11th Annual Tennis Meet Opens Today

DAILY EGYPTIAN

SOUTHERN ILLINOIS UNIVERSITY

Volume 47

Carbondale, Ill. Friday, August 12, 1966

Number 201

The 11th annual Southern Illinois Open Tennis Tournament begins at 9 a.m. today at the University courts east of the Arena.

Participants will compete in five divisions, with players from Kentucky, Missouri, Indiana and Illinois taking part in singles and doubles action.

The three-day affair will end Sunday afternoon.

The divisions include men's 35 years old and over, men's juniors, boys 16 and under and 14 and under.

The men's division begins Saturday, with some top talent entered.

Former Saluki tennis stars Roy Sprengelmeyer and Pachito Castillo will compete, as will John Powless.

Powless, who will be aiming for his third consecutive victory in the event, has a good chance to retire the traveling trophy. It takes three victories in a row to hold the trophy permanently.

Both Sprengelmeyer, one of the three brothers who have played at Southern, and Castillo should be rated tournament threats.

Coach Dick LeFevre is director of the tournament, which has the sanction of the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

The matches will begin at 9 a.m. each day, and trophies will be awarded to the winner and runner-up in each event.

The traveling trophy is awarded only in the men's division.

LeFevre has announced that local players who wish to participate in the men's division may still sign up.

The youngest Sprengelmeyer, Mike, who is now a sophomore, and other Saluki varsity players, will not participate.

Class Put to Test In Power Failure

A general studies geology class taught by Frank J. Bell was taking an examination in Davis Auditorium in the Wham Education Building when the power failed Thursday.

There are no windows in Davis Auditorium. Students had to use matches and cigarette lighters to see their test papers. The rear doors to the auditorium were opened to allow some light to come in from the hall and students were invited to move to the back.

The test had to be finished in almost total darkness.

One student said he would have been tempted to cheat "but the guy next to me didn't know as much as I did."

Shindig to Bring Nick Charles To McAndrew Saturday Night

Nick Charles and the Del-Rays will appear Saturday at the Traveling Shindig sponsored by the Activities Programming Board, Thompson Point and University Park.

The dance will be held at the north end of McAndrew Stadium from 8:30 p.m. to midnight.

Refreshments will be available at the dance until midnight and the Oasis in the University Center will remain open until 1 a.m.

Most of Campus Blacked Out In 86-Minute Power Failure

THE BEAUTEOUS BEAST—A gathering storm is a beautiful sight, but the aftermath is usually a "beast" of an affair. The threat of thunderstorms and storms has been hovering over campus during the week. This striking picture was taken by John Baran, Daily Egyptian photographer.

Male Ensemble

Glee Club, Roster Cut by Scheduling, Will Present Concert Tonight in Davis

The University Summer Male Glee Club will present a concert at 7:30 p.m. today in Davis Auditorium of the Wham Education Building.

The Glee Club, with a membership of from 40 to 60 students, rehearses three hours each week during the year. The club performs serious, classical music for male voices and the traditional lighter material performed by male ensembles.

Robert W. Kingsbury, director of choirs, directs the group, which is smaller this summer because of conflicting class schedules. Kingsbury will be assisted in today's concert by two students, John Latta and Van Robinson.

Selections on the program are "A Mighty Fortress," arranged by Kingsbury. "For All the Saints," arranged by Kingsbury and written by Vaughn Williams; "Malaguena," by Lecuona; "Rhapsody," by Brahms; "Frostiana," "Bonnie Eloise," arranged by Hunter-Shaw, and "Ghost Riders in the Sky," arranged by Norman Luboff.

Featured in the arrangement of "A Mighty Fortress" will be a smaller choir composed of James Cavatorta, John Latta, Danny Bruce, Charles Krabec and Daniel Saathoff.

Robinson, who plays piano, will accompany the Glee Club and be featured in two selections, "Malaguena" and Brahms "Rhapsody."

Soloist James Cavatorta and guitarist Richard Szatko will perform in "Bonnie Eloise."

Loss of 'Juice' Goes Unexplained

A power failure blacked out most campus buildings for more than an hour Thursday afternoon.

Lights went out at 2:01 p.m. and power was not restored until after 3:30 p.m. in most of the buildings.

A spokesman said there had been a scheduled stoppage of power in University Park but "for some reason or other the whole campus went down." A further explanation was not immediately available.

The blackout managed to slow down the campus considerably but didn't bring it to a complete halt. Matches, cigarette lighters, flashlights and candles were used in most offices to carry on in a limited way with candles getting the biggest play.

In the University Center candles were placed on a number of tables in the food service areas, as well as at the information desk and in the television room. A few lights, powered by auxiliary generators, were on in the halls, the lounges and the book store. However, the bookstore doors were locked until power was restored.

At Morris Library candles appeared at the circulation desk and at the main desks in most departmental libraries on the upper floors. However, at the Social Studies information desk on the third floor a large flashlight provided temporary light.

Lights, powered by an auxiliary generator, illuminated the stairwells and a few other strategic places throughout the building. One continued to shine directly on the objections of the University on the wall in the main hall and another on the check-out-desk.

One library worker was almost stranded in the elevator on the sixth floor. She had just stepped into the elevator when the power went off, but was able to get out before the door closed.

Another employe wasn't so lucky during a previous power failure. She was marooned in an elevator for an hour and finally got out by climbing out of the top of the elevator and going up a ladder.

One elevator stood with its doors open on the first floor, another was marked "out of order" and evidently the other one was stopped at the sixth floor.

No Housework... Just Kids

Dormitory - the Perfect Place For a Vacation... Right, Mom?

By Carolyn Malburg

Thompson Point put on a new face for the summer and opened its dormitories, Warren, Kellogg and Pierce Halls, to members of an African seminar, and geography and mathematics institutes.

The result is children—children everywhere—as mothers rush around trying to keep their kids in check while the fathers hit the books.

Each family has been assigned a suite, two connecting rooms, or as much space as meets their special needs, but life can still get pretty hectic. Warren Hall is housing more than 25 youngsters under 10 years of age.

And what do these uprooted housewives think of dormitory living? Surprisingly enough, the general consensus is that they "love it."

Willa Fox, a housewife from Shreveport, La., is spending her second summer at SIU with her husband and family, and she still likes it—heat, cramped quarters and all.

"It's a great vacation from cooking and dish washing. Nobody could possibly miss that," She said the children are no problem. "There is so much for them to do. The children can play and swim all day."

The University has organized an arts and crafts program, swimming classes and movies. Lentz Hall at Thompson Point also has a story hour for the youngsters.

But leave it to the ingenious female mind to think of something different to make the most of a situation. Instead of walking all the way to the beach when it looks like rain, why not just take advantage of the ever-prominent sprinkling system—SIU's own obstacle course? And, that's exactly what they do. The crazy shower "is better than a bath any ole time, huh Ma?"

A typical day for mother, according to Wanda Kingston, a housewife from Eldorado, starts with the family breakfast at Lentz. Then father is off to class, and mother is off to do her exercises. After all that work the mothers get together for a well-earned coffee break. Next comes lunch, while father takes a break from the books. Then it's to the beach for the afternoon as father struggles on with the brain work.

Eileen Clancy, from Philadelphia, Pa., summarized the feelings of most all the institute wives when she agreed that, "Yes, it is a vacation and I like getting away from the dishes and that sort of thing. But I'm sure that when the time comes to go home we'll be ready."

As a postscript Marilyn Phillips, from Lees Summit, Mo., added, "It's our husbands that we miss, and definitely not the housework. And with the children around there is no chance to get lazy."

Departmental Decorations

Trophy Collection Left to SIU By Former Big Game Hunter

A former Chicago Heights farmer whose hobby was big game hunting has left his trophies to SIU.

Mrs. Alma LeDoux, sister of the late Charles LeDoux of Chicago Heights, made the donation to Howard Stains, associate professor of zoology at SIU.

The collection, amassed by LeDoux on hunting trips in the U.S., Canada and Alaska, includes mounted deer, caribou, foxes and moose, as well as wolf skins and other pelts.

A rug made from a Kodiak bear, taken by LeDoux in 1957 on Kodiak Island, was described by Stains as "exceptionally fine."

Stains said most of the specimens were mounted by Jonas Brothers of Denver and Seattle and are "beautiful examples of the taxidermist's art."

Many of the trophies will be used to decorate the department's quarters in a new Life Science Building addition, scheduled to be started next year.

Come Take a Look At the New South

By Jenkin Lloyd Jones
(General Features Corp.)

KNOXVILLE, Tenn.—It was only yesterday when it was, indeed, "the shoeless South."

It had its islands of wealth but much of this was Yankee part-of-the-year wealth concentrated in Aiken, Augusta and Palm Beach.

It had its islands of genuine culture, proud old university cities. But at the edge of town the N's and S's on the home-lettered signs had a way of getting turned around.

The South was not healthy. Tin placards advertised fever cures, Pellagra and rickets grew out of unrelieved diets of corn meal and side meat. Bare feet picked up hookworm. Much of what the Northerners imagined was Southern laziness was really debility.

For the South was lurching between two talons—hand labor, mule-powered agricultural economy and starvation of capital, Southern farmers lent themselves to tenancy.

Here lay the American peasantry. Here were the deadly little towns around the decayed courthouses—towns where, as one Southern wag put it, "the big thrill on Saturday night was to go down to the bus station and pretend you were leaving."

Have you seen the South recently?

Thirty years have brought great changes and improvements to all sections of America. But the once-sleeping South has taken off like an interplanetary missile.

First, practically all of the American textile industry moved south from New England. Management said it wanted to put the mills next to the cotton. Labor leaders charged that the chief attraction was cheap wages.

But the argument is now academic for the scale caught up to the mills. And the mills would never go back—not even those that now spin synthetics—for Southern labor is productive, fuel costs are low, and even imported management likes the Piedmont life.

Then the mechanical cotton-picker arrived. The picking jobs dried up and most of the Negro pickers went up north where Northerners discovered to their dismay that what has been regarded as a purely Southern social problem didn't evaporate in the bracing air of Illinois, Ohio or New York.

The poor upland farms went to grass and fat cattle. And even where the grass wouldn't grow pine trees would. In Central Alabama today are millions of acres of trees which support America's newest and largest pulp and paper mills.

What were once sluggish rivers affording chancy navigation for an occasional stern-wheeler are now chains of lakes providing some of the best sport fishing in the world.

Florida, Georgia and the Carolinas have cashed in on the great American retirement boom. Before 1935 there was no road across the Great Smokies. Today you can't find a parking place in Gatlinburg and Clingman's Dome has the fattest bears this side of Yellowstone.

In many little Southern towns the two newest and best-looking buildings are the public library and the savings and loan association. The burgeoning middle class has brought new sophistication and new pride of ownership.

Eighty years ago Henry Grady, the great editor of The Atlanta Constitution, made a famous speech, "The New South." He spoke too soon. The South remained dead another 50 years.

But if you haven't seen it recently, go down and marvel. The New South has come in with a clap of thunder:

pardonable sin to present figures on violations that were presented to the Vehicle, Traffic and Safety Committee by Thomas Leffler? These figures were taken from the records of the SIU Security Office. The only unpardonable sin would have been if Miss Perez had falsified the figures to her own advantage.

You also state the figures presented were not broken down into moving and non-moving violations, student and non-student violators.

Why should these figures be broken down? A violation is a violation no matter which side you view the situation from. The facts from the Security Office show that percentage-wise, cyclists received more tickets than automobile drivers. I doubt whether a breakdown would have much bearing on right and wrong.

I was happy to read, Mr. Beyer, that you do not at present time have a bicycle. Could it be that you subconsciously awoke to the fact that they are dangerous?

Administration Has Ignored Student Leaders' Opinions

To the editor:

After following the Daily Egyptian editorial pages (both page one and page four) I feel that it would only be fair to offer a voice for the opposing side—that of the student. What finally prompted this action was the broad specter (sic) of opinion that was aired (or should I say erred) in this Tuesday's edition.

Concerning the spring disturbance: When the administration continually undermines the status and effectiveness of the duly elected student representatives, a feeling of frustration and ineffectiveness is planted in the student body. When student opinion is officially disregarded and official channels become one-way avenues of dictation, students will find other means to show dissatisfaction.

If the administration desires that students have responsible leadership, that leadership must be listened to and respected. I do not refer to the type of "father knows best" attitude presently employed.

Concerning the cycle question: Here is a prime example of the administration backing into a problem and receiving complete support from the University newspaper.

First the administration. Next to nothing was done on its part to seek a solution to this problem. As usual the tactic used was "ban 'em." The rationalizations, however, were their crowning achievement. Can anyone who is really aware of students' problems blame the riots on cycles? One vice president did.

Can a person who should know better honestly say that President Morris didn't know that cycles were not treated under the same regulations as cars until this summer? Another vice president said this.

The administration's most valid point seemed to be its concern for the safety of the student. This in sincerity deeply touches me. If this was a truthful concern the administration would have taken action during the year to increase the student's safety.

If safety helmets had been mandatory, three out of four cycle deaths would most probably not have occurred. If a rule concerning qualifications for licensing had been enacted, the ability and knowledge of cyclists would have been increased.

It seems to me that the reason for the restriction was simply that the University was receiving bad publicity. The University has refused to seek a solution to the problem before the restrictions on cycles. It has again ignored the opinions of responsible student leaders and student government has no choice but to seek outside legal help.

As for the Daily Egyptian: The writings of the editorial conference show again the superficiality of investigation surrounding the restriction. It is just like reading an official administration communique.

Concerning the two students who feel that since they walk all other students should walk: That line of reasoning is as valid as the one offered for prohibition. Since I don't drink, nobody should.

One cyclist argues that student needs aren't pressing enough for cycles. I guess that neither are there pressing needs for a student government since it is ignored by the administration on all substantive matters.

—Bard Grosse, cochairman, University Student Council.

Writer's a Rider

Editor's note: The editorial writer referred to, Mike Schwebel, has been a motorcycle rider for three years and "thousands of miles,"

Cycle Size Limitation Suggested

To the editor:

Whatever Morris wants, Morris gets. . . cha-cha-cha. Well, it looks like the fickle finger of fate has struck again.

At first it was cars, now it's cycles, soon it will be bicycles, then unicycles, then roller skates, and finally pedestrians. I wish I could stick around for that last joke.

The biggest problem on campus is the number of accidents that have occurred and are occurring. Now this doesn't bother me too much. I regard it as environmental resistance; it keeps the population down. As a matter of fact I am glad they have accidents with cycles rather than with cars; they injure fewer people that way.

Besides, a teaspoon can be deadly in the hands of a mentally deranged goose. And in defense of the cyclist, I don't think he is entirely responsible for the accidents. Many pedestrians walk across busy streets like a person cutting across an open field towards an outhouse with only one thing on his mind—speed. Still others daydream or yak while crossing the street.

The other problem, a minor one, is noise.

I have a two-part solution. One involves limiting the number of cubic centimeter on a cycle. The second is restricting cycles from streets which are heavily crossed.

Consider now the first part: In general, speed and noise increase as the number of cubic centimeters increase. I would like to suggest that the limit be set at around 100 cc. This would include most of the cycles on campus.

A person uses a cycle to transport himself and at times his date. A bike with 50 cc would strain itself. Also, it does not allow the driver enough power to get away from cars playing cycle polo. A cycle with a lot of cc's is of no use in Carbondale; it's too much power for the type of driving done in this city, and it only serves to satisfy the ego of the driver.

The second part would involve closing off Grand Avenue west of University Avenue to motorcycle traffic. And while I am at it, a stop light should be set up a Grand and Illinois Avenues. That is the biggest trick-or-treat corner in Carbondale.

Brunt of Riots Fall on Police

The people most battered by the sickening spasms of hate that have gripped Chicago have been policemen.

Violence has been committed against them by extremists and thugs of every color and nationality. They have survived it all with a professionalism and devotion to upholding the law that honors their calling.

We hope their clashes with haters and hoodlums have not distorted their view of human nature. For the vast majority of Chicagoans, white, Negro and Spanish-speaking, support them, and share an abhorrence of the violence.

We think Chicago policemen deserve a special vote of thanks for the way they have dignified their profession.

Teaching Is Important, Too

Scholars Face Publishing Problem

By Jack McClintock

The "publish or perish" doctrine is a fact of life at many universities. It plays a key role in determining who is hired, who keeps his job, who is promoted, who is asked to leave. It is a fact of life at SIU.

"In a way this is the bread and butter for a young scholar," says Charles D. Tenney, vice president for planning and review. "Preferred jobs tend to go to the people who have made the most significant contributions to their fields of interest."

So the ambitious scholar publishes. But who decides whether his research and publication is good enough to justify advancement? And on what criteria?

What if he publishes an article in "Popular Science"? Or writes a book on skateboarding or mountain-climbing, as did Woodrow Wilson Sayre, who lost his teaching post at Tufts University a few years ago because he hadn't "published?"

What is the difference between presenting a paper at the annual meeting of one's professional society, and making speeches before local ladies' luncheon clubs?

What if a chemist publishes a highly praised history of the Civil War? Will it help him advance in the chemistry department? What if an English scholar publishes a novel?

These questions have grown out of the "scholarship explosion" of recent years, which has seen a flood of bright young scholars performing voluminous research in many fields. In each of these fields, Tenney says, there are a relatively few prestigious journals where a scholar can publish his findings.

"The situation has led to complaints especially among the younger scholars, which I think are valid," he says. They know they must publish to be promoted, but where? Some of these journals have as much as a two-year backlog of manuscripts.

Still, the scholar is judged partly on the quality and quantity of his published work.

"Evaluation is a shared responsibility in theory," Tenney says, "but practically it is the department chairman who does it. He is closest to the field and the faculty member's activity. A review could include the dean and the vice president of academic affairs, but in practice they have to rely fairly heavily on the chairman's judgment."

How does the chairman arrive at a judgment?

If a scholar has published frequently in the standard journals of his field, the chairman has little difficulty determining the worth of his research and writing.

To most chairmen, publishing in a popular magazine such as "Popular Science" would not be germane to the issue," Tenney explains.

"In each field there is a fairly well-defined group of 'scholarly outlets' and 'not-so-scholarly outlets.'" The repute of the scholarly ones is long-established and generally recognized, and it is the editor of the publication who actually rules on the worth of a given article, Tenney says. The local department head has only to determine the worth of the journal, a comparatively simple decision.

A scholarly publication is one which publishes scholarship. "This matter of evaluating the quality of research is extraordinarily complex," Tenney says. But a general description of scholarship is possible.

"Scholarship consists in discovering something," says Tenney, "and making evidence available to other investigators. The footnotes, the apparatus, the scaffolding, has a purpose—not only should the scholar make his point, but he should make his sources and evidence available for checking by others."

"The essence of scholarship is skepticism about knowledge of any sort. Without evidence, clues, other scholars won't read it. Scholarly journals are those publishing this kind of approach."

CHARLES D. TENNEY

For purposes of discussing the evaluation of a faculty member's production, Tenney says he would "broaden the definition of scholarship to include creative activity."

This solves one problem, but creates another. The work of musical composers or set designers "is just as important, but is evaluated in a different way. It is a creative act."

What, for example, of the English scholar who writes a novel?

"If the work is substantial and seriously artistic," says Robert Faner, chairman of the Department of English, "he would be given credit for it. But it would depend partly upon the duties of the man."

"If he's a teacher of creative writing, that's one thing. It proves he knows how to do it. If he's a scholar, it would be primarily an avocational activity that showed his interest, and that he was at home in the world of letters.

"The evaluation would be different in these cases, of course, but it would certainly be considered."

For the painter, the criterion is his appearance in galleries. The frequency of appearances would be considered, as well as the quality and reputation of the gallery and the reviews—some in scholarly publications—of his shows.

In the theater, it is again reviews which are "probably the most significant measure." The situation is again different, however, because a theatrical production is a public enterprise.

It is rare that a scholarly journal reviews plays as produced. This is often done in local newspapers by reporters not well trained in the field. Evaluation is likely to be more loosely structured and depend to a greater extent upon the department head's own views.

Evaluating a scholar's book is another thing again. "The evaluation is made or suggested by the kind of reviews the book gets," Tenney says.

"The same journals publish reviews of scholarly books that publish scholarly articles." Thus if a book is reviewed in a generally favorable way by most of the important publications, the evaluator is led to conclude it was a worthwhile piece of work.

Even more than the others, the case of the chemist who writes scholarly history would differ among universities and departments.

"I think it would help him in most cases," Tenney says,

"but in some areas the scholarly shibboleth is not to get too far outside your field. I think it would meet with varied responses."

A scholar's speeches are important, too, but some are not so important as others. Reading a paper at the annual meeting of one's discipline is, Tenney says, "tantamount to publication. But if a women's club asks an English professor to speak, this is not so important."

At SIU, the president's office maintains lists of the faculty's publications, not as an evaluative tool, but "to get some sense of how productive the faculty is as a whole, how successful we are in recruiting, and what the faculty needs, such as library or laboratory facilities."

"But for the record," Tenney says, "I'd like to add that publication is not the only thing considered. There are other compelling reasons for promotion—notably teaching."

Southern Players in Lincolnland

The SII summer theater company is now presenting two plays, "Our American Cousin" by Tom Taylor and "Prologue to Glory" by F.P. Conklin, at New Salem State Park. The productions, whose performances are alternating will run through Aug. 21. "Our American Cousin" had one of the longest runs the history of the American theater. It is best known as the play presented in Ford's Theater on April 14, 1865, the night Abraham Lincoln was shot. The SII company attempts to recapture the style and humor of the original production. The cast includes Buddy Hymel as the rough but kind-hearted American cousin, Asa, Tom Anderson as the bumbling, limping Lord Dumstreary, and Susan McCallas as the dairymaid turned hetress.

Other members of the cast are Marilyn Stedge, Marilyn Hiestat, Phyllis Budzinski, Connie and Peter Goetz, Bob Wilde, John Knapp, Ron Travis, Ken Freeburn, Larry Menefee, Michael Fritchard and Margie Watson. The alternating production of "Prologue to Glory" is a drama of the young Abraham Lincoln and his romantic years at New Salem, Eugene Laurents, visiting artist on the summer faculty of the Department of Theater, will play Abraham Lincoln. The Summer Theater Company is composed of 25 college students from theater departments of 17 different American colleges and universities. The students represent 11 states: Arkansas, Illinois, Kentucky, Louisiana, Missouri, New York, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Tennessee and Wisconsin.

U. S. Planes Hit Cutter In 'Mistaken Attack'

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—U.S. warplanes attacked a U.S. Coast Guard cutter by mistake Thursday, killing her commander and another Coast Guardman. Five men, including a British correspondent, were wounded.

The commander was identified as Lt. j.g. David Brostrom, 25, of San Jose, Calif.

Shells and rockets from two U.S. Air Force fighters and a bomber raked the American Coast Guard cutter at the mouth of the Cua Viet River before dawn Thursday.

Five men aboard the steel-hulled, 82-foot-long craft were wounded in the 15-minute strike, which the fliers staged by flares in the belief they had cornered an infiltrating North Vietnamese craft. The river mouth is 10 miles south of the border. Standard recognition signals somehow failed to avert the clash.

The incident came less than 36 hours after Viet Cong ground fire led to a U.S. air attack on the Mekong River delta village of Truong Thanh. The American military command announced 24 civilians were killed and 82 wounded in this "unfortunate occurrence", Tuesday night. Originally 15 Vietnamese were reported killed and 182 wounded.

U.S. Marines hunted south of Da Nang in Operation Colorado for a showdown with North Vietnamese army units estimated to total 6,000 men. They surged out from a battlefield dotted with enemy dead. Jet pilots strafed about 60 enemy troops caught in the open.

The 1st Battalion of the U.S. 5th Marine Regiment, about 750 men, fought off encirclement in the night 35 miles south of Da Nang by a regiment of perhaps 1,500 North Vietnamese at quarters so close and confused the Leathernecks could not call in their artillery.

A spokesman said an incomplete body count by daylight showed 121 enemy dead, with others scattered about in the rice paddies. A field estimate was that 140 were killed. Losses of the Marine battalion were officially described as moderate. Over the last six days, the Marines were reported to have killed 257 North Vietnamese, captured 42, and detained 21 suspects.

Kerner to Cut Ribbon

State Fair Opens in Springfield

SPRINGFIELD (AP)—A glittering parade of marching bands, floats and scores of officials opens the 14th Illinois State Fair today.

The fair management has dressed up the first day ceremonies with more hoopla than the customary ribbon-cutting at the main gate, although that will take place too.

Gov. Otto Kerner will perform the scissors function at 1 p.m.

Some 1,500 musicians in 19 bands and 95 mayors will join in the five-mile parade from downtown Springfield to the Fairgrounds.

Long before the formal opening, the fair will come alive. The teen-age set will be occupied by the cavalcade of music, featuring competition among cheer leaders, vocalists, combo groups and bap-ton artists. Finalists will appear at night in the grandstand show.

Fair officials are hoping for one million attendance during the 10-day exposition. They fell only 22,000 short of that goal last year.

Although designed primarily as a showcase of the state's rich agricultural tradition, the fair offers something for everyone.

A total of $900,500, a record, will be awarded to competitors in a myriad of events. Livestock judging alone has 13,000 entries seeking a share of $104,500 in premiums.

The National Championship Horse Show has attracted more than 2,100 entries for $30,000 in awards.

Strike 'Killing' Miami

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — (AP)—George Bernstein has been managing resort hotels along southeast Florida's beaches for 25 years and has never seen business as bad as it is now.

"The airline strike is killing me," he said. Only one of every five rooms in his De-lane Hotel is full, he said. "And a hotel room is a 100 per cent perishable commodity."

Six days of harness racing will put more than $400,000 in the prize pot and quarter horse racing, growing in popularity at the fair, will add $30,000.

A military flavor has been added with demonstrations by the Green Berets and the Army's crack Golden Knights parachute jumping team.

Twenty members of the Green Berets, the Army's special forces group, will show combat and survival techniques, and present an exhibit of captured Viet Cong weapons.

Western atmosphere has been augmented by a rodeo scheduled for Saturday and Sunday.

Speed will dominate the closing days of the fair with late-model stockcars, Indianapolis class auto racing, and national championship motor-

A performance of the Grand Ole Opry opens the entertainment program Friday night. Other headliners on subsequent shows will include Red Skelton, Robert Goulet, Carol Lawrence and Jack Jones.

Civil Rights Shift Weighed By King Aide

CHICAGO (AP)—A top aid of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. said Thursday his group will consider an appeal to halt their Chicago demonstrations, but added that "only a continued confrontation with the evil" will change the structures of life in Chicago.

The Rev. Andrew J. Young executive director of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, said that "had we heeded the advice of the supposedly well intentioned clergy (in Birmingham, Ala.) we would still be suffering from the humiliation of segregation."

His telegram sent from Jackson, Miss., was in reply to an appeal made Wednesday by Archbishop John Patrick Cody of Chicago that leaders of the civil rights movement reconsider staging further marches and demonstrations.

The Roman Catholic prelate supported the right of advocates of open housing to protest but expressed fears a continuation of such action would lead to possible violence and bloodshed.

Civil rights leaders, after postponing a scheduled march into another Southwest Side area, led 200 marchers to downtown Chicago Wednesday night to picket the offices of the real estate board.

Rights Bill Action Expected Sept. 6

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said Thursday he will call for Senate action on the civil rights bill on Sept. 6, the day after Labor Day.

The bill as submitted by the administration contains an across-the-board ban against discrimination in the sale or rental of private housing.

The House-passed measure faces even rougher going in the Senate than it had in the House, partly because of the opposition of Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois to its limited open housing provision.

Mansfield declined to commit himself on this or other parts of the legislation. "I haven't even read the bill yet," he told newsmen.

He said he anticipates no opposition to placing the bill on the Senate's legislative calendar without sending it first to the Senate Judiciary Committee, long as deadend for civil rights measures. Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss., is chairman of the committee.

Once the battle over the bill is joined after Labor Day, Southern opponents may launch a filibuster against its passage.

Mansfield said Dirksen had predicted that Congress would adjourn by Oct. 15. "I'd agree, but I would qualify that by saying 'with luck,'" he said.

BLOODY ENCOUNTER—Civil rights marcher Mildred Smith is assisted by a friend after her nose was split by a chunk of metal thrown by a white attacker during demonstrations in Granada, Miss. Tuesday night.

Campaign Contribution 'Shakedown' Charged

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Clifford P. Case, R-N.J., accused a member of Congress of resorting to "blackmail pure and simple" in an effort to get a campaign contribution from a government typist.

Case indicated in a Senate speech Thursday that the lawmaker was a House member from New York, but did not name the man.

"This is an organized shakedown of Civil Service employees," said Sen. John J. Williams, R-Del. "The President knows about it, he condones it, he likes it."

Case and Williams joined in demanding Senate action to tighten the rules governing campaign contributions and spending.

Williams said President Johnson should do the same. "He should put some of his well-known arm twisting to work to get it passed," the Delaware Republican said.

But Sen. Howard W. Cannon, D-Nev., sponsor of a reform bill Case called inadequate, said the Johnson administration is not pressing for action on its own political finance bill.

"We requested them to get busy and to do something, but they did not seem to be too interested," Cannon said in a statement made public by the Senate Rules Committee.

Nor, said Cannon, did the Democratic or Republican national committees respond to a request from his Senate subcommittee for recommendations on campaign finance laws.

The Rules Committee made public the record of a stormy closed session at which it approved Cannon's campaign bill. That action came with no Senate hearings on a more stringent proposal Johnson submitted to Congress on May 26.

Neither the Johnson proposal nor the Cannon bill would take the step advocated by Case and Williams, and outlaw political fund-raising efforts aimed at federal employees.

Spacecraft Picks Secondary Guide

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—The camera carrying Lunar Orbiter spacecraft failed Thursday to find its guiding star Canopus but, in a change of signals, locked electronically onto another heavenly body—the moon itself.

Orbiter, designed to orbit the moon and make photographs from low altitude of terrain where astronauts may land before 1970, must locate and lock onto some object in the sky so scientists on the ground can know its position. Orbiter blasted aloft from Cape Kennedy, Fla., Wednesday.

Junior Colleges Seek Funds; 5,000-Car Parking Lot Asked

CHICAGO (AP)—Development plans for expandable new junior college campuses were outlined Thursday officials of the institutions bid for shares of the state's available development grant funds.

The theme of burgeoning student bodies was stressed by presidents and board chairmen of two Chicago suburban districts and of Blackhawk College at Moline.

Presentations were made to the junior college board at a morning session by Triton Junior College District 504, Northlake and by William Rainey Harper District 512, Palatine.

Officials of the Harper district included a basic allotment of parking space for 5,000 automobiles in its plan of a 200-acre campus at Algonquin and Roselle roads.

Architect Marvin Fitch likened it to "a shopping center for education" and added, "We've got to face up to the need for the automobile," Harper plans for expansion were based upon an expectation that the district, northwest of O'Hare International Airport will expand in population from a present 215,000 to 500,000 in the next 10 years.

Alban Reid Jr., new Blackhawk College president, told the Illinois Junior College Board that his school, which had a 1,500 enrollment last year, expects to serve 5,300 students in the 1971-72 school year.

Blackhawk, with the aid of state and federal grants and local bond issue funds, plans to shift from its 54-year-old abandoned high school building in Moline to a new campus five miles away which is yet to be constructed.

"We're bursting at the seams," Reid told the board, and urged that a state grant be released as soon as possible to permit early work on the new site.

THERE WAS A LOT OF WAITING

SIU Folksinging Group Sings Itself Into National Television

By Jane Kuhn

As a result of winning first place in the intermediate group at the Theta Xi Variety Show last March, an SIU folksinging group will appear on a televised variety show.

The show, "Illinois Sings," will be presented Aug. 30 on ABC-TV and will feature amateur performers from Southern Illinois. Illinois Bell Telephone Co. is the sponsor.

It was after the campus talent show that the group, Moody and Co., was contacted by an American Broadcasting Company representative and asked to be in Springfield during the Easter weekend for a filming session.

They had the invitation to appear, but what about a song? "It was ironic how we chose to do the song we did," said Jim Moody, founder of the group of three men and two girls. "We needed a slow folk song and during a talk with one of the television representatives, I played a song on the juke box. It turned out to be 'This Land; I liked it and there we had it!'"

After four hours of takes, hard work and hoarseness, Moody and Co. had a recording suitable for the filming.

Five shivering performers, dressed in maroon and yellow outfits and with guitars in hand, stood outdoors in front of Lincoln's statue waiting for a camera defect to be cleared up. Despite the inconvenience, one member of the group said, "We all had a real good time."

Concerning the filming and recording experiences, another member of the group said, "The people we worked with were very nice considering they were working with semiprofessionals like us."

Moody and Co. was started by the 24-year-old Folk Arts Society president, Jim Moody, of Joliet. Moody once played guitar in Chicago's Old Town with Brett Champlin from Texas. Champlin's sister, Jackie, 19, was asked to join the group. Fred Wiley, 19-year-old bass player from Carbondale, was discovered in the Folk Arts Society and became a member of the group. Gail Reilly, a 19-year-old from Palatine, was "a friend of a roommate of a girl" who was once with the group.

Moody and Co. grew in bits and pieces, but it grew.

The group has appeared for fraternity activities and the Crime Institute as well as in concerts.

Concerning a future for the group, Moody said, "Maybe someone will see the program or hear about us, and then, who knows?"

NINA KIRN

Nina Kirn Wins 8 Medals In Wheelchair Competition

-Nina Kirn of Perryville, Mo., a student here last year won seven gold medals and the pentathlon award for women in the International Wheelchair olympics in England recently, she has notified her coach Mike Friedman of Chester.

She captured first place in women's Class A (most severely handicapped competitors) in javelin, discus, shot put, Indian club throw, slalom, 60-yard dash and as a member of the relay team. The pentathlon award was by the most overall points won by a competitor.

Two other SIU competitors, Jerry Dosch of Baltimore, Md., and Gene Giessinger of Des Moines, Iowa, now living in Carbondale, won awards. Dosch won a gold medal in the 400-meter relay, and a silver medal in the 100-meter dash. Giessinger won a gold medal in novice archery.

The 26-member U.S. team, winning 39 gold medals, was second behind the 74-member British team, which Friedman said he understood won 40. The U.S. women's team won 22 gold medals, 7 silver and 7 bronze.

Nina, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Edwin B. Kirn, is touring in Europe, Friedman said, and is to return to the U.S. Thursday.

Nina failed to make the U.S. team at the national games in New York in June because of a question about her eligibility for Class I, equivalent to Class A in the Olympics, and went to the international tournament to compete as an independent. A medical examination resulted in her reinstatement in Class A, but Friedman said he did not know whether she competed as an independent or as a member of the U.S. team.

Funds for the trip were provided by N. H. Bruckerhoff, stock and grain dealer of McBride, Mo.

Nina won four gold medals at the 1965 International Wheelchair Olympics.

Pitches Like Koufax

Carol Stearns Is Undeclared

Carol Stearns is playing like Sandy Koufax these days, as the Women's Recreational Association softball team continue to roll along.

Miss Stearns is yet to be beaten as a pitcher for the A team, which also is undeclared.

The girls battle area teams on Tuesday and Thursday, with home games played on the University School diamond. Starting time for the contests is 6 p.m.

The two SIU teams are headed by Kathy Phipps of the Women's Physical Education Department.

Spring baseball regulars returning to school this Fall may find breaking into the lineup rather difficult.

Although the sport has ended on this year's schedule, apparently no one has told Coach Joe Lutz. He has already planned the 1967 Spring tour and also promises a year-round program for his squad members.

Lutz is as avid for baseball as some are for golf. The golfer playing in the snow with his golf balls painted black has nothing on Lutz, who would play an opponent in a blinding blizzard if anyone were willing to take on the team.

Lutz has molded a group of talented freshman into a team of varsity ability this summer, and with the addition of a half dozen or more junior college boys coming in, regular positions are going to be hard to come by.

The draft board may have helped former Saluki footballer Jim Hart. Uncle Sam grabbed quarterback Gary Snook from the St. Louis football Cardinals, making one less signal caller with whom Hart will have to compete to stick with the Big Red.

There are still four quarterbacks in camp, however. Two of them, Charley Johnson and Buddy Humphreys, are pretty well entrenched in their positions.

Hart saw no action in the first exhibition game at St.

Louis last weekend, but he may see action when the Cards play the Detroit Lions Thursday.
