Coed Housing Policy Is Revised

All freshman and sophomore woman students admitted to the SIU Carbondale campus after Dec. 6 must live in University housing if it is available, according to V. H. Broertjes, coordinator of housing.

The new policy has been brought about by an increasing number of vacancies in University women's housing. Earlier last month the Housing Office said that Smith Hall, Thompson Point, was to be changed into a men's dormitory in face of growing vacancies.

However, because of student opposition to the proposed move, an ad hoc committee of students and administrative officers recommended against such a change.

Based on the committee's recommendations, the proposed change in Smith Hall was canceled and the new policy of women's housing was brought into effect, according to Broertjes.

In connection with the new policy, advertisements and personal letters have been sent to all incoming woman students, informing them to fill the vacancies in University residence halls, the release stated.

Broertjes has also asked the members of the student government and those who participated on the ad hoc committee to extend the information about the new policy by word of mouth to any new women who need housing for winter quarter.

Senate Asks Query Into Radio Setup

The Carbondale Campus Senate has authorized a committee to investigate the new radio broadcast network set up by the Athletic Department.

The committee's purpose will be to determine whether this is an unnecessary duplication of facilities.

In other action, the Senate sent to committee the bill calling for a raise in the activity fee of $4 a quarter. The bill, if passed next term, will then be presented to the SIU Board of Trustees for approval.

The announcement by the Housing Office requiring all girls who register after Dec. 6 to live in University housing was read to the Senate.

A bill to establish an appeals board for motorcycle riders was sent to committee. The committee will meet with the University Vehicle, Traffic and Safety Committee, to discuss the matter further.

A resolution, introduced by George Paluch, student body president, commending John Zink, elections commissioner, on the handling of the recent election was passed unanimously.

A bill that would regulate the distribution of tickets for the SIU-Evansville basketball game was sent to committee for further study.

A report was presented to the Senate by Ronald Centanni, city relations commissioner, on his conference with Jack Hazel, Carbondale police chief.

The report outlined the training and operational procedures of the police force.

The senate tabled a bill, presented on the recommendation of the Southern Riders Association, that would require cyclists to wear helmets and pass both a driving and written test.

Pharmacy Move Brings Shutdown

The SIU Pharmacy will be closed from Monday, Dec. 20 to Monday, Dec. 27 when it will be moved from its present location to 115 Small Group Housing.

Health Service officials said students who are under continuous medication should make arrangements in advance for enough medicine to carry them through that period if they are going to be on campus.

Shawn O'Sullivan and Friends

Solitary Single Male Resident of Neely

Plies Charms on 816 (Count 'em) Coeds

By Ron Hustedde

On a campus where men outnumber women two to one, Shawn O'Sullivan has it made. He's the only unmarried male living in Neely Hall, home of 816 coeds.

But before you men go dashing off to the Housing Office to apply for a room at Neely next year, it's only fair to tell you that Shawn is two-years-old.

He came by his enviable position because he's the only child of Mr. and Mrs. James O'Sullivan and his mother is head resident at the hall.

What happens to Shawn should happen to every guy just once in a lifetime. Shawn is petted, pampered, pawed and pleased. He's kissed, cuddled and caressed. He's hugged and girl-handled to boot.

And like every red-blooded American boy, albeit still a bit young for such goings on, Shawn seems to love it. Shawn, who is not above using all his Irish charm to get his way, is never lacking for a date, although officially they are called babysitters. In fact, the girls, afraid that he might lack companionship, volunteer for duty and the lucky lad ends up with six to seven "dates" a week, probably the best average for any single male on campus.

He's been the guest of a birthday party at which he got a Saluki sweatshirt and a whole lot of kisses and hugs. And chances are that Santa may get a slipped disc hauling all the Christmas presents he's sure to get from his many female admirers.

The girls have found that Shawn, like all males, can be a bit perverse at times. But they seem to love him all the more for it and only mildly scold him when he runs his toy tractor into their ankles. Even the coed who found him watching with more than casual interest when she kissed her boyfriend goodbye couldn't get too upset.

Shawn seems to sense the power he holds over the girls, especially when he finds them at the candy machines in the dorm. First he tries to charm them out of a candy bar and when that fails, his big blue eyes take on a sad and pleading look. That usually does the trick, much to the dismay of his parents.

Shawn tries not to play favorites himself but chances are if you went looking for him you'd find him visiting one of the tall willowy blondes who lives on the ninth floor.

He may not be exactly what you might call a playboy of the western world, but there are few guys on campus who would not swap a place on the deans list for Shawn's spot on campus even for one day.

McNeil and Smith Score 18 Each

The Salukis, playing without starting forward Ralph Johnson, coasted to an easy 68-47 victory over the University of Chattanooga Friday night in the Arena.

Nelther team was impressive in the contest, but the Salukis were able to hold on to an early lead to stay on top all the way.

Johnson, a 6-7 junior, suffered a torn cartilage in his right knee at practice Thursday. SIU athletic officials said he would probably undergo surgery on the knee Dec. 21 and may not see action the remainder of the year. Until the mishap, Johnson was Southern's top rebounder and second leading scorer.

Clarence Smith, Johnson's replacement, came off the bench and tied with George McNeil for scoring honors with 18 points. The 6-4 junior's play was one of the few bright spots of the night, also leading the team in rebounds with 10.

Southern jumped off to a hot start and rang up a quick 11-1 lead before the Moccasins scored their first goal with the game seven minutes old. Smith startled the crowd in the early surge as he accounted for six of the Salukis' first 11 points.

The tempo slowed down at that point, and the teams traded baskets throughout most of the remainder of the half. At the intermission, the Salukis were on top 31-21.

Southern shot a cool 29.5 in the first half with Randy Goin pacing the squad with 11 points. McNeil was right behind with 10 and Smith, who cooled off after his fast start, had six.

The two teams matched each other with short scoring streaks early in the second

Lipstick and Rouge for Men?

You Have Got to be Kidding

By DeMaris Lowry

Laughter, and, "You must be kidding," were the responses given by all of the SIU coeds who were asked, "What do you think of cosmetics for men?"

After the coeds had regained their composure, their general thought seemed to be that it is all right for men to wear cologne or after-shave, but they should not wear cosmetics. Most of the girls also agreed that they would not go out with a date who showed up wearing cosmetics. That is, if they could tell he was wearing cosmetics.

So, as far as the girls at SIU are concerned, the companies who are coming out with a line of cosmetics for men may as well stop production. The girls like the man as he is today. They do not want to revert back to Elizabethan times when the men dressed in silks, velvets and lace, and wore cosmetics. The girls seemed most emphatic in their belief that males should not wear lipstick.

"I wouldn't go out with a boy who wore lipstick. It wouldn't seem right for the girl to come home from a date with his lipstick on her face," said Sue Redick, a freshman from Lexington, Mass.

"I wouldn't like cosmetics on men, especially lipstick. I would not want my boy friend to appear for a date with powder and lipstick on. I can't picture what they would look like. I've seen boys with lipstick on for Halloween parties, and they look ridiculous," said Bea Zinser, a senior from Joliet.

Susie Schick, a sophomore from Elgin, said she did not think men should wear any makeup. She thought that actors were the only men who had a reason to wear makeup.

"I think that it's okay for a guy to wear a medicated cover-up. After all, they can be embarrassed by bad skin the same as girls, but I don't think they should wear makeup," said Nancy Wright, a junior from Carterville.

"I would not go on a date with a boy who used hair bleach or cosmetics. I want those things for me, not him," said Rita Stergis, a freshman from Herrin.

Several of the girls had answers to the question, "What would you do if your date showed up at your door wearing makeup?"

Denise Perigo, a freshman from Rantoul, said that she would tell him to go wash his face before they went out in public. Sharon Newton, a freshman from Hurst, said that she would suggest to her date that they stay home for the evening.

The response of local coeds notwithstanding, a lot of men will be wearing cosmetics next year, according to several national magazines. In fact, one estimates that several million dollars worth of men's cosmetics will be purchased next year.

Fragrant Virility?

Men Smell More Like Women; Cologne Ain't Sissy No More

By Bob Reincke

The sweet-smelling, high-heeled, bright-suited modern male may not be the sissy some people think he is.

He could be the new American model of masculinity. For man's ideas about his appearance seem to be going through a new period.

The view was once held by many that the perfumed, impeccably dressed male was not the most virile creature walking the face of the earth. But this view seems to be fading.

The American male seems to be increasingly conscious of his appearance (and aroma) to others, especially the opposite sex. Some people, however, think he has crossed too far over into the realm of femininity in his quest for a neat appearance.

These critics point to popular styles such as high-heeled shoes, tight, tapered slacks, long hair, and male cosmetics as examples of a loss of masculinity.

Even the manufacturers of men's clothing have admitted that the American male is drifting towards femininity. George Richman, president of Richman Brothers, one of the largest firms in the business, said he saw definite signs of femininity creeping into male fashions.

Most critics of men's styles especially point to the influx of men's toiletries as a sign of their loss of masculinity. Three or four years ago you might have been clouted with a beer bottle for telling a man he smelled nice. Today, he is liable to anoint you with a few precious drops of his favorite fragrance for the same remark.

The entire field of men's cosmetics is one of the fastest-rising businesses in America. Today practically every drug, department and men's clothing store offers a wide variety of colognes, after-shave lotion, soap and other niceties to the male customer.

A recent survey conducted by "Men's Wear" magazine offers ample proof of the boom in men's toiletries. Of the stores in the sample, 11 per cent were adding or planning to add a men's cosmetics department. Of those already having such departments, 74 per cent were expanding the present facilities.

Do SIU students think these developments are moving the American male toward femininity?

"I think this is definitely true in the case of cologne," said Jim Bollinger, a sophomore from Edwardsville. "But I don't think it is true of hair styles for men of college age. Maybe it is though for the younger boys with their longer hair."

"I think some young men are going to extremes, especially with hair styles, and are getting more feminine," said Dennis Sanders, a junior from Panama. "But I don't think it is true of colognes and clothes. I like cologne myself."

"This is definitely true of the new types of cologne," said Dennis Pastor, a senior from Pana. "Men used to stick to the more masculine fragrances, but now they're turning to brands that smell more and more like the girls'. I don't think the clothes have really changed that much except for the younger kids, but as for hair styles, that's something else!"

Terry Berry, a sophomore from Morrisville, thought that as long as men follow current styles they shouldn't be called effeminate.

"I do think some of them ought to cut their hair or pin it up to keep it out of their eyes though," he noted.

Another student was a bit more explicit. "I don't think they should let some of these long-haired characters in the men's room, said Craig Penwell, a sophomore from Pana.

"I like the continental-style clothes and colognes. I have six kinds myself, but I don't like any when they're carried to extremes. Overall, I don't think men are getting more feminine, I just think they're looking for something new."

If men are looking for something new, they should find it from the British. The "Mods," those mop-topped, lacy-cuffed lads from that country, are currently hepped on face powder and lipstick. So don't cross one of them, he's liable to flog you with his powder puff.

Senate Wise to Delay Fee Bill

In view of late developments, the Campus Senate acted wisely Thursday night, when it voted to send the athletic fee increase bill to committee for further study.

President Morris indicated that in any case the Board of Trustees would be unlikely to act on the bill at today's meeting, thus removing the primary argument for prompt passage by the Senate.

More complete investigation will be necessary. Consultation with the administration, especially on the legality of establishing a fee for the Carbondale campus only, can enhance the measure's chances for enactment.

The task now is to make a thorough study of the bill in order to present a good, legally acceptable case for the fee increase to both the administration and the Board of Trustees.

Letters to the Editor

Fantasticks: First, Read 'Oxford Companion...'

Dear Mr. Gill

I would like to take exception to your Dec. 4 review of The Fantasticks. As a member of the company, I may incur a slighting remark of "Oh, just sour grapes," but as a member who was complimented by you, I would answer "No, thank you," to even the kind words, for the whole review was pointless.

I feel, Mr. Gill, that you have missed the entire point of the play, from its subtlest manifestations to its broadest implications. Seemingly you disliked the entire tradition and spirit of the commedia dell'arte, upon which this play is based. You assumed it was the fault of the characters, and proceeded to criticize the actors.

You must understand that this play has a very long history: its origins are in the commedia which flourished in Europe, especially Italy, from the sixteenth to the eighteenth centuries. The tradition of these acting companies touring the country with their repertoires of little plays spread all over Europe and into England. They were "of the profession" (dell'arte), but were also practiced and cultivated by academic amateurs.

The first of these companies to reach Paris was the Ganasa company in 1670. Rostand, writing Les Romanesques (The Romanesques—the predecessor of The Fantasticks) in 1894, drew freely on this spirit, these plots, the tradition of verse, and even the character names of the commedia much as he did when writing his other plays.

It was in the late 1950's that The Fantasticks opened on off-Broadway with a simple stage, a piano, and a few props. It has since enjoyed success all over the world; the company with which I played in the summer of 1964 took their production to the International Theatre Festival in Nancy, France.

I cannot help but feel that your lack of familiarity with the characters in the commedia tradition leads you to your misjudgment of the play. These are natural, human types, but apparently you need an introduction:

El Gallo is a derivative of the commedia "Captain;" he was "used as a rival,...also an independent role. Rostand strengthened the importance of his role in the play, but left him pretty much the braggart-coward of the commedia;" his El Gallo, which he called Strafover, was a model for his later Cyrano de Bergerac. The present script makes him much more warm and human.

The "toughest" of the commedia parents was "Pantalone," who was "given to reprimands, tirades, and long winded advice." The other father was not quite as intelligent as Pantalone, a dramatic technique of pairing unlikes for comic effect. In the commedia, both fathers had many names, but now, perhaps, you can understand why the most cruel insult Hucklebee receives in the play is to be called a "pantalone!"

The boy and the girl are drawn almost exactly from the commedia, right down to the boy's literary ambitions. It is awesome, in a way, to see how these roles, three hundred years old, are accepted by high school and university audiences all over the state.

The old actor and the Indian are variants in the "servant" tradition. These two characters are dei zanni, the clowns. They also employ the technique of pairing wit and stupidity, but in a far more exaggerated way than the two fathers. This is a parallel that unfortunately you missed when you stated that the part of the boy's father was "overplayed...to the point where it became ridiculous." The name of the old actor, "Henry Albertson," is simply an anglicized mouthing of the commedia "Harlequin." Mortimer, the Indian, is Harlequin's commedia opposite, "Pulcinella," who enjoyed such a great success in England where he had the name of Punch in the Punch-and-Judy shows. In the process he picked up a Cockney accent.

I fear that I may have made our attempt at recreating the commedia sound like a rather academic sort of lark, an intellectual play for intellectuals. This is not so, not in the least. In respect to The Daily Egyptian's request that letters be of reasonable length, I will not cite here the numerous letters of appreciation and respect that the touring company has received from all over this state as well as the Job Corps camp at Breckinridge. The fact is that we have played a play and revived a tradition for these people, and they have understood it. They have not felt compelled to imitate a witty Time style or affect a pseudo-adult taste as you have, Mr. Gill.

As Mr. Eric Christmas said after a review in the Southern Illinoisian of his 1964 production of King Lear, "I can understand a bad review, but I simply cannot abide a stupid one." Please do not feel compelled to write any further dramatic reviews until you are qualified to do so. Perhaps an evening with The Oxford Companion to the Theatre would put you on the level of the rest of Illinois.

POINT OF VIEW

Mississippi Education Needs Federal Funds

by Robert M. Hutchins

It is hard for anybody living outside Mississippi to have any sympathy for the inhabitants of that backward area. Its legal system and its social habits are a disgrace to our country. The existence of Mississippi is the best argument for a drastic alteration in the relations between federal government and state government.

Yet candor compels the admission that the historical relationship between the federal government and the states, which is not Mississippi's fault, is one of the causes of Mississippi's plight.

There must be some connection between the educational system of a community and the cultural level it achieves. There must be some connection between the amount of money a community spends on education and the kind of educational system it has.

No one would go so far as to say that increasing the amount spent on education will guarantee a higher quality of instruction. All I am suggesting is that there must be some connection between expenditures and results.

The historical relationship between the federal government and the states has meant that education has been left to the states. This might not have had serious practical consequences if all the states had had equal resources, an equal number of children and an equal interest in educating them.

The official figures estimating current expenditure per child in the public elementary and secondary schools of the country for 1964-5 have just been published by the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

They show Mississippi where we all knew it would be, at the bottom of the list. The figure for that state is $273, as compared with $790 in New York. With all allowance for differences in costs, and with all reservations about the causal connection between dollars and quality, a Mississippi child must be getting an education far inferior to that offered his contemporary in New York.

If Mississippi were to blame, all the rest of us could be quite self-righteous about this. But Mississippi is not to blame.

On the contrary, the state spends a higher proportion of its personal income on public education than the national average. That average is 4.74%. The percentage for Mississippi is 5.34. This is higher than the effort put forth by such rich states as Connecticut, Delaware, Maryland, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio and Wisconsin. It is higher than New York.

HUTCHINS

It is almost twice as high as the District of Columbia.

In short, Mississippi, a poor state with lots of children, at the bottom of the list when it comes to current expenditure per child, surpasses 35 states in the proportion of its personal income devoted to public schools.

The probabilities are that in a financial sense Mississippi is doing all it can. If the Mississippi child is to have a fair show, the American people will have to come to his aid. Let us hope that the Johnson educational program will reach him soon.

Rating Professors Is This Year's College Fad

College students across the country are engaged in a fad this year and it has nothing to do with stuffing telephone booths, wrecking pianos or swallowing goldfish.

It's called the "rating game" by some students and all it involves is evaluating a class or professor that you have had.

The "game" has caught on throughout the country and several schools have begun to implement plans for their students to assess the ability of their instructors.

At City College of New York, 40,000 questionnaires are to be distributed by student government leaders so that all students will have a chance to rate instructors.

Yale honors and undergraduate students are to be given a voice in the appointment of faculty members to tenure positions.

At Berkeley, the student newspaper has published a booklet listing the good and bad points of faculty members.

At Michigan State University, a student instructional rating report has been introduced which will give instructors student criticism on a private level.

At Iowa State University students will fill out evaluation sheets on five different courses. The evaluation returns will be tabulated and published in booklet form for public purchase.

At Bowling Green University, student opinion is being molded for a professor evaluation program.

At St. Bonaventure University, talk is also centering about a rating for professors' ability.

The Universities of Minnesota and Washington have already adopted such programs.

Advocates of such a program feel it is necessary so that students play a bigger role "in determining the type of education they get."

They also feel that only the students can truly assess a professor because they see him as he really is.

Some feel that such a poll enables some departmental chairmen who are "painfully aware that some members in their departments are ineffective, but protected because of tenure."

But all advocates agree that the ratings will inform the professor of his shortcomings. If the same complaint occurs frequently, the professor will realize that there is something wrong with his teaching methods and will correct them immediately.

At Yale faculty members seemed generally in accord with the executive-committee suggestion and many students regarded it as a qualified victory for those who picketed last spring on behalf of a former associate professor of philosophy who was popular but perished because his peers were unimpressed by his scholarship.

One objection to the rating program is that professors would not be subject to criticism or evaluation because it may jeopardize their position with other professors or students.

Advocates usually counter with the argument that since the professors are paid by the public, they should not be immune to criticism and are in the same position as politicians, senators and congressmen.

Another strong criticism is that education is not a commodity for sale on the market.

The rebuttal offered is that a college education is one of the most prized and expensive commodities on the market today. The college education is something to be valued, not only for sociological reasons, but also economic.

What some administration people feel is that the project would cause discontent among the faculty members. "There has to be a low man on the totem pole, but this wouldn't necessarily make him a poor instructor. Also, there is a natural resentment to be evaluated," said one university president.

More objection of the proposal concerns the validity of the rating. Some feel it would be a judgment of a teacher's personality rather than his ability.

To avoid this some schools are qualifying their evaluations to recent graduate students who can "give a more valid rating."

Another objection brought up concerns tenure. Will the rating affect the teacher's tenure on campus? Advocates retort by asking another question: Should tenure be the reason for keeping a professor or should the quality of education he can give the student be the major factor?

The problem of coming to a justified rating also concerns some people. Just how do you come to make a justified evaluation? What are the criteria?

Some feel it is impossible because, as one MSU associate professor of philosophy put it, "No one has ever decided exactly what a university is supposed to be doing. It's hard to evaluate how well someone is functioning until you determine what his function is."

"If carloads upon carloads of students sign up for a particular course term after term, are you going to promote the professor? Or are you going to demote him?"

"I find it hard to think that student opinion would not be considered at all," he said.

Another Big Ten school official said that in an abstract course, the subject matter may not make as deep an impression on the student until later. "Students can take a course and think they aren't learning anything and detest the professor," he said, "but realize afterward that it is one of the best courses they have had."

The controversy is far from being settled, but some schools such as MSU are using a rating program on a one year trial basis.

Schools such as Reed, Antioch and Bennington already grade their professors and in Oregon, state college teachers compete for $250,000 in bonuses voted by the legislature to stimulate better teaching with the students doing out the A's and B's.

Speaker-Ban Laws Disputed

Campus Free Speech Is Linked To Freedom of Dissent Issue

The controversy surrounding the question of academic freedom has become a critical issue in the politics of several states and, indeed, the nation at large. Not only is it debated by college students and heretofore obscure professors, but also governors, senators and ex-presidential candidates.

Freedom of speech on college and university campuses has become inescapably intertwined with the broader question of freedom of dissent in our society, and for many is linked to specific movements of grievances.

In North Carolina a "speaker-ban" law was hurriedly pushed through the state legislature in the closing hours of the 1963 session. This unique law prohibits "any known member" of the Communist party or anyone who has invoked the fifth amendment's protection against self-incrimination in loyalty investigations from speaking on state-supported college and university campuses.

The proponents of the law were motivated by diverse concerns, ranging from anger over civil rights demonstrations in the state capital, participated in by some University of North Carolina faculty and students, to general popular unrest over the "liberal" teaching at the state university. One of the chief backers of the law, State Sen. Thomas White, has candidly commented that "I don't believe there's a Communist... over there (Chapel Hill), but there might as well be as long as the people think there is. They need to reassure people along this line."

A special commission appointed by Democratic Gov. Dan Moore has held public hearings and is now considering proposals to modify or repeal the law; its recommendations are due very soon. The Southern Association of Schools and Colleges has hinted at withdrawing accreditation.

The heavy hand of such a law (or ruling to the same effect) is felt in its administration. Narrow-minded college and university administrators, worried about maintaining good relations with state legislatures, can virtually control the flow of speakers from the outside.

What is at stake in these battles is the "raison d'être" of colleges and universities, what David Truman, dean of Columbia College has called "an unembarrassed intensity about matters of the intellect, a hierarchy of respect... for competence and imagination, an attachment to the fragile values of civilization."

To assert these "fragile values" is not to deny the obligation of the colleges and universities in this country to provide responsible leadership. Rather, it is to reaffirm this obligation. The soapbox is not and must not be a substitute for the classroom. But the campuses of the nation must constantly warn against the misguided search for a static security. As Justice Douglas once said, "The fact is that security can only be achieved through constant change... There is only an illusion of safety in a Maginot Line. Social forces, like armies, can sweep around a fixed position and make it untenable."

Alabama Jury Acquits Three In Slaying of Boston Minister

SELMA, Ala. (AP)—Three white men accused of killing a pro-integration Boston minister, the Rev. James Reeb, were acquitted Friday by a jury in state court which deliberated less than two hours.

A courtroom filled mostly with white spectators applauded when the three separate verdicts were read by jury foreman William W. Vaughan of Selma, an oil company official.

The defendants—Elmer L. Cook, 42, manager of a novelty company; Namon O'Neal Hoggie, 31, an auto mechanic; and his brother, William Stanley Hoggie, 37, a salesman—displayed no emotion.

The accused men had been on trial four days under first-degree murder indictments growing out of the fatal beating of the Rev. Mr. Reeb on a Selma street the night of last March 9.

The Unitarian minister, 38, and father of four children, had come to Selma to take part in the struggle for Negro voting rights and had participated earlier that day in an unsuccessful attempt to march in protest from Selma to Montgomery.

When the spectators applauded the jury's verdicts, Sheriff James G. Clark Jr. and his deputies on duty in the courtroom as bailiffs called sharply for order. Circuit Judge L. S. Moore told the crowd to "sit down."

More Demonstrations May Follow Verdict

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)—One of Dr. Martin Luther King's top aides expressed regret Friday at the acquittal of three white men in Selma, Ala., but added, "I guess this is the sort of thing you get accustomed to in Southern justice."

The Rev. Andrew Young of King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference said there probably would be an increase in demonstrations especially in Selma as a result of the acquittal.

The trial went to the jury at 2:55 p.m. (CST). The verdicts returned at 4:30 p.m.

Cook and the Hoggie brothers shook hands with friends who swarmed around them and posed for photographers. Cook put his arm around his blonde wife to have their picture made.

Shaking hands with Cook, defense attorney Joseph T. Pilcher said, "I am glad it worked out all right." He asked his clients not to make any statements.

The verdict followed by one-week convictions of white men in two other racially related Alabama slayings. A white jury at Anniston convicted a white man of murder in the shooting death of a Negro and another white jury at Montgomery convicted three Ku Klux Klansmen of federal conspiracy charges in the slaying of a white civil rights worker.

"I was quite pleased with the verdict, of course," Pilcher said. "But it was not unexpected. It was the only verdict which would have been consistent with the evidence."

Deputy Dist. Atty. Virgins M. Ashworth, who handled the prosecution, said he did not as a rule comment on verdicts. "I try these criminal cases and do the best I can," he said. "Then it's up to the jury."

Dist. Atty. Blanchard McLeod, who had said when the trial started that he had a weak case, declined comment.

Before the jury began its brief deliberations, it was admonished to put aside any racial prejudice as it considered the testimony and evidence.

All three defendants were tried simultaneously but the jury was instructed by Judge Moore to return separate verdicts because each man was indicted separately.

Johnson Gives OK to Plans For New High-Speed Bomber

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—President Johnson gave the go-ahead Friday for a new high-speed bomber to cost an estimated $1.75 billion by the time 210 of them are in operation by 1971.

To be known as the FB111, it will be a modification of the F111, the controversial fighter once called the TFX.

The Pentagon's civilian and uniformed chiefs conferred with Johnson for more than three hours at his ranch near Johnson City. Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara later told a news conference here about plans for the new bomber.

McNamara said the FB111 will fly twice as fast as the latest model of the B52, have equal range, and far greater capacity to penetrate enemy territory. The latest B52 has a speed of about 650 miles an hour and 9,000-mile range.

The defense chief told of plans for the new bomber when asked for his comment on criticism by members of Congress and others of his decision to retire 425 older B52s and all B58s over the next few years.

"They spoke too soon," McNamara said.

McNamara said the next session of Congress will be asked to authorize the entire $1.75-billion FB111 program, but declined to estimate how fast the money will be spent.

He said, however, that the first of the new bombers will be in operation in 1968 with all to be ready by 1971.

McNamara said the FB111 would be capable of strategic and tactical missions, and equipped to carry either nuclear or conventional bombs. He placed its lead capacity at 50 high-explosive bombs weighing 750 pounds each.

Mystery Fireball Was Large Meteor

By The Associated Press

A fiery object which streaked through the sky over northern states was identified by astronomers Friday as a meteor of unusual size.

White-hot pieces of the speeding chunk of cosmic debris apparently struck the earth and were blamed for setting a number of grass and woods fires.

In Michigan, several children found strange metallic particles which may have been thrown off by the disintegrating fireball as it plunged through the air Thursday night.

Brian Parent and Larry Jones, both 11, of Livonia, Mich., said they picked up a piece of lightweight grayish fused metal about the size of a baseball which fell into a field.

Smaller chunks of similar material were found by children in Warren, Mich. A search for similar evidence was under way in states ranging from New York to California.

Dr. Fred C. Hess, an associate astronomer at New York's Hayden Planetarium, said the object unquestionably was a meteor.

As it became incandescent from the friction of its high-speed passage through the atmosphere, Dr. Hess said, it blew up and scattered fragments over a wide area.

Reports of the brilliant object came from Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana and parts of Canada just at dusk. A similar phenomenon, apparently a separate meteor, was spotted later in California.

Marines Battle Reds On Coast

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—U.S. Marines shot up outlying guerrilla platoons Friday and, teaming with Vietnamese troops, sought to trap a regiment or more of hard core Viet Cong who had dug in to hold a coastal valley south of Da Nang. But it was slow going.

Eighty miles down the coast, U.S. 7th Fleet gunners drove off two battalions of Viet Cong besieging Duc Pho. Casualties among the government garrison at Duc Pho, 29 miles southeast of Quang Ngai City, were reported light.

The three-day-old coastal battle remained the focal point of war that now appears to be costing the United States about $6 billion a year.

The American Marines, some freshly helicoptered into combat from the carrier Valley Forge, found marshy ground and other features of the terrain impeded their maneuvers to encircle the Viet Cong.

As explained by Lt. Col. Leon Uter of Miami, Fla., commander of one of the Leatherneck battalions: "We've cut their retreat into the hills in the west. Now we want to close the loop on them."

But a senior Marine officer told newsmen hours later: "Our dragnet has been extremely hard to implement."

This officer said he believed from 200 to 500 Viet Cong have been killed, largely by artillery and air strikes since the battle erupted Wednesday with a Red attack on a Vietnamese ranger battalion. Vietnamese losses also are considered heavy.

Casualties among the Marines, some of whom were committed Thursday under a screen of official secrecy, were reported to be light.

DEAN RUSK

'Last Chance'

Rusk Says U.S. Is in Viet Nam To Prevent World War Three

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Secretary of State Dean Rusk said Friday the United States is fighting in Viet Nam to prevent World War III and working to build a lasting peace because "we shall not have the chance again."

"It is of the utmost importance" that the Communists clearly recognize the United States will live up to its commitments in Viet Nam and other world trouble spots, Rusk said.

"Otherwise the structure of peace right around the world could disintegrate," he told 1,000 labor delegates to the AFL-CIO's 10th anniversary convention.

While fighting in Viet Nam "we must get on with organizing the peace" through the United Nations and other international organizations.

"We shall continue to gnaw at the problem of disarmament and try to break through the fog of distrust."

Rusk expressed hope that disarmament meetings in January will "make some progress, particularly on non-proliferation of nuclear weapons."

He emphasized nations must prevent a recurrence of global conflict, warning: "The survival of man is no longer a figure of speech."

Delegates whistled, applauded and cheered for three minutes.

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, in a speech, linked the war in Viet Nam to labor's aspirations.

"The AFL-CIO has recognized that a great society cannot and should not stop at the water's edge," he said.

"The America that we build must be an inspiration and a source of strength to all mankind."

Humphrey added: "Today young Americans are dying in Viet Nam not for the safety of strangers but for the safety of all free men."

Like administration leaders who addressed the convention Thursday, Humphrey pledged "to fight hard and win" repeal of Section 14B of the Taft-Hartley Act that "has spanned in 19 states 'right-to-work' laws."

Astronauts Fight Stuffiness While Waiting for Gemini 6

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Their noses stuffy and their spacecraft shutters sometimes closed against the hot sun, the Gemini 7 pilots Friday streaked toward the halfway mark of their 14-day orbital journey.

Flight surgeons tried to prescribe an antiallergic, decongestant pill for Navy Cmdr. James A. Lovell Jr.

Unless it's "for medical research, I'd prefer not to," Lovell replied.

Otherwise, both he and Air Force Lt. Col. Frank Borman were in fine shape as their Gemini 7 spacecraft clipped off the miles and minutes toward Sunday's date in space with a Gemini sistership.

The Gemini 7 astronauts were kept fully informed on the progress of their fellow Gemini 6 astronauts at Cape Kennedy, Fla.

The Gemini 6 is to blast off at 8:54 a.m. (CST) Sunday for a 103,000-mile space chase after Gemini 7. When they meet, they will fly formation for perhaps six hours, coming perhaps within inches of one another.

It is a full dress rehearsal for a moon-flight technique essential to a moon-landing. It has never been done in space before.

At mission control, officials set up to both handle Gemini 7's flight and a simulated flight by Gemini 6, rehearsing again the difficult space pursuit and rendezvous.

Harris Sentenced To 60-75 Years

FAIRFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Charles (Black Charlie) Harris was sentenced Friday to 60-75 years in prison for a double murder of which he was convicted Nov. 3.

Judge Charles E. Jones of Circuit Court sentenced the 69-year-old ex-convict after turning down attorneys' motion for a new trial on two counts of murder and an arson count.

Harris was given a term of 60-75 years on each murder count, and a term of 10-15 years for arson. The terms are to run concurrently.

Harris, formerly listed by the FBI as one of its 10 most-wanted fugitives, declined comment about the sentences. But as he turned away from Jones, he remarked: "Thanks."

The prohibition era gang member began trial Oct. 11 on charges he slew a former girl friend and the man with whom the prosecution charged Harris was competing for the woman.

He also was charged with burning the rural house in which the bodies of Jerry Meritt, 28, and Mrs. Charles Newton, 32, were found in August 1964.

His attorney, Fletcher Lewis of Murphysboro, said the case may be appealed to the Illinois Supreme Court.

Officials said Harris probably will remain in Wayne County Jail at least until a Dec. 18 hearing on his attorneys' motion for dismissal of a perjury indictment.

UNICEF Has Happy Birthday

OSLO, Norway (AP)—The United Nations Children's Fund—UNICEF—received the 1965 Nobel Peace Prize Friday and the fund's executive director declared it was "a wonderful incentive to greater efforts in the name of peace."

"You have given us new strength," said the Henry R. Labouisse of the United States, accepting for UNICEF a gold medal and a check for $54,440.

The fund, which celebrates its 19th anniversary Saturday, aids an estimated 750 million children in 118 emerging countries.

The Oslo ceremony was one of three honoring the 1965 Nobel winners.

Four of the Nobel prizes were awarded in a companion ceremony in Stockholm where Swedish King Gustav VI Adolf handed them out.

The awards were made on the 69th anniversary of the death of Alfred Nobel, the Swedish inventor of dynamite who set up the peace prize to whoever "best promoted the fraternity of nations."

Adult Education

Woman, 89, 'Broadens Life,' Adds School to Her Activities

At 89 most women are content to sit in a rocker and reflect on the good old days.

But that's not the case with one area woman that age. She not only works at a regular paying job and keeps her own house, but has enrolled in a business English course offered by the SIU's Division of Technical and Adult Education.

"I think the course is a very important step in broadening my life," she explained.

The woman, who is shy and declined to give her name, is one of some 9,474 persons ranging in age from 18 to 89 who are taking adult education courses offered by SIU in about 25 southern Illinois counties.

Last year more than 480 adult education classes were offered by SIU in about 75 area communities.

Why? Let's let one of them explain in their own words:

"The reason for wanting to finish my high school education really started 22 years ago," one explained. "I was a junior in high school at the time. The second World War had started and jobs were many with good wages, so I quit school with the idea of working and helping my mother and father."

She said that in the meantime she met a young man, fell in love and got married.

"We thought we have the world at our feet and could accomplish anything in our lives," she continued. "We did have some good happy years and 12 healthy, normal children. But as the children grew older, my husband realized that we were helpless and money did not seem to have the same value. It left us with a feeling as if we were just children, too."

She said her husband became a nervous wreck and an alcoholic as the strain became unbearable. They separated.

"I was left with the responsibility of providing a living for the family," she went on. "So to get at least a job with a living wage and to eventually get my family back together, I need a better education. I want us to be able to live as an average working American family."

To most of the students, the reason for taking an adult education course may not be as urgent. In many cases, it is simply to satisfy a desire, or fulfill a vocational deficiency.

Courses include bookkeep-

ROSE CORNELL

... She's learning shorthand

ping-accounting, electronic computer operation, oil painting, mathematics, foreign language, electronics, carpentry, machine shop, engine repair, private pilot ground school, radio, sewing and income tax procedures.

The most popular course, according to Glenn E. Wills, adult education supervisor, is a high school review in preparation for the general education development test. This year, 655 people seeking their high school equivalency certificate are enrolled in this course.

Wills said the Adult Education Division tries to fill the need of the community and tailor its programs to the greatest benefit of the people enrolling.

The measure of success perhaps is best summed up in this statement from one of the older women who is enrolled in one of the courses:

"I have been asked by friends why I am wasting my time taking this course at my age," she said. "The joy I get from learning to study again would be compensation enough even if I don't benefit in any other way from it."

Music Degrees Receive Approval

Two graduate degrees in music offered in the School of Fine Arts have been formally approved by the National Association of Schools of Music.

They are master of music and master of music education, offered since 1957.

The association, to which SIU belongs, is the official accrediting agency for music programs in U.S. universities.

Robert Mueller, Department of Music chairman, said it is association policy to approve graduate programs officially after they have been in operation for some time. Graduate students at SIU may pursue the master of music degree in three separate areas: theory-composition, history and literature, and applied music.

Voigt, Vaughan To Take 6 Month Sabbatical Leaves

John W. Voigt, executive officer for General Studies, and Andrew T. Vaughan, assistant executive officer for General Studies, will take sabbatical leaves from January to June.

Vaughan will fulfill a two-fold purpose while he is on leave. First he will study a program of general education in various educational systems in Europe. He will visit 16 countries from Sweden to Spain.

Also, Vaughan will have appointments with nine organizations involved in educational television in Europe.

While on leave Voigt will prepare a manuscript for a book.

Amos Black will be in charge of the General Studies program for the winter and spring quarters.

SIU Chemist Schmulbach Is Korean War Veteran

C. David Schmulbach, 36, has accepted a position as associate professor of chemistry at SIU this year.

He worked earlier as an assistant professor of chemistry at Pennsylvania State University.

A veteran of the Korean conflict, Schmulbach served with the U. S. Navy from 1951 to 1954, attaining rank of lieutenant.

He is a graduate of the University of Illinois, where he earned a bachelor of science degree in 1951 and his doctorate in 1958.

He has written 16 papers on the subject of inorganic polymers, stabilization of uncommon oxidation states of representative elements, and the effect of pressure on the rates of racemization of solid coordination compounds.

Organizations of which he is a member include Phi Lambda Upsilon, Sigma Xi, New York Academy of Science, American Chemical Society and Chemical Society.

He and his wife, the former Barbara Williamson, have three children.

George McCreery, competing in the 167-pound division, McCreery, from Palatine, claimed an individual championship in the Illinois invitation at Champaign last weekend, along with eight of his teammates.

Tony Kusmanoff, 160 pounds, is the only returning member from last year's squad who will be competing today, other than McCreery.

Don Schneider, 137 pounds, is back after recovering from an injury last year that prevented him from competing.

Newcomers to the team who are competing in Bloomsburg are Terry Magoon, 115; Wayne Lenhars, 123; Dan Ross, 130; Al Lipper, 145; Julio Fuentes, 152; Aaron Bulow, 177; Al Bulow, 191; and Bob Roop, heavyweight.

Today's four-team meet is called an invitational quadrangular.

Finals 'Tune Up' Set by Cyclists for This Afternoon

The first annual "Let's Loosen Up for Finals" motorcycle tour and trail ride will be held today by the Southern Riders Association.

The cyclists will leave at 1 p.m. today from the tennis court motorcycle parking lot and proceed to Little Grassy Lake for a short trail ride. The run will be canceled in the event of rain.

There will be no charge for the tour and all area cyclists are invited to join the event.

Saluki Gymnasts in Iowa This Weekend; Will Travel to Next Meet Over Holidays

With the start of the dual meet season just around the corner, Southern's gymnasts will be putting the finishing touches on their routines this weekend at the Iowa Invitational gymnastics meet at Iowa City.

Since there will be no team title at stake and with finals just two days away, Coach Bill Meade will not send a full team to the meet.

Sophomore Paul Mayer and juniors Rick Tucker and Larry Lindauer will be the only three Salukis in the all-around category. All three finished in the top 15 last week at the Midwest Open in Chicago.

Junior Frank Schmitz, the NCAA free exercise and trampoline champion, will be competing in those two events and in the long horse.

Single event men will include Mike Boegler on side horse, and Hutch Dvorak and Dale Hardt on trampoline.

Rusty Mitchell, former Saluki gymnast and an assistant to Meade, will once again be competing for the all-around title.

Mitchell won the all-around championship last week at the open in Chicago, although he failed to win a first in any event.

The Iowa Invitational will be the last meet for the gymnasts until after Christmas.

On Dec. 26, the gymnasts will interrupt their vacations to attend the United States Gymnastics Federation Eastern Clinic in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

The Salukis will first put their 37 consecutive dual-meet victory streak on the line Jan. 15, at Iowa State University.

The first home dual meet will be Jan. 28, against Mankato state.

Rehab Captures League Lead In Close Faculty-Staff Bowling

Rehab took over first place Monday in the Faculty-Staff Bowling League by taking three of four points from the University Center.

Rehab was led by Gerry Pieters and B. Vincint. The two had series* of 562 and 572, respectively. Pieters bowled the high game of the year at 254.

The entire league tightened as the Grad A's rose up from the cellar to take three points from Counseling and Testing.

Salukis Win Again, Down Chattanooga

half before the Salukis began to pull away. Hitting on goals by Goin, McNeil and Dave Lee, Southern built up a 47-29 lead and was never in trouble after that.

Along with Smith and McNeil, Goin wound up in double figures for the victors. He pumped in 13 points and captured nine rebounds. He was followed by Boyd O'Neal with seven points; Lee had six, Roger Bechtold four and Bill Lacy two.

Travis Ashley led Chattanooga with 14 points, followed by Jim Coppinger with 10.

The Salukis once again led in rebounds but this time with only 41 to the Moccasins' 32. Southern had been averaging 61 rebounds to their opponents' 40 prior to Friday night.

Although the Salukis made only 29 of 71 attempts from the field, they were more accurate at the free throw line. They hit 10 of 12 tries, which is considerably better than their efforts in the first three games.

Here's a gift that'll be dear to those near you for months.

And months.
