Baise announces candidacy at fair

As wind cuts speech short

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

A 55 mph wind gust cut short Illinois Department of Transportation Secretary Gregory W. Baise's announcement for candidacy in the 1990 state treasurer race Monday night at the Du Quoin State Fairgrounds.

Before the storm ripped campaign signs from the stage and sent about 100 onlookers running for cover, Baise told the crowd that the main goal of his administration would be to invest in the state for future Illinois jobs.

"Today I promise that I will do everything to ensure a strong future for Illinois," Baise said.

Gov. James R. Thompson, who introduced the 37-year-old Baise, said that the office of state treasurer is important to Illinois citizens because it invests billions of tax dollars for the people of Illinois.

A state-treasurer who wisely invests those dollars, Thompson added, can bring jobs to Illinois.

Baise pulled out of the Secretary of State race two weeks ago when fellow republican Lt. Gov. George Ryan kicked off his campaign for the same office.

Baise said the choice to withdraw was beneficial to the GOP ticket because he and Ryan were "two similar people."

As IDOT secretary since 1984, Baise has led a department of 7,400 employees and worked with an annual budget of more than $3.8 billion.

Baise also has worked with the nation's fifth largest highway network, which includes over 17,000 miles of road in Illinois, and has developed the most extensive airport and public transportation systems in the country.

In 1984, Baise administered the Reagan-Bush campaign for Illinois and Thompson's fourth consecutive re-election in 1986. He also served as vice-chairman of President Bush's Illinois campaign in 1988.

Baise, a native of Jacksonville, received a degree in history and government from Illinois College in 1974.

He and his wife, Tonya, and two children live in Springfield.

Thompson signs bill for new engineering annex

$817,100 has been allocated for the project, but funding will have to wait

By Tim Crosby
Staff Writer

Gov. James R. Thompson signed an appropriation bill Friday that provided $817,100 in initial planning money for annexation of the Engineering and Technology Building.

However the schedule for release of those funds has not yet been issued and funding for all projects on the bill will be on an affordability basis, Mary Barber, assistant to the governor for education, said Monday.

"These are long-term projects,"

Barber said. "They aren't something you plan and build in a year."

"Funding is dependent upon many factors and we don't have a schedule for release yet.

The building will cost approximately $13 million to build.

It will provide 31,390 square feet for labs, classrooms and offices.

"We are in critical need of additional research labs right now," Jim Evers, associate dean of the College of Engineering and Technology, explained.

"We have faculty conducting research in the corners of undergraduate labs."

Evers said because of the increasing size of the graduate program, the new annex was the only logical solution to the space problem.

"We hope to have 300 graduates in the program in the next five years."

"It (the annex) is absolutely necessary if research funding continues to increase."

Stuart Robson, assistant treasurer for the chancellor's office, said the first step will be to select an architect for the project.

"After one is selected we petition the state for the release of the funds," he said.

Barber said without a fund release schedule, it is impossible to say whether the funds will be released when requested.

Human research projects under revised federal rules

By Theresa Livingston
Staff Writer

All University research studies that involve human subjects must be reviewed by an internal institutional review board to comply with recently revised federal guidelines, Pamela Fine Miller, research project development specialist for the Office of Research Development and Administration, said.

"There is a misconception across this campus that researchers can self-determine whether their project is exempt from review. While we do have an exempt category, it is up to our committee to decide a project's status," she said.

The regulations, which were issued under the U.S. Department of Health and Human Resources, state certain types of research must be reviewed to ascertain appropriate safeguards are built into each project's design to protect the rights and safety of the individuals participating in the research.

These types of research include federally-funded grants, non-funded projects, student-initiated

Governor on campus; student finances topic

Gov. James R. Thompson will hold an informal session on college financing for University students at 11:45 a.m. today on the Old Main Mall lawn.

The governor will speak to students and then answer questions.

"The governor will be talking about the importance of the state helping out with college finances," Special Assistant to the Governor Elizabeth Close said.

Undergraduate Student Government president Tim Hildebrand said he asked Thompson in June to visit SIU-C and answer students' questions.

"I wanted the students to have a chance to ask the governor questions," Hildebrand said.

Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit and other area legislators invited to attend also will speak to the students, Close said.

In case of rain, the governor will

New phone directory will list staff, students

Students will have access to their teachers home numbers and vice versa in the new combined Student-Staff Directory available to all students and staff at no charge.

This will be the first year the student directory and staff directory are combined into one book, Tim Hildebrand, Undergraduate Student Government president, said.

The book, due out in October, will list the name, address and phone number of students, both on campus and at home when possible.

Faculty and staff members will have their names, credentials, office addresses, office phones, home addresses and home phone numbers listed when available, Hildebrand said.

"Many local businesses didn't want to advertise unless the books were combined," he said. "Now we have more advertisers."

Gus Bode

Gus says until the new directories come out just look up your Algebra teachers under bad luck.

The additional advertising should lead to considerable savings or even a profit, Clarence G. Dougherty, vice president for campus services, said.

Dougherty said the faculty and staff book has cost up to $10,000 in past years. The student directory book has cost around $5,000 in past years.

The book could cost around $5,000 this year depending on the amount of advertising and

Colombian president tries to restart stalled election

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) - President Virgilio Barco tried Monday to restart an election campaign, stalled by a war declared by ruthless cocaine cartels, while the embattled justice minister sought U.S. help in Colombia's latest crackdown on drug traffickers. Justice Minister Monica de Greiff was reported Sunday to have offered her resignation to Barco because of death threats against her before she flew to Washington. The newspaper El Tiempo said de Greiff is to end her mission in the United States on Sept. 7 and would decide at that time whether she will return to Colombia.

Afghan group accuses rival troupe of attack

PESHAWAR, Pakistan (UPI) - Two rival U.S. backed Afghan resistance groups fought fierce battles this month that left about 300 guerrillas dead in an escalation of an internecine rebel conflict, one of the groups said Monday. The Hezbe-Islami, one of the seven major Pakistan-based guerrilla groups fighting the pro-Soviet Kabul government, accused the rival Jamiat-i-Islami of launching a massive attack on one of its bases early this month.

African blacks stopped from boarding bus

PRETORIA, South Africa (UPI) - Police and transport officials stopped blacks Monday from boarding buses reserved for whites in the latest phase of a civil disobedience campaign against South Africa's apartheid policies. Police said three blacks were arrested and two photographers temporarily detained under state-of-emergency regulations during the day-long protest in Pretoria. Small groups of black activists, under the supervision of protest organizers and watched by Pretoria-based Western diplomats, attempted to board buses at six different points in the city at the start of the day. Only two Indians succeeded in boarding whites-only buses.

Polish official promises to back Solidarity

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) - A senior official was quoted Monday as saying the Communist Party will support the Solidarity-led government of Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki to prevent more "radical" groups from taking power in Poland. Leszek Miller, a member of the party's policy-making Politburo, said it would support Mazowiecki's non-communist government because its collapse would mean "the emergence of more radical groups of the political opposition."

House Ethics asked to probe sex scandal

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Rep. Barney Frank, who said he hired - and later fired - a male prostitute as a personal assistant, asked the House Ethics Committee Monday to conduct an investigation of the incident. Frank last week confirmed a published report that Stephen Gobic, a male prostitute he had sex with, used his apartment to run a sex-for-money business. Frank said he fired Gobic after learning from his landlord about Gobic's activities.

Stronger exports reduce U.S. trade deficit

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Stronger exports reduced the U.S. merchandise trade deficit to $27.7 billion in the second quarter from a revised first-quarter deficit of $28.4 billion, the Commerce Department reported Monday. While the U.S. deficit fell with industrialized countries, it increased with the less developed nations of Africa, Latin America and states members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Scientists' discovery could be new galaxy

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Astronomers reported Monday the discovery of a giant hydrogen cloud that could be an unborn galaxy and possibly provide the first strong evidence that new star systems are still being formed. Scientists from the National Science Foundation and Cornell University accidentally discovered the cloud - 10 times larger than our own Milky Way galaxy - while adjusting a radio telescope in Arecibo, Puerto Rico. The hydrogen cloud is 65 million light years, or 384 sextillion miles, from Earth, relatively close on a galactic scale.

Strait plays country concert to sold-out crowd at the fair

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

Sporting a white cowboy hat, an acoustic guitar and a warm smile, George Strait played a lively, upbeat country music concert to a sold-out crowd at the Du Quoin State Fair Grandstand Sunday night.

Strait and his eight-piece band demonstrated their range of playing styles from ballads to honky-tonk to blues. Strait played quite a few of his earlier songs as well as some of his new material, and the audience seemed to love it all.

The first few tunes Strait performed included "Darling Angel," "Ocean Front Property," and "You're Something Special." The songs were fairly tight, but the band's solos were brief and forget-

Strait got good crowd reaction when he played the opening "All My Ex's Live In Texas," and the violin playing in "Angeline" drew applause as well.

The audience was generally older and well-behaved, compared to the crowds at the fair's heavy metal concerts. Several times during the concert, fans walked up to the stage and handed Strait roses, which he accepted with a broad Texan smile. Traditional country music must bring out the best in state fair crowds.

From there, Strait changed the pace of the concert and played "some Texas blues." Strait's lead violinist, Gene Ellis, opened up and played an impressive extended solo that drew quite a bit of applause from the audience. I'm no expert on country violin music, but Ellis was good.

Strait was backed by a very competent band. They kept the music moving, complemented Strait's vocals and had an excellent ensemble sound. My main regret is that Ellis' violin and Ron Hubbard's piano were rarely given a chance to really shine. A song with a strong violin feature would have been a big hit, judging by the applause whenever Ellis had the spotlight.

Finally, after being plagued by big bugs and humidity, Strait waved goodbye to the audience and walked offstage while the band finished the song it was playing. Strait reappeared to play a two-song encore and then walked along the front of the stage to shake hands with his fans.

Fair's agriculture display shows local farmers improved methods

By Phil Pearson
Staff Writer

Fairs have always been a place where farmers can show off their prize hogs and other produce, but the AgWorld/AgriLand displays at the DuQuoin State Fair go a step beyond the usual exhibits. They aim not only to sell products, but to educate farmers.

The latest farm equipment is on display on the fairgrounds and a number of information booths offer information on more efficient agricultural methods, including conservation practices.

Although AgWorld will run until Sept. 4, the AgriLand field demonstrations will end Aug. 30. Various demonstrations will be given from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day, with tractor-drawn trams to transport visitors to and from the 800 acres of field plots.

AgriLand showcases many of the methods and equipment on display in AgWorld. Fields around the fair grounds demonstrate the conservation, safety and efficiency aspects of modern farming.

"The idea is to give farmers side-by-side demonstrations a farmer can take back to the field," Mark Randal, one of the display's main organizers and press secretary for the Illinois Department of Agriculture, said.

Randal said the agriculture department worked with farmers, exhibitors and industry to tailor AgWorld's exhibits and demonstrations to the informational needs of the agricultural community.

Though the agriculture department is heavily involved in AgWorld, Randal said, it is operat-

Stehr Field is a field, it's not a parking lot

IT'S A field. A field used five days a week from early morning to late afternoon. A field used and needed by the Physical Education Department to teach students. A field dedicated to Jean Stehr who worked at the University for more than 35 years and was the field hockey coach for 18 years. Dedicated to a woman who was dedicated.

Now some people on this campus would like to take this field of importance and make it into a sign of the times. They want to cover it over with asphalt. Oh, sorry. They only want to cover half of it with asphalt and graciously leave the rest to the PE department. However, as Julee Illner, assistant professor of physical education, said, "If they take half, they might as well take it all."

RECENTLY THE Parking Commission passed a proposal to install two new parking lots. One would be behind the Recreation Center and one would cover over half of Stehr Field. The field is located behind the Wham Building.

We recognize that parking is a problem on this campus. However, it is not big enough to cover a field that is constantly being used and is a memorial to someone that has given many years of service to the University. It would be an injustice to go ahead with the plans for a parking lot without looking at all the options and consulting those that would be greatly affected, such as the Physical Education Department.

THE BOARD of Trustees must vote on this issue before it becomes reality, and we urge the board to consider all the facts before deciding whether the parking lot is of more value than Stehr Field. People from the Department of Physical Education should have been consulted on this issue since they will be the ones affected by the outcome.

Stehr Field is predominately used by the Physical Education Department. Other areas that could be used if the field was covered are not specific areas given to the PE department. They would have to work around someone else's schedule. As of now, the department has first preference in the use of the field and takes advantage of the situation.

THE FIELD should not be made into a parking lot because of the dedication, but also because of the diminished aesthetic value of the campus. SIU-C is known for its beautiful campus and to cover up a large tract of grass with asphalt would be a great disservice to the campus. Recreational space is needed on a campus of this size and if such land keeps diminishing we could end up being just another university.

The money that would be used to install this parking lot could be used to fuel another fire. Mass transit has been trying to take off for the past couple of years. If the mass transit system takes off it will alleviate some of the parking problems, and Stehr field will be kept intact. It's called killing two birds with one stone

ANOTHER ISSUE concerning parking is the fact that many people drive who really do not need to. The parking situation would ease up if some members of this campus would realize that it is the age of physical fitness. Walk if you can. Enjoy the outdoors.

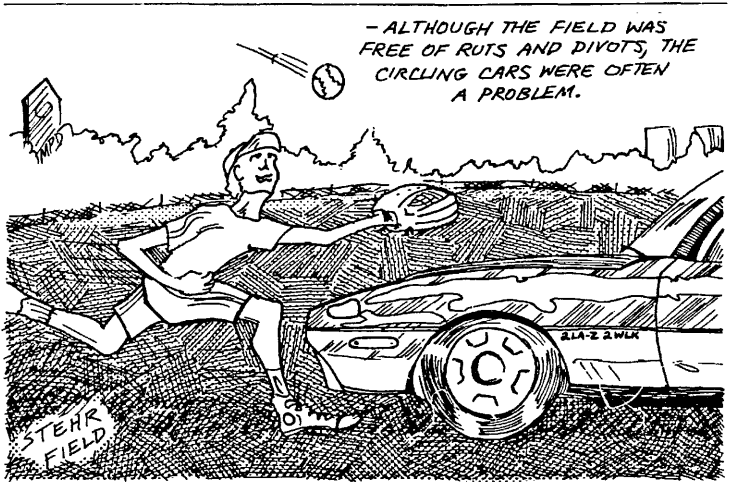

So once again, it's a field. It should not be a parking lot.

Restaurant reflects community needs

THE DONATION of a tract of land by the owners of the Taco Bell restaurant in Carbondale was recently made to preserve the historical appearance of Woodlawn Cemetery, which is directly behind the business.

Plans to expand the business' parking lot and build an apartment complex on the adjoining land was of concern to the City Council. The 20-foot strip of land will be given to the city if the owners decide to sell the land, and will be there if the business continues with plans of its own.

Such a gesture to preserve a historical site is applauded and accepted as a testament to the caring of a few citizens of the city. Willingness to work with the city in protecting the community's historical landmarks is an admirable trait that is a rarity in many communities.

New tactics needed to end drug war; death penalty possible for pushers

When I tossed out the idea that some drugs be legalized, I knew what the response would be. Most of those who called or wrote said, in effect, "you must be nuts."

Actually, the idea isn't that bizarre. Some people who have been involved in the "war" on drugs think it's the answer.

By making some drugs legally available, as we do with liquor, we'd put most pushers, smugglers and gangs out of business, since they'd have few customers and little profit. Street crime by addicts would be dramatically reduced. And the use of cocaine, still glamorous to some prosperous boobs, would lose its illicit appeal.

But it won't happen. I knew it when I made the suggestion. I thought I'd mention it anyway, just to stimulate debate.

It won't happen because public opinion would be against it, and few politicians stick their heads out for unpopular causes.

So where does that leave us in the so-called "drug war" that we've already lost?

Well, we're sending a lot of military hardware to the government of Colombia, our leading cocaine supplier, so the Colombians can fight their own war.

Now, that is a real drug war. The billionaire drug kings, with their own armies, don't mess around.

After the drug kings murdered a presidential candidate who had vowed to go after them, the government retaliated with mass arrests, by seizing their palatial estates and mansions, and promising to extradite top dealers to the United States.

Did that send the drug kings into retirement? Of course not. They simply set off bombs in several buildings, committed more murders, and declared war on the Colombian government, the army, commerce and industry, the press, and anybody else who interfered with the lucrative business of satisfying the United States' drug craving.

In the most chilling threat of all, they said that for every Colombian drug lord shipped to the U.S., where they are a cinch to get life sentences, they would kill 10 Colombian judges.

You don't think they mean it? The Colombian judges know, because they've been killing judges for years.

And after the 10-for-1 threat, about 500 Colombian judges — more than one-tenth of the country's judiciary — resigned. They know a sincere threat when they hear one. Better to write wills and do real estate closings than wonder if there's a bomb under your courthouse.

Then there is the Colombian minister of justice, who was to lead the legal battle against the drug lords. They sent word: If you do, we will kill you.

Then there is the Colombian minister of justice, who was to lead the legal battle against the drug lords. They sent word: If you do, we will kill you.

So she resigned, too, and is expected to stay in the United States for a while, where squat men with automatic weapons are less likely to ventilate her home.

The minister of justice shouldn't be criticized. Nor should the judges who quit. Even with our limited help, they know there is no absolute defense against determined murderers. And the drug lords, who are protecting their billionaire empires, are nothing if not determined.

If anyone or anything deserves criticism, it's this country and our head-in-the-sand leadership. When President Drowsy let Nancy lead the great "Just Say No" campaign, the response of the nation's pushers and crackheads was, "Say what?"

We don't have enough local police, federal narcotics, border patrols, judges and prison space to cope with our own drug dealers and the smugglers. And we're not going to have them because it costs money and the majority of Americans seem to still believe in the free lunch.

So what's the answer? Well, if public opinion, which sways politicians, opposes some sort of government-controlled legal sale of drugs, then maybe we ought to reconsider the thoughts of Lar "America First" Daly, a Chicago bar stool salesman.

The late Mr. Daly was an eccentric who wore an Uncle Sam suit and was always running for public office. He seldom got more than 1 percent of the vote, but he enjoyed the attention.

His favorite theme was "execute drug dealers." Everybody would laugh because at that time this country wasn't even executing mass murderers. And in those days, hard drug use was confined mainly to the big city's poor, while hippies puffed some grass. It wasn't thought of as a major problem.

But now that drugs are a national epidemic, it might be time to give some thought to Lar Daly's proposal.

True, a case can be made that the death penalty doesn't discourage murderers. And it probably doesn't, since murders are often done in a moment of impulse, rage or passion. And many murderers are simply crazy.

There are crimes, though, that can be discouraged by the promise of death. Calculated crimes for profit.

If Colombia is willing to fight a genuine war against the drug cartel, the least we can do is pass a law imposing the death penalty on professional drug pushers and smugglers.

It shouldn't be hard to define what a professional is. Obviously, a teen with two joints isn't. Somebody with 10 pounds of coke in his trunk would qualify.

Would the courts find death to be "cruel and unusual punishment?" Why? Drug dealers also deal in death. Users die. Or they kill someone for money to satisfy their craving. And drug gangs kill each other, informants, cops and bystanders.

As for public opinion, no problem. It would cost the taxpayer nothing. We could even overdose the condemned on their own products and save on the electric bill.

research, theses and dissertations. Miller said that while SIU-C has a long-standing internal review policy, many researchers on campus are unaware they must submit proposed research projects for approval.

"Students are sometimes unaware they have to go through the committee. When they find out they have one more official obligation, it can be very disturbing to them, especially to those who are under tight time schedules," she said.

The Carbondale Committee for Research Involving Human committee's activities.

Miller said University policy required all University research projects be screened by the CCHRIS before the actual research began before the law was enacted, but the legislation serves to emphasize the point.

"If we don't have (the board and the review process), it prevents us from receiving any federal funding," Miller said.

Miller added that researchers applying for committee approval after research has begun will be penalized.

"Under our guidelines, we (the committee) will refuse to review already initiated research. We would ask that all research at that point be destroyed and for the researcher to meet with us, if he or she wished to continue," he said.

Researchers applying to the committee for its approval must submit the original plus two copies of a request for approval of research, demonstrations or related activities involving human subjects. The request must be signed by both the applicant and his or her academic advisor or departmental supervisor.

According to its guidelines, the committee also requires copies of the cover letter explaining the experiment to potential subjects; the consent form, which subject will be asked to sign before participating in the experiment; the non-standardized tests, questionnaires or inventories the subject will be asked to complete; and an interview protocol, written instructions or audio/visual instructions to students and subjects.

Miller said the committee then will conduct a preliminary review to determine whether the project is exempt from further review.

Some of the exemptions include research involving established or commonly accepted educational practices, educational tests where the subject is anonymous, most survey or interview procedures, some observations and collection of existing data, documents and records.

Miller stressed that all exemptions must be approved by the committee.

"Even though we (the committee) publish our requirements and exemptions, ultimately, the decision (to exempt a project from further investigation) is ours," she said.

If the committee decides a full review must be conducted, the subject is contacted and a meeting is called.

The full committee meets once a month, Miller said, but the members are divided into small teams that are brought together as needed to do expedited reviews.

"The teams enable the faculty on the committee to rotate as well as to speed up the process. However, if we feel the whole committee is necessary to decide upon an issue, a full meeting can be called," she said.

The expedited reviews usually take one to two weeks, Miller noted, while a month is required for the full committee reviews. At the end of the review period, the committee will either grant or deny its approval.

However, Miller said the function of the committee was not to discourage researchers, but to enhance the quality of research at the University.

"In the long run, we will protect the human subject to a greater degree. We are not here to inhibit research, but facilitate it," she said.

"There is a misconception across this campus that researchers can self-determine whether their project is exempt from review."

University Women Of Distinction

UNIVERSITY WOMEN'S PROFESSIONAL ADVANCEMENT will be again recognizing Campus Women of Distinction. In 1990, Students at the undergraduate, master's and doctoral levels, Civil Service employees, Administrative/Professional staff, and Faculty members will be eligible for such recognition. Nominees who have not already been recognized by UWPA will be considered for their unique contributions to the advancement of other women, their own achievements in education, research, service, committee activities, and other significant areas at the community, regional, national, and global levels. Individuals and University Organizations can nominate eligible individuals for this honor. Nominations will be accepted until October 3, 1989 by Dr. Uma Sekaran, UWPA. Nomination forms can be obtained by calling Professor Sekaran at 453-1366 or 453-3307.

Study: Alcohol consumption causes academic deficiency

Good grades in college are the result of hard work and good planning. Recreational drug use, including the abuse of alcohol, can interfere with your plans. According to recent surveys taken at the University — McKillip, 1981 and 1987 — the more alcohol a student drinks, the lower their grade point average. Low grades and poor overall performance can also be a result of abusing other recreational drugs. Missed classes, low test scores, poorly written papers, and less than your best work are all self-reported from abusive drinking and other drug use.

The quality of work that is lost because of drugs or alcohol abuse is difficult to identify and seldom discussed. Just as fatigue, illness, and preoccupation with problems can reduce the quality of your school work, so can the effects of excessive weekend drinking. The use of other drugs, including marijuana, can have negative effects upon your physical and mental performance during the following week. "Quality control" is sometimes one of the first mental abilities that is impaired. The ability to determine whether one's work is excellent, mediocre, or poor can be temporarily impaired because of drug use. According to one University student, "I couldn't believe it. I was stoned one Sunday night and really into writing this 5-page paper. I felt that it was going great. I got it back and it was a C. After I re-read it, I couldn't believe that it was the same paper!"

Most recreational drugs, including alcohol, can be divided into two distinct categories:

1. Drugs that alter how the brain processes information.

2. Drugs that change how the body functions, either by slowing it down or speeding it up.

Some effects last longer than others, depending on the type and amount of drug taken, your metabolism (how your body processes it) and your experience with the drug. For example, marijuana can negatively effect your ability to perform some tasks for at least 8 to 10 hours, far longer than the 2 to 3 hours that a person feels "high". A night of heavy drinking can also continue to cause problems for your memory, concentration and ability to organize your thought well into the next day. All recreational drug use can cause lingering after-effects that can lower the quality of work, often without the user's awareness of the subtle difference. The more complex a task is, the more likely that any kind of drug or alcohol abuse will seriously interfere with the quality of the finished product.

More information about the specific effects of drugs and alcohol upon physical and psychological performance is available at the Wellness Center, part of your Student Health Program, at 536-4441.

Police Blotter

The highly publicized trial of Rita Nitz, charged with first-degree murder in the decapitation death of Michael Miley of Murphysboro, began Monday in Massac County.

Rita Nitz has reclaimed her maiden name, Rita Jo Brockmeyer, since she divorced her husband earlier this month.

Brockmeyer's ex-husband, Richard, was convicted in September 1988 of murdering 23 year-old Miley.

Richard Nitz is now on death row in Menard Penitentiary in Chester. Richard Nitz was convicted of shooting Miley in the head and then decapitating the body.

Brockmeyer's public defender Robert Drew said she is the victim of a "double-whammy" because she shared the last name of her husband.

The trial was moved from Williamson County at the request of Drew, who sought the change of venue because of the wide media coverage during the trial of Richard Nitz.

Group threatens to kill Pope if he visits Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — A little-known group threatened Monday to assassinate Pope John Paul II if he goes ahead with his plans to visit Lebanon, which has been wracked by civil war and a rash of kidnappings since 1975.

The organization for the Defense of the Oppressed said in a statement that the Roman Catholic pontiff "will be one of the victims of the criminal (civil) war" if he visits Lebanon.

"We will give the pope of Rome the same kind of reception we offered to the forces of (former President) Reagan," the group said, referring to the 1983 truck bombing of a Marines barracks in Lebanon that killed 241 servicemen.

Little is known about the group, which issued the threat in a statement to a Western news agency Monday. Friday, the group threatened to attack French interests if French Warships intervened in the civil war.

A Vatican spokesman said last week arrangements for a trip were being sought. The pope first publicly envisioned a pastoral and humanitarian trip in an Aug. 15 homily in which he condemned the "genocide" in Lebanon and urged Syria to halt its bombardment of Beirut.

The pope was seriously wounded in a 1981 assassination attempt by Turkish gunman Mehmet Ali Agca in St. Peter's Square and has received numerous threats on his life.

Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro Valls declined comment Monday on the latest death threat.

The Lebanese National Front, a coalition of 18-pro-Syrian militias and political parties urged the pope to delay his plans to visit Lebanon, saying the pontiff risked fueling the fighting.

"We have fears that the pope's visit now could escalate the military and political conflict and contribute to dividing the country," the coalition said in a statement read to reporters by Shiite Amal leader Nabih Berri.

"The National Front hopes that the pope's visit will take place some time in the future in different circumstances," the statement said, reflecting Moslem concern that such a visit would boost the morale of the Christian army.

Ayatollah Mohammad Hussein Fadlallah, the spiritual leader of the Hezbollah extremist group in Lebanon, invited the pope to visit Moslem West Beirut and offered him protection, the Italian newspaper La Repubblica said Sunday.

The spiritual leader of the Iranian Shiite Moslem movement based in Beirut's southern suburbs also criticized the pope for singling out Syria in his homily.

Nonetheless, Fadlallah said: "We insist on inviting the pope to West Beirut. We are even ready to give him all security guarantees, so he can visit our hospitals and see the people wounded by Christian bombs."

Hezbollah is believed linked to the holding of 16 Western hostages, including eight Americans. They include Terry Waite, the assistant to the Archbishop of Canterbury who disappeared Jan. 20, 1987, while negotiating the release of the hostages. He had been under the protection of a Moslem militia.

ed by the DuQuoin State Fair.

Randal said AgWorld and AgriLand get a lot of visitors because DuQuoin is the area's first agricultural show of the year and one of the few that isn't during harvest season, leaving farmers free time to come to the fair.

Ray Morris, University of Illinois Cooperative Extension adviser for Pope and Hardin counties, said that the education must extend beyond just the farming community to encompass anyone using farm products. He said people are going to have to accept side effects of agricultural changes beneficial to the environment.

"If consumers are really concerned about pesticide usage, they're going to have to accept a different quality of fruits and vegetables. The fruit won't be as pretty or as shiny," Morris said.

Morris said agriculture has to change to stay competitive because farming is no longer a family affair in which a family subsists on 40 acres.

"We have to deal with a world market daily," Morris said.

The farm community is just as concerned about erosion and water quality as any conservationist group, Morris said, but they often can't afford to change farming methods very quickly, if at all.

To make a profit, Morris said, farmers are looking at going into other forms of production other than just corn or beans. He said many farmers lease their land to hunters in the winter time and that aquaculture—catfish, frog or crayfish farming—is becoming an option farmers are considering.

He said agricultural jobs, as opposed to traditional, family-operated farms, are also increasingly emphasized in the rural community.

"We are really only two generations away from a different kind of agriculture," Morris said, citing the decrease in the number of farms structured around the family.

Randal said new to the AgWorld this year is the lawn and garden display and farm safety and tools for the disabled.

Randal said the lawn and garden exhibit was added because of expanded consumer demand for these products in the past decade. He said safety is being stressed because farming was listed as 1988's most hazardous occupation.

Secretaries to gain technical training

Computing Affairs, UWPA offer class

By Sean Hannigan
Staff Writer

The secretarial staff of the University will have an opportunity to receive hands-on instruction on personal computers for the first time this semester.

The University Women's Professional Advancement Committee has made arrangements with Computing Affairs to have weekly teaching seminars on various job-related computing activities.

"All the departments are buying personal computers that the secretaries are expected to work on, but they have no hands-on training," Uma Sekaran, head of the UWPA, said.

The head of UWPA said this program would give the secretaries an opportunity to learn such topics as Lotus graphics, word processing on Word Perfect, and laser printing outside the work place.

Sekaran said one of the problems has been that secretaries have to learn a new system while still performing their office duties. This program would give the secretaries an opportunity to learn outside the work place.

Director of Computing Affairs Larry Hengehold worked with the UWPA in developing the program. He said he feels the cost of the program should be fairly low because it uses existing equipment and staff.

"We're making arrangements for faculty and staff to come in and instruct," Hengehold said. The instructors will alternate, depending upon the topic covered that week.

The topics include Lotus graphics, word processing on Word Perfect, and laser printing. The secretaries on campus were surveyed to find out the things they most wanted instruction on and this list was used to make the program.

"There was an overwhelming positive response. This is the first time anyone is looking at the secretarial staff and saying that these people need technical training," Sekaran said.

Sekaran said there were 353 people on the secretarial staff in the fall of 1988. In addition, there are an equal number of clerical workers and 120 data entry and word processing operators on campus.

"There will be a demand for this kind of continuing training," Sekaran said. The training sessions will be for one and a half hours a day and will last one week. Twelve secretaries will be instructed each week.

Sekaran said she sent letters to the secretaries and their department heads, who were asked to recommend their workers for specific programs.

"Whether or not it continues depends upon the women's program and whether or not the demand continues," Hengehold said.

City Council could terminate Halloween party

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

The Carbondale City Council is expected to consider an ordinance tonight that would repeal Halloween Fair Days Regulations, and eliminate Carbondale's annual Halloween street party.

Last May the council approved a resolution that supported the end of the Halloween Fair Days, Jeff Doherty, deputy city manager, said.

The resolution stated it was in the best interest of the city to put an end to the Halloween celebration, Doherty said. The city staff was directed to "review the existing Halloween Fair Day Ordinances and report to the council the procedure recommended to carry out the intent of the resolution."

If the council approves the ordinance recommended by city staff, Halloween weekend activities

The core committee recommended that the ordinance be approved by the council.

would be curtailed by forbidding:
•public consumption alcohol;
•street closings;
•food or beer booths;
•amplified music and
•on-street parking.
There are two points of the Halloween Fair Days Regulations that will remain intact for "safety and control purposes," Doherty said.

One, the "glass ban" will be added to Chapter 2 of the city code. This states that alcohol can not be sold in glass containers during the Halloween weekend.

The second point is that the operation hours for liquor establishments will remain consistent with recent years. Businesses with liquor licenses will be required to close at 1 a.m. on Friday, Oct. 28, and Saturday, Oct. 29, 1989.

The Halloween Core Committee, which was created to advise the council on Halloween policy decisions, recommended that the ordinance be approved by the council.

University prof to serve on accreditation board

By Theresa Livingston
Staff Writer

Y. Paul Chugh, chairman of the University's mining engineering department, has been selected to serve on the board of directors of the Accreditation Board for Engineering and Technology, the organization responsible for setting national standards for the professional education of engineers and technologists.

"I'm pleased to be part of this team and hope to contribute to the very important policy-making aspects of the engineering and accreditation process," Chugh said.

Chugh was named to a board evaluating team last year. The teams travel across the country, observing different universities' programs. From these observations, the teams recommend whether a program should be accredited.

The selection "was totally unexpected. I was, in effect, a rookie, but my team chair was very happy with my work, and I believe this ultimately lead to my appointment," he said.

Chugh will begin a three-year term on the board in November. He will be representing the Society for Mining, Metallurgy and Exploration, Inc., one of 23 professional engineering societies that are members or affiliates of the board.

Chugh's appointment marks the first time a University faculty member has served on the board.

James Evers, the associate dean of the College of Engineering and Technology, said Chugh's appointment was a good reflection on the college and the University.

"It's to our advantage," he said. "The more we know about what the (society is) doing, the better we can prepare ourselves for the accreditation process."

Although the accrediting process is important to any academic field, Chugh said, the process is particularly important to engineering schools.

Accredited engineering schools often can shorten the amount of time a graduate has to spend in the field before being licensed, Chugh said. In Illinois, graduates of schools sanctioned by the Accreditation Board for Engineering and Technology can take the professional registration examination after four years of professional practice, as opposed to the seven years normally required, according to legislation governing the field.

"If a student doesn't graduate from an accredited school, he has to spend more time in the field under a professional before he can take the engineer-in-training exam or the professional engineer exam. Graduating from an accredited school significantly reduces the time between graduation and licensing," Chugh said.

Chugh agreed with Evers, viewing his appointment as "a significant tribute to the college and the university" as well as a way for the engineering department to know of the latest developments in the field.

"By serving the organization which governs the whole field, I will have access to policy-making procedures which will help us prepare our own program for the accreditation process," he said.

A native of India, Chugh holds a bachelor of science degree from Banaras Hindu University and masters and doctoral degrees from Penn State University. He worked as a planning engineer for AMAX Coal Company before joining the University faculty in 1977. Chugh was named chairman of the mining engineering department in 1984.

'China Update' features Poshard as speaker

By Irene Oploh
Staff Writer

"China Update," a series of luncheon talks concerning the crisis in China, will begin at noon this Wednesday in the interfaith Center with U.S. Rep. Glenn Poshard as a guest speaker.

Poshard will discuss the disagreement between Bush and Congress about the strength of action that the United States will take towards the government of China.

The lunches, cosponsored by the University Christian Ministries and the Friendship Association of Chinese Students and Scholars, began this past summer shortly after the memorial that local Chinese students held for the students who died at Tiananmen Square.

The Chinese students bring letters from home or clippings from Chinese newspapers to discuss at the lunches, Knott said.

Weixiong Ho, President of the association, said many students in Carbondale are interested in obtaining updated information on the pro-democracy movement in China and especially about pending legislation on visas.

"Many students involved in the pro-democracy movement spoke openly in the beginning because they did not know they would go that far," Ho said.

One spy for the Chinese government was found on a St. Louis campus and students are in danger if they are forced to return, Ho said.

Ho and others await information on proposed legislation that could extend visas for up to two years.

Brooks hopes the sponsors will increase their financial support. If it happens, he will be able to beef up the horsepower on his motorcycle and lighten it to make it more competitive.

His latest race was in Pecatonica, where his qualifying time placed him third in the time trials, but he sprained an ankle in the qualifying heat and was finished for the afternoon. "It was a real rough racetrack. I was rounding the corner and stuck my foot in a hole," Brooks said.

Although the Du Quoin race track is a one mile oval, Brooks usually races on half-mile tracks. "The half-mile track uses as much racing skill as horsepower," Brooks said. "A lack of horsepower can really hurt you on a mile track."

Brooks said some of the bikes reach speeds of 120 mph in the straightaways while averaging 100 mph on the oval track. He also said the top racers are difficult to race against on a limited budget because factory sponsorships provide motorcycles, parts, uniforms and salaries to keep the big-name racers competitive.

"I would like to race for two more years," Brooks said. "Then I can start making money instead of spending it."

TENNIS,

Toye also figures into the coach's plans this season. "Toye came into her own last season," Auld said. "She worked over the summer real hard and moved in as a starter. She moved into the No. 5 position in the spring and should be a contributing factor in singles and doubles this year."

Sophomore Lori Edwards rounds out Auld's returnees. Edwards played No. 4 singles as a freshman. "Lori had a good fall season before her spring injury," Auld said. "She is one of the quickest players on the court that I have ever seen. I just want to keep her positive this season and I would like to see her become more aggressive. She strokes the ball well and keeps herself in matches."

Auld would like some contributions from newcomers Lori Gallagher of O'Fallon and Wendy Varnum of Colorado Springs, CO.

Gallagher's career marks at O'Fallon Township High School of 83-25 in singles and 15-1 in doubles included four stints in the IHSA Sectionals and State Finals. Varnum went unbeaten, 22-0, in singles as a freshman and sophomore at Christian High School and capped a 19-2 year with a third place showing in State competition her junior year.

"With four of our six starters returning and the addition of the two freshmen, we could be a major contender again," Auld said. "The freshmen will get playing time and will get their feet wet. They will get tested early because we begin the season in the Indiana Invitational which is always tough. It will give us an idea of where we need to start."

Senior Nancy Hattrich and freshman Nancy Mullins could be surprises on the team as walk-ons, according to Auld.

Ditka announces first-round cuts, O'Malley placed on injured reserve

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (UPI) — Chicago Bears coach Mike Ditka Monday delivered the first round of cuts with no real surprises to 17 players — all but one of them rookies — to reduce the roster to the required 60-man limit.

Among the most noticeable cuts were former Northwestern running back Byron Sanders, the brother of 1989 Heisman Trophy winner Barry Sanders, who passed up his final year of college eligibility to try for a pro career; punter Kent Sullivan out of California Lutheran; rookie linebackers Greg Gilbert and LaSalle Harper; and rookie defensive back George Streeter, a product of Chicago's Julian High School and an 11th round selection out of Notre Dame.

In a separate move, the Bears also placed defensive tackle Steve O'Malley, a one-year veteran out of Northern Illinois, on injured reserve.

The cut of Sullivan gives Mairy

Buford the punting job with the Bears for the second time. Buford, who played for Chicago during their 1985 Super Bowl season, was signed as a free agent during training camp after being released by the Packers.

The 5-foot-9 Sanders was selected in the ninth round by the Bears after rushing for more than 1,000 yards last season with Northwestern. He was one of a handful of players who did not see any action during Sunday night's 22-17 loss to the Kansas City Chiefs.

Gilbert, taken in the fifth round out of Alabama, was the highest draft pick cut by the Bears. Harper was selected in the ninth round out of Arkansas.

Chicago has a number of veteran linebackers on its roster, including Mike Singletary, Jim Morrissey, Ron Rivera, Dante Jones, Mickey Pruitt and Troy Johnson, while rookie John Roper has seen a lot of playing time.

Two other 1989 draft picks were among the cuts, including defensive tackle Joe Nelms, an 11th round selection out of California, and wide receiver Freddy Weygant, taken in the 12th round out of Auburn.

The Bears cut four other wide receivers, including Randy Marriott, Mike Sellar, Sammie Archer and Tony Buford, whom Ditka tried as a punt returner Sunday.

The others cut were defensive back Alex Armenteros, fullback Garrett Limbrick, guards Don Strader and Mike Husar, defensive tackle John Kropke and defensive end John Buddo. Kropke, signed by Dallas as a free agent in 1988, played college ball at Illinois State.

All NFL teams must reduce their rosters to 47 players by Labor Day.

Saints ain't the 'aints' no more, but they still can't win the big one

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The New Orleans Saints, finally shedding the title as NFL doormats with two straight winning seasons, are trying to rebuild a defense that has been their cornerstone during that time. The Saints finished 10-6 in 1988, tied for first in the NFC West, but were bumped out of the playoffs by virtue of tie-breakers.

New Orleans enters 1989 without seven defensive players, who either were lost to Plan B free agency or because of cuts during the off-season. Four defensive linemen and three cornerbacks form the group.

"We have to replace them, not only with players that can fill the spot, but people that can come in and upgrade our football team," said head coach Jim Mora, who after three seasons is the winningest Saints coach.

The biggest question for New Orleans is in the defensive line, which had a woeful '88 campaign rushing the passer. The defense came up with only 31 sacks last year while playing musical chairs in the aging defensive line.

That lack of pressure on the quarterback allowed opposing teams to riddle the secondary for 3,327 yards. It also meant the Saints had no player among the conference leaders in either interceptions or sacks. New Orleans drafted four defensive backs this year after taking defensive end Wayne Martin in the first round to shore up the line. On the training camp depth chart, Patrick Swoopes, a free agent castoff who played in the Saints replacement games, is listed as the starting nose tackle.

"It will take a while for these (new) guys to catch on, and sure, they'll make mistakes learning," Mora said. Mora could conceivably end up with an entirely new defensive backfield because of the losses of Reggie Sutton, Van Jakes and Michael Adams. All were starters at various times last year.

The good news on the defense remains the linebacking corps, which is one of the best in the league. But the Saints entered the last week of training with one of the quartet — Pat Swilling — still unsigned.

SIU-C grad falls short in Du Quoin

Averaging 100 miles per hour, motorcycle riders compete for the American Motorcyclist

For SIU-C graduate Bobby Brooks, Sunday's American Motorcycle Association 600cc National Championship mile at the Du Quoin State Fair could have been more rewarding.

After having a good practice early in the morning, Brooks' bad luck began. During his qualifying lap, Brooks had spark plug cap disconnected, which forced him to the pits.

After the unscheduled stop, Brooks was back on the track in an attempt to qualify for the semi-final race. Brooks failed to make the 48-man qualifying round, citing lack of traction in the turns as keeping his speed low and his time high.

Ricky Graham of Salinas, Calif., captured first place in the Championship mile and walked away with $2,000 in prize money.

Brooks began racing 11 years ago and turned pro in 1983, expert pro in 1987. He credits his father with getting him interested with racing. "My dad got me into racing," Brooks said. His father raced professionally for seven years. Racing is a dangerous sport, and Brooks has had his share of bumps and bruises during his career. Among his assorted injuries, he said he has suffered through several concussions, a fractured wrist, broken ribs and a punctured lung.

He pursued a journalism degree at SIU-C while racing as time allowed and graduated in August, 1989. Brooks said it was difficult to find a good balance between motorcycle racing and academics, mainly because racing requires a lot of traveling and school requires stability.

"Racing requires you to travel extensively," Brooks said. "It put a strain on my academics. It was difficult to sit in a classroom when my mind was on the race track."

"I'm still in the hunt for my first pro win. Summer school kept my racing to a minimum," Brooks said, who was only able to attend five races over the summer.

Now that he has graduated, Brooks has decided to devote more time and money into racing during the 1990 season.

Fighting Illini's defense could spell Big 10 title

The University of Illinois won't sneak up on anybody this season.

It was the surprise team of the Big Ten last year, finishing 6-4-1 during the regular season before losing to Florida in the All-American Bowl with a team composed primarily of underclassmen.

Now the Illini, with 17 starters returning, are expected to contend for the conference crown.

"I believe several teams can challenge Michigan or anyone else," said John Mackovic, who was named Big Ten Coach of the Year for leading the Illini to a tie for third place in his first season.

"Certainly, we feel that way. Michigan is the obvious favorite. They return a lot of starters (16). Ohio State returns almost its entire two-deep lineup. Michigan State should be strong. (Indiana coach) Bill Mallory thinks his team could be as good as the one that graduated."

Nothing will be easy for the Illini. Their schedule features seven opponents who played in bowl games last year.

"The schedule is very tough," Mackovic said. "The players know that. We'll have to play our best football to have an outstanding season."

However, there is positive aspect to the rugged schedule: Illinois will play Michigan and Ohio State at home.

The Indianapolis triumvirate of quarterback Jeff George, nose tackle Mo Gardner and linebacker Derrick Brownlow will fuel Illinois' title hopes.

George, a 6-foot-4, 218 pound junior, was a second team all Big Ten selection last season. He completed 212 of 366 passes for 2,257 yards and nine touchdowns.

"Jeff is a big-play quarterback," Mackovic said. "That's one thing that separates him from so many others."

The maturing George was ranked as the No. 6 quarterback in the nation by The Sporting News. But, he still has room for improvement evaluating coverages. As he develops and has more awareness, he'll make even more big plays.

Gardner and Brownlow anchor a defense that Mackovic believes could rival Michigan's as the best in the conference.

Gardner, a 6-foot-2, 242 pound junior nose tackle, is a candidate for all-American honors and the Lombardi and Outland Trophy Awards. He had 68 tackles, including 10 for losses.

"Mo is considered the best player at his position in the country," Mackovic said. "He sets a standard of play anyone would look up to. He has tremendous strength and quickness."

Brownlow, a 5-foot-11, 238-pound junior, led the Big Ten in tackles last year, with 155.

"He's a spiritual-type player," Mackovic said. "He makes all the plays. He's filled up with enthusiasm and excitement."

Illinois returns 10 starters on defense. Other standouts are end Mel Agee and defensive back Markon Primous, both of whom earned second-team all Big Ten recognition.

On offense, George is complimented by an outstanding pair of receivers, Steven Williams (38 receptions, 523 yards) and Mike Bellamy (31, 477).

With the loss of multi-talented running back Keith Jones, Howard Griffith will take on an expanded role. Griffith gained 615 yards on 109 carries, scored seven touchdowns and caught 32 passes.

"Howard will become much more of a leader and a ball carrier for us," Mackovic said.

Auld expects winning ways to return to women's tennis

By Greg Scott
Staff Writer

SIU-C women's tennis coach Judy Auld is not going to dwell on the bad luck her team ran into last season.

Instead, Auld is concentrating on guiding her team in a winning direction this season. "I don't want to focus on what happened to us last season," Auld said. "This is a new year and I am anticipating a healthy team and I believe we will have a stronger team this season."

The Salukis were headed toward a run at a third Gateway Conference crown until injuries took their toll. A senior-laden squad was trimmed down to only five healthy players for the league championship and the Salukis wound up sixth out of ten.

"Our No. 1 player Beth Boardman injured her foot and our No. 6 player was also injured," Auld said. "We went into the conference championship with only five players and were a force until the injuries hit. I assessed the whole season as a positive one, though."

Judy Auld

The Salukis finished 22-8 last season and Auld believes she has capable players to make this year even more successful. The Salukis have another eight-player roster for 1989-90 and will try to offset the graduation loss of three All-Conference picks, including Dana Cherebetu, who ranks No. 2 all-time at SIU-C in singles and No. 3 in doubles.

Four returnees will be headed by Beth Boardman, the Salukis' lone senior and a national honoree in the Volvo Tennis Scholar Athlete program, who maintains a 3.8 GPA as well as a Foreign Language/International Trade major.

"Beth was just starting to come into her own in the No. 1 position last year before her injury," Auld said. "I haven't determined the lineup yet, but she has the inside track on the No. 1 position. She has the experience to do it. It is a tough spot to play in because most teams have a good No. 1 player. If a No. 1 player comes away with a .500 record or better, they are doing real well."

Auld also has two returning juniors in Michelle Jeffrey and Michele Toye who produced 27 wins apiece last year in singles competition.

"Jeffrey is a solid and consistent performer and I am looking for that to continue," Auld said. "She has a lot of skill and can adapt her game to various opponents."

Cubs wallop slumping Astros, keep pressure on in NL East

CHICAGO (UPI) — Shawn Dunston got a two-run double to highlight a four-run first inning and Greg Maddux scattered six hits Monday to pace the Chicago Cubs to a 6-1 triumph over the Houston Astros.

The loss was the Astros' seventh in their last 11 games.

Maddux, 15-10, hurled his sixth-complete game in 29 starts and has won nine of his last 12 decisions. He struck out four and walked two.

Jose Cano, a 27-year-old right hander making his major league debut, suffered the defeat. He went five innings, allowed five runs on five hits, walked three and struck out one.

The Cubs batted around in the first inning. Jerome Walton led off with a bunt single and when first baseman Glenn Gavis overthrew second baseman Eric Yelding for an error, Walton scampered to second. Ryne Sandberg then singled to left with Walton stopping at third. Lloyd McClendon forced Sandberg at second as Walton held third.

Mark Grace walked to load the bases and Andre Dawson walked, forcing in Walton. Dunston followed with a double to right, scoring McClendon and Grace. Domingo Ramos was given an intentional walk, and Rick Wrona followed with a sacrifice fly to right to score Dawson to make it 4-0.

McClendon hit his 10th home run into the left field bleachers in the fifth inning to give Chicago a 5-0 lead.

With two outs in the sixth inning, a two-base throwing error by third baseman Ramos put Rafael Ramirez on second. Ramirez scored on Kevin Bass' base hit to right, cutting the Cubs' lead to 5-1.

The Cubs added an unearned run in the sixth off reliever Jim Cleary. Ramos drew a one-out walk. After the second out, Maddux got an infield single with Ramos stopping at second. Walton then hit a grounder which went right through the legs of shortstop Ramirez for an error to make it 6-1.
