Abducted girl found, manhunt over

KELLY L. MALL — The Daily Egyptian

By Carey Jane Atherton
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A nation-wide manhunt for the father who allegedly kidnapped his daughter at gun point from Giant City School two weeks ago climaxed yesterday when FBI agents apprehended the suspect and found the 8-year-old girl alive.

States Attorney Mike Wepsiec said Washington officials placed Demetria, the abducted child who was not in the custody of her father, into protective custody and reported that no physical harm occurred to Demetria during the arrest.

Authorities said Demetria's mother expressed elation and relief when she was told of the arrest.

John D. Moro, 34, of Centralia, was arrested outside in Ellensburg, Washington, Tuesday between 10 a.m. and 10:30 a.m., which would be 12 p.m. and 12:30 p.m. Central Standard Time.

"The arrest occurred so fast, he had no options," Ron Bratcher, a Carbondale FBI special agent, said.

Wepsiec said authorities knew Moro had headed west, northwest or maybe towards Canada.

Authorities said it would have been extremely complicated to locate Moro if he had gone to Canada.

Wepsiec said Moro is charged with the aggravated kidnapping of his daughter Demetria, and his Jackson County bond is currently set at $100,000.

Wepsiec said he is interested in debriefing the Washington investigators to determine if additional charges may be brought against Moro.

Although many of the details about the arrest are unknown, Wepsiec said a handgun was recovered during the arrest.

Wepsiec said early this morning a local Ellensburg, WA, police officer called in the license plate number on a car he thought to be

USG expenditures requested by senators

By Wendy J. Allyn
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Concerned that Undergraduate Student Government executive spending was excessive, some USG senators say they are requesting to see a full report of summer expenditures.

A mandate requesting the report, submitted by USG Senators Robert Irby and Brian Rukas, is on the agenda for tonight's USG meeting. Irby said the senate has been kept in the dark regarding expenditures that were made while senators were absent for the summer.

"I really want to see those expenditures because there have been some concerns," Irby said.

Irby said according to the USG constitution, expenditures from the Student Organization Activity Fee account may be made by USG executives over the summer, but a full report of spending must be made to the senate at the first meeting of the new semester.

"The executive branch did not do that," Irby said. "All they did was present an operational budget. There was not a complete list of what they had spent."

Some of USG President Duane Sherman's expenditures at the end of the fiscal year include $130 on posters and frames, two bookcases at about $100 each, a $61 paper shredder, about $80 for two calculators, a $25 wall clock, a $22 steel wastebasket and $145 worth of post-it-notes.

USG's office expenditures for the summer totaled $2414.46, according to documents from Jean Paratore's office. Paratore, associate vice president of student affairs, serves as fiscal officer for USG.

Sherman told senators the organization's office expenses have been high because he was stocking up for the current school year.

Paratore reviews whatever USG plans to purchase and signs approval of purchase requisitions as long as they are legal. She said she does not tell USG how to spend its funds.

White House denies giving Karrow boot

By David R. Kazak
DE Government/Politics Reporter

Officials from both the Department of Education and the White House deny excluding or even inviting Graduate and Professional Student Council President Bill Karrow to President Bill Clinton's roundtable discussion Monday, at which 11 students spoke with Clinton about financial aid issues.

Even Karrow has said the controversy, which has surrounded him since he participated in a press conference with U.S. Rep. Jerry Weller, R-Ill., has been overblown by the media. It was not his intention, he said, to become a spokesperson for the Republicans. On the contrary, Karrow said Monday night that he was just concerned that graduate student interests were not going to be represented in Clinton's discussion.

Media accounts nationwide reported Karrow was excluded from the roundtable because of his political views. Weller said Karrow was invited to the roundtable discussion, but after an interview, was "blacklisted because of his beliefs." And even one White House official has been quoted saying Karrow's political views were the reason he was excluded.

White House Spokeswoman Laura Schwartz said there were no political reasons for Karrow's exclusion from the discussion. She said the group had to be narrowed down to 11 people in order to achieve the goals Clinton set forth when he asked for a chance to meet with students.

Those goals, she said, were gathering students who receive different forms of federal student aid, were from different geographic regions and attended public, private and community colleges.

To let everyone who was considered for the discussion join in would have not allowed for a good dialog between Clinton and the students. Schwartz said. And although she did not say how many students were originally under consideration, she said they could have filled "an auditorium."

But Weller said he disagreed with

SWISS FIND MILLIONS IN DORMANT ACCOUNTS — PARIS—Leading Swiss banks announced Tuesday they have discovered $34 million in dormant accounts that may belong to Holocaust victims and that they will help Jewish survivors and their heirs track down lost assets. Lifting the veil of secrecy on one of the most controversial legacies of the war, the Swiss Bankers' Association said a partial survey of a dozen major banks that conducted most of the country's financial business in 1945 revealed nearly 900 abandoned accounts containing funds that may have been deposited by Jews and others who were persecuted and murdered by the Nazis. But the World Jewish Congress and other agencies acting on behalf of Holocaust victims say the forsaken deposits represent only a fraction of the wealth of Jewish Nazi victims. Far larger assets, estimated by some experts to be worth several billion dollars, were confiscated from Jewish victims in Eastern Europe and may have been stashed by the Nazis in Swiss accounts or safe deposit boxes.

EGYPTIAN TOURISM ON RISE; TERRORISM FALLS —

CAIRO, Egypt—They're back. Toting video cameras, haggling over the price of camel rides at the Giza pyramids, navigating the Nile in five-star cruise ships or wind-driven feluccas, tourists are returning to Egypt in growing numbers, reinforcing government claims of victory over Islamic militants. The evidence is more than anecdotal. Egypt's Tourism Ministry reported last month that between January and June of this year, 1.3 million tourists visited Egypt, 19 percent more than during the same period last year. Moreover, industry executives say, tourist bookings for this fall and winter look stronger than they have since 1992, a banner year for Egyptian tourism, and rates for hotels and Nile cruises have begun to climb again after being slashed 50 percent or more in the last several years.

POSTAL SERVICE TO END FISCAL YEAR IN BLACK —

WASHINGTON—While most of the federal government is floundering in red ink, the Postal Service declared Tuesday it will end the current fiscal year with a record $1.8 billion surplus. It said it should make another $504 million in the coming fiscal year. But don't expect lower stamp prices. As it has before, the agency said it will use the surplus to reduce the more than $9 billion in deficits it has accumulated since it became an independent federal agency 25 years ago. Typically, the Postal Service records a surplus in the first year that it implements higher postage rates. In the past it tended to break even the second year and to take a loss and ask for higher rates in the third year.

POWELL'S BOOK TOUR BRINGS MEDIA FRENZY —

WASHINGTON—Sam Donaldson says Colin L. Powell "would make a good president and it would be good for the country. I think this man is extraordinary." Even by the standards of modern media excess, there has never been anything quite like the way the press is embracing, extolling and flat-out promoting this retired general who has never sought public office. With Barbara Walters, Larry King, Katie Couric, David Frost, Tom Brokaw and Jay Leno lined up for television chats, with newspapers clamoring for interviews as he begins a 22-city book tour, Powell is launching a media blitz with all the subtlety of Operation Desert Storm.

SEXUAL HARASSMENT REMAINS IN WORKPLACE —

WASHINGTON—A spate of high-profile downfalls of powerful men as a result of sexual harassment charges is sending a loud message across the country that such conduct is not only unacceptable but can be disastrous for a career. That message, however, may not be getting through. Women workers and those familiar with their experiences say that unwelcome passes, groping and sexually offensive comments are still rampant in the workplace and—more often than not—that the victims are not confronting such behavior. The forced resignation of Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., last week, the firing of the president of the W.R. Grace Co., the resignation last year of a veteran partner at San Francisco-based Baker & McKenzie and the $1 million settlement last month by Dell Laboratories in New York because of its chief executive's sexual misconduct stand as clear testaments to the sizable punishment that may await harassers.

Former NAACP director speaks at BAC conference

By Rebecca Hutchings
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The Black Affairs Council has chosen Benjamin Chavis Jr., former national director of the NAACP, as one of their guest speakers for a national conference in November.

Some group members say the choice has raised questions across campus because of recent controversy surrounding Chavis.

Troy Alim, coordinator of the council, said some people have asked why the council would invite Chavis to speak at the conference because of the controversy.

Chavis was dismissed from the NAACP after he arranged to pay Mary E. Stansel, former employee at the NAACP, $332,400 in organization funds to settle a sex discrimination complaint. He was also accused of financial mismanagement.

"(Chavis) has not been found guilty of any charges," Alim said. "As we examine the law system in the United States, you are innocent until proven guilty."

Alim said there will be sessions with the speakers that will give the students an opportunity to ask Chavis questions concerning the issue.

"(Chavis is) not shying away from the issue," Alim said. "This will also give (Chavis) an avenue to address attacks on his character."

Controversial lawyer from '60s to speak at Student Center

By Lori D. Clark
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Arthur Kinoy, famous for his involvement in controversial court cases during cases during the late 1960s and '70s, will speak tonight at 7 in the Student Center Auditorium.

Todd Reardon, executive committee member of the SIUC National Lawyers Guild said Kinoy was, "Primarily making sure minority people aren't trampled. He's making sure people's constitutional rights aren't taken away by the government."

Reardon said after a phone call to Rutgers University, Kinoy was interested in coming to SIUC and speaking to law students.

The speech is open to the public at no charge. A biographical video of Kinoy will prelude the speech.

Reardon said Kinoy wants many to be in attendance so he may inform listeners of their rights.

"He wants to use the law as a tool to keep constitutional rights for all people," Reardon said.

Reardon said he is excited that Kinoy is coming.

"I was elated. He's very down to earth. He never had any inhibitions about coming."

Reardon said some of Kinoy's most famous cases and projects include:

■ a court appeal he won in 1968 for the Chicago Seven, a group of demonstrators who because of anti-war beliefs were found guilty of conspiracy.

■ activism in the Mississippi Summer Project which worked for gaining voting rights for African-Americans.

■ leading an appeal for Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, convicted of treason during the Cold War, who Despite Kinoy's efforts were found guilty and sentenced to death.

Probably Kinoy's most notable case involved a Supreme Court ruling on wiretapping, Reardon said. Kinoy claimed the government did not have the right to spy on the public by tapping telephones. Kinoy won the case and the government now has to have a warrant to tap a person's phone.

When Kinoy said he would speak to SIUC law students, Reardon said he was overjoyed.

Kinoy is currently an emeritus professor at Rutgers University.

Hearing set to determine if Foulks is mentally fit for murder trial of eight

By Carey Jane Atherton
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Camillia Foulks will be appearing in court today for a fitness hearing at which it will be decided if she is fit to stand trial for the fire deaths of eight children.

Foulks, 25, was found unfit to stand trial Jan. 25.

In February, Judge David W. Watt, said it was likely Foulks would be found fit to stand trial within a year, and Foulks' attorney, Public Defender Mike Rowland, said last week they were optimistic about Foulks being found fit for trial at today's hearing.

Jackson County States Attorney Mike Wepsiec had no comment on the matter.

Foulks is charged with eight counts of involuntary manslaughter, one count of endangering the life or health of a child and one count of reckless conduct in connection with the Aug. 14, 1994, blaze at 424 E. Oak St.

Nine children were in the house at the time of the blaze. A 9-year-old girl escaped the blaze, however, the other eight children died.

Foulks is accused of leaving the children unsupervised and going to the Carbondale area of town, known as the Levy, which is located at the intersection of Washington Street and Oak Street.

Authorities believe the fire was started by children playing with matches or a lighter.

Foulks has been at the Alton Mental Health Center by court order since July 7 for mental health evaluation and treatment.

At the time of placement, Wepsiec and Rowland told Judge David W. Watt Jr., they agreed that the Alton facility was best suited for Foulks.

Carbondale band Girls With Tools building local support for performance at Mississippi River Music Festival

By Dave Katzman
DE Arts/Entertainment Editor

Carbondale's Girls With Tools is fixing to play a regional music festival as the band gears up for its debut CD.

Drummer Jeff Townsend, a graduate student in English, said Girls With Tools is playing the Mississippi River Music Festival in St. Louis on Thursday. The festival is sponsored by South By Southwest, the annual Austin, Texas music conference known for the exposure it gives to bands lucky enough to make the cut.

Townsend said he hopes a good reaction at the Mississippi River Music Festival will help the band get a spot at South By Southwest.

"We're going to definitely submit (an application), but whether they select us or not is a different story," he said.

Townsend said Girls With Tools

"We're all sort of experienced punk rockers, so our attachment is to the early American punk rock like X and Blondie."

Jeff Townsend
Girls With Tools

is in the process of mixing eight recently recorded songs that will be combined with the six songs from "The Early Year," its cassette on the local Diamond Drill Music label, for the CD.

The CD, co-produced by Jim Forester and the band at Carbondale's Molehill Studio, is due to be released in late fall. Forester said the band is holding off a tour until the disc is released.

Townsend said the group draws its influences from early 1980s punk rock.

"We're all sort of experienced punk rockers, so our attachment is to the early American punk rock like X and Blondie," he said. "There's some pop sensibility, but there's definitely an obnoxious attitude involved."

Girls With Tools will prepare for the Mississippi River Music Festival by playing at Hangar 9 tonight at 9:45 p.m. Fellow Diamond Drill artist Crank, with whom the band shares guitarist Dave Stoecker, will open. Cover is $2.

Its Thursday St. Louis gig begins at 10 p.m. at Bernard's, 214 Morgan St.

Cuts in education cut future incomes

THE DE WOULD LIKE TO APPLAUD MONDAY'S presidential visit by Bill Clinton, as it provided a refreshing outlook on politics. Clinton made it apparent he is serving in the interests of the people. In his address to more than 10,000 gathered at Pulliam Lawn he declared that higher education is essential to competing in the global market of the 21st century. By providing programs such as financial aid and making these financial acquisitions easier through direct funding, the country is investing in a stable future.

THE DE SUPPORTS CLINTON IN HIS EFFORT TO provide financial help to the majority of us on campus as well as college students throughout the nation. By cutting the banks and middlemen out of the financial aid process it is better for students, schools and taxpayers. He warned the crowd not to be fooled by the increasingly common GOP smoke screen of balancing the budget. He said, "You do not have to balance the budget by shortcutting the future of America."

WHILE IT IS IMPORTANT TO BALANCE THE budget that went spiraling out of control thanks to Ronald Reagan, the earning power of college graduates is 74 percent higher than those who do not have a degree. With direct funding, students pay back their loans as a percentage of the income of the job they have when they leave college. To curb the permanent loss of a waning middle class in this country it is necessary to provide people willing to help themselves through education with a decent chance. Write Congress and support the financial needs of America's future.

China must change

ON TUESDAY OF LAST WEEK, FIRST LADY Hillary Rodham Clinton sent tsunami size shock waves into the ears of Chinese officials as she lambasted them for their treatment of women and human beings in general. At the United Nations Fourth World Conference on Women, Mrs. Clinton reminded China of the deplorable conditions it has subjected its people to throughout its history. The DE supports the advancement toward equality for women as well as the human race that Clinton spoke candidly of.

IN TYPICAL COMMUNIST FASHION, THERE OF course was no word of the speech in the official Chinese media. No country is perfect, as we can see by taking a close look at the U.S. in general and as a Chinese official suggested Mrs. Clinton do before handing out report cards.

But China, what year and mindset are you living in? Are women and fellow human beings so threatening to the power yielded by China that its own people must be suppressed? Why not deal with your problems instead of ignore them? It's the first step in the healing process of your people.

THERE IS MORE TO A COUNTRY THAN repression of its people. There is more to a population than productive males. We are all human beings, obviously not all full of compassion, but perhaps China should try it on for size. Thanks, Mrs. Clinton, for suggesting to China at the Women's Conference in Beijing that their dress is not fitting so well in the eyes of their guests anymore.

Resource tax key to stable growth

By Ted Halstead and Jonathan Rowe
Special to the Washington Post

For all the talk of radical tax reform in Washington, there's a basic question that the politicians and experts have somehow missed. The leading proposals, whether Democratic or Republican, are justified by what they wouldn't tax—capital gains, interest income, etc.—not by what they would tax.

Purporting to encourage savings and investment, these proposals would all tend to shift the burden of taxation in one way or another from income onto work—that is, onto the folks who, in Sen. Phil Gramm's apt phrase, "pull the wagon."

There's a better way, one that doesn't penalize the things-work and enterprise that America needs most. Instead of taxing the creation of wealth, the government ought to tax the depletion of it.

The federal government should be moving toward elimination of payroll and income taxes and toward taxation of the use of finite natural resources and the pollution that results. Instead of using taxes simply to raise revenues, the government could raise revenue in a way that helps reduce the need for both government and taxes.

This idea of resource-based taxation is quite different from President Clinton's BTU tax proposal in 1993 that was mainly a new tax on top of the existing income-tax structure.

By contrast, we're talking about replacing the income and payroll taxes on the middle class with taxes on the use of finite resources such as oil and coal, on pollution and on virgin materials that end up in the trash.

The federal income tax would be restored to what it was in the early 20th century—a kind of excise tax on only the very richest Americans (a historical fact that the Democratic Party seems to have collectively forgotten.)

Such a tax shift would provide a big boost for jobs and for America's ability to compete in the world.

First, eliminating income or payroll taxes for most of the middle class would cut the cost of labor in America without reducing wages. The real "job killer" of the current tax system is not the tax on capital gains, as Republicans claim. Much more debilitating for employment in America is the payroll tax, which slaps a big penalty on small businesses for the heinous act of hiring a worker. Resource-based taxes provide a practical way to reduce that penalty.

Second, a shift to resource taxes would push our whole economy toward more efficiency. A few pioneering companies have already shown the economic gains that are waiting to be tapped, as Joseph J. Romm demonstrates in his book "Lean and Clean Management."

Since conservation technologies and practices employ many more people than does the use of virgin resources, more jobs would result. Many of those new jobs would be in recycling, which would boom, because virgin materials would no longer have the subsidies they enjoy under current tax laws.

Third, resource-based taxes would help solve our environmental problems by reducing the need for cumbersome, top-down regulation. Boeing's manager of conservation, Lawrence Friedman, has noted that if every company in America adopted the lighting efficiencies that Boeing did, "it would reduce air pollution as much as if one-third of the cars on the road today never left the garage."

In other words, a resource tax system would make tax avoidance both legal and socially desirable. As individuals and corporations sought to cut their tax bills, the environment would become cleaner and the economy more efficient—and regulators less necessary.

This is not a pipe dream. We have completed the first draft of a resource-tax proposal for the state of California and found that the state could abolish virtually all existing state and local taxes and raise the same amount of revenue from resource use and pollution instead.

A shift of that scale is not feasible at the federal level. However, a reasonable tax on resource use and pollution—which would keep the price of gasoline within the levels paid by Europeans and Japanese—would make it possible to eliminate the federal income tax entirely for families making up to $75,000 a year, and for individuals earning up to $40,000.

So why not? Some will warn that the United States would lose competitive position, but the opposite is more likely. With incentives to become lean and efficient in the use of resources, American companies would actually gain a competitive edge.

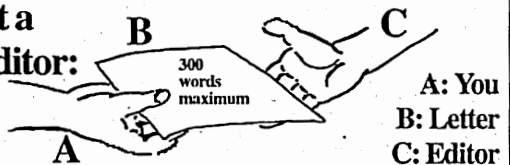

Moreover, Professor Lawrence Goulder of Stanford has shown how a resource tax could be levied on the energy content of key imports, keeping the playing field level for American producers paying such taxes.

Another objection will be raised by technological utopians, who say there's no such thing as "finite" natural resources, because the infinite ingenuity of people will always find substitutes for any resources that run out.

If that's true, then resource-based taxation would buy more time for such new technologies to arise; it would also create price incentives that would hasten the development process.

Ted Halstead is executive director, and Jonathan Rowe is program director, of Redefining Progress, a public policy organization in San Francisco. This article is based in part on a forthcoming article in the Atlantic.

How to submit a letter to the editor:

Powell needs to politic more

By E.J. Dionne
The Washington Post

Retired Gen. Colin Powell describes himself as "a fiscal conservative with a social conscience." This is a fine moniker, and Powell clearly means it. On the other hand, it's hard to think of a politician who would describe himself or herself as either "a fiscal conservative with no social conscience" or "a profligate liberal with a huge social conscience."

Therein lies the problem with the longings for a Powell presidential candidacy and for a shiny, happy, "centrist" third party. The hardest thing to face is that the current problem with politics is not that our leaders are particularly stupid or venal, or that Republicans and Democrats are hopelessly off on another planet. The real difficulty is that there are no cheap or easy ways of solving our problems. Therefore, a politician's "fiscal conservatism" will constantly be colliding with his or her "social conscience." A politician can reasonably tilt one way or the other, but the act of choosing makes both friends and enemies and destroys the illusion that there is always a joyful compromise just waiting to be grasped.

Powell says he knows this. "I am fully aware that in taking stands on issues, I would quickly alienate one interest group or another and burn off much popularity," he writes in his new book, "My American Journey." But watch out for that word "interest group." Taking stands on issues doesn't just alienate abstract and thus suspect "interest groups." It affects decent citizens who happen to care legitimately about real matters. Your mother or grandmother might be part of the Medicare "interest group." Lots of good people belong to "interest groups" on either side of the abortion question.

Powell's appeal is that he is a compelling human being who has lived an admirable life, overcome obstacles and demonstrated leadership. He exudes strength—or, as they prefer in presidential politics, "character." This is all true. What's questionable is the presumption among those who long for Powell that this strength would automatically allow him to "cut through" all the issues, to make "tough" decisions that would be "good for the country," and to do so "regardless of the political consequences." Powell courts this reaction. "We have to start thinking of America as a family," he writes. He goes on: "We have to stop screeching at each other, stop hurting each other, and instead start caring for, sacrificing for and sharing with each other."

Of course that's right. But one person's "sharing" is another person's "giveaway program." For example, there's general agreement that our welfare system is lousy for the poor, promotes dependency and doesn't lift welfare recipients into gainful employment. But that general agreement doesn't translate into consensus on a "solution" to the welfare problem. The Republican leaders of the House and Senate claim you can have pro-work welfare and spend less money. Their critics insist, reasonably, that putting welfare recipients to work will cost more money than just writing checks, because jobs for welfare recipients and day care for their children aren't free. ("Frankly, I haven't thought it through," Powell told Time magazine of the welfare dilemmas.)

Now, maybe Powell really could transcend all this in a way that, say, President Clinton could not. Perhaps he could build "this sensible center of the American political spectrum" that he talks about on welfare and a slew of other issues. But doing so is a lot harder than just finding some optimal point on a spectrum and standing there. On welfare, Clinton himself offered what might be seen as a "sensible centrist" approach, involving both concern for the poor and a desire to put welfare recipients into jobs. The plan was assailed as too soft by conservatives and too tough by liberals. It is now nowhere to be seen.

Some admirable people, such as the historian Stephen Ambrose, like a Powell candidacy because they see him as this era's answer to Dwight D. Eisenhower. As Ambrose has brilliantly documented, Eisenhower was a good president. Liberals inclined to trash like might remember that he built the interstate highway system and established the first student loan program (which, in the interest of full disclosure, helped me go to college). Such large monuments to active government would be impossible now.

But as Ambrose also shows, Eisenhower was propelled into politics by a very large cause: his desire to convert the Republican Party from an "isolationist" party into an "internationalist" party. Many people voted for Eisenhower because they admired him as a strong and honest leader, which is presumably why Powell would get a lot of votes. Nonetheless, Eisenhower's claim to leadership was precisely that he was willing to get trashed by "interest groups" to stand for a large idea involving America's world role. Eisenhower, to use his running mate's favorite phrase, got into the arena and truly became—dread word—a "politician."

The problem with the longing for Powell is not Powell himself but the pretense that lurks behind the desire. It is that politics is inherently dirty, that only someone from outside politics can save us from ourselves, that a person of character above the fray always sees things more clearly than those who are in the middle of the fight. Powell is right that a lot of the arguments in politics these days are mean and counterproductive. But you fight bad arguments not with no arguments but with good arguments; flawed politics not with no politics but with better politics. The presidential test for Colin Powell will not be whether he can continue to stand above politics but exactly the opposite: whether he, like Ike, is prepared to take all the risks that those we routinely condemn as "politicians" willingly take every day.

White House explanations. He said it was obvious Karrow was excluded for political reasons only.

"This was not a roundtable discussion, it was a fan club," Weller said. "Clinton liked to pride himself as being a dissident voice during the (Vietnam) War and fighting against the establishment, but now that he is the establishment, he will not give that chance to someone who disagrees with him."

However, Karrow said he did not have any opposing views, only concern about those federal aid programs which affect graduate students. "I have no idea what this dissident view I'm supposed to have is," Karrow said.

Karrow said he was asked while under consideration for the roundtable whether he was in favor of the direct student loan program or graduate student loan interest exemptions, which exclude graduate students from paying interest on their student loans while in school.

It was shortly after that interview when Karrow said he received a call from Financial Aid Director Pam Britton telling him he wasn't selected to be a member of the roundtable.

Britton, who was unavailable for comment, has said previously that she put together a list of students from various colleges and universities, including SIUC, for the White House so they could put together the roundtable. Karrow's name was on that list.

Karrow said Britton told him he was on the list, but he said he was not told he was invited.

"Pam Britton did tell me a thousand times that she did not make the final decision," Karrow said. "She talked with me for 15 or 20 minutes telling me she was sorry I didn't get selected and that she had done everything she could to get me in."

Schwartz also said Karrow was never told he was definitely going to be in the roundtable.

"We did not tell him he was on the panel and then take him off," she said. "We interviewed him and he just wasn't selected."

Jennifer Peck, a Department of Education spokeswoman, said she was one of the people involved in the interview and selection process. She did not interview Karrow, but she said she wished she had.

"It is absolutely not true," Peck said of Weller's accusations. "I screened those applicants myself. We did not want just Democrats. We wanted a diverse group that could tell the president what they liked and didn't like about the current financial aid situation."

Peck said there was no political meaning behind the question posed to Karrow about direct loans and the interest exemptions because Clinton supports both programs.

Clinton talked about both programs in the roundtable discussion, even linking them together, because he said the direct loan program allows students to pay back student loans as a percentage of their income. If either or both programs are abolished, he said, graduate students will greater debt load when they graduate with no option for lower payments.

Peck she did not know who asked Karrow the question and that it might have been a poor question to ask. She also said Karrow may not have been selected because the White House wanted diversity on the roundtable, and there were already a couple of student leaders selected.

"We couldn't have all student leaders," Peck said. "That might very well have been a consideration."

Weller dismissed Peck's comments as well and said Clinton couldn't be counted on to support anything for long.

"Clinton is for anything at any given time," Weller said. "He will change."

Karrow said he is tired of all the attention the situation has created and wants to get back to being a student again. If given a choice, he said he would not have made this into the issue it has become. But he said he doesn't regret it.

"There is one good thing that has come out of all this," he said. "People are talking about financial aid and they care about it. They are thinking about the issues and that's what's important."

Customer Service Center to Open

In focus groups, surveys and studies, representatives of our customer groups have told us that our services are inadequate, complex, and in some cases should be eliminated. In response to our customers' statements and needs, a consulting report recommended the implementation of a comprehensive Customer Service Center which would include a call desk, consulting service, and appropriate software tools.

However, in our effort to provide quality service in pursuit of customer satisfaction, we discovered that the consulting report did not focus sufficient attention on the demand and usage level of our current Help Desk. Over the last few weeks, we have heard the voices of our customers saying, "We want the Help Desk back!" Therefore, with the resources available from the previous Help Desk, we plan to open the first phase of the Customer Service Center the week of October 1, 1995 in Lentz Hall.

During the fall and spring semesters, the Customer Service Center will improve its service level as staffing, training, and re-engineering of workflows can be implemented. The goal is to provide the service and assistance that you have requested. Please bear with us as we make the transition to the new Customer Service Center. If you have any comments or concerns, please feel free to send a memo to the Office of Information Technology, Mailcode #4622, or contact Mike Schwartz, Assistant Director, at 453-6229 or E-mail him at schwartz@siu.edu.

Moro

suspicious while he was doing routine building checks.

John Moro

Wepsiec said the Ellensburg officer ran Moro's license plate number through the Law Enforcement Agency Data System.

Jackson County Sheriff William Kilquist said the Data system provides the name a car is registered under, the make of the vehicle and any warnings within seconds of punching in the plate number.

"Bells and whistles no doubt went off when he ran the plate," Kilquist said.

Authorities said the car was registered under the name Jeffrey Locke. Moro's alias, and was described as a 1978 gray Pontiac Trans Am bearing the Nebraska license plate number JHT643.

This car description matches the one which authorities said witnesses at Touch of Nature reported seeing at the time of the kidnapping.

Two weeks ago, Moro allegedly fled Giant City School with his daughter in a black Trans Am, drove to SIUC Touch of Nature and switched into a gray Trans Am.

Kilquist said they believed Moro had the kidnapping planned months in advance. He said

Moro had bought the gray Trans Am in Omaha NB, touched it up and placed it in storage until he used it during the kidnapping.

Demetria Moro

Wepsiec said after the Ellensburg officer ran the plate check, he contacted the detectives within his police department.

"He did an excellent job of not spooking the scene or situation," Kilquist said.

The Ellensburg detectives called the Jackson County Sheriffs Department, who contacted the Carbondale FBI office.

He said a strategy of capture was planned by both the Carbondale FBI and FBI agents in Yakima, WA.

"It went off without a hitch," Kilquist said.

Wepsiec said the next step is to extradite Moro back to Jackson County.

"(The extradition) could take anywhere from several hours to several months, depending on whether or not Mr. Moro fights extradition," Wepsiec said.

Spending

According to Paratore, USG was allocated $52,000 for fiscal year 1995, which ended June 30. Money that is not spent at the end of a fiscal year is returned to the Student Organization Activity Fee account which funds Registered Student Organizations.

Sherman took office May 15 of last year and had until July 1 to spend the remaining fiscal year funds before they went back into the SOFA account.

"We wanted to spend it before we lost it," Sherman said.

Paratore said anyone can criticize the administration's spending, but Sherman did not do anything contrary to USG spending policy.

Graduate and Professional Student Council President Bill Karrow has suggested that USG adopt a policy similar to a GPSC policy requiring council action to approve expenditures over $200.

"Any organization that gets money for students should be accounted for," Karrow said.

Paratore said USG can adopt such a policy if they want to, but presently the USG president has discretionary spending because he is not restricted by the constitution.

"Duane can't be criticized for not being under those rules," she said.

USG Vice President Kim Clemens said establishing a policy for USG to regulate executive spending without senate approval would be a good idea, but the limit should be higher than $200. USG has a much larger budget than GPSC, and $200 therefore has a larger effect on GPSC. Clemens said.

"When we order paper, that's $200," she said. "I would set a cap of $500 to $1,000."

Clemens said although USG executives would be willing to present expenditures to the senate, there is nothing in the constitution that says it is mandatory.

"The senate cannot mandate the executive staff to do anything because the president has veto power," she said.

Clemens said the best method is to have USG Internal Affairs draft an amendment to the by-laws or to the constitution itself if the senate wants summer expenditures formally reported.

Chavis

Christi C. Harber, assistant director of internal affairs, said Chavis has committed his life to the civil rights movement and he is recognized throughout the country for his leadership skills.

Will Sanders, director of operations, said the leadership conference has more to offer than just Chavis. The conference will include leadership workshops, panel discussions, vendors and keynote speakers.

"There will be a variety of workshops and round-table discussions that will cover issues ranging from personal finance to civil rights," Sanders said.

Two other speakers, Mona Lake Jones and Patricia Russell-McCloud, have been scheduled to deliver their own personal speeches based on the theme of the conference, "Education, Economics, and Empowerment: Foundations for the Black Agenda."

Dwight Gunn, coordinator of the conference, said a leadership team worked throughout the spring semester to look for qualified leaders for the national conference.

The leadership conference is geared to promote African-American issues for all cultures to learn from, Gunn said.

"The purpose of the conference is to enable students to enhance their leadership skills," he said.

Tiffany Thomas, assistant director of external affairs, said all students will gain insight from the leadership conference.

"It's important that every SIUC student attend this conference for motivation and intellectual growth," Thomas said.

The conference is open to the public for a charge of $85. SIUC students and faculty will receive a discount; students admission will be $35 and faculty admission will be $45.

Student fined by jury for harassing teacher

Los Angeles Times

ALEXANDRIA, Ky.—In Room 120-South of Campbell County High School, Andy Bray launched a campaign two years ago against his Spanish teacher, Fran Cook.

He yelled. Red-faced and clenched-jawed, he furiously snapped pencils in two. Asked to use a vocabulary word in a sentence, he chose "matar"—to murder—and said he'd "kill the cook." There was never a lull in his behavior.

But on the second floor of the Campbell County Courthouse last month, Senora Cocina—as her classes call her—got the last word.

A circuit court jury ordered her ex-student to pay $33,700 for harassing and intimidating his instructor, Cook. 55, says she'll use the $25,000 in punitive damages to establish a fund for threatened faculty.

Now, as the academic year begins, school superintendents in northern Kentucky and across the Ohio River in Cincinnati are making sure their staffs and students know that disruption and threats in school can be costly indeed. Editorials in local newspapers, as well as educators across the country, are applauding Cook's decision to take young Bray to court, as well as the jury's decision to back her up.

"This is a really nice twist," said Ronald Stephens, executive director of the National School Safety Center—a joint project of the U.S. Departments of Justice and Education and Pepperdine University in California. "Usually if the teachers have attempted any kind of discipline, the teacher gets sued.... To me, this is a promising tool."

Bray's attorney, Timothy J. Nolan, disagrees. He says Bray was only joking and notes that his client never physically harmed Cook. He says they've lost "a fair amount of teaching time" because of discipline problems.

So even in this blue-collar town of 6,500, flanked by suburbs to the north and farms to the south, unruliness and violence are far from unthought of in the halls of academia.

At the old red-brick building, a banner proclaiming "Best Students, Best Teachers, Best School" is juxtaposed with signs warning that weapons on campus mean a felony charge, and drugs are reported to police.

Teen-age marijuana use doubles since 1992

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON—Marijuana smoking among young people age 12 to 17 has nearly doubled since 1992, a startling new trend that is due in part to an increasing perception by youngsters that pot can't hurt them, federal health officials said Tuesday.

The marijuana numbers, although far below the high reached in 1979, nevertheless indicate a reversal of the downward pattern of marijuana use that began in the early 1980s and continued to drop sharply until 1992.

Monthly marijuana use among 12- to 17-year-olds rose to 7.3 percent—or 1.3 million teens—in 1994, up from 4.0 percent in 1992 and 4.9 percent in 1993, according to the Household Survey on Drug Abuse, conducted by the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration.

In 1979—when the use of all illicit drugs was soaring in the United States—16.8 percent of that age group smoked marijuana.

The survey, based on a nationally representative sample of 22,181 people 12 and older, is the primary source of statistical information on the use of illegal drugs in the United States. For the purposes of the study, drug use was defined as having used the drug sometime in the month before the survey was conducted. The survey also examines alcohol and tobacco use.

The latest increase "should serve as a profound wake-up call to parents," said Lee P. Brown, director of the White House drug policy office. "Statistically, we call it an 'uptick' in the numbers, but it makes me fear for the future of our children if we do not take effective action now."

The survey also found in that age group that the view of marijuana as dangerous had decreased.

Peace and hatred mix in Hebron

The Los Angeles Times

HEBRON, Israeli-Occupied West Bank—If there were a road to hell, it would surely look a lot like this ancient city's Street of the Martyrs, paved in hatred and posted with warning signs of bloodshed ahead.

The entire Israeli-Palestinian peace negotiations are stuck on sun-seared blocks like these in downtown Hebron, where there is a daily face-off between many of the city's 415 radical Jewish settlers and 120,000 embittered Arabs. As Israeli and Palestinian leaders prepared to meet in Taba, Egypt, Wednesday to search for a solution to the Gordian Knot of Hebron, Israeli and Palestinian residents of the city clashed for a third day over the raising of a Palestinian flag at an Arab girls' school.

The real tug-of-war, of course, is over Hebron itself and whose soldiers or police will control the streets.

After touring the city under heavy guard last week, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin vowed that he would not withdraw Israeli troops from downtown Hebron, even though the 1993 Israeli-Palestinian peace accord commits him to redeployment from "population centers" of the West Bank. Israel took the West Bank of the Jordan River in the 1967 Six Day War and has ruled there since.

Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat, meanwhile, met with 30 of Hebron's Palestinian leaders and promised them he would not sign a second-stage accord to expand Palestinian self-rule unless it included an Israeli troop withdrawal from Hebron.

Deion

Washington and Alvin Harper this past offseason. There's only one payoff worth that kind of investment: winning the Super Bowl. Anything short of that is failure. Jones had better hope Deion's bad left ankle, which is said to need arthroscopic surgery plus three weeks rest, isn't worse than Jones has been told.

But presuming Deion is healthy by, say, the end of November, the fight is on. The psychological warfare started Saturday when Policy, the 49ers' president, conducted a session with reporters in Santa Clara, Calif., while sitting behind a can of Coke and a box of Reebok shoes.

Policy didn't forget to pull a Visa card from his wallet, of course, poking fun at the renegade deals Jones has struck with Pepsi and Nike, and one apparently in the works with American Express. "It very well may work for Dallas," Policy told reporters. "It very well may allow them to be able to not only win Super Bowls but to continue to function effectively and efficiently in the near future. We couldn't look our players in the eye if we were to honor a bid such as this for a part-time player. Their offer was beyond significant. ... We felt it was not only inappropriate, but irresponsible, to match that offer. We feel that had we done so, it would have had a very destructive effect on the 49ers' team chemistry and the financial structure and sanity of this organization for years to come."

Oh, that Carmen. Talk about stirring up trouble. The San Francisco players have already taken Policy's cue. Ken Norton, the former Cowboy, told the San Jose Mercury News: "I just hope (Deion's contract) doesn't cause any animosity on their team. If they had that much money, they could've kept the team together the last couple of years. We were all accepting that it was the salary cap, and all of a sudden it isn't."

These are all shots at Jerry Jones. Jones is a strange fellow. Two years ago he thought the Cowboys could win the Super Bowl without Emmitt Smith, until the Cowboys went 0-2 and Jones reluctantly paid Smith, who's only the most valuable running back since Jim Brown.

Now, having lost out to the 49ers last season, Jones is convinced Deion's the difference. Maybe he's right. (And let me take this time to say I was under heavy, heavy medication that weekend when I wrote, not once but twice, that the Cowboys were about to start a free-fall down to the ledge where the likes of the Vikings and Bears and Giants live. I don't know why my editors allow me to write when I'm all medicated like that.) But Jones is also obsessed with the 49ers and the reputation they enjoy, a level of nationwide respect he hasn't been accorded. Jones apparently believes in the old slogan, "If you can't fight, then switch." Last season Jones didn't think it was that big a deal that the 49ers signed Deion, but now he's a believer.

But the 49ers aren't happy that Deion got so much credit for the team's Super Bowl season. "Didn't we win a few Super Bowls before Deion got here?" Policy said in an earlier conversation.

Rice, who wasn't always terribly happy about Deion's presence in the first place, was seething with anger Sunday when a reporter asked him about the significance of losing Deion to the Cowboys. Rice hasn't shown that kind of temper off the field in his career.

But he believes three-fourths of the 49ers' defensive backfield — Tim McDonald, Merton Hanks and Eric Davis — got dissed while the media went crazy over Deion.

Starting tailback William Tolen separated his shoulder in the Murray St. game last Saturday and is questionable for this week's game. If Tolen cannot play Karlton Carpenter will get the starting nod with Coe Bonner and Kevin Hannah expected to see playing time. Tolen's injury is the only major injury from the Racers game.

Jones' up and down

Watson said starting tight end Damon Jones has gone beyond expectations blocking for the ground game, but has struggled in the passing game.

"He has been dominating at times in the run game and he hasn't been close to his ability in the passing game," he said. "He's been dropping a lot of passes, so I've been working with him in that area and trying to give him a lot of repetitions."

Packers continue Bears' woes

The Los Angeles Times

CHICAGO—Brett Favre wiped the sweat from his Elvis sideburns and smiled a crooked smile.

"Tonight was like a little bit of heaven," he said.

Inside the Green Bay Packer locker room, Favre's teammates hunched over duffel bags, rubbed bruised biceps, breathed heavy and pained.

A little bit of heaven? For Favre, sure.

The Packers' 27-24 victory against their longtime rival Chicago Bears occurred on a perfectly strange night for football's strangest quarterback.

There was the three scrambling, flinging touchdown passes thrown by Favre in the first 20 minutes, including an NFL-record 99-yarder.

Then there was the 20-point lead that the Packers couldn't hold because Favre insisted on "still" flinging the ball, wilder with each attempt, a country boy behaving as if ball control is worse than gun control.

There was Favre, running and growing and inspiring the Packers to double the Bears' yardage in less than three quarters.

There was Favre, throwing a pass directly to Donnell Woolford, leading to a Bear touchdown that closed the gap to 27-21 early in the fourth quarter.

"It doesn't bother us, we're used to all this," said Packer safety Leroy Butler with a smile. "You got to remember, Brett does it every day in practice."

Finally there was Favre ending the game by running the only play which is guaranteed not to make his teammates hyperventilate.

Two minutes after Reggie White knocked the ball out of Erik Kramer's hands to end the Bears' last-gasp drive, Favre took a knee.

And the Packers had survived to win for just the 62nd time in the 149th meeting between the NFL's oldest rivals.

Perhaps more important to them, they also survived to go 1-1, matching the start of the rival Bears, before 64,855 at Soldier Field.

Favre was so excited, who knows, maybe this week he'll do something silly like shove.

"Whew, it got tough when we had that field goal blocked," he said.

Blocked field goal? "You mean, we didn't have a field goal blocked tonight?" he said. "Oh, well. It was a long game."

In the fourth quarter, however, the Packers did have a botched punt, a botched field goal, and a fumbled kickoff.

The only reason they were able to survive this is that Favre, with the Packers holding the ball and three-point lead with 9:02 left, was able to complete 38 yards worth of passes and lead his team on a time-consuming drive that ended in the botched field goal.

Three plays after the Bears took over the ball deep in their territory with just 2:40 left, White's slap and Wayne Simmons' recovery ended it.

And suddenly the Packers could celebrate how the game began.

"I was out there and it was like, I could complete anything I threw," Favre said.

There was Favre, looking in 10 different directions before finding Robert Brooks in the corner of the end zone for the Packers' first touchdown.

Not that the Bears defenders were dazed, but Brooks was five yards from anybody, and the play began on the four-yard line.

Friendly competition good for Saluki squad

By Chad Anderson
Daily Egyptian Reporter

With a third place finish this past weekend at the Bradley Invitational in Peoria, SIUC coach Don DeNoon is excited about his team.

DeNoon cites the return of sophomore Kelly French, who was sidelined with bronchitis, as one of the main reasons the team did well in Peoria.

"The missing link between the performances of the past two meets is Kelly," he said. "Even with an entire team, when one of your top runners comes back, it's going to help out. If we had her a week earlier we might have won against Southern Indiana instead of losing to both Southern Indiana and Kansas."

DeNoon was impressed with the performances of co-captains Kim Koerner and French, and freshmen Colleen Bouck and Sharlene Downing.

"Kim's performance has to stand out, and Colleen stands out as our top performance. She is the first freshman to break 19 minutes in the last six years," he said. "Kelly helped us by returning, and she may be fighting for the top spot. Sharlene ran a minute and a half faster this week than last week."

DeNoon said Koerner has provided the kind of leadership on the team he expected from her.

"She's a really solid person, she gives a lot, and she's there for everyone," he said.

He also said he thought Koerner was running conservatively, but it was no different from the rest of the team.

"She's been somewhat conservative, but that may be because of her confidence," DeNoon said. "It's tough to run hard when you're not sure how your body will react."

"That puts some doubt in the back of your mind. She is definitely performing really well. The whole team started out a little conservative Saturday, and that makes for a lot of people to go around. That course just doesn't allow for that."

"Kim is an overachiever. She has a 4.00 GPA, but that doesn't come easy for her, she works at it," he said. "She puts in her 16-hour days every day and she's a very high goal oriented person. I'll take an overachiever over a super talent any day. Athletes like her have been the bread and butter of my program."

Friendly competition is probably the best thing the team has going for it.

"I think there is a lot of friendly competition on the team," DeNoon said. "One girl wrote in her diary that she was out to beat anyone she could. I think Kelly definitely thinks she needs to be up there running stride for stride with Kim, and Sharlene's confidence is really coming along."

"She'll be a future superstar."

Downing said her academics are her No. 1 priority, aside from her running.

"My priorities are running and academics, but academics come first," she said. "I'm really surprised he (DeNoon) said that (she was a future superstar). I'll say I'm a hard worker and I'm confident about my running."

Downing, a native of North Las Vegas, Nev., said she is not used to running in Southern Illinois yet.

"The breathing is a lot harder with the humidity, but once I get used to it, I'll get better."

French also thought some competition would do the team good, and hopes to go for the number one spot on the team.

"I hope to go for the No. 1 spot, but Kim is very strong," she said. "I'm a little behind of where I should be right now because I wasn't able to train as hard as I wanted to."

"Competition can only help the team. We can help each other that way."

Growing pains concern for Watson in early going

By Doug Durso
DE Sports Editor

As the SIUC football team heads into Saturday's game with Division I-A Arkansas St., the Salukis are trying to mesh together a team that has a lot of new and young faces.

The Dawgs new players are a bonus and a negative as the Salukis have a bright future, but have to go through some growing pains before they get to the level many expect.

This is apparent especially at the quarterback position where redshirt freshman Reggie Kennedy and sophomore Danny Smith, a transfer from Miami (Ohio), are leading the SIUC offense.

SIUC head coach Shawn Watson said he is not sure who is going to start for the Salukis against Arkansas St.

"I'm going to lean towards seeing how practice works out to be honest with you," he said. "I want to make sure we handle the kids the right way and be straight with them, so they can have a future and feel good about their club."

Watson is especially concerned with keeping Kennedy's confidence up after a couple of shaky starts.

"We're going to evaluate that situation," Watson said. "Looking back on it Reggie, a young quarterback, made young quarterback errors."

"I'm going to handle those with him behind close doors. I still think he can be a good quarterback down the road and I've got to handle his future."

Another group of new player's Watson is trying to bring along is in the receiving corps. The Salukis have no senior receivers and newcomers Stephen Gerald's a freshman from Sikeston, Mo., and transfer junior Johnny Thomas will be counted on to stretch opposing defenses.

"Stephen Gerald's going to be a good player the problem is he's young," he said. "Johnny Thomas is going to be a good player and has made one big play and has shown he can make them in practice, however he is still learning the system."

"So, we're handicapped by some guys still learning, that's not an excuse that's just where we're at. We just have to keep giving them reps; we have to give them a lot of time in those situations in practice."

The Saluki tailback position is also dotted with newcomers.

Lefthanded Gardner swings right for Saluki tennis team

By Melanie Gray
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A solid foundation is the starting point for a good athletic team.

A native of Essex, England, Gardner came to SIUC for further her education and to play tennis.

She is doing just that.

Gardner won the Missouri Valley Conference at No. 2 singles last fall for the Salukis, ending the season with a record of 27-13.

Gardner maintains a 3.51 grade point average, despite the time she dedicates to tennis. The team practices five days a week and also conditions outside of set practice times.

Saluki coach Judy Auld said Gardner is a welcome player on the courts.

"She is very focused on the court," she said. "She likes to perform well individually to help the team."

Gardner also said the team has a strong sense of togetherness.

"The whole team looks after each other," she said. "It is a continual

Sanders vs. Rice, '49'ers vs. Cowboys; Jones thinks Deion worth the price

By Michael Wilbon
The Washington Post

Deion Sanders was the best defensive player in the NFL last season. Whether he ever popped anybody, whether he ever supported the run, Deion was the best defensive player in the NFL last season. When playoff teams are scared even to throw in his direction, thus reducing the width of the playing field by at least one-third, that's what you call impact.

Having said that, I'll make you this bet: Deion can't cover Jerry Rice. Couldn't cover him for the Atlanta Falcons, couldn't have covered him last year in practice, can't cover him now for the Dallas Cowboys, not on Nov. 12 in Dallas, not in the NFC championship game in mid-January, can't cover him period.

But it'll be such a thrill watching him try, or for that matter just anticipating the matchup. Let's face it, neither the Dolphins, the Chargers, the Steelers, the Patriots, nor anybody else in the NFC matters anymore. The NFL season is about the Dallas Cowboys vs. the San Francisco 49ers, Deion vs. Rice, Jerry Jones vs. Carmen Policy. That's the whole season.

That's our Ali-Frazier, and everything else is the undercard.

Jones and the Cowboys think Deion is worth $25 million to $30 million over the next five years. Jones thinks Deion is worth an upfront $12.75 million signing bonus, which by itself is nearly as much as Emmitt Smith's entire four-year contract.

Jones restructured seven contracts, including Troy Aikman's, to get Deion. Jones paid Deion all the money (plus some) he wouldn't pay starters Mark Stepnoski, see DEION, page 14
