Universities may lose funds to Illinois correctional costs

By John McCadd
Politics Writer

State officials say rising costs of the overcrowded Illinois correctional system could end up barring funds from state universities.

The Illinois Department of Corrections is the fifth largest recipient of state funds but is the fastest growing. Funds for DOC have more than doubled since 1983, officials said.

Jane Ingmire, press secretary for the Illinois comptroller’s office, said the department of corrections was appropriated $565.5 million in fiscal year 1992, up 130 percent from $243.7 million spent in FY 1983.

According to Department of Corrections data, the Illinois prison system was built to house 20,000 inmates. Growth from 1983 brought the state up to 25,000 inmates.

Earthquake kills 1,300 in Indonesia

Zaperta

JAKARTA, Indonesia - The death toll in one of the worst earthquakes ever hit Indonesia climbed to 1,300 Sunday as rescue workers continued to find bodies on the island of Flores.

The quake unleashed a tidal wave that swept 330 yards inland, smashing houses and boats, a spokesman for the geophysics station on the island said. The final death toll could be much higher.

"Giant seismic waves flattened scores of villages and tossed buildings like toys as the quake rumbled across the country creating pandemonium,,- the head of the geophysics station, Sarman, said.

In the coastal town of Malang, 1,100 people died and hundreds were injured, some critically. The quake's epicenter was about 20 miles offshore at a depth of 25

Saluki women hold on to beat Illinois

Tiffany Bolden and Kelly Firth combined for 86 points as the Salukis collected weekend road win over Murray State and Illinois, improving their record to 3-3.

Bolden, who collected a career-high 34 points in the Salukis 94-52 rout at Murray State Friday night, added 21 points in the Salukis 74-70 victory over the Illini at Assembly Hall Sunday. Firth notched 22 points and 14 rebounds against Murray State and 15 points and 11 rebounds in Champaign.

"If we get the ball inside to her (Bolden), she is tough to stop," said Saluki head coach Cindy Stein. "She certainly came to play today."

The Salukis hit on 21 of 27 free throws to seal SIUC's third straight win over the Illini, 3-2, at Assembly Hall. SIUC led at halftime—37-29, and withstood second-half Illinois rallies that tied the game at 45-45 with 12:38 and 62-62 with 5:14 to play. SIUC's lead was cut to 67-65 with 2:11 to play after Illinois freshman sensation Robyn Preacey completed a three-point play at the free throw line. But, the Illini could get no closer as the Salukis held on for the victory.

"Anytime you can go on the road and win against a Big Ten opponent, it's a good win for you," Scott said. "It's a great win confidence-wise. We know we get off to a very slow start, and it feels pretty good right now."

Salukis win dawggfght

The Dawgs from the Souti packed too much bite for the Huskies of Northern Illinois. A Saluki explosion in the second half chuked up the 91-62 victory in DeKalb Saturday night. The Saluki defense held NIU to only four points during a 20 point run by SIUC that gave the Dawgs a 79-52 lead with 3:30 left to play.

Head coach Rich Herrin said he knew the game would come down to defense.

"The last time we played NIU, we dominated defense, and we knew that we would probably have to do it again to win," he said. "They have a lot of good shooters we had to stop."

NIU lead for the majority of the first half before junior forward Marko Pavlovic sunk two consecutive three pointers in the closing minute to give SIUC the lead at the half, 38-35. It was the last time the Salukis had the lead since the early minutes of the first half. It looked as if the second half would be the same scenario when NIU's Mike

Men to keep in shape during holiday season

By Sanjay Seth
Sports Writer

The men's indoor track and field team will not be able to indulge in Christmas celebrations as the holiday season because they need to keep in shape, head coach Bill Correll said.

SIUC only managed a third place finish with 45 points this weekend at the Illinois State Invitational in Normal. Indiana State finished first with 66 point, followed by Illinois State with 82.

Correll said the squad never did too well in this meet but it was an indication that the team needed to stay in shape over the holidays.

"We're not in top notch shape for this meet being the start of the season," Correll said. "It's difficult to peak at the right time of the season if you do."

Correll said he was not panicked because of the early results.

"Of course no one likes to lose, but you can be realistic." Correll said. "There were also some good showings by the ladies."

Kentucky junior finished first in both the long jump and 200 meter dash for the Salukis. He jumped 27 meters and completed the sprint in 22.22 seconds. Rolfe also took the third place for the 55-meter dash at 6.68 seconds.

Brian Miller gained personal bests in the 35 pound throw with a first place finish of 55-4 3/4 and the shot put with a distance of 54-9 1/2.

Bernard Henry finished first in the 1000-meter run with a time of 2:30.01, and Miken Danner took the top spot in the 3000-meter with a time of 8:33.56.

Henry said he was pretty happy with the results of his first indoor

Breaking in a young team, the SIUC women's track team found that loss this weekend as the team opened its season in Normal.

The Salukis managed to pull together a total of 28 points at the Illinois State Triangular Meet, which did no hold a candle to competing teams Illinois State, who finished in first place at the meet with 70 points and Indiana State, who gathered 45 points to put them second.

"We did well considering that it was our first meet, and some of our good athletes were injured," Crystal Coronado said.

Coronado was referring to senior . , who is suffering from a strained hamstring, an injury that was sustained last week in practice. Moore was set to compete in three events at the meet, the 800-meter run, the long jump and the 55-meter-dash. Moore attributes the loss to the ineptitude of the squad.

"We had a lot of nervous people on the squad," Moore said. "A lot of girls are freshmen.

Def Leppard purrs
Rockers ‘Adrenalize’ Arena with lights, lasers, loud guitars and loads of big hits

By Casey Hampton

Entertainment Editor

With a dizzying laser light show and heart-throbbing beat, Def Leppard returned to Carbondale after a five-year hiatus to provide a pre-Christmas gift to the region.

On the heels of the group's latest album "Adrenalize," the concert sent a rush of adrenaline soaring through the audience with a spectacle of lights and faithful renditions of songs the group has transformed into classics.

"Did you miss us?" lead singer Joe Elliot asked. "This is our first tour in four years, and we just want everybody to know that's four years too long.

The crowd responded with an ear-piercing scream that barely let up once during the night.

As far as rock concerts go, Def Leppard's show was magical. The group turned the typical prosesium setting and chose to play in the round — with the audience on every side — and it also ditched the traditional opening band.

Making clear their appreciation of the group's fans, the members praised around the specially-designed stage throughout the concert, taking every seat as good as the next.

The group wasted no time during the crowd to it's feet with drive and ambition by opening with the all-too-familiar "Let's Get Rocked," followed throughout the night by successful hits such as "Hysteria," "Pour Some Sugar On Me" and "Rocket."

Elliott explained to the buzzing crowd about the extensive length of time since it's successful 15-month "Hysteria" tour in 1987, in which they visited Carbondale.

"With our 'Hysteria' tour we made a promise to the audience and ourselves we'd never spend another four years to make an album — Wowship!" he said. "But fans come along and screw things up. We lost a friend who was very dear to us, God bless him.

Elliott locked up and blew a kiss to the sky in tribute to guitarists Steve Clark, who died in January 1991 from a lethal combination of alcohol, anti-depressants and painkillers.

"But we have to get on with our lives and I'm very glad to say we made us a very new friends," he continued as he introduced Phil Collen, who joined and simulated nicely the sound of the band's trademark twin-guitar. "He's a full-fledged member of the family now, and we think he fits in very nicely."

The crowd gave Collen a warm acceptance as he performed a
Dear Editor,

I am writing in response to the recent article in the Daily Egyptian regarding the military ban on homosexuals. I believe that this policy is deeply flawed and unfair.

Firstly, the military ban on homosexuals is based on stereotypes and misinformation. It is not supported by scientific research and has no basis in reality. It is a form of discrimination that is harmful to the individuals involved and undermines the principles of equality and fairness.

Secondly, the military ban on homosexuals is a violation of the rights of these individuals. It is based on the assumption that every homosexual is a threat to national security, which is not true. Many thousands of gay and lesbian military personnel have served with distinction and honor, and there is no evidence to suggest that their sexual orientation poses a threat to national security.

Finally, the military ban on homosexuals is a reflection of the broader societal attitudes towards homosexuality. It is a symptom of the ways in which we continue to stigmatize and discriminate against those who do not conform to traditional notions of masculinity and femininity. It is a form of prejudice that is outdated and harmful to all of us.

I urge the Daily Egyptian to join the growing number of publications that are speaking out against the military ban on homosexuals. It is time for us to recognize the place of all individuals, regardless of their sexual orientation, in our armed forces.

Sincerely,

SIUC President John C. Guyon bestowed his head and hope above in a low, deep voice that healing could begin.

"We are shocked and saddened by the fate that killed five people," he said. "We cannot understand, but we are hoping to begin healing today.

Guyon said there were three things one person should remember.

"First, there is the natural response that a community, all of us, felt keenly to those close to us," he said. "Second, it is the song we sing, the song when death occurs so suddenly. To the survivors and others, we must renew ourselves that we are among friends.

Third, we are deeply saddened when we lose a friend, but we will do so, as well as unexpectedly," Guyon remarked.

"We will never know what contributions would have been made by those who were loved. We will never know the gifts of the opportunities we have to learn.

Brad Cole, president of the Undergraduate Student Government, offered his condolences to the victims' families. "To the family and friends of the victims, the entire student community offers its condolences," Cole said. "These feelings are universal and go beyond our cultural boundaries.

Nicholas Agritis, president of the International Student Council, expected sympathy on behalf of all international students.

24,215 prisoners, but now holds 30,432 inmates. DOC officials expect the prison population to increase to 31,000 by 1996.

Inmates said because DOC already has a larger inmate population, the extra funding, rising inmate populations can adversely affect funding for other state agencies, especially those such as higher education, which have other ways to raise funds.

(The Department of Corrections) has already been putting a big strain on the state budget, and it doesn’t seem to be getting any better," she said. "The possibility of this instability is then other agencies to receive cuts because of this.

"On this issue," said an education officials, "that would not authorize a tax increase, it would cause the money to have to come from somewhere," she said.

She said the other critical requests of state funds — the Board of Education, Public Aid and the Department of Children and Family Services — probably will not receive massive cuts. The latter two because of court mandates that regulate licensing for Medicaid and classic care.

"There is the Board of Higher Education may be targeted because of its ability to raise tuition.

Ross Hoodl, spokesman for BEHE, said the battle for state funds has been going on since around 1980 when several new prisons were built.

He said so far higher education has not lost significant amounts of money, but prison populations are still rising, which makes future incremental funding uncertain.

"According to the state constitution, there are no regulations for what the state has to fund," he said. "It says the state’s goal is to fund over 50 percent of education, but apparently the Supreme Court felt a goal was something they didn’t have to stick to.

He said during the past decade, state departments such as agriculture, forestry, and the Environmental Protection Agency have taken larger cuts than higher education.

Nic, Howell, spokesman for the Department of Corrections, said a lot of work can be done when DOC was funded to build 15 prisons, compared to those rising inmate populations.

He said in addition to the 30,432 inmates in prison, there are 55,489 people in Department of Corrections custody or under its supervision.

"I guess the moral of the story is that you can’t build your way out of a situation like this," he said. "The only solution to the problem is to decide who should and which ones go to prison.

"Families of inmates in 15 years costs a lot of money, and when you’re 50 percent of what is it next week," he said.

He said recent prison overcrowding has been paralleled to a 14-fold increase in drug offenders. Those number of drug offenders in prison has increased from 334 in 1983 to 2,511 by the beginning of this year.

"Because of this, many drug offenders are placed under incarceration alternatives, such as community-based supervision and electronic detention systems.

Radio/TV senior believing in self after getting award

By Lynelle Marc, jardt
General Assignment Writer

An SIUC senior in the radio/TV department who recently won an internship from the Illinois Broadcasters Association stressed the importance of believing in oneself to succeed.

Michael Little from East St. Louis won one of three Illinois Broadcasters Association Minority Intern Program grants of $2,250. He will spend his internship working at television station WGN in Chicago beginning in January.

Little said he was surprised to win the award because he doubted his qualifications.

"I never tried before because I never thought I was qualified for it," he said. "When I go through the process, I realized I had a lot more experience than I gave myself credit for. I guess the lesson to be learned is you never know until you try.

Little said although he is overwhelmed by winning the internship, he is the one who is most excited about the award.

"I think he's having a better time with this than I am," he said. "I took up to my dad a lot. I guess I've always been looking for something to make him proud of me."

When he starts the internship, Little said he will live with his father in a suburb of Chicago.

"I'll be moving up to Harvy with him. I think that's one of the only reasons it's possible for me to do this internship. The pay is nice -- but it's not enough to support me."

Another supporter of Little has been his sister, Suzanne.

"She's like my best friend, he said. "If it weren't for Sanny, I would have given up."

Little said everyone in the radio/TV department was helpful and supportive.

"I think I got the courage to do it by all of the instructors at the radio/TV department," he said. "I think there's a real kinship there. I wouldn't have had the courage if I hadn't been for them."

The one person who really supported me would have to be Lori Seflon, the adviser in the radio/TV department, he said.

Seflon said she encouraged all of the qualified students to apply for the internship and is glad Little applied.

"He's a very good student in our program," she said. "He has done very well here."

Seflon said Little has taken advantage of the opportunities for experience and training both in and out of the classroom.

"He's very energetic and enthusiastic," she said. "I'm sure the interviewers felt that energy and enthusiasm would help one of their broadcasters."

Seflon added that Little should be pleased with himself.

"The department is very proud of him," she said. "It's a very competitive competition -- it is statewide. He should be proud of it."

Little said living in Southern Illinois has not been easy, but it has taught him a lot.

"My time in Southern Illinois has been the roughest period of my life," he said. "It made me a stronger person. I've been here since 1987; if I can get through five years in Southern Illinois, I can do anything."

Little said he does not have specific goals set for future employment.

"I plan to do a lot in the entertainment industry, I'm not going to limit myself to just one thing," he said.

Other areas of interest for Little are dance and music, he said. He is a member of the Southern Illinois Repertory Dance Theater.

stunning guitar solo.

The concert lapsed in energy only during some of the less familiar songs, but even when the band did not seem to be working as successfully as others, the spectacle of lights allowed for an intriguing side-show.

As the end of "Gods of War," when the sounds of a battle ensued throughout the Arena, four octagon-shaped objects on mechanical arms lowered above the audience and moved into the center of the stage.

The symbolism was unclear, but effective nonetheless.

One could not help being awestruck at the large objects that moved in and out of their nestling areas throughout the show.

The band also tested knowledge of its competitors' songs by allowing the audience to take the spotlight.

The beginning of songs such as "Back in Black" by AC/DC and "Enter Sandman" by Metallica were strong on a guitar as the audience bellowed out the words.

But the songs by Def Leppard definitely won overall.

When the band members took their final bows and the audience screamed its last shrieks of excitement, the purpose of the tour had been fulfilled.

"Do us a favor, audience," Elliott concluded. "Don't forget us, and we won't forget you."

Police blitz sets goal of safer season

By Joe Littrell

Police Writer

The Illinois State Police will continue its life-saving tradition through the holiday weekend.

The state police will conduct roadside safety checks throughout Illinois during the weekend of Dec. 18–20, said State Police Director Terrance W. Gainer.

Troopers will focus on stopping alcohol and drug-impaired drivers off the road.

"We're not going to let drunk drivers mar the holiday season for themselves, their families or innocent victims," he said.

"Serious injuries and deaths in traffic accidents are always heartbreaking, but they seem especially tragic during this joyful season.

Preventing that kind of tragedy is the ultimate reason for these roadside checks."

The operations will be conducted at times and locations that offer the maximum opportunity for enforcement of alcohol-related offenses. Gainer said. At least 12 local agencies will join state troopers at checkpoints in their areas.

Prof offers earth-friendly holiday tips

By John Hazanika

Environmental Writer

Christmas is a time of giving, and a clean, safe environment is one of the most valuable gifts humanity can give to future generations.

Gerald Gaffney, a forestry professor at SIUC who teaches an environmental issues course, said it is ironic that Christmas is one of the most environmentally impacting times of the year.

"We are trying to make this earth a good place to live in and the less we consume and pollute the better the chances for our children to have a high quality life," Gaffney said.

Gaffney said people should consider less consumptive ways of celebrating the holidays:

They should buy gifts made of renewable resources instead of non-renewable resources, Gaffney said. Instead of buying toys made out of metal or plastics, people can buy toys made out of wood, also, they can buy products made from cotton or wool instead of synthetic fibers.

"Traveling has an enormous impact on the environment, he said.

People should celebrate Christmas at home instead of traveling to see relatives. If people must travel, they should carpool.

People also should try to eat locally grown foods instead of foods imported from all over the world, he said. It takes enormous amounts of energy and resources to improve foods.

Gaffney said eliminating unnecessary packaging is another way to conserve resources.

"The whole idea of packaging is consumptive and you should try to reduce it," Gaffney said. "If you are careful and go through the newspaper advertisements and comics you can find some attractive wrapping paper. Saving the trees for paper you still get the gifts instead of throwing it away is another good idea."

Curt Carter, a program coordinator at SIUC's Touch of Nature, said people should try to have an old-fashioned Christmas instead of a high-tech electronic Christmas.

"I encourage people to decorate with lights as little as possible," Carter said. "If you do decorate with lights only use them a couple of hours a day. Christmas lights are very energy consumptive."

Carter said people should consider natural alternative to store-bought lights and ornaments.

"Decorate the tree with strings of popcorn and cranberries," Carter said. "When Christmas is over you can hang the strings outside and birds will eat the cranberries and popcorn."

Instead of purchasing store-bought ornaments people can make their own out of recycled paper.

Carter said people should put toys that last a lifetime under the tree instead of toys that are thrown away in a year.

Today, most toys are throw away items that take a load of batteries, he said. People should buy quality toys that don't need batteries.

If you do buy toys that need batteries, buy a battery recharger and rechargeable batteries instead of disposable batteries, Carter said. Batteries contain toxic chemicals and are a form of hazardous waste.

A better way to have an environmentally conscious Christmas is to buy a live Christmas tree instead of a cut one, Gaffney said. Purchasing a live tree is not as wasteful, and at the end of the holiday season it can placed in the yard.

If a cut tree was already purchased, people can start a brush pile in their backyard instead of the the dead tree away at the end of the holiday season, he said. The brush pile will attract wildlife throughout the year.
