Students to vote on fee increases

USG places six hikes on ballot; annual campus-wide election set for next Wednesday

By Signe K. Skinion
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Students will have a chance to voice their opinions to University policy makers next week on a proposed student fee increase.

The Undergraduate Student Government Senate voted unanimously to ask students on the USG election ballots whether or not they support a $43.50 fee increase which would begin July 1, 1997.

The ballot will give a break down of six proposed fee increases for the Student Center, the Recreation Center, Student Health Services, student health insurance and athletics.

Eric Bottom, USG Finance Committee chairman and College of Business senator, said the Illinois Board of Higher Education's recommends that student fees not exceed 3-percent of students' educational costs.

But he said SIUC has gone over this limit.

Bottom said the referendum will provide important information to the senate. He said the information the students provide will be presented the SIU Board of Trustees' May 9, when the board is scheduled to vote on the increases.

Donald Rehmer, USG West Side senator, said students' opinions are needed so USG can represent them on this issue.

USG elections are April 17 from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. with polling places at Trueblood Hall at University Park, Lentz Hall at Thompson Point, the Student Center and the Recreation Center.

In other business, USG passed a resolution that requests the SIUC administration and Information Technology to reassess the laser printing policy in two campus computer labs.

Students can go to Morris Library and receive free printing privileges. However, the computer lab on the first floor of Faner Hall charges 10 cents a page.

Robert Irby, College of Education senator and author of the resolution, said students are overruling Morris Library because of the free printing.

The resolution only asks the administration to consider their policy. It does not call for specific action.

David Vingren, USG Thompson Point senator and USG vice presidential candidate, said changing the printing policy could have adverse effects on students.

"This resolution might end up with the printing at the library being charged instead of free printing at the Faner lab," he said.

The next USG meeting is scheduled for April 24 at 7 p.m. in Ballroom B of the Student Center.

Environmental enforcement to shift to state

Illinois, along with other states, will be taking on more responsibility for implementation and enforcement of environmental regulations, the director of the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency says.

Mary Gade, director of the Illinois EPA, told an audience of about 40 SIUC students and faculty members Wednesday that a shift of responsibility to the states will result in more sound environmental management.

Jesse Jackson to visit SIUC on April 16

By Dustin Coleman
DE Special Projects Editor

Jesse Jackson Sr. will speak at the SIUC campus next week in an attempt to get people involved with the electoral process, a coordinator said.

Troy Alim, coordinator of the Black Affairs Council, said Jackson's speech is part of his Illinois Freedom Bus Tour, which runs April 15 to April 19. The tour is concentrating on getting students involved in the political system, Alim said.

Jackson ran unsuccessfully in the 1984 and 1988 Democratic presidential primaries. He is president and founder of the National Rainbow Coalition. He also was elected to the post of U.S. senator for Washington, D.C., which is known as the "shadow senator." The position has no voting rights in Congress.

Jackson is scheduled to speak Tuesday at noon on the Shryock Auditorium steps.

Arnoldi denied write-in candidacy option

Five signatures short, petition falls short of eligibility; commission denies appeal

By Dave Katzman
DE Associate Editor

A candidate who was seeking the office of student trustee was told he cannot run as a write-in candidate in the April 17 election.

The Student Trustee Election Commission ruled Tuesday that its by-laws do not distinguish between certified and write-in candidates. Therefore, if candidates are declared ineligible, they cannot declare themselves write-in candidates.

Troy Arnoldi, a senior in speech communication from South Roxana, began a push for a write-in campaign for student trustee after his petition to be placed on the regular ballot was ruled invalid by the commission April 2.

The petition was denied because of what the commission ruled was incomplete information and ineligible signatures.

The student trustee is elected by the student body as a representative to the SIU Board of Trustees.

Arnoldi said he still had more than the 200 legitimate signatures needed to run on the ballot. The commission claims he had only 195.

"I feel they disregarded the spirit of the law," he said.

Despite his personal feelings, Arnoldi said he accepts the decision.

"The powers that be have spoken," he said. "I might not agree with that, but by taking the high road, I will abide by their wishes."

Patrick Smith, chairman of the Student Trustee Election Commission, said he did not like what he felt the commission had to do.

"It was unfortunate that we had to meet to discuss the issues," he said. "It was forced upon us, and we had to look at the plain language of the by-laws and had to apply it

MARKET FOR ILLICIT GUNS BOOMING IN CHINA — BEIJING—When Yao Rulai goes out on business, he dons his thick gold bracelet, pockets a pack of imported cigarettes and clips on his mobile phone. And whenever he fears that his business dealings might bring him in contact with the wrong sort of people, he buckles on his latest accessory: a snub-nosed handgun. Although owning a gun is all but banned in China, Yao has joined the millions of Chinese who have been ignoring the law and buying firearms. Some, like Yao, are otherwise law-abiding citizens who own guns for self-protection; but most guns are sold to criminals, helping to fuel a dramatic increase in armed robberies and shootings. Gun ownership represents a seismic shift in China, a country where only a few years ago a switchblade was about as tough as it got.

WAR CRIME EXPERTS EXCAVATE BOSNIA REMAINS — TUZLA, Bosnia-Herzegovina—To the casual observer, the scene looks something like an archaeological dig, except for the sniffer: A team of investigators with small shovels and plastic bags gather bones, clothing and other debris from a roped-off field. They painstakingly tag the items and place them in plastic bags. They are the remains, investigators contend, of Bosnian Muslims killed by Serb soldiers after the Muslims fled the small town of Srebrenica, in eastern Bosnia, when it fell to the Serbs last July, five months before the end of the war. This is the archaeology of war crimes. Bosnian Muslim witnesses say the Serbs, in a series of massacres, executed defenseless Muslims by the hundreds and buried them in mass graves at perhaps 30 sites north of Srebrenica.

PLANS TO SELL DISCOUNT CIGARETTES REJECTED — WASHINGTON—Plans by BAT Industries PLC to sell its six discount cigarette brands to Lorillard Tobacco Co. have gone up in smoke. The Federal Trade Commission on Wednesday rejected the proposal, saying it feared Lorillard would not compete aggressively in the discount cigarette market and that the deal would force the closure of a plant in Reidsville, N.C. BAT Industries, a British company that is the parent of cigarette manufacturer Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., bought American Tobacco Co. for $1 billion in 1994. The FTC challenged the purchase until BAT agreed to sell the discount brands. But the FTC said BAT did not prove to the agency that a sale to Lorillard — a subsidiary of Loews Corp. — would correct the original antitrust concerns about an industry that is highly concentrated in only five companies.

TRADE DISPUTES MAY AFFECT U.S.-JAPAN SUMMIT — TOKYO—When President Clinton and Prime Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto meet here next week, they aim to showcase successes and reaffirm security ties. But trade disputes over semiconductors, film and insurance may cast a pall on the talks. "My understanding is that we do not want trade to dominate this" summit, said a U.S. official. "But we have to be engaged. The current trade tensions come against the backdrop of a growing determination among Japanese trade officials that the United States and Japan should move away from resolving trade disputes bilaterally and instead use multilateral procedures in the World Trade Organization (WTO)."

Student tackles sexism

Grad assistant says sports slang degrades women

By Marc Chase and Travis Akin
Daily Egyptian Reporters

Hitting home runs, getting to first base and striking out are terms that should only be associated with baseball, not with a male's sexual exploits with women, an SIUC graduate student says.

Leslie Stratieger, a graduate assistant with SIUC Women's Services, spoke to about 12 people Wednesday on what she called degrading sports terminology used by some men to refer to women.

Part of Stratieger's presentation, which coincides with Sexual Assault Awareness Month, was a video titled "Sports Sex."

The video, produced at the University of Illinois, discussed many terms referring to sex with women and women's anatomy that are also sports terms.

Stratieger said such terms reduce women to objects, rather than human beings, and can contribute to violence towards women.

Refusing to use such terms would mean more than just being politically correct, she said.

"Political correctness is just saying something," Stratieger said. "Respect is really meaning what you are saying."

Stratieger also discussed an advertisement that ran recently in the Daily Egyptian for a sports bar. The ad showed a woman in a bikini, with her head and legs cropped off, and a drink menu at waist level.

Darcia Charlesworth, a doctoral student in speech communications from Phoenix, Ariz., who attended the presentation, said ads like this show women as objects for sale.

"I think it is wrong to show women as objects and commodities," Charlesworth said. "The

USG candidates disagree about student fees, possible alternatives for funding services

By Signe K. Skänin
Daily Egyptian Reporter

This story is the second in a three-part series on the major issues of next week's Undergraduate Student Government elections.

Presidential and vice presidential candidates for Undergraduate Student Government disagree on whether or not students should have to pay for all University services or only for the services they use.

And one USG presidential candidate and his vice presidential running mate are divided on the issue.

SIU President Ted Sanders has proposed an increase in student fees of $43.50, beginning July 1, 1997. The increase would raise the Student Legal Services fee, the Student Center fee, the Recreation Center fee, the Student Health Services fee, the student health insurance fee and the athletics fee.

David Vingren, vice presidential candidate for the Students First Party, said one way to reduce the amount of fees students pay would be to only require students to pay fees for services they use.

But Troy Alim, Students First presidential candidate, said he does not fully agree with this.

Alim, a junior in public relations from Chicago, said whether a student should only pay for what he or she uses depends on the service.

Alim said he has heard suggestions that Student Legal Services become a pay-per-use program, but he said he believes this would not work for that service because of the income it needs.

"SLS would require a much more intensive payment scale than any other service," he said. "What the service does would determine if it could be a pay-per-use program."

However, Alim's running mate David Vingren, a sophomore in political science and finance from Bloomington and the Students First Party vice presidential candidate, said he completely supports the idea that students only pay for services they use.

Vingren said the only student fees that need to be increased are those that directly affect the quality of education at SIUC.

"You have to have housing, food and computers while attaining an education, but other fees that don't have educational value I'm not in favor of increasing," Vingren, USG Thompson Point senator, said.

Vingren said the proposed $10 increase for athletics would allow students to enter sporting events for free by using their student identification cards. He said this fee would be unnecessary because the entire student body does not attend these activities.

But Scott Pfeiffer, the Saluki Party presidential candidate and a senior in political science from Mt. Vernon, said he is uncertain about the viability of students only paying for services used.

"What the administration and the students need to do is come to some kind of common ground," Pfeiffer, current USG chief of staff, said. "But if students would want a change, then we would work to try and get it changed."

Robert Irby, a senior in education from Springfield and the Saluki Party vice presidential candidate, said having students pay only for services they use is a nice idea but is impractical.

He said he is not sure how to change the current policy, but he said he would work with the senate and administration to come to a solution that meets the University's needs and is acceptable to the student body.

Irby said if elected, he would ask the student body to give its opinions on what fees are needed. He said he would take those opinions to the senate and SIU Board of Trustees, attempting a compromise.

Pfeiffer said USG needs to be used as a forum for the student body and the administration when it comes to understanding the need and circumstances surrounding student fee increases.

Alim said student fee increases offer a no-win situation for the University because services are needed as an enrollment and retention tool. He said he believes increasing fees to update and expand various services is a major cause for students leaving SIUC.

"Over time, raising fees becomes

Senator to speak at SIUC

Moseley-Braun: Quotas, competition for jobs not intent of affirmative action programs.

By Donita Polly
DE Politics Editor

Defending civil rights and protecting affirmative action policies are important because these issues affect the country's future, a spokeswoman for Sen. Carol Moseley-Braun, D-Illinois, says.

"Civil Rights Under Fire" is the topic for a speech to be given by Moseley-Braun on campus tonight. The speech will focus on affirmative action as a way for people to fulfill their job potentials, Susan Lindauer, spokeswoman for Moseley-Braun, said.

Lindauer said Moseley-Braun defends affirmative action policies because these policies help women and minorities get more jobs and education. She said the senator will speak about women and minorities, who benefit most from these policies, because they provide strength and perseverance to the work force that otherwise would be lacking.

Leonard Gross, SIUC School of Law professor and chairman of the Southern Illinois chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, which is sponsoring the speech, said Moseley-Braun is more than qualified to speak on this topic.

"As the first black woman senator in history, she is uniquely qualified to speak about civil rights in this country," Gross said.

Gross said Moseley-Braun is knowledgeable about civil rights and affirmative action because she has been involved with the issues her whole life. He said she was asked to speak on the topic because of her history in the field and because she can give a view of where civil rights has been and where it is going.

Seymour Bryson, executive assistant to the SIUC chancellor on affirmative action, said Moseley-Braun will have an influence on the fate of affirmative action in this country.

He said she will increase people's awareness of affirmative action and help people form more intelligent decisions on the topic.

Lindauer said that recent attacks on affirmative action policies in courts and universities across the country is one of the reasons why Moseley-Braun's chose the topic.

Courts and some universities across the country have decided recently that racial preferences should not be taken into account when admitting students. Schools, including the University of California and the University of Texas, no longer take the race of students into account during admissions.

Lindauer said Moseley-Braun also will discuss misconceptions about affirmative action.

Affirmative action is not about setting quotas or pitting individuals against each other for jobs, Lindauer said. She said affirmative action is about recognizing that everyone, regardless of race or sex, has something to give to society.

"Affirmative action is about encouraging every member of society to fulfill their potential," she said. "Affirmative action has always been good for America."

Moseley-Braun will speak at 7:30 p.m. in Lawson Hall, Room 171.

After 'insulating' himself from law, suspect caught

By Kendra Helmer
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A Carbondale police officer stumbled upon a man wanted on three Jackson County warrants Wednesday while the officer was returning a driver's license to another Carbondale resident. "An officer knocked on the door, and a man who is known to be wanted on three warrants looked out the window," Sgt. Luanne Brown said.

Brown said that the officer was returning a driver's license to a resident of 520 E. Fisher St. when he recognized another resident, Ryan Vinson, 20, of Carbondale.

Police said Vinson was wanted on three warrants for failure to appear in court on charges of aggravated battery, unlawful restraint and theft. Brown said that several officers knew Vinson and knew of the warrants out for his arrest.

"After he saw the police officer, (the suspect) ran through the house, and the officer got permission from a resident to search the house," she said.

Police said the officer was unable to find the suspect in the house, so he looked in the attic, where he found Vinson hiding.

"The man had burrowed down in some insulation in the attic," Brown said. "The officer noticed that back portion of his head sticking out of the insulation."

Insulation covered the suspect almost entirely, including his ears and nostrils.

Vinson was taken into custody and was charged with resisting/obstructing a police officer and violation of bail bond. He was incarcerated at the Jackson County Jail and was unable to post $1,650 as of Wednesday.

USG, GPSC should act now to amend trustee election laws

ELECTING A STUDENT TRUSTEE TO THE SIU Board of Trustees has turned into a sad situation. What should be a democratic process has deteriorated to the point where every undergraduate on campus could vote for the same candidate only to have their vote disqualified.

The problem stems from a Student Trustee Election Commission decision Tuesday night making write-in candidates ineligible for the position.

The blame for this predicament should not be placed on the commission, however. If anyone is to blame, it is the authors of the student trustee election laws which haven't been changed since the 1980s. The laws list a set of requirements for "each" candidate. There is no distinction between write-in and on-the-ballot candidates. The result: There is no such thing as a write-in candidate.

BLAMING SOMEONE FOR THIS SITUATION is not nearly as important as fixing it anyway. This is why the Undergraduate Student Government and the Graduate and Professional Student Council should make a last-ditch effort to quickly amend the election laws to allow write-in candidates.

One requirement all the candidates must satisfy is submitting a petition with the names, signatures and ID numbers of 200 SIUC students. This should be a requirement to appear on the ballot. No one should be disqualified from running for the position because they do not submit a petition.

TROY ARNOLDI'S RECENT ATTEMPT TO RUN for student trustee illustrates how flawed the election laws are. Arnoldi submitted a petition signed by 220 students. Upon evaluation, the commission threw out 25 of signatures for various reasons. Some students only signed their names without printing them, while others did not give their social security numbers. As a result, Arnoldi was five signatures short and was not placed on the ballot. He appealed to the Student Conduct Review Board. The appeal was denied, but a board subcommittee suggested that the laws be amended to "provide for the correction of mistakes outside the control of the candidate." Finally the commission had to decide if Arnoldi was eligible as a write-in candidate. Because of the faulty election laws, they decided no one was eligible to run as a write-in candidate.

Now students can't even choose a candidate who had 195 signatures on a petition stating he should be on the ballot. That's about 14 percent of the total turnout of last year's election — and students can't vote for him!

THAT'S WHY USG AND GPSC SHOULD HOLD emergency meetings to push through an amendment allowing write-in candidates. Such an amendment would be a rush job requiring tremendous extra work from both bodies. It might not even be possible, but there should at least be an effort to amend the election laws before next Wednesday's election. USG and GPSC are representing the student body. As it stands, the trustee election does not let students truly exercise their voting power. USG and GPSC are in a position give Repairing the process for next year's election is reacting too late. SIUC's financial crisis is resulting in campus-wide budget cuts. Students deserve to have real options for who will be their voice to the people who will decide where those cuts will take place.

Unless the election laws are changed now, students will not have those options next Wednesday.

Commentary

Police must respect students

I am responding to the story, "Student arrested for littering," in Tuesday's Daily Egyptian. I wonder how many fellow students who read this article were as embarrassed for our school image as I was. Here we have just another example of the local police abusing their delegated power, harassing students.

I am offended by the fact that we students have to pay increasing amounts for tuition and fees, and still have to endure the ridiculous parking regulations and harassment by the police. While I realize we must have parking regulations, I disagree that the police and tow trucks should have the right to act at a moment's notice, abusing their power. I would point out to our esteemed police force that students are extremely busy, and it becomes necessary to stop for a few minutes to drop off a book at the library or a paper to a professor. If a student's parking interferes with school business, then action should be taken.

The SIUC police officer took advantage of Ms. Roger's frustration — while she was justifiably outraged for being presented with a parking ticket — and ticketed her for littering. Anyone who reads this realizes this is a joke. Are the SIUC police really concerned about keeping our campus clean of trash, or was this an easy $75 for the city?

Where were the police this weekend when two SIUC students were robbed on Illinois Avenue? Every weekend the police can be seen walking around the bars protecting citizens from adult college students under 20 years of age. And, when a student parks for a minute or two out of place, the police suddenly appear. However, as a student and a citizen, I would prefer that the police concentrate less on nit-picking students and concentrate on protecting citizens from thugs that rape women and rob others.

I have great affection for Southern Illinois University, and great respect for Chancellor Guyon and the administration. And, like the administration, I am concerned with the image our University carries. When stories like this one get out to the public, I am embarrassed to be associated with it. Instead of worrying what former students say about our University on television, I would hope that the administration would concentrate on the real image-tarnishing problems. If the school administration really cares about promoting SIUC, they would relieve officers who do not treat students with respect.

Private campaign spending soars

The Los Angeles Times

As the costs of seeking public office soar, increasing numbers of candidates are turning to self-financing to help cover their campaign expenses. A decade ago the Center for Responsive Politics counted 64 congressional candidates who spent more than $100,000 in personal funds on their races. In the 1993-94 election cycle it found 131 candidates who did so. And the money they spent more than tripled, from $32 million to a whopping $109 million.

The law limits individual contributions to candidates to $1,000. But there's no limit on self-financing, nor under the First Amendment's guarantee of free speech, the Supreme Court has held, can there be. Rich candidates can, and do, commit huge sums to their electoral quests. Ross Perot, Steve Forbes and Michael Huffington each threw tens of millions of dollars of their personal fortunes into what turned out to be losing efforts — in the first two instances for the presidency, in Huffington's case for a Senate seat from California. Some candidates who contribute to their own races do so in the form of loans. Winners stand a good chance of getting paid back, in whole or part, through post-election fund-raisers.

Personal wealth does not, as the above cases show, guarantee electoral success. The Center for Responsive Politics in fact found that only 15 of the 93 House candidates who contributed $100,000 or more to themselves in 1994 were elected. But that doesn't necessarily tell the whole tale. There's no way to know, for example, how many highly qualified potential candidates are intimidated into not running because they can't hope to match what rich opponents are able to spend. Nor is there any sure way to measure the distorting effects that vast funds, often spent on heavily negative campaign advertising, may have on the political process. But clearly it's an important factor.

Money and politics have always been inseparable. What has become worrisome is the ever-greater prominence that money plays in campaigns.

The encouraging news, so far, is that massive spending — almost unlimited spending when self-financing is at work — doesn't necessarily lead to electoral success. The bad news is that the failure rate hasn't dissuaded growing numbers of candidates from spending wildly.

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Board.

Letters to the editor must be submitted in person to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 350 words. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department.

Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

Student disturbed with SIUC but proud to graduate in May

I will graduate from SIUC this spring and will be proud to tell people that I am a graduate of Southern Illinois University at Carbondale. My parents, my sister and her husband, my brother, my husband, my mother-in-law, and my sister-in-law are all graduates or current students at SIUC. I can safely say that all of these people, including myself, feel that we have received a strong education from this institution. Because of this feeling I am disturbed by the problems that I see here and by the lack of a real, practical response to those problems.

All universities in this state currently face budget problems due to lack of support from the state government, however, I don't see President Sanders or Chancellor Guyon campaigning in Springfield to get more funds. Now maybe it still wouldn't happen, but isn't that a good portion of President Sander's job? Instead, one of the first actions that Sanders took in his new job was to change his title from chancellor to president. How can he possibly justify that as more important than all of the other issues facing SIU?

There is a statue of President Morris in front of Shroyock Auditorium facing north. The story heard about this statue is that it faces north because he was constantly looking to Springfield for money to improve this University, and this University did improve during his tenure.

President Morris is said to have had a vision for this University — do either President Sanders or Chancellor Guyon?

One of the major problems faced right now is decreasing enrollment and the University has set up a task force to deal with this problem. Well, at least it's something, but if you really want to know the problems ask the students.

Ann Walch

Perspectives

First, this city does not treat students well. How many students have had problems with their landlords or their apartments? How about the debit card program for students a few years ago that city business officials promptly had eliminated? What about WIDB's attempts to transmit throughout Carbondale that the city radio stations promptly nixed, and that the University did not fight for at all? And let's not forget the whole Halloween fiasco which the city handled so well.

How about scientific laboratories that haven't gotten new equipment in years or decades? People looking for jobs can't compete with graduates of another university that has the most up-to-date equipment available for its students.

The science departments try, but they are under budget constraints like every other department. And I think that some professors, in science and other fields, have been in academia for too long and don't know what the outside world expects of graduates. How can the graduates be prepared to compete with facilities and professors that are out of date?

Another reason enrollment is decreasing is increasing enrollment at community colleges. Many students have found that they can save money by attending a community college. I've also had people tell me that they feel they received a better general education and more personalized attention at a community college than they would have at a larger university.

The cost of this University has also become unreasonable. Yes, there are necessary inflationary increases in tuition and fees, but why does this University continuously ask the students for higher fees for less return? And why did it take so long to start up a bus system — a system that appears to be very successful — and liked by the students? The students voted for that fee increase, but it still took years to actually do it. Now the University and USG are asking the students to dig even deeper next year.

So do you really want to know why enrollment is decreasing at this University President Sanders or are you more interested in making more superficial, unnecessary changes that waste time and money?

The bottom line is an increasing cost for a decreasing benefit. It costs students more and more money to go to a University with older and older facilities in a city that takes more and more money in order to treat the students badly.

If you do not work on the real, inherent problems at this University, enrollment will continue to decrease and this University's reputation will fall with it. And that would be a great disappointment for all SIU grads and students who proudly say they are a Saluki.

IEPA

She said state agencies are more familiar with states' specific environmental problems than their federal counterparts.

This shift of power to state agencies comes at a time when the federal government is considering a similar shift of power to states in many other aspects of government, she said.

Gade's speech, "The Future of Illinois Environmental Policy," was presented by the SIUC Environmental Studies Program in the Lesar Law Auditorium as part of a series of guest lectures.

Gade said in the past, the U.S. EPA made most of the decisions in the area of environmental protection. This resulted in policies that did not address specific state problems, she said.

However, not everyone agrees that shifting responsibility to the states is the best course of action in every case.

Steven Kraft, an SIUC professor in agribusiness economics who attended the lecture, expressed concerns that special interests could influence the way states enforce environmental policies.

"State government can be more susceptible to political intrigue," Kraft said. "They may be less willing to take on large employers or companies that are important to the economic stability of the state."

While Gade acknowledged that Kraft's concern was valid and indicated the need for continued involvement of the United States EPA — especially in rule-making and setting environmental quality standards — she said states should be granted more power.

"For example, if you are the governor of a state like Michigan, going after the auto industry might not be the smartest thing for you to do," she said. "But states are beginning to extract larger and larger penalties against big polluters."

Gade said the U.S. EPA should still maintain a presence in state-level enforcement but should act as a backup, getting involved only when a state agency fails to adequately enforce a standard or implement a program.

The U.S. EPA also should continue to provide uniform environmental quality standards and scientific research that states may not be able to afford, she said.

"If I am not doing my job, or my staff is not doing their jobs, the U.S. EPA should step in," Gade said. "Because they are in Washington, they can be more insulated (against economic interests)."

Gade also discussed the recent trend of using market mechanisms to improve environmental quality, rather than relying on regulations of the past.

Market mechanisms provide economic incentives for businesses to meet environmental quality standards by encouraging the businesses to come up with better and cheaper pollution-control methods.

Formerly, command and control regulations mandated certain pollution-control techniques and prohibited harmful activity.

A market-based environmental program already in place in Illinois is the use of pollution credits to reduce sulfur dioxide emissions, which cause acid rain.

Polluters who reduce their emissions can sell their unused credits, or permits, to other polluters who are emitting more sulfur dioxide than they have credits for.

The program reduces the total amount of pollution by gradually reducing the number of pollution credits available.

"Don't get me wrong," Gade said. "Command and control is a big part of the reason this country's environment is as healthy as it is. But for several reasons, command and control is not working as well as it has in the past."

Gade said command and control regulation works well against large sources of pollution, such as factories and power plants. But she said the Illinois EPA lacks the resources to enforce regulations aimed at smaller businesses because of the large number of potential violators.

Strict command and control also can hurt the development of new technologies because mandating specific technologies may remove incentives to develop new and better alternatives, she said.

Kraft agreed with Gade on some points, stressing the advantages market-based programs have to offer.

"I am not sure it is the best method to address all sorts of pollution, but it is an interesting area," he said.

"The key is to find programs that take advantage of the benefits markets have to offer but still provide adequate environmental protection."

Aside from state and federal issues, Gade also touched on the growing involvement of the Illinois EPA in international issues. The agency has been involved with environmental issues as far away as China, she told the audience.

"This is a very exciting time for the field of environmental management," she said. "I hope some of you will consider working in the field when you finish your degrees."

Catholic baptism by immersion increasing

Los Angeles Times

When the young woman learned that her baptism into the Roman Catholic Church would be a thorough dousing, her reaction was short and blunt: "Aaagh!"

"You will get very wet," Monsignor Gerald Wilkerson had advised a dozen prospective initiates, including Kirsten Arebalos, 24, at Our Lady of Grace parish in Los Angeles as they began year-long studies leading to their baptism, confirmation and first Communion.

"I had a sneaking suspicion because we do have that big pool in the corner of the church," said Arebalos, a schoolteacher, "but my husband is Catholic and he had never seen an adult baptize using a pool."

Neither have many other Catholics. But they soon will.

To the dismay of some traditionalists, hundreds of converts to the Catholic Church in Southern California were baptized recently by immersion, typically kneeling in water up to their waists as a priest poured water over their heads and shoulders.

After centuries of using only small fonts for baptizing with a small amount of water on the head, Roman Catholicism is slowly reintroducing baptismal pools into churches in order to hold immersion baptisms in a style approaching that of many Protestant churches.

The purpose: to regain the dramatic Christian symbolism of dying to the old life and rising to the new — an ancient analogy to Jesus being crucified on Good Friday and being raised from the dead on Easter.

But the baptismal pools strike some traditional Catholics as far too close to Bible Belt Protestantism.

Generally, it has been Baptist or Pentecostal Protestant churches that fully submerge initiates in a baptismal pool — or sometimes a handy river.

Episcopal, Methodist, Lutheran and other old-line Protestant churches baptize by sprinkling water on the forehead, as Catholics did.

Although Catholicism still permits such baptisms, the groundbreaking Second Vatican Council (1962-'65) decided to return to the splashier ceremony of early church history.

By the 1980s, Rome deemed immersion the "more suitable" method, except for infants.

The church's official instructions on baptism, the "Rite of Christian Initiation of Adults," stipulate that baptismal pools be in an area of the church easily seen by the faithful and "be large enough to accommodate a good number of people."

In the Los Angeles archdiocese, fewer than half of the 289 parishes have baptismal pools.

woman's body is viewed as the 'other,' and the man's is viewed as the norm."

Stratiger said she did not blame any specific area of the media for ads she says depict women in a negative light.

She said it is the fault of the media as a whole.

Kent Randall, a Carbondale citizen who also attended the presentation, said he has used slang terms when referring to women before. But he said there is a fine line.

"I have never assaulted anyone," Randall said. "I do not think you should be derogatory to a woman right to her face."

As for the sports bar ad, Randall said he thought it was just an eye catcher, not intended to do anyone harm.

USG

necessary with the cost of inflation and to compete with other services at other universities," he said.

"However, students don't want to pay more money. But when the services start to disappear, so do the students."

Allin said he is also willing to work out a compromise on what SIUC services are needed for the University to function and what students can afford and will support. He said the problem with student fees can be resolved if the University and USG have a working relationship with open lines of communication.

All undergraduate SIUC students can vote in the USG senate elections.

USG is an elected student body that represents five geographic areas, such as Thompson Point, and nine academic areas, such as the College of Business and Administration.

USG meets every two weeks during the school year.

USG senators represents the student body's opinions to the administration on matters of activities and University decisions that affect students. Each senator is given one vote for each issue brought to the senate floor.

The USG president presents all senate issues to the University and has power to override any senate vote.

The president can call special senate meetings in the case of emergency and appoints the chief of staff, an executive board member.

The USG vice president chairs all senate meetings and presents all decisions to the president for approval.

The vice president only votes on senate issues if there is a tie and takes the president's seat if he or she is absent.

A candidate debate is scheduled for April 15 at 7:30 p.m. in the Student Center Auditorium and will be broadcast on SPC-TV.

Elections are scheduled for April 17 from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m. with balloting places at the Recreation Center, the Student Center, Trueblood Hall, and Lentz Hall.

Tim McGraw riding into Carbondale to sing blues

By Travis Aldin
Daily Egyptian Reporter

While Tim McGraw's music may be slightly different from the classic sounds of Hank Williams or Patsy Cline, the ideas expressed in the music are much the same. McGraw, like his predecessors, is just a plain old country boy singing the blues.

McGraw will perform with opener Faith Hill at 8 p.m. Friday at the SIUC Arena as part of his "Spontaneous Combustion" tour.

McGraw's music emphasizes the traditional elements of country music. The idea of living in the South with a Bible in one hand and a gun in the other pervades his music. His songs are about being an individual and not taking anything from anybody. For instance, "That's Just Me" states his own identity as a man from the country and the pride of who and what he is.

"I was a Southern-born man raised on the Good Book/My old boots are worn from the hard roads I took.../I may not be high society/But I got all I need/And that's just me."

His hard-edged music matches the name of his "Spontaneous Combustion" tour. It is a fusion of rock 'n' roll and country. The music sounds as if it could be played on a classic rock radio station at times. If it were not for the twangy tone of his voice and the lyrics, it would be easy to forget he was a country artist.

"Refried Dreams" is such a song. The upbeat tempo and the rock 'n' roll rhythms produce a sound that transcends country and crosses musical genres.

McGraw's music has a tender side to it as well. His romantic ballad "Can't Be Really Gone" tells the story of a man mourning the leaving of a woman from his life. He refuses to accept the fact she has left him for good. Again McGraw crosses musical lines to create a song that is country by definition, but also is comparable to ballads sung by Bryan Adams.

McGraw is touring to promote his third CD, "All I Want." The first two singles from the CD went number one and his second CD "Not A Moment To Go Soon," went triple-platinum, selling more than three and energetic. Hill's debut CD, "Take Me As I Am," had three number-one singles and went platinum, selling more than a million units. In May 1994, she was named the Academy of Country's Music's Top New Female Performer, and she will co-host this year's award ceremony with Brooks and Dunn.

Both McGraw and Hill reflect the trends in today's country music. Modern country is more than just songs about rowdy friends coming over to drink beer, it is a statement of the values of classic country in a new style that pools from a wide range of musical expressions. McGraw and Hill draw from the religious and individualistic themes of classic country, but they have updated the older form of music and made it their own. Friday's show may not be traditional country music, but the message will still be the same.

Special guest Faith Hill will open for McGraw in support of her new CD, "It Matters To Me."

Hill has taken an '80s-rock style and put it into a country format. "It Matters To Me," the title track, sounds vaguely like the sentimental songs of Journey or Foreigner in the early '80s. The occasional slide guitar and fiddle are the only reminders that she is a country artist.

Her voice is strong, powerful and authoritative. Her vocals give the music a biting edge. For instance, in "You Will Be Mine," she says she plays by her own rules: The power of her vocals backs up the statement and makes her music commanding million units. He won the Best New Artist Award at the 1994 American Music Awards and the 1995 Album of the Year Award at the Academy of Country Music Awards.

Tim McGraw will play at 8 p.m. Friday at the SIUC Arena. Faith Hill will open. Tickets are $22.50.

MTV news co-anchor to talk about politics

By Tammy Taylor
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Tabitha Soren, an MTV personality, is taking a day off from her television spotlight to give a presentation at SIUC about the press and its influence on the political process, a representative from Student Programming Council says.

Soren is the co-host of The Week in Rock and assists Kurt Loder in the daily MTV news reports.

Eric Linster, director of Social Awareness for the council, said Soren will lecture tonight about the media and its influences on public opinion and politics using video clips to supplement her presentation. He said the focus will be on the 1996 presidential elections and the issues that are shaping the campaigns.

"Students should be very interested in the program because Tabitha Soren is known for covering issues that are relevant to college students," Linster said.

John Jackson, dean of the College of Liberal Arts and professor in the political science department, said the media play a massive role in politics and presidential campaigns. He said it is relatively new for outlets such as MTV to become influential in politics. He said MTV has become an important alternative to mainstream news among young people.

Jackson said young people generally do not vote and give up an excellent opportunity to influence issues that affect their lives.

"MTV is able to reach an audience that is difficult to inform," he said. "The presentation by Tabitha Soren can bring useful political information to a large audience."

Soren's work is important because it helps to raise awareness of the political process among young people, Mike Starr, chairman of the Radio-Television Department, said.

"The presentation will give students an open dialogue among peers that may motivate them to get involved in the political process," Starr said.

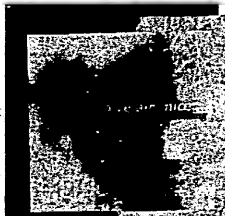

He said the presidential candidates realize MTV has a large role in influencing some young peoples' opinion because Republican candidate Bob Dole was recently interviewed by Soren.

Soren also has been recognized for her work during the 1992 presidential election when she produced, wrote and narrated MTV's Choose or Lose coverage. Linster said. This coverage provided some of the most complete explorations of the campaign issues affecting the 18 to 35 year old age group, he said.

Tabitha Soren will speak at 8 p.m. in Student Center Ballroom D. Admission is $3.

"Frost Binding" — Fragile Porcelain Mice (Art Damage)

Fragile Porcelain Mice is a band from Belleville with a severe problem. It is the problem that makes its latest CD, "Frost Bidding," an enjoyable listening experience. The problem is, the band has enough energy on CD to sound like it is literally playing inside your speakers and need to be physically removed.

Although the attack of Tim O'Saben's clanging guitar rhythms does not dominate the disc, it is a trait one could label Fragile as having. It creates a hypnotic setting for Scott Randall's vocals on the first track, "Slak," as he sings the disturbing lyrics.

Slipping quietly into song two, drummer Mark Heinz's use of a cowbell to keep the rhythm during a stripped-down section of "Lyndon is... (Out Of Prison)" briefly carries the song. Moments later, it is Randall, with his ever-rising vocal ferocity, that seems to lead the music. Live, this tune blows up like a cumulus nimbus cloud during the dog days of summer but the disc version does not match the intensity.

Throughout the disc, one could compare the sounds to Helmet's "Meantime" release. But Fragile's approach to this raw sound is not as fresh as produce in open-air markets. If one interprets the songs and lyrics as a personal experience, it sounds as if Fragile resides on the warmer side of hell.

"22" is a grim look at losing riverboat gambling escapades as O'Saben's gutting twangs away as annoyingly as the feeling a person experiences losing 30 hands of poker in a row. The bite that Randall sinks into the music causes blood to flow in the hearts of the listener.

The disc has 10 songs, but it is difficult to distinguish one from another until the disc is heard more than 20 times. It may be the band does not want to stray from this sound it has created until a later release.

The band is increasing its regional popularity though, probably due to the high-voltage energy of its live performances. If you have the cash, check it out.

"Native Wisdom" — Various artists

Sitting back and relaxing is a rare occurrence for some college students but with albums such as "Native Wisdom," those precious moments of stress reduction can be made all the more enjoyable.

Featuring the music of nine separate artists, "Native Wisdom" provides a fresh, and entertaining musical release from an all too hectic world. Using a variety of instruments, from a Ugandan litunga to Gaelic chants, the diverse mixture of musical tastes serves the whole very well.

The first, and arguably most entertaining artist on the compilation is Samite of Ugaika, an African-born musician with a variety of talents. After studying traditional African music and Western jazz, Samite combined the two styles to produce a very light and upbeat sound. Using flute, voice and a variety of string

Choppy plot, acting ruin "Faithful" performances

"I was in love once," says the hit man. "What happened?" asks his hostage. "It didn't work out. I had to kill her father."

If it were not for the quick, witty dialogue much like this, "Faithful" could easily be marked as a pathetic attempt at making a movie out of a theater screenplay.

The screenplay was written by Chazz Palminteri who plays Tony the hit man. It is directed by Paul Mazursky, which is disappointing considering the magnitude of his previous films such as "Moscow on the Hudson," "Down and Out in Beverly Hills" and "Enemies, A Love Story."

When viewing the film, audiences will notice most of the film takes place in one setting, much like a theater production.

Only a few scenes including one in a car, a bar and a shopping spree, take place outside the home.

The house is owned by Jack (Ryan O'Neal) and Maggie (Cher). Jack has been having affairs for 10 years while Maggie sits at home in what seems like a manic depressive state of mind. In order to collect Maggie's life insurance, Jack hires Tony to kill her. But when Tony arrives at the house, he finds out Maggie was going to kill herself anyway. But somewhere in between all of the dialogue, Maggie has a change of heart and tries to seduce him, attempts to talk him out of killing her and then offers to pay him to kill her husband.

The relationship between these two make up the most and best parts of the movie. The dialogue is well written and well executed by both Cher and Palminteri. Both give great performances, especially when considering they were confined inside one setting. But everything after that falls apart. Too much time elapses in the scene between Tony and Maggie for nothing to happen afterward. But that's exactly what happens, nothing. The film is a film of words and leaves nothing to the imagination. Even the simplest movies on the silver screen should do that.

From the point when Jack finally arrives, thinking his wife is dead, the rest of the movie appears in choppy, segmented pieces that really says nothing. Not only does it seem disjointed, the poor acting by O'Neal ruins what could have been three great performances. His appearance seems like a jagged edge in what was, until that point, a movie of good performances.

Viewers may remember other movies that spawned from theater, one of the best ever being "A Streetcar Named Desire." So the transition from theater to movies sometime does work.

But with "Desire," the plot is much thicker, the characters more richer, the cast a lot stronger overall, and most of all, a production more deserving of the silver screen than "Faithful."

Public Enemy's Chuck D joins effort to register voters

By Richard Harrington
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—Public Enemy's Chuck D has stepped away from his old group's manifesto to "Fight the Power," but he's now suggesting another avenue: Get the power by registering to vote.

L.L. Cool J, who once rapped "Mama Said Knock You Out," is pointing out that you can do just that to unpopular politicians — by registering to vote.

Chuck D, L.L. Cool J, Coolio, Method Man and a host of others are part of the Hip-Hop Coalition for Political Power, a year-old adjunct to the Rock the Vote organization.

After the 1992 presidential election, studies showed that Rock the Vote had an impact on 1 million 18-to-24-year-old voters, most of them college students. The Hip-Hop Coalition was organized to reach into urban communities where, according to a 1990 study titled "Reaching the Hip-Hop Generation," youth did not respond to traditional "parental injunctions ... to engage in mainstream behavior." The study suggested that "to motivate and influence" urban youth, they needed to be reached on their own terms and in their own language.

"We are working with the hip-hop community to a greater extent than we did in 1992," says Donna Frisby, development director for Rock the Vote. "We're reaching out to more artists to get involved, as well as going out and doing promotions to get people to register to vote."

instruments, Samite sets a very peaceful tone for the album.

Many of the scores on this album easily allow one to close their eyes and envision themselves walking through a forest or jungle.

Rumilajita, a five-member traditional Andean ensemble from La Paz, Bolivia, closely reflects the nature that surrounds the area of its homeland. With over twenty handmade folk instruments, from wind instruments to strings to drums, Rumilajita conveys the serenity of open wilderness with slow, mellow transitions in the body of its music.

For those looking for a sample of traditional Native American music, "Native Wisdom" offers two separate groups that fit well in the overall feel of the album. The duo of Primeaux and Mike provide a glimpse of Sioux and Navajo influences with its deep, soulful chanting and haunting, whispy flute. The Mesa Music Consort play a variety of Native American flutes, whistles and percussion that incorporates a mix of Southwestern tribal music with Latino influences.

All in all, "Native Wisdom" proves that traditional music from many different countries and backgrounds can be mixed to create very beautiful representations of shared spirituality. (Erik Bush)

We Can Do Better

As an Illinois Education Association-NEA affiliate, we can work together with our administration. We can make a much stronger case to the State Legislature. With 88,000 members - and a corps of professional lobbyists - the Illinois Education Association has the strongest voice for education in Springfield. Further, as faculty organized for collective bargaining, we can advocate directly for faculty interest here on campus. We can increase faculty salaries and instructional needs through a change in university budgetary priorities - not through economic cannibalism.

Forever in blue jeans

GLBF Awareness Week uses popular fashion to make gay presence known on campus.

By Mary Beth Arimond
Daily Egyptian Reporter

As part of Gays, Lesbians, Bisexuals and Friends Awareness Week, Wednesday was Blue Jeans Day.

As a result, many SIUC students wore blue jeans on campus to show support for the organization, but many were unaware they were doing it.

Michael Reese, a junior in radio-television from Elgin and the GLBF treasurer, said the event was designed to increase gay awareness and break down myths about gays and lesbians.

Reese said the nationwide Blue Jeans Day originated in 1973 at the University of Illinois.

He said it does not mean that students are gay if they wear jeans. Instead, he said with everyone wearing blue jeans, it shows how difficult it is to pick a gay person out of the crowd.

"Most people don't realize who is gay and who is not," he said.

"Blue Jeans Day proves that gays do not wear flamboyant clothes. Many of our straight friends even wear blue jeans on purpose to let people know they have gay friends."

Brian Cochran, a senior in forestry from Carbondale, said he would have worn blue jeans in support of GLBF, but he had no idea the event was Wednesday.

"I don't think GLBF did a very good job about advertising the Blue Jeans Day," he said.

"I wouldn't have had a problem supporting them if I knew about the event."

Reese said he admits there was not enough advertising for the event this year because GLBF was concentrating more on its 25th anniversary celebration.

"This event came up so quickly we didn't have the time to plan much for advertising," he said.

"I think it's also the time of the year where some of our members are distracted with graduation and other activities."

Jason Browne, a sophomore in psychology from Nashville, said it does not seem Blue Jeans Day makes much of a difference because everyone wears jeans.

"I see how GLBF is trying to say they're just like everyone else, but it's hard to make the organization aware and known if everyone is wearing jeans no matter what the reason is," he said.

Suzie Bushnell, a sophomore in university studies from Carthage, said she understands GLBF's reason for wearing blue jeans, but she knows there are people who feel uncomfortable if they are wearing jeans.

"I think Blue Jeans Day is good way to support the organization, because being gay shouldn't make a difference from being straight," she said.

"If I'm wearing jeans, I know anyone who knows me knows who I am and what I believe in."

Michelle Messina, an undecided junior from Schaumburg, said GLBF should encourage students to wear something that stands out.

"I realize the goal of Blue Jeans Day is to not be able to point out a gay person from a straight person," she said.

"But if GLBF wants to get their point across, people should wear something that is different to let others know what they are supporting."

according to that language."

The six-member commission voted 4-1 to prohibit Arnoldi from running. Smith abstained.

Smith said the commission will look into suggesting an amendment to its by-laws to the Undergraduate Student Government and the Graduate and Professional Student Council to address this type of situation.

The two groups have the power to amend the by-laws and possibly allow write-in candidates.

"As a commission, once this election is over, we will make recommendations for amendments we believe are necessary in the future," he said.

Smith said he could not comment about what specific recommendations might be made until after this year's election is complete.

Arnoldi, who is a representative on the Illinois Board of Higher Education Student Advisory Committee, said he plans to run May 4 for the student member position on IBHE.

Najjar Abdul-Musawwir, an independent student trustee candidate who is a graduate student in fine arts from Chattanooga, Tenn., said he has different feelings about Arnoldi's plight.

"On one end, I feel he would create a more dynamic dimension of the election process by having him in there," he said.

"I respect the decision-making process of the election commission because I feel they make decisions based on the fact that there's a petition process they have to uphold."

Eric Bottom, the student trustee candidate for the Students First Party and a senior in administration of justice and accounting from Charleston, said although the commission is there to interpret the by-laws, the laws themselves need to be re-examined.

"It's unfortunate that the situation has never come up before and has never been addressed," Bottom said.

Summer Session has become a hot item at SIUE—especially for area students who attend other universities but come home for the summer.

If you plan to be in the area this summer, SIUE Summer Session makes it easy for you to pick up a class and transfer it to your other college or university.

And in case you hadn't heard, SIUE still has the lowest tuition rates among 4-year public universities in Illinois. We think that's pretty cool.

SIUC celebrates student employee week

By Hua Cui
Advertorial Reporter

When you walk into the office in the morning, trash emptied, floors clean, all's quite normal. Ever wonder where the trash went or where the dirt on the carpet was sent? Ask a Plant and Service Operations (PSO) student worker.

PSO students make your life on campus convenient. They perform janitorial duties in all buildings on campus, carry the mail, drive the buses, answer phones, decorate offices, make data entry, accounting, car washing, programming, shuttling, mowing and transit driving.

Nancy L. Hartman with the PSO Office said that PSO now employs 350 student workers.

"You may see them anywhere on campus, morning, noon or night, they're working diligently. They're the young women and young men on whom we all greatly depend," Hartman said.

"It is with great pleasure that Plant and Service Operations supports National Student Employment Week. Student employees are an important and integral part of PSO. With their contribution to our workforce, PSO is able to provide a variety of services to the University communities," H.D. Wirth, director of PSO said.

"National Student Employment Week gives the employers at Plant and Service Operations an opportunity to recognize and thank its student workforce for the tremendous amount of support it provides in assisting all areas of PSO in getting their jobs done," Nancy Hartman, also the coordinator of PSO National Student Employment Week, said.

The PSO student employees, as other student workers, begin at minimum wage, and may have a 20 to 40 cent raise later according to their supervisors.

"Many students are satisfied with their work, and don't want to leave," said Karen L. Jones, student Supervisor with PSO.

"It is gratifying to provide students with the opportunity to attain work experience that assists them later in life, and it is particularly in spring to know many of our former student employees have become successful in their careers. It is hoped their work experience at PSO has contributed to that success," Wirth said.

To prepare for this Week, PSO set up a committee including six full-time employees and three student workers.

They spent a month and a half to plan on this event, according to Hartman.

They also appointed 20 student ambassadors, located in different areas, to disseminate information of the Week.

Students find fun, money working for SIUC

By James J. Fares
Advertorial Editor

SIUC student employees are a very crucial part of the daily activities in each of the university departments and make valuable contributions throughout the year.

April 7-13 is National Student Employment Week, a time to recognize the contributions of student employees across the nation. For the academic year of 1989-90, the National Association of Student Employment Administrators (NASEA), decided to set aside the first week in April and hold a Student Employee Of the Year contest.

Donna Williams, an accountant in the financial aid office, said there are five regions in NASEA and each region sponsors an employee of the year.

"Each state university has the opportunity to submit an employee of the year from their school to its state's region," Williams said. "The regional winner is then submitted nationally."

The Financial Aid Office sponsors and selects the SIUC Student Employee of the Year. Student employees nominate their students and give that student a chance at a $200 scholarship and a plaque.

"We felt we needed to do something to honor all of the students who are employed through the university," Williams said.

Although not every state school participates, the six years that SIUC has participated in Student Employment week, four out of those six years SIUC has had a student win the student employee of the year award in the state of Illinois.

"SIUC employs six to seven-thousand students throughout an academic year," Williams said. "Student employees are vital to the operation of this university."

This year's SIUC student employee of the year is Eva Sramek a senior in elementary education from Detroit. Sramek's name will be submitted to the mid-west region to determine if she wins the state employee of the year. If she does, then she goes on to the regionals.

"I was very shocked to win the award," Sramek said. "I do what I do for the students."

Sramek started working at the Evaluation and Developmental Center (EDC) as a volunteer. EDC offers adult classes and job seeking skills for people who have migrated to the United States.

"I have had really good experiences with SIUC employment," Sramek said. "I would work there for free."

Lynn Wolff, program manager of adult education said Sramek is thoroughly professional and is a dynamic teacher.

"She makes learning fun," Wolf said. "She is really an outstanding young woman that goes the extra mile to develop countless lesson plans and activities to help these people succeed."

"Every time I look at one of my students, I see how hard it was for my parents to adapt to American culture," Sramek said of her parents who immigrated to America. "My parents spoke no English at all, so I wanted to keep in touch with the international and multi-cultural students."

"Eva is probably the most unselfish woman," Wolff said. "She knocks herself out to help students from outside the country."

SIUC is known nationwide for its extensive Student Employment Program and pays out nearly $10 million yearly in student salaries. The university community receives many benefits from employing students on campus, like rent, food and entertainment.

Teri Gillian, a supervisor of student employment services and handles day to day operations with students, said that without student employees it would be very hard for her office to run.

"I place a lot of responsibility on my students and they seem to always come through," Gillian said. "You can't thank students enough in one week for what they do for you in one year."

Tim White, a senior who works for plant and soil science, says he is lucky to have a job on-campus and doesn't know what he would do without it.

"It lets me make my own schedule and work around classes," White said. "It keeps me busy and keeps my resume active."

The Student Employment Program is designed to provide students with part-time employment experience, supplemental finances and educational benefits outside of the classroom.

"I get to deal with chemicals and my job prepares me for the working world," White said. "It gives me an opportunity to meet people in my field."

Recreation Center work ethic builds experience

Supervisors give credit when credit is due

By Hua Cui
Advertorial Reporter

Work on campus is not only for filling up wallets, it is good for experience and for fun. That is quite true for students working in Recreation Center.

"They allow students here to have lots of responsibilities. The experience here will enable me to encounter challenges after going out of college," Matthew Warrens, a senior student, and facility supervisor in the recreation center said.

While Don Howard, a fitness technician, said he had lots of fun working in the recreation center.

"I like working with people, I like active life style," Howard said.

Throughout the year, Office of Intramural-Recreational Sports (OIRS) hires 600 students in different areas, William Patrick McMinn, director of OIRS and Athletic and Recreation Facilities.

Most students work in the recreation center, but some spread out in satellite facilities across the campus. Recreational services involves adventure resource consulting, disabled student recreation, party planning, fishing on campus lake, recreation around the campus lake, fitness assessment and other special programs.

The jobs offered by OIRS include students officing and supervising, lifeguards, office assistants, fitness instructors, tennis court supervisors, custodial employees. They also include a pool maintainer, family program supervisor, disabled student programs, information center employee, adventure program, summer camp, marketing and publication, instructional programs and others.

Rob Wittig said working as an intramural official helped him organize his time and keep him on a schedule.

"Being a referee helps me understand the game better," Wittig said. "It gives me a sense of responsibility and allows me to have some spending cash."

"My routine work is to interact with these students; they are a wonderful group of students.

"From the feedback I've received, the students really enjoy their work here," McMinn said.

Howard, who has worked in the Center for one year, said he will apply to work there next year.

OIRS makes a great commitment to the students' development, according to McMinn.

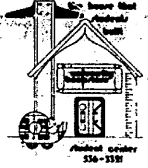

"The recreation center is open very long, about 100 hours a week. So we give major responsibilities to student workers, we trust them," he said. "This will help form their leadership skills and benefit them in whatever they do upon graduation."

McMinn said that many students apply to his office for working every year.

Generally, no special requirements are required for applicants, he said. Only fitness instructors have physical requirements, and office attendants are required to have some computer and typing skills.

"Workers here mostly are in contact with customers, a people person will always be successful," McMinn said.

BOT to vote on recommendation affecting student tuition waivers

By Lori D. Clark
DE Assistant Politics Editor

The number of students who receive tuition waivers may decrease if the SIU Board of Trustees approves a recommendation by the president at its meeting today.

SIU President Ted Sanders said if a new policy for tuition and fee waivers is approved, it would keep SIU within the Illinois Board of Higher Education's recommended limit on tuition waivers. IBHE recommends that only 3 percent of the University's budget be spent on tuition waivers.

Corey Bradford, budget coordinator for the Office of the SIU President, said tuition waivers are granted to undergraduate students for academics and athletics.

Currently, tuition waivers account for more than 3 percent of the University budget. Fifty-seven percent of the tuition wavers are for academics and 43 percent are for athletics.

Part of the proposed revision would downsize some of the waiver programs, such as out-of-state waivers, Bradford said.

He said at SIUC, 62 students receive out-of-state waivers; the majority of them come from Kentucky.

Sanders also said the board will decide on adjustments in SIUC residence hall fees. Sanders recommended that the board create super-single rooms, which would cost students $1,406 per semester. The super-single plan would allow some students their own rooms with additional space and services.

Bradford said with the adjustments, students would be offered a refundable 12-meal plan and a 12-meal plan with a $50 credit.

The refundable meal plan would allow a student to receive a refund for meals they do not eat during the semester. The $50-credit meal plan would allow students to eat some of their meals in the residence hall snack bars or in various places in the Student Center.

The board also will discuss the series of proposed fee increases. The increases include a student recreation fee increase of $2 per semester, a student attorney fee increase of 75 cents per semester, a student medical benefits fee increase of $3 and a medical insurance fee increase of $7 per semester.

The fees would be implemented Fall 1996.

The board will vote on the fee increases at its May meeting because items involving students' fee increases must be discussed once by the board before being voted on.

Other action scheduled to be taken by the board is the selection and approval of an architect for painting in the Recreation Center.

Loose regulation of herbal stimulants raises questions

Newsday

WASHINGTON—The herbal products go by such names as "Cloud 9" and "Herbal Ecstasy" and "Up Your Gas." They are sold by mail, in novelty stores, smoke shops, even beauty salons. They promise everything from a boost in energy to sexual euphoria.

But last month's death of a New York college student after he used an herbal stimulant called Ultimate Xphoria spotlights the potential danger of a loosely regulated group of products that contain an amphetamine-like chemical called ephedrine.

Peter Schliendorf, 20, who was attending the State University of New York at Albany, died during spring break in Panama City Beach, Fla. Friends found him in his motel room early on March 7, just hours after he had swallowed eight pills — twice the recommended dose — of Ultimate Xphoria.

Schliendorf's is among at least 15 fatalities linked recently to food products containing ephedrine, according to the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. The agency also has compiled reports on 400 "adverse events" during the past three years involving the products, including heart attack, stroke, tremors and insomnia.

Ephedrine and its chemical cousins are derived principally from a Chinese plant called ma huang.

SOUTHERN ILLINOIS UNIVERSITY
Office of Admissions and Records Carbondale, Illinois
March 1, 1996

1996 SPRING SEMESTER FINAL EXAMINATION SCHEDULE INFORMATION

The examination schedule attempts to avoid examination conflicts by providing separate examination periods for Tuesday, Thursday lecture classes. Other information about final examinations is listed below:

1. The class final exam period is scheduled based on the meeting time and days configuration listed on the first line of the class entry in the Schedule of Classes book (which should be the same as the first printed line for the section in the registered student's schedule print-out). For example, a class section is listed in the Schedule book on two lines in the manner below:

08:00 - 08:50 T R
09:00 - 10:50 W

The listed starting time for the first line of the entry is "08:00". The meeting days of that first line are "T, R", and therefore are in the category "begins with a T or R". The Exam Date and Period is by the attached Spring '96 Final Examination Schedule to be Thursday, May 9 at 12:50 - 02:50 p.m.

2. Classes should plan to hold their final examination in their regularly scheduled classrooms. The space scheduling section of the Office of Admissions and Records will forward to departments information relative to the location for examinations for those classes that cannot hold their examinations in their regularly scheduled rooms because of a space conflict. This will be done sufficiently in advance of the final examination days to provide adequate notice for all.

3. Classes that meet less than the entire semester should hold their exams during the last regular class session prior to final examinations.

4. It is a policy of the University that no final examination be given prior to the scheduled final examination period and that students be given their examinations at the designated times. Any deviation from this policy must be approved by the Dean of the College.

5. Students who find they have more than three examinations in one day may petition and students who have their examinations scheduled at one time should petition their academic dean for approval to take an examination during the make-up examination period on the last day. Provision for such a make-up examination period does not mean that students may decide to make the scheduled examination time and expect to make it up during the make-up period. This period is to be used only for students whose petitions have been approved by their dean.

6. Students who must miss a final examination may not take an examination before the time scheduled for the class examination. Information relative to the proper grade to be given students who miss a final examination and are not involved in a status covered in the preceding paragraph will be found in the numbered memorandum forwarded to members of the instructional staff at the time they received the final grade listing for the recording of grades.

7. Individualized Learning Program classes will be administered at the SIUC Student Center throughout final exam week. Students wishing to sit for an exam must contact the Division of Continuing Education at Washington Square, CA (510-7151) at least three days in advance in order to reserve a time slot and receive a room assignment.

Student wins wedding at University Mall

By Brian T. Sutton
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Shoppers at Carbondale's University Mall this summer will be able to check out more than a sale at a retail shop. They can also witness a "fairy tale" wedding.

Christopher Kocka, 22, a senior in geology from Chicago and his fiancée Andrea Wood, 22, of Carbondale are going to have a wedding June 1 at the University Mall as winners of the University Mall/WTAO wedding giveaway. The mall and other merchants will pick up the tab for the couple.

Wood said the most amazing gift is how she and her father will arrive at the mall for the wedding.

"We will arrive in a horse-drawn carriage," she said. "It sounds like a fairy tale, like Cinderella."

Wood said she and Kocka's families are so excited about having a wedding and winning the contest that they do not care where the wedding will take place. Wood said she can barely sleep at night.

"This is the best thing that ever happened to us, aside from meeting each other," Wood said.

Wood said she and Kocka wanted to enter the contest and have a mall wedding because they have a sense of humor and because they will be the first couple to be married in a mall in this area.

"We have never been conservative or traditional," she said. "This fits our personalities."

Wood said they have been busy picking out tuxedos, rings, the bride's gown and flowers. She said it has been great because most of it is hassle-free.

"I told Christopher that most people pay thousands of dollars for a wedding consultant, and we have all these people helping us," she said.

Wood said the wedding package is worth $15,000.

"I only had to pay $100 for my wedding dress, and the bride's maids only have to pay a little," she said.

"This is a once in a lifetime deal. We are going to have a beautiful wedding for virtually nothing."

Jeri Uffelman, marketing director for the University Mall, 1237 E. Main St., said this is the first time anyone has been married in the mall during business hours.

"There will be 100 guests invited

"At 7:20, the phone rang. We both got tears in our eyes. It was (WTAO radio announcer) Miller ..."

by the couple and shoppers who wish to stop by and watch," she said.

The only problem the couple has run into in arranging the wedding is finding a priest, Wood said. They are Roman Catholic, and all the priests they have contacted said the wedding must be in a church, she said.

"We will find a priest a year after the ceremony to bless the marriage," she said.

The couple could choose anyone they wish to officiate the wedding, including Tom Miller from the "Miller in the Morning" radio show on WTAO. Miller, also the disc jockey for the wedding, is ordained to officiate weddings. Miller has offered his services to the couple.

The couple said they have not decided whether Miller will conduct the ceremony.

"We may have a judge officiate,"

Kocka said. "We will ask Miller to say a few words before hand."

Miller delivered the news of the winning couple after the eight finalists were told to listen to the radio show on the morning of the announcement.

"After I got off of work, we could not sleep, so we stayed up all night listening to the radio. And at 7:20, the phone rang," Wood said. "We both got tears in our eyes. It was Miller, and he asked if we could talk on the air. I don't remember anything that I said after that."

Uffelman said she and Brandy Lange co-organized the event. Lange, a salesperson with WTAO, said she did not have any problem getting sponsors for the wedding.

"The response was overwhelming," she said. "More than 16 local businesses have signed, and more called asking about it."

The couple will receive everything for a wedding, including pictures, the cake, dresses, tuxedos and the honeymoon. The honeymoon will be at Giant City Lodge, and the reception will be catered by the Pasta House in the University Mall, Wood said.

"Everything is taken care of," Wood said. "It is wonderful."

Lange said she came up with the idea when a local merchant was looking for a promotion idea.

Couples entering the contest had to write an essay in 50 words or less describing why they wanted to be married in the mall, Uffelman said.

Out of the 30 couples who entered, eight were chosen as finalists. The eight couples were interviewed by Uffelman and Lange.

Lange said the couple fit the profile she and Uffelman were looking for in the contestants.

"They were creative, seemed to have a plan and the wedding time also fit their schedules," she said.

Wood said she and Kocka met during their freshman year at SIUC in a physical fitness class. They have been engaged for four years.

Uffelman said the reception will take place after the ceremony in the mall's food court.

Symphony impresses classical connoisseurs

By Erik Bush
Daily Egyptian Reporter

While two young girls quietly slept in the audience Tuesday evening, the SIUC Symphony Orchestra delighted a crowd of culture-craving classical music connoisseurs at Shryock Auditorium.

Tranquil lapses into fluttering overtures followed by thundering crescendos brought the likes of Beethoven and Wagner alive. The orchestra, led by the electric Edward M. Benyas, beautifully reconstructed works that deserved better attendance.

Like a father lovingly touching his daughter on the shoulder, Benyas masterfully guided the skilled musicians through a beautiful arrangement of music. Titled "Romantic Gems," the performance heaved and swelled like ocean waves caressing gentle shores.

While some orchestra members sat with eyes closed, easily swaying to stanza after stanza of creative reproduction, the crowd of 258 people sat, at times teary, in awe of musical greatness.

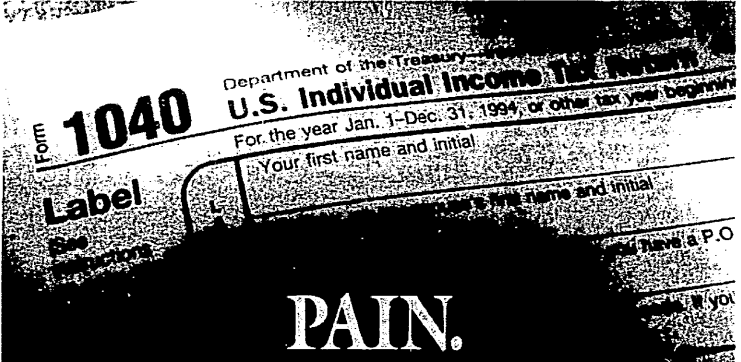

At times, the music seemed to drip from the roof of Shryock as listeners were lured into a sense of depth and wonder uncommon to traditional in-your-face rock 'n' roll.

The highlight of the evening, Kara Shanks, a sophomore in piano performance from Marion, pulled beauty from the keys with a passion usually left for the bedroom. As piano and strings dueted for attention, Shanks' head danced back and forth, shoulders popping from key to key, as she brought a piece by Edvard Grieg to life.

Minuscule timing problems kept this performance from the perfection it strived for. However, considering the orchestra had less than three weeks of — according to orchestra members — aggressive conducting, anyone who looks to find quality symphony should look no further than the SIUC Symphony Orchestra.

The orchestra will complete its season April 21 with a symphonic festival featuring some of Southern Illinois' best youth musicians.

PRINCIPLES • SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

PAIN.

APPLICATION FOR TIAA AND CREF
SUPPLEMENTAL RETIREMENT ANNUITY CONTRACTS

PAIN KILLER.

For fast relief from the nagging ache of taxes, we recommend TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs are tax-deferred annuities designed to help build additional assets—money that can help make the difference between living and living well after your working years are over.

Contributions to your SRAs are deducted from your salary on a pretax basis. That lowers your current taxable income, so you start saving on federal and, in most cases, state and local income taxes right away. What's more, any earnings on your SRAs are also tax-deferred until you receive them as income. That can make a big difference in how painful your tax bill is every year.

As the nation's largest retirement system, based on assets under management, we offer a wide range of allocation choices — from the TIAA Traditional Annuity, which guarantees principal and interest (backed by the company's claims-paying ability), to TIAA-CREF's diversified variable annuity accounts. And our expenses are very low, which means more of your money goes toward improving your future financial health.

To find out more, call 1 800 842-2888. We'll send you a complete SRA information kit, plus a free slide calculator that shows you how much SRAs can lower your taxes.

Call today—it couldn't hurt.

Ensuring the future for those who shape it.

JUMBLE THAT SCRAMBLED WORD GAME

Unscramble these four Jumbles, one letter to each square, to form four ordinary words.

OSOG

TIFUR

NURYGH

LEWDOP

Now arrange the circled letters to form the surprise answer, as suggested by the above cartoon.

Answer: HE: (Answers tomorrow)

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Panel 1: "WELL, MIKE, I'M OFF TO MAUI. SORRY TO LEAVE YOU WITH SUCH A TROUBLED BROOD..."

Panel 2: "IF YOU NEED ANY MORAL SUPPORT, YOU CAN REACH ME AT THE ROYAL HAWAII BEACH HOTEL, OKAY?"

Panel 3: "UH... MIKE?"

Panel 4: "CAN I FIRE THEM BY EMAIL?"

Panel 5: "OF COURSE NOT. IF HE WERE THAT KIND OF COOL BANN, I'D DO IT!"

SINGLE SLICES by Peter Kohlsaat

The right woman? At the right time? I don't know...

I would hate to be the right place.

Doesn't matter... Joey will never be the right man.

SHOE

by Jeff MacNelly

Panel 1: "DON'T GET ME WRONG. I APPRECIATE IT VERY MUCH."

Panel 2: "I ALWAYS WANTED AN OFFICE WITH A WINDOW."

Panel 3: "I JUST DIDN'T EXPECT IT TO COME ON A MICROWAVE."

THATCH by Jeff Shesol

Panel 1: "IT'S TAX TIME. GADDY FOR YOU AND THE IRS."

Panel 2: "I'VE GIVEN YOU A LOT OF CHANGE THIS YEAR. THE WAY I SEE IT, THAT'S A TAX-DEDUCTIBLE CHARITABLE DONATION. MIGHT I, PER-CHANGE, GET A RECEIPT?"

Panel 3: "LOOK, BUDDY, I'VE BEEN VERY GENEROUS, AND ALL I WANT IS ONE MERELY RECEIPT! NOW COUGH IT UP!"

Panel 4: "HE WHAT? DON'T ASK. I GOT A HUND-WIFE?"

MOTHER GOOSE & GRIMM by Mike Peters

Panel 1: "ATTILA, DUCK!"

Panel 2: (Illustration of a duck and a goose)

Tiger Woods may leave college for pro tour

The Los Angeles Times

AUGUSTA, Ga.—Tiger Woods is 20, which means there are flagsticks older than he is at Augusta National. But age probably isn't as important as a few other issues for Tiger here at the Masters.

For instance, is Woods going to stay in school at Stanford or will he turn pro and start studying economics for real?

When the Masters starts Thursday, is Woods going to play the dogleg left ninth hole the way he did in practice when he drove left over some magnolia trees and onto the first fairway for a shorter approach to the green?

Can Woods actually win this thing?

Greg Norman thinks it's possible.

"I wouldn't be surprised," said Norman, who played practice rounds with Woods' on Monday and Tuesday.

"He's gotten better. He's got his iron play more under control. He's exceptionally longer. I think he's longer than John Daly. He flights a ball so good, and that's going to be nothing but a positive for him, whether he stays at it or turns professional."

There aren't too many subjects Woods likes less than the one about his pro prospects. It's not a topic of conversation Woods is likely to avoid anytime soon, though.

One reason is that Woods keeps saying he's staying and his father keeps saying he might leave. Earl Woods said the NCAA, which has

"... If I turn pro and I don't make it here, where am I going to go?"

Tiger Woods
Stanford golfer

kept close tabs on Woods for his two years at Stanford, could frustrate Woods enough to leave school.

Neither of Woods' parents is insisting that he remain in school.

The NCAA suspended Woods for one day in 1995 after Arnold Palmer bought him dinner, then reinstated him when it was ruled an inadvertent infraction. The incident didn't go over too well in the Woods household.

Earl Woods said he isn't concerned with the NCAA.

"You can't worry about Jell-O bureaucrats like that," he said. "You can't win."

Tiger said he doesn't read what is written about him, but he's weary of the subject of his future.

"The most annoying part is just trying to answer the questions over and over and over again," he said.

"The answer is still the same.

"You see all the money that's available out there; I see, where am I going to play? I'm not exempt, I have no security. So if I turn pro and I don't make it out here, where am I going to go? Nike? Hooters? Asia? Australia?"

This week, he's got Augusta National, which isn't bad. Woods made it into the 93-player field as the U.S. Amateur champion, the same way he got in last year when he played the Masters for the first time.

Woods shot a five-over par 293 and finished in a tie for 41st. It was a Masters debut noteworthy for how far he hit his drives and how far he missed the greens with his irons.

Woods led the driving statistics, averaging 311 yards. He even hit a nine-iron to the green on his second shot at the par-five 15th.

But as far as Woods hit it, he also had trouble controlling his irons and flew enough greens to get a pilot's license.

Sexual assault charges against Tyson investigated

Chicago police looking into validity of charges against former heavyweight champ

The Washington Post

CHICAGO—Police continued to investigate a new accusation of sexual assault against heavyweight boxing champion Mike Tyson Wednesday, while friends of the woman who made the charge and managers of the bar where the incident allegedly took place questioned the merits of the allegation.

In a statement released late Wednesday, the management of The Clique, a popular nightclub south of downtown Chicago, said that at the time of the alleged incident several "highly visible security personnel" were inside the club and that uniformed Chicago police officers were outside the club during most of the night.

"At no point during the course of the night were our security personnel or, to our knowledge, the Chicago Police Department made aware of any such reports, charges or allegations," the statement said.

"It is our policy that such an incident should have been reported right away to our management and to the police."

Tyson, 29, is serving four years probation following his 1992 conviction of raping Desiree Washington, a Rhode Island college student who had been competing in the Miss Black America pageant in Indianapolis.

press release issued by The Clique

He served three years of a six-year sentence in an Indiana prison before being released on probation in March 1995.

The incident allegedly took place in the early morning hours of Monday.

According to Jerry Lee Petcet, a Gary, Ind., lawyer who is representing the 25-year-old woman, his client was at the bar with friends when she was invited to a private room to meet someone.

It was there, Petcet said in a telephone interview, that Tyson sexually assaulted the woman. He would not provide details of the alleged incident.

Asked if there were witnesses to the assault, Petcet said, "There are witnesses. I can't tell you to what extent or what role they played."

Petcet also described as "inaccurate" a statement by Moody Andrews, assistant manager of the bar, who told the Chicago Sun-Times that Tyson did not visit any of The Clique's private areas and was in full view throughout his time at the club.

Petcet would not elaborate. Petcet said he has been contacted by representatives of Tyson since the complaint was filed with Chicago police but he would not discuss the details.

He said that later Monday morning the woman was treated at a hospital, apparently in Gary, for injuries and then made her complaint to Chicago police.

"I would like to have as many facts as I can," Petcet said. "I think we have a very meritorious case."

A spokesman for the Chicago police said they were investigating the charge and would not comment.

The woman, who has not been identified, works as a beautician at a shop in Merrillville, Ind. Tammy Batty, who also works at the beauty shop, told WLS-TV in Chicago that she and the woman went to the bar together, went their separate ways while there, but left together.

"When we got ready to go, she asked me for her keys, we got to the car, she started crying," Batty said in the television interview.

"I asked her what was wrong. She said that Mike Tyson has sexually assaulted her."

"She wouldn't say anything else and it was, like, 'What did he do to you?' And she said she couldn't say."

"I asked her, 'Why didn't you say anything to the police officers who were there?'" Batty added. "She didn't have anything to say."

Joann Dudley, the woman's supervisor at the beauty shop, also had questions about the allegations in an interview with WBBM-TV.

"In a club, I'm not saying it couldn't happen, but in a club with all these 500 people or more and nobody saw it?"

Since his release from prison, Tyson has won three fights and regained the World Boxing Council heavyweight title.

His personal life also appeared to have improved with his conversion to Islam and his relationship with Monica Turner, a Georgetown University medical school graduate who in February gave birth to their baby, a girl.

Tyson purchased a $2 million home in Bethesda for Turner.

Muhammad Siddeeq, a Muslim cleric in Indianapolis who describes himself as Tyson's spiritual adviser, said in a telephone interview that he has not spoken to the boxer since this latest allegation was made.

"I don't expect Mike to reach out like a person who needs a shoulder to cry on," he said.

"Mike stands alone in his responsibilities and when he does contact me I'm not going to question him directly about this."

Van Exel

So what can be done on behalf of the NBA to prohibit such displays of behavior in the future?

First, the ultimate example should be made of the Nick Van Exel's of the NBA — the ones who choose to believe they are above the rules of the league.

Van Exel was suspended for the remainder of the season, including the playoffs, and issued a fine that will do more than simply burn a thousand dollar hole in his million dollar pocket.

Second, those who continue to violate the rules should be given an ultimatum.

Either adhere to the rules, or find a new job, it is that simple.

Third, the NBA should ensure the entire team suffers.

In Van Exel's case, the Lakers, who are bound for the playoffs, are likely to do just that.

Van Exel was averaging 15 points per game.

Take that average out of the Lakers' lineup during the playoffs, and chaos will quickly ensue.

Maybe that would prompt teams to act and police its own team of those who believe they are good enough to make their own rules.

It is high time the overpaid, hot-headed players of the NBA be given more than a slap on the wrist for their unwarranted, and unlawful behavior against a referee.

The man in the stripes is the mediator, the one who makes sure all the rules are adhered to.

Sure, they make their fair share of mistakes, but overall they do a good job.

They are there to maintain order and to ensure the league doesn't turn into some undisciplined anarchy.

They are not there to be assaulted and embarrassed simply because an overpaid player disagrees with a call.

Van Exel, and others like him are not above the rules of the

Runners to tackle River to River Relay

By Jared Driskill
Daily Egyptian Reporter

April 20, the Illinois River to River Relay will take almost 2,000 people from the "mighty" Mississippi to the tiny town of Golconda with a population of 960.

The River to River Relay, which began in 1988, has grown from 60 teams to 244 teams.

The annual event begins its course just north of Wolf Lake and treks eastward on mostly county asphalt roads, which range from 350 feet to 850 feet in altitude, to the finish line on Main St., in Golconda.

The race brings runners from across the United States, and besides having entrants from neighboring states, entries this year have included teams from as far away as California, Florida, and Utah.

According to Keith McQuarrie, administrative race director, the entry fee for the Relay is $200 per team this year, which has gone up $20 from last year.

Perhaps the fee is well worth it, though, as almost every essential need of the runner is taken care of, and a few extras.

"We don't expect the teams to come in bringing everything, so we provide each of the teams with bags of fruit, T-shirts for all of the volunteers, we have T-shirts for the finishers," McQuarrie said.

Over 40 awards will also be given to top finishers in each of the nine race categories which include: open, handicap, women, men, mixed, masters, mixed masters, women masters, corporate, and corporate handicap.

According to McQuarrie, the Relay continually brings in over $200,000 to the Southern Illinois area.

"It's like parents' day or graduation day. I think we probably book every hotel within 20 or 30 miles of Marion," McQuarrie said. "We have eight people on a team and usually a couple friends who come along."

McQuarrie, who has been involved with the race for the past eight years, said the event has turned into one of the best relays in the Mid-West.

"Gordon Pitz, who is a professor in the psychology department, put the whole thing together," McQuarrie said.

"The initial thought was that there weren't enough people crazy enough to try it."

Since the founding of the race, McQuarrie said each year brings improvement to the event.

"It's like parent's day or graduation day. I think we probably book every hotel within 20 to 30 miles of Marion."

Keith McQuarrie
administrative race director

"As Gordon says, 'you're as good as your last performance,'" McQuarrie said. "We try to fine tune things and get together shortly after the race. There's a committee of about a dozen people that oversees the whole project. By enlarge, it (the Relay) has been pretty much unchanged for, I'd say the last four or five years."

According to Pitz, who is the race director and founder, the idea for the race came from the state of Oregon.

"There's a race similar to this in Oregon and I had read about that, and thought something like a relay race between the rivers would be a good idea," Pitz said.

The Oregon race is called, Hood to Coast, which involves a 180-mile run from Mt. Hood, which is in northern Oregon, to the coast of the Pacific Ocean.

A running club from Carbondale, of which Pitz was a member, is named River to River Runners.

The club existed before the event, and according to Pitz, his idea of a river to river relay race did not get rave reviews at first.

"I suggested to them (other club members) that it (the race) was a good idea," Pitz said.

"Most people thought it was pretty idiotic. But at about the same time, the local tourism office approached the running club with an idea of putting on a race that would promote tourism in the area.

"I suggested this idea to them and they liked it," he said.

Pitz said the club thought they would be lucky to get 20 teams to take part in the race.

"We closed the entries at 60 the first year and then it just kept growing after that," Pitz said.

Van Exel got exactly what he deserved from the NBA

Shame on you Nick Van Exel. The NBA spared no mercy on your soul.

Apparently, Van Exel, the Los Angeles Lakers' premier guard, did not heed the memo NBA officials sent to team owners stating that referees are not to be touched — under any circumstances — by anyone.

Tuesday night, Van Exel became the latest player in the NBA to disregard the no-contact rule after blatantly throwing a forearm and shoving referee Ronnie Garretson into the scorer's table. What words were exchanged, and what exactly triggered the assault by Van Exel remains unclear, but what was exchanged among the two is not the issue.

Words alone didn't warrant an attack.

What is clear are the steps leading to the outrage.

Garretson called a technical on the Laker guard after a time-out with 3:23 left to play in regulation.

After Van Exel argued the call

From the Pressbox

Garretson slapped a second technical on him. Following his automatic ejection,

Van Exel began walking away, then charged back, threw a flagrant punch that failed to find its mark, and followed with a forearm, sending a bewildered Garretson into the table.

You should have walked away, Nick and spared yourself, and your team the embarrassment of a seven-game suspension and a $25,000 fine.

Van Exel's childish behavior marks the second time this season a player has made contact with an official.

After Dennis Rodman's six-game suspension and $20,000 fine for his head-butting incident last month, one would think the message not to touch officials was clearly spelled out.

Apparently it isn't. Obviously, Van Exel's display of assault shows that the subject matter of the NBA's message needs to be re-evaluated, with stiffer penalties for similar actions to follow.

Van Exel's fine was the largest in NBA history.

see VAN EXEL, page 19

Between the Lines

The Saluki softball squad split a pair of games against the Missouri Tigers Wednesday afternoon in Manchester, Mo.

In game one, the Salukis got a six-hit shutout from pitcher Jamie Schuttek — her fourth of the season — and went on to a 4-0 win.

Junior third baseman Becky Lis broke a school record when she hit her 36th career double in the second inning.

In the second game, however, SIUC was not so lucky, falling 7-1 to the Tigers.

Sophomore pitcher Kim Holder took the loss, but the Salukis' offense didn't help her, either.

SIUC committed four errors which led to four unearned runs.

One bright spot for the Salukis was the offense of freshman outfielder Jennifer Feldmeier, who went a combined 5-for-8 in the doubleheader.

University of Michigan quarterback Brian Griese was placed on indefinite suspension from the football squad and went to court Tuesday for an arraignment hearing.

The hearing was for a felony charge which stemmed from an incident in which Griese allegedly smashed a bar window over the weekend.

University officials said Griese was put on suspension because the university is treating the situation as an alcohol-related incident, which garners an automatic suspension.

The countdown to the Summer Olympic Games in Atlanta has reached double-digits today. There are now 99 days left until the opening ceremonies begin on July 19.

The Texas Rangers look to continue their undefeated ways this afternoon when they take on the Chicago White Sox at Comiskey Park.

The Rangers defeated the White Sox in Chicago Tuesday 3-2, to remain the major league's only undefeated team at 7-0.
