Gus says you may have to read it again to get it straight—they're charging students to pay for dorms that they don't live in and they're paying the chancellor to build a house that'll be his to keep.

Shaw gets monthly housing allowance

By Randy Roguski
Staff Writer

Chancellor Kenneth Shaw will receive a $1,070 monthly housing allowance beginning Jan. 1 because, say the SIU trustees, that will be more economical than building another University house.

The Board of Trustees made the decision at its meeting in Edwardsville Thursday. The allowance will increase Shaw's annual salary to $81,090.

Shaw has been living in the SIU-E presidential house since his promotion from SIU-E president to the chancellorship last year, but will move, probably by Jan. 15, to make room for recently-appointed SIU-E President Earl Lazerson.

The board considered building another University house for Shaw but decided that the housing allowance would save two-thirds the costs of building another house, according to board member Harris Rowe.

Rowe said another University house would cost about $150,000 to build. Board Chairman William Norwood said that the $150,000 estimate is conservative.

"One hundred and fifty thousand dollars won't buy too much of a house these days," Norwood said.

He estimated that the SIU-E presidential house would cost about $270,000 to duplicate.

In addition to the construction costs, the board said that annual costs of running a new University house would amount to about $23,150—$13,000 for maintenance, $5,630 for housekeeping and $4,500 for utilities.

Rowe said Shaw's housing allowance "was really the only option."

Norwood said, "If we expect our executive officers to perform in the manner in which we ask them," we must provide for their residences.

The allowance will be adjusted annually for inflation, according to Rowe.

Shaw has a house under construction in Edwardsville. Two rooms of the house will be furnished, at a cost of about $10,000, by SIU, the board also decided Thursday, but the furniture will remain SIU property.

Norwood said the housing allowance, combined with

Shaw's salary, will be comparable to what other state universities pay their top executives. He said the total pay will be "just less" than what the president of the University of Illinois receives and "slightly more" than most other university presidents are paid.

U of I President Stanley Ikenberry receives a $77,500 annual salary, although he is provided with a house by the University.

Salaries of SIU administrators, some of the best paid state employees, were criticized during General Assembly budget hearings last summer by state senators who said the salaries are too high. The Board of Trustees later instituted salary guidelines

Board of Trustees approve 3 fee increases for next year

By Mike Anton
Staff Writer

Full-time students will pay $26.70 more a year in fees next year as the result of three fee increases approved Thursday by the Board of Trustees.

Proposals that will increase the bond retirement fee $6.60 a semester and change the name of the fee to the revenue bond fee were passed at the board's meeting in Edwardsville. A $6-a-semester increase in the student recreation fee and a 75-cent increase in the student activity fee were also approved.

Board Chairman William Norwood termed the fee hikes "serious increases," but said they are necessary and represent the "delicate balance" that exists between inflation in the cost of education and the need to maintain services to students.

The increases will bring the total fees paid by full-time students to $346.80 a year from the current $320.10.

Despite opposition from the Undergraduate Student Organization, the Graduate Student Council, and dissenting advisory votes from both student trustees, the board unanimously decided to increase the bond fee to $9.60 a semester.

The fee, created in March 1979 to pay off bonds on housing and the Student Center, was instituted after the Illinois Board of Higher Education ruled that retained tuition, which the University had been using to pay off bonds, must be used only for academic purposes.

Originally $24.60 a semester, the bond fee replaces retained tuition with fee revenues and is designed to increase every year over six years. The increase approved Thursday is expected to raise $1.6 million during fiscal 1982.

Student trustee Mark Michalic told the board, "This is part of the question of where higher education is going. I'm concerned that we're putting the price of education out of the reach of some students."

USO President Paul Matalonis, also present at the meeting, said students still "don't know why" the bond retirement fee is needed.

"Simply changing the name won't help," he said. "There needs to be an intense effort to inform the students why they're paying this fee."

Although the IBHE decision banning the use of retained for tuition for bonds is not binding, the administration has claimed that IBHE's power to impose budgetary constraints has

Reagan fills 8 Cabinet positions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan filled eight Cabinet-level jobs Thursday, naming Wall Street financier Donald T. Regan as treasury secretary, confidant Caspar W. Weinberger as defense secretary and personal attorney William French Smith as attorney general.

All the nominees are white Republican men. Transition officials said they hoped to include blacks and women among the remaining seven Cabinet-level posts.

Reagan, who missed the formal announcement in a break with tradition, did not fill his incoming administration's top-ranking Cabinet post, secretary of state.

Retired Gen. Alexander Haig, Richard M. Nixon's last White House chief of staff, remained the leading choice for the State Department post, and was likely to be named by the weekend or early next week, according to sources in the president-elect's transition team.

Other Cabinet-level selections announced Thursday were: Budget director, Rep. David A. Stockman, R-Mich.; CIA director, Reagan campaign chief William J. Casey; secretary of health and human services, Sen. Richard S. Schweiker, R-Pa.; secretary of commerce, Connecticut industrialist Malcolm Baldrige; and transportation secretary, deputy Republican Party chairman Drew Lewis.

In a prepared statement released with the formal announcements, Reagan said: "From varying backgrounds, they bring a common dedication to be true to the hopes and dreams expressed by the American people on Nov. 4."

In the Cabinet selections,

Reagan turned to members of his own campaign inner circle and veterans of the Nixon administration.

Regan, chairman of Merrill Lynch & Co., the nation's largest brokerage house, reportedly was the last of the eight nominees to be chosen.

As a national financial leader, Regan carries prestige to the treasury post, the administration's most important economic position. The president-elect has made the nation's economic problems his priority and had been looking for a candidate who would be widely respected both on Capitol Hill and in the business community.

Weinberger, one of Reagan's most trusted advisers, served as budget director and secretary of health, education and welfare during the Nixon administration.

Muskie offers retaliation plan to possible invasion of Poland

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — U.S. Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie presented a four-point plan Thursday for political and economic retaliation by NATO countries if the Soviet Union intervenes in Poland, Italian officials said.

Muskie was not available for comment on his proposals to a NATO foreign ministers meeting trying to package a strong and unified response that would avoid the splintered approach the Western alliance took after the Red Army moved into Afghanistan a year ago.

But officials in the Italian delegation said the American program called for suspension of East-West negotiations, withdrawal of NATO-member ambassadors from Moscow and other East European capitals, cancellation of trade and credit deals between the West and the Soviet Union and halting cultural exchanges.

Officials from the 15 North Atlantic Treaty Organization nations said that although specific retaliation plans would be discussed, it was unlikely that the foreign ministers would fix details before winding up the meeting Friday.

Ministers said guidelines would be set and if the Soviet Union moved against Poland an emergency NATO session would be called to authorize specific steps.

"The ministers made it clear that if there were an eventual Soviet intervention in Poland the consequences would be very grave on all levels — diplomatic, political, economic and defensive," said French Foreign Minister Jean Francois-Poncet.

Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo told a news briefing that the measures would have to be unified to be effective, but said the ministers didn't want to spell out specific proposals.

West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher said the alliance wanted to send a signal to the Soviet Union that any intervention in Poland would result in a catalogue of responses from the West.

The ministers said there was unanimity at the meeting that strong measures were necessary, and France's Francois-Poncet — whose country has traditionally taken independent stances within NATO — asserted he saw no "appreciable differences of viewpoints among the allies as to what should be done."

Responses could include a walkout of NATO-bloc delegates from the Madrid security conference.

Lawyer for Chapman withdraws

NEW YORK (AP) — Wearing a bullet-proof vest, the man accused of killing John Lennon was brought to court Thursday so his attorney could withdraw from the case. The lawyer arrived in the company of plainclothes police, but denied reports he had received death threats.

Lennon's body was cremated, and his widow asked admirers worldwide to prepare for a 10-minute vigil Sunday for the former Beatle.

Two of Lennon's fans committed suicide in despair over his death.

Security was tight as Mark David Chapman, 25, of Honolulu was brought from his psychiatric observation cell at Bellevue Hospital for the hearing in Manhattan Criminal Court.

"This case is becoming an albatross to me," the court-appointed attorney, Herbert Adlerberg, told Judge Rena Uviller in asking to be excused. Ms. Uviller named attorney Jonathan Marks, a former federal prosecutor, to replace Adlerberg.

Outside the court, two unidentified fellow lawyers quoted Adlerberg as saying he had received death threats because he represented Chapman.

Adlerberg told reporters his practice was interrupted by a flood of telephone calls from the curious. "I received no threats," he said.

Adlerberg said the district attorney had suggested the detective escort because there would be a crush of reporters and the chance of an incident.

Bill signed to clean up toxic dumps

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter signed into law Thursday legislation creating a $1.6 billion environmental superfund to permit the government to begin the cleanup of dangerous chemical spills and toxic waste dumps.

Carter had personally lobbied for passage of the legislation, which he called "landmark in its scope and in its impact on preserving the environmental quality of our country."

Lawmakers have been at work on the bill for more than a year. It is intended as the congressional response to such environmental disasters as Love Canal, the neighborhood in upstate New York that discovered it was built atop an abandoned chemical dump which was slowly poisoning its residents.

War could cause gas price hike

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — The Illinois Board of Education voted 13-1 Thursday to urge a veto of controversial legislation requiring the state to pay for the transportation of most parochial and private school students.

But Peter Monahan of Northfield, the lone board member who opposed the resolution, said it makes it appear the board has an "anti-parochial, anti-Catholic bias."

Gov. James R. Thompson is being hit from both sides on the issue. A coalition of public school groups has lined up against the bill, while the powerful Illinois Catholic Conference is for it.

Thompson's chief spokesman, David Gilbert, said last week that the governor has not made up his mind whether to sign the bill.

He vetoed a similar, more expensive bill last year, saying it would be an administrative headache and the state couldn't afford it.

Veto urged on busing legislation

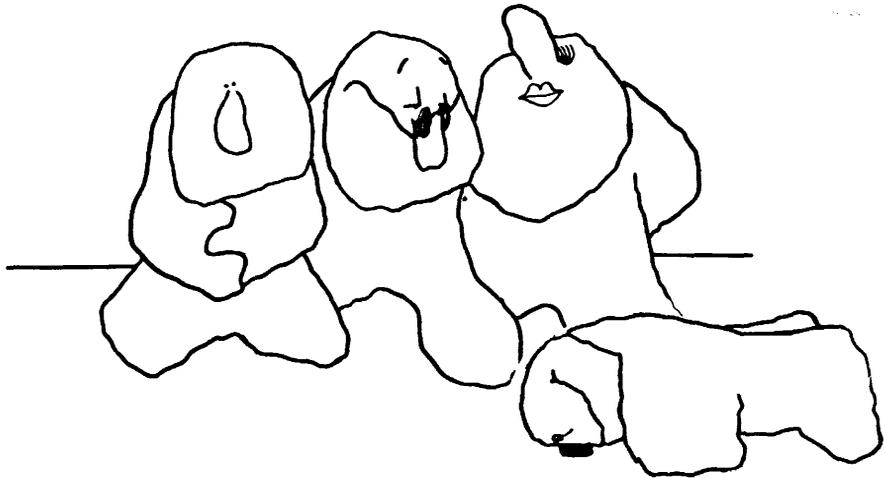

WASHINGTON (AP) — The direct and indirect effects of the Iran-Iraq war could increase U.S. gasoline prices by 40 to 45 cents a gallon by summer, according to a congressional analysis made public Thursday.

The analysis, prepared by the Congressional Research Service of the Library of Congress, blamed rising crude oil prices, tighter supplies, continued oil stockpiling and the recouping of company profits lost during this year's gasoline glut.

The projection was based on Iran and Iraq ending their war by next spring and beginning to rebuild their oil empires.

"A continuation of the war into spring 1981 and beyond will likely render these figures invalid," the study warned.

Class action status sought for sex discrimination suit

By Randy Roguski
Staff Writer

A motion to amend a sex discrimination suit brought against SIU-C and 11 other Illinois universities has been filed by two Northern Illinois University women's athletics coaches who initiated the suit.

The suit was filed as a class action in February to represent all women's athletics directors and coaches at the 12 schools. The court has not decided whether the case should be considered a class action.

If the coaches are allowed to amend the complaint, they will ask the court to define the universities named as a class of defendants, according to Edward Diedrich, a Dekalb lawyer representing the two NIU coaches.

"It would really be class action two ways," Diedrich said Wednesday. "If the judge didn't think the women classify as a class of plaintiffs, we could still call all the universities into court as a class of defendants."

The suit was filed in U.S. Circuit Court for the Northern Illinois District by gymnastics coach Roberta Farrick and volleyball coach Deborah Brue. It charges that women's athletics directors and coaches are discriminated against in the areas of salaries, health insurance, fringe benefits, working conditions and facilities and the length of their contracts.

Diedrich said he expects a court decision on the amendment motion within three weeks.

Shari Rhode, SIU-C legal counsel, said she expects the court to rule against the NIU coaches on both class action requests. She said Diedrich is unable to show that NIU and SIU-C are in some way related, which is necessary for a suit to be classified as a class action.

"In my personal opinion, it's going to be very difficult for him to get this case certified as a class action," Rhode said. "In the farthest realm of my imagination, I cannot imagine how the two schools can be related."

Rhode said the best Diedrich can hope for is that the court will permit the coaches to bring suit against NIU.

In addition to the 12 state schools, the suit names as defendants the Illinois Board of Higher Education and all members of the Mid-America Conference, which comprises NIU and nine out-of-state schools.

The suit asks that the schools be ordered to comply with Title

Effective fall semester

On-campus housing rate increases OK'd

By Randy Roguski
Staff Writer

Residents of on-campus dormitories will pay $200 more for their rooms next year, and residents of other University Housing will also pay more rent as a result of action at the Board of Trustees meeting Thursday in Edwardsville.

Beginning fall semester, the rate for an on-campus dorm room will climb to $1,992 a year. A housing contract will be billed in eight equal amounts, with the first and fifth amounts to be prepayments for fall and spring semesters.

Rates for family and other University housing was also increased. At Southern Hills, rates will go to $175 per month for efficiency apartments, a $19 increase. Rent for one-bedroom apartments will rise $20 to $193, and the rates for unfurnished two-bedroom apartments will increase $21 to $201. Furnished two-bedroom apartments will be rented for $208, a $22 increase.

The monthly rate for two-bedroom apartments at Evergreen Terrace could jump $23, to $221, and rent for three-bedroom apartments may go up $28, to $241.

The board-approved increases at Evergreen Terrace must be approved by the SIU Foundation, which built the apartments with a federal loan, and the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The board cited inflated food, maintenance and debt service costs as causes of the increases. As a measure to cut costs, University Housing will feed this summer's on-campus residents at the Student Center.

Rent at University Courts will go up $20, to $220, and rent at Elizabeth Apartments will increase $20, to $200. Rates at Small Group Housing will increase $47 per semester, to $455.

Paul Matalonis, president of the Undergraduate Student Organization, told the board that although the Student Senate supported the increases, he feels continued housing increases will result in empty rooms in University housing.

"The University will not be in a good position," Matalonis said. "On behalf of the students, I plead with you to find other ways to keep costs down."

Debbie Brown, president of the Graduate Student Council, told board members that the GSC had voted to support the increases at Evergreen Terrace, but that there had been several abstentions to the vote.

Brown asked the board to "note our concern with the successive increases residents have been faced with the last few years."

Death must be balanced with concern for all

By Scott Canon
Staff Writer

"Beatle John Lennon Slain," the tragic headline declared. Students discuss the news in solemn, depressed voices. The shooting of John (now referred to as though he were a close personal friend) has prompted saddened attitudes among the student body.

There can be no doubt that the world has lost a gifted artist who helped shape modern music.

Although it's rather touching to see students so moved by the death of someone they knew only through lyrics and newspaper clippings, the real tragedy is the attitude of students.

Funny, isn't it, that the death of a popular rock star provokes more concern than the starving to death of thousands of people a day in the Third World? I guess talk of starving children in Ethiopia just doesn't make very interesting conversation.

While many students will talk about Lennon's death this week, I wonder how many of them will contemplate the situation in Poland, which may result in massive bloodshed. But then again, how many of those Polish workers or Russian soldiers ever hit the top of the charts?

A series in the Daily Egyptian this past week described Jackson County's own poverty. But apparently, since none of those poor people ever cut an album, they must not be quite as important as John.

I don't mean to sound cold or callous—it's only natural to grieve when someone who has touched our lives is gone. The point I'm struggling to make is that students need to examine their emotional priorities and balance their hero worship with their concern for the lives of all people.

I hope we all can find room in our hearts for the starving, the oppressed, the poor AND John Lennon.

Lennon's message was love

It is pure human nature to mourn the loss of anyone we hold dear to our hearts. But, when this loss is so sudden and unexpected, so uncalled for, our grief is compounded miserably. Eventually life goes on, the wheels keep turning and we carry on once again with familiarity. But, there is no real reason why this readjustment back to normalcy should have to always be so standardized.

When the clouds finally pass, I hope that we will begin to see things in a brighter light. If there can possibly be anything positive to be said on the passing of John Lennon, it is this:

In the past decade our generation has been drifting away from his teachings and sinking with the sins of materialism and me-firstism. Through his untimely death, I pray that all of us may stop and think for a moment about our worldly position. Ask yourself, "When was the last time I really went out of my way to help out another human being?" Answer yourself honestly if you can.

Ponder if you will, the path we are travelling. Please do not look forward, but look back instead. Look back at what one man did to make life infinitely better for so many.

How did he do it? Certainly not through invention nor by technological perfection. He did it by using a simple quality which cannot be mass produced on an assembly line. It is something all of us have inside ourselves if we but only search for it.

John Lennon improved our lives by rediscovering a thing called love. To prove his life was not in vain, we would all do best to follow the example he set for us. Think about it.

Crosswalk is dangerous

Is going to the Rec Center to better one's health worth the chance of being mangled by a car?

I'm referring to the crosswalk on Grand Avenue that has a sign with flashing yellow lights indicating a pedestrian crossing. I'm not sure what that sign means to Carbondale drivers, but in other cities across the nation it means yield to pedestrians.

How come nothing is being done to make sure drivers slow down by the Rec Center so pedestrians can cross?

I am not sure that the priorities have been set in the right manner because as it stands right now, the chances of getting across that area of Grand Avenue alive are about the same as seeing a good record review in the Daily Egyptian.—Grant Cynor, junior, Accounting

Abortion not like the holocaust

I feel it necessary to respond to a specific issue raised on abortion in Mr. Helmer's letter of Dec. 8.

Abortion: cannot be equated with the holocaust. As a Jew, I am infuriated when individuals use this atrocity as supportive evidence for their position on abortion.

Hitler tried to eliminate certain groups of people. There is absolutely no similarity between genocide and an individual's reproductive freedom.

The use of this argument is erroneous, unproven and confuses the issue of abortion.

One can only hope that individuals will examine the abortion issue and base their views from sources of information that are accurate, reliable and non-misleading.—Daniel Klein, doctoral student, Health Education

Lennon's death was senseless

I have never written a letter to this newspaper before, but the events of last Monday night compel me to raise my pen. The death of John Lennon to all who savored his music signified the passing of a musical genius, the likes of whom will never again be heard.

When I first heard the pathetic news, I was saddened and then sickened and infuriated by this senseless act of wanton depravity.

I was saddened by the loss of John Lennon's future music and infuriated by the fact that this great country, which is so free and righteous, could produce an individual who would commit such a crime. If this person is mentally ill, then I feel simple profound anguish at this turn of events. If, however, this person killed this talented man with cold-blooded malice and egocentric glory-seeking then may God damn his soul to hell.

I do not wish to minimize other murders and sufferings in the world, but when I see someone go out of their way to mercilessly kill a joyous thing, then I have to pause and grieve for our generation.

Isn't it a pity.
Isn't it a shame.—Dave Eakin, Book World, Carbondale

Swastika is meaningless

Of all people, a student of psychology should know that symbols are only as important as the value which we give to them.

If we decide that the swastika deserves no recognition, that it has no social comment, its importance rests solely within the individual. This symbol is distasteful only because it has been associated with a disastrous period in history.

Most individuals of our world have learned, I hope, to rise above such degradation. Individuals who place such a great value on meaningless marks and symbols will be condemned to live in darkness no better than the regime which the swastika at one time represented.—Ed Hedden, Broadcasting Service Staff

The world stopped for a moment when John Lennon died

By Bill Crowe
Entertainment Editor
"Well, if it (Beatle music) was the best, so what?"—John Lennon in his last interview, published in the January, 1981 issue of Playboy magazine.

The world was shaken, perplexed and desperately saddened by the brutal slaying of former Beatle John Lennon on a New York City street late Monday night.

Lennon's death was treated by the mass media with the urgency and immediacy usually reserved for the passing of prominent world leaders.

Howard Cosell cut into the Monday Night Football telecast; radio stations immediately canceled their regular programming and played endless hours of Beatle and Lennon music as a tribute; huge chunks of both network and local TV news coverage were devoted to the story Tuesday, and all three major networks followed that up with 10:30 p.m. news specials taking an in-depth look at both Lennon and the legend of the Beatle phenomenon that still lives today.

Lennon devotees, Beatlemaniacs in general and fans of fine music stood a silent vigil outside the Dakota, Lennon's luxury apartment where he lived for many years and where he died Monday. They were still there 24 hours after his death, hanging flowers on the front gate and listening and singing along to taped Lennon and Beatle music. Such an outpouring of love and respect for a popular musician has taken place only once before—after Elvis Presley's death in 1977.

It is clear that Lennon's death has stood the world on end. It is a time of monumental sorrow and grief for millions of music fans around the world. However, the question must be asked: "Why?"

The Beatles have not written music, recorded or performed together since the release of "Let It Be" in 1970, a decade earlier. Lennon pursued a solo career which was often stunning, but also had its low points. He had not released an album (until the recent "Double Fantasy") in five years.

The question which is raised again by

1965

Lennon's death is: "What did John Lennon, Paul McCartney, George Harrison and Ringo Starr create that has gripped the music industry and turned the four from Liverpool into legends; enigmas if you will?"

The answer is simple, at least to one local musician—the Beatles were much more than great singers and songwriters; as a group, they were so consistently creative and innovative that the Beatles were always a step ahead of the times, both musically and sociologically. They set trends for the '60s rather than following them.

"When the Beatles came along, they were so creatively innovative over a period of years that it raised the creative level of rock an incredible amount," said Alexis Valk, an instructor in music and teacher of a course on rock and pop music at SIU-C.

Service gave time to say 'goodbye'

By John Ambrosia

"And in the end, the love you take,
Is equal to the love you make."
John Lennon and Paul McCartney
"The End," 1969.

Clad in a heavy overcoat with a scarf draped around his neck, the Rev. Theo Gill stood in Parking Lot 44, north of the Communications Building, and battled the cool temperature and wind.

Gill had come to the parking lot Tuesday night to participate in a candlelight procession to honor the memory of slain rock star John Lennon. The march was scheduled to proceed to the Student Center's Roman Room, where Gill was planning to deliver a memorial service for the ex-Beatle.

Gill said although Lennon wasn't a religious person, the memorial service was a good idea.

"Lennon wasn't by any means what you could call a supporter of organized religion," Gill, of the University Christian Ministries, said. "But I thought a service was a good idea. I think it's terrible, the way he died. The circumstances were very bad."

"But a memorial service isn't for the person who died; it's for those left behind. It's their way of remembering and saying goodbye to the person."

As Gill spoke, the crowd around him increased as more people gathered to participate in the march and service, organized by the Student Programming Council. Tom Stella, head of the SPC concerts committee, thought of and planned the activities.

Music blared from tape players and radios in several cars parked in the lot. Each was playing old Lennon and Beatles songs, each playing a different tune. As the various songs blended together, the sounds in the air rang out as a tribute to Lennon.

"When I heard the news of the shooting I had to pull my car over to the side of the road," said Sandy, a student. "I'm a little older than most students here, and I remember the Beatles a little better."

"When I heard about it, my reaction was total disbelief," said John, another student. "For a person who spent so much time fighting for peace to die in such a violent way is tragic."

The crowd, which eventually reached about 400, kept growing as the 7:30 p.m. starting time for the march drew closer. People huddled together to fight off the cold, many holding lit candles. Conversations abounded, almost all centering around the accomplishments of Lennon and how the Beatles and their music had touched so many lives.

"John always had the image of the humanitarian. He really cared about people. They were his main concern," one person said. "How could someone just gun him down in cold blood? It's one of the most puzzling things that's happened since Kennedy was shot."

The crowd was beginning to question whether or not the march was going to be carried out when Stella arrived and spoke to the participants, using a bullhorn.

"Thank you all for showing up tonight," Stella said. "I think you all miss and love John Lennon as much as I do, and I'm happy to see so many people coming out to honor him."

Following the speech, Stella led the crowd down Lincoln Drive across campus. Most of the marchers carried candles, stopping to help each other keep them lit whenever the wind would extinguish a flame. The aid of the campus police was required in getting the crowd safely across intersections.

Walking four abreast, the procession line was more than two blocks long, and those near the front of the line often lost sight of marchers in the back when the group walked along slight curves in the street.

"The line is long, but it's not long enough," said one woman.

Voices echoed out of synch throughout the line as various parts of the procession began singing "All we are saying is give peace a chance." Some were chanting the words, almost giving it the sound of a church mass.

The quotation is from a song co-written by Lennon with fellow ex-Beatle Paul McCartney in 1969. It became a popular anti-war slogan in the early 1970s. It was the last song Lennon and McCartney wrote together.

As the group entered the Roman Room, many still singing and holding lit candles, their voices blended with the start of the song "Imagine" being played through the room's speaker system.

Silence fell upon most of the crowd, which by now was sitting arm-in-arm across rows of seats, some weeping openly and hanging their heads down.

When all seats were taken, mourners had to stand in the back of the room, while others were forced to stand in the outside hallway because the room was filled.

During "Let It Be," the second song played, television camera crews set up equipment and began filming the crowd, visibly upsetting some people who were sobbing in the front rows.

Stella came onto a stage at the completion of the song, delivering a eulogy during which he called Lennon a "man who truly cared about mankind and didn't just sing about Peggy Sue, hounddogs and hot rods. He sang about his love for man."

Many used the radio to vent frustration over Lennon's death

By Karen Gullo
Staff Writer

The babble and laughter of small children were in the background as the soft, quivering voice of a woman came over the radio.

"I'm near 30 years old. I was a very young teenager when the Beatles were first popular," the voice said on WTAO's "On The Air" show.

"The lesson I learned from John Lennon was to carry love and now that he's gone I want the whole world to remember what he tried to teach us," the voice choked. "Let's try to do what he asked us to do and love each other."

The last words were barely audible as sobs overcame the voice. You could almost see the tears streaming down her face.

The night Lennon was murdered, radio stations in the Carbondale area were flooded with calls from listeners who wanted to know, "Is it true," "Did you hear" and, the hardest question of all—"Why."

Callers spoke in hushed, tearful and angry voices. Some called up and sobbed over the phone, others talked until they were overcome with emotion, hanging up before the tears came.

Most called to get it off their chests.

"I felt like a ton of lead fell on me," "I felt like one of family died," "I'm in a state of shock" and "I just can't believe it" were phrases frequently heard on the radio Tuesday and Wednesday.

Dave Miller, the WTAO disc jockey on duty Tuesday night, said a day later, "People looked to us as an information source that they could believe. But some people just called to talk. They were venting out their frustrations."

Live Earl Jive, also of WTAO, said, "Many people had pent-up emotions and you feel bad until you can express it. Radio is a two-way communication because you can hear and you can feel the response of other listeners."

Rick Dupraw, of WIDB, said, "People used radio as a vehicle to express what they felt. Many people made analogies to the assassinations of Martin Luther King and John Kennedy."

Most radio stations interrupted their regular programs to play non-stop Beatles music. Disc jockeys said that's what listeners wanted to hear—music that reflected Lennon's ideologies.

"One guy called to say he thought it was morbid to play total Beatles," Miller said. "I told him to change the station." Skip Thomas, WCIL disc jockey on duty Tuesday night, said that his station didn't play solid blocks of Lennon-Beatles songs.

"We thought it would bring people down too much to hear total Lennon. We wanted to remember John Lennon in a positive way," Thomas said. "Some people didn't want to be bombarded with it. Some people didn't care."

Most people, however, did care.

"Hello, you're on the air." "I've got a little three-week-old daughter here," the male voice said. "She'll never forget about him."

A baby's squall interrupted his words. His voice broke. "It's a great loss. Good-by."

Lennon albums are hot items

By Alan Sculley
Staff Writer

Sales of John Lennon albums and many of the Beatles albums have increased sharply in the wake of Lennon's death Monday, according to three Carbondale record stores.

"The new albums [Lennon's 'Double Fantasy'] went like hot cakes. There were people waiting at the door when we opened Tuesday," said Kevin Mechler, manager of Record Bar.

The only local store which still had "Double Fantasy" in stock on Thursday was Side One Records.

Steve Koteff, manager of Plaza Records, said Wednesday that his store had sold its remaining stock of about 175 copies of "Double Fantasy." Koteff said his suppliers are out of that album too, and he did not know when more copies would arrive.

Mechler said he had already re-ordered "Double Fantasy" from his suppliers and he expected to receive them on Monday or Tuesday.

All three stores reported Wednesday that Lennon's other albums were almost sold out, and that Beatle albums were also selling quickly, especially the more popular ones such as the "White Album."

Janet Hamilton, manager of Wuxtry Books and Records, said that a lot of people had been coming in looking for Lennon albums and asking what songs are on which albums.

Hamilton said, "I wouldn't sell a Lennon album to someone because he's greedy. I would only sell it one because he wants to hear it. We don't get Lennon albums very often anyway."

Another item which has been selling well in Carbondale since Lennon's death is the January issue of Playboy Magazine, which features an interview with Lennon and his wife, Yoko Ono. Managers of Campus News and the University Bookstore reported that sales of the magazine were up drastically.

Tom North, manager of Campus News, said that they will sell their stock of 200 to 250 magazines "very soon."

Mona Glenn, assistant manager of University Bookstore, said Wednesday that they had six copies left out of the more than 100 they ordered.

She said that there were a lot of Playboys in stock on Monday.

Both managers said they would probably not be able to order more copies because they usually get their full allotment of Playboys in the first shipment.

L. Thomas, a clerk at 710 Bookstore, said she could not estimate whether Lennon's death caused increased sales of Playboy because the magazine is usually the store's best seller.

However, Boren's IGA and Pick's Liquors reported that in sales of Playboy and there were still plenty of copies in stock.

World stopped for a moment when Lennon died

Valk, who plays both stand-up and electric bass, also plays jazz music at local clubs and performs with the University Symphony

"Their music was innovative and there was a freshness to the whole thing they were doing all around—movies, the music, their hairstyles and, later on, even their lifestyles, I guess," Valk added. "They were doing something different, something unusual, in almost every phase of their career. Their dress was different. They innovated the long hairstyles, then people started to follow suit."

The Beatles were a sensation in America from day one, according to Valk, who experienced Beatlemania in 1964 as a 21-year-old jazz music student at the Berkley School of Music in Boston, Mass. The Fab Four were much more than just another rock band. They were a breath of fresh air in a music business that had gone stagnant, he added.

"It was a completely new sound that, I think, everybody was ready for. Rock was at a creative low point," Valk said. "It's interesting to speculate what would have happened if they hadn't come along, whether rock would have kind of died out or what kind of turn it would have taken."

Rock writer John Swenson writes, in "The Rolling Stone Record Guide," that: "They wrote their own material, and somehow avoided the deadening effects of rock 'n' roll formulas: they employed chord patterns hitherto unknown to rock and underpinned them with thickened guitar chording and a pounding bass that had a harmonic as well as a rhythmic function."

Valk adds that the early Beatle singles, such as "I Want to Hold Your Hand" and "Please Please Me," featured vocal harmonies that sounded most like the Everly Brothers' work. He said their early work was not only revolutionary, but changed the course of music and the interests of the world's composers—and not only in the rock field.

"The innovations they came up with, in terms of the harmonies, the times and the form of the tunes, were way ahead of the time," Valk said. "For example, I had a classical composer tell me that the harmonies of their songs sounded to him like they're from Renaissance music, as opposed to other pop music which sounded like it was derived from romantic music."

He added that even a middle-of-the-road composer such as Burt Bacharach changed his style after the Beatle explosion.

"In the period up to the psychedelic type of tunes, which is when most of these songwriting innovations occurred, they influenced everybody. Anybody who wrote popular music was influenced by their stylistic innovations," Valk said.

In fact, Valk compares the Lennon-McCartney songwriting team to the greatest of all time, including the likes of Rogers and Hart. And that point becomes clear with simple facts and figures.

On April 4, 1964, the Beatles accomplished the impossible—their singles "Can't Buy Me Love," "Twist and Shout," "She Loves You," "I Want to Hold Your Hand" and "Please Please Me" (numbers one to five respectively) occupied the top five spots on the Billboard singles chart. Their career sales of both albums and singles are easily unequalled in the history of music.

"I counted it up and, in the first year of the Beatles (1964) in the United States, they had a total of 250 weeks on the charts with all the different records in the Top 20," Valk said.

However, success in the rock business can be fleeting. The money is often taken and run with. But Valk said that the key to the Beatles' undying legend was continual innovation and musical exploration into previously uncharted regions.

The Song Lives On. So Let It Be:

A Tribute to John Lennon

Yesterday the music left us,
the words are gone,

only a memory remains,
but the song lives on.

And somewhere in that strawberry field,
the songs of a past can be heard.

For the man of word and song is dead,

and only the good die young,
he was a nowhere man,
he was the walrus,

stealing his way across the universe.

But yesterday will not be back,
so they've torn the house down on Penny Lane.

But we'll get by with a little help from our friends.

We'll overcome the revolution and the belter
skelter in our nation.

So hail Michelle and Lucy,
for diamonds are forever, and they remain longer than the life.

But the life is gone,
so the song lives on.

And his soul has left us to take that trip down that long and winding road.

Last night in the Apple his music died.

You say goodbye and I say hello,

the man of song has died.

So let it be,
send me no invitation to your farewell,

but I do offer words of tribute, for the man of word and song—

So let it be.

Fans offered 'goodbyes' at service

 Gill followed with the service and compared Lennon with the prophets of biblical times because they, like him, preached peace and love, he said. Gill said, "The prophets' cry was John Lennon's cry. All we are saying is give peace a chance."

"Even if John Lennon sometimes missed the mark in his quest for truth, even if he sometimes overstepped the bounds, I suspect that God understands," Gill said. "After all, God is a creative genius, too."

Gill then asked the crowd to observe a minute of silence in memory of Lennon. While everyone stood silently with heads bowed down, noises of laughter and the clang of pinball machines invaded the room through a thin partition separating it from the cafeteria next door.

The program concluded with the playing of the song "Starting Over," the most recent tune released by Lennon. The crowd filed out of the room and those who had driven to the site of the march's start slowly walked back across campus.

There were still conversations about Lennon and the Beatles, but they were quieter than those earlier in the evening. Most walked with less lively, heavier steps than they

"I realized in that room that it's final. There is no more John Lennon," one observer said.

"But I guess that's wrong. There will always be a Lennon and the Beatles."

Lennon's death draws big reaction

When John Lennon and the Beatles died, people followed."

Roy Miller, SIU-C associate professor of political science, said that because of the untimely death of Lennon, the historical perspective of his political and social influence is probably being overstated.

"When an historical personage dies—Kennedy, King, Presley, Lennon—there is a tendency to overexaggerate their historical influence," Miller said. "Not to say that the people saying Lennon was a great humanitarian don't believe it—they do. But I think history will eventually lessen his influence."

Miller called Lennon a "creative giant in the music field," who helped, along with Bob Dylan, to create a social dialogue. But calling Lennon a person who set out to help mankind, at least in his early career, is an exaggeration, he said.

"Lennon didn't go into music to help mankind, he went into it to make money and a name for himself," Miller said. "I'm sure later in his career he said to himself that he would purposely do humanitarian things, but remember he was in the music business."

Mitchell said Lennon and the Beatles weren't the first in the music business to draw the reactions they did.

"When Frank Sinatra began his singing career in the 1940s, girls would attend his concerts and scream and swoon at his feet," Mitchell said. "The difference between him and the Beatles was that the Beatles were the first talent to come along during the TV era."

"More people could see the Beatles because of that, and because of jet planes the Beatles could get around to play concerts in more places. Also, they were the first band to make use of long-playing records effectively, so more people could hear them. People became involved and felt relatively close to the Beatles."

"TV tends to create celebrities."

One of the unusual aspects of the mourning for Lennon is that not only people who were young when the Beatles were at their height were affected by the death, but also current college students, Mitchell said.

"I think one of the psychological factors in this case, along with everything else, is that this was a true tragedy," Mitchell said.

"Lennon was the innocent victim in this case. He didn't cause his death. Elvis took a lot of drugs and people could say he helped cause his death."

"But that's not the case with Lennon. It's part of the classic definition of tragedy."

Friends refer to Chapman as compassionate and sensitive

CHICAGO (AP)—Mark David Chapman, charged with the murder of ex-Beatle John Lennon, was a compassionate worker with a "real sensitivity for kids" but was devastated by family and romance problems, two of his friends say.

Chapman, 25, who was arraigned Tuesday in New York for Lennon's death, had a troubled childhood in Georgia, which led him to become a runaway and start using drugs, said David Moore, who once roomed with Chapman for six months.

But Moore, executive director of the Duncan YMCA, had high praise for Chapman as a worker.

They met in 1975 while Moore was directing refugee resettlement at Fort Chaffee, Ark. Chapman was a team coordinator at the camp.

"He was just a fantastic kid," Moore said. "He was one of the most compassionate staff members we had. The problems of people really got in his gut," he added. "He cared. It sounds strange to say now, but he had a real sensitivity for kids. He was friendly and cheerful and was always willing to work an 18-hour day."

Moore said Chapman fell in love with a woman who persuaded him to enroll in Covenant College, a small Reform Presbyterian school in Tennessee, after the camp closed.

The woman "straightened him around," Moore said, and "she made him a Christian." But Chapman flunked out and after the woman dropped him "he became unglued," he added. "He was a real bright kid who just didn't have the discipline."

Moore said that as a roommate, Chapman "was a dedicated Christian who had been 'born again' with a firm religious faith. When we lived together," Moore said, "there was no pot, no booze, and we'd go to church each Sunday...."

After flunking out of school, Moore said, Chapman headed to Hawaii where he learned his parents were getting divorced. "Then he had a nervous breakdown," Moore said.

On the day Chapman left for Hawaii, the manager at a condominium where he worked as a security guard said Chapman signed a log sheet "John Lennon" instead of his own name.

Focus

The world stopped on the day that John Lennon died

After the fresh, invigorating sound of the original singles, the Beatles did not stagnate. They later ventured into such areas as Eastern mysticism (first on "Rubber Soul" and "Revolver"), the hallucinogenic drug culture of the mid to late '60s and, musically, the advanced production techniques of "Sergeant Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band" and "The Beatles" (fondly referred to as the "White Album").

Noting some of the Beatles' monumental contributions to the widening of rock's barriers, Valk pointed to their use of previously obscure musical instruments and forms and the blending of sounds with new production techniques.

Among the innovations Valk noted were:

—The use of the sitar on "Norwegian Wood," which led to the coining of the term "raga rock," music with a mystical quality about it.

—The initiation of "baroque rock" on the "Rubber Soul" album, including the use of the harpsichord.

—The use of advanced production techniques as a musical device, most prominently on the "Sgt. Pepper's" album. "Sgt. Pepper's" comes to mind as the most heavily produced, with the most extra sounds behind the straight music, and again they were way ahead of their time," Valk said.

—The initiation of psychedelic sounds and lifestyles in many of their works in the 1967 to 1969 time period, such as "Sgt. Pepper's" and "Yellow Submarine."

Beside the Beatles' aforementioned innovations in the pop music culture, the four were also adept at opening new inroads for the movie industry's depiction of rock music and its performers, especially in their first two film efforts, "A Hard Day's Night" and "Help!"

Creativity and innovation were the keys to the Beatles' amazing success story. However, according to Lennon, the fun had gone out of being a Beatle and he wished to concentrate more time on his married life and professional work with his wife Yoko Ono. He also said in the recent Playboy interview that he was dissatisfied with every record either he or the Beatles made.

But you can't convince the legion of fans who believe that the messages the Beatles delivered more than a decade ago are still vibrant and meaningful, even after the 1980s have brought with them the death of John Lennon, one of their messiahs.

How long will the Beatles and their legend sustain?

Valk's answer had a tinge of hope and undying respect to it: "Until rock dies; or until some style comes along and supercedes rock."

"I don't think they'll ever become dated."

Old England re-created by madrigals

By Liz Griffin
Staff Writer

Should a student wander into a Student Center ballroom at the right time from now through Sunday, especially if he's dazed from studying intensely for finals, he may feel as though he's been whisked back to the Middle Ages, like the Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court.

The gowned and suited guests are seated in the high-ceilinged room. The lords and ladies, the king and queen, sit at the long table and look upon all who are present. If the student squints, he might think the castle and snow-covered mountains serving as the royals' backdrop is actually a view through a large picture window.

They're nights of magic tricks, jests, songs, and dance; of hearty food and wassail. Trumpets and the harpsichord, the flute, recorder and lute help bring guests back to days of old. They are nights during which "merrie olde England" is somewhat recreated.

The event is the fourth Madrigal Dinner Concert, being held at the Student Center Ballroom this week through Sunday from 7 to 9 p.m. About 360 guests participated in the festivities Wednesday night, almost filling the large room. Tickets, $10 each, are not yet sold out for the Saturday night performance, according to Michael Blank, program and technical director of the dinner and assistant director of the Student Center.

This SIU-C event isn't designed to be historically authentic, according to Robert Kingsbury director of choral activities for the Madrigal Dinner Concert.

"It is the general impression of that period," Kingsbury said.

The feasts, with their informal entertainment, were originated during the 15th Century. Imported from Italy, the madrigals were revised by English composers.

Those who were properly trained—usually the nobility—were expected to be able to sing their parts unrehearsed during these feasts, according to Kingsbury.

But the participants in the recent Madrigal Dinner Concert did rehearse.

The 19 singers, doubling as the royalty, sang a medley of songs ranging from the 16th Century "Jubilate Deo" to the more recent black American "Christmas Spiritual."

Gowned ladies and gentlemen who were dressed in tights (SIU-C students and one of their choreographers, Sallie Idoine) performed Old English folk dances in the round.

Wearing a black gown and a pointed cap, the court magician surprised guests with his tricks.

Dan Nelson, or the white-faced juggler from "the land of Atlanta, Ga.," played with fiery objects.

"You friends, as we now bid adieu we pray our love has helped renew the joy of Christmas for each of you."

courthouse site
study committee will be selected

David Murphy

Staff Writer
An ad hoc committee to study financing, planning and site selection for a new Jackson County courthouse will be formed as a result of action by the Jackson County Board.

Under tentative plans, members of the committee, to be selected by the board later this month, will come from the local financial community, the Jackson County bar, board members and area residents.

"This prospect is new, and maybe people who use the courthouse regularly can point out some things that might otherwise be missed," said County Board Chairwoman Mary Nell Chew at the board's meeting Wednesday. Chew proposed forming the committee.

Chew said that she feels the board should get more input from the community before making a final decision on the courthouse site and its building plans.

The committee will make an initial report on its findings by March 1981.

The board decided to build a new courthouse and jail after a grand jury investigation early this year determined that the present jail facilities in downtown Murphysboro did not meet state safety standards. The board has set aside $416,000 in the 1981 budget to purchase land for a new building.

A final decision on what site to purchase has not yet been made, but the board has shown interest in purchasing the block of land directly east of the present courthouse. That site is occupied by Craine Furniture and Gillenberg Furniture.

"I personally will always pull for that site right there across the street," board member Tross Pierson said. "I think that site, as far as people who use it are concerned, is the best site."

THE PRICE OF POWER JUST WENT DOWN.

HOW WOULD YOU LIKE TO HAVE PERFORMANCE AT A 35 WATT PRICE?

YOU GOT IT

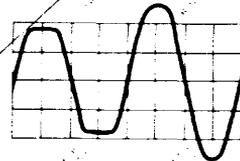

HERE COME THE HITACHI TURBOS!

The Hitachi Class G Turbo-Power Receivers have changed the rules about what you have to pay for power. They're lean, mean machines that work the same way those automotive turbochargers work. Energy efficient on the straight-aways. Superpower under stress. Just as the cars turbocharger gives the engine an extra gulp when it needs it, the Hitachi Turbos click in when they see a musical peak and double their power right before your ears. (Bye-bye, clipping distortion. Hello, dynamic range.) That's only half the Turbo story.

The other half's in your wallet. You don't have to buy a 70 watt muscle box. Buy the Hitachi 35 watt SR6010 Turbo and keep the change. (35 minimum RMS watts per channel into 8 ohms from 20Hz to 20kHz with no more than 0.04% total harmonic distortion.)

The Hitachi Class G Turbo-Power Receivers. Nothing is as powerful as an idea whose time has come.

Class action status sought for suit

 X of the Education Amendments of 1972, which outlaws discrimination against women in intercollegiate athletics, and Titles VI and VII of the Civil Rights Act.
 Another Title IX complaint filed against SIU-C, this one by a women athletes in 1978 with the now-defunct Department of Health Education and Welfare, is awaiting investigation by the Office of Civil Rights, an office of the Department of Education, Charlotte West, SIU-C women's athletics director, said the complaint probably will not be investigated until "a long time after next spring."

 Mary Francise O'Shey, director of the post secondary education division of the OCR, said the investigation has been scheduled, but the University will not be notified until just before the investigation because "we never know what may interrupt our schedule."

 West said the University has moved toward compliance with Title IX since the complaint was filed, but "not at the rate that it should have." If the Department of Education finds that SIU-C is not in compliance with Title IX, it could withdraw all federal funding from the University.

Three fee hikes OK'd by board

 forced the University to comply.
 SIU-C President Albert Somit echoed that feeling Thursday, saying the board in approving the increase, had been "pushed down this path."

Calling the increase "in effect a tuition increase," Chancellor Kenneth Shaw said that the University had little choice but to approve the increase.

"Quite honestly, and practically speaking, in midstream to have the IBHE change its position is unlikely now that the whole budget cycle is predicated on this decision," Shaw said. He added that "more creative ways" of dealing with the IBHE ruling could be considered, but that the options open to the University are limited and would probably include budget cutbacks.

The approval of a $6 increase that will raise the student recreation fee to $24 a semester was met with questions from student representatives about the possibility of the Recreation Center receiving more state funding.

The fee, originally $11.75 a semester during construction of the center in fall 1975, was increased in 1978 to $18 a semester. Somit said that with a possible increase in the use of the center for credit courses, the University may be able to get more state funding in the future.

Lady tankers to battle Auburn elite

By Michelle Schwent
Staff Writer

The battle of the freshmen women's swimming teams will take place this weekend when SIU-C hosts the Time Standard Invitational at the Recreation Building.

Missouri, Arkansas-Little Rock, Evansville, Auburn and SIU-C will compete, but women's swimming Coach Tim Hill feels his squad and Auburn will battle for first place in most of the races. No team scores will be kept.

The freshmen-laden Saluki team will be racing against some of the nation's and world's best swimmers, according to Hill.

"Arkansas and Evansville are pretty young and inexperienced," Hill said. "Auburn has a couple of swimmers who were on the Olympic team and are some of the better swimmers in the country, both men and women. You'll see three or four of these people in the national meet in March. I'm sure. Our swimmers aren't very well known, but I think they are relatively comparable to the Auburn swimmers."

Hill said the Salukis may hold an edge in the diving department and the meet could boil down to how each squad does in the individual medley events.

Julie Ginden, a freshman from Auburn, and Pam Ratcliffe, a freshman from Carbondale, are entered in both the 200-yard and 400-yard individual medley races, which Hill figures to be the most competitive ones.

"Julie is pretty well known in the swimming world," Hill said. "We could swim some of our stronger girls in some of the different events if we really wanted to win the meet, but we are concentrating on getting a couple of good outings in each session we swim."

The 400-yard freestyle relay squad of Barb Larsen, Diane Poludniak, Laura Brown and Ratcliffe will try to make the national qualifying time of 3:34.3. The Saluki foursome has swum a time of 3:35.5 in that event.

Hill expects to see a few records fall because of the tough competition and the pool itself.

"The facilities here are among the best in the country," he said. "The water is very deep, so there is less turbulence. The swimmers won't bounce up and down so much so the swimmers can swim faster. We've never had anyone break five minutes in the 500-yard freestyle in this pool but there are three or four people who could do it this weekend."

The Salukis have broken records in 18 of the 23 events this year.

The meet will not be scored because Hill doesn't want to put any additional pressure on his team.

"The competition is tough enough without scoring," he said. "Plus there is the added pressure of finals week."

Cardinals' Simmons rumored going to Brewers for pitcher

By the Associated Press

St. Louis Cardinals General Manager Whitey Herzog is reluctantly talking about trading catcher Ted Simmons, with an eight-player deal with the Milwaukee Brewers a likely possibility.

Herzog, who will double as the Cardinals field manager next season, was originally talking to Milwaukee about exchanging newly-acquired reliever Rolie Fingers for pitcher Larry Sorensen. The deal has broadened to as many as eight players with Simmons and Fingers going to the Brewers for Sorensen and outfielder Sixto Lezcano.

"We'll trade him," Herzog said after being informed by Simmons' agent, Larue Harcourt, that the catcher was unhappy with a plan that would have him playing first base next season.

"When they signed Darrell Porter, that sealed the envelope," Harcourt said.

After signing the free agent Porter to a rich contract, Herzog said Simmons would play first base with Gold Glover Keith Hernandez moving to the outfield.

Herzog, who has traded 25 percent of his 40-man roster, said he wants to make one more deal before returning to St. Louis Friday from baseball's winter meetings.

"I want to win one more pennant for Mr. Busch," Herzog said, referring to the Cardinals 81-year-old owner, August A. Busch. "I'm gambling, but I think I can pull it off."

Lady cagers aim for tourney title

"I hope we can capitalize on our height advantage," Scott said. "It could help our running game, also. Their center's an excellent player, though. We can't underestimate her."

The rest of the tournament field features Austin Peay, Troy State, Murray State, Indiana State, Alabama-Huntsville and the host Tennessee-Martin Lady Pacers.

If the Salukis can get past the first two rounds victorious, Scott expects Indiana State to be a likely championship game opponent. SIU-C has to learn to play an entire game, however, according to the fourth-year coach.

"We need to play for 40 minutes, a full game," Scott said. "We haven't done it yet."

Netters' tourney hopes fade with Little's injury

By Dave Kane
Staff Writer

Ball State University's sports publicists made Paul Blair think about his Saluki badminton team's potential in the not-too-distant future when they sent out a news release regarding the Ball State Invitational Tournament coming up this weekend. The release rated the Salukis a front-runner in the four-team meet to be held Saturday.

"I'll tell you, if Nancy Little were healthy, I'd probably say SIU would have just as good a chance as anyone," Blair said. "They (Ball State) said SIU was favored, but I don't think we will be with Nancy out. It still makes me feel good, though."

Little, a freshman, remains sidelined with a foot injury. Blair is saving her for the team's tougher competition next semester. Blair feels the key to his team's fortunes against Ball State, Illinois State and Eastern Illinois may depend on which team SIU-C has to play first.

"It's still quite possible for us to win it, but a lot depends on the EIU-ISU matchups," Blair said. "If we have to play EIU first, we may have trouble. If EIU plays ISU first, they can pretty much balance out each other while we play Ball State. Whoever plays Ball State early will be in a good position."

So Blair favors Illinois State and Eastern Illinois, with the Salukis not far behind, but thinks that all the teams have some intangible factors to overcome.

"Our players have had a tough week with finals and getting papers written," Blair said. "That's why Western Illinois dropped out of the tournament. Those pressures and how we handle them will have a big influence on how we do. I don't know how it will affect us."

Blair will use the same lineup that went against Eastern Illinois in last weekend's dual meet at Charleston. The Salukis showed improvement in their yearly battle with the Panthers.

Salukis, Huskies face similar tasks in cage dogfight sville by reserve guards Scott Russ and Rob Kirsner. Gottfried said he hadn't settled on a starting five.

"There might be some changes we'll want to make," he said. "But we'll look at the films and make our evaluations then."

SIU-C shot just 36 percent against Evansville, with Jones and Fayne shooting a composite two-for-15. The experienced Aces, who had four starters back from last year, stymied the Salukis with switching man-to-man and zone defenses.

"I think we've got good shooters, but we're pressing, especially Darnall and Johnny," Gottfried said. "Evansville forced us to rush our shots, but you have to attribute that to its defense."

This will be the 71st renewal of a series that began in 1921. The Salukis hold a 49-21 advantage.

"It's a fine rivalry," McDougal, a native of Salem, said. "Originally, I'm from Southern Illinois. I have great respect for Coach Gottfried and SIU athletics and I think for the most part we should take advantage of in-state rivalries. I enjoy the competition."

Salukis, Huskies facing similar tasks

By Scott Stahmer
Staff Writer

The basketball teams from SIU-C and Northern Illinois will try to rebound—and not just in the sense of grabbing missed shots—when they play each other at 7:35 p.m. Saturday at the Arena.

Both teams are coming off particularly painful losses. The Salukis, 3-2, dropped a 65-60 decision to archrival Evansville Wednesday, while the Huskies, 2-2, were zapped by No. 1-ranked DePaul Monday, 93-56.

Fifth-year Huskie Coach John McDougal and Joe Gottfried of SIU-C have differing opinions about how their teams will bounce back. McDougal said NIU was intimidated by the Blue Demons' new playpen, the Rosemont Horizon, and he's worried about the after-effects.

"I don't know what to expect, especially coming off the loss to DePaul," McDougal said. "One of the things I'm concerned about is how we'll react after that loss. We could bounce back and play well, or we could still be down and play poorly."

"We didn't play well the other night, but that's a credit to DePaul," he said. "We were shellshocked. It was a new experience for our kids, playing in a big-city arena, and we were spellbound."

"I've only brought one team down to Carbondale and we played poorly," McDougal continued. The Huskies lost in 1978 at SIU-C, 97-75. "But I don't think that game or the one last year (which the Salukis lost, 78-63) was a true indicator of either team's talent."

Gottfried is more optimistic. "We have good kids," he said. "You can't dwell on past games, you always have to look to the next one. We've got good players and I think that's what they'll do."

"Northern Illinois is a much better team than was evidenced against DePaul," Gottfried added. "They were overwhelmed early and did not get into the flow of the game. Personnel-wise, they're probably better than a year ago."

McDougal is shuffling his starting lineup for Saturday, benching forward Terry Green, inserting 6-10, 250-pound Ron Lindfors at center and shifting 6-9 Allen Rayhorn from the middle to power forward.

Rayhorn, a junior from Dakota—not North or South, but the tiny town in northwestern Illinois—destroyed the Salukis in last year's game with 30 points, hitting 1 of 13 field goal attempts. He was the only underclassman selected for the All-Mid-American Conference team in 1979-80.

"We can balance the center position out because Lindfors and Camp are about equal in size," Gottfried said. "At forward, it will create a mismatch because Rayhorn is bigger than our forwards."

The Huskies' other starting forward will be Shawn Thrower, a 6-7 senior from Chicago, and the starters at guards will be Kay Rhone, a 6-2 senior from Chicago, and Steve McCuiston, a 6-4 senior from Bellwood. Forward Tim Dillon and guards Ross Kingsley and Leonard Hayes, all freshmen, also will play.

McDougal, a successful high school coach for 11 years at Aurora West High School, said the Huskies usually disdain the fast break, sticking to a patterned offensive attack.

For the Salukis, the starters are once again expected to be Darnall Jones and Johnny Payne at guards, Charles Moore and Charles Nance at forwards, and Rod Camp at center. But, in light of strong performances against Evan-

House answers critics' questions

By Rod Smith
Sports Editor

When Kevin House left Southern Illinois to make his fame and fortune snagging footballs in sunny Florida, questions were raised about the Tampa Bay Buccaneers second-round draft pick.

Sure he was fast, but was he big enough, physical enough and wise enough to infiltrate opponents' secondaries, make the catch, outmaneuver the defender and take the punishment of hard-hitting defensive backs?

Through the first 14 weeks of the National Football League regular season, House has dispelled any doubts of his ability.

With only two weeks remaining, House, who is the career and season leader in passing yardage at SIU-C, has made 16 receptions for 298 yards, an average of 18.6 yards per catch, with four touchdowns and has rushed once—a 32-yard end-around against the New York Giants.

The former Saluki bomb threat is currently sharing the flanker position with Isaac Hagins for Coach John McKay in Tampa and is refining the receiving trade with help from Boyd Dowler, a star receiver with the Green Bay Packers during their glory years. After a rather slow start early in the year, House, who'll turn 23 next week, has recently become an important part of the Buccaneers offense.

"There have been more passes coming my way," House said Wednesday via telephone from Tampa. "I'm running better patterns, I'm getting smarter at reading defenses and countering with a better route and Doug (Williams) has been throwing the ball better. It's been little of everything."

House said he needed time to adjust to the pros and time for Williams, the Buc's quarterback, to get used to the rookie.

"There are more coverages and better people playing those coverages. The longer I'm in the league, the more I'll learn."

"It takes time for a quarterback to learn where I'll be and to get the feel of each other. It's like a pitcher and catcher in baseball," House, a former Saluki standout on the diamond said. "You have to get used to each other."

House caught his first TD pass as a professional Oct. 9 against the Pittsburgh Steelers.

During his playing career with the SIU-C football team, wide receiver Kevin House thrilled the crowds with his most effective pattern—the fly. House holds several school receiving records and now plays flanker for Tampa Bay of the NFL.

"It was very satisfying coming against the World Champions," House said. "It was a fade' (timing) pattern. I wasn't sure I was in bounds since I was concentrating on the ball. I just had to look back for the call."

But House said his biggest moment as a pro came two weeks ago against the Packers. His reception on a bomb with only minutes to play took the Bucs to the Green Bay 2-yard line. They scored a play later, edging the Pack.

"It was one of those bobble jobs," House explained. "He

(the defender) tipped the ball and it went off my shoulder pad and I was able to hang on. It was my most notable and most important catch."

What made the catch even more satisfying was that his parents had made the trip north to Wisconsin to see the game. He said his folks plan to attend Sunday's game against the Lions in Detroit.

So No. 89 in the orange jersey is starting to make a name for himself among NFL defensive backs. And although House has made a home for his wife and 2-year-

Time Standard Invitational guaranteed to be 'Rowdy'

Local swimming fans have a chance to see one of the top freestylers in the world at the Time Standard Invitational hosted by the men's and women's swimming teams to be held Friday and Saturday at the Recreation Building pool.

Ambrose "Rowdy" Gaines of Auburn is the meet's top performer. Gaines holds the world record in the 200-meter freestyle, a record he has held for four years, and is second in the world in the 100-meter free. He also holds the American record in both races, as well as the collegiate record in the 100- and 200-yard freestyles.

Gaines, a U.S. Olympic Team member and the Auburn squad, fifth in the nation last year, will swim with teams from Nebraska, Iowa State, Arkansas-Little Rock and SIU-C attempting to make national standards. No team scores will be kept.

National standards are qualifying times for the NCAA meet to be held in Texas in late March. The Time Standard Invitational used to be named the Saluki 5-S Meet, representing shaving of bodies for reduced friction, Speedo, a brand of swimming suit, spaghetti, for carbohydrates, psYche and standards.

Races will be held at the SRC pool beginning at 7 p.m. Friday and continuing Saturday at 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Admission is free. Gaines will swim in both sessions Saturday.

The Salukis will have six swimmers tapering, or resting, from their usual training program. SIU-C swimmers who are following the 5-S's include Pablo Restrepo and Anders Norling in the breaststroke. Conrado Porta in the backstroke, Pat Looby and Brian Tydd in the sprints and Roger Von Jouanne in the backstroke, butterfly and individual medley.

Last year, the Salukis qualified for nationals in 14 races at the early-season 5-S Meet.

"We'll be keeping no team scores at this meet, so we're hoping the other schools' individuals will get as fired up as ours to make standards," SIU-C Coach Bob Steele said. "We want to take advantage of our hard, early fall training."

According to the coach, the swimmer with the best shot at making standards is Von Jouanne.

"I think Roger will go wild Friday," Steele said. "He wants it so bad. He's so excited about making the U.S. team that's competing in New Zealand that it's just a job in the seat. You don't know how hard he trains."

Von Jouanne, a junior, will swim the 100 and 200 backstrokes, 100 and 200 butterfly and 200 and 400 individual medley.

Steele said Tydd and Norling, who missed last week's Illinois State Relays with food poisoning, are competing "SIT"—sickness imposed taper.

"They're better swimmers than cooks," Steele said.

Diving Coach Denny Golden said Nebraska has a diving unit capable of placing in the nationals. One of the team's divers, Scott Henricks, is a national tumbling champion.

Lady cagers shoot for the top at Tennessee-Martin tourney

The Saluki women's basketball team has had a week to mend the wounds from an 88-56 defeat against Drake, and SIU-C Coach Cindy Scott hopes her team bounces back in a big way in the University of Tennessee-Martin Christmas Tournament starting Friday.

"Our goal is to win the tournament," Scott said of her 3-3 team's goal in the Volunteer State. "We're coming off a tough loss, but I think it's a very realistic goal."

The Salukis will start off the double-elimination tournament Friday against Vanderbilt, a team with a 4-3 mark that has had some of the same problems SIU-C has had, according to Scott.

"Vanderbilt has been like we have been," Scott said. "It has been inconsistent all season. It's beaten some teams it shouldn't have and then lost a few it should've won."

The Lady Commodores pulled three straight upsets of southern neighbors the past two weeks, defeating Auburn, Memphis State and Middle Tennessee State before losing to Belmont College, 80-70, Monday.

The Salukis will have size on their side against Vanderbilt. Center Gayle Kinzer is the Lady Commodores' tallest player at 5-11 and averages 21 points and nine rebounds per game.
