New bill requires lobbyists to reveal financial interests

By Emily Priddy

Gov. Jim Edgar has signed a bill forcing lobbyists to disclose more financial information, though some critics say the measure lacks the strength to be effective in limiting special interest groups' power.

Senate Bill 900 increases the number of people who must register as lobbyists and also demands better reporting of contributions to and from political action groups.

According to a Springfield bulletin, the law closes two loopholes in the old system.

Prior to the new legislation, lobbyists could avoid reporting the cost of certain functions, such as dinners and ball games, if no specific legislation was discussed. Edgar said.

These so-called 'goodwill' expenditures ought to be reported, and we are requiring them to be disclosed under this substantially stronger law," Edgar said.

The bill also requires out-of-state contributors to be more open about their efforts to influence Illinois

Under the old law, out-of-state companies could hire contract lobbyists from Illinois to campaign for projects that affected them. The new Fill forces out-of-state interests to register as lobbyists and keep better records of their activities.

Violators are subject to a $10,000 fine and a three-year loss of lobbying privileges.

Locally, SIUC political science professor David Derge said he feels the bill is a good idea.

Although Derge generally opposes restrictions on lobbyists on the grounds that they compromise people's First Amendment rights, he said he favors the disclosure law because it forces lobbyists to be more open without limiting their ability to be

"I'm inclined to favor disclosure, If you go around telling people what they can and can't do in giving money, that's kind of an unwarranted restriction of their

UPS deliveries bypass system

By Karen Ham-Gordon

After a summer of mass confusion, SIUC officials are trying to change the package delivery system now in operation to simplify the delivery process for faculty and staff. This change would cut Campus Mail out of the loop. Harry Wirth, director of Plant an 4 Service

Operations, said the new system will benefit everyone on campus.

"With the new system delivering UPS directly to the departments, it will save everyone time and money all around," Wirth said. "This could cut as much as $30,000 from the (plant and service operations) budget."

James Tweedy, vice president for administration, said he is confident that the change in administration, said he is confident that the change in delivery systems will satisfy both budgetary restraints and departmental needs.

"We came up with a procedure that we think will work," Tweedy said. "Everyone wants to cut the budget, but everyone wants the benealts too.

Under the old delivery system, 150 to 250 packages were delivered to Central Receiving every

SOVIETS FOUND INNOCENT IN AIRLINE TRAGEDY—
The downing of Korean Air Lines Flight 007 nearly 10 years ago that killed the 269 people aboard was caused by "a series of blunders and mistakes" by the jumbo jet's pilots and the former Soviet Union "bears no guilt," the first Russian commission to investigate the tragedy said Monday. The findings are similar to those released in June by the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) in Canada.

HATE CRIMES CONTINUE TO RISE IN GERMANY -Right-wing extremism continues throughout Germany. Questions remain whether right-wing radicalism is a temporary growing pain in Germany's struggle to become whole again, or a deeper illness in the national psyche. Assaults and other violent crimes with "right-extremist motivations" are up 30 percent through the first seven months of this year compared with a similar period last year, according to federal government figures.

WORLD POLITICS FEATURES BASIC STRUCTURE -In the post-Cold War world, there is a new framework to world politics. Its essential feature is the world is divided between zones of turmoil and development and zones of peace and democracy. The basic structure of world politics follows from only three facts: the world's division into two parts, the fact that conflict in the zones of peace will not lead to war and the fact that the zones of peace have most of the power in the world.

UNITED AUTO WORKERS UNION TARGETS FORD—
The United Auto Workers union Monday picked the Ford Motor Co. as its negotiating larget for a new labor agreement that will set the pattern for more then 400,000 workers at the nation's Big Three automakers. Lawyers for a division of Teledyne, Inc., claimed Monday the Los Angeles-based defense company was allowed to sell material for Iraqi cluster bombs as part of a secret U.S. government policy to assist the Carl I Getto of the University of Wisconsin has been chosen as the new dean and provost for the SIU School of Medicine.

Getto was selected by a 15-person medical school committee, in which SIUC President John C. Guyon assisted.

"I am delighted that Dr. Getto has agreed to accept this challenging position," Guyon said. "In addition to his considerable perience at the University of wisconsin, he brings wisconsin, ne brings a commitment to continuing the primary care mission of SIU's medical school."

Richard Möy, the school's founding dean, will retire at the end of September. Getto will begin his duties in January, but plans on making visits in the meantime.

"I'll be setting up trips between now and then (January) to get things in order," Getto said.

Getto said he is looking forward to working at SIU for many reasons.

"I am most looking forward to continuing the excellent start by Dr. Moy," Getto said. "I am especially Moy, Getto said. I am especially interested in primary care and developing programs that will continue to benefit the people in central and southern Illinois

Women's service offers chance for development

By Erika Bellafiore

An SILIC women's service is offering an internship program to enhance career development opportunities for women who have the potential to succeed in administrative positions.

Applications will be accepted starting September for the Administrative Internship Program.

Janice Schoen Henry, coordinator of University Women's Professional Advancements, said the program enables more women to compete for administrative positions at SIUC.

"The No. 1 benefit of the program is that the interns are able to work with an expert administrator to fine tune skills; and knowledge to become a better candidate for future administrative jobs that may open up at SIUC," Henry Tammy Cavarretta, assistant director of New Student Admission Services and graduate from SIUC and Edwardsville, said being selected this was summer quite accomplishment.

"This has given me the opportunity to be exposed to different departments of the University, and to the political and administrative aspects of the University," she said.

Cavarretta said she hopes the internship will help her advance to a higher administrative position.

The program provides me with experience, exposure and mentors to achieve higher level careers, Cavarretta said.

Interns can learn from their host, whoever is helping them with their skills, Henry said.

The interns can observe leadership skills, help with projects, go to meetings and make decisions," Henry said.

Study abroad program enrollment picking up after year of recruiting

By Sean L. N. Hao International Writer

Hiking in the Swiss Alps or water-skiing on Lake Constance may sound like an SIUC student's dream vacation, but for some it may also be the perfect place to

For the past year, SIUC students have been going to Austria to study, and after an initial year of recruiting, enrollment for the study abroad program in Bregenz, Austria is picking up.

Bregenz gave SIUC free use of its International Center one-year-ago, with intentions of developing a sister campus in the future.

Thomas Keller, SIUC associate professor of German, said the program has grown since its inception one year ago.

"We have 13 SIUC students studying in Austria this fall compared to only three last fall," er said.

Keller also stated that there is more interaction between the local residents and the visiting students. Austrians make US students who are studying abroad feel like they are wanted, Keller said.

'Arrangements have been made allowing more direct interaction with Austrians. Americans can workout in the gym and observe them in classes at a nearby high school," Keller said. "We have received fantastic support from the Austrians, in accommodating students and arranging activities.

Bregenz, the capitol of the western province of Vorarlberg, is only a four hour train-ride from the major European cities of Milan. Zurich, Innsbruck and Munich.

Thomas Saville, coordinator for study abroad programs at SIUC's International Programs and Programs and Services, said Bregenz is one of several programs that allow students to study abroad in locations like its sister campus in Nakajo, Japan along with 100 other locations under the International Student Exchange Program.

Saville said students do not necessarily need a background in the language of the host country.

Gun control proposal step in right direction

THE BATTLE OVER GUN control has been on-going and little has been done to reach a point of agreement. In the past, proponents of gun regulation have aimed the majority of new proposals at gun purchasers, however Sen. Paul Simon D-Makanda introduced legislation aimed at gun dealers.

Under this legislation the annual license fee for firearm dealers would be raised from $50 for pawnbrokers and $10 for other dealers to a flat fee of $375, do away with the 45day requirement for license approval/denial and allow random inspections of firearm licensees more than once a year.

Simon's proposal was defeated during its initial outing, but he would like it to be included as part of President Bill Clinton's upcoming crime package. Legislation of this type is not the solution to all our nation's crime problems, but it is a step in the right direction.

SINCE 1980, THE NUMBER of firearm dealers in the United States has increased from 113,000 to 287,000, with an average of 6,000 applications each month. These figures amount to a 65 percent increase in 13 years, while the number of investigators assigned to inspect gun dealers has decreased by 13 percent.

The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms said the fee increase included in Simon's legislation would reduce the number of applications by about 55,000. The ATF reported in 1991 that only one-quarter of all licensed gun dealers operated store-front businesses.

Revenue generated by the fee increase would enable the ATF to conduct thorough computer checks for every applicant, and allow for the continuance of a program started in February 1993. This program implemented a policy of contacting every firearms license applicant. Approximately 19 percent of new applicants contacted withdrew or abandoned their applicants immediately after being contacted.

ANOTHER ASPECT OF THE legislation would make dealers more responsible for the guns they sell and deliver. Dealers would be required to comply with regulations in the National Firearms Acts, which states individuals to whom firearms, e.g. semi-automatics, are transferred must be identified by photographs and fingerprints to ensure that the weapons may be lawfully received and possessed. Delivery persons also would be required to request verification before completing a firearm delivery.

The Violence Policy center in California noted guns area shipped illegally by sending them to a destination other than a person's home or place of business. The center discovered through an investigation in 1990 that a gun dealer purchased 1,500 guns and sold them to gang members. After running checks on 1,165 of these guns-the ATF found only four of them had been registered.

THE PROBLEMS OUR NATION faces when dealing with crime and its control are not easily answered, but by taking steps to stop illegal acts at their root, we are confronting the problem head-on. Simon's legislation is only a beginning step in facing the situation at hand. By coupling this with similar proposals, some progress can be made and this problem should not go unnoticed.

While our government has spent time groveling about what to do about the ever-increasing crime problem, things have only gotten worse. The Center for National Crime Statistics reported in 1992 the number of children killed by violent acts involving firearms rose by 44 percent from the number killed in 1991. Now is the time to take appropriate action on the issue of firearms control and re-examine national policies on violence. Bi-partisan politics mean nothing when compared to lives.

Jaywalking regulation provokes student guide

Parking Division regulation against jaywalking, we proudly present to pedestrians every-where the SIUC '93-94 "Jaywalker's Guide to Freedom." If you've been longing to the street, but just can't seem to find one of those pesky crosswalks, then this complete guide is for you.

Chapter 1: Why search for a crosswalk when you can carry your ov n personal one with ou? Try your hand at any of the following techniques:

■ As you stroll across the street, hold one can of white spray paint in each hand. As you walk, spray lines of white paint. Presto! A crosswalk appears before your very own eyes.

Can't get a hold of any white spray paint? Try two rolls of toilet paper. It's quick, easy and biodegradable. Chapter 2: Create a diversion.

As you stand by the street, point in another direction and scream "I can't believe it. It's Elvis!" As everyone turns to look in the direction you are pointing, walk calmly and confidently across the street.

Chapter 3: Need to get from one side of the street to the other, but can't find a crosswalk? Call transit.

Chapter 4: Look both ways and run!

For a map of all the official crosswalks on campus, try contacting the SIUC Parking Division.

Mass jaywalking scheduled to stop SIUC militarization

Envision police on every sidewalk patrolling with tickets in hand, their teeth grinding, staring down an open road just waiting for you to make the illegal move.

Is this the Gaza Strip, Somalia or

Why are we letting Big Brother take away our personal freedom? Could it be an escape goat for administrative mismanagement of funds? Once again the administration finds its pockets empty and the students are expected to pay another unjust

Here's an idea: Instead of making students pay fines for jaywalking, let the administration m ke up their future shortcomings of cash by better managin, their own funds. Is it not odd that the most modern and aesthetically pleasing rooms are found where there are no students?

As tuition-paying students, are we not intelligent enough to walk across the street (in the area of our choice) that we have helped to

Have we not been taught in our classes that, in times like this, when the powers-that-be overstep the boundaries of reason, we must take a stand and practice our right of civil disobedience? That's right, let's stretch those legs; it is time to jaywalk!

A wise person once said, "It is time for another Tea Party!" So stand up for your rights as a tuitionpaying, time-pressed student. Join the mass jaywalking on Wednes-day, Sept. 1, at 11:55 a.m. Stop the militarization of the SIU campus. If we don't, what will be their next

Rule treats students like kids

I am writing this letter in support of Ken Petersen's suggestion that SIUC students protest against the University's proposed, more-strict enforcement of jaywalking regulations.

I am sure most students on this campus are intelligent and considerate enough to look both ways before crossing the street, even in a crosswalk. Most students who have been around for more than a semester know that crossing in a crosswalk really is no guarantee of safety.

reatiy is no guarantee of safety.

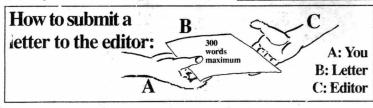

To make things more insulting:
the proposed fine for such a "violation" far exceeds what is reasonable: $15! Having walked around campus for six semesters, I know there are quite a few places students regularly cross where there is no crosswalk. My own observation demonstrates to me that students generally are more careful when they don't cross in designated crosswalks.

There are many students who instinctively know it is better to cross at corners and near crosswalks, but do not neces-sarily make sure they are actu-ally in the crosswalk. Will these students be fined for not keeping both feet between the lines? I can just imagine Saluki Patrol officers issuing $15 tickets to students at 2 a.m. for not walking within designated cross-walks, even when there is not a moving vehicle in sight. If no protest is made, I'm sure this new policy will be enforced in just such a manner.

Though the administrators at this University, in general, are far older than the student population, they must realize we students are adults. We do not need the University's help to learn how to cross the street properly.

save for my student loan and whatever comes up," Howell said.

"Even though I have a job lined up after I graduate, I am concerned about how I am going to pay it back with inflation and just living," Howell said.

I would consider going through an assistance program instead of a collection agency or having my credit rating dropped," she said. "It is all a big concern."

ISAC's program restrictions are that the student loan cannot be in litigation or the legal process.

It must be a federal loan and the student must start to pay it back in consecutive monthly payments.

Students currently in default who have borrowed in the Federal Family Education Loan Program, which includes Subsidized and Unsubsidized Federal Stafford Loans, Federal Supplemental Loans for Students, Federal PLUS Loans, Federal Consolidation Loans and Illinois Opportunity Loans, will have an opportunity to be reinstated and will be eligibile for state and federal student financial aid as part of the process, Clement said.

Students are offered the chance to erase their negative credit ratings from credit bureaus and have collection agencies cease their collection efforts, Clement said.

We start the process and connections for the student to pay back the loan," Clement said.

"Students would no longer have their wages or tax refunds withheld, instead we would take care of it and help the student," Clement continued.

concerned the storage of unknown chemical waste at a Neckers building storeroom.

Other violations included improper storage of excessive amounts of hazardous waste in a building on McLafferty Road and burning solvents in a Life Sciences

After the inspection, SIUC developed a cleanup plan that was approved by the IEPA in October 1991. Hazardous waste was removed from three locations at SIUC last year.

Gary Steele, an environmental rotection specialist for the IEPA, said the cleanup work at the Neckers storeroom and the Life Sciences II incinerator is completed, but soil samples from under the hazardous waste building still showed contamination.

Soil sampling results and crack analysis from under the storage facility and around a septic tank connected to the building indicated levels of contamination above cleanup standards, Steele said. Because of this, the IEPA told University officials to do additional sampling in the area.

The concern is that chemicals seeped through cracks in the cement floor and construction joints, then penetrated the ground under the building, Steele said. Also, chemicals that entered floor drains seeped into the buildings

Additional testing will help determine the extent of contamination, he said. The testing will show if the contamination is localized to a small area or spread underneath the entire building.

Steele said the results of the soil samples will help determine if additional cleanup work is needed.

The original deadline for completing the cleanup work and submitting a final report to IEPA was Feb. 15. Because of the additional testing requirements, the University's deadline for submitting a final report was extended to Dec. 1.

"These are fairly routine delays, especially considering the cor exity of the closure plan," Steele said. "Most plans involve three or four chemicals, this plan involved 300 or 400 different

James Tyrrell, director of SIUC's Center for Environmental Health and Safety, estimated the final cost of the cleanup would be about $500,000, but said more work needs to be done and it is impossible to determine the overall cost at this time.

Steps have been taken to prevent another hazardous waste problem from developing, he said.

A program to pick up hazardous waste on a more regular basis was set up last year. The University also purchased a hazardous purchased a hazardous waste disposal contract from Clean Harbors, the company that did the actual cleanup work, he said.

The contract ensures regular disposal of hazardous waste every 90 days. The contract will cost the University about $80,000 this year, but it eliminates long term storage in the hazardous waste building, Tyrell said.

Tyrrell said future plans include developing a regular series of training sessions for people on campus who deal with hazardous waste and developing a facility that will serve as CEHS's offices, laboratory, and hazardous waste disposal facility.

Steele said the University has made constant progress and has learned from the cleanup.

The University is taking a closer look at the hazardous chemicals it purchases and determining whether they are necessary, he said.

The University also is learning more efficient methods of dealing with hazardous waste accidents. and proper methods of handling categories: purchase orders or personal packages.

urchase orders were delivered by Central Receiving to their destination, while personal packages were delivered to Campus Mail. Upon receipt of packages, Campus Mail notified departments to pick up their ackages. It was then up to the department to send people to mpus Mail for package retrieval.

Under the new delivery system, personal packages sent via UPS will be delivered directly by UPS, campus officials said.

Packages will be sorted in Central Receiving and purchase orders will be delivered by Central Receiving, like the previous

The earlier notification system needed alterations because of confusion within the system, Steve Daron, director of purchasing said. "We received a lot of complaints from people on campus," Daron said. "I figured Federal Express could deliver straight to departments, so why can't UPS? This makes our job easier."

Daron said part of the problem involved labeling packages.

"The key issue is that departments have to give a deliverable address," he added. You wouldn't believe the way stuff comes in here.

Although the new system is designed to put departments at ease, some SIUC faculty are indifferent about the system, mainly because of its predecessor.

This will be better for us because we get packages daily — packages of films for classes — much ahead of time," said Gary Kolb, chairman of the Department of Cinema and Photography. "This will cut time and maybe save some money, but it doesn't get rid of the problem of receiving other campus mail or trying to send out UPS packages.

Kolb said although UPS can deliver packages, it cannot receive outgoing packages in the same trip.

"We'll still have to send somebody out to Central Receiving to mail packages and pick up our regular (non-UPS) mail packages," he said. "And because we can't get an assigned parking place, one of our office personnel has to drive around and search for a parking place so we can get our packages."

B.J. Carr, account tech II for the School of Art and Design, said although she remains optimistic that package delivery will improve, she is unsure of what problems the new system will bring.

"This will be the same thing. Some of the deliveries won't get to the people they need to get to because it's hard to find people during the day," Carr said. "They could be in class or in another building -- then what happens?

"I think it's going to end up costing us money in terms of losses," she said. "We get perishable items and packages that can't resist water or weather

Whatever the new system may bring, Carr said she will try to do what she can to ease the problems. "Before, we had two week delays if a package came in — then we'd be lucky if we could find it," she said. "I hope this is better. We'll try to cooperate."

Computers progress in game design

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—Computer games have come a long way since the days of Pong and Space

Advances in computer power and technology have made possible a generation of complex games such as SimCity that are entertaining and engrossing, using the computer to create artificial worlds and simulate reality. But the advent of the CD-ROM

But the advent of the CD-ROM has taken computer games to the next level. With their ability to sture huge amounts of data such as elaborate graphics, sound and video, CD-ROMs are opening a new era in computer gaming. Prices less than $400 finally have made CD-ROM drives affordable periphe als for many computer users, and an increasing number of users have the relatively large amounts of random-access memory and hard-disk space these games require.

Icom's Sherlock Holmes Icon's Sherlock Holmes mystery games, Broderbund's Cosmic Osson and Warner New Media's HeilCab are among games that use the CD-ROM's multimedia ability to add all sorts of new dimensions and realism to computerized game playing.

But all of these may pale in comparison to Myst, a CD-ROM game scheduled to hat the stores for color Macintosh un'er's late next month. An IBM-compatible

COBA combines objectives

By John McCadd Special Assignment Writer

College of Business and Administration officials have found a way to help students increase their chances of landing a job ofter graduation.

Most universities provide students with business organizations, guest speakers and resume workshops, but for the first time, COBA will offer all of these during he second week of school.

the second week of school.

The college will host its New Student Night at 5 p.m. today at Lawson 141, which this year will feature a recruiter from a St. Louis company and several student ss groups.

COBA adviser Linda Seibert. coordinator of New Student Night, said this year's event should prove helpful to students because many eed career advice early in their collegiate life.

"It's good for students to learn about all the organizations now rather than just before graduation," she said. "This is a way for students to meet all the organizations and choose between them early in the year."

The night will begin with the customary address from the faculty and deans, and then students will listen to Valentino Martinez, a recruiter from the Mansanto company of St. Louis.

Martinez's presentation, entitled
"Careers in the 21st Century," will discuss effective routes toward landing jobs.

Seibert said this will be important because, although kids have heard such things throughout their lives, they are more prone to listen to a top recruiter.

COBA Student Council, said if new student night is a success under its new format, it could become an annual orientation

Last year, new student night was separate from the student organizations' information night.

Information night, which this year will include six organizations, as added to the new student

"Information night had gone down over the last couple of years, and we wanted to see more people " Asmussen said. "This way. we'll have all of the new stude n one place, which is a lot better for the organizations.

Asmussen said students will be provided with pizza and soft drinks for attending information

A federal appellate court has denied requests for Los Angeles police officers Stacey C. Koon and aurence M. Powell to remain free while they pursue their appeals in the Rodney G. King civil rights case, making it almost certain that the officers will begin serving their prison sentences next month

The decision by the 9th U.S. Circuit Coun of Appeals, which prosecutors and defense attorneys received Monday, is a stinging setback for the officers. They and their ! wyers have argued that the two men should not go to jail until an appellate court has the chance to e whether their convictions were proper.

"It's incredibly disappointing," said Michael P. Stone, one of Powell's lawyers.

Prosecutors, by contra welcomed the 9th Circuit's ruling by contrast. "I'm very pleased with the court's decision," said Assistant U.S. Attorney Steven D. Clymer, one of two lead prosecutors in the nd agreed with our arguments."

In its brief order, the appellate panel found that the two officers each were convicted of a "crime of violence." That finding rejected a position argued by the lawyers for the officers, who had asked the court to conclude that the civil rights violations charged in this ase did not necessarily amount to violent crimes.

Koon and Powell each were sentenced earlier this month to 2 sentenced earlier this month to 2 years in prison for violating the civil rights of King, a black motorist who was stopped by police and beaten the night of March 3, 1991. Letterman looks better than ever

NEW YORK-"There can only be one first show," writer Dave Shepp said Mooday from the stage of the Ed Sullivan Theater, "and THIS IS IT!"

With that, the nearly 500 fans waiting to watch David Letterma make his CBS debut burst into frenzied applause. It wasn't just the prospect of seeing guests Bill Murray and Billy Joel that had the crowd excited, nor was it the prospect of getting a first glance at the new set of "Late Show With David Letterman" or Paul Shaffer's CBS Orchnew six-piece although clearly, that was part of it.

No, these folks were cheering their lungs out because they knew they were a part of television history. The first shot of the Late Night Wars was about to fired, and they were there.

How was it? Very much like the old Letterman show in many ways. There was the Top-10 list (dubbed The Late Show Top 10" for legal reasons), which enumerated the best things about being on CBS. There was an opening monologue, and a funny one at that. There was a taped piece showing Letterman interviewing people in New Jersey about what they wanted to see more of on TV. There was Biff Henderson, Calvert DeForrest whom NBC wouldn't let Letterman call "Larry 'Bud' Melman" anymore Bill Vendell, Hal Gurnee, Laurie "Rose" Diamond, Robert Morton, Barbara Gaines and many of the other behind-the-somes people Letterman has pulled to the limelight. Indeed, Letterman did seem in hetter spirits than he was at NBC. Even though he poked fun at the saturation campaign CBS ran to promote the new show, there was no grouchiness in his delivery, no ness in his smile. He see genuinely happy to be up there, whether chatting with Murray, joking with Shaffer or simply being Granted, maintaining that Lettermanian poise took some doing, particularly with wild-man Murray on hand. Not only did Murray go to the usual extremes, including bussing the host on the cheek and spray-painting "DAVE" on Letterman's desk, but he even dragged Letterman into the audience, where he passed out dollar bills as Dave shook hands.

But there were differences. too-like the new set. Although the basic desk-on-the-right, band-onthe-left arrangement remains, the new Letterman stage is bigger than its predecessor. Where his old desk was backed by a Manhattan-inminiature panorama, the new show has 12-foot models lurking behind Letter and and the band, including Carnegie Hall and a theater with a inking marquee.

There are also more seats for the audience, with about 300 on the floor, and another 150 in the balcony. But the studio is still kept meat-locker cool—no point in making Dave sweat unnecessarily.

Needless to say, everyone in those seats was extremely happy to be there. Most had stood in line for hours, there were already 70-some people waiting outside the Ed

Sullivan Theater by 1 p.m., th hours before the doors opened for the 5:30 p.m. taping. Those who got in did so only because they had been smart enough to send a postcard to CBS in June, and were lucky enough to have had that card e in the Letterman ticket

"It's just sheer fortune that I got tickets," said Phyllis Wheelan, 41, a commercial real estate broker from Tarrytown, N.Y. Wheelan is a Letterman fan of long standing—she was in the audience for the last of his morning shows, and also watched "Late Night" being taped at NBC. "I've never seen any other show: 'Oprah,' Donahue,' none of them.'

Heidi, a 25-year-old from New Rochelle, N.Y., who declined to Rochelle, N.Y., who declined to give her last name, has not been watching quite as long as Wheelan. But she was eager to see whether the move to CBS would improve Letterman's attitude. "I noticed that Dave got pretty sail over the last few years," she said. "But this is a great move for him."

Even at the end of the show, his new attinute was evident. When he had to retape one sequence to cover a mistake, Letterman, while invoking the ghost of Ed Sullivan, initially said that Sullivan had been initially said that Sulinvan had been on the air for 20 years; the second take was done so he could correctly say "28 years", he couldn't help but goof around. "Is this really worth the trouble?" he asked, laughing. Yeah, it was. Because if that first show was any indication, David Letterman looks even better than ever on CBS.

Newscast changes, returns to SIUC

By Chariotte Rivers Entertainment Writer

The University's "Night Report" will return to the airwaves in September with a shorter broadcast and an earlier time slot, staff say.

Two changes from last year will be apparent when the nightly newscast returns for the fall semester, said Jon Musgrave, one of two graduate students who serve as assignment editors.

The Night Report will be shorter, at seven-and-a-half minutes, and has been given an earlier time siot.

Musgrave said he thinks Night Report's new time slot will benefit the show.

"The time of day is a lot better. Our competition at 9:57 p.m. is going to be the closing credits of network shows and not David Letterman or Jay Leno," Musgrave

The Night Report faculty advisers are Ken Keller and Michael Murrie, both radiotelevision professors.

The Night Report begins each semester with a new crew of volunteers who serve as anchors and production staff.

The main focus of the Night Report is covering on-campus events and major events in Jackson Williamson counties, Musgrave said.

SIUC students with a desire to work both on camera and behind the scenes staff the nightly newscast on WSIU-TV.

Musgrave said 60 students interested in gaining hands-on experience in television broadcast news attended an organizational meeting last Wednesda

Positions available included reporters, anchors, producers, production assistants, directors and desk assistants.

On-camera auditions were last Friday in Studio B in building. Communications Audition packets were issued on Wednesday so potential Night Report staffers could prepare their presentations.

Keith Hopkins, a senior in radio and television from Marion, was one of those who tried out.

Hopkins, who said he hopes for a field-reporter position, said this was his first on-camera interview.

"I had practiced a lot, but with the lights and camera, everything else went out of my mind. But, I'm pleased with my effort," Hopkins said. "It was a good learning experience."

Students were jucged on more than just their on-camera performances, Hopkins said.

"Our competition at 9:57 p.m. is going to be the closing credits of network shows and not David Letterman or Jay Leno."

-Jon Musgrave

"The audition was in two parts," Hopkins said. "In the first part I was asked to write a news story from the day's news that was three minutes long. The second part was reading off the teleprompter."

Dave Donahue, a graduate student who shares assignment editor duties with Musgrave, said this section included some local pronunciation that can be tricky for newcomers to Southern Illinois, such as "Cairo."

"In broadcasting, people bounce from market to market. It is important to be able to pronounce the names of the towns in order to living there," Donahue said.

Even those interested in offaudition.

'We are concerned with their writing abilities as well as on-air presentations," Donahue said.

The Night Report will have five different crews, one each weeknight, to provide as many students as possible with practical experience.

Although Night Report workers are volunteers, their efforts pay off in other ways

The Night Report provides good working experience," said Musgrave. "At least half the anchors at WSIL-TV are Night Report alumni.

Some Night Report staffers go on to work behind the cameras.

Tony Gasbarro, promotions director at WSIL-TV, worked as a video tape operator and manned a studio camera during his Night Report stint in 1988-89

Gasbarro said working on the Night Report was a boost to his

"The production work definitely gave me experience with the camera and rolling tape in a live production," he said.

Pink Panther progeny pales by comparison

By Thomas Gibson

Movie sequels rarely fare as well as originals at the box office, and Blake Edward's newest comedy is no exception.

Son of the Pink Panther" falls into that long list of films. The movie bombs as it attempts to mimic its classic predecessor.

Novice actor Robert Benigni, who plays Jacques Klouseau Jr., handles the well-choreographed

He often shows flashes of the old Peter Sellers, but his efforts get caught up in the silliness of the Bmovie script.

The script is so meaningless that even "The Adventures of Ford Fairlane" made more sense.

The villain is portrayed by Robert Davies. He unconvincingly portrays the unnamed head doofus of a doofus quintet, which fails to get anything done because of their constant bickering.

The movie goes overboard in ortraying Klouseau as an idiot. Benigni's performance is more reminiscent of Leslie Nielson's "Naked Gun" character than Peter Sellers' Klouseau.

The plot goes like this: Klouseau Jr. is a lowly police liaisor, officer until he accidentally stumbles onto a kidnapped third-world princess, again unnamed. Because Klouseau is the only one who can identify the princess, he is promoted to

The villain, who is hurt by the princess in her attempt to escape, sends his henchmen in search of a doctor for his injured hand. Somehow, his silly helpers mistake Klouseau for a doctor.

Klouse us is captured by villains who think he's a quack.

He is thrown into the same cell as the princess, and she falls in love with him.

In the next scene, we see Klouseau and the princess cuddled up in a bed, smoking cigarettes. I wonder if ali princesses are this Blake Edwards, whose film career spans more than 30 years, should hide in shame at this lethargic, incoherent comedy.

The most entertaining moments of the film come from Bobby McFerrin's vocals during the opening credits.

Here, he plays the movie's theme while the cartoon pink panther chases Klouseau.

If only the Panther would have caught Klouseau, the movie could have been over much quicker.

Crazy carnival comes to Carbondale

By Stephanie Moletti Entertainment Writer

It is not enough that Carbondale has been turned upside down since students have returned. Now the Student Center will also be transformed into a crazy carnival of fun and games this week.

Student Programming Council will sponsor the "Carnival of Craziness," a festival designed to students to socialize, Wednesday night.

Don Castle, Programming Council adviser, said the event has been around for at least 15 years, but has been called the "Carnival of Craziness" only

"It was originally E Night, but the committee got tired of the

"The last E Night was in '87,"

Fall festival designed to help socializing said Castle

"In '88 it was called Center Fest, but they didn't like that, so it was changed to 'Carnival of Craziness' in '89, but it has always been the same event."

This year's Carnival of Craziness will feature the Poster Children, an upbeat, alternative pop band from Champaign, with Steakdaddy Six, also from Champaign, opening for the band.

The show will begin at 10 p.m. in Ballroom D of the Stude at Comedian Mitch Mulanev will be this year's entertainer at the carnival.

Mulaney, 24, is from Oakland, Calif., and has been doing stand-up for about six years. Mulaney describes his act as "family oriented with an edge" as he aims for "dysfunctional fun for the whole step-family." Mulanev will perform at 8 p.m.

in Ballroom D of the Student Center There also will be two showings of Monty Python's film "Meaning of Life. The film will be shown at 7 p.m

and again at 9:30 p.m. in the Student Center Auditorium. Other events will be held at the Coffee House.

International coffees, herbal teas and cakes will be served in the Big Muddy Room. During this event, Triple Dose, a local band, will perform an acoustic set from %:30 to 10 p.n.

Free beading will also be offered to students to make their own necklaces and earrings.

For students that like to perform comedy, play guitar, sing or do performances in art, there will be an open microphone during Coffee House from 8 to 8:30 p.m. and 10 to 11:30 p.m., said Deanna Smithnosky, Student Programming Council fine arts chair.

rap contest, sponsored by WIDB, will take place at 10 p.m. WIBD also will sponsor a dance party from 10:30 to 11:30 p.m. in the Roman Room.

The carnival also will feature two palm reasurs from 8 p.m. to 11 p.m. in the S -ry Lounge.

Activiti s, games and food specials will be available all night or until supplies run out. The carnival will run from 7 p.m. to midnight, and doors open at 6:30

Admission is $2 at the door.

freedom of expression." Derge

According to Derge, the threat of losing political credibility should be enough incentive for lobbyists to comply with the new

"I would guess that anybody who does not live up to the requirements is going to be in a lot of political trouble," Derge

At the same time, Derge said, there is no guarantee that simply requiring lobbyists to report their contributions will keep the public informed.

It is important for the public to have easy access to these records in order for the disclosure law to have any political impact, he said.

SIUC College Democrats
president Jim Bunton also supports the bill. Bunton said he feels that large political action committees often usurp the power of the people to influence lawmakers.

"What we have to do is level the playing field so other voices can be heard and they can bring out more of a vigorous debate. If you know what's going on, it makes it better," Bunton said.

Bunton said he believes it is important that the bill be strictly enforced.

"I think the problem a lot of the time with ethics reform legislation is it doesn't have any teeth, Bunton said.

Local special interest groups support requirements.

I'm generally in favor of anything that allows more information to the general public," Juli Clausen, coordinator of the Women's Center's Rape Action Committee, said.

"I think that anyone who's operating as a lobbyist should have nothing to fear about being open about these kinds of matters," she said. "I think that the generally wemen's organizations attempt to be above board in everything they do.

Campus gay rights activist Heath Karch, co-director of the Gays, Lesbians, Bisexuals and Friends organization, said the measure could have a positive effect on gays in Illinois.

"It's going to show that some special interest groups will show where their interest lies," Karch

When lobbyists disclose the sources of their funds, gay rights organizers will be able to identify anti-gay corporations and groups. With this information readily available, it will be easier to organize boycotts.

It'll just make it easier for us to not buy their products and not use their services," Karch said. Southern Illinois lawmakers have expressed mixed reactions to the bill

State senator Jim Rea, D-Christopher, said he is optimistic about the legislation.

'I think it's a step in the right direction. I supported the legislation. I think that this does get some of where the money is going out in front," Rea said. Rea said he thinks the measure will force lobbyists to be more

"I think some lobbyists will be maybe a little more cautious. The major benefit is to provide the John Q. Public with the information as to how the PAC monies are being spent and who they're spending them on and to what purpose," Rea explained.

State Rep. David Phelps, D-Eldorado, said he thinks the legislation is appropriate.

Lobbyists do serve a valid function, but I think in some regards they've overstepped their authority," Phelps said. "I think (the bill will make) the lobbyists just a little bit more cautious in ndling of matters."

On the other hand, state Rep. Gerald Hawkins, D-Du Quoin, said he is skeptical.

(The bill) sounds good, but it really is not going to make major changes," he said.

"We are spending so much money on elections, and the people that finance the elections are the special interest groups, and that is

Giants squish Fish; win holds off Braves

By Marc Topkin St. Petersburg Times

MIAMI—The San Francisco needed something They'd lost four in a row, Atlanta had been sizzling and the Giants' lead was dissolving. Manager Dusty Baker said it seemed like weeks since they'd celebrated a victory

Sunday night, after the Braves won again to close within 3-1/2 games, the Giants got what they needed in a 9-3 victory over the Florida Marlins

They found it in 21-year-old Salomon Torres, whose first 116 major league pitches translated to seven snazzy innings of three-run, five-hit ball.

They found it in Todd Benzinger, the temporary first baseman who cracked a threerun home run.

They found it in Willie McGee, who celebrated his promotion to the No. 3 spot in the order with a bases-loaded

They found it in Robby Thompson, who had three hits, including his 17th home run, to hike his average to .340.

Mostly, they found it in an

"This was a big game for us," Baker said. "The fact that Atlanta had won made it more so. It seemed like we hadn't gone out there to shake hands in two weeks even though it had only been four games.

This was big.

Torres not only helped the Giants with his impressive performance Sunday, but he produced a positive outing for a pitching staff that had been battered lately—an ERA of 8.45 in the previous 21 games.

The wiry righthander, a roduct of San Pedro de Macoris, Dominican Republic, had an assortment of pitches working and most impressed Baker with his poise.

"I expected to win, like anybody else," Torres said. "I wasn't nervous. The first batter, I was a little excited and I walked him. Then I realized I'd better settle down or I'd make a fool of myself.

His teammates helped, staking him to a 4-0 lead on an RBI double by Kirt Manwaring in the second and Benzinger's blast in the third off Florida starter Chris

Vomen runners determined to win

By Grant Deady

The first word that comes to mind when in looking back at the 1992 SIUC women's cross country

Head Coach Don DeNoon guided his squ'd as they overwhelmed the competition at the Missouri Valley Conference championships by placing four runners in the top eight finishers. The Lady Salukis went on to sweep post-season honors with four runners being named allconference and three achieving MVC Academic All-Conference

Few experts will argue though that the most difficult thing about winning a title is-defending it. SIUC is definitely taking on their challengers in the right way by returning some seasoned veterans from the championship

Senior Cathy Kershaw and junior Deborah Daehler will be asked to step forward for this year's

They must fill the shoes of three-time team MVP Leeann Conway-Reed and 92' team MVP Dawn

Kershaw and Daehler both turned in outstanding seasons in 92, as they were consistent thirdand fourth-place finishers.

"How gritty you are when the gun fires is what I want to know."

-- Don DeNoon

Coach DeNoon said he is confident in his returning one-two punch with Kershaw and Daeler but remains curious about weather or not others will emerge.

"Cathy and Debbie both had outstanding seasons and if they just perform as they did last year they're going to do fine," DeNoon said. "The question is, will someone else step up to replace Page and Remotor?"

Reec and Barefoot?"
"Cathy and Debbie were great runners last year and aren't the ones that have to be replaced."

Saluki distance diehards may have to wait in order to get a look at Kershaw and Daehler since both runners are in question for this weekends meet.

According to DeNoon, Daehler has some slight knee problems due to some long distance bike treking she did over the summer and Kershaw is just recently returning from active National Guard duty where she aided victims involved in the Mississippi River flood disaster. Kershaws problems are only due to a lack of long distance conditioning. The two runners status is still up in the air for Saturday and DeNoon finds it hard to speculate exactly how serious the physical problems are.

"We take it one week at a time, one month at a time or whatever we have to do," said DeNoon.

akers veteran seeks more Green

INGLEWOOD, Calif.—A.C. Green, in his first public comments since becoming a free agent, said Monday he is still seriously considering signing again with the Los Angeles

"I have a great deal of interest in them, especially after eight seasons, and I can't just turn that

However, he is delaying his decision, he says, because he wants to be sure he is doing the right thing.

He is also awaiting the outcome of a case affecting the National Basketball Association's salary-cap restrictions

The resolution might enable him to sign with a contending club that can't match the Lakers' estimated $3.6 million first-year stimated $3.6 million first-year alary but could offer him free

He would have the prospect of an unlimited salary after his first bottom line is not money. It hasn't ever been, and it never will be." Green said.

"But at the same time, I'm not going to sell myself and my serv'zes short. Where the market is, flut's where it is."

The test case involves a seven-year, $10.5 million contract offered free agent Chris Dudley by the Trail Blazers.

Dudley rejected an offer from time New Jersey Nots that would have paid him $10 million more and accepted a salary from Portland of $790,000 the first year because of a provision allowing him to terminate the contract after his first season and become a free agent.

He could then recoup his firstyear losses, because clubs are permitted to exceed their salary caps to re sign their own free

Mariners hanging tight after loss to Bluejays

The Everett Herald

SEATTLE-Though hardly happy in defeat, the Seattle Mariners still could savor a feeling accomplishment Sunday afternoon.

After losing three straight games to the Mariners, the Toronto Blue Jays used a grand slam home run from Roberto Alomar and strong pitching from starter Todd Stottlemyre to avoid a sweep with a 6-2 victory before 34,593 spectators at the Kingdome. "It's hard to beat anybody four games in a row, especially a good team," said Seattle Manager Lou Piniella.

"Our pitcher had one bad inning and that was the story. We'll be Toronto anytime.

Erik Hanson (10-11) was the victim of Alomar's grand slam. The opposite-field homer to left by the switch-hitting second baseman staked Stottlemyre to a 4-1 lead. The Javs added another run in the inning in which they sent 12 batters to the plate.

Alomar said, "I was trying to hit the ball hard. Hanson fell behind in the count and I got a fastball. It was a big hit for us."

Stottlemyre, the son of former New York Yankees pitcher Mel Stottlemyre, did the rest. "When we scored five runs in the third. that was a big lift for me," he said. I could then go out and be aggressive.

Stottlemyre gave up a solo home run to rookie second baseman Bret Boone in the first inning and gave up an RBI single to Ken Griffey Jr. in the eighth. Closer Duane Ward pitched the ninth for the Blue Jays.

Piniella is aware the Mariners aren't hitting the ball well lately. even if they did win three of four from the defending world
