Redevelopment project draws mixed reactions

By Karen Turry Staff Writer

The city’s modified version of a downtown hotel-conference center project was introduced to the public Monday night and met with the same mixed reactions which have plagued the original redevelopment plan.

City officials at the public hearing expressed hope that the new proposal would meet federal guidelines for using government money earmarked for a conference center and that the city could purchase land needed for the project. Mayor Petrow both encouraged support of and strong opposition to the project.

Developer Stan Kelley pulled out of the project last November, told citizens who tating plans never die, they just get new wrinkles.

Kelley, Dillard lead in Council race

With 36 of 27 Carbondale precincts reporting, Petrow, Kelley and Councilman Nell Dillard led challengers Henry Fisher, Mark Majors and Thomas Couch Tuesday night in the race for the citywide council seat.

Kelley, a 30-year-old associate professor at the SIU Law School, campaigned on the basis of his experience in city government. He has studied and taught classes on local government and served on the city council in Livonia, Ill., from 1978 to 1981.

Dillard, a 22-year-old real estate student, also said the city needs an experienced mayor to lead what will be a council of relative newcomers to city government.

Because the parking garage would occupy less land than the current proposal, the revised plan would allow the project to be completed without the assistance held by the Walnut Street Baptist Church and Nutrition Workshops, whose owners have refused to sell their property to the city.

USO presidential hopefuls lock horns

By James Derk Staff Writer

The candidates for president of the Undergraduate Student Government (USG) were lobbed verbal mud at each other during a debate Monday night before an approximately 250-crowd in the Student Center.

Tommy, a candidate Bruce Joseph clashed with Maverick Party hopeful Steven Petterson Monday night. Most of the debate was an exchange of political positions. The candidates will vie for the presidency in an election scheduled for Wednesday.

Joseph speaking first, said his “Trojanians can succeed” plan will help students save money and give them more say in campus government.

To save the students’ money, we will look at tuition increases,” Joseph said. “Our students will do well in the past and will continue to do so.

We have completed many successful projects,” Petrow said. “Despite what you might hear, we are not just standing on our past reputation. We are going to build an even better one.

Petterson said the USO will cut executive salaries and keep existing USO programs, such as the Book Co-operatives, Writing Center and Student Government, but will also initiate new some. Joseph said the Trojans will start an “I’ve Got a Problem Hotline” for students to call the USO with any school-related problem.

Petterson said the USO already has an effective system.

“We call it a phone,” he said. Petterson said students can call the USO with any problems.

Joseph said one of the main

Petrow said he would rather experts in higher education make the cuts because they've more qualified than he is to do so.

Tate said he will introduce a resolution calling for a study by the IBHE on the feasibility of a statewide savings program in higher education. He said resolution will ask the IBHE for:

- an examination of the mission of public institutions of higher education.
- a cost comparison of higher education facilities.
- possible consolidation and elimination of programs.
- a study of the impact of enrollments on the future of public institutions.
- a study of the relationship between higher education and the economic needs of Illinois.

problems facing the USO is a lack of student influence on the organization.

"USO numbers can't walk around thinking they are junior politicians saying 'we're going to do this, we're going to do that.' They need to get in touch with the students," Joesph said.

Petrov said the USO does have open channels to the student body through the Student Senate. He said Executive Branch representatives and various senate committees were combined under the new condition to give individual senators greater influence.

"The constitution was rewritten with the main purpose of empowering the senate," Joesph said.

But Joseph said the new constitution puts more power into the Executive Branch.

"We feed power should be put back into the senate. Right now we have a headstrong executive branch," Joseph said.

Joseph said the Mavericks reduced the number of senators Class 111 to 33 and raised the senate less effective. The Program would increase the number back to 50.

But Petrov said the senate is much more efficient with the new number.

"Decisions are made much more rapidly and things work much smoother," Petrov said.

Both candidates say the part-time student union should be addressed.

Petrov said the main problem with SIU-C's party-school image is the annual Halloween celebration. He suggested that the city's Halloween Task Force would find a solution to the problem.

Aronson said the key to controlling the party-school image is the annual Halloween celebration. He suggested that the city's Halloween Task Force would find a solution to the problem.

F-Senate rejects salary cut proposal

By Phillip Florini
Staff Writer

The Faculty Senate rejected a proposal Thursday to give the SIU-C president authority to reduce salaries of faculty and administrative-professional staff.

The senate requested that the Board of Trustees delay consideration of the proposal until its meeting in June. The board was expected to address the proposal at its May meeting. President Albert Somit said last week, the senate also agreed to have the Committee on Committees establish a Committee on Financial Exigency to draft an alternative plan to the proposal, which, if approved by the board, would allow the president to authorize salary cuts.

This committee would prepare a report to be presented to the senate April 26 in a special meeting. The committee would also decide on conditions leading to a possible declaration of financial exigency.

The Graduate Council rejected the plan last week, but Donow said the council should have decided what other alternatives could be taken instead of action alone. John Baker, special assistant to Somit, told the senate that the proposal had been handed down from Chancellor Kenneth Shaw’s office as a reaction to concerns expressed by the president of SIU-C and SIU-Edwardsville.

Randall Nelson, professor in political science, said the University should be prepared for a shortfall no matter when it came. He said it was possible that the Legislature might not approve the governor’s tax increase until after July 1.

“Our response should be a written draft that has our own concerns,” he said. “If we have to make a sacrifice, the limit will be to one year.”

Nelson said the senate should ask itself what could happen if the University has a shortfall of $4 million or $12 million.

Donow asked, “Do we push down the University to deal with next year’s possible shortfall if there is no tax increase?”

He said that a shutdown of the Budget Advisory Committee has been discussing would take place if the shortfall was around $8 million.

The assumption the budget committee was working with and the one I was arguing in favor of was shutting down the University instead of firing people,” Donow said. He said the University could possibly save $27 million for every year it was shut down.

Baker said that if a tax increase is not approved, the University may have to meet a shortfall of about $4 million for next year depending on tuition levels. He said 160 people could be fired to meet a shortfall of that magnitude.

Many members of the senate said the board should realize that faculty members do not want their contracts changed. William Gregory, a law professor, said the proposal as a whole, could only refer to new faculty contracts.

“Tenured faculty don’t have contracts every year, they have lifetime contracts,” he said. “They only adjust the salary. The contract remains constant — could be upward,” he said.

City’s proposed funding cuts protested

By John Schrag
Staff Writer

A proposal to reduce city funding to social services met with opposition Monday night at a public hearing where emotions ran high and patience wore thin.

Faced with the prospect of slow growth in city revenues, dwindling federal funds for social services and a commitment to keep a balanced budget, City Manager Carroll Fray has recommended that city funding to social services be reduced next year.

That recommendation drew fire Monday night from members of the groups that would be hardest hit if the proposed budget is adopted.

The proposed budget calls for city funding to the Senior Citizens Center and Carbondale Women’s Center to be cut in half in fiscal year 1983-84, which begins May 1.

Two other programs, the Attucks Board Youth Program and the Jackson County Youth Services Program, would have their funding cut next year under the proposed budget. This year they received $20,665 and $6,740, respectively.

The Attucks Board Unified Social Services program would receive $11,625, the same amount as last year.

Joyce Webb, president of the Women’s Center, said she realized “money is short,” but asked the council to consider the services the center provides to the community.

She said the center, which received $10,000 from the city last year, provides nine full-time and five part-time jobs in Carbondale. The center, which requested $12,000 for next year, would receive $5,000 under the proposed budget. Although the center has other funding sources, she said, the city’s share is within the center’s operation, particularly its Shelter I program, which serves women and children.

Representatives from the Attucks Council, too, made it clear they wouldn’t let the youth programs being cut be cut without a fight.

Milton Maxwell, former chairman of the board, said he was glad the city proposed to continue funding the Attucks Board social services program, but said “a serious error of judgment has been made” about the proposed cuts to the youth program, which operates out of the Gurner-C. Haynes Center.

“The Attucks board is prepared to take cuts along with all the other groups, he said, "but we’re not prepared to be cut out completely.”

Darneca Moirrie, coordinator of the Attucks Board, agreed with Maxwell, saying that the Park District programs do not adequately serve the youth of Carbondale.

“We’re talking about youth who are not able to pay the money that the Park District requires,” she said. “We’re talking about youth who don’t have the means to get to Parrish School to play soccer, youth who don’t even know what the word soccer means.”

Alfred Branch, the other coordinator of the Attucks youth program, told the council the program helps prevent young people from the northeast side of Carbondale to contribute to the city’s future.

“We have been making progress with the youth,” Haqq said. “You may not see it now, but I’m sure that the citizens of Carbondale will see it five or ten years from now.”

Maxwell asked the council to consider cutting in half city funds to the Attucks social services program and funding the youth program at $25,701 next year.

Although the council will not make a final decision on the budget until next week, two council members indicated support for the youth program.

Councilman Archie Jones said he will not support cutting out the youth program completely, and Councilwoman Nozings, who is the director of the Attucks youth program, told the council the program helps prevent young people in the northeast side of Carbondale to contribute to the city’s future.

“We have been making progress with the youth,” Haqq said. “But we’re not prepared to be cut out completely.”

Study Maverick record

As a person who is active in student government, I have had this experience of working with and gaining much knowledge from the Maverick Party. The papers have had their fair share of anti-Maverick opinions in the past few weeks, but now it is time for the students to use their Maverickrecord.

The Maverick Party was elected in 1966 and re-elected in 1968. This means that the first time in SUC's history there have been 16 years of Maverick Party, and no one has been re-elected. They must have done a few things right.

In their past accomplishments, I would have to say that the one that sticks out in my mind is the programs. The Maverick Party has implemented a book co-op and discounted textbooks program, along with a VISA Credit Card and student telephone discount.

While these services may have had a few mishaps, the Maverick Party has been successful in getting these services to meet the needs of the students.

The Trojans Party says they want to work for the student to the extent of the student's needs. I would have to agree.

The Maverick Party has met up with students, and I think that this is a great thing. They have met with many different students in order to get their point across.

If I were to have one "I have a problem" hotline, they do have a system that works very well. If a student calls in or comes to the Union, they are not going to be turned away.

The Trojan Party is also doing a great job in getting the students involved with the school. They do have a lot of activities that the students enjoy.

The Maverick Party does have some activities that are not as popular as the Trojan Party's. However, they are trying their best to make their activities as good as the Trojan's.

I would have to say that the student government has done a great job in the past few weeks, and I hope that they will continue to do so in the future.

Opinion & Commentary

Election's over; let leaders lead

GSPC VICE-PRESIDENT Dan Venturi said after last week's election that he was happy to get all the politicking out of the way and turn his attention to business and business and have no time to worry about whether an election is run by the book, will be some too glad to see the Graduate and Professional Student Council get down to business.

Ann Greeley, who was re-elected president of the GSPC, can feel confident she should graduate students — that stability is a Maverick.

The Mavericks Day, an activity which brings accomplishments. one would have to use the "Maverick" word. The Mavericks have been re-elected. They should vote for, not for the "Maverick" word.

But graduate students should be relieved by the GRADVATE STUDENTS will work as hard as they can to stop the Trojan Party. The Mavericks have a proud reputation and wishes to build it even better.

I would like to see the issues, ask the questions and look at the experience. Then decide — Mike Stagner, Sophomore, Marketing.

"Trojans lack honesty, maturity and judgement"

I have listened to both sides, met both sides, heard both sides and I am convinced that the Trojan Party is the most qualified for the USO.

Steve Petrov and Mike Greshouse are interested in student safety and finances. They have been working to make SUC a safer place and have a better understanding of the student life. They have a greater overall interest in our lives and want to maximize benefits while minimizing losses in student responsibility, hmmm.

While the Trojans talk, the Maverick Party has been working diligently to stop tuition hikes. They are checking budgets, planning trips to Springfield and Washington, D.C. and are aware of what is in store for higher education. Have the Trojans done anything on this issue?

I encourage anybody with ideas to go to the USO office. Your questions will be taken very seriously and be answered to the best of my ability — a Maverick.

The Trojan Party has been working hard to stop discontent. They have been trying to stop people from being discontent. They have been trying to make the students feel better about themselves.

Yet whenever someone was rude or stepping out of line, security was there to answer the call, always being polite and courteous.

Security does not wish to harp on or be a detriment affect on the atmosphere of the concert. But many times they are required to exemplify force, more than should be needed. In one particular incident, a fan, after yelling obscenities at the band members, was let go after a deal, received fair warnings. In one instance, the Trojans Party was able to resist. Conclusion? Thank security for throwing him out. It was the best way to make the students feel better.

Student voice stronger under the Maverick Party

In my first two years here at SIU-C, I have encountered many different student organizations. I have been involved with the student government. Why? Because I wanted to make a difference, and that is what had the USO done for me.

This year I decided to find out. I began involved with the Academic Affairs Commission. I soon realized that the students in the USO were not just there to smile pretty at a camera. USO is not a social organization — it has become an effective, dedicated body of students, for students, by students. In a time when no one seems to care what the student voting seems so irrelevant, it is important to stop to realize that these people do care.

These dedicated students in the USO go under the name of the Maverick Party. I am one of them... and PROUD of it — Rose McGettigan, Senatorial Candidate, West Side *
Sale of industrial bonds backed by City Council

Carbondale City Council members indicated Monday night that they will support the sale of $2.5 million in industrial revenue bonds to finance an expansion of the Tuck Tape manufacturing plant.

Fifty job openings would result from the plant expansion, according to a memorandum written by Frank Moreno, the city's director of economic development. The expansion would include construction of a two-story addition to the northeast corner of the plant.

Program for clinical staff set

A program consisting of a luncheon and a seminar will be given to clinical instructors of 12 hospitals from three states Thursday in the Mississippi Room in the Student Center. The luncheon will start at 11:45 a.m., followed by the seminar at 1 p.m.

The purpose of the seminar is to teach the instructors how to manage students who will be working for various hospitals in Illinois, Missouri and Kentucky. The students are from SIU-C and will be completing the job training requirements for an associated degree in radiologic technology or respiratory therapy.

City candidates accused of vote buying

CAIRO (AP) - Reports that voters were given money, select revenue bonds to finance an manufacturing plant.

Fifty job openings would be demolished. The council will vote on a resolution to approve sale of the bonds at its formal meeting next Monday.

Tuck Tape recently received a $100,000 grant from the Illinois Department of Commerce and Community Affairs to pay to train new entry-level workers and upgrade the skills of 25 employees.

The seminar is sponsored by the Department of Vocational Education Studies.

S- Senate to view funding bills

The Student Senate will consider three funding bills at its regular meeting at 7 p.m. Wednesday in Student Center Ballroom B.

The Synergy Student Auxiliary has requested $300 in funds from the Senate for an annual convention. The organization is a non-profit human services organization. The Senate will also consider funding for Sigma Epsilon Tau in New Orleans. PSE had requested $700, and the Finance Commission voted to approve $350.

The Arnold Air Society also requested funds to attend a convention. The Senate will consider allocating $311.

The Members of Accent Group are also petitioning the Senate for recognized student organization status.

Sturgis award nominations being taken

Nominations are being accepted for the annual Lindell W. Sturgis Memorial Public Service Award.

Eligible candidates must be current employees of SIU-C. The award will be based on contributions to the community, area, state or nation and unrelated job activities.

This year's recipient will be honored by the Sturgis Board of Trustees on July 14. The winner will receive a cash gift and a plaque. Nominations are to be submitted to the Karnes, Regional Research and Service Office, prior to April 22.

The family of the late Lindell W. Sturgis established the award through an endowment fund with the SIU Foundation. Sturgis was a member and chairman of the SIU-C Board of Trustees.

FARMERS yield in battle with company

CHAMPAIGN, ILL. (AP) — A group of central Illinois farmers has given up an eight-year battle to stop Illinois Power Co. from erecting double-shaft utility poles on their property. IP and the farmers had agreed that if no legal action was taken to delay completion of the 33-mile line from Kansas to Sidney. IP would use single-shaft poles on the remaining half.

However, attorney Perry Albin said one landowner notified IP he would go to court to fight the line. Farmers do not like double-shaft poles because modern equipment is too large to go between them or close to them, so some land cannot be farmed. IP contends the double-shaft poles are less expensive than single-shaft metal poles.

FARMERS yield in battle with company

CHAMPAIGN, ILL. (AP) — A group of central Illinois farmers has given up an eight-year battle to stop Illinois Power Co. from erecting double-shaft utility poles on their property. IP and the farmers had agreed that if no legal action was taken to delay completion of the 33-mile line from Kansas to Sidney. IP would use single-shaft poles on the remaining half.

However, attorney Perry Albin said one landowner notified IP he would go to court to fight the line. Farmers do not like double-shaft poles because modern equipment is too large to go between them or close to them, so some land cannot be farmed. IP contends the double-shaft poles are less expensive than single-shaft metal poles.

Sport cards lucrative, dealer says

By David Sedman
Student Writer

With the coming of March comes the new baseball cards. To SIU-C freshman Harold Sugarman, baseball cards are big business.

Sugarman said the non-sport card business has become quite a business as well as a hobby. "At dealers it has become quite a money business as well as a hobby," Sugarman said.

Some dealers make money more than doctors. They can make about $4,000 a week and don't have to worry about malpractice.

The turnover in baseball cards is very good, Sugarman said. During Christmas break, Sugarman said he bought some non-sport cards with different animals depicted, "inspensively." At the SISCA's first baseball card show in February, Sugarman traded about half of the non-sport cards for one Willie Mays card.

"I sold the Pays for $125," he said.

The most valuable card, Sugarman said, is a 1911 Honus Wagner that one dealer sold at a show recently for $2,500.

The SISCA was formed in January to "bring together all of the collectors throughout Southern Illinois," he said. "We hold regular meetings and we will have four card conventions a year.

Their first baseball card show drew 400 people. Sugarman said he had a "good" day selling $300 worth of baseball cards and noted, "I hope to do even better at our next show on May 1." Sugarman said the value of a baseball card is determined by several factors including age, condition and whether it is the first card of a player issued. The first Pete Rose card issued in 1963 is selling for almost $400, but the 1964 Rose is selling for $40. Sugarman remarked, "Most of the newer cards are not worth as much, but Sugarman pointed out that a John Littlefield, put out by the Fleer Company in 1982, could be worth $20 because of an error that the proofreader did not catch in the first printing of the cards.

Fleer, Donruss and Topps Gum are the three companies that produce new baseball cards. Sugarman said that a court ruling in 1980 ended Topps monopoloy on card producing and opened the door for Fleer and Donruss. The result has been a "glut on the market," Sugarman said.

While he was not sure whether all three companies could co-exist, Sugarman seemed sure that the future of card collecting is good and he hopes to add to his collection of 100,000 - and, of course, sell a few along the way.

Energy audits taught by resource group

The Renewable Energy Resource Group will train 20 to 30 students from Tamms High School in conducting energy audits and solve home energy programs under a grant from the state Department of Energy and Natural Resources.

Tamms was awarded a $2,500 grant through the federal energy extension service fund. The money will be used for technical assistance in computerized energy audits and energy conservation training.

The program is expected to begin this month. A computer session at the Tamms school will be used for the energy audits program.
Health, travel to be included in program

Good health can be a vital part of ensuring a positive educational experience, especially if the student is studying abroad, according to Lynn Waishwell of SIU-C's International Services.

Waishwell will present some basic overseas health information from 7 to 8 p.m. Wednesday in the Missouri Room of the Student Center for interested students. Among other topics, Waishwell will discuss jet lag, medical assistance, insurance coverage and problems with food and water. She will also answer questions students have or refer them to sourcebooks available at the office of international education.

Waishwell said the information should be helpful to students who plan to travel anywhere and want to know how to prevent health problems and how to obtain help if they do become ill.

Barbara Hansen scheduled to speak at group's meeting

A Women's Caucus meeting at noon Wednesday in the Thebes Room will feature a presentation by Barbara Hansen, associate vice president for academic affairs and dean of the graduate school.

The women's caucus holds meetings every month at noon. Membership is open to all female employees and students. Members and guests may either bring their lunch or purchase food in the cafeteria.

Grants to assist local tourism push

By David Murphy
Student Writer

The Southern Illinois Tourism Council will receive a portion of grants that total $26,545 to fund promotion of area tourist attractions, the state Department of Commerce and Community Affairs has announced.

The Southern Illinois Tourism Council, a volunteer group located in Murphysboro, as well as the Western and Central Illinois Tourism Councils, will receive a total of 10 grants.

The Southern Illinois council was awarded funding for seven projects. The total grant awarded the Southern Council is $17,793.

According to DCCA Director Peter Fox, the intentions of the grants are two-fold.

"Money invested in tourism promotions reaps overwhelming returns," said Fox. "Not only do tourists spend millions of dollars in Illinois each year, but we also are able to show the world the beautiful state in which we live."

The reprinting of the "Southern Illinois Fishing Guide" and a series of "mini-trip" brochures are projects included in the funding. Also funded is the production of a brochure featuring the Shawnee National Forest and one promoting Belleville.

The Central Illinois Council was awarded funding for three projects. Nearly $1,995 in grants will be used to print a tour map of Knox County and a guide to events in Peoria. Funding will also be used to promote the "Rock Island Summer Festival."

Three grants totaling $3,495 will help in promotion of Springfield's annual "Lincoln Days" program at Oak Park's Annual Stock Historical Association festival and production of a brochure about the town of Hoopston.

Money for the grants is allocated by the DCCA's Division of Tourism upon request of the regional councils. By law, the DCCA can fund no more than 60 percent of the total cost of any project. Local funds must also be generated.

Men made women scapegoats from the start, professor says

By Greg Stewart

Most people know the story of Eve from the book of Genesis and the story of Pandora from mythology. Eve was the first woman to bring sin to the world, while Pandora opened a box that let evil loose in the world.

According to Joan O'Brien, those two incidents marked a great distortion in "creation goddesses" in mythology and of women in society.

"O'Brien, an associate professor in foreign languages, says that creation goddesses are "mother goddesses who gave birth to the world." She believes that men in antiquity were looking for someone besides themselves to blame their problems on and women made a handy scapegoat.

Since almost 2000 B.C. society has been patriarchal in structure, she says. "It is time for female opinions" in mythology, says O'Brien. In the past, society was mostly controlled by men, and women suffered because of it, she said.

O'Brien says myths reflect "the ideals of the predominant group" of society and men have always been the undervalued group. In what happened to women in ancient society and relating those happenings to the treatment of goddesses in ancient life.

"Literature reflects life," O'Brien says, and "women haven't been made to think of themselves as people that can accomplish more than men's work." O'Brien thinks woman's position in society is now at an important historical moment of change because of the historical awareness of women as individuals.

The story of women in ancient mythology is a new field, popular for the last 15 years or so. O'Brien, who has been interested in this field since her beginning, attributes its previous obscurity to the fact that men have symbolically dominated the classics field. That, however, is changing, O'Brien says.

"Mythology is kind of a romantic field," she says. It's natural that women, as well as men, would be attracted to it." O'Brien says people's interpretations of myths, as well as of women in myth, will continue to grow and change because of scholars bringing new ideas entering the classics field.

"There are constant dramatic changes in mythology," O'Brien says. "Our reading of them will change as our perspectives change." O'Brien will go on sabbatical next spring to work on a series of articles on the role of women in creation myths and will try to link the figures of Eve and Pandora with earlier personal theories.

Much of what she says about women in mythology, she admits, is her own theory, but she hopes to eventually get beyond personal theories.

John King, present chairman of the department, will retire Aug. 31, and Graham's appointment will become effective Sept. 1.

King, 69, is known nationally for his achievements in the department. He came to SIU-C in 1967 as a visiting professor, and was asked to stay on.

"Working with students, graduates, and faculty colleagues of this department has been a rewarding and happy experience in collegiality for me during the last 13 years, and I hope strongly that Jack Graham may have similar joy and good fortune for a longer period of time," said King of his successor.

completing her goal may prove difficult because of the lack of evidence.

"In Greek prehistory, we have evidence of male warriors but we don't have much evidence of queens," O'Brien says. "Those who want to push for matrarchy turn to the Mesopotamian civilization of 3000 to 1000 B.C., where females seemed to be more powerful than males."

On her sabbatical, O'Brien plans to travel to Harvard University, London and then on to Greece, where she will use art as well as literature to help substantiate her theory.

O'Brien presented a paper on early creation goddesses recently at Ohio State University and will travel to Greece this summer for a four-week seminar sponsored by the Department of Philosophy, where she will begin her research on the island of Samos in advance of her sabbatical.

Jazz group, Shadowfax to kick off Miller series

By Jeff Wilkinson
Staff Writer

Just as the first rays of sunshine are finally hitting Carbondale, the Student Programming Council is starting the 1983 outdoor concert season. At 4 p.m. Friday at the east end of the Recreation Center, SPC will present the Miller Rock Series with the jazz-fusion band Shadowfax. The Chicago-based band has recently signed with the Windham Jazz label and released a self-titled first album which is at number 35 on Billboard Magazine's Jazz Chart.

The Miller Rock Series, which featured the Jig Twist concert last fall, is a warmup for the Miller-sponsored, annual SPC Springfest. It is also an example of SPC's search for corporate sponsorship to battle increasing costs and budget cutbacks.

SPC programming chair Kurt Karlenzig said "we always run out of funds toward the end of the year. Last year SPC on the whole was cut $3,000. Plus we are allocated the same amount of money for three years in a row while inflation keeps going up. That's where the real cut comes in."

"So we have been searching for different sponsors, and breweries are really big on it these days."

According to Karlenzig, the major breweries are in an advertising war and they "have got college marketing down. We had other offers, but decided to go with Miller again because they're familiar with us and we like working with them."

Miller is underwriting all of the entertainment costs for the upcoming Shadowfax concert as well as most of the entertainment for Springfest. While it might seem unethical for a major brewery to sponsor an event on campus where drinking is prohibited, Karlenzig doesn't see any hassle.

"We're not saying that it's OK to drink. We're just taking advantage of the fact that a major company wants to sponsor us. If people want to bring coolers and drink, they have to keep it low-key. We're not the police. We just keep the music going."

"The University has no existing policy against brewery-sponsored concerts, but 'they weren't pleased with the giant inflatable Miller bottle outside of Anthony Hall at last year's Springfest,' Karlenzig said. Besides bringing high quality entertainment to SPC, corporate sponsorship also provides the students working at SPC with a unique learning experience.

"It's a good chance to get funds for the concerts and it gives the students a chance to work outside the university with corporate sponsors. It's a realistic job situation."

"In the event of rain, the Shadowfax concert will be held at Student Center Ballroom D. SPC's Springfest will be April 23 and feature the bands Jiggler, a fusion band combining music with juggling; Nerve, a Nashville-based band that plays a Little Feat style of R&B; Heavy Manners, a big time Chicago Ska band; and, headlining, the new wave pop of Shoes."

Both SPC events are free.

CONGRESSIONAL FIGHT EXPECTED OVER RECENT MX MISSILE PLAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The latest plan for basing the MX missile, similar to a proposal rejected by Congress two years ago, is a nulling President Reagan's endorsement before it faces a bitter congressional fight.

A commission appointed by Reagan proposed Monday that a new, land-based nuclear missile should be developed in the next decade. Senior US officials identified the proposed missile similar to a proposal that a new, smaller nuclear missile. that a new, smaller nuclear missile should be developed in the next decade.

"Few, but most of the immediate opponents and we didn't publicly endorse it," Edwards said in a telephone interview. But some members of the commission who opposed the since-discarded dense-pack basing last year may vote for the new deployment method simply because it is the only choice left, he said.

Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., said Congress would probably approve the plan. "My guess is that the struggle will be intense, the fight will be difficult, and in the end we'll be successful."

The report was released after the panel met with Reagan, who opposed the plan. Instead, said White House sources who declined to be named, Reagan will probably wait a week so the MX debate doesn't detract from the administration efforts against a House nuclear freeze resolution. In favor of Kenneth Adelman, the embattled arms control nominee.

The administration says the 10-warhead MX is needed because the 1,000 Minuteman missiles — the backbone of America's land-based nuclear force — is vulnerable to a first strike by increasingly accurate Soviet missiles.

Saluki rally for another win with ninth inning, two-out hit

By Dan Devine
Associate Sports Editor

Murray State offered up the dregs of its pitching staff, and the Saluki hitters gladly accepted the sacrifice Tuesday, punishing three Thoroughbred hurlers with 15 hits in a 9-8 victory at Abe Martin Field.

Jim Reisert was one of four of them, including the game winner in the ninth with two outs that capped a nine-run book rally. The Salukis had trailed by so much as 6-2 early, but had repeatedly battled back and briefly assumed the lead in the sixth. In the ninth they needed just one run to win.

And for the second day in a row, SIU-C came up with a winning run in its last at-bat.

Rich Koch started the ninth by grounding a single past the third baseman into leftfield off a Murray State pitcher who was seeing his first at-bat of the year. Jim Limperis followed with a sacrifice bunt, and after the slumping Mike Gellinger struck out, Steve Boyd battied his way aboard with a walk.

That set the stage for Reisert, who had already broken a mild slump by staying on the pitchers and coming up with a walk.

When he got a hit, when you get roped. The Salukis rally for another win.
