Grievance in trustee election says poll workers were unfair

A grievance filed at the last minute by Andrew Exon, a former SIUC student trustee candidate, might cause the student trustee election results to remain invalid -- including the defeated athletic-fee referendum -- according to election officials.

The results will remain invalid until the grievance can be resolved and both student governments can fairly review results.

The fee referendum was on the student trustee ballot.

Exon had filed two grievances, one regarding student trustee-elect Jason Irvine's campaign expenditures and another against poll workers at the Lentz Hall polling place.

The unresolved grievance is against the two Lentz Hall poll workers, who allegedly urged some voters to cast ballots in favor of certain candidates in Monday's election.

Guyon's fee hike not only dance on IBHE card

By Dean Weaver
DE Special Assignment Reporter

The Illinois Board of Higher Education, already reconsidering its recommendation to eliminate state funding of intercollegiate athletics, will soon hear another alternative plan from one of its members.

David Downey, an IBHE member from Champaign, said he has drafted a proposal that would spare athletic funding from the budget.

His proposal would allow college students to be paid by a full-time student from $38 to comply, but could make recommendations to universities to stop using state money to support athletics.

Guyon's fee hike not only dance on IBHE card, the Illinois Board of Higher Education. Board of Trustees will be given a proposal that would spare athletic funding from the budget.

By fall 1996, Guyon is proposing the fee be raised to $55 per semester.

The Illinois Board of Higher Education recommended in the fall of 1992 that all public universities stop using state money to support intercollegiate athletics, and not raise student fees to compensate for the loss.

The deadline for compliance was to be July 1, 1996, but now the issue is back on the table, Ron Hodel, deputy director of IBHE, said.

The IBHE cannot force universities to comply, but can make recommendations to the state legislature that funding to particular schools be cut.

Guyon's proposal, which has been淡化 from SIUC's students, would give SIUC's students a voice in the decision-making process.

But at the IBHE's March meeting board member David Downey voiced opposition to curbing state funds from athletics, and has now drafted an alternative proposal.

Chancellor choice on campus today

By Shawnna Donovan
DE Governmental Affairs Reporter

Ted Sanders, expected to be SIU's next chancellor, will make an appearance on the Carbondale campus today.

Sanders, along with SIU officials, will then head for the SIU School of Medicine in Springfield.

Trustees are expected to announce Sanders' appointment today at a trustees meeting in Edwardsville.

According to Sanders' secretary in Ohio, the new chancellor flew to Southern Illinois Wednesday afternoon to meet with officials.

Law school dean leaving

By David R. Kazak
Daily Egyptian Reporter

SIUC Law School Dean Harry L. Hayworth IV announced Tuesday he will be leaving his position to become dean and president of a Minnesota law school.

Although some professors said his announcement came as a surprise, it was not entirely unexpected.

Law professor Edward Kionka said, "It did come as a surprise, but I knew he would be doing this sometime."

Kionka said it was unusual for a dean to stay in the same position for more than four years.

Hayworth came to SIUC in 1990 from the University of South Carolina, replacing interim dean Peter Geppert.

Hayworth will be taking a position as president and dean of William Mitchell College of Law in St. Paul, Minn.

Hayworth could not be reached for comment.

Bunnies need care-year-round

By Kellie Hutles
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Staring through the wire cages Wednesday during the Easter bunny sale, bunnies appeal to almost everyone who enters a pet store, especially the women looking for something unique. Some bunnies do not always remain as cute as they were in the basket and end up at the Humane Shelter.

Jannie Russell, manager of The Pet Stop at University Mall, said the store has been doing a brisk business selling a lot of plants and flowers Wednesday.

“The buyers want plants this time of year, because they are planting gardens and they are non-saving things.” She said. “We had the sale last year around Mother’s Day, and students were buying flowers for their parents.

This year is no different with Easter this weekend. Students are asking us what flowers their mothers might like for Easter, and we are just trying to help them get the right plants.”

Kenny Wake, a third-year law student from Springfield, said he came to buy some house plants for his apartment.

“We have really been busy all week, and we are spending a lot of money on plants. We sold out of daisies, prairie plants and perennial herbs.”

Bunnies need care year-round. Everyone likes to have the Easter bunny, but they will not keep them. The bunnies need care, boiling them for the Easter bunny sale.

Many rabbits are bought as gifts at Easter time. Buyers, however, should be prepared to spend time and money buying these pets.

SIUC trial advocacy team places 18th in competition

By William C. Phillips III
Daily Egyptian Reporter

In a scene reminiscent of a Perry Mason show, the SIUC trial Advocacy Squad took 18th place out of 165 teams national- ly at the Trial Advocacy Competition on the weekend of April 1 in Miami, Fla., putting for the plaintiff in the defense round.

The trial advocacy competitions improve the students’ skills and give them experience recognizing both sides of the courtroom. Opie said, “It gives those of us who are spiritual debaters a chance to exercise our legal argument skills.”

Opie said a major advantage was being able to prepare the answers before the case on direct examina- tion.

“We prepared the witnesses to emphasize on the strong points of the witnesses.” said Opie.

“We, as the trial advocacy squad, are prepared on direct examination and testify effectively on cross examina- tion.”

The panel of judges based the score on the arguments presented, including brief statements, direct examination, cross examination, closing arguments and the team’s performance, Opie said.

Searing is arbitrary and flexible, so how much the jury likes the team, Opie said.

“The best team does not always win — it is the team that is best liked,” he said.

Term end in sight; preparation needed

THE CALENDAR PAGES HAVE FLIPPED BY quickly this semester, spring is here and summer vacation — or summer semester for students who use the time to pull in some additional credit hours — is right around the corner. At times like this, it is easy for students to sit back and hide their time until the end of the semester. This is not the way to sit by passively, however. Students should buckle down, dig their trenches and finish the final round standing up.

A little more than three weeks remain until final exams week — a time of reckoning where all students must prove to their instructors and themselves that something from a semester-long session of classes, tests and research papers has sunk in to students’ psyche.

STUDENTS OWE IT TO THEMSELVES TO PUT IN the extra hours of studying and research to achieve the highest grades possible. For students who have worked hard all semester, it is a time to go out with the same bang you came in with. For students who perhaps could have attended a few more classes, or studied a little longer for mid-terms, it is time to salvage as much of the remaining semester as possible. And for those who only show up for class it is time — if you have not already done so — to send out those resumes and prepare for the great wide world beyond college.

NO MATTER WHAT THE OUTCOME OF the semester is, all students, from first-semester freshmen to graduating seniors to graduate students who came back for a political philosophy on prayer bold stand for Constitution

President’s ruling on prayer bold stand for Constitution

Here’s A CLUB: Pray if you want to! Here’s a new spin on cowardice: Make a very unpopular decision not to allow a graduation prayer at a state university in defense of the many international students not aligned with the western Judeo-Christian beliefs overwhelming them in the Southern Illinois Bible nooz and be called a wimp. Defend the constitution by keeping religion what it’s families, as well as the Pilgrims, Quakers and all religious refugees past and present, intended it to be — a private matter and be labeled religious refugees and be called a wimp. Defend virtue matters — and be labeled liberal (code word for Leftist Devil Worshipper). Mr. Striegel, Mr. Guyon is president of the University. He is not Chief of Justice of the Supreme Court. He does not make or interpret the law. He follows it, even in the face of the paralyzing, pedantic, intolerant “Moral Majority” (which cannot unequivocally claim it is either moral or a majority).

I am a conservative American male. I was raised a Christian, although I do not consider myself a self, liberal, liberal, conservative, Democrat or Republican. I do not need a label to speak for me, although I’m sure the card-carrying members of the aforementioned CMF will stick a couple on me.

I call ‘em like I see ‘em. As I see this one, the answer seems quite simple: Pray if you want to. This University cannot and should not endorse any religious ideologies. Students like Mr. Striegel should stand against all public institutions! Notre Dame or the Moody Bible Institute if they want their religious agenda carried out. Otherwise, try to be a good Christian and tolerate the ignorant, backward habits of other cultures, as well as the Constitution which you purport to defend.

Religious holiday excused absence under SIU policy

Students may not be aware that although the University is in session on Good Friday, the University accommodates religious observances of students. Page 450 of the Undergraduate Catalogue 1995-96 says that “Students absent from class because of observances of major religious holidays will be excused.” Students must notify the instructor at least three regular class periods in advance of an absence from class for a religious holiday and must take the responsibility for making up work missed.

Even if an exam is scheduled, if the student duly notifies the instructor, “the student should be given reasonable opportunity to make up the examination.” In calling this provision to the students’ attention, I am trusting that those who choose to exercise this option would politely and respectfully arrange with their instructor to make up the missed work and would not use it as simply an excuse to cut class.

STUDENT’S MORTAL ACT

Student’s moral act good lesson for all

WHILE MANY PEOPLE ARE N A HURRY IN today’s world, only taking time to think about themselves, one SIUC student is to be commended for deviating from the selfish norm.

Frank Breier, a senior in mechanical engineering from Lombard and member of the Egyptian Divers club, did something this week that we rarely hear about: He thought of another’s concerns instead of merely thinking of his own.

WHILE DIVING ON MARCH 8 WITH THE CLUB, Breier came across a ring at the bottom of Pulliam Pool — a ring worth, according to its owner, between $5,000 and $10,000.

Though Breier said the thought of keeping the ring for himself was not void from his mind, he chose to do the right thing. Breier returned the ring to its owner, providing a solid lesson for all students and people at large to follow. Hats should go off to Breier for not allowing personal greed to compromise his sense of morality.

‘Leftist’ wrong term for Guyon

Political philosophy unfairly blamed for graduation decision

I am compelled to respond to Mr. Striegel’s letter to the editor on April 11, 1995, entitled “Guyon’s stance same public institutions?!” I am sorry to disagree with your argument, sir, but you are basing it on the false premise that Christianity and leftist thought are mutually exclusive and incompatible. How long are you going to blame the ACLU and the left wing for every extra, contracultural and anti-traditional legislation that is taking place in society? And how long are you going to carry the Cold-War mentality and the ghost of McCarthyism in your head and blame the leftist for all social evil? For there are not many Leftists left in academia, and the ones still around are suppressed and silenced by those who greatly benefited from their struggles — like the right to free speech. Mr. Striegel, please don’t link President Guyon to the left, elitist.

USG OKs campus housing increase despite opposition

By Dave Mack

Undergraduate Student Government senators voted Wednesday night in favor of a 2.95 percent housing rate increase scheduled for next year.

Chris Ballard, a senator from University Park, said the increase "is not a personal but it does present a real opportunity for him to really make sure that we have students staying in town, not leaving town, not leaving the university because it is more expensive to stay in the off-campus housing as university approved." Professional Student Council President Kiona said.

Fee hike

Downey said he won the July 1 deadline removed and does not favor cutting state support of athletics.

"There's no way to run athletics without the state money," he said. "If they (Illinois) want to eliminate it, they should do it, not by just cutting funds."

Downey also anticipates making his proposal at the IHSA's May 2 meeting. A vote is not expected until July.

Ramon Martinez, an IHSA member from Evanston, said he disagrees with Downey's proposals and thinks state money used for athletics would be better spent on academics. "Since the state has a limited amount of money, I would rather see the money go towards academics so tuition costs are reduced," he said.

Martinez said if students at SIUC voted against an athletic fee increase, the SIU Board of Trustees should honor the wishes.

"If there are students who feel the athletic programs are in the cut position to vote their money," he told. "They know how much interscholastic athletics mean to them."

Martinez said he understands that without state funds and he increases intercollegiate athletic programs will be reduced.

"In these economic times, I would like to see all state schools don things like reducing their budgets and cut programs," he said.

Lacy Stearn, IHSA member from Herrin, said she helped Downey draft his proposal to contribute funding of athletics.

"We want to maintain ... recal-lege athletics, but also provides student athletic aid, helps to the recruitment of faculty and students and gives the college name recognition," she said.

Martinez said colleges place too emphasis on the importance of athletics. "When a student goes to find a job, is it the [main] thing to care about the football team or the GPA?" he said.

"Students are the ones in the classroom," he stressed.

Cultural Immersion: Script realistic reflection

By Kristi Dohority

Comparative and collaborative brain storming between cast and director have led to the creation of a script that tackles the issue of communication barriers between different cultures.

"Performing Across Cultures," a Kleinau Theatre production, did not follow the typical avenues in the production of a performance. Nicki Stucky, assistant professor in Speech Communication and the director of the show, said he assembled the cast before he had written a script. He chose people in his department who were interested in the topic of communication barriers and could move to the Central States Communication Association Annual Conference in Indianapolis.

"The performance takes its name from the theme 'Communicating Across Cultures' from the conference," Stucky said. "The play is tailored..."

Mad about King George

By Benjamin Golshahar

In "The Madness of King George" currently playing at Fox Theater, King George Ill played brilliantly by Nigel Hawthorne, has lost the "life" of strange flowers and vast empty spaces," the thirteen colonies. This causes him to be in generally gooey spirits.

To make things worse, he develops an intestinal disease, which today is known as cholera. It causes temporary fits of madness and can be recognized by its characteristic symptom — blue urine.

The royal court begins to talk about the king's strange state, and certain political factions, in Overheard

"She's not a dog, but... you know, it's sort of... gorgeous. I'd give her a five."

Rea Steve Chabot (R-Ohio), upon being asked whether he thought First Lady Hillary Clinton is pretty.

Entertainment Briefs

• BRIT TV: A joint lecture by two of Britain's top television experts, Sir David Nichols and John Prescott, will be held today at 11 a.m. in Lawson Hall 244. Admission is free.

• RA-BOOZE cannons won't actually be fired but SIUC's Symphony Orchestra will hope to create that sound as they perform "1812 Overture" tonight at 8 p.m. The concert will be held in Shroy Auditorium and tickets cost $3 to $5. Edward Benzies will be conducting.

• TO BE OR NOT TO BE: There will be a panel discussion titled "Interracial Relationships" held on Tuesday, April 11 at 4 p.m. in the Student Center Auditorium. "Mama's Plus and Devilman" is free and has English dubbing.

• FEEL THE GUMP: "Forest Gump" will be shown in the Student Center Auditorium, April 14 and 15 at 7 and 9:30 p.m. All shows are one buck.

• ENGLISH DAY: A day of celebration of the English language will be held on Thursday, April 20 at 8 p.m. with a poetry reading in the Student Center Auditorium. Irish poet Paul Muldoon will appear at SIUC's annual English Day festivities sponsored by the Department of English. Admission is free.

• MURDER ME FUNNY: The Stage Company, Inc. will be showing "The Musical Comedy Murders of 1940." This is a hilarious send-up of the murder mystery genre by John Bishop. The play will be performed on April 21, 22nd at 8 p.m. and Friday and Saturday at 7:30 p.m. on Sunday. For ticket prices please call 549-5466.

The List

The Daily Egyptian newspaper reports the following events for hosting next year's Academy Awards Show.

1. Carrot top. Only if the award show goes per-penny.
2. The entire Simpson Jury. If the damn thing ever comes.
3. Andrew Enser. His politics are strange enough for a new occupation.
4. Uma Opra. One of those "had to be there" lines.
5. Michael Jordan. Why not... he's one, everything else.

made to be performed at the conference.

Stucky said after his showing this Thursday, the show will travel to Indianapolis.

A conversation with cast member Porty English helped Stucky convey English’s experiences in living in Japan in his home.

Stucky said English spent a year in Japan. In explaining her experience there, she mentioned her ability to perform, the way she had to conform to Japan’s culture and the name “Performing Across Cultures.”

Stucky said the cast claims lots of different interests in cultures. The cast represents Hispanics, Caucasians, Japanese, persons with mixed ancestries and one member who identifies with the computer community.

After assembling the cast, Stucky said each member discussed and identified the character that was important to them. The script was born from those discussions and works.

Stucky said the performance tries to avoid providing answers. “We try to avoid simple solutions,” he said. “We raise the issues and hope people think about them, then make their own conclusions.”

Stucky said the ideas for the performance came from his teaching, and he believes the subject is important to society.

“There is such an area for misunderstanding and understanding, but it (the communication barrier) has far-reaching ramifications,” Stucky said.

Even with a large international audience on the SIUC campus, Stucky said he does not see a problem in the performance crossing the diverse groups.

“Not a problem per se,” Stucky said. “We have a special opportunity because we have such a diverse faculty and student population.”

Performing Across Cultures” attempts to expose the communication barriers between differing cultures through a range of personal narratives, poetry, conversations and theatrical performances.

The performance will be April 13 and 14 in the Quigley Auditorium at 8 p.m. Admission is free.

Who is your role model?

"I'm surprised that in today's day and age there still could be role models. Parents used to be the best role models, but it seems like nowadays they don't have time for their kids anymore."

John Piraino, a senior in psychology from Chicago.

"My father. Everything he's done, I find myself doing whether it's graduating college, mechanics, music, sports, common sense, reasoning, respect for others — everything good."

Marcelle Caston, a graduate student in public administration from Flossmoor.

"My mother. I really respect her because all the time through a lot of hard times, she's taught me and still managed to raise me."

Carrie Dadster, a junior in dietetics from O'Fallon.

"As a feminist, it's hard to find an adequate female role model. So I'm trying to come up with a good source."

April Pruitt, a junior in political science from Carbondale.

"As a feminist, I've got a lot of role models. In sports, I like Denis Rabin. My role model period is my best friend's daddy, Aaron Abbas-Shah. He's Sunni-Muslim."

Kathleen McCullough, a junior in molecular sciences from Passadena, Calif.

Shaka just released a new cause: "One More Paycheck Away From the Street." to add to her collection.

Both members are Catfish on guitar and vocals Brian Yiou on bass and Joshua Quark on drums. The band has been together for three years and has played at Central Illinois as well as the St. Louis area.

"We're trying to expand our territory and see if we can get more listeners," she said. "If everyone wants to have us (play) and listen that's cool." Catfish said the band hopes to get a label and make some money. "We don't like charging, we just want to make a better living," she said. "It desperately want to go play in Europe." Catfish said she thinks they are coming back in shape. "St. Louis adult lounges have a lot of R&B and soul music, even watching television, music videos have more blues tunes. I hope it'll (Blues) take off, it's a wave I want to ride," Catfish said.

nately one including the Prince of Wales, an ambitious character played by Rupert Everett, begins to see an opportunity opening.

At the king's son, Wales hopes to inherit the crown by saving George from a murderous madman. The Queen, played by Helen Mirren, attempts to stop the prince's potential separation. Julian Wadham gives a spectacular performance as the stoic theatrical Petru, a member of the House of Commons who is deeply loyal to the king. He doesn't want the prince to see the slain man to spur the king, so heasonic to the task of carrying the king's remains.

"The Madness of King George" is based on a play "The Madness of King George" and written by England's Royal National Theater. The film is somewhat long (two hours), but it holds your attention relatively well, with its mixture of comic and dramatic tension. You never know until the end whether it will be a happy or a tragic ending.

I would suggest you see this film if you can. The story of a divided country that could never be the same... Never.

the Los Angeles market is a high priority. "I hope to be able to put together a plan to have a second team in L.A.," he said. "It could be expanded to a two-team configuration of an existing franchise."

Tagliabue, however, backed off a plan calling for a second team in Los Angeles to establish a stadium trust fund for the renovation or construction of a stadium in southern California.

"The (Finance) Committee felt that was a goal that would be premature to make," he said. "Many clubs felt the best use of the money was for NFL charities."

Shaw said he believes the league will make an attempt to place another NFC team in the Los Angeles area at the conclusion of the league's television contract following the 1997 season.

"It looks like the best insurance of the league to have teams playing in Los Angeles, but playing in modular fashion," Shaw said.

The Rams exercised an escape clause in their Anaheim Stadium lease to begin play at a state-of-the-art football facility that would provide additional opportunities for revenue, such as premium seating and luxury boxes.

"Shaw struck a lucrative deal with St. Louis that hinges on the sale of more than $70 million in personal seat licenses. He contended the PSL money belonged to the Rams. The league said member clubs were entitled to 33 percent of that money.

"The NFL Finance Committee met late into the night Tuesday and then came to Shaw demanding $46 million, including $17 million in PSL money and a $29 million relocation fee. The NFL wanted the Rams to pay the league $20 million now and the remainder over 15 years.

"I advised Georgia and Stan not to accept the NFL's offer," Shaw said. "I thought it had become too private, but it's their team and it was their decision to make."

Fronteras and Kroenke, while aware the NFL's offer has built in provisos that could cost the Rams' obligation to $71.5 million, agreed to settle.

Although it appeared that Fronteras had to buy her way to St. Louis, Tagliabue strongly disagreed.

"It did not come down to a money deal with the Rams," Tagliabue said. "That is a completely erroneous implication and had very little to do with it. There will be no money paid to the other member clubs of the league. There is a payment called for the league which may go in NFL charities, or may go to a stadium trust fund. But money was not a part of our concern."

"The Rams offered the league $25.5 million a month ago in Phoenix, but league owners voted 21-3 against approving the move with six abstentions. The Rams increased their offer to $37.5 million a week ago, but were told by league lawyers late Tuesday night it would be $46 million to gain the commissioner's support and the recommendation of the NFL Finance Committee.

"The team also agreed to pay 50 percent of any losses claimed by Fox TV up to $12.5 million. If the league expands in the next 10 years and a team is not placed in Southern California, the Rams must pass on a $13 million expansion payroll."

"The money involved here was insignificant," Tagliabue said. "What was involved was the issue of principle, of moving a team out of a market when the perception of many member clubs was that the team was doing well financially and doing better than a lot of other teams in the league."

So what changed a 21-6 negative vote into a 23-6 positive tally in less than a month?

"The desire to have peace and not be at war was a big factor," Tagliabue said.

Cubs, strike too much for one fan to handle

By Ted Rodgers

Sporting News

When Jerry Prukin is 8 years old, he began rooting for the Cubs. They made the World Series that year, 1945, and he asked his father to take him. You are too young now, his father told him, but you can go the next time.

For 50 years, Prukin has finally given up. For him, there will be no next time. He had become a fixture in Wrigley Field as The Bleacher Preacher, wearing a helmet and propeller and lecturing others on maintaining the purity of the game. He had lost many friends.

But enough is enough, he says. He will never be back. The 50 years of fights and the strike have squeezed the enthusiasm from him.

"I don't mean like an agreement," he says. "It's still more than a Web Series."

Even for the Cubs fan, it matters. "I might go to the opener just to apologize to my friends," he says. "But I'll leave before the first pitch."

He will find something else to fill his time. Tiddlywinks? Maybe, he says. It won't be another sport. "Baseball doesn't appeal to me any longer." Can he truly walk away? "There is no other club as beautiful than the sound of the ball hitting the box," he says. "Will I miss it? I think it is time to get a life. I think baseball has clouded my mind like The Sphinx."

Just as the fog starts to lift, he says, "Michael Jordan came back. If the Cubs can't, I'll move to New York."

"I haven't been playing good. That sums it up right there. I think it's more of a mental thing." Stanyan felt he agreed that Irish's problems are mental, but is not buying into the baseball theory. "I don't think it's a case of him swinging," he said. "It's like riding a bike. Once you learn how to ride it, you don't forget it. I think it's more his rhythm and timing. I think those are just mental problems."

As Irish has struggled greatly, so has the rest of the team. "We haven't played hot," he said. "We're having trouble equally in all spots. I think it's our attitude. We have to change it now. The weather is getting better. We got a chance to get out more and we're hitting the ball harder."

With thoughts of last year's turn around in the back of their heads and a week of practice that has relieved some tensions, Irish thinks his team is ready to put out a few season low scores.

"No one was having fun," Irish said. "You play better if you're having fun and this week in practice we've been having more fun." "We can be confident coming into this tournament," Irish said. "Both Pipher brothers (Aaron and Erik) have played on this course and C.J. (Talbert) lives there, so he's played it on. So, we have that advantage where some guys know the course."

NFL owners allow Rams to move from Anaheim after 22-6 vote

Los Angeles Times

IRVING, Texas—The Los Angeles Rams are history, officially gone from Anaheim to St. Louis after winning the National Football League's blessing Wednesday with a $450-million payment.

With votes from 23 of the 30 league owners required to approve a franchise move, they voted 22-6 in favor, with the Los Angeles Raiders abstaining. Georgia Frontiere, Rams owner, who had been asked to remain outside during the meeting, was then called on to cast the deciding vote.

"I thought about it for a few minutes," she joked.

The Raiders' stadium concerns, which include a bid for two Super Bowls in Los Angeles and financial assistance for construction of a new stadium, were discussed for an hour after the vote on the Rams. It's expected that the league will agree to partially fund the proposed stadium at Hollywood Park, but a vote will not be taken until the May meetings in Jacksonville.

"We spent a lot of time talking about the Raiders," Dallas Cowboy owner Jerry Jones said. "I can't out of L.A."

League owners also approved the bids of St. Louis Rams, Columbia, Missouri businessmen, to purchase 30 percent of the Rams from Frontiere.

The Rams will play four games in Busch Stadium and finish the 1995 season at the $550 million domed stadium under construction.

Before they make their first appearance in St. Louis, the Rams will play the Los Angeles Raiders in an exhibition game, presumably in Southern California, and possibly at Anaheim Stadium.

"The Rams move, the brainchild of Georgia Frontiere, is not a move that has a 50-year relationship with Southern California, and again gives St. Louis, who is not the Cardinals to Phoenix in 1988, pro football.

"I'm just relieved that it's finished," Shaw said. "I'm happy for the fans of St. Louis and I hope that fans in Los Angeles will get another team.

A new sport has come to the SIUC, but it has an old feel to it. Lacrosse, which is the first sport everorganized on American soil, is now part of the SIUC athletic landscape.

Headed by lacrosse president Kirk Mottram, the SIUC team is currently a club with 21 members and is in the process of becoming a registered student organization. Mottram said he hopes it will happen by the end of this semester. The squad has a collection of experienced players and students who wanted to learn about the game.

"Some already knew how to play, but a lot came out just because they were curious," Mottram said. "It's a real endurance sport that uses every part of your body.

However, he said the sport is very easy to learn.

Mottram also said that lacrosse is a combination of several different sports.

"It's a mix between soccer, hockey and basketball," he said. "It really is hockey in the air. There is a lot of checking like hockey and I think it is one of the most demanding sports.

Lacrosse is a game in which players using sticks ending with netted scoops try to shoot the ball past the opponents goalie like in hockey.

Mottram said the goalkeeper, there are three defensemen, three midfielders and three attackers on the field.

Team said the defensemen have longer sticks to poke at the opponents and keep them from getting clean shot attempts. Midfielders handle the ball and look to make passes to get looks for attackers, but they also take shots themselves. Midfielders also can proceed all over the field.

Attackers are the main scorers on the team.

"Mottram, along with others, wanted to keep the team in the fall, but it never got off the ground. The club now plays other universities and hopes to expand in the future.

Bret McNish, a freshman in landscape horticulture from the Chicago area, said he got involved in the sport last year when his high school adapted it.

"I was curious about it, I read up on it and I have family on the east coast that has played the game," he said.

"I'm just relieved that it's finished," John Shaw Rams president imagine L.A. without a football team, but who would have thought two years ago the Rams would be out of L.A.
