Carbondale couple donates million

By Angela Hyland
Minorities Reporter

Two retired SIUC faculty members Tuesday announced their $1 million donation to the University to promote further study of U.S. philosopher John Dewey.

Carbondale residents Donald and Jo Ann Boydston said the money will fund the hiring of a philosophy chairperson to promote further study of the U.S. educator.

Jo Ann, former director of the SIUC Center for Dewey Studies, which contains the world's largest collection of his writings, said she and her husband have enjoyed their retirement, but education is their primary focus.

"We've been to Europe and we've traveled wherever we've wanted to travel," she said. "We have no children, we've had several vacation homes. This just seemed like the proper time to cap off our career."

The gift, which was presented at the Small Business Incubator, will establish the Jo Ann and Don Boydston Endowed Chair of American Philosophy in the College of Liberal Arts.

Jo Ann said the gift was the minimum amount required to establish a department chair.

"There is a strong department of philosophy here and we want to help make it stronger," she said. "With the chair, we can attract the most outstanding American philosophers in the country to be on the faculty."

The Boydstons saved money during the years they worked at SIUC, investing it in tax-sheltered annuities, Florida real estate and mutual funds.

They already have donated $250,000 to the University and will make annual installments until the balance is paid. They plan to have paid the full amount within 10 years.

Students question tuition

Proposed increase raises controversy at SIUC law school

By Stephanie Moletti
Special Assignment Reporter

A proposed 30-percent tuition increase at the SIUC law school has law students questioning where the money will go.

The law school proposed the hike to support expansion plans. The school, which opened in 1973, plans to implement the increase during the next two years. There will be a 15-percent increase next year and a 15-percent increase in 1995.

Dean Harry Haynsworth said the finances of the law school are continually increasing.

"When this hits your pocket book it is not a pleasant task, but this is happening across the country," Haynsworth said. "The situation is not going to get better until the legislature is willing to supply the funds."

Haynsworth said the plan's purpose is to try to enhance the school's quality.

Steve Friedel, Student Bar Association president, said he feels the law students oppose the tuition increase.

"I think that the administration has the student's and the law school in mind, but I don't think it's a good idea," Friedel said.

Friedel said that students at the law school have reservations about the increase because how the money will be spent was not clearly outlined at the meeting.

Haynsworth said a legal education is expensive and at some point state universities were well-funded, but the state recently cut funds from universities and in turn SIUC has cut funds from the law school.

"We've had to give a quarter of a million dollars back to the University over the last three years and we have to operate on what's left," he said.

Patrick Smith, a law student from McHenry, said the school wants the increase, but will not tell students where the funds will go.

"They want the money, they haven't used accurate data and they can't tell us what they're going to do with it," Smith said. "In the hour and 10 minutes we didn't hear where the money was going."

Jonathan Dotson, a law student from Carbondale, said he is confused and troubled by the proposal has been kept private.

Clinton warns Muslim Serbs

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON—President Clinton Tuesday warned Muslims in Bosnia-Herzegovina against trying to take advantage of the allied air strikes outside the town of Gorazde by intensifying their fight against the Bosnian Serbs, saying both sides must now go back to the peace table.

"We have cautioned the Bosnian government forces not to try to take advantage of this and violate the understandings themselves," Clinton told reporters here.

The State Department issued a similar statement later, urging all sides to resume negotiations.

The president made his remarks in response to earlier reports that the Muslim-led Bosnian government had resumed its shelling of the Bosnian Serbs — apparently to provoke them into firing their artillery and thus risk further NATO air strikes. Serb batteries were quiet Tuesday.

The unusual American rejoinder to the Bosnian government reflected a major dilemma in the administration's current strategy — how to persuade the Serbs to end their siege of the Muslim city of Gorazde without simultaneously encouraging their foes to step up their bid to regain lost territory.

At the same time, Clinton let open the possibility that NATO might broaden its air attacks to the five other U.N. "safe-haven" cities besides Gorazde, where the last two days' air strikes have taken place.

"I wouldn't rule anything out," he said.

Madeleine K. Albright, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, had suggested Monday that the model used by NATO in Gorazde could be applied to the other U.N. safe-zones as well.

Falling down

Strong winds caused a tree to fall on power lines on South Forest Street, knocking the breaker out all the way to the substation. Mike Lane, Area Operations Supervisor for C/PS, who was on the scene, said the whole circuit had been affected, but the problem was quickly and power would be restored shortly.

Senate proposes cutting classes

By Jamie Madigan
Special Assignment Reporter

The SIUC Faculty Senate Tuesday voted to recommend changes in two colleges in another step toward complying with the Illinois Board of Higher Education's Priorities, Quality and Productivity initiative.

The board created the POP initiative to reduce costs in state colleges and universities by recommending they cut unnecessary programs.

The recommended changes must go to President John C. Guyon and the Board of Trustees for approval before they can be implemented.

The senate recommended cutting the College of Agriculture's Department of Agricultural Education and Mechanization and adding a program to the College of Education.

The only degree in agricultural education and mechanization to be cut would be the master of science.

The general agriculture program, currently under the Department of Agricultural Education and Mechanization, would merge with the Department of Plant and Soil Science. The new Department of Plant, Soil and General Agriculture will offer a bachelor's degree in general agriculture.

James McGuire, dean of the College of Agriculture, said there are less than 10 students enrolled in

Campus division discussed

By Katie Morrison
Administration Reporter

A bill proposing division of SIUC's two campuses and School of Medicine into three separate universities — without a Board of Trustees — has a slim chance of passing, a state representative says.

Rep. Larry Woolard, D-Marion, sits on the House

Higher Education Committee and said the bill, introduced by Rep. John Ostenburg, D-Park Forest, probably will not make it out of committee because of strong opposition.

"Ostenburg is a good legislator, but I'm not sure what he's trying to accomplish with this bill," Woolard said.

JAPAN WANTS EVEN FASTER 'BULLET' TRAIN — LOS ANGELES—While the bullet train is no longer the world's fastest—that honor now belongs to the French "Train a Grande Vitesse"—Japan's love for speed on rails is still intense. The nation is making a multibillion dollar gamble on developing ever faster and ever more technically advanced trains that would improve service at home and, it is hoped, generate business abroad. Work is moving forward both on speeding up conventional bullet trains and on building futuristic levitation trains that will float above the tracks via electromagnetic power. Yet the advanced, in-service model of the bullet train, "Nozomi," has been engulfed in controversy since it was launched two years ago.

CANADIAN-U.S. TRADE DISPUTES INCREASING — WASHINGTON—Since 1992, the United States has dunned Canada for more than $500 million in penalties assessed on Canadian lumber exports on the grounds they are unfairly subsidized. In recent months, U.S. brewers shipping beer to Quebec have been hit with minimum price schedules that hurt the appeal of cheaper U.S. brands such as Old Milwaukee and Schlitz. And the Clinton administration is threatening to impose quotas on Canadian wheat, charging that, like lumber, it benefits from anti-competitive governmental subsidies, a complaint Canada denies.

REBUILT BRIDGES CANNOT WITHSTAND QUAKES — SACRAMENTO, Calif.—In its haste to reopen the world's busiest freeway after the Jan. 17 Los Angeles earthquake, the California Department of Transportation allowed two replacement bridges to be built with seismic weaknesses that must be corrected to prevent significant damage in a future tremor, according to records and interviews. The bridges on the Santa Monica Freeway, scheduled to reopen early Tuesday, are believed to be safe from collapse. But a committee of international prominent engineers has advised the department that seismic weaknesses in the abutments—the concrete structures connecting the bridge to land—would leave them vulnerable to earthquake damage.

VOTERS HAVE LITTLE CONCERN OVER TAXES — WASHINGTON—If there is ever a time that Americans are not concerned about taxes, it is around April 15, but to the frustration of politicians who want to use the tax issue against President Clinton, the public is not exercised, according to a report of national and state surveys. When voters list their main concern, "taxes" was down, said Fred Steeper, who conducted polling for former President Bush's campaign. Stanley Greenberg, Clinton's pollster, said his research shows that the tax issue "is not top of mind" for voters.

TESTS FOR OVARIAN CANCER STILL INADEQUATE — WASHINGTON—The good news out of a National Institutes of Health conference last week is that women have only a 1-percent lifetime chance of getting ovarian cancer. The bad news is that doctors cannot routinely find this type of cancer early enough to give women a decent chance of survival. Despite calls by some patient advocates for more aggressive testing for this highly fatal disease, NIH panelists at the three-day conference said women should not be screened routinely for ovarian cancer. The only non-surgical test available to screen for ovarian cancer, so inconclusive that for most women they simply lead to unnecessary surgery, panelists said.

College applauds students

By Katie Morrison
Special Assignment Reporter

The College of Mass Communications and Media Arts celebrated its first Honors Day as a new college on campus.

Dean Joe Foote said because it was the new college's first coronation, the day was especially important.

"It is an important day for our faculty — to see the fruits of our labor and the true excellence we have at this University," Foote said. "These students are the best and brightest we have to offer."

The college was rebuilt and officially recognized in fall semester 1993 after being split up in an effort to respond to the Illinois Board of Higher Education's Priorities, Quality and Productivity initiative.

The original College of Communications and Fine Arts was split up and sent to the College of Liberal Arts. An effort by the college's faculty and staff led to a new college with departments in journalism and photography, journalism and radio-television.

The PQP plan is the Board's statewide effort to cut excess spending at state colleges and universities.

Foote also took time to show appreciation to the college's faculty and staff for their determination in building a new college.

"The departments are the backbone of this college," he said. Cinema and Photography Chairman Gary Kolb thanked students for being a part of the University.

"The students are the reason we are here and why we have good programs," Kolb said.

College awards were given to eight students for their individual outstanding achievement, including:

- Robert W. Davis Memorial Media Award — Leah M. Riser Memorial Student Award — Debra W. Motte Scholarship — Shawn Mulrooney.

■ John C. Guyon Presidential Minority Award — Esther Cepeda and ■ Virginia Marmaduke Scholarship — Chad Gordon, Kiersten DeBrower, Charlotte Rivers and Heather Hendricks.

Marmaduke, noted as the first lady of journalism in Illinois, attended the ceremony.

"I never had any children of my own — everyone here today is one of mine," Marmaduke said.

David Shimkus, a senior in radio-telecommunication from South Holland who was recognized for his 3.75 grade point average, said being honored makes the work seem worth while.

"Alta-boys are always nice," Shimkus said. "It lets you know that you're not going unrecognized — that your hard work and accomplishments are not just a piece of paper."

The cinema and photography department honored 15 students for having grade point averages of 3.5 or better, including, Mark Andersson, Nancy Groves, Nathan Keay, Kirsten Andersen, Mark Lankierman, Sarah McGhee, Brian Loring, Rachel Goodlett, Christian Beck, Sarah Taylor.

COBA sends 37 into Beta Gamma Sigma

By Paul Eisenberg
Business Reporter

The College of Business and Administration joined in Honors Day festivities by inducting 37 new members into Beta Gamma Sigma, the college's honorary.

To be inducted, students had to meet strict prerequisites: be in the top 7 percent of the junior class, top 10 percent of the senior class, or top 20 percent of the graduate level class.

Gregory White, faculty adviser for the honorary, said the award's main purpose was to recognize the top student in the college.

"It's a national organization, and members are inducted for life," he said.

Honorary president Dawn Burt said members enjoy a higher visibility to prospective employers.

This organization is well recognized for our high caliber for eligibility," she said. "It also lets people practice networking skills."

Inductee Sarah Sager said being a member of Beta Gamma Sigma will look good on her resume.

"I think it's a great opportunity, and I can use it for reference later on," she said.

Graduate student Francis Murphy already has put the award on his resume.

"I already have had some feedback from a company that read my resume," he said. "They mentioned Beta Gamma Sigma, so it's something that does stand out on a resume."

Senior Rex Sorlsby is an inductee who hopes to be hired at one of the "big six" accounting firms or a large local firm.

"It's an honor to be in such a credit group," he said.

Junior Julie Norville said the award was just a side effect of

Time in States may mean adjustment back home

By Emily Priddy
International Reporter

International students who return home after several years at SIUC must do special preparation to adjust to their own culture and International Programs and Services' career services.

Melvin Rindfleisch, a graduate assistant for the service, said making that change took him five years.

"When we live in another country for a while, there is a transformation in values and priorities," he said.

Brande Hodgson, an SIUC academic adviser for international students, said adjusting to personal changes can be challenging.

"A lot of students who return home have to entry concerns," she said. "You don't realize how much you've changed until your friends or family say, 'Wow, you've changed a little.'"

Paul Gibson, an SIUC plant and soil sciences professor who has lived in India, Costa Rica and Zambia, said countries have professional differences.

For example, some international students may find relationships with instructors or supervisors to be more relaxed in the United States than back home, Gibson said.

The type of relationship between the superior and the inferior — the hierarchy — there is a great deal more formality in other cultures," he said. "I think the informality appears to most of us, so it probably will grate on your nerves when you get back and have to show much greater respect for your supervisor."

Students who experience new systems and methods of doing things in the United States may be annoyed when those ideas are not immediately accepted in their own countries, Gibson said.

It is important for students to be patient and readjust to their own culture before trying to make changes, he said.

"Our education is more than just training in how to perform certain activities with a certain set of resources," he said. "It's learning how to be creative in solving problems. Expect some frustration upon returning home, but deal with those problems creatively."

Pauline Gibson, a graduate student in health education who spent 15 years in India, said it can be difficult to readjust to cultural differences.

The key to handling differences in value and lifestyles is to be aware of those differences and work actively to find a balance between old and new ideas, she said.

"If you can recognize what are the value differences between your own culture and American culture — if you can choose the blend of values that you want in your own life when it becomes conscious, you can become your own person," Pauline Gibson said.

Because female roles in other countries are different from

Advertisement work of hate organization

LAST THURSDAY THE DAILY EGYPTIAN RAN an advertisement titled "A Revisionist Challenge to the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum."

The advertisement claims the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum offers no concrete evidence the Holocaust actually occurred.

Since printing the advertisement, the newspaper has received an overwhelming number of phone calls and letters expressing anger at the fact the advertisement was published.

Although the Daily Egyptian ran an advertisement dealing with a very controversial topic, the advertisement in no way represents the newspaper's point of view on the subject.

Because of the controversy caused by the advertisement, a closer look at what is behind the ad is warranted.

THE ADVERTISEMENT IS THE WORK OF Bradley R. Smith, a self-proclaimed "revisionist" who is the head of the Committee for Open Debate on the Holocaust (CODOH), a group that calls for "free inquiry and open debate" of the facts of the Holocaust. Smith states the goal of the committee is to prove Germany had no plan to exterminate Europe's Jews.

ADVERTISEMENTS FROM CODOH HAVE BEEN the subject of controversy since Smith began soliciting them to college news papers around the country in 1991.

That year Smith targeted 50 university newspapers in the United States for paid advertisements that argued the Holocaust never took place. Nineteen papers printed the ad and were soon caught up in heated controversy, some of the papers even had to have police guard the newsrooms.

In spring 1992, Smith again attempted to submit a similar advertisement to the universities but none of the newspapers accepted it. Smith also attempted last fall to place ads that promote a series of 21, self-produced video tapes that he claims prove the Holocaust never existed.

THE COMPANY WHICH SMITH KEEPS IS A good indication of who he is. His CODOH partner is Mark Weber, a former member of the neo-Nazi National Alliance. Another fact that can shed light on who Smith is, and what he believes is the manner in which his writings can be obtained. His printed material can be purchased in catalogues that also market materials like "The Marching Songs of the Waffen SS," "Hitler - Best Speeches of 1937," and books containing "evidence" to prove whites are biologically superior to blacks.

IT SHOULD BE NOTED THAT THE AMERICAN Historical Association issued a statement in November 1991 that said, "No serious historical questions that the Holocaust took place."

The Daily Egyptian does not question that fact either.

Letters to the Editor

Note from Editorial Editors: Due to the overwhelming response we have received concerning the April 7 paid advertisement regarding the Holocaust, we have packaged as many letters as possible in this edition.

D.E. advertisement questioned

On Thursday, April 7 of this year, the DE printed an advertisement claiming that certain events which occurred in Europe earlier in this century — namely the gassing of millions of people by the Nazis — never really happened.

The following day, April 8, the DE printed an article about that ad. The article reiterated, on the front page of the newspaper, the claims included in the ad, and several quotes from its author.

The article continued on page five, where there were further explanations about the events in Europe — which we now refer to as the "Holocaust" — and quotes from certain people rebutting the claims in the ad.

Those people were Professor Leonard Gross, advisor to the Brian Brith Hillel student organization, and Professor Donald Detweiler of the history department.

I wish to make two points about the newspaper's handling of these events.

First, the criteria and process used by the newspaper to determine what to include in its advertisements are not at all clear, even after the article published on April 8.

But let us assume that the decision to include the ad was consistent with whatever criteria the newspaper uses.

Second, although the article that appeared on the DE after the ad professed to seek some explanatory purpose, its ultimate effect was to restate — again on the front page of the newspaper, the original ad's ludicrous claims.

Then, in a small spot on page five, where far fewer people were likely to see them, were the statements by Professors Gross and Detweiler, the information from Professor Detweiler — that the Nazis themselves documented many of their acts, such as the gassing of people — was very persuasive.

And surely the reporter could recall more of Professor Gross' comments than that it is difficult to get into the Holocaust Museum in Washington, D.C.!

In our country, newspapers are not regulated or controlled to the extent that they are in many other places.

We enjoy a wonderful privilege — to be able to publish and read what we want. In order to maintain this privilege in the long run, the newspapers that print information for us have a formidable responsibility.

That is, at the very least, to accurately report the information that they obtain, and to present it in such a way that one or another viewpoint will not be obscured because of its placement in the paper.

I do not believe that the Daily Egyptian has lived up to this responsibility in this instance.

—Elaine D. Edelman, attorney, member of the Beth Jacob Synagogue

Quoted student not an expert source

The Daily Egyptian made a serious mistake by quoting the ad that questioned the existence of the Holocaust. But perhaps an even more disturbing event is the use of Brad Striegel as a source in your article explaining how the ad ended up in the paper.

Since when does Mr. Striegel qualify as a credible news source in an article about this subject? How is it that he seems to carry so much weight with the DE? His ideological letters to the editor are well known around campus.

He was also a person of the week recently. And now it seems that as a World War II buff he is an authoritative source on a very important moral issue.

Surely, there are other more knowledgeable, more respected members of our community who could have commented on this story.

Brad Striegel's critical to his opinions, my criticism is not directed at him, but at the clumsy and failing methods of the DE.

The original mistake of running the ad without any discussion beforehand was compounded by the use of a questionable source.

How can the campus community have faith in the journalistic standards of the DE? As the main forum for communication on this campus, you must do a better job.

—Kenneth Perrin, senior, cinema and photography

How to submit a letter to the editor:

Jewish ball player inspires, contributes to feature film

By Heather Burrow
Entertainment Reporter

Aviva Kempner wanted to tell her father's story.

Kempner, an award-winning documentarian, gave a brief lecture and showed a twenty-three minute clip from her upcoming ninety-minute documentary on Hank Greenberg, a major league baseball player whose father frequently talked about, resides in Mt. Airy at the Student Center Auditorium.

Kempner's father was a Jew immigrant growing up in the 19, and the only way to become "Americanized" was to learn about baseball.

"To Jewish people in America, baseball was a badge of Americanism, or the way they fitted in," she said.

In Kempner's case that meant idolizing Greenberg who played for the Detroit Tigers. Greenberg was the "authentic American Jewish hero."

This clip alternated between black and white footage of Greenberg playing and being interviewed with friends, fans and other players.

The completed documentary will have more interviews and headlines.

"I wanted to show that some people still display character and not fail," she said.

Hank Greenberg showed real humanity on and off the field.

Greenberg played during the 1930s and 1940s when baseball meant everything.

His prominence as a baseball player made the anti-Semitism that occurred at that time a little easier to take.

"Jews could not live in certain areas and their was job discrimination in this country," Kempner said.

Greenberg brought acclaim to the world of baseball by hitting two less than Babe Ruth's record of sixty homers in a single year. He also made the Jewish population proud because he sat out on Yom Kippur, the most sacred Jewish holiday.

Although the Detroit Tigers lost that game, he was hailed as a hero to the Jewish people.

Greenberg continuously got catcalls from the bench of opposing teams.

The jeering became progressively worse until the 1935 World Series against the Chicago Cubs when an umpire had to stop the game due to the offensive language people were making from.

Greenberg also got acclaim for being the first major league baseball player to join the armed forces for four and a half years. Others followed his lead later.

Despite all of these prejudices and stereotypes Greenberg accomplished so much from 1933-1941 that he was inducted into the Hall of Fame in 1956.

"Greenberg truly was the first Jewish player in a league of his own," Kempner said.

The department of foreign languages and literatures hosted the annual International Fair which included a scholar bowl in Spanish, French and German. Several presentations were made by SIUC faculty, including "Peach Boy" with main character of Momo Taro being played by Tina Koh, a student of Japanese from Taiwan.

"They (the students) will continue to complete their degree regardless of what happens," he said.

McGuire said the 90 students majoring in general agriculture, but will not experience major changes as a result of the resolution.

What this change does is reduce administrative costs," he said. "The savings can be put into academic programs.

"We have three remaining tenured faculty and all will be transferred," he said.

The senate also voted to move the bachelor's degree in communications disorders and sciences to rehabilitation services within the College of Education.

The three recommended specializations in communications disorders and sciences, physical therapist assistant certification and rehabilitation science were dropped from the resolution.

Faculty Senate President James Orr said the specializations were dropped because of a possibility that a master's program in physical therapy will be approved by the board.

"There are other actions underway, but we wanted to go ahead and authorize a new degree," he said. "The specializations have been dropped with the understanding that they can be picked up later."

Artist brings Russian dolls, influence to SIUC museum

By Melissa Edwards
Entertainment Reporter

Russian dolls that open to reveal a smaller doll are a popular example of the way Russian folk art influenced professional painters, one art history professor said.

Wendy Salmond, an assistant professor of art history at Chapman University in California, will give a presentation about the influence of Russian folk art at 7 p.m. Thursday in the University Museum Auditorium.

Salmond said attitudes of the educated and the peasantry in the early 20th Century were dramatically different.

The educated looked at peasant art as primitive.

"Gauguin left France to go to Tahiti to find primitive art, the Russians just looked in their own backyard," she said.

Salmond especially is interested in Russian art before the avant-garde period, when the country was experiencing a culturally stagnant time.

"In the early 20th Century, (Russia) was incredibly backward," she said.

She said the professional painters used folk art as a way of rethinking the way they painted.

Salmond, a native of New Zealand, said she was a college student studying Russian language and literature when she first took a class in art history.

"I (became) hooked on it... and I never looked back," she said.

Ostenburg introduced House Bill 3889 to the House of Representatives March 24 in an effort to clean up Illinois' higher-education system.

He said his plan calls for eliminating all existing state university and college governing boards and merging them into new boards to eliminate excess administration.

The model separates SIUC and SIUE into two universities and places them under a board of regents with Illinois State and Northern Illinois Universities.

A board of governors would control Chicago State, Eastern, Governor's State, Northeastern and Western Illinois Universities.

Ostenburg said the breakdown is logical because it separates universities into categories that offer doctoral degrees and those that do not.

Universities controlled by the board of governors do not have doctoral programs.

Once SIUC receives $1 million, the University will conduct a search for someone to fill the position.

Jo Ann said the establishment of a department chairperson is the best way she could think to strengthen the philosophy program.

"An endowed professorship is a magnet that attracts the highest caliber of graduate students and gives an opportunity for intellectual exchange among colleagues."

Jo Ann worked for 32 years at SIUC's Center for Dewey Studies, editing his writings and compiling them into 38 volumes.

Donald headed the health education department for 33 years and worked 15 years as SIUC's athletics director.

Vice President for Institutional Advancement Robert Quatroche said the gift could have a tremendous influence on the future of the philosophy department.

"It will help further put the philosophy department of the map," he said. "It's certainly something we're very pleased with."

Quatroche said it is rare for SIUC to receive a $1 million pledge, but he would like to see the donation start a trend.

"We hope it will be the beginning of many future gifts of this magnitude for the University," he said.

Quatroche said he believes the gift will be beneficial for all philosophy students.

"They will have the opportunity to be exposed to the best and brightest minds in American philosophy," he said.

and confidential. "There have been inconsistencies with everything that's been said," Dotson said.

He said he does not support the increase until the inconsistencies are explained.

Steve Friedel, Student Bar Association president said he feels the law students oppose the tuition increase. He also disagrees with the increase.

"I think that the administration has the student's and the law school in mind, but I don't think it's a good idea," Friedel said.

Friedel said that students at the law school have reservations about the increase because they are not sure what the money would be spent for.

While Friedel said he believes the increase won't be used to raise faculty salaries, he is concerned about money going toward information technologies which he said may not be cost effective.

According to the May 1992 report of the school long range expansion plans to be completed by 1997, seven areas are targeted for improvement, including:

- enhancing the basic curriculum.
- involving students more in problem-based skills exercises.
- integrating issues and material relating to legal ethics and professionalism.
- improving legal writing skills.
- encouraging research and service efforts.
- encouraging international emphasis on programs and
- fund two existing but vacant faculty position

Haynsworth said the plan's purpose is to try to enhance the school's quality.

The school receives the difference between undergraduate tuition and law-school tuition, $2796, from the University. The long-range plan is to increase the differential which would come back to the law school, Haynsworth said.

Thomas Britton, associate dean, said if the proposal is passed tuition would increase to $3,216 next year and $3,696 by 1995.

Britton said the tuition increase would be used to pay for information technology, on going projects, to restore funds lost over the last few years.

The increase would enable the law school to create a development position for fundraising activity, and would prevent cut backs at the law library, according to Britton.

The school also plans to increase enrollment from 343 to 375 students and reduce tuition waivers for research assistants, he said.

Britton said the goal is to gradually increase the enrollment through recruitment.

"We want to increase the student body without reducing the quality of the incoming class," Britton said. "The increase is curricular and will be gradual."

said preliminary plans are being discussed to pool the money now going toward tuition waivers and distribute it to students on a need basis.

"This will get the money to a larger number of students," he said. "However, we don't know if the central administration is willing to go along with it."

Increasing enrollment will allow the school to offer more courses and improve program quality, Haynsworth said.

The Board of Trustees will vote on the proposal April 14. Smith and Friedel will speak to the board before members vote on the proposal. The meeting will begin at 9 a.m.

Students raise fitness, cash

'Workout for Hope' to help fetch money for AIDS research

By Aleksandra Macys
Health Reporter

Students and community members who want to donate money to AIDS research while toning their muscles can participate in the "Workout for Hope" tonight at the Student Recreation Center.

The annual event is sponsored by the City of Hope, a medical institution dedicated to AIDS research. It also has AIDS education meetings and seminars across the United States.

The two-hour event will feature exercises such as high and low-impact aerobics, conditioning and abdominal toning.

Guest instructors from local fitness centers such as Great Shapes will lead the event with help from recreation center instructors.

Program coordinator Irene Lewis said people can learn different exercise movements from the instructors.

People who do not exercise, she said, can donate money and receive information on AIDS from SIUC Wellness Center. The first 40 people to donate will receive a red-ribbon pin.

Proceeds from the event, which occurs in more than 100 cities across the nation, including Alaska and Hawaii, totaled $1 million in 1992. Money benefited AIDS and HIV research conducted at the City of Hope.

Research on a synthetic enzyme, which demonstrates an ability to clip out the genetic message of the HIV virus and prevent its infection of other cells, currently is being conducted in laboratories.

According to City of Hope officials, the procedure not only shows promise for AIDS therapy, but for other viruses as well.

Lewis said a group of instructors Saturday is traveling to St. Louis to take part in the national Workout for Hope and donate the money raised.

Lewis said she hopes to raise $1,000, but the goal of the event is not only to raise money, but to raise awareness about AIDS.

Those who want to participate or donate money must register between 4:30 and 6:30 p.m. at the Student Recreation Center.

For more information, contact the recreation center at 453-1275.

SIUC hosts Foreign Language Day

By Emily Priddy
International Reporter

Nearly 1,400 students from 36 Southern Illinois and western Kentucky high schools Tuesday demonstrated their bilingual knowledge during Foreign Language Day at SIUC.

Arnold Ulnar, chairman of the Foreign Language Day committee, said high-school students learned about cultural differences, met SIUC foreign-language faculty and participated in French, German and Spanish rapid-response competitions.

The event exposes high-school students to the University and gives them a chance to practice their foreign-language skills, Ulnar said.

"One of the purposes (for the event) is to acquaint the students with our programs and faculty," he said. "They have a chance to practice the language (and) learn something about the language and culture."

The event includes activities for high-school French, German, Latin and Spanish students.

Ulnar said Spanish seems to be the most popular language, partly because of Mexico and Cuba's proximity to the United States.

"We have a long border with Mexico (and) we're close to Cuba," Ulnar said. "The history of our Southwest is intimately related to Spain and Mexico. Half of what used to be Mexico at the beginning of the 19th century now belongs to the United States."

Spanish is the second-most frequently spoken language in the United States, Ulnar said.

Oliver Dunn, a Spanish teacher at Murphysboro High School, said he brought 80 students to the event this year.

Dunn said students can learn cultural aspects of languages they study when they attend workshops and lectures at Foreign Language Day.

"(Students) get exposed to some foreign cultures that are different from our own," he said.

For example, Dunn said some of his students learned about body language in Spanish-speaking countries in a workshop on gestures.

Ulnar said the most popular activity is foreign-language scholar bowl, a rapid-fire question-and-answer competition similar to the television show "Jeopardy," except participants cannot speak English when answering questions, which are read in the language the students are learning.

Michelle Mollet, a junior at Murphysboro High School, is taking her third year of Spanish.

She said she decided to study Spanish because it often is spoken in the United States.

"I want to learn another language," she said. "We only offer Spanish and French at our high school, and I like Spanish better than French — it's spoken more widely."

Ulnar said this is the 22nd year SIUC has offered the event to local schools.

is imposing unfair tuition and fee hikes upon students. It is the objective of her party to see that students' voices are heard, she said.

"We want to stop the scape-goating of students by the Illinois legislature with outrageous fees," she said.

Arnoldi said it is the promise of his party to keep students informed of issues so they will be able to make informed votes and suggestions of what they would like to see done.

Arnoldi said his main reason for pursuing the presidency is because he deeply cares about the success of student government and wants to make a difference in the lives of students.

When dealing with the SIUC administration and Board of Trustees, Raymer said students will dictate her party's dealings.

"We (AAA) will work with the University administration as much as the students ask us to," Raymer said. "If we are elected, our goal will be total representation of students' ideas before the administration."

Aside from serving as a USG senator, Arnoldi also is vice president of Lambda Chi Delta, a fraternity which he helped found, and he is an Inter-Greek Council representative.

Arnoldi's leadership experience outside of USG includes: airborne infantry squad leader/gunner for the U.S. Army 82nd Airborne Division, primer explosives mixer for Winchester Ammunition Division (was offered position of foreman after six months but turned it down to attend college) and primer charger for the Winchester Ammunition Division.

While a member of the Army, Arnoldi received various awards of honor including: combat infantryman badge, expert infantryman badge, parachute badge, M16 expert badge, Southwest Asia Service Medal with two bronze service stars, army achievement medal-3, national defense service medal, army good conduct medal and army service ribbon.

As a member of the Student Programming Council in 1993, Arnoldi received the committee member of the year award.

After graduation, Arnoldi said he wants to attend law school but does not see a future as a politician.

Raymer said she plans to pursue her master's degree in social work and later work as a counselor of female victims of violent crimes.

PROGRESS, from page 8

elements as well as that of fairness."

Bathon said USG should represent the student body as a whole, and her party plans equal representation of all students.

In dealing with SIUC administration and the Board of Trustees, the Progressive Party would conduct legislation in a professional manner so administrators will take them seriously, she said.

Shull and Bathon wrote and submitted five bills for student well-being March 30, and all passed. One bill, recommending the SIUC administration enact a book-rental system, is part of what the Progressive Party is all about, Shull said.

"The Progressive Party's goal is to help provide a better education at a lower price," Shull said. "One way to help students save money is through a book-rental program like the one at Eastern Illinois University; students could rent their books with the option to buy."

The bill, which will serve as a recommendation to the SIUC administration to enact a book-rental system for students with the option to buy texts they want to keep, passed the senate unanimously March 30.

Other bills included a plan to increase student parking, to make raises for student workers easier, to keep the recreation center open later Friday and Saturday nights and to oppose the 13-percent tuition hike proposed by the SIUC Board of Trustees.

Shull has political experience outside of student government; he has worked summer jobs for state government including: an internship with the Illinois House of Representatives, 1990; a page with the Illinois House of Representatives, 1991; a secretary of a state employee, 1992 and an internship with the secretary of state, 1993.

Shull said he has proved his deep concern for student well-being through legislation he introduced to USG, and that is why he would make an effective president.

After graduation, Shull said he wants to attend law school and enter politics at the state level. Outside of USG, Bathon's past political record on campus includes serving as Steagall Hall vice president 1992-1993.

Bathon said she has a desire to be vice president so she can take an active role in the legislation of issues students want to see resolved.

After graduation, Bathon said she wants to attend law school, practice law and become a politician at the state level.

UNITY, from page 8

to the University and make USG a strong body."

Sawyer said the key to an effective USG administration is the unity of the senate on issues concerning students.

He said his party is a cooperative team that will do less arguing about issues and take more steps toward progressive solutions.

"The Unity Party has worked hard to form a tight-knit group," Sawyer said.

"During the campaign we have worked on the unity of people within the party so that if we are elected we are ready to work together in an effective manner."

Sawyer said one of the soundest parts of his party's platform is a promise to place a box in the Student Center to receive student input and complaints regarding USG actions. He said students his party has talked to have been in favor of the idea.

Sawyer's USG experience includes: University Park senator, Student Welfare Commission, Traffic and Parking Subcommittee and East Side senator.

Sawyer ran for former USG President Brad Cole's ballot last year, but lost to current President Mike Spiwak's ticket.

Sawyer served the Thompson Point Judicial Board last semester and currently is president of Phi Alpha Theta, an honorary history fraternity.

Before attending SIUC, Sawyer served more than three years as a Navy rescue swimmer and is a reservist air crewman.

Sawyer said his past student government experiences and ability to unify student politicians serve as testimonial to his presidential capabilities.

Musak said she has never served on USG, but has participated in other campus organizations and is excited about the opportunity to represent the students.

Musak's other campus activities include: worker with health service, member of the SIUC sky-diving team, Student Life Adviser and member of the Pre-Med Club.

After graduation, Sawyer said is considering graduate school.

Musak said she wants to attend medical school at SIU and become a gynecologist.

Yeltsin talks on alliance, Bosnian raid

The Washington Post

MOSCOW—President Boris Yeltsin, still miffed he was not consulted before the West launched air strikes against Bosnian Serbs, said Tuesday Russia will not join the U.S.-sponsored Partnership for Peace program this month as scheduled.

"We are not making a direct link" between the security alliance and Western involvement in the former Yugoslavia, Yeltsin told a news conference in Madrid, where he is on an official visit. "But we are in no hurry to sign."

Yeltsin also seemed to link association with the security alliance to greater access to Western markets, complaining that in this respect "Russia is permanently discriminated against."

The president's comments directly contradicted statements by Russia's defense and foreign ministers, who in recent days have said Moscow would join the Partnership for Peace program on April 21.

The remarks suggested that Yeltsin, who is under considerable political pressure at home to stake out a more-independent Russian foreign policy, is prepared to set tough conditions for Moscow's cooperation with the West.

It was also apparent from Yeltsin's statement that he will not be satisfied unless Moscow is accorded a role approaching full partnership with Western powers on decision making on security issues.

In a speech earlier in the day, he said Russia's foreign policy would be based on "healthy patriotism."

Yeltsin, who spoke with President Clinton by phone Monday only after U.S. fighter jets had hit Serbian positions around the besieged Bosnian town of Gorazde, criticized the use of force by the NATO in the Balkan conflict.

"I am convinced that the only resolution there can be" is "through political talks," he said. "The task there cannot be resolved by force. It will be war forever."

Pressing for wider access for Russian goods in Western markets, Yeltsin said: "To sign the Partnership for Peace document in a situation where Russia is permanently discriminated against..." he said without finishing the sentence. But he added, "For example, we are still unable to sign an economic agreement with the European Union. For a whole year we have been walking around the agreement and we cannot sign it."

In Moscow Tuesday, Russian officials, politicians and commentators echoed Yeltsin's indignation that Russia was ignored in the West's bombing decision.

Smith said the advantage of his party is that he and Manske are new to USG and their policy is very open to new suggestions from students.

Smith, in addition to ambitions in USG, is a member of the SIUC Public Relations Student Society of America.

After graduation, Smith hopes to join a public relations firm in Los Angeles and eventually work as an agent for actors and actresses.

with stunts on defense as well with linebacker blitzes and coverage schemes," he said. "This will force our offense into working with more multiple formations, and expand base passing.

Offensive leadership was said to be the controversy when Watson arrived, but it fizzled because everyone started from scratch in his book. "After two weeks of practice, Dave Pierson has stepped out ahead of the group, and he is being pushed by Matt Jones and T.J. Bednarke," Watson said.

Leading the running game for the Salukis is returning tailback Melvin Dukes, who is a player Watson thinks has the talent to make things work on the field.

The Salukis' weakness appears in the defensive line, and the coaching staff is hoping development of the current defense along with new players will need to step up the play.

Right Ends Cortes Washington and Arglista Scott along with left end and strong side linebacker Cornelius Hicks and Tony Seman have had good spring showings.

The Salukis start the second half of their spring session practices this week.

the Week. Burch went 3-0 last week while working 15 2/3 innings allowing only one run and striking out 26.

Wichita State is tied with Illinois State at 4-2. The Shockers split two doubleheaders on the road last weekend to Tulsa and SW Missouri St. Bradley, SIUC and Tulsa all have .500 records. Bradley (3-3) will look to win its 20th game of the season at home against Creighton on Friday. With a win the Lady Braves will have their first 20-win season since 1989.

SIUC (2-2) will host their final MVC games this weekend against Northern Iowa and Drake. The Salukis lead the MVC in hitting (.312), are sixth in pitching (2.25) and seventh in fielding (.947).

Tulsa (2-2) nearly pulled off a sweep against preseason league favorite Creighton last weekend. The Golden Hurricane only won two games last season.

Indiana State (1-3) has been struggling as have Creighton (1-5). Creighton, predicted in the preseason as the top team, has played all six of its conference games on the road. The Lady Bluejays are only hitting .264.

Northern Iowa and Drake both travel to Carbondale this weekend to begin their MVC seasons. Northern Iowa is 28-13 in non-conference play and Drake is 18-9.

Carroll finished off ISU when he scored on a pass from Mike Bianchi to clinch the semi-final win to get into the championship.

In the championship match against USI there were two totally different teams in the field.

A team that participated in the post-game activities and a team that skipped the party and sat in the hotel room.

USI takes rugby very seriously and is ranked No. 8 in the country with mostly international players on their team, which could be the reason they passed on the post-game celebrations.

The match opened up with a fluke score by USI after a missed kick by SIUC on the opening kick-off. With USI leading 5-0, the Dawgs had things going their way after Jeff Mann made the score 5-3 on a penalty kick from 40 meters out.

The Dawgs followed up when Steve McKinstry scored on a strong run and converted to give SIUC the lead 10-5.

With a crowd of over 600 on hand, the Dawgs were penalized for spectators running on the field of play to add to the fever-pitch intensity. USI failed to convert on SIUC's penalties and the Dawgs went into the locker room with a 10-5 lead.

Starting off the second half USI had the ball and the wind at their back. SIUC lost two scores to cheap penalties which opened the door up for USI.

"At that point our emotional level was drained thanks to the horrible call by the international referee," Howland added. "That call negated our second score and took the momentum away from us."

With two minutes remaining, USI reverted to the rugby textbook style of play and scored to clinch the championship by a score of 12-10.

Senior Jason Kruse said the Salukis could have had a better game if the party after Saturdays games wasn't as good as it was.

Last weekend the Dawgs traveled to St. Louis for Rugger

Fest in which there were 24 teams including Club Side and Collegiate teams. Some of the strong teams in the tourney were: Kansas, Springfield, Columbia, St. Louis University and the Salukis.

SIUC did well in taking three out of four games including a big win against the No.4 ranked Jayhawks.

For third-place in Rugger Fest, SIUC took on tradition powerhouse Kansas University where the Jayhawks were taken out of their game early.

The Salukis ran the not-so-well known Australian Gambit Line-Out play that allowed Johnny Utah to assist Johnny "Two Ball" Howland for the score from 60 meters out.

This gave the Dawgs the lead and the win to clinch third-place with a score of 17-0.

"We took their hearts and gave them no other opportunity to come back," Howland said. "We had no reason to look back."

Other standouts in the tournament for SIUC were freshman, extraordinary Charles Velino and junior Jason Kruse who scored against the Club Side St. Louis Hornets.

The only loss given to the Dawgs last weekend was from St. Louis University who shut out SIUC 17-0.

"They just out played us," McPeak said. "St. Louis played with more intensity than we did, plus the fact that the game was at 8 a.m. didn't help us any either."

"We aren't going back to this tournament due to the fact that it is more a Club Side tournament," Howland said. "Socially it can't compare to All Fools."

Coming up for SIUC this weekend is the Busch Bantsee Classic in Bowling Green, Ky., which the likes of Nashville, Eastern Illinois, Western Kentucky, Alabama, and the Salukis will be competing.

Scott McPeak said that good team work and effort will be needed to win this weekend.

"We need to get solid play out of our pack," McPeak said. "If our back line shows up with their hands we should be all right."

SIUC will be looking for another repeat performance from last years Most Valuable Player Pete Corkin with some adding help from Vince Prato, Steve Rosko, and Brandon Bates.

"With the addition of Shane Cole in the back line," Howland said. "Repeating as champions this year shouldn't be a problem"

Last year at this time the SIUC rugby club had a record of 2-4, but with the addition of stronger tournaments and a tougher schedule this years team has improved to a 6-3 standing.

If the consistent play of Shoemaker, Kruse, Carroll and John Thompson stay up to par the Salukis will be ending this spring season on a winning note.

"We have been playing an up tempo type game," McPeak said. "A lot of that is keyed off on the success the pack is having this year."

"We don't see ourselves losing another match all season," Howland added.

Saluki ruggers improve record, 6-3

Tournaments promote unity on rugby team

By James J. Fares
Sports Reporter

Since the beginning of the spring season, the SIUC ruggers have improved in attitude as well as play.

With such grueling tournaments as SIUC's own Fourth Annual "All Fools Classic," 64th Annual Rugger Fest in St. Louis and The Busch Bantchee Classic in Bowling Green, Ky., the Dawgs should be in good shape to compete against Evansville and host the "of Loads" match-up as the last rugby game of the spring season.

The SIUC rugby club hosted the Fourth Annual "All Fools Classic" on Easter weekend.

Some of the top teams in the field of 12 participated were Notre Dame, Purdue, Iowa, University of Southern Indiana, Eastern Illinois University and the SIUC.

SIUC opened up first round action by defeating Northern Illinois University by the score of 32-0.

Senior Shane Cole started the festivities in the right manner scoring first by nailing a drop kick from 40 meters out that gave the Dawgs an early 3-0 lead.

From that point on, the Salukis never looked back thanks to the game controlling three scores by junior Jason Kruse. Kruse's hat trick was a break through record in "All Fools" history by being the first rugger of any kind to score three times in one game.

In the next round of play SIUC had to take on the University of Illinois-Chicago, where the Salukis swept the Flames off the board 27-0.

Cole started the massacre scoring on a pass from Mike Strange to put the Salukis up 7-0.

Player/coach Scott McPeak said the team was starting to come together and did not play like a bunch of individuals.

"We had a good week in practice, and we needed to play as a unit rather than as individuals," McPeak said. "On that Saturday not one individual showed up."

To finish off the Saluki attack Mike Eldridge scored and Vince

Prato and Tim Carrol added their efforts to the teams success.

SIUC had to get through Illinois State University in order to make it to the championship game. SIUC defeated the Redbirds with their third shut-out score of 15-0.

Standout athletes for the Salukis were Matt Shoemaker who scored his first "Zulu," which is his first career score, and senior McPeak played well the whole afternoon.

Social Club President Jon Howland said he felt the unity between the team and said it showed on the field.

"The whole team felt that we couldn't have lost to anyone that day," Howland said. "After we found out we were playing Southern Indiana in the championship, we went to the party while USI went to the hotel for rest."

"I have never seen anyone play as well as McPeak did with as much heart and effort," Howland said. "Our pack played well and never lost a line-out which gave us the confidence we needed going into the final."

New football coach says attitude key to success

by Karyn Viverito
Sports Reporter

A new head coach coming into a first practice thinks about becoming familiar with the new team, its surroundings and the situation that it is in.

What does a new head coach give to a new team that has to rebuild and is coming off a 2-9 season?

Saluki head football coach Shawn Watson can say it in one word.

"Attitude."

Watson said when he first arrived and started watching some of the films, he saw a problem with the attitude on the field.

"I don't know how different they were than the opponents they were playing, but I saw a bunch of kids who were making strides on offense and hanging in there on defense, and it was almost as if they were sitting back on their haunches waiting for something bad to happen," he said. "That is what we are trying to break."

Watson said that his players must learn how to play with attitude from the time the ball is kicked off until the last horn blows.

"That attitude is 'Don't ever see yourself failing,'" he said. "In anything that you do, see yourself succeeding and if something goes against what you have been taught, or you make a bad play, put it behind you and go on to the next one."

While establishing the attitude of a champion among his team, Watson and his staff decided to start with some of the bare bone basics to evaluate what they were working with.

For the first half of spring practice, the new coaching staff concentrated on three areas:

How they were going to practice, and how they needed to work, teaching them the basic offense and defense, and teach them the basic fundamentals and techniques of each position.

Watson said the team is at the point now to be evaluated and move on to the next level.

"Now we are going to work on getting into different fronts, start getting into our stunt game up front and our twist, while working

Softball season finds Bears holding conference top spot

By Chris Walker
Sports Reporter

The Missouri Valley Conference softball season started to pick up last weekend as eight of its 10 teams were in action.

Southwest Missouri State is at the top of the conference so far. The Lady Bears own a 3-1 record after sweeping Creighton and splitting with Wichita State last weekend. The Lady Bears lead the Valley in pitching (1.16 era). Outfielder Heather Anderson hit .636 for Southwest Missouri State last week and garnered MVC Player of the Week honors.

Illinois State is tied for second with a 4-2 mark. The Lady Redbirds went 3-1 last weekend and have been led by pitcher Jodi Burch, the MVC Pitcher of

Rains dampen competition

By Grant Deady
Sports Reporter

The Saluki baseball team's troubles are beginning to go beyond just competing for a Missouri Valley Conference title.

Monday's April showers in Carbondale turned out to be drenching enough to postpone Tuesday's scheduled game with Southeast Missouri State at Abe Martin Field.

The non-conference showdown with the Orahkians has been rescheduled for Thursday and today's scheduled game between the Salukis and Arkansas State at Abe Martin Field is still set for a 3 p.m. start.

Tuesday's postponement marks the second consecutive Saluki baseball game to be rained out.

Today's game with Arkansas State will mark the 60th time in Saluki baseball history the two teams have met with the Dawgs holding a 45-14 advantage in the series.

SIUC first battled Arkansas State on the diamond in 1947 when the Dawgs (then the "Maroons") lost 4-2. SIUC went 3-5 that season and were under the guidance of Glen "Abe" Martin, who was in his first year as head coach.

Recent history with the Indians has not been kind to SIUC as last season the Salukis traveled to ASU and were routed, 7-1.

Before that, though, the Dawgs split a four game series with the Indians in 1991, and beat ASU four times in 1990.

Upon the completion of this week's non-conference schedule, SIUC will head back into Missouri Valley Conference action against Wichita State. The Shockers are undefeated (6-0) in Valley action and are ranked No. 7 in the nation.
