."

Energy Department officials acknowledged a "breakdown" in the laboratory security system and, under

Kelley, Poshard to debate on campus

By Scott Perry
Staff Writer

The debate that isn't a debate between Congressional candidates Patrick Kelley and Glenn Poshard will be at 7:30 tonight in the Student Center auditorium.

The Congressional Candidate Forum, as it is officially called, is sponsored by the Jackson County League of Women Voters with the cooperation of several local organizations.

Kelley and Poshard are seeking the position in the U.S. House of Representatives being vacated by long-time seat holder Kenneth Gray, D-West Frankfort.

The forum's format is similar to that of a debate in that the candidates will answer written questions from the audience. Each candidate will have four minutes to answer the question.

Each candidate also is given five minutes for their opening statements and seven minutes for their closing statements.

In a late-August interview, Jim Wilson, Poshard's campaign manager, said the Poshard campaign was being "more than generous" in organizing the three debates, which have already been held throughout the 22nd district.

The sites for the three debates were Shawnee College in Ullin, Rend Lake College in Ina and Kaskaskia College in Centerville.

Linda Helstern, president of the Jackson County League of Women Voters, said not holding a debate in Jackson County "is an insult to the community."

"There are many intelligent and informed voters in the area," Helstern said.

Algerian president to end state of siege on capital

ALGIERS, Algeria (UPI) — Algerian President Chadli Bendjedid announced Tuesday he will lift the state of siege imposed on the capital last week to quell rioting that left up to 200 dead. His office said the state of siege, declared Thursday after thousands of youths rioted in the streets to protest economic conditions, would end at 6 a.m. Wednesday.

Marcos not allowed to return to Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — Exiled dictator Ferdinand Marcos will not be allowed to return to the Philippines because his presence could spark "political turbulence," a spokesman for President Corazon Aquino said Tuesday. Aquino's press secretary, Teodoro Benigno, made the statement a day after an anti-corruption court in Manila rejected Marcos's request to attend a pre-trial hearing on graft charges against him next month.

Afghan rebels claim strategic capital capture

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (UPI) — U.S.-backed Afghan guerrillas said Tuesday they have captured the capital of a strategic eastern province they have been besieging for several weeks. Sources in the Pakistan-based resistance alliance said guerrillas overran Asasabad, capital of Kunar Province, 120 miles east of Kabul, Monday night. They said heavy fighting killed 40 Afghan troops and 11 rebels.

Saudi king extends hand of friendship to Iran

JEDDAH, Saudi Arabia (UPI) — King Fahd of Saudi Arabia extended an olive branch to Tehran Tuesday, expressing hope for reconciliation with his "Iranian brothers," some six months after the two countries severed diplomatic ties. Fahd's conciliatory remarks during a meeting of Islamic Conference Organization information ministers came a week after Saudi Foreign Minister Saud al Faisal first hinted Riyadh was ready to normalize relations with Tehran in the wake of the August ceasefire in the 8-year-old Iran-Iraq war.

Homosexual seeks hearing to challenge firing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A homosexual employed by the National Security Agency was entitled to a hearing to challenge his dismissal for being a security risk, his lawyer told the Supreme Court Tuesday. But a lawyer for the federal government said the NSA followed the proper procedures in dismissing the man, known in court papers as John Doe, after he revealed to his employer that he had engaged in homosexual relations.

Safety incident prompts plant improvements

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government said Tuesday it planned to restart one of its troubled Savannah River weapons production reactors later this year, an announcement tainted by confirmation of a safety incident at a related plant in Colorado. In response to rising controversy over safety problems at the three aging Savannah River reactors, Energy Secretary John Herrington called a news conference to assert that improvements were on track at the South Carolina plant.

Antifreeze prices seen doubling this winter

DETROIT (UPI) — The price of antifreeze is expected to more than double to about $13 a gallon by this winter because of a worldwide shortage of a key ingredient, an industry trade group and a top producer said Tuesday. The sharply rising price of antifreeze, which protects a car's engine cooling system from freezing in cold weather, is due to a scarcity of ethylene, which is refined into ethylene glycol under a very expensive process.

SIUC POLICY ON SEXUAL HARASSMENT

SIUC is committed to creating and maintaining a University community free from all forms of sexual harassment.

Sexual Harassment is defined as unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, and other verbal conduct of a sexual nature when:

1. submission to, or toleration of, such conduct on or off campus is made (either explicitly or implicitly) a term or condition of instruction, employment, or participation in other University activities;
2. submission to, or rejection of, such conduct by an individual is used as a basis for evaluation in making employment or academic decision affecting the individual; or
3. such conduct has the purpose or effect of unreasonably interfering with an individual's academic or employment performance or creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive University environment.

In order to deal promptly and fairly with charges of sexual harassment and to protect the rights and dignity of individuals in the campus community, grievance procedures (informal and formal) for sexual harassment complaints have been established. For information, contact the Office of Personnel Services and Labor Relations.

Problems should be reported promptly to the University Ombudsman, Woody Hall-C302 or Personnel Services, 810 South Elizabeth Street.

WSIU-TV to air discussion on illiteracy in region

By Beth Clavin
Entertainment Editor

As many as 23 million adult Americans can't read and write at the fourth-grade level. Another 35 million have only eighth-grade reading skills.

Facts such as these have prompted PBS and WSIU-TV to air a documentary and regional feature on youth and illiteracy as part of a nationwide media campaign called "Project Literacy U.S."

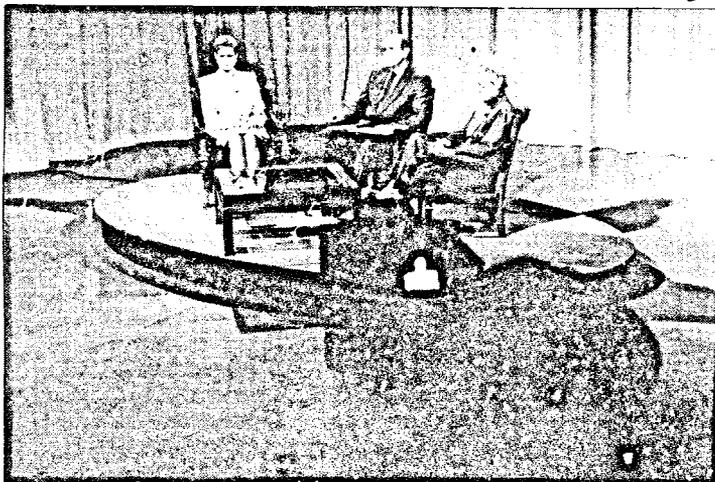

The PBS program, called "First Things First," takes a look at schools, towns and clinics engaged in the fight against illiteracy.

Following the program, WSIU will hold a panel discussion by local teachers, education experts, community agencies and parents. Don Beggs, dean of the College of Education, will lead the discussions.

THE LOCAL broadcast will be aired at 9 p.m. Oct. 19 following the hour-long PBS special.

The panel discussed the types of programs available to prevent illiteracy. Beverly Gulley, faculty member in curriculum and instruction, said Illinois has been very progressive in the prevention of the problem with more than 130 early childhood programs, but more programs need to be implemented. One-third of children start school with less than a good start, she said.

One new program will be educating parents about literacy. Linda Scales, parenting services coordinator of the Adolescent Health Center, said the center attempts to teach parents the importance of reading so they can teach their kids the value of reading.

READING NEEDS to become more of a process instead of a set of skills. Margaret Mathias, faculty member of curriculum and instruction, said.

The panel also discussed the level of parental education and family environment and its role in getting children interested in reading.

family connection" needs to be made, Hugh Muldoon, coordinator of the Literacy Connection at John A. Logan College, said. Most students have some history of lack of educational support in their family backgrounds, he said.

Gajef McNeil, youth director of Attucks Community Service Board, said cultural factors play a role in the problem and that most kids need guidance from adults to encourage them to read.

PARENTS WHO are aware of the problem worry about what they should do to interest their children in reading, when all they really need to do is to show love and support, Mathias said.

In addition to working with parents, one-on-one tutoring of the child is an important part of overcoming the problem.

Once children are identified as having a literacy problem, referrals to different programs are made to the parents, Gulley said.

Seventy-five percent of adults who come back to school are two years below their grade level literally, Joann Obis, associate dean of adult basic education at John A. Logan College, said.

"It's difficult for people to admit they can't read or need help," she said. "We try to make them feel comfortable when they call."

THE PROGRAM was summarized by Beggs, who said, "You are important if you read...Reading has an important place in your life."

Footage of local parents and their children will be added throughout the program, Rosamary Carter, faculty member in home economics education, said.

Carter, who served on the committee that planned the program, said more programs on illiteracy are needed, including taking cameras to homes and classrooms to show the interactions of parents and teachers dealing with the problem.

COLLECTIVE BARGAINING MAY BE OUR BEST CHANCE

To me it seems obvious that there is something drastically wrong with the system of governance at SIUC. There is a facade of democracy, an illusion of a self governing community of scholars. But in reality, SIUC is as bureaucratic and self-serving as any government agency or business enterprise.

In my opinion collective bargaining (which would guarantee the faculty's right to a voice in all decisions affecting the conditions of their employment) is the only way to establish a truly democratic system of governance at SIUC.

The bargaining election, which is to take place soon, may well be our best opportunity to ensure that democratic decision making will prevail, and to do something positive to restore the morale of the faculty. In the long run, it can only benefit the whole campus family, including the students. Even the administration would benefit through the continuing legislative support of a strong faculty organization.

President's donation a lesson to SIU-C

SOMETHING INTERESTING happened at the University of Missouri. President C. Peter Magrath, after receiving a $12,565 salary increase, returned the raise to the university as a donation for its library endowment fund.

Missouri, like Illinois, is facing similar funding problems for higher education.

"THE ONLY increase I am interested in is what we can get for the University system," Magrath said. Although Magrath's acceptance of the raise in the first place is questionable, his gesture is noble nonetheless.

Considering that SIU-C students are facing an 18.3 percent tuition increase for the spring semester, SIU-C administrators can learn something from Magrath.

IN SEPTEMBER, Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit received a $6,496 raise and President John Guyon received a $7,000 raise. Board Chairman Harris Rowe defended the salary increases stating that it allows the University to compete with other state universities, particularly the University of Illinois.

THE UNIVERSITY of Illinois has long been known as a wealthier university than SIU-C. Students who attend U of I mainly come from middle- to upper-class backgrounds, while students who attend SIU-C mainly come from lower- to middle-class backgrounds.

Competing with U of I would compromise SIU-C's tradition of providing quality higher education to students who might not otherwise be able to afford it. An 18.3 percent tuition increase undoubtedly will force some of these students to drop out.

STUDENTS SHOULD wonder if competing with other state universities means SIU-C must spend millions of dollars on an addition to the Recreation Center, or thousands of dollars on the maintenance of Stone House, or an embarrassing $735.77 on lambskin business card holders.

We do not recommend that Pettit and Guyon sacrifice their salary increases for the University, but we do recommend they take a closer look at University spending before approving the tuition increase.

Keeping Vince makes sense

This letter is in regards to the bill submitted by Rod Hughes favoring impeachment of fellow East Side Senator Vince Kelly on the basis of the latter's new status as a graduate student. I am in support of Vince Kelly's right to remain a USG Senator.

Before I met Vince, I already knew him through his "Vince Makes Sense" tutoring ads as well as his numerous pamphlets encouraging students to concentrate on their studies. When I finally met him, one rumor about him turned out to be correct: He is an egghead. I don't mean that in a mean sense; Vince Kelly is probably one of the most intelligent persons it has ever been my fortune to meet. But one thing that distinguishes Vince from other eggheads is the fact that he has always tempered his intellect with human compassion; the idea that it is okay to make mistakes so long as one doesn't make a habit of repeating them. Forget for the moment that he makes money from the tutoring that he does — he is helping people to understand concepts that they themselves are unable to grasp, and the fact that he was elected by the East Side to be their senator, a constituency of undergraduates, indicates to me that Vince

Kelly not only is able to represent the interests of the East Side constituency, but that he already has been looking out for those students who come to him with problems needing resolution. In my book, Vince Kelly has enormous potential to do some good in the USG senate, perhaps more good than a number of his contemporaries and predecessors.

The USG Constitution is too vague concerning the senatorial requirements, and should be revised to cover situations such as this. Vince was an undergraduate before he was elected and should not be penalized for his academic accomplishments.

Another question that springs to mind is what Mr. Hughes' real problem here is. I don't think that it really is the academic status or age of Vince, for after all, the very president of USG, Bill Hall, is himself more than 30 years old and in the 'super-senior' category. For Mr. Hughes to split hairs in a case like this suggests to me a more personal vendetta-like nature to his campaign to impeach Vince Kelly. Surely this can't be the case. Senators, or politicians for that matter, don't engage in petty vendettas. — Paul E. McDuffee.

Making sense of the tuition increase; SIU-C competes futilely with U of I

That some temporary source of funding must be found to continue operation of SIU at its present level is a bygone conclusion, but this does not seem to be the SIU administration's sole motivation in asking the Board of Trustees to enact a new tuition increase. Adoption of an 18.3 percent increase rather than a 12 percent increase is advocated by the administration on the basis of giving Illinois State Scholarship recipients a waiver for the first semester the increase is in effect. After the first semester, their tuition would then be raised to the higher level.

Why does the administration propose a tuition increase that is permanently 6.3 percent higher than they say it could be in the absence of a one-semester waiver?

An 18.3 percent increase compounding the 18.6 percent increase of Spring 1988 amounts to an increase that exceeds 40 percent in just two years. During that same two-year period, the cost of living is expected to have increased only 8 percent. This is not the first time a general tuition increase has outstripped the rate of inflation, but it may be the most remarkable. One might ask, where is the money going?

On numerous occasions, Chancellor Pettit has referred to the fact that SIU-C alone shares with the University of Illinois the distinction of being an Illinois University that is rated as a research institution by the Carnegie Foundation. In his October 4, 1988 presentation to the Illinois Board of Higher Education, Chancellor Pettit states:

"I do not intend to suggest that all public university tuitions should be equal. But I do contend that it is in the public interest to establish permissible upper limits, and that there ought to be an acceptable range of variation, at least among institutions with similar Carnegie classifications."

He makes this statement only after referring to SIU's long-standing tradition of providing access to an opportunity for higher education. Here, access is the operative word, for in increasing tuition to the levels proposed, that access will be denied to too many people.

Graduate and undergraduate tuitions have already been increased nearly 220 percent since 1976. The cost of living has increased only 106 percent during the same period. Such an increase is hardly in keeping with, at least in my understanding, the idealistic verve of Dr. Delyte Morris, who presided over the transformation of Southern Illinois Normal University from a small teacher's college, with an enrollment of three to five thousand in the 1950s, to the major international institution that SIU-C is today, with an enrollment near 25,000.

That the administration of SIU should look with jealousy at the University of Illinois should not surprise many. That they should seek to become another U of I at the cost of providing access to higher education for people of all backgrounds should offend most. This closing door is not in keeping with the ideals President Morris carried with him to the General Assembly when he persuaded them to finance the construction of this fine University.

SIU-C is arguably the last institution in the state of Illinois where anyone, regardless of background, who really wants to achieve an higher education, may attain educational advancement. SIU-C is still an open door, but the door may be closing.

I knew a woman who was registered nurse. She worked in Carbondale and while she worked, she earned a bachelor of science degree in physiology. Afterwards, she was admitted to the SIU medical school. Both brilliant and motivated, she in large part supported herself through medical school as she continued nursing. The door was open to her. If tuition had been 43 percent higher, the door probably never would have been open; she would probably not be a physician today.

Continued access to higher education for students and potential students of all backgrounds cannot be more expensive than the advancement of SIU as a research institution. If the two goals remaining accessible while becoming a really first-rate research institution are viewed as mutually exclusive, then faculty and students are pitted against each other, and the students lose.

Already, I have spoken with several students who are questioning how they can attend SIU if the increase is approved. Their dream of a college degree has become a door that is closing in their faces, but this need not be the case. If the Board of Trustees will enact only whatever tuition increase they deem absolutely unavoidable, and if they will enact it only as a temporary measure, then even those who are dislodged from the educational community will have the hope of renewed opportunity. — Vince Kelly, graduate student in linguistics and east side senator.

Shopping 'til you drop unnecessary, old clothes eventually become stylish

I STILL haven't figured out why it is such a big deal that Bloomingdale's, the New York department store, has opened a branch in Chicago.

The newspapers, TV stations and disk jockeys have become giddy over the arrival of the store.

And the silliness may have peaked when a gushy female reporter from The New York Times called and asked me to describe my own excitement.

I explained to her that while certain activities excite me, most of which I would not describe to a respectable woman, the opening of a Bloomingdale's store is not one of them.

FURTHERMORE, I said, this is not Wyoming. We already have enough famous, high-priced stores in Chicago to satisfy the self-indulgence of every coke-sniffing pork-belly trader in town, as well as their wives, mistresses or any other sex objects of their choice.

Not easily discouraged, the New York reporter asked: "Are you going to go shop at Bloomingdale's?"

"No," I said.
"Why not?"
"Because I don't shop."
"Everybody shops," she said.

"Not me. I do not shop."
"Then how do you get your clothes?"

AN INTERESTING question. So I explained.

About five years ago, I was in my closet looking for something to wear that didn't have gravy stains on the lapels.

As I searched the cluttered room, I realized that I had enough garments and shoes to open a men's shop.

That's because I never throw any clothes away. I have suits, shoes, jackets, slacks and shirts that are more than 25 years old.

Mike Royko

Tribune Media Services

Some of the trousers are worn thin in the seat. But if you wear shorts that match the trouser color, few will notice. And many of the jacket sleeves have holes at the elbows. But you can get a leather patch sewn on for a few bucks, then pose as a professor of literature.

MOST OF THE shoes have holes in the bottom. But in dry weather it doesn't matter. And for winter I have Luigi, my neighborhood shoemaker, give a few pair a rehab.

As I went through this ancient but vast wardrobe, counting each item, digging some out from under old luggage, something remarkable occurred to me.

After making a count, I called an actuary and asked him how long I could expect to live. He said that based on my personal habits, a few minutes or maybe an hour. But based on his statistical tables, a few more decades.

I did mental calculations: How many shirts per year, how many shoes, how many slacks, sweaters, jackets and soon.

And I realized that even if I lived to a ripe, even rancid, old age, I would never again have to buy another garment.

I EVEN SET aside my least shiny suit and a shirt with a sturdy collar button to be buried in. (However, that won't be necessary, because I have since redone my will, instructing my wife to stuff my remains in a Hefty bag, and call the ward sanitation superintendent for a special pickup.)

One of the benefits of having all these old clothes is that every couple of years, some of them come back in style. If I could find my original Zoot Suit, bought when I was 17 from Smokey Joe's on Halsted Street, I'd be a sensation in the Hard Rock Cafe.

On the other hand, one of the disadvantages is that I frequently look like a bum. However, there are advantages to that disadvantage. For one thing, if you look as rumpled and frayed as I usually do, you're less likely to be mugged. In fact, when I walk on a street, people who see me approaching sometimes cross to the other side, fearing I might mug them.

ANYWAY, I explained all this to the New York reporter. Being clever, she said: "Yes, but what about socks and undergarments. You have to shop for them."

Not so. My wife buys them for me, although my favorite brands are becoming harder to find with the decline of Army-Navy Surplus stores.

Sounding amazed, the reporter said: "You're the first person I've ever talked to who never shops. I can't believe it."

So I told her that I wasn't being entirely truthful. I admitted that I sometimes make purchases at a Salvation Army resale shop.

"Ah," the reporter said, "you do shop after all."

Of course, I said. I have loved ones and I have to get them something for Christmas and birthdays.

Unionization is a step backwards

The unions have been making some pretty fanciful claims, but the latest one goes completely into the realm of fantasy. "Thirty years ago, shared governance was a reality on many university campuses." Certainly not on any I know about. Here, thirty years ago, President Delyte W. Morris ran the show with virtually unbridled authority. He used to enjoy pointing out how magnanimous he was to permit faculty to choose their textbooks. Deans were instructed to rule, not to reason with faculty, and, at least in most departments, chairs were real bosses.

The fact is that we have come a very long way in achieving genuine faculty participation in governance. The Faculty Senate and the Graduate Council, together with bodies like the Budget Advisory Committee, have a real and effective role. Tenure and promotion policy, the allocation of salary increase money, sabbatical rules, etc., are subject to action by the faculty representative bodies.

We really have faculty participation in governance, and what we have is much preferable to unionization. In unionized collective bargaining, the union bureaucracy and its lawyers would negotiate with the University bureaucracy and its lawyers, and the only role for the rest of us would be to vote yes or no on the contract. That would be a most regrettable step backwards. — William S. Hardenbergh, professor, political science.

Transit drivers should drive more carefully

Recently, while walking toward Lincoln Drive near Life Science II, I couldn't help but notice a little red car with squealing tires, veering into the LSI parking lot. I was amazed that somebody would be driving that fast in an area with so many pedestrians. On top of being in a high pedestrian use area and driving at a speed obviously too fast (since the tires were squealing), this was a University Transit vehicle.

I have seen University Transit vehicles moving in dangerous fashions on several occasions. How could these reckless drivers be expected to safely transport passengers? I know that if I needed to use the Transit Service I would be leery of who was going to pick me up.

Although your boss is not sitting in the car with you, I wish you would take the responsibility of doing your job in a respectable manner. I am sure there are other people, like me, who don't like to see the University's vehicle driven without care. If you think about it, speeding over the very short distance that you drive is not going to save very much time. Please, take this into consideration next time you get behind the wheel. — Mark S. Nelson, senior, zoology.

SIU-C woman chosen for Air Force pilot training

By Scott Perry
Staff Writer

WHEN DEBBIE Goodwin was a junior at Woodstock High School, she had a dream of someday being a pilot in the United States Air Force.

The goal looked hard to achieve, but like the Air Force motto says, Goodwin "Aimed High."

Goodwin, 20, a junior in exercise science, is the first female chosen from the University to take part in an Air Force pilot training course since women were allowed to compete for pilot positions in 1979.

Goodwin, a member of the University's Air Force ROTC program, is one of 1,000 pilot hopefuls throughout the United States chosen to attend pilot training school. Only 26 of those 1,000 trainees are women.

"I KNEW I wanted to be a pilot, so I made sure I knew what was going on," Goodwin said.

Goodwin has been dedicated to her goal and said the secret to her success is "just being one of the guys."

"I really didn't separate myself (from the males)," she said.

Goodwin described what she has done as "reaking ground."

"Females don't see the military as a way to fly professionally," she said. Goodwin attributed the lack of females seeking pilot positions to tradition.

"Now everyone knows you can do it and it is possible. It does happen to someone from SIU," she said.

GOODWIN ALSO has "broken ground" in other areas. She is the first female drill team commander at the University and is the first woman on drill team member to throw a weapon instead of just marching.

Col. Walter Schrecker, director of aerospace studies, described Goodwin as a "smart, articulate and gutsy girl."

"I'm ecstatic that she was chosen," he said. "It's great for the University and she's a great choice for the Air Force."

To be considered for the training position, Goodwin had to pass the Air Force Officer Qualifying test.

THE TEST takes into account several characteristics of the person including academic, pilot and navigator aptitude.

The score on the test determines whether or not the applicant has the aptitude to be a pilot.

Goodwin was confident of her chances of passing the test, but said she didn't want to become too confident in case she didn't make it.

"When I knew the test results were out, I kept calling the office to find out if I passed. But they said they couldn't give out the information because they didn't know how my commander wanted to handle it."

That same evening during a leadership laboratory, Schrecker gave the results.

SIU-C Air Force ROTC cadet Debbie Goodwin sits in the pilot's seat, where she hopes to be after completion of an Air Force pilot training course.

GOODWIN SAID she was nervous because she knew he would either say "You were really close. Good try" or "Congratulations, you got it."

When she heard she was chosen, Goodwin said she "wanted to scream."

Goodwin said she will be making the military her life.

"If I were to drop out of the military, I can't imagine what I would do."

The type of plane Goodwin will fly will be determined by how well she does during her training.

Flying will be a new experience for Goodwin, who says she has no piloting experience.

Goodwin was sure that she didn't want to fly fighter jets even if women were allowed to someday pilot them.

"BEING A pilot is demanding enough. I don't want to put that extra pressure on myself."

Asked if she has been treated any differently since being chosen for the training, Goodwin said everyone has been very supportive, but no real changes have been made.

David Gilmore, chairman of Cinema and Photography, said that a program called Gallery 1107 is being affected by the lack of funds.

Gallery 1107 offers students and the community a place to exhibit photography, but the program is being limited with the shortage of the other than salary funds, Gilmore said.

He said the program's funds were cut "fairly severely," and that the program can't pay as many people to bring in exhibits.

Gary Kolb, associate professor in Cinema and Photography, said that a program he is working on called Southern Illinois Photographic Archives is being restricted by the budget.

The Southern Illinois School Press Association has been effected by the limited budget.

The Southern Illinois Photographic Archives will supply photographs of the area that can be used by the media or for personal and historical research, Kolb said.

"I would like to see SIPA get off the ground. I think it could have some direct effect," he said.

The areas Kolb said he is facing restrictions are with space, equipment, material and support.

"Unless I get some space and support, it (SIPA) won't be," Kolb said.

The Southern Illinois School Press Association is another program that has been affected, at least, indirectly by the limited budget.

The program provides high school yearbook and newspaper editors with consulting services, contests for writers, artists, and photographers, and the Golden Dozen Yearbook competition.

Walter B. Jaehning, director of the School of Journalism, said the program was developed when the faculty was larger, but the faculty decrease has resulted in less time devoted to it.

The fall workshop offered by the program has been cancelled, but one may be offered in the spring, Jaehning said.

However, not all community service programs have been affected by the limited budget.

Marvin Kleinau, chairman of the Department of Speech Communications, said that programs such as Scholastic Hi-Q aren't enormously affected by the University budget because they are flexible.

Scholastic Hi-Q is a television game show where high school students compete by answering educational questions, Larry Knowles, Scholastic Hi-Q coordinator, said.

Deputy City Clerk Glendda J. Davis said this is the busiest day of registration she had seen. But she added this is her first presidential election in the city clerk's office.

City Clerk Janet Vaughnt was out of town, Davis said.

"I would imagine every presidential election it is this busy," she said.

Police Blotter

A residential burglary occurred sometime between Monday and Tuesday on North Oakland Avenue, Carbondale Police said.

Lennie Foulks, 40, of 306 N. Oakland Ave. reported that someone entered his locked residence sometime between 8:30 a.m. Monday and before 9:15 a.m. Tuesday, police said. Police said Foulks reported $175 in currency was stolen.

"SIU is the centerpiece of life in Carbondale as well as being the focal point of Southern Illinois," she said.

The Poshard campaign has been reluctant to meet with the Republican candidate at the University, saying it "gives an unfair advantage to Kelley."

Kelley is a professor at the Law School.

Wilson, using the same logic, said a gathering at John A. Logan would give the same unfair advantage to his candidate.

"Logan is in Glenn's backyard," Wilson said.

But Gail Klam, organizer of the forum, said she was able to convince Wilson there was no other site in Carbondale as suitable as the University.

The forum is open to the public, but tickets must be obtained, Klam said.

Free tickets can be picked up at the Student Programming Council office on the third floor of the Student Center.

questioning, said it was probable that Soviet KGB agents were among those gaining access to sensitive areas.

"I'm sure they are," Richard Du Val, deputy assistant secretary for operations in the department's Office of Defense Programs said of Soviet visitors. "I don't know of any, but given the system we are describing, I'm sure they are."

Du Val attributed the failure to obtain background checks to lengthy delays in getting responses from the FBI and CIA, but that explanation did not sit well with Committee Chairman John Glenn, D-Ohio.

Glenn said the extent of the security lapses were "almost impossible to believe."

"We have people out there saying, 'We have these procedures but, well, we'll let Vladimir in without proper clearance because it takes too long.'" Glenn said. "I am just amazed."

The report focused on security procedures at the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory in California and the Los Alamos National Laboratory and Sandia National Laboratories in New Mexico, which conduct top secret weapons research as well as unclassified work on advanced energy technology.

The Energy Department should have requested FBI or CIA background checks on 176 of 181 visitors from communist nations who visited laboratories randomly picked by the GAO, the investigators said.

U.N. model gives students international spirit

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

Delegates representing more than 50 countries from around the world have been congregating on campus since 1957 at the SIU Model United Nations General Assembly.

The model United Nations has been around for decades to simulate a United Nations General Assembly meeting, adviser William Turley said.

The group is designed to help students understand international problems and the

"The U.N. has lost a lot of respect during the Reagan Administration that is just now being revived."

—Frank Klingberg

problems between international and American students on campus, emeritus professor Frank Klingberg said.

Klingberg advised the group from 1957 to 1975 and 1980 to 1987. He is the fiscal adviser for the group.

"Since the assembly was designed mostly for American students, they can represent any country of their choice without being from that country," Turley said.

The top delegations are sent to the Midwest Model U.N. session every February in St. Louis. Delegations from the regional session can be sent to the National Model U.N. session.

University delegations have been sent to St. Louis two or three times in the past 17 years, Turley said.

Klingberg said he has seen a significant change in the attitudes of students toward international politics since he has been associated with the group.

The group was disbanded in 1975 partly in response to the Vietnam War, but there was a renewed interest in international relations in 1980, Klingberg said.

Finance chairwoman Martha Dilg said the group discusses international policies so they can learn from it.

The Model U.N. meets at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Student Center Ohio Room.

'Punchline' seriously bombs

By Kathleen DeBo
Staff Writer

"Punchline" is a serious film about laughter. The performances are good and the jokes are effective, but the ending is hokey and sexist.

Lilah Kryssick, played by Sally Field, chooses between her traditional role as mother and her career.

The plot is as old as Doris Day and as recent as "Baby Boom." Lilah wants to be a comedian, her husband wants her to stay home, and her friend Steven, played by Tom Hanks, wants her to mother him.

Steven criticizes her husband for repressing her but Steven himself is just a child wanting her attention.

Film Review

At one point her husband actually says he wants "a wife." That is one of the worst cliches in film.

Lilah reconciles with her husband, wins a shot on the Tonight Show and gives it up so that Steven can go. That is one of the worst endings in film.

Lilah walks away saying "I've got plenty of time." Wrong. In the entertainment business, timing is crucial. The truth is, she just blew a huge career opportunity that will not come again.

The only original aspect of the film is that the woman's career is comedy.

The film sets up a very tense drama about competition but then takes the easy way out.

The whole point of competition is that someone wins and someone loses. It is unfortunate, but highly emotional and a good subject for films. However, someone evidently felt a film about comedians had to have a happy ending.

The best parts of the film are the stand-up routines in which professional comedians are featured.

The acting, comedic and dramatic, is good. Unfortunately, the plot and the message is insulting to the audience.

"Punchline" is hyped as a serious, emotionally biting, realistic film about the competition for laughs.

Senator could be impeached by USG

By Brad Bushaw
Staff Writer

A bill to impeach Sen. Vince "Makes Sense" Kelly will come before the full senate of the Undergraduate Student Government tonight.

The senate will decide at 7 p.m. in Student Center Ballroom D whether Kelly, a graduate student, is eligible to represent undergraduate students at the University.

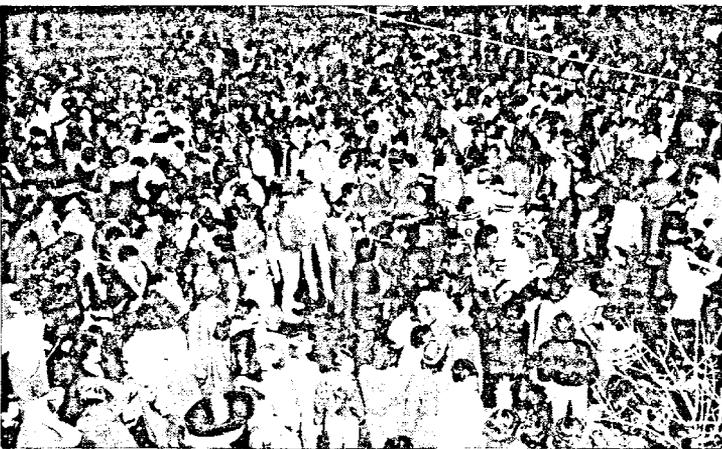

Kelly said he was elected as an undergraduate student in April 1988, but accepted a graduate assistantship in Linguistics because of financial difficulties.

His graduate student status may conflict with the qualification standards stated in the USG constitution, which require a senator to be a registered undergraduate.

Before the impeachment proceedings, Kelly will present a resolution that will urge the SIU Board of Trustees to examine the impact the proposed tuition hike will have on people from disadvantaged backgrounds before voting on the matter. Kelly's resolution will be made in addition to a resolution of USG opposition to the proposed tuition hike.

Bills to establish a financial aid commission and remove a 2.0 grade point average required of all senators will be presented to the full senate for amendment to the USG constitution.

The senate also will instruct executive appointees of the Student Health Policy board to begin researching the feasibility of expanded dental health services on campus.

Student group organizes 3rd Halloween safety campaign

By Miguel Alba
Staff Writer

With the Halloween weekend festivities approaching, members of a student group are busy organizing this year's safety tent for the Halloween Safety Campaign.

In its third year, the Halloween Safety Campaign, designed by the Public Relations Student Society of America, deals with making Halloween as safe an event as possible for participants.

The safety tent, located on Grand Avenue near the women's softball field, was added last year to the campaign.

Students who have had too much to drink, have been separated from friends in the crowd, are in need of medical attention, or need a ride home, in addition to other aid, can get help at the safety tent.

Katherine Lober, president of the SIU-C chapter of PRSSA, said the idea of having a safety campaign was originally presented to the Halloween Core Committee, made up of community representatives, in response to the high incidences of arrests.

and people being hurt by thrown beer cans. "The event was out of control," she said.

"The first year (1986) we did a teaser campaign, spreading fliers, posters, and putting ads in the D.E. saying 'S.H. S.H.', which stood for 'save Halloween - safe Halloween,'" Lober said. "We added the tent last year to provide a tangible element to the campaign."

Edward Buerger, a University representative on the Halloween Core Committee, said the safety tent provides a focal point where students can go to get help without being harassed.

"PRSSA is doing an outstanding job," Buerger said. "They represent the student body well."

Buerger said the University does not encourage its students, or anyone else, to attend the festivities, but so long as the event exists, the University's involvement will be to enhance its safety aspect. The University has donated $2,500 to the safety campaign according to the 1988 Halloween Core Committee budget report.

According to a report issued by the Carbondale Police Department on arrests made during the 1987 Halloween weekend, arrests for offenses other than alcohol violations fell by 44 percent in comparison to 1986 statistics.

The report also states that arrests for reckless conduct and assault or battery decreased by 64 percent, from 69 percent in 1986 to 25 percent in 1987.

The report also states that of those 248 arrested during the 1987 weekend, only 53, 21.4 percent were SIU-C students. Of those 53 arrests, 44 were for alcohol violations.

Lober, commenting on the police report figures, said SIU-C students should keep an eye on their visiting friends. "It's your party," she said. "Don't let your friends ruin it."

Both Lober and Buerger agree students are becoming more responsible in their actions, but that there is always a possibility of injury when many people come together for such an event.

The safety tent will be in service Friday and Saturday evenings of the Halloween weekend.

IBM gives University big discount on upgrade of computer system

The University received a $727,564 discount from IBM on a new computer upgrade because of the University's reputation as a research institute, Charles Hindersman, vice president for financial affairs, said.

Lawrence Hengehold, director of Computing Affairs, said the University was ranked among the top 100 research universities nationwide by the Carnegie Foundation.

The purchase is the single largest acquisition planned in the University's five-year computing plan, Hengehold said.

Hindersman said, "We couldn't have afforded this computer without that grant."

He said the University will be pay $2,792,596 in annual installments for the new equipment.

'Voices of Inspiration' seeking financial support

By Wayne Wallace
Staff Writer

The Voices of Inspiration are hitting sour notes at the bank.

"USG financial support just isn't what it used to be," according to Debbie Onyewuchi, coordinator for the black culture choir.

Voices of Inspiration is a musical, drama group that has been on the "U-C campus for 10 years.

Onyewuchi said that if the USG passes them over again this year, the choir will barely have enough money to pay bills, much less put on shows.

Despite limited University support, Onyewuchi said that Voices will continue to sing this semester. She hopes next week's auditions will rejuvenate enthusiasm in the PSO.

Singers, musicians, dancers and actors are sought for the 88-89 season. Tryouts are 6:30 to 8 p.m., Oct. 19 through 20, in Altgeld Hall's upstairs choir room.

"No one will be turned away. We want you no matter what instrument you play, even if it's the spoons," Onyewuchi said, laughing, "and if you can't sing, we'll stand you in the back of the choir. Just don't sing too loud."

Voices of Inspiration performs in a wide range of musical styles, but "no rock," Onyewuchi said.

Although willing to experiment with different types of inspiring songs, the choir's main goal is to keep traditional music alive in the black culture.

Slave spirituals, black anthems, and African music are all vital components of black culture, according to Onyewuchi.

She said that part of the choir's financial trouble stems from a misunderstanding of the group's purpose.

Onyewuchi said that University backers, such as the USG, have the preconception that Voices of Inspiration is limited in its appeal to black churches.

"Therefore," she said, "they view us as a religious organization, and we don't get the money."

"We are a culturally motivated organization. We educate audiences about black folk music. And yes, part of our heritage is based in spirituals. Gospel music is our roots."

Membership in Voices is not limited to Christians, blacks, or even students, Onyewuchi said.

"We're open to anyone interested in black culture."

Onyewuchi said she wants Voices to be an organization SIU-C can be proud of. With proper support, she feels that the choir can be used to help attract freshmen to the University.

Brenda Major, faculty sponsor for the group, agreed that Voices is not up to the standards it used to be, recalling the numerous concerts and dramas performed in the early 1980's under the direction of Charles Law.

One of Major's goals is to get the 50-voice choir back on its feet, performing on a continuing basis.

Onyewuchi said some invitations to perform have to be turned down. Because of insufficient funds last year, the choir missed an opportunity to perform on local Chicago television.

However, Voices will be able to take one major field trip this semester. On Thanksgiving break, the choir will represent SIU-C at the National Black College Choir Workshop in Atlanta.

Prof: Crop promising for farmers

By Loria Roberson
Staff Writer

Canola, a variety of rapeseed high in unsaturated fat, may be one of the most promising double-cropping alternatives for farmers in Southern Illinois, a University professor said.

"Canola has the potential to open up large opportunities in overseas markets for farmers in Southern Illinois," said Donald J. Stucky, professor of plant and soil science.

Stucky said worldwide demand for canola oil has been growing steadily for a number of years and about 30 million acres are grown annually in Canada, northern Europe, northern India and China.

Mike Schmidt, assistant scientist in the Plant and Soil Science Department, said each grain of canola contains 40 percent oil and 20 percent meal. "Rapeseed is typically low in saturated fat and high in unsaturated fat which is what you want in your diet," he said.

Schmidt said canola is suitable for human consumption and can also be used for animal feed. "Puritan Oil is 100 percent canola oil and some industries use the oil as a lubricant," he said.

Even though yield potential is lower for canola than for wheat, the selling price for canola is higher than wheat, Schmidt said.

The average-per-acre yield for canola is 40 to 50 bushels and the statewide average for wheat is 43 bushels per acre. Current market prices for canola average from $5 to $6 per bushel and wheat averages $3 to $4 per bushel.

Stucky said that nothing goes without risk, and canola is no exception. "We have seen some problems with canola production during harvest season," he said. "The plant often tends to shatter. The pods become dry and actually open up, causing seed loss before or during harvesting."

Canola must be planted in early fall, Stucky said, or possibly just after early soybeans or corn plants. Generally, he said, canola is planted about one month ahead of winter wheat.

Stucky said that Midwestern farmers currently lead the Midwest in canola production, with a generation of nearly 10,000 acres last year. He said Illinois ranks with Indiana and Ohio with their production of about 1,000 acres last year.

Dukakis, Bush step up attacks as debate nears

United Press International

Democrat Michael Dukakis ridiculed Republican George Bush for a "don't worry, be happy" attitude Tuesday and Bush attacked Dukakis as a "feel nothing" and a demagogue who has flip-flopped on U.S. trade protectionism.

The Massachusetts governor declared the presidential race a "dead heat" going into Thursday's second and final debate of the general election campaign with the vice president and said he is happy the contest is still close.

"As a challenger, that's a good thing," Dukakis said on NBC's "Today" program. "I'm encouraged in the last couple of weeks we've made up a lot of ground and we're feeling good about that."

Both candidates were leaving for California Tuesday to get in place and begin full-time preparation for their 8 p.m. nationally televised debate from the campus of the University of California-Los Angeles.

Before leaving Boston, Dukakis attacked GOP "compacency" in an address to Tufts University students in Medford, Mass., and outlined a program he said would make America No. 1 in science and technology.

Dukakis said his "INVEST" program in education, science and technology would increase the number of teachers, boost science offerings in public schools and create "centers of excellence" to promote new technologies and train workers.

No price tag was placed on the new program.

"George Bush is satisfied about today and complacent about tomorrow," Dukakis said.

Citing the title of Bobby McFerrin's popular song, often played by the Bush campaign aboard Air Force Two, Dukakis chided, "The Republican theme song ought to be 'Don't Worry, Be Happy.'"

"I want us to be happy," the governor said, "but I want us to be concerned."

Dukakis joked that his campaign's "October surprise" was last Friday's speech against foreign ownership that he delivered in a Missouri automotive plant that, he later learned, was owned by an Italian holding company.

"I am not against foreign ownership," Dukakis said. "I'm against the policies that make us dependent. I'm against a 'fire sale' of America. I don't want to settle for a future where our children work for foreign owners, pay rent to foreign owners and owe their future to foreign owners."

Bush, stopping in Seattle before going to Los Angeles, attacked Dukakis for his statements on U.S. trade policy last Friday.

In an address prepared for delivery to students at Seattle University, Bush said, "Frankly, I've been surprised at my opponent's recent turn to demagoguery, protectionist demagoguery."

Bush charged Dukakis is trying to stoke fears about America's place in the global economy because he "needs an issue, and he's willing to scare people to find it. So like the Know Nothing Party a century before him, he's turned to fear of foreigners."

"He's not a Know Nothing; he knows better. But perhaps he's a 'feel nothing' candidate or maybe, with the latest flip-flop, he's become a 'believe nothing' candidate," Bush said.

During the Democratic presidential primary campaign, Dukakis had criticized Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., a rival candidate, for espousing protectionism.

Detective's fingerprinting aids local police cases

By Mark Barnst
Staff Writer

Detective Paul Echols is a matchmaker in an unusual sense.

As a crime scene specialist for the Carbondale Police, Echols deals with crime scenes that require extra work to find a suspect by detecting fingerprints and matching those prints with a name.

Sometimes fingerprints are all the police have to link a crime with a person and other times the prints add to the evidence that leads to a conviction, Echols said.

At a crime scene, part of a patrolman's job is to view the scene, note what took place and try to find any evidence that was left behind by the intruder, Echols said.

"A LOT of the credit goes to the patrolmen," Echols said. Usually they are the first ones at the scene who know what to look for, he said.

All patrolmen are trained to "lift prints" at a crime scene, and they decide whether looking for prints would be necessary in certain crimes, Echols said. Lifting prints is transferring a print to a surface that can be taken from the scene to police headquarters.

Fingerprints played an important role in police investigations in a rape case and a residential burglary. Although not yet brought before the courts, a suspect was charged with an aggravated criminal sexual assault and a residential burglary within a week because police were able to match the suspect's prints to the two crimes.

DETECTIVE LYNN Trella, a follow-up investigator for the Carbondale Police, dealt with the cases.

In the first case, someone had stolen some things from a house while a woman living there was at home. The woman did not see the intruder, Trella said.

Prints were lifted from a window at the scene. Trella then compiled a list of fewer than 10 known burglars and asked Echols to see if any of the prints matched.

None of the prints matched, Trella said.

In the second case, a woman reported someone had entered her home and sexually assaulted her. Fingerprints were lifted from the scene, but Trella had no clues about the suspect. The intruder had prevented the victim from seeing who her attacker was, Trella said.

WITHIN 24 hours the police had a suspect linked to both cases.

"Through the great work of patrolmen who responded to a prowler call we were able to match the suspect's prints to those two major cases," Trella said.

Someone called the police and said a prowler was in the neighborhood. Police responded to the call.

No arrests were made at the time, but the suspect prowler voluntarily came in, and fingerprints and photographs were taken, Trella said. Echols compared the prowler's prints to the prints lifted at the scenes, and they matched.

The suspect prowler has been charged with the other crimes, but has not been convicted.

ECHOLS HAS been with the Carbondale Police Department since 1981. Of his five years as a patrolman, he has spent three-and-a-half years as a crime scene technician. He has been the department's crime scene specialist for the last two years.

Fingerprints fall into three categories: latent, patent and plastic.

"Latent prints are generally invisible and you must use external means to view them," Echols said.

Police use dust, light and chemicals to view latent prints.

The police usually detect latent prints with a black, carbon powder. Sometimes prints can be viewed by light. Echols said fingerprints can be seen when light is showing on the surface from a certain direction. And certain chemicals will expose invisible prints.

PATENT PRINTS are left when a substance such as blood or paint is on the fingers of an intruder, Echols said.

Plastic prints occur when a person handles something such as a bar of soap or window putty. Essentially, plastic prints are left in pliable material, Echols said.

When Echols arrives at a crime scene a lot of work has already been completed. If the patrolmen were unable to find prints, Echols goes to work.

First, the crime scene is photographed from several angles because it is easier to explain the surroundings by a picture than to describe important elements of the scene verbally to other investigators or others involved in court proceedings, Echols said. Sketches also are made of the area.

SECOND, WHEN prints are found, they must be marked and preserved. Echols photographs prints before he lifts them to get a permanent record and in case they do not lift well or become smudged in the process.

Third, all evidence, whether it be fingerprints, hair or blood, must be collected and preserved.

Echols noted that sometimes victims become upset when police officers do not dust for prints in minor crimes, but they should realize the officers know what they are doing.

When people become victims of crime, they should keep in mind what to do, Echols said.

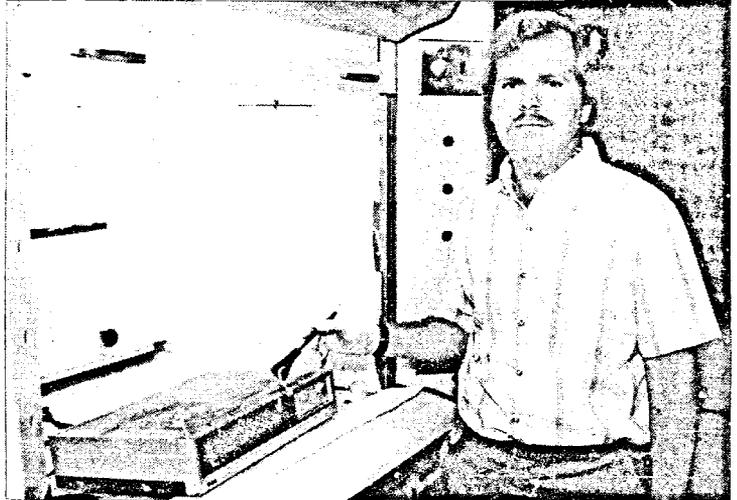

If victims know someone has entered their residence, they should not enter the residence because the intruder still might be there, Echols said.

AFTER POLICE reach the scene, the victim should not touch anything and should note what is out of place or if anything unusual is in the area, such as something the intruder left behind, Echols said.

Echols said crime victims have to depend on the officers conducting the investigation.

Finding evidence in a crime is a long process and investigators have to be observant, persistent and patient to see the end result, Echols said.

"The officers make educated decisions and know what to look for. You don't always end up with evidence you can use. It's not always there," Echols said.

German to play classics

By Wayne Wallace
Staff Writer

West German pianist Stephan Moller will perform at 8 p.m. tonight in Shryock Auditorium as the opening of the Beethoven Society for Pianists concert season.

Moller, who performed on campus in 1986 as part of his first North American tour, has been brought back to Carbondale by the Society for an evening of sonatas.

Best known for his faithful interpretations of Beethoven, the 33-year-old classical pianist will also perform selections from Mozart and Schubert.

According to Moller, many critics were roused when he first burst on the scene in the early 1980s because they considered his versions of the Beethoven classics as radical.

"Actually," Moller said, "my interpretations are based on the music itself; exactly how I feel Beethoven meant it to be played when he wrote it."

Moller said that some of the so-called "traditional" interpretations handed down do not effectively represent Beethoven's original structure.

In 1986, Moller toured Germany performing and lecturing on Beethoven's last six sonatas, music that Moller calls "some of the most fascinating works I know."

In addition to European tours, Moller has also appeared as guest pianist with the Bad Reichenhall Philharmonic in a performance series of the five Beethoven concertos.

Adapting Beethoven's works to a computer-supported grand piano is Moller's most recent innovation. This elaborate process entails the recording of key and hammer movements onto a computer disc.

"The electronic memory captures every nuance," Moller said. The computer can then play back the music note for note in the same manner as a player piano.

Stephan Moller will perform at 8 tonight at Shryock Auditorium as the Beethoven Society for Pianists opens its fifth concert season. Moller, from West Germany, performed on campus in 1986 as part of his first North American tour.

While the computer is reproducing this authentic sound on a Bosendorfer 290-SE concert grand, Moller can sit down at the same instrument and play a counter melody.

This technique has assisted Moller in performing Beethoven's "Grosse Fuge," or piano four hands, without the aid of another pianist.

Although the critics have been hesitant to praise this evolutionary advancement, Moller views computerization as "an extension of the possibilities for the pianist."

The School of Music does not yet have a computer system adaptable to the concert stage, but other stops along Moller's worldwide tours have given him the opportunity to put his disc to good use.

Moller will remain in Carbondale for a few extra days to work with several of the University's piano students.

His next concert date is in North Carolina.

Beattie hopes that SIU-C will help sponsor a regional tour for Moller the next time the Beethoven Society brings him to the United States. Moller agreed, stating his wish to perform in the Western states also.

Moller said he enjoys performing in America because of the intense competitive spirit here. He also admires the freedom we have to interpret music more freely.

Admission to the concert is $2 for the public and $1 for students. Society members and patrons will get in free.

A reception will be held immediately following the concert in the balcony lobby.

Distinguished pianist Konrad Wolff, 81, will give the Society's next recital on Nov. 18.

Friends say Tyson was drugged on TV

NEW YORK (UPI) — Friends of Mike Tyson said Tuesday they believe the prizefighter was encouraged by his estranged wife, Robin Givens, and her mother to take prescription drugs before a network television interview, making him appear docile and apathetic.

Givens, 33, who filed for divorce in California Friday, was reported as saying she wants Tyson back, but the champion said "absolutely not."

Givens is seeking half of the millions the 22-year-old former Brooklyn street kid earned during their rocky, eight-month marriage.

Tyson told the New York Post Tuesday he took the tranquilizer Thorazine and lithium, prescribed for manic-depression, before the Sept. 30 ABC-TV broadcast of "20-20" with Barbara Walters. He said Givens and her mother, Ruth Roper, gave it to him through a friend.

Tyson said the drugs made him appear lethargic during the interview, in which Givens described his violent rages and said life with him was "torment ... pure hell ... worse than anything I could possibly imagine."

Tyson said the drugs were prescribed by a psychiatrist, Dr. Henry McCurtis, and pushed on him by Givens and Roper. McCurtis was out of town and could not be reached for comment.

"They wanted him to make sure I took it," Tyson said. "But I didn't want to take it and usually I didn't. Now I am back to being my normal self, and everything is fine."

Friends said they believed Tyson's story.

Cazville Ewald, 83, who raised Tyson in upstate Catskill, said the prizefighter appeared drugged during interview.

"He just stared into space, without giving any reaction when the woman was disgracing him in front of the national public," Ewald told United Press International Tuesday. "He would have to have some reaction unless he was drugged."

Hank Williams Jr. dominates again

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Hank Williams Jr. snubbed for decades in the shadow of his legendary father, reigned supreme Tuesday over country music with Nashville's top prize in his trophy chest for the second straight year.

"The longer we wait the sweeter the sugar. This sugar is the sweetest," Williams said after dominating Monday night's 22nd annual Country Music Association Awards show.

Williams was named Entertainer of the Year for the second straight time, but it was his award for best album for "Born to Boogie" that pleased him most. For years, the country music establishment viewed the son of Hank Williams with suspicion because of his rowdy, high-voltage music and never honored him for an album.

"I made 56 albums over, good God, 25 years or so, and I finally got an award for musical accomplishment. That means a lot," Williams said backstage at the Grand Ole Opry House.

Dr. Buzz's Advice To The Drug Worn

A weekly columnist by the name of Dr. Buzz answers your questions.
Dear Buzzzzzzzzz,
I heard that it takes 30 days of abstinence prior to a urine test to show negative for THC. I also heard that drinking vinegar the day before a urine test will foil the results for THC. What's the straight "poop"? Doc?

Signed,
Moe Howard
Dear Moe,
Glad to hear that you're still out there and are interested in knowing the facts about T/C testing. As an average it takes the body 21 days to excrete THC and related fat-soluble chemicals from a single marijuana cigarette. However, if one is a regular smoker (2 joints per week for 6 months or more), the fatty areas of the body are saturated with these fat-soluble chemicals. Traces of THC can be found in the body after even several months have passed. Sorry, drinking vinegar the day before a urine test won't fool the T/C present. Quitting smoking marijuana and the passage of time are the only sure-fire ways to pass a urine test with flying colors.
Signed,

Study: voters look to optimism, media coverage

By Kim Ode
Minneapolis-St. Paul Star Tribune

Studies have shown that voters are swayed by many factors, including how optimistic — or pessimistic — a candidate sounds.

Woe to the candidate who makes a problem sound long-term, widespread and — worst of all — our fault.

In the first presidential debate, the candidates were asked why many Americans use drugs. George Bush replied: "I think we have seen a deterioration of values. I think for a while as a nation we condoned those things we should have condemned."

All wrong, Harold Zullow, a psychological researcher at the University of Pennsylvania, said, because it sounds as if drug abuse results from some moral failure on our part.

Michael Dukakis, on the other hand, replied that he would question "how we can instill those values if representatives of the administration are involving people like Noriega in our foreign policy." He made it sound as if the drug problem can be fixed with a specific action and blamed the Republicans to boot, Zullow said.

Before the Iowa primary, Zullow rated the basic stump speeches of the seven Democratic and six Republican candidates. He found that Dukakis would win and that Bob Dole was such a pessimistic ruminator that Bush would win.

After events bore out his prediction, he compared their stump speeches. Bush came out ahead, but that changed at the nominating conventions when Dukakis made such an improvement over his stump speech that Zullow made him the front-runner.

Zullow feels like a lone wolf in his prediction, but he says that history backs him up.

One of those who believes Bush will win is Henry Brady, an associate professor of political science at the University of Chicago who studies how the media influence voter choice.

Brady's research indicates that in a general election the media don't influence the choice of a candidate as much as economics and foreign policy do.

But in his study of the 1984 primaries, he found that people change their opinions about who will win as often as each week, depending on which candidate received more favorable press coverage.

In 1984, for example, Gary Hart's fortunes rose after he finished second in the Iowa primary with 15 percent of the vote, far behind Walter Mondale's 45 percent and only two points ahead of third-place George McGovern.

Brady studied the UPI wire service and found that there were twice as many stories about Hart as there were about Mondale the next week and virtually none on McGovern, who soon dropped out of the race. Hart went on to defeat Mondale in New Hampshire and the two traded leads after that.

Elderly man waits on choice

Lobby for 91-year-old won't pick candidate until last minute

Editor's note: The St. Louis Post-Dispatch recently sent its reporters around the country to gather interviews with ordinary voters who will help choose the next president. This is one story in a series.

By Robert L. Koenig
St. Louis Post-Dispatch

TAKOMA PARK, Md. — Back in 1920, Ernest Giddings roisted timber in a Michigan paper mill to pay his way to Chicago to hear delegates debate the planks at the Republican National Convention.

There, Giddings witnessed the 10th-ballot nomination of lark-horse Warren G. Harding, and later cast his first vote for the man who turned out to be "the worst president of my lifetime."

Giddings, 91, who once taught in a one-room schoolhouse, has learned his lessons about politics the hard way. And, 68 years after his political baptism, he is a skeptical independent.

"Two months ago, I'd made up my mind to vote for a Democrat this year," Giddings said as he leaned back in a chair at his small brick home in Washington's Maryland suburbs. "Now I'm not so sure."

OVER A lifetime that has panned all of the 20th century, Giddings has seen 16 presidents — 10 Republicans and six Democrats. His favorite was Harry Truman, "a straight-shooter." But he admires all the presidents that he feels demonstrated leadership and dealt frankly with the American people.

"I haven't seen much leadership in either man this year. It worries me," Giddings says of the presidential candidates, Republican George Bush and Democrat Michael Dukakis.

"Franklin Roosevelt, John Kennedy, Ronald Reagan — they were all leaders. The trouble with Reagan is you don't know where he's leading. He's had almost eight ears, and I'm still not sure."

BUT GIDDINGS is sure of one thing: He will vote Nov. 8, and he is among 30 million Americans aged 65 and over who are eligible to vote this year compared to 26 million eligible in 1984. "When you've got millions of people in one group, you've got power," Giddings says.

Back in 1956, Giddings helped harness some of that power when he sat down with two other educators to sign the papers incorporating the American Association of Retired Persons. Giddings, the only surviving founding director, has seen the AARP grow to 28 million members and become a leading voice for the elderly.

AS A legislative expert for AARP, he lobbied to create Medicare and end mandatory retirement. Giddings himself retired from his job as an AARP consultant two years ago — at age 89.

Every year, Giddings helps his wife Helen, 81, compile a family scrapbook with photos and memorabilia from their travels and their visits to their three children and seven great-grandchildren. This year will not be one of the better ones chronicled in the scrapbook. Mrs. Giddings has been ill and is slowly losing her hearing. Giddings was hospitalized with pneumonia and has not yet fully recovered.

last 12 months," said Giddings. One of their daughters recently convinced the Giddings' to accept an occasional meal from a local chapter of Meals on Wheels. But they've fallen behind on the tree-trimming and the weeding duties in their backyard in Takoma Park, where they have lived for 40 years.

Giddings realizes his vote in November could be his last in a presidential election, and feels that the United States may be a crossroad as it draws closer to the next century. He is worried about the nation's economy. And he is concerned that many young people are growing up with a poor education and without strong family roots.

GIDDINGS SAYS that Social Security, Medicare and other programs enacted over the years have led to "an entirely different life for the older person now than in the early part of this century." But he also sees the need for progress in areas like long-term health care.

Coalition that beat Pinochet plans to continue in Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — Chile's largest opposition political party ended speculation Tuesday and said it will continue in the coalition that defeated 1973 coup leader Augusto Pinochet's bid to democratically extend his presidency.

Patricio Aylwin, president of the Christian Democratic Party, also said the party still wants a single opposition candidate named by the coalition for an open presidential election next year, a consequence of Pinochet's defeat in an Oct. 5 plebiscite.

Pinochet, an army general who assumed the presidency after the Sept. 11, 1973, coup in which Socialist President Salvador Allende died, was defeated by a "no" vote of 54 percent to 43 percent, with 3 percent of the ballots blank or disqualified. A "yes" vote would have given him another eight-year presidential term.

The 15-party opposition coalition called the Command for the No campaigned against Pinochet.

"The Christian Democratic Party reiterates its decision to continue fighting with serenity and resolution together with the other parties in the coalition for the 'no' ... until we achieve the establishment of a real democracy in Chile," Aylwin said, reading from a party declaration.

Before the plebiscite, the party signed an agreement of principles with five other centrist parties for a government that would follow Pinochet's defeat. The move was seen by some coalition politicians as an attempt by the conservative leadership to distance itself from the leftist groups in the coalition.

But Aylwin made no mention of the six-party agreement, saying, "I have full confidence in the coalition of parties for the 'no' will continue."

Czech government resigns

Biggest shake-up in government since invasion

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (UPI) — The Czechoslovak government resigned Tuesday and the premier of the Czech Republic, Ladislav Adamec, took over as federal prime minister in one of the biggest government shakeups since the Soviet-led invasion 20 years ago.

The move came as little surprise and followed the resignations Monday of Prime Minister Lubomir Strougal, an advocate of Gorbachev-style reforms, and the head of the Slovak government, Peter Colotka, who will become ambassador to France.

Adamec was Strougal's deputy before becoming his replacement.

Czechoslovakia is composed of the Czech and Slovak republics.

The ruling Communist Party Central Committee, closing out a two-day plenary session, also named five new members to the Presidium, or Politburo. The additions increased the Politburo's size to 18 members.

But the changes, outlined at a news conference of government and party officials, produced few fresh faces to replace the outgoing officials and at most lowered the average age of the federal and party leadership.

Foreign Minister Bohuslav Chnoupek, who shares Strougal's reformist views, will be replaced by his deputy, Jaromir Johannes. Interior Minister Vratislav Vajnar also resigned.

Strougal, Chnoupek and Colotka had been in their positions since the aftermath of the "Prague Spring" of Alexander Dubcek, an 8-month experiment of "socialism with a human face" that was crushed by tanks of the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact Aug. 21, 1968.

Their departure was viewed as an attempt to separate the new government from the legacy of the past 20 years, during which the Czechoslovak economy declined steadily.

Political strikes end in Yugoslavian republic

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI) — Thousands of workers who went on strike for three days demanding political and economic reforms in the troubled Yugoslavian republic of Montenegro were back at work Tuesday, officials said.

But more than 1,000 students in the capital of Montenegro continued to boycott meals in the cafeterias of Titograd University to protest police brutality in handling weekend demonstrations that left at least 13 people injured. Police were placed on alert following the mass rallies.

The party leadership refused to resign Saturday under pressure of the public protests.

Officials in Montenegro said factories, offices and schools were operating normally after thousands of people in Titograd and Niksic, a major city, returned to work Monday afternoon and overnight.

About 3,000 workers returned to work in the Niksic steel works, the largest state-owned industrial plant in the southern republic, as did about 2,000 employees of the Titograd Radioje Dacic construction machine factory where the protest rally originated Friday.

"It is completely calm in Titograd today. Nothing unusual is happening," Montenegrin Information Minister Vladeta Cvijovic told United Press International in a telephone interview from the republic's capital.

"I did not count them, but perhaps there are some more police in the streets. Yet, police are not something that strikes the eye in Titograd," Cvijovic said.

The workers ended the strike after a member of the Montenegro state presidency resigned Monday, saying he was ashamed of spreading unrest that has plunged Yugoslavia into its gravest crisis since World War II.

In addition, the leader of Montenegro's Communist Party, Milijan Radovic, told a rally in Titograd Monday that the party presidium will ask its ruling Central Committee for a vote of confidence.

The party leadership refused to resign Saturday under pressure of the public protests.

Also Monday, the republic's government and Communist Party leaders met in a joint session and declared their support of workers' demands, saying they were "justified and were an expression of the economic crisis in the country, an expression of a big drop in the standard of living and the Kosovo issue."

Montenegrins and Serbs accuse ethnic Albanians in Kosovo, a troubled autonomous southern province neighboring Montenegro, of persecuting them.

The demonstrations in Montenegro demanding the resignation of its leaders exploded against a backdrop of economic problems that included an annual inflation rate of 200 percent and a 50 percent drop in the standard of living in eight years.

Court upholds Illinois woman's murder conviction

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court let stand Tuesday the murder conviction of an Illinois woman who was denied the right to present to a jury results of a favorable lie detector test.

The justices, without comment, rejected an appeal filed by renowned criminal defense lawyer F. Lee Bailey.

The case involves Barbara Boyle who was sentenced to 50 years in prison for the murder of her husband, Ronald Gusewelle. Gusewelle's body was found April 4, 1979, in the backseat of his car parked in a motel lot in East St. Louis.

Initially Boyle was not charged with the murder because she passed a polygraph examination. A few months later, Andre Jones, a prisoner in the St. Clair County jail, confessed to the crime and the case was considered closed.

In 1984, however, Jones recanted his confession, and a man by the name of Robert Handy implicated Boyle in the murder of Gusewelle and his parents, Arthur and Vernita Gusewelle, who had been killed two years before their son.

The state put Boyle on trial for the murders of all three family members, alleging that the killings were part of a plot to collect life insurance money.

At trial, Boyle's lawyer attempted to admit into evidence the results of the earlier polygraph exam, which showed Boyle was truthful in denying involvement in the murder of Ronald Gusewelle. But the judge refused to allow the evidence under Illinois trial rules.

Boyle was convicted of Gusewelle's murder but acquitted of the murders of his parents, a verdict upheld by the Appellate Court of Illinois.

The victim brought suit against both the paper and the sheriff. The Sheriff's Department settled its part of the case for $2,500. A jury in December 1985 ruled against the paper and awarded damages totaling some $97,000. The award was upheld in state appeals court and the state Supreme Court refused to review the case.

Seeking high court review, the paper argued that "prior decision of this court clearly prohibits legislatively mandated punishment of the publication of truthful information obtained from a state agency, as has now been sanctioned."

Rape victims' name-disclosure law under review

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court agreed Tuesday to decide if a state law barring the media from disclosing the names of alleged victims of sexual assault violates the First Amendment guarantee of freedom of the press.

The court will hear arguments this term in a case brought by a Florida newspaper seeking review of state court rulings that upheld the law.

The case concerns the constitutionality of a Florida law that makes it a crime to publish or broadcast the name, address, or any other identifying fact or information of the victim of any sexual offense."

Such information about crime victims is generally considered public information, open to not only public viewing but also to newspaper or broadcast reporting.

While the Supreme Court has held in a number of cases that the news media may not be barred from printing such material, the media generally gives special treatment to those who claim they are the victims of sex crimes. The news media rarely reveals the names of victims regardless of the outcome of the case.

The case involving publication of the names of sexual assault victims began when a nurse's assistant, with four children, reported to the Jacksonville, Fla., Sheriff's Department that she was raped and robbed on Oct. 20, 1983.

The Jacksonville Sheriff's Department posted its report of the crime, naming the victim, in the department's pressroom.

Assistant DA will sue Brawley and lawyers

FISHKILL, N.Y. (UPI) — A Dutchess County assistant district attorney said Tuesday he will sue Tawana Brawley, her lawyers and the Rev. Al Sharpton for slander for saying he was involved in an attack on the teenager.

At a news conference, Steve Pagones said he would file the suit within four weeks against Brawley, Sharpton and civil rights attorneys Alton Maddox and C. Vernon Mason.

Sharpton and the lawyers had said Pagones was involved in the attack on Brawley, which a grand jury later determined never happened. The Wappinger Falls teenager claimed she was abducted and raped by six white men last November, including one who showed a police-like badge.

The girl was found in a garbage bag covered with dog excrement with the letters "KKK" scrawled on her body. The grand jury that investigated the case cleared Pagones and said Brawley made up the story of her attack.

Brawley refused to testify before the grand jury on the advice of Sharpton and her lawyers. Pagones said Brawley would be named in the suit "because by her silence she has participated in the attack on my reputation."

"One of the specifics I'm basing this grievance on is the fact that Mason and Maddox have violated the disciplinary rules (of the Bar Association) by knowingly making false statements of law and fact."

Sharpton briefly interrupted the news conference, shouting from the back of the room: "Steve Pagones, your accuser is here."

But employees of the hotel where the news conference was held locked Sharpton out of the room.

Men's golf team captures 2nd

By John Walblay
Staff Writer

The men's golf team wound up its fall season Tuesday with a surprising second-place finish in a field of 17 teams at the Blue Raider Invitational in Murfreesboro, Tenn.

After the first round of play Monday, the Salukis were tied for first place with University of Tennessee-Martin, both with team totals of 296 strokes.

"I am really pretty pleased with the play. We didn't play as well today (Tuesday), but we almost got it all together," Coach Lew Hartzog said.

I was happy with the play of the team as a whole, but I was really quite pleased with the play of the freshmen. I have a feeling they're going to be pretty good players in the future."

The Salukis were edged out of first place by Tennessee-Martin by only three strokes. The second-day team total for Tennessee-Martin was 302, for a two-day total of 599 strokes. The Salukis finished with 305, for 601 strokes.

For the Salukis, sophomore Mark Bellas was the overall low-scorer with a pair of 72s, which tied him for the 3rd-place overall honors for the tournament.

Mike Cowen was second with a two day total of 151 strokes. Britt Pavelonis was third in Saluki standings with 153 strokes.

Freshmen Dirk Klapprott and Sean English were fourth and fifth with 159 and 160 strokes respectively.

Hartzog said the second-place finish was impressive because of the competition of the highly-rated southern teams. Generally, teams from the South have fared better in tournament play because the weather allows extended playing seasons, Hartzog said.

Jacksonville State (Ala.) came in third with a two-day total of 602 strokes. Tennessee Tech placed fourth with a 607. Shorter College was fifth with a 609.

At the Southern Classic last weekend, Brackins was selected as Most Valuable Player. She had 34 kills and a .452 hitting percentage.

"I was expecting at least to be on the all-tournament team," Brackins said. "I was pleased with myself."

Brackins has 183 kills so far this season. She ranks fourth in the Gateway Conference with an average of 3.06 kills per game.

"I don't worry about statistics," she said. "Look, I tell myself, I had a good practice or game."

Brackins said it will take a lot of concentration on her part to maintain her level of play through the conference season. But the Arlington, Texas, native is not lacking in confidence.

Softball coach grades squad's fall performance

Kay Brechtelsbauer

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

Softball coach Kay Brechtelsbauer had called her team's performance at the Northern Illinois Huskie Invitational in De Kalb a "final examination" for the fall exhibition season.

After bringing home the consolation title at the eight-team tournament, Brechtelsbauer is ready to release the grade report on her 7-3 team.

Bunting and base running got the highest marks, both with B pluses. Defense, pitching and teamwork followed with B minuses. But hitting — the strength of the team last spring — fell to a C.

"Our bats went into hibernation early," Brechtelsbauer said. "For the most part we didn't hit with authority. We put the ball in play, but just didn't get all of it. We mostly hit easily-handled flies and ground balls."

The lack of offense was evident in the 3-0 loss to Gateway Conference rival Western Illinois in the tournament opener. The Westerwinds' senior pitcher, Janice Hanerhoff, no-hit the Salukis without striking out a single batter.

Western Illinois scored two runs in the third inning and another in the seventh. "Realistically, a 7-3 fall record is not bad, but we're going to have to get considerably better for the spring competition," Brechtelsbauer said.

"At no time this fall have we blown a team out. We should beat some of those teams in five innings," she said.

The Salukis' offensive woes carried over against the University of Illinois-Chicago. The Flames limited the Salukis to three hits, two by junior second baseman Shelly Gibbs, for a 2-1 victory.

The Salukis shifted gears Sunday, prompting Brechtelsbauer to praise her pitchers.

"Really, the pitching staff has kept us in the games,"

Brechtelsbauer said.

Traci Furlow, a right-handed sophomore, headed the staff this fall. She fanned four for a 4-0, one-hit victory over St. Xavier. Freshman Dede Darnell held St. Francis to four hits in a 4-2 decision. Jennifer Brown got a 2-1 victory over St. Francis in the consolation final.

Another bright spot for the Salukis was the base running prowess of sophomore Kim Tummins. The 5-foot-4 leadoff batter had four stolen bases after reaching 10 times; seven by base on balls.

"She was on base every time I turned around," Brechtelsbauer said. "It was great."

Judiscak redshirted for remainder of fall season

By Robert Baxter
Staff Writer

A decision to redshirt senior women's cross country runner Lisa Judiscak for the remainder of the season was finally reached on Tuesday. This will give Judiscak another season of cross country eligibility for the fall of 1989.

Judiscak has been hampered by a lower back injury sustained since early in the season.

"I wanted to finish this year in style by running up to my full capabilities," Judiscak said. "Right now I've been feeling better and running with the team. I am the No. 2 or 3 runner in practice, but that's not where I want to be."

DeNoon said even though Judiscak is feeling better, she has yet to return to expected form.

He delayed redshirting her with the hope she could come back before the season ended.

"I was hoping she would come back and finish the last couple of meets for us with a couple of big wins," DeNoon said. "But she hasn't come back as strong as we would have liked."

DeNoon said he didn't think it would be fair for Judiscak to finish her career on such a sour note.

"I really wanted to see her go out with a flair," DeNoon said.

Even though Judiscak said she was reluctant to face another semester of school, she now feels it might not be that bad.

"At first I wasn't looking forward to returning next year," Judiscak, a health education major, said. "But I'll be doing an internship for health in the fall, and possibly taking a couple grad classes.

"If I were to run any meets at all this year, then I would have been ineligible for next season," Judiscak said. "Next year we'll have everyone returning from this year's team (except senior Jane Schumacher)."

Judiscak was billed as the No. 1 runner coming into this season and her goals were far reaching — to win the conference and go to the NCAA tournament.

Once the severity of the injury had been diagnosed, Judiscak said she knew the goals would be unattainable and redshirting would be the wise choice.

"I knew it was inevitable. But once it finally came down to going through with it, it was pretty tough knowing I wouldn't run the rest of the season," Judiscak said.

"My parents were here over the weekend and they gave their opinions and were very supportive of my decision," she said.

Lisa Judiscak, a senior on the cross country team, was declared a redshirt Tuesday. Judiscak, who has the fourth fastest time in school history at 17:46.2, has battled a lower back injury since the start of the season.

Golfer captures Gateway award

Meritt is No. 1 for the Salukis with a 74 best and 81 average

By John Walblay
Staff Writer

Women's golfer Lisa Meritt was named Gateway Conference Player of the Week.

Meritt, a 5-4 junior from Fairfield, has had an impressive fall season and taken over the No. 1 spot on the team.

"I was very honored," Meritt said. "I had no idea I was going to get it until I walked in today (Tuesday)."

In seven rounds of play this season, she has averaged 81.0 strokes per game. Her personal best for one round is a 76, four over par.

Last week at the Huskie Classic at Northern Illinois University in De Kalb, she had her career-low for tournament play. The first day she ended with an 80 for one round.

The second day, she had a 44 on the front nine, but came back with a 34 on the back for a 78, five over par.

Meritt said her play at Northern was her best, not only because of her score, but because of the difficulty of the course. She was second individually for the tournament

Women golfers at Lady Kat Invite

By John Walblay
Staff Writer

The women's golf team leaves today for its final match of the fall season at the Lady Kat Invitational in Lexington, Ky.

Eighteen schools will be competing in the three-day, 54-hole tournament that begins Thursday morning.

Coach Diane Daugherty said the competition at the Lady Kat is probably the toughest the team has faced this far. None of the teams should be taken lightly, she said.

"There are 18 schools and there is not a fluff-off team in the whole group," Daugherty said. Instead of the usual two or three teams to watch out for at the match, Daugherty had a long list of teams that will not be easily beaten. She named Alabama, Vanderbilt, Minnesota, North Carolina, Wake Forest and Mississippi all as top contenders.

"I'd say in that competition, if we finish in the top 10 I'll be ecstatic," Daugherty said.

There also is added pressure because the team can only use its top five players instead of the usual six. Usually, six players compete and the top four individual scores are used to tabulate the team score.

Saluki tight end Yogi Henderson is out for the rest of the season. He has chosen to undergo arthroscopic surgery on his left knee.

Henderson injured the knee in the Salukis' 45-43 victory over Arkansas State on Oct. 1. "It's a problem," head coach Rick Rhoades said. "(Henderson's replacement)

Ron Lipinski is doing a good job but he is new at that position.

Quarterback Fred Gibson, who was bothered by a swollen knee much of last week, has shaken the swelling and is well on the road to recovery, men's trainer Ed Thompson said.

"He is doing a lot better," Thompson said. "He has made some strides in the right direction, and he responded to every treatment last week."

Rhoades said the knee did not affect Gibson's play in the Eastern Illinois game as much as it did his practice the previous week.

"It might have affected his preparation a little, but he is really doing well now."

Rhoades said linebacker Kevin Kilgallon, who has been hampered by two swollen ankles, is "trying" and will see action Saturday against Indiana State.

An injury to a team is never a benefit, but when sophomore Troy Guttridge heard punter David Peters was sidelined for the season, he rose to the occasion.

Guttridge nailed five punts for 201 yards and a 40.2 average against Arkansas State and hit eight at Eastern Illinois for 302 yards and a 37.8 per punt average.

Tailgate plans for weekend are finalized

By David Gallianetti

The Third Annual Great Saluki Tailgate will take place at 11 a.m. Saturday in the special tailgate area east of McAndrew Stadium as part of the Salukis' game with Indiana State.

SIU-C President John Guyon said the event is a plus not just for the school, but for the community as a whole.

"It is a very big plus, not just for school spirit," Guyon said. "It shows cooperation between the University and the city in a co-partnership to work together in an effort to make Southern Illinois a better place."

Guyon said the presence of alcohol at the tailgate is not demeaning to the school, as long as it is controlled.

"We know the people over 21 will consume alcohol, and this is not an alcohol program. We do have controlled alcohol programming and as long as people behave that way then it is alright."

Athletics Director Jim Hart said the event has never gotten out of hand, and anything that benefits the school is a plus.

"There have not been any drunken orgies, and until there is don't call us guilty until it is proven," Hart said. "The way the team has played this year I think it will spur more people to come in (to McAndrew Stadium) instead of splitting after the Tailgate."

"There is nothing I can see that we shouldn't try to entice people to come out."

Bruce McCutcheon, assistant athletics director, said there have been 35 entries so far, including 10 of last year's 12 winners. Even though the deadline was last Friday, McCutcheon said last minute entries would probably be accepted.

Entries will be grouped into three categories: Saluki pride tailgate, Saluki business spirit category, and student categories of 10 or less and 11 or more.

The grand prize will be a weekend trip to Lexington, Ky., for eight persons for the Salukis' game against the University of Kentucky on Oct. 28.

Sponsors of the event are Kroger, the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce and the Carbondale Convention and Tourism Bureau.

Surprised Brackins Player of the Week

Assistant volleyball coach Mike Peters came into Davies Gymnasium Tuesday morning with his hand extended toward junior middle blocker Nina Brackins.

Congratulations were in order, Peters said. Brackins had been chosen as the Gateway Conference Player of the Week for the second time in her career.

Brackins, who was not aware that she had been nominated for the honor, said disbelievingly: "That's a good one."

But Peters insisted that this was no joke.

"My mom is going to be so happy," was Brackins' first reaction.

The honor was well-deserved, Coach Debbie Hunter said.

"It's an honor that she has been put in a great position for this weekend," Hunter said. "Her play has really picked up, especially at the Southern Classic."

Instructors fail to give grades

University instructors are not taking student-athlete progress reports seriously, an assistant athletics director said at the Intercollegiate Athletics Advisory Committee meeting Tuesday.

The reports, which were sent to instructors on Sept. 29, were to be completed by Oct. 7. So far, only 30 percent of all instructors complied.

"I think they (instructors) should be shamed," Maggie Mathias, director of curriculum and instruction, said. "Those students are spending their time giving a huge effort to sports. Thirty percent is an awfully low number to work with."

Athletics Director Jim Hart said the progress reports serve a two-fold purpose.

"In the long run, it helps students who think they can get by," Hart said. "If they have someone watching them, they tend to try harder. They don't want to be embarrassed."

"The reports also are used so the coaches aren't surprised if a player can't play as a result of his grades."

Hart urges all instructors and professors to return the written requests for progress reports as soon as possible.

In other business, Mathias said Creighton University is in jeopardy of losing its Division I standing. Creighton, a Missouri Valley Conference powerhouse in baseball and basketball, Creighton has failed to maintain participation requirements in golf and swimming.

The installation of lights for McAndrew Stadium is probable, but not in the near future, Hart said.

"It would be nice to say that we'll have them for the next season," he said. "But realistically, we know that won't happen."

"People love to ask about it," Hart said.

Hart said the funding required to complete such a project is overwhelming. Two years ago, the total cost for installing lights at the stadium was estimated between $250,000 and $300,000.

Olympic diver Wendy Lucero to give exhibition on Oct. 27

U.S. Olympic diver Wendy Lucero will perform a diving exhibition Oct. 27 on campus, diving coach Dave Audrey said.

Lucero, who won the NCAA one-meter diving championship as a Saluki in 1985, was a sixth-place finisher in the three-meter springboard at the Seoul Games.

"It's a great opportunity to have an international caliber diver return to her alma mater," Audrey said. "It gives our program great credibility."

Proceeds for the event will go to the SIU Foundation and to Lucero's amateur athletic trust fund.

"It will help her financially to remain an amateur so she can compete in '92," Audrey said.

Lucero, 25, is considered a medal hopeful for the 1992 Olympic Games to be held in Barcelona, Spain.

This is the first exhibition for Lucero since Seoul. She will arrive in Carbondale following an audience with President Reagan at the White House, Audrey said.

After Lucero's performance,

Wendy Lucero

she will do an exhibition in her home state of Colorado.

Tentative plans call for the exhibition to be held at the Recreation Center at 7:30 p.m. Lucero will dive for about an hour, and then attend a reception in her honor.

Ticket prices are $20 for preferred seating and reception, $10 for reserved seats, and $2 for general admission.
